Now obſerve her Poſture and Frame of Spirit, and what it is Chriſt ſpeaks of her, and which makes to the Purpoſe in hand. She comes humbled, ſtanding behind Chriſt's Seat, in a ſilent deep Mourning, ſpeaks not one Word, weeping in ſuch Abundance, as ſerved to waſh his Feet, ſo much as they needed being wiped dry, which ſhe did with her Hair, that Hair ſhe had ſinned withal: Now what was that in her Sinfulneſs which Chriſt the Pardoner takes notice of, and would have her carry home with her, and us all to conſider? ver. 48. Thy Sins, which are many, are forgiven thee: yea, and he indigitates it to ſhew that it was that alſo which had broke her Heart ſo deeply, even the many, the Number of her Sins; this Chriſt, that knew both what himſelf forgave, and the meaning of the Spirit of her, doth himſelf enforce and utter for and concerning her: And that Speech was at once both a Comment upon her Heart, ſhewing what it was in her Sinfulneſs ſhe wept ſo for; as alſo of his own Heart, who conſidered well what and how much it was he pardoned, to declare which it was he made that whole Parable; and it was the Diſproportion in number of her Sins from thoſe of others whom he pardoneth; which Chriſt conſidered in ſaying, Many Sins are forgiven, for he expreſly put the Difference upon the Compariſon of Number, to her he forgave five hundred Pence, to another but fifty; in ſaying, the one owed five hundred Pence, the other fifty, and yet I trow her Sins had been very great and heinous; for known and famed ſhe was to all the City, ver. 37, 39. and what kind of Sin it muſt be ſhe was famed for, we may gather by what ſpecial kind of Sins that Sex was and uſually is vulgarly infamous for, and ſtiled a Sinner for; as alſo by her Repentance, ſhe wept with thoſe Eyes which had enticed, kiſſed Chriſt's Feet with her Mouth, and wiped them with her Hair, (O what Revenge!) ſhe yielding up all theſe which had been Weapons or Inſtruments of her Unrighteouſneſs now unto Holineſs, and to expreſs and ſignify the Brokenneſs of her Heart; and though thoſe her greater Creditors (I mean thoſe Sins) might and did arreſt her firſt, yet it was the Multitude in thoſe her Sinnings, and in all other Sins, that now came in upon her upon occaſion of that Arreſt, and ſo both ſhe the Sinner in her Soul, and Chriſt the Pardoner in his Heart, doth put the much of her Sinfulneſs upon the many, as by his Speech appears.

CHAP. XI.

A ſecond Demonſtration taken from the Judgments of Saints, of themſelves in their Confeſſions: Both, 1. At their firſt Converſions; 2. In after-humblings upon great occaſions.

A Second Head of Demonſtration we may take from the Audit-books of the Saints, and the Calculations they have left upon Record in their free and unforced Confeſſions. And truly their Judgment herein may well be taken by us; for though God is greater than their Hearts, yet their Judgment of Sin, and of the proportions thereof, is moſtly regulated according as God judgeth, (that is, they in their Meaſure) by the Spirit that convinceth them of Sin, as well as of Chriſt's Righteouſneſs, and what true Holineſs is, John 16. 8, 9, 10. The knowledg of the Holy is Underſtanding, Prov. 9. 10. and eſpecially in their eſtimate of Sinnings, and the Rates there-
Prov. 20. 27. of, into which even natural Conſcience ſees very far, and is as the Candle of the Lord that ſearcheth the Chambers of the Belly; but the Spirit's conviction goes and Searcheth far beyond it.

This Eſtimate we may take either from the Conviction of Saints at their firſt Converſions, or afterwards upon God's Viſitations of them for Sin; and their deepeſt Humiliations for both.

2 Chron. 33. * Acts 8. 1. & 9. 4. Saul, Saul, Why perſecuteſt thou me?

I. The Confeſſions of Men Converted. —The greateſt Convert in the Old Teſtament was Manaſſeh; the greateſt Convert in the New was * Saul, and made by Converſion one of the greateſt Apoſtles.

1. Manaſſes. He is commonly reckoned the greateſt Sinner that was pardoned in the Old-Teſtament: whoſe tranſcending Wickedneſs we may read 2 Chron. 33. from ver. 2. to ver. 11. and more largely 2 Kings 21. from ver. 2. to ver. 17. And his Sins were of the deepeſt Grain, and moſt heinous Nature that could be, as Witchcrafts, Dealings with the Devil, heatheniſh Idolatry ſet up in the very Temple, in which God had ſaid, I will put my Name; yea Abominations above all that the Amorites did which were before him; and cauſing Judah to do worſe than the Heathen whom God had deſtroyed; ſhedding alſo innocent Blood from one end of Jeruſalem to the other: But Manaſſeh after all this humbled himſelf greatly before God, &c. and prayed to him, and God was entreated of him.

Now if we conſult that Prayer ſaid to be his, (which yet was perhaps but the Collection of ſome broken parts of it let down by Tradition, and ſet together by ſome other) though reckoned among Apocrypha, yet (as Junius ſays) is Pious, and certainly expreſſeth the true Senſe of a deeply-humbled Soul. Now his Confeſſions there run not upon the Heinous part of his Sins, as ſuch, but upon the many, ver. 9. For I have ſinned above the number of the Sands of the Sea: my tranſgreſſions, O Lord, are multiplied, my Tranſgreſſions are exceeding many; I am not worthy to behold and ſee the height of the Heavens for the Multitude of my Unrighteouſneſs. The Prophet Iſaiah had a little before compared the Wicked to the raging Sea that caſts up Mire and Dirt, for the tumultuouſneſs of it: and Manaſſeh not long after compares his Sins to the Sands of the Sea (which the Sea continually caſts up) for the number of them.

In the New-Teſtament I exemplified this before in that great Sinner and Convert, the Woman of Naim.

2. That great Convert and Apoſtle, that ſtiled himſelf the chiefeſt of Sinners, and leaſt of Saints, view we the account he gives of his Humiliations at his Converſion. And though in one place he reckons up his talent-Sins, I was a Blaſphemer, Perſecuter, and injurious, namely to the Saints; yet in another place place we find he reckons only thoſe that were Minutes, his farthing-Sins, as thoſe wherein the multitude of Sins is moſt conſpicuous, viz. the abounding of all inward Luſts and Concupiſcence in his Heart, all manner of Concupiſcence, Rom. 7. 8. and in ver. 5. he mentions chiefly the Motions or Paſſions, (as he there ſtiles them for their Violence) that is, of ſuch Sins as continually boiled and wrought in his Members to bring forth fruit to Death. And it is the Account of ſuch Sins which is the Total he in that place gives, which yet he profeſſedly ſpeaks of to have been thoſe which deeply humbled him at his firſt Converſion: as in that other to Timothy he had done of his more heinous Sins; yea, in this to the Romans his intent is more ſetly to declare that ſpecial Work of Conviction of Sin and Humilitation, which at Converſion is had by the Law. Chap. 11.

II. Go we to Saints after their Converſion.

God hath been pleaſed to enter into heavy Reckonings with his beſt Servants after Converſion, as with Job, chap. 13. 26, 27. For thou writeſt bitter things againſt me, and makeſt me to poſſeſs the Iniquities of my Youth. And ver. 27. Thou putteſt alſo my Feet into the Stocks, and lookeſt narrowly to all my Paths: thou ſetteſt a Print upon the Heels of my Feet; that is, exactly obſerveſt me, and ſetteſt an Impreſſion upon my Conſcience of the Iniquity of my Heels, ſpeaking of himſelf, in that expreſſion of ſetting a Print on his Heels, in the ſame kind of Phraſe, as we uſe to do of one arraigned at the Bar, where he hath been burnt in the Hand. The like Account we find made by God with David, Pſal. 6. 1, 2. and Pſal. 98. 4.

Take we the holieſt and beſt of Saints we can pick and chuſe: Solomon's inſtance we have heard, but we will inſtance in greater and Holier than he.

Let Job firſt, who is one of God's three Worthies, in God's own Judgment of Men under the Old-Teſtament; I ſay, let Job firſt come in as the Fore-Man of this Jury to deliver the Verdict, in the name of all Men elſe that have been or ſhall be, though never ſo Holy, chap. 9. 2, 3. A chapter wherein, if ever in the whole Bible, you will view a Saint deveſting himſelf of, and throwing away his own Righteouſneſs, behold it there in Job. In the renunciation of which he comes not a whit behind that moſt humbled of Saints, Phil. 3.8,9. I account all things but loſs, &c. not having mine own Righteouſneſs, &c. Read that whole Chapter of Job, and obſerve his deep Expreſſions, firſt in ver. 2, 3. I know it is ſo of a Truth: but how ſhould Man be juſt with God? If he will contend with him, he cannot anſwer him one of a thouſand. And then in ver. 20, 21. If I juſtify my ſelf, mine own Mouth ſhall condemn me, (for I ſin in every Word, and my Mouth would condemn me whilſt I ſhould ſpeak it) If I ſay I am perfect, it ſhall alſo prove me perverſe: yea, though I were perfect, yet would I not know my own Soul. In which latter clauſe I underſtand the pulſe of his Heart to beat the ſame, if not deeper than the holy Apoſtles did when he ſaid, though I know nothing by my ſelf, yet I am not thereby juſtified, 1 Cor. 4. 4. For Job with a greater Vehemency and indignation profeſſeth, that if he could ſuppoſe himſelf never ſo perfect, yet he would not know his own Soul; that is, as to its having any ſuch Perfection in it, he would take no cogniſance of it, he would not entertain one thought of it, nor caſt a reflection or one look upon, or have the leaſt regard thereto, that is, ſo as to ſtand upon it. It follows, I would deſpiſe my Life: his ſenſe wherein is, either that he would much more deſpiſe his former Life, which had been ſo mixt with Sin; or elſe, that if for the Future he could continue in that perfection, he ſhould deſpiſe even that alſo. All which he ſpeaks as in Relation to his being juſtified thereby afore God, having once been a Sinner againſt God; for that to be his Scope, his Concluſion he lays in the 2 verſe, which leads on the matter of that gallant Chapter as the main Argument of it, evidently ſhews; where he thus begins, How ſhould a Man be juſt with God? Juſt, that is, juſtified at God's Tribunal; For otherwiſe, as to that other part of Righteouſneſs, of truth of Heart, ſincerity, and uprightneſs, whereby a Man that is juſtified is truly, but imperfectly Sanctified; we find him afore and after this to ſtand upon his Points ſufficiently, but coming to ſpeak of this Righteouſneſs of juſtification, he knows not his own Soul.

Now

Book XI.

Now this premiſed, the Words that I ſeize on, as to my purpoſe, are thoſe in ver. 2. How ſhould a Man be juſt with God? If he will contend with him, he cannot anſwer him one of a thouſand. And truly if Job had known but any one Action by himſelf wherein wholly to juſtify himſelf, which he had found firm under him, and himſelf free from Sin in it, he would have ſtood upon that too, as we may perceive by the ſtoutneſs of his Spirit in thoſe other entercourſes betwixt God and himſelf, which follow: wherein yet we only find that he pleads and inſiſts upon the truth and ſincerity of his Heart in his actings, but no where doth he ſtand upon a Freedom from Sin in any one Act. And what in this Paſſage he acknowledgeth, he does it out of his having made a ſad and Experimental Survey and Trial of this matter, I know it of a Truth.

This phraſe [one of a thouſand] at firſt ſound to Engliſh Ears, might ſeem but a Diminution, and a ſpeaking within compaſs, as we uſe to ſay, that is, as if in ſome Acts, though ſcare one of a thouſand, that is, of many; when yet perhaps of twenty thouſand, or a vaſter Sum, Job might have pick'd out ſome one to have ſtood upon Terms with God about, and how that he had not ſinned therein.——But Jobs ſcope and Mind is abſolutely and utterly to deny that he could in any one thing whatever in his whole Life acquit himſelf, and therefore falls down as deficient, and obnoxious in all, ſome way or other.

And firſt that the phraſe [one of a thouſand] ſhould import thus much, a thouſand being a perfect or periodical Number, is put to expreſs all, and any the greateſt Number that can be ſuppoſed, be it what it will be; and ſo one of a thouſand ſhould be as much as to ſay, not one of all, or not one at all. Yea (ſaith Aquinas) a thouſand is put for an infinite number: for, as he obſerves, there being between one and a thouſand no proportion, a thouſand is therefore at Random uſed to expreſs a number numberleſs, an infiniteneſs, ſuch as a Man's thoughts who hears it gives up the accounting of, as of a Sum that is without bounds or limits: and ſo it comes to this, that I cannot anſwer God one (no not one) of all the innumerable actings of my Heart and Life. And truly if this import had not been in the Phraſe of thoſe times intended, then it would follow, when in the like tenour of Speech, Chriſt in the Book of Canticles is extolled by the Spouſe as the chiefeſt of ten thouſand, her meaning muſt have admitted, or at leaſt have left a ſuppoſition, that yet perhaps one amongſt twenty thouſand might have been found to match him; but her ſcope therein is tn extol him abſolutely, and ſo as to exclude and ſhut out the infinity of all other Worthies or Eminencies that have been, or can be ſuppoſed to be: So here. ——Or elſe ſecondly, (which I as readily judg may be the purport of that phraſe, and Jobs intendment) that holy Job having upon this heavy Affliction, and at other times often before examined and viewed over his whole Life as it were by thouſands, that is, by parts and piece-meal, ſometimes this and ſometimes that heap of Actions as they had been acting; ſorted as it were into ſeveral thouſands, as ſeveral heaps of Coin uſe to be: and that he had ſometimes ſingled forth this, then that weeks Actions, in every of which a Man's Soul or mind coineth thouſands of ſmaller or leſſer pieces, that is, of Thoughts, Affections, Intentions, Deſires, and Ends; and that yet he ſhould upon the Survey and Iſſue, find, that he could not find ſo much as one, no nor one of thoſe Heaps of thouſands that were wholly pure Gold or pure Silver for the ſubſtance of them: But ſo as clip any of them where he would, yea ſingle forth what he had judged the pureſt out of any Parcel, ſtill he diſcovered ſome droſs or falſe Metal mingled in it, even in any one of them whatever; or at leaſt that that one was otherwiſe ſome Way deficient, as in Weight, &c. ſome Way or other rendred not perfect Currant. ——Yea, let us make theſe two further Suppoſitions, that he had by choice ſingled forth ſome Day or Week wherein his Heart had been kept, and wound up to the holieſt and intenſeſt Frame of Communion with God and Holy walking: Or, furthermore that he had by a yet more refined Elective diſcretion or Decernment, cull'd forth a thouſand Actions out of all the Heaps, the the million of millions of his whole Life, as hoping to have found ſome one at leaſt of this laſt Choice ſelected thouſand, which he might have ſtood upon. —No; Job had experimented it in all theſe or the like Ways ſo far and ſo often, and every Way ſo much, as he is now confounded, and deſpaireth of any Eſſays that ſhould anew be made of this kind, and yields therefore as Convicted in the whole that he could not anſwer God in one of ſuch a thouſand, or all the thouſand thouſands of Life; and profeſſeth to ſpeak this knowingly, and as one that had experimented it thus often, [I know it is ſo of a Truth.] —And, as Solomon ſaid of his own having Experienced that all was Vanity, What can the Man do (that Way) that cometh after the King? So in point of juſtifying his Actions, Thoughts, or Speeches, or any one of them, who can come after holy Job? of whom God pronounced a None-ſuch; they can do no more than what hath been done already; but fall down all muſt and ſay, We cannot anſwer thee, O Lord, in One of All in our whole Lives.

If the Objection be, That it is barely ſaid, that but [in many things we offend all] and ſo not in all and every Action.

Anſw. 'Tis true, that we do not Sin in all and every Action; but then we muſt underſtand it, as the Apoſtle there doth intend that Speech, namely, that take ſuch Actions as for the matter and ſubſtance of the Act, are ſuch as are againſt the very outward Letter of the Law, as to ſpeak evilly of others, or idle Words, &c. and in that ſenſe God forbid that it ſhould be thought that Saints do ſin in all and every Action, namely ſuch Sins as theſe: though in many Actions, greater or ſmaller, even that are ſuch Sins, the Saints may and are found to err and ſlip more or leſs. But that which we have been ſpeaking of, out of Job is, that in the beſt Actions; yea if we could ſuppoſe a Saint never outwardly to Sin in what is materially ſinful, but always to think, ſpeak, or do what is ſubſtantially Holy and Good, yet there is and will be that adjacent Sinfulneſs found cleaving to all ſuch Actings, even to our ſincereſt Affections and intentions; or at leaſt, there is a deficiency of that Holineſs that ſhould be in them, as will cauſe any holy Man that ſhall commune with his own Heart to cry out, I cannot anſwer thee, O Lord, one of all. And that is it which Job extends his Speech unto. And it is apparent, that that Maxim in the Coherence of it was uttered about ſuch Offences as the critical Eye of Men may obſerve in one another, to be ſinful in the outward appearance of them, and ſo not of ſuch as in the utmoſt extent are betwixt God and us, and which he obſerves in us; for the Apoſtle's ſcope was thereby to retund the Maſterly arrogance of Men, that would take on them to cenſure others for any viſible infirmity their cenſorious Eye could diſcern; Be not many Maſters, ſays he, for in many things we all offend, though ſome very ſmall: and therefore be not thus prying and cenſorious in marking what ye may eſpy to be amiſs in one another, for then every Man muſt be continually reproving one another.

Next, David.

There are two ſorts of Viſitations from God, and diſcoveries of Sin ſet upon the Hearts of his People. 1. Such as are joined with Wrath and Diſpleaſure. 2. Such as are more gentle, and are ſweeter illapſes of Light about our Sinfulneſs. —David had experience of each: he had many and frequent Viſitations from God by Way of rebuke for Sin, and ſometimes ſuch as were joined with Wrath, as Pſal. 38. 1. O Lord, rebuke me not in thy Wrath. Verſe 4. Mine Iniquities are gone over mine Head, as an heavy Burthen they are too heavy for me. Such Viſitations uſually are for groſs and more heinous Sins. ---But at other times he was viſited with more mild and ſtill Rebukes and Diſcoveries of his Sins: which as they are more calm, ſo prove more deep and thorow diſcoveries. ——Under the firſt the Soul is as the Air in a Storm, diſturbed and mudded, in a Hurry, and ſo Sins are preſented more dimly and darkly, and with an Horror; but in the latter it is with the Saints as in a Sunſhiny day without Clouds, in the ſhine whereof the ſmaller motes and minntes of Sinfulneſs are eaſily diſcerned through the pureneſs of the Light let into, and quietneſs of the Soul.

Book XI.

Now at and upon ſuch a time it was, when as David's Soul had been taken up into a Holy Contemplation and Admiration of the Perfection, Purity, and enlightning Power of the Law, Pſal. 19. 7, 8, verſes, and ſo on; in the midſt thereof he cries out, Who can underſtand his Errours? cleanſe thou me from ſecret Sins. And what was the matter cauſed him ſo to do, that is, thus to divert? That which befell him was, that whilſt his Mind was environed about with this admiration of the Glory of the Word and Law, which now ſhone through and through his Soul, the Holy Spirit did turn his Eyes, and cauſed him to caſt them down upon that τὴν ἐυπερίσατον ἁμαρτίαν, Heb. 12. 1. the Corruption that ſurrounded him: and he having been firſt let into this clear ſurrounding Light of the Law, (by which comes the knowledg of Sin) he thereby ſaw and penetrated far, even to an infinite diſtance, into the deep Chaos of his own Heart, and far farther than ever he had done before. And as when the Sun ſhineth into a Jakes in a clear Summers-day, ones Eye may diſcern thouſands of ſmall crawling Creatures, vermin engendered in that filth, which elſe had, and at all other times do paſs ones ſight; ſo here it fell out: —As it did alſo with the Apoſtle, Rom. 7. When the Law (ſays he) came, that is, a new and ſpiritual Light of it, in upon his Soul, he ſaw All concupiſcence had wrought in him. —And thus it was with David, ſuch an innumerable Company of Sins appeared to him, as cauſed him abruptly to cry out, Who can underſtand his Errors? ——And obſerve, that he utters not this of himſelf and of his own particular alone, as if only he ſpake what he ſaw his own Sins for multitude to be, though upon occaſion thereof, but he ſpeaks in the Perſons of all or any the greateſt or moſt diſcerning Saint or Saints, that was or ſhould ever be in the World; and ſaith not only, who doth, or who ſhall underſtand his Errours? but who can?

Rom. 3. 20.

And thus the riſe and reference of this his Speech from, and with the foregoing paſſages in the Pſalm, may be underſtood to have been either, 1. That from a freſh Proſpect and view of all thoſe Sins, whereof he had in former times the Conviction, all along in his Life, by parcels, as they had been committed, that now came to be repreſented together, and rendezvouzed before him in one general Muſter, and ſometimes the Holy Spirit of God makes to his Peoples apprehenſions, a quick, ſudden, and large Scheme and Proſpect of their forepaſt Sins, (as Satan did of the Glory of the World) and upon ſuch a view theſe his Sins might ariſe in his Apprehenſion to ſuch a vaſt heap and ſum, as utterly paſſed all Comprehenſion. Or elſe, 2. it may import ſuch a diſcovery made to him of Sins, which he had never deſcried before, but which by the Light of that brighter Beam that had now viſited his Soul, did appear to be an infinite number, and ſo that thereupon it was from this new Experiment, that he ſhould infer and pronounce this, Who can underſtand his Errors? And if this latter be intended, his Inference and Collection thereupon was very juſt; for although he had digged deep into his Heart before, yet now he had diſcovered a new Mine. And in reference to this Senſe it may well be thought it was, that in the next Words he terms them hidden or ſecret Sins; why? but becauſe he had now diſcovered ſuch as had been hidden to him, and never diſcerned before. And thus by comparing his former Convictions and this new Experiment together, he had the greateſt Reaſon to cry out, Who can underſtand his Errors? for having but even now ſeen the Law of God to be ſo perfect, and likewiſe all his former knowledg of Sin to have fallen ſo ſhort of what he now had anew attained thereby, he might well conclude from thence, —Oh, how am I ſtill infinitely defective, and to ſeek in the knowledg of my Self! And might therefore think with himſelf there may, yea and there do yet lie hid a great Multitude of Sins behind, as utterly ſtill unknown by me, as there had done afore, even Swarms of hidden Sins I never imagined to have been in me; and thereupon to judg, I am yet as far off, or as far to ſeek as ever. —Even as it is with a deeply knowing Man in point of Learning, who obſerving that the farther he wades into it, the farther off he is, (as Solomon himſelf in Eccleſ. 7. 23. I ſaid, I will be Wiſe, but it was far from me) he therefore concludes, that the moſt of what he knows, is but the leaſt part of what he yet doth not know. Thus David here in point of knowing himſelf. And hence it was that he adds, Cleanſe me from ſecret Sins, that is, that are as yet utterly ſecret to my ſelf, which himſelf had never as yet been privy to, nor was ever like to be in this Life; which yet defiled him. Chap. 11.

So that it falls out in this our Diſcovery of Sins, like to what is made of the Stars (under the numberleſs Number of which the Scripture often expreſſeth any innumerable Multitude) the Multitudes of unſeen Stars are far more than the viſible ones. Skilful Aſtronomers have told the Number of thoſe that are viſible, and yet the Scriptures tell us more certainly that the Stars are ſo infinitely many, that it is an appropriate Honour to God alone to know the Number of them, Pſal. 147. 4, 5. He calls them all by their Names. The Angels (though of Heaven) are not able to make a Dictionary of them; and therefore this muſt be ſpoken in reſpect of Stars that are unſeen by us, which muſt therefore indeed be innumerable. That large Tract, the Milky-way, that runs thwart the Heavens, is diſcerned to be but a Conglomeration of ſo many ſmall Stars, like a long Cawſey ſtrowed thick with ſmall Sparks of Diamonds, (the Heavens) Maldivæ, I call them, in Alluſion unto thoſe thouſand ſmall Iſlands that like Mole-hills, or ſmall Tufts of Earth, ſtand thick together in the Indian Sea, and ſtretch out unto a great Length, which we cannot diſcern to be diſtinct Stars by any ſeveral Twinklings, and yet they cauſe that Gleam. In like manner the Pleiades (or ſeven Stars, as we call them, becauſe no more ordinarily appear) are diſcovered to be in all ſeventy two; an Heavenly Septuagint of Lights and ſweet Influencers, as God himſelf (Job 38. 31.) ſpeaks of them.——And thus it is with godly Mens Sins, and their own Diſcoveries of them, the ſecret or hidden ones (as David here terms them) do infinitely far exceed the known, or thoſe that are conſpicuous, until their ſpiritual Sight is elevated by ſome new Telleſcope, or freſh Illumination of the Spirit preſenting them to their View; and yet then that Sight alſo falls infinitely ſhort of what they are in an abounding of them in our Hearts and Lives.

If we will further inquire what kind of Sins they were, the Apparition of which had at that time ſurprized holy David, and moſt amazed him with their Multitude: it appears they were of the ſmaller ſort of Sins, they were Sins had cleaved to his Tongue, (which the Apoſtle ſo complains of) and alſo the inward Sins of his Thoughts. Thus much his Prayer (that was occaſioned by this new Sight of his Sins) which followeth, ſhews, the Malady is known by the Remedy. Now in his Prayer that follows thereupon, he inſtantly ſeeketh, Let the Words of my Mouth, and the Meditation of my Heart, be acceptable in thy Sight: by the Light of which Coherence I gather, that it being the contrary Holineſs unto that abounding Corruption which is found to be in Speeches and Thoughts, that was the thing he ſought for, that therefore the ſecret Sins he had now been thus convinced of, had eſpecially lain hid in theſe two ways of Sinning, and had ſo exceedingly abounded in times paſt in him, and therefore he calls upon God for ſo ſpecial a Remedy againſt theſe two, in theſe Words, O Lord my Strength and my Redeemer: Firſt, he calls upon God as a Redeemer for the Pardon of theſe Sins paſt, as needing plenteous Redemption for the Multitude of them; as alſo that he might be redeemed out of that Corruption, the Power whereof had and did incline him ſo much to ſin in theſe two ways: and then that his Thoughts and Speeches might for time to come be formed and framed, through God's Strength and Aſſiſtance, [O Lord my Strength] in ſuch manner, as they might be acceptable to God, which he had now ſeen to have been ſo abominable unto God; for which alſo he abhorred himſelf. Pſal. 130. 7, 8.

I ſhall but add to this Inſtance that other in Pſal. 40. 12. Innumerable Evils have encompaſſed me about, mine Iniquities have taken hold on me, ſo that I am not able to look up; they are more than the Hairs of my Head, therefore my Heart faileth me. Which whether ſpoken by David of himſelf only, or of Chriſt, (for whom purpoſely ſome Paſſages in the Pſalm were made, compare ver. 6, 7, 8. with Heb. 10. 5, 6, 7, 8, 9.) when God did lay upon him the Iniquity of us all; or of both, the one in the Type, the other in the Antitype, I will here wave the Diſpute of: we will for the preſent underſtand it as ſpoken by David of himſelf. And then there is that obvious in it, which is full to our purpoſe in hand, hand, that it was the Multitude of his Sins which he intendeth, as appears by his multiplying Expreſſions to ſet forth that Multitude.

1. He ſays they are innumerable, innumerable Evils have encompaſſed me: theſe Evils were his Sins, Miſeries and Troubles in his Spirit for his Sins: for in explaining himſelf he ſubjoins, My Iniquities have taken hold of me; the Original is, uſque ad non numerum, multiplied till they ſurpaſs all number.

2. He ſays, they came over him, yea, over his Head, [Circumdederunt ſuper me] they beſieged me: The Alluſion is to an Army, that firſt beſiegeth round about: but ſecondly, to ſuch an Army as beſiegeth over head too, for what here is ſaid to be [ſuper me, over me] is in Pſal. 38. 4. thus expreſſed, (ſpeaking of his Sins) they came over my head, which is an unheard of way of Beſiegement, ſuch as other Enemies are not wont to.

3. If you enquire the ſpace and room they take up over our Heads; or how high they planted their Siege over his Head (by which we may eſtimate their Multitude) it is elſewhere told us, that they are ſo many as are piled up, and reach as high as Heaven, and ſo fill up that infinite Expanſum over our Heads. This Addition we find, Ezra 9. 4. Our Iniquities are increaſed over our Head, and our Guiltineſs is grown up unto the Heavens: As if you could ſuppoſe an Heap, which at firſt was but ſmall, were yet ſo increaſed by being added to continually, that it grew ſo high as it reach'd up to Heaven it ſelf: thus here. Thoſe ſpiritual Wickedneſſes, our Enemies, the Devils, do environ us over our Heads indeed, and aſſail us, yet they are confined to the lower Region of the Air: but Sins extend to Heaven.

4. No wonder then that if he ſays, I am not able to look up, that is, I cannot know them: For ſo thoſe Words thus tranſlated [I cannot look up] are rendred by moſt, Et non potui ut viderem, I could not ſee nor deſcry them.

5. He addeth an Expreſſion more familiar to vulgar Ears, They are more than the Hairs of mine Head: which though in Reality would ſeem far leſs expreſſive of a Multitude than the former; for the Hairs of any Man's Head may de facto be numbred by Man, yet becauſe proverbially it was uſed to ſet out any innumerable Multitude, as that [not one of a thouſand] you heard alſo was; and this ſuiting beſt to popular Ears, he therefore addeth it.——This for the Multitude of them.

The Effect hereof follows, Therefore my Heart fails: It is not (you ſee) ſo much the Heinouſneſs of his Sins is mentioned, or inſiſted on, as the infinite Number he ſaw, and beyond what he could ſee, that has the therefore put upon it, Therefore my Heart fails or ſinks; that was it which appalled him.——He had compared them to an Army, and it is the Multitude in an Army (when orderly ſet and well armed) that hath the Terror in it, (although alſo ſome Golia's may be among that Multitude.) This we find in Scripture, as 1 Sam. 13. The Philiſtines gathered themſelves together, thirty thouſand Chariots and ſix thouſand Horſemen, and People as the Sand of the Sea for Multitude, ver. 5. which when the Men of Iſrael ſay, 'tis ſaid, They hid themſelves in Caves and in Rocks, &c. ver. 6, 7.

Now the Day is coming wherein God himſelf will ſet thy Sins in order before thee, as Pſal. 50. as an Army in full Battalia, or Battel-array; and how will thy Heart, even the ſtouteſt Heart of any of the Sons of Men, ſink when it ſees the Multitude of ſmall Sins, as the Infantry, to be for Multitude more than the Sands of the Sea; and then great Sins, as Millions of Chariots and Horſemen, how wilt thou in that Day call upon the Rocks to cover thee, and the Cliffs to hide thee?

CHAP. XII.

The Senſe of this main Aſſertion further ſtated: or how it is to be underſtood, that God puts the Valour or chief Balance of the Account of Mens Sinfulneſs upon the Multitude of their Sins.—Some Reaſons, which put all together, make a full Demonſtration of it.

I. UNTO what an infinite Exceſs of Diſproportion for Number, every Man's Minute or ſmall Sins do abound unto, above the Number of his heinous ones, both the Scriptures have ſhewn us, and every Man's Conſcience that is enlightned muſt needs be apprehenſive of. And Reaſon alſo may inform us; for as for outward groſs Sins, (take them in the Generality of Men unregenerate) and they are not always and at all times, and comparatively, but ſeldom committed by them, through the Power of reſtraining Grace, common to Man. Thoſe that are drunk are drunk in the Night, 1 Theſſ. 5. 7. Acts 2. 15. So likewiſe the groſſer Acts of Uncleanneſs, and other like crying Sins, they be perpetrated but at times and by fits; but as for ſmaller Sins, they iſſue from us continually both Night and Day: As Clocks commonly ſound and ſtrike aloud but at Hours, but the Wheels and Springs are going to and fro perpetually. Some Men are ſo ſuperlatively profane, Belials, (as the Scripture calls them) as they may perhaps in this be excepted, ſuch as ſell themſelves to work Wickedneſs, who as ſome Clocks ſtrike every Quarter as well as every Hour; but yet even in them the leſſer ſort of Sins muſt needs be confeſſed far to abound. And the Reaſon of either is, that the Soul, the Seat and Subject both of original and acquired Corruption, is in a continual Motion, not only as it is a Soul, but as it is a ſinning Soul, and is therefore as ſuch, compared unto ſuch things as are in perpetual Motion. 1. A Fountain that perpetually is a running, Jer. 6. 17. As a Fountain caſts out her Waters, ſo this City (ſays God) caſts out her Wickedneſs. Then, 2. to the Sea, continually caſting out Siege and Foam, Iſa. 57. 20. The Wicked are like the troubled Sea, when it cannot reſt it caſts up Mire and Dirt. The Heart of Man as it is at all times, is compared to the Sea, for its Tumultuouſneſs, not in its ſedate calm Condition, but when it is moſt diſturbed with Storms. The like Jude 13. Raging Waves of the Sea, foaming out their own Shame. 3. To a Wheel, the Wheel of Nature, or the Courſe of Nature, which is always a running and in ſwift Motion, as a Wheel, we ſee, uſeth to be. The Senſe of the Apoſtle is, that whereas the Courſe of our corrupt Nature runs it round faſt enough of it ſelf, for 'tis as a Wheel; the Tongue (of all Members elſe the worſt) often moves it faſter than otherwiſe it would, unto fiery Evils, (as he calls them) and whirles it about ſo hurryingly and ſo ſwiftly, that as Wheels in Mills and Mill-ſtones, nimio motu ignem concipiunt, by too violent a Motion ſtrike Fire, and inflame the Mill they grind in: ſo here: See the Words. Hence it apparently follows, that ſome (though ſmaller Sins) are continually a bringing forth: the Soul is and will be working.

Thales terms the Soul, φύσιν ἀεὶ κίνησιν.

Vatablus.

Now this holding true of the moſt part or Generality of Mankind, the Aſſertion may well be underſtood and ſuppoſed, That if the Infinity of each of their ſmaller Sins, in reſpect of Number, be put into one Scale, that they will ordinarily caſt the Scale againſt the heinous. And unto this Aſſertion, in this Senſe underſtood, do many of the Scriptures already alledged incline, and the Reaſon to be alledged do contribute very far to the Confirmation thereof.

II. Take a Man's heinous Tranſgreſſions alone, and the very Number of them conſidered apart, in their Multiplication and Reiteration, doth provoke God more than ſimply or alone their ſingle material Heinouſneſs, if that might be be abſtractly conſidered.——This Aſſertion the ſecond and third Reaſons do, in the Cloſe of them in God's Expoſtulation, how oft? in the Pſalmiſt, and theſe ten times in Moſes, manifeſtly ſhew.——And indeed whether we take ſmall Sins apart, or great Sins apart, that is, Sins of any ſort apart, the Number of either doth in their ſeveral Proportions caſt the Aggrandiſement on them.

But III. there is this other State or Senſe of the Aſſertion, That take the Multitude of each Man's Sins, (whether they be greater or leſſer Sins) as put together, the whole of them into one Heap or Total, conſidered barely in their Number; and preſcind or abſtract their Heinouſneſs, and conſider that apart in a diſtinct Account by it ſelf: And as thus underſtood, it is that moſt of the Scriptures alledged do ſo vehemently inſiſt, and hold up before Mens Conſciences, the Multitude of their Sins as ſo highly provocative againſt God, rather than the Heinouſneſs. And this Senſe is it the following Reaſons do principally concern; and this takes in the Univerſality of Mankind.——This as to the true ſtating the Aſſertion.

And laſtly, It muſt be remembred, that the following Reaſons do preſent themſelves (ſingly conſidered) but as ſo many partial Steps or Degrees of Proofs, and not each or any one making up an integral Demonſtration, but ſo as the ſecond adds further Strength and Force to the firſt, and then the third unto the ſecond, and ſo all put together make the Demonſtration compleat.

Reaſon 1. Multitude in any kind riſeth to a Greatneſs in that kind. So that if we will firſt take and make the Eſtimate, but from the general Standard or Meaſure of Weight and Greatneſs which in ordinary Account is put upon any huge Multitude of ſmaller things, whatever they be in their ſeveral kinds; and then take a Multitude of ſmaller Sins in their kind, and by the ſame common Rule of Value, common to all things elſe in their ſeveral Proportions, it muſt be acknowledged that an Infinity of Sins for number doth riſe to an Infinity of Greatneſs, although thus merely weighed at that Ballance that is hung up in the common Market-place of the World, to weigh all things whatever.—This will appear by Inſtances.

Take the Sands, (unto which for Number Manaſſes's Sins are compared) we know how ſmall each Sand alone is; yet collectively and together, look as they ariſe to ſuch a Multitude as cannot be numbred, Heb. 11. 12. ſo withal that Multitude grows into ſuch a Greatneſs in all Dimenſions, as cannot be meaſured: which Expreſſion the Prophets uſe of them, as Jer. 33. 22. And Sands, if they were but heaped up together, make alſo a Weight as utterly inſupportable. O if my Grief were throughly weighed, it would be heavier than the Sand of the Sea, ſays Job, chap. 6. and therefore Sand in an Heap is proverbially uſed to expreſs Weight as well as Multitude, Prov. 27. 3.

If we would further improve this Illuſtration taken from Sands, look as the Sands that are within the Sea at the bottom of it, are they that make the many, and would (if caſt into one Heap) far exceed both in Weight and Number thoſe other Sands that are but upon the Shore of the Sea, or without the Sea, (unto which yet alone thoſe Compariſons of Immeaſurableneſs, &c. are in thoſe Places now cited made) ſo in like manner comparatively, do our inward Sins exceed our outward; the outward are but as the Sands on the Sea-ſhore, of which yet it is ſaid they are ἀναρίθμητοι, without Number, Heb. 11. 12.

Again, for another Inſtance, take the Sea it ſelf, What is that vaſt Heap and Body? it is but a gathering together of many Waters, as in Gen. 1. 10. and thoſe Waters but of innumerable Drops.

This Univerſe, the World, how immenſe is it? and yet ſome both ancient and modern Philoſophers ſay, it is altogether made up of, and but a Congeries of ſmall Atoms, Motes, or Duſts, locked and wedged into one another, and crouded together, which make up this Greatneſs.——Now apply but this, as we did that other, unto Sins; if the Sins of one Member (the Tongue) do, when collected into a Catalogue, make a World of Iniquity, Jam. 3. 6. then, when every idle Word ſhall be put to Account, as Chriſt ſays: O then, what will the Account

Account of all other Sins, both inward and outward, ariſe to? when the Account of the Tongue is but of which is merely outward, and that but in one member; which alſo lies ſtill and ſtirs not half of a Man's time, that is, when we are aſleep or alone by our ſelves. Chap. 12.

And that which ſtrengthens this Reaſon as on the part of Sins is, that every Sin, even the leaſt, hath an infinite ſinfulneſs in it, (as in the firſt Treatiſe about Sin I have ſhewn;) and that though it muſt be affirmed that Sins are not equal, but ſome exceed in malitiâ, in ſinfulneſs, as they are more againſt knowledg, and partake more of the Will, &c. yet all are Sins. And if Sins at all, then objectively infinite: Even as though one Devil is more wicked than another, Mat. 12. 47. yea, and the great Devil is to be acknowledged more deep in Guilt than many of his Fellows, (and for that Cauſe let him enjoy the Title of Prince of Devils) yet all the other are Devils as well as he: ſo in like manner, theſe ſmaller are Sins as well as the greateſt. And as of that legion which poſſeſſed that one Man in the Goſpel, it might be perhaps affirmed, that if all the Iniquities which they have perpetrated were put into one, they would match that great Devil in point of Wickedneſs: ſo why may not a few ſmaller Sins exceed ſome one that is very great, ſeeing the leaſt is infinite in that forementioned Reſpect? It is not in this value of Sins, as it uſeth to be in Coyns; there may be ſo vaſt a Collection of Braſs-farthings as will be (as to paſſing Currant) as much as a Talent of Gold comes to, but yet for the matter of them they are but Braſs, of another kind of metal; well, but the ſmaller Sins thy Heart minteth, they are Sins, and of the ſame ſpecies with the bigger, they are all tranſgreſſions of the Law, that's the Apoſtle's definition common to them all; and ſo each are like ſmaller Pieces of the ſame Alloy with the biggeſt.

And truly this enſuing Parallel between Sins and Devils will give ſome further light into the illuſtration of the Reaſon in Hand, viz. why a Company of ſmaller ſinful Acts ſhould in value with God countervail, yea exceed ſome one great one: for look as in each and every ſuch Devil, there is by Sin, a ſpoil of an whole individual intelligent Nature made by God to glorify him, which Sin hath undone, and turned to the contrary; and at that Rate, the Sins in a few of the loweſt Rank of that black Guard will amount unto a greater loſs and detriment unto God and his Glory, than a far greater degree of Wickedneſs in the greateſt Devil of all: For why? In him alone, but one ſingle intelligent Nature is ſpoiled, (though of a greater degree of Excellency, and therefore now of a greater ſize of ſinfulneſs:) thus parallel it is in point of Sin, a great iniquity in one Act of Sin, though of a great magnitude is yet but the ſpoil of one Act or Action, whereas the ſinfulneſs of many Acts multiplied, though of a ſmaller ſort, are the Deſtruction of ſo many ſeveral Acts of an immortal and intelligent Soul, made to have glorified God in each and every of it Actings: And unto what an Account might and would that have ariſen unto? And alſo unto what and how great an improvement and advance of an high contrary holineſs and glorifying God might each of ſo many Acts of ſuch a Soul have amounted to? This we cannot imagine; ſo that though in poſitive Iniquity one great Sin doth far ſurmount what is alſo poſitive in many of a leſſer degree, yet privatively and in the way of diverſion from, and excluſion of ſo many glorious Acts as may be ſuppoſed might have been produced, in that Reſpect, a few of ſmaller Sins may be juſtly conceived to exceed the other.

Reaſon 2. There is yet a more ſpecial and further peculiarity of Reaſon, which properly concerneth Sins and Crimes againſt God, that when they are multiplied to an exceſs of Number, there ſhould ariſe from thence, and by Reaſon thereof, a ſuperadded greatneſs of Provocation and Exacerbation in the breaſt of God againſt the Sinner. In ſome other things when they are many, it is but barely their Agreggation or collection together, which renders them great merely by cumulation, (as we ſay) as in an heap of Sands or Stones gathered together, there is ſimply a bulk or Moles thence ariſing, ſuch as mere Quantity affords; (and upon that Account it was that the former Reaſon only did did proceed.) But ſome ſorts of things there are even in Nature, the Accumulation of which together in one Bulk, have thereby, beſides the increaſe of their quantity or greatneſs as ſuch, alſo a Phyſical Force and Virtue wonderfully augmented thereby, and ſo virtually became ſtronger and more efficacious through the multiplication of them, and Addition of one to the other. As take but as vaſt a Company of the Duſts of Lime, and caſt them into one Heap, and let a little Water be put to them, yea often of themſelves, how do they grow up into a vehement Fire and burning heat, and over what greatneſs, or what ſimply as an aggregated Body their Lump ariſeth to, in reſpect of Quantity! ——Now thus are Sins to be further conſidered through their Multitude, to work in the Heart of God, an inflammation of Wrath againſt the Sinner, a Provocation, as the Scripture ſtiles it. ——In poiſonous Liquors the matter is more evident: beſides what the continual Addition of many Drops will encreaſe unto in ſingle quantity, every drop ſuperadds a new virtual Strength of Venom unto the whole Maſs, it is put unto: which we ſee evident in their operation on Men's Bodies; one new grain ſuperadded to a many of the ſame kind, cauſeth a working manifold as much as thoſe former Grains, (though many more) would alone have done, until that new addition came: We ſee it alſo in thoſe Doſes or Potions of Drugs which Phyſicians give for Phyſick, the adding of a little more of the ſame, adds withal a mighty virtue and Spirit to the whole. ——As this holds in things that have a phyſical virtue in Nature, ſo in Actions moral, multiplication of them doth in their kind the very ſame: Thus the multiplication of Injuries from one to another, in Men's hearts. That Diſciple who asked Chriſt the Queſtion, Shall I forgive my Brother till ſeven times? Mat. 18. 22. judged that an Addition of one injury (an eighth ſuppoſe) more, might juſtly have provoked beyond forgiveneſs. ——Yea, a ſmall injury heaped upon many preceeding ones, revives the Remembrance of all the former, and then they all together work in the virtue thereof, and contribute a mutual diffuſed and encreaſed Strength one to the other. Men uſe to ſay, You have offered me ſuch and ſuch affronts already, but if you offer me one more, &c. —And thus it is and muſt needs be in God's heart alſo. 1. The multiplying of Sins do increaſe and have a provocative Virtue or Strength in them to ſtir the Anger of the Lord; Jer. 5. 6. Becauſe their Tranſgreſſions are many, and their Backſlidings are ſtrong, (ſo in the Hebrew and Margin) that is, Their multitude increaſeth a ſtrong provocation. And elſewhere it is ſaid to cauſe in the Heart of God a Great hatred, as it is in Hoſ. 9. 7. The days of viſitation and recompence are come, for the multitude of their iniquity, and [the great hatred;] which is to be underſtood of that hatred which God's Heart had from that multitude of their Sins, conceived againſt them, as well as meant of the hatred of their Hearts againſt God in ſinning: For here it ſignifies their being an hatred to God, or of their being objects of God's hatred, which the ſame word and Expreſſion uſed in the very next verſe, ſhews; and is alſo commonly uſed in other Languages to expreſs the Object hated. ——Again, you find God reckons, How oft have they provoked me? Pſal. 78. 40. yea and the times of reiterating the ſame Sins, as the cauſe of his being provoked, They have provoked me theſe ten times, Num. 14. 22. which yet is but a definite number to expreſs how infinitely many more. —As likewiſe in Eccl. 8. 12. if a Sinner ſin an hundred times; he reckons this nnmber not definitely, but meerly to ſhew how much continuation and reiteration of ſinnings do provoke the patience of God, as both the 11 verſ. and the following Speech there do ſhew.——And, 2. In Scripture alſo you find that a new adding of further Sins, puts a new additional Virtue into all the former, to ſet God's Heart a working againſt the Sinner: and therefore 'tis ſaid of Herod, having ſpoken of his Sins in the verſe afore, that, He added yet above all, that he ſhut up John in Priſon. 'Tis added in reference unto God his being provoked thereby.

Reaſon 3. Add to this, when theſe Sinnings have been committed without interruption or intermiſſion, for many Years continuance, or for a long time. In that Gen. 6. 5. the Lord heaps up three things, as thoſe which cauſed their very very Thoughts (though ſmall Sins) to have been ſo highly provocative, (1.) that every Thought (2.) was only evil (3.) continually: if they had been evil but now and then, as in greater Sinnings it falls out, it had been far leſs; but that continually, though in ſmall Sins, this proved the heightning Exaggeration. In other things this is alſo ſeen, As a continual dropping in a very rainy Day, ſo is a contentious Woman. A continual contention, what a ſore vexation proves it to a Man's heart that lives with ſuch an one? And ſuch muſt needs be to God's Heart the continual Sinning of a Sinner: A continual contradiction of Sinners, though in never ſo ſmall things, what a grating muſt it needs be? This is a continued bearing up of a Quarrel or Contention with God; for which cauſe God calls every Sinner that continues in his Sins, a contentious Perſon with him, and that is it increaſeth the Wrath: Unto them that are [contentious] Indignation and [Wrath] Rom. 2. 8.——See this in its contrary; how much continuing in Prayer without ceaſing or intermiſſion, prevails with God, we often read, and the Parable ſhews, Luke 18. 1. And therefore the Church makes an Argument of it to God to overcome him with, Lam. 3. 49. Mine Eye trickleth down, and [ceaſeth not without any intermiſſion] till the Lord, &c. Thus it fares in Sinning. Yea hence it is that the Lord alledgeth from how long a Sinner hath continued thus to Sin, This City hath been to me a Provocation of mine Anger, and my Fury, [from the Day it was built unto this Day,] Jer. 32. 31. And of the Wicked he counts up, from how long they have begun thus continually to ſin, Pſal. 58. 3. The Wicked are eſtranged from the Womb, they go aſtray as ſoon as they be born. To conclude this Head, If not to have continued in all things to do what the Law requires, and but to fail in any one the ſmalleſt Duty, brings a Curſe, forfeits all, Gal. 3. and Ezek. 18. 24. then on the contrary, how will a Sinner, his having continued to tranſgreſs the Law in all things ſome Way or other, from his very Infancy to this Hour, provoke to an infinity?

Concluſion. I ſhut up this part of the Diſcourſe with this. All theſe things put together, no wonder if we find in Scripture all dimenſions of Height, Breadth, Length, Depth, aſcribed unto Mens Sins, even of particular Men, and that in reſpect to their Number.

1. Height. How high, I ſhewed you afore. Ezra took the elevation of that, ch. 9. 6. having firſt ſaid, Our iniquities are increaſed over our Heads, he adds, and our Treſpaſs grows up to Heaven. And in that coherence it evidently relates to the multitude of them, and is not only ſpoken in Relation to that one great particular treſpaſs of marrying ſtrange Wives, which they ſtood in the Guilt of; for he diſtinctly after ſpeaks of that particular, ver. 7. And both thoſe his expreſſions, ver. 6. ſeem to be an Alluſion to that overflow of the Waters at the general Flood; and yet of that it is but ſaid, that the Waters prevailed fifteen Cubits upwards over the Hills and Mountains that were under the whole Heavens. But thoſe Sins were ſo many, as they prevailed and increaſed upwards to Heaven it ſelf.

2. Depth. In that fore-cited place Hoſ. 9. (the multitude of their Sins having been firſt ſpecified, verſe 7.) in the 9*th* verſe it is added, they have deeply corrupted themſelves, [Hebr. They have deepned, They have corrupted:] And David, I ſink in deep Mire, Pſal. 69. 2. where there is no ſtanding; that is, ſo deep, as it hath no Bottom: I am come into depths of Waters: which is ſpoken of his Sins, as verſe 5. O Lord, thou knoweſt my fooliſhneſs, and my Sins are not hid from thee.——Again, Out of the [Depths] have I cried, Pſal. 130. 1. ſtill ſpoken of Sins, and alſo with a Reſpect to the multitude of them, verſe 3. If thou ſhouldſt mark Iniquities, &c. and therefore oppoſitely pleads, There is plenteous, or a multitude of Redemption with thee, verſe 7. 'twas the Number that made that Depth.

3. Breadth and Length, or Expanſe, they cannot be meaſured for vaſtneſs and wideneſs of Extent, (as of the Sands 'tis ſaid) which accrues merely from their Number; for 'tis added, nor can be numbred: the Words are, that cannot be meaſured nor numbered, Hoſ. 1. 10. as alſo Jer. 33. 22. ——And if David ſays of the holy Law, that it is ſo exceeding broad, that there is no End or Bounds of it, Pſal. 119. then are Sins of an exceeding Breadth alſo; for there is not a Law in the Book, but there is a Sin in the Heart oppoſite to it: The Law of the Members in us, is as large in commanding Sin, as the Law of God is in forbidding, Rom. 7. 21, 22, 23, 25.

So as indeed there is nothing can match it in all theſe Reſpects, but that Love and Grace in God and Chriſt's heart, (who alſo ſubdued theſe numberleſs Iniquities by a plenteous Redemption for them) unto which Love of his, all theſe Dimenſions alſo are attributed: O what then is the Height, the Breadth, the Length, and Depth of the Love of Chriſt? which paſſeth knowledg, and prevails as far above all our Sins, which yet reach unto Heaven, as far as the Heavens, and as the Heavens do above Mole-hills here on Earth. God's coming to Judgment is compared unto a Vintage, Joel 3. 12. and ſuch a Vintage as for the abundance is like that of cluſtred Grapes, which through their number, when preſſed in the Wine-fat, make the Wine-preſs full, and all the Veſſels to flow over. This alluſion doth God apply unto their Wickedneſs, Their Wickedneſs is great, or ample, large, and unmeaſurable, ver. 13. O the multitudes, the multitudes! which doubled Exclamation is ſpoken both of Perſons, and that but more remotely, ver. 12. but in the next Coherence it is Sins that are to be judged, ver. 13. and both at that Day, ver. 14.

If therefore thy Heart be not moved with the heinous greatneſs of thy Sins, even the leaſt, but that ſeems ſmall, add this to the conſideration thereof, the Number, O the multitudes, the multitudes, in the Vally of Deciſion! ——But then withal further add to that infinite number of ſmaller Sins, thy heinous Enormities alſo (whereof one perhaps is in weight as much as millions of ſmall) but when you ſhall have put both together, to what an infinite Guilt will the total riſe up unto? Therefore let every Soul take heed of Dying in their Sins.

AN Unregenerate Man's Guiltineſs BEFORE GOD In Reſpect of SIN and PUNISHMENT.

BOOK XII.

An unregenerate Man's Guiltineſs by reaſon of the Aggravations of his Sinfulneſs.

ROM. 7. 13.

Was that then which is good, made Death unto me? God forbid. But Sin, that it might appear Sin, working Death in me by that which is good: that Sin by the Commandment might become exceeding ſinful.

CHAP. I.

The Heinouſneſs of Sin in general, even of the leaſt Sin.

WE find our Apoſtle in ver. 9. to have been alive, but ſtruck upon the ſudden dead, by an Apparition preſented to him in the Glaſs of the Law, of the Sinfulneſs of Sin: Sin revived, ſays ver. 9. appeared to be Sin, ſays ver. 13. looks but like it ſelf, above Meaſure ſinful: and he falls down dead at the very Sight of it: I died, ſays he, in ver. 9. it wrought Death in me, ſays ver. 13. that is, an Apprehenſion of Death and Hell, as due to that Eſtate I was then in. But yet as the Life of Sin was the Death of Paul, ſo this Death of his was but a Preparation to a new Life; I through the Law am dead to the Law, that I might live to God, Gal. 2. 19. And all this he ſpeaks of was, of the Work upon him at his firſt Converſion; for then it was that he relates how Sin became in his Eſteem, ſo above meaſure ſinful.

The Subject then to be inſiſted on is the Sinfulneſs of Sin, or the Heinouſneſs of the leaſt Sin: a Subject therefore as neceſſary, as any other, becauſe if ever we be ſaved, Sin muſt firſt appear to us all, as it did here to him, above meaſure ſinful.

Book XII. And, I. becauſe all Knowledg begins at the Effects, which are obvious to Senſe, and Interpreters of the Nature of things; therefore we will begin this Demonſtration of the Evil of Sin, from the miſchievous Effects it hath filled the World withall, it having done nothing but wrought Miſchief ſince it came into the World, and all the Miſchief that hath been done, it alone hath done, but eſpecially towards the poor Soul of Man, the miſerable Subject of it.

Which, 1. it hath debaſed: The Soul of Man, the nobleſt Creature under Heaven, and higheſt allied, made to be a Companion fit for God himſelf, but Sin hath ſtrip'd it of its firſt native Excellency, as it did Reuben, Gen. 49. 41. debaſed this Soul, more worth than all the World, as Chriſt himſelf ſaith, that only went to the Price of it: yet Sin hath made it a Drudg and Slave to every Creature, which it was made to rule: Therefore the Prodigal, as a Type, is ſaid to ſerve Swine, and feed on Husks, ſo as every Vanity maſters it. Therefore we find in Scripture, that Men are ſaid to be Servants to Wine, Tit. 2. 3. Servants to Riches, and divers Luſts, &c.

And hence it is that Shame attends upon it, Rom. 6. 21. Now Shame ariſeth out of an Apprehenſion of ſome Excellency debaſed: and by how much the Excellency is greater, by ſo much is the Shame the greater; and therefore unutterable Confuſion will one day befall Sinners: becauſe Sin is the Debaſement of an unvaluable Excellency.

2. It not only debaſeth it, but defiles it alſo; and indeed there was nothing elſe that could defile it, Matth. 15. 20. for the Soul is a moſt pure Beam, bearing the Image of the Father of Lights: as far ſurpaſſing the Sun in Pureneſs, as the Sun doth a Clod of Earth; and yet all the Dirt in the World cannot defile the Sun; all the Clouds that ſeek to muffle it, the Sun ſcatters them all: but Sin hath defiled the Soul: Yea, one Sin, the leaſt, defiles it, in an inſtant, totally, eternally.

1*ſt*. One Sin did it in the Fall of Adam, Rom. 5. 17. one Offence polluted him, and all the World. Now ſuppoſe you ſhould ſee one drop of Darkneſs ſeizing on the Sun, and putting out that Light and Eye of Heaven, and to looſen it out of the Orb it moves in, and cauſe it to drop down a Lump of Darkneſs, you would ſay it were a ſtrange Darkneſs: this Sin did then in and unto the Soul, to which yet the Sun is but as a Taper.

2*dly*. It defiles it thus in an Inſtant. Take the moſt glorious Angel in Heaven, and let one of the leaſt Sins ſeize upon his Heart, he would in an Inſtant fall down from Heaven, ſtrip'd of all his Glory, the uglieſt Creature that ever was beheld: you would count that the ſtrongeſt of Poiſons, that would poiſon in an Inſtant; as Nero boiled a Poiſon to that height, that it killed Germanicus as ſoon as he received it; now ſuch an one is Sin.

3*dly*. Sin defiles it totally: it reſts not in one Member only, but beginning at the Underſtanding, eats into the Will and Affections, ſoaks through all. Thoſe Diſeaſes we account ſtrongeſt, which ſeize not on a Joint or Member only, but ſtrikes Rottenneſs through the whole Body.

4*thly*. It defiles eternally, it being æterna macula, a Stain which no Nitre or Sope, or any Creature can waſh out, Jer. 2. 21. There was once let in a Deluge of Water, and the World was all over-flow'n with it; it waſhed away Sinners indeed, but not one Sin. And the World ſhall be a Fire again at the latter Day, and all that Fire and thoſe Flames in Hell that follow, ſhall not purge out one Sin.

3. It hath robbed the Soul of the Image of God, deprived us of the Glory of God, Rom. 3. 23. the Image of God's Holineſs, which is his Beauty and ours. We were beautiful, and all glorious once within: which though but an Accident, is more worth than all Mens Souls devoid of it, it being a Likeneſs unto God, a divine Nature, without which no Man ſhall ſee God. Though Man in Innocency had all Perfections united in him via eminentiæ, that are to be found in other Creatures, yet this was more worth than all: for all the reſt made him not like to God, as this did; without which all Paradiſe could not have made Adam happy; which when he had loſt, he was left naked, though thoſe his other Perfections remained with him; which is profitable for all things, as the Apoſtle ſays: The leaſt Dram of which, the whole World emballanced with, would be found too light; without which the glorious Angels would be damned Devils, the Saints in Heaven damned Ghoſts. This Sin hath robbed Man of. Chap. 1.

4. It hath robbed Man even of God himſelf; Your Sins ſeperate (ſays God) betwixt you and me: and therefore they are ſaid to live without God in the World: and in robbing a Man of God, it robs him of all things; for all things are ours, but ſo far as God is ours: of God, whoſe Face makes Heaven, he is all in all; his loving Kindneſs is better than Life, and containeth Beauty, Honour, Riches, all; yea they are but a Drop to him.

But its Miſchief hath not ſtaid here, but as the Leproſey of a Leper in the old Law, ſometimes infected their Houſes, Garments, &c.

So, 5. it hath hurl'd Confuſion over all the World, brought a Vanity on the Creature, Rom. 8. 23. and a Curſe, Gen. 2. and had not Chriſt undertook the ſhattered Condition of the World to uphold it, it had fallen about Adam's Ears.

And though the old Walls and ruinous Palace of the World ſtands to this day, yet the Beauty, the Gloſs and Glory of the Hangings is foiled and marred with many Imperfections caſt upon every Creature.

And as the Houſe of the Leper was to be pulled down, and Traitors Houſes uſe to be made Jakes: ſo the World (if Chriſt had not ſtep'd in) had ſhrunk into its firſt nothing: and you will ſay, that is a ſtrong Carrion that retains not only Infection in it ſelf, but infects all the Air about: ſo this, that not the Soul, the Subject of it only, but all the World.

6. It was the firſt Founder of Hell, laid the firſt Corner-ſtone thereof: Sin alone brought in and filled that bottomleſs Gulph with all the Fire and Brimſtone, and Treaſures of Wrath, which ſhall never be burnt and conſumed.

Laſtly, this crucified and pierced Chriſt himſelf, poured on him his Father's Wrath, the induring of which for Sin, was ſuch, as that all the Angels in Heaven had crack'd and ſunk under it.

II. But yet this Eſtimate is but taken from the Effects of it, the Eſſence of it, which is the Cauſe of all theſe Evils, muſt needs have much more Miſchief in it. Shall I ſpeak the leaſt Evil I can ſay of it? It contains all Evils in it: therefore James 1. 23. the Apoſtle calls it, Filthineſs, and abundance of Superfluity, or Excrement as it were of Naughtineſs; περισσεια της κακιας. As if ſo tranſcendent, that if all Evils were to have an Excrement, a Scum, a Superfluity, Sin is it, as being the abſtracted Quinteſſence of all. An Evil, which in the Nature and Eſſence of it, virtually and eminently contains all Evils of what kind ſoever that are in the World. Inſomuch, as in the Scriptures you ſhall find that all the Evils in the World ſerve but to anſwer for it, and to give Names to it. Hence Sin it is called Poyſon, and Sinners Serpents: Sin is called a Vomit, Sinners Dogs: Sin the Stench of Graves, and they rotten Sepulchres: Sin Mire; Sinners Sows: And Sin Darkneſs, Blindneſs, Shame, Nakedneſs, Folly, Madneſs, Death, whatſoever is filthy, defective, infective, painful. Now as the Holy Ghoſt ſays of Nabal, [as is his Name, ſo is he;] ſo may we ſay of Sin: for if Adam gave Names to all things, according to their Nature, much more God, who calls things as they are. Surely God would not ſlander Sin, though it be his only Enemy. And beſides, there is a Reaſon for this, it is the Cauſe of all Evils. God ſowed nothing but good Seed in the World; He beheld, and ſaw all things were very good. It is Sin hath ſown the Tares, all thoſe Evils that have come up, Sorrows and Diſeaſes, both unto Men and Beaſts. Now whatever is in the Effect, is via eminentiæ in the Cauſe. Surely therefore it is to the Soul of Man (the miſerable Veſſel and Subject of it) all that, which Poyſon, Death, and Sickneſs is unto the other Creatures, and to the Body; and in that, it is all theſe to the Soul, it is therefore more than all theſe unto it: for corruptio optimi peſſima: by how much the Soul exceeds all other Creatures, by ſo much muſt Sin, which is the Corruption, Poiſon, Death and Sickneſs of it, exceeds all other Evils.

III. But

Book XII.

III. But yet this is the leaſt ill that can be ſaid of it. There is, ſecondly, ſome further tranſcendent peculiar Miſchief in it, that is not to be found in all other Evils, as will appear in many Inſtances.

For, 1. all other Evils God proclaims himſelf the Author of, and owns them all; though Sin be the meritorious Cauſe of all, yet God the efficient and diſpoſing Cauſe. There is no Evil in the City but I have done it. He only diſclaimeth this, Jam. 1. 13. as a Baſtard of ſome others breeding, for he is the Father of Lights, ver. 17.

2. The utmoſt Extremity of the Evil of Puniſhment God the Son underwent, had a Cup mingled him of his Father, more bitter than if all the Evils in the World had been ſtrained in, and he drank it off heartily to the bottom; but not a Drop of Sin, though ſweetned with the Offer of all the World, would go down with him.

3. Other Evils the Saints have choſen and imbraced as good, and refuſed the greateſt good things the World had, as evil, when they came in Competition with Sin. So Moſes choſe rather to ſuffer, much rather than to injoy the Pleaſures of Sin, Heb. 11. from 24, to 28. So Chryſoſtome, when Eudoxia the Empreſs threatned him: Go, tell her, ſays he, Nil niſi peccatum timeo, I fear nothing but Sin.

4. Take the Devil himſelf, whom you all conceive to be more full of Miſchief than all the Evils in the World, called therefore in the Abſtract ſpiritual Wickedneſs, Epheſ. 6. 12. yet it was but Sin that firſt ſpoiled him; it is Sin poſſeſſeth the very Devils: he was a glorious Angel, till he was acquainted with it: And could there be a Separation made between him and Sin, he would be again of as good, ſweet, and amiable a Nature, as any mere Creature in Earth or Heaven.

5. Though other things are evil, yet nothing makes the Creature accurſed but Sin: as all good things in the World do not make a Man a bleſſed Man, ſo nor all the Evils an accurſed Man. God ſays not, bleſſed are the honourable, and the rich, nor that accurſed are the poor: but curſed is the Man that continues not in all things, &c. Gal. 3. 10. a Curſe to the leaſt Sin; and on the contrary, bleſſed is the Man whoſe Iniquities are forgiven, &c. Rom. 4. 7.

6. God hates nothing but Sin. Were all Evils ſwept down into one Man as made the Sink of them, God hates him not ſimply for them, not becauſe thou art poor and diſgraced, but only becauſe ſinful. It is Sin he hates, Rev. 2. 15. Iſa. 27. 11. yea, it alone: and whereas other Attributes are diverſly communicated in their Effects to ſeveral things; as his Love and Goodneſs: himſelf, his Son, his Children, have all a ſhare in: yet all the Hatred (which is as large as his Love) is ſolely poured out upon, and wholly, and limitted only unto Sin.

IV. All the Queſtion will be, what Tranſcendency of Evil is in the Eſſence of it, that makes it above all other Evils, and thus hated, and it only, by God, Chriſt, the Saints, &c.

Why? It is Enmity to God, Rom. 8. 7. Abſtracts we know ſpeak Eſſences; the meaning is, it is as directly contrary to God, as any thing could be: for contrary it is to God, and all that is his.

As, 1. contrary to his Exiſtence, and being God; for it makes Men hate him, Rom. 1. 30. and as he that hateth his Brother is a Murderer, 1 John 3. 15. ſo he that hateth God may be ſaid to be a Murderer of him, and wiſheth that he were not. Peccatum eſt Dei-cidium.

2. Contrary it is to all his Attributes, which are his Name. Men are jealous of their Names: God's Name is himſelf. 1*ſt*, It makes a Man ſlight God's Goodneſs, and to ſeek Happineſs in the Creature, as if he were able to be happy without him. And, 2*dly*, it depoſeth his Soveraignty, and ſets up other Gods before his Face. 3*dly*, It contemns his Truth, Power and Juſtice. And, 4*thly*, turns his Grace into Wantonneſs.

And as thus to himſelf, ſo to what-ever is his, or dear to him. A King hath three things in an eſpecial manner dear to him: his Laws, his Favourites, his Image ſtamp'd upon his Coin: and ſo hath God. 1*ſt*. His

1*ſt*. His Laws and Ordinances: God never gave Law, but it hath been broken by Sin; ἀνομία is the definition of it, The tranſgreſſion of the Law, 1 John 3. 4. yea, it is called deſtroying the Law, Pſal. 119.126. And know, that God's Law, the leaſt tittle of it, is more dear to him than all the World. For, 'ere the leaſt of it ſhall be broken, Heaven and Earth ſhall paſs. The leaſt Sin therefore, which is a breach of the leaſt Law, is worſe than the deſtruction of the World: and for his Worſhip, (as envying God ſhould have any) it turns his Ordinances into Sin. Chap. 1.

2*dly*. For his Favourites: God hath but a few poor ones; upon whom becauſe God hath ſet his love, Sin (as it works in Mens hearts) hath ſet its hatred.

Laſtly, for his Image. Even in a Man's own breaſt the Law of the Members fights againſt the Law of the Mind, and endeavoureth to expel it, though a Man ſhould be damned if it were expelled. Gal. 5. 17. The fleſh (namely Sin) luſteth againſt the Spirit, for they are contraries. Contrary indeed; for methinks though it hates that Image in others, that yet it ſhould ſpare it in a Man's ſelf, out of Self-love; but yet though a Man ſhould be damned, if this Image be expelled, it yet laboureth to do this, ſo deadly is that hatred: a Man hates himſelf, as holy, ſo far as he is ſinful.

V. It abounds now ſo high, as our Thoughts can follow it no farther. Divines ſay, it aſpires unto infinity: the Object againſt whom it is thus contrary unto, being God, who is infinite, they tell us, that objectively, Sin it ſelf is infinite. Sure I am, the worth of the Object, or Party offended, aggravates the Offence: an ill Word againſt the King is High-Treaſon, tho not ſo great indignity to another Man. Sure I alſo am, that God was ſo offended with it, as though he loves his Son as himſelf, yet he (though without Sin) being but made Sin by imputation, God ſpared him not: and becauſe the Creatures could not ſtrike a ſtroak hard enough, he himſelf was pleaſed to bruiſe him for Sin, Iſa. 53.16. He ſpared not his own Son, Rom.8.32. Yet one would think his Love might have overcome him, to have paſſed by it to his Son; at leaſt a Word of his Mouth might have pacified him: yet ſo great was his hatred of it, and offence at it, as he poured the Vials of his Wrath on him: neither would entreaty ſerve; for though he cried with ſtrong Cries it ſhould paſs from him, God would not till he had out-wreſtled it.

And as the Perſon offended aggravates the Offence, as before, ſo alſo the Perſon ſuffering, being God and Man, argues the abounding Sinfulneſs of it. For, for what Crime did your ever hear a King was put to Death? their Perſons being eſteemed in worth above all Crime, as civil. Chriſt was the King of Kings.

VI. And yet there is one conſideration more to make the Meaſure of its Iniquity fully full, and to abound to flowing over, and that is this, that the leaſt Sin virtually more or leſs contains all Sin in the nature of it (I mean not that formally all are equal, therefore I add more or leſs) And I prove it thus: becauſe Adam by one Offence contracted the ſtain of all, no ſooner did one Sin ſeize upon his Heart, but he had all Sins in him.

And ſo every Sin in us by a miraculous multiplication inclines our Nature more to every Sin than it was before: it makes the pollution of Nature of a deeper die; not only to that ſpecies of Sin, whereof it is the proper individual Act, but to all elſe: As bring one candle into a Room, the light ſpreads all over; and then another, the light is all over more increaſed: So it is in Sin; for the leaſt cuts the Soul off from God, and then it is ready to go a Whoring after every Vanity that will entice it, or entertain it.

And this ſhews the fullneſs of the Evil of it, in that it contains not only all other Evils in the World in it, but alſo all of its own kind. As you would count that a ſtrange Poiſon, the leaſt drop of which contains the force of all Poiſon in it; that a ſtrange Diſeaſe, the leaſt infection whereof brought the Body ſubject to all Diſeaſes: yet ſuch an one is Sin, the leaſt making the Soul more prone and ſubject to all.

VII. And

Book XII.

VII. And now you ſee it is a perfect Evil; and though indeed it cannot be ſaid to be the chiefeſt, or ſummum malum, in that full ſenſe wherein God is ſaid to be the chiefeſt Good; becauſe if it were as bad as God is good, how could he pardon it, ſubdue it, bring it to nothing as he doth? and then how could it have addition to it, one Sin being more ſinful than another? Ezek. 8. 15. John 19. 11. But yet it hath ſome Analogy of being the chiefeſt Evil, as God the chiefeſt Good.

For 1. As God is the chiefeſt Good, who therefore is to be loved for himſelf, and other things but for his ſake; ſo alſo is Sin the chiefeſt Evil, becauſe it is ſimply to be avoided for it ſelf; but other Evils become good, yea deſirable, when compared with it.

2. As God is the chiefeſt Good, becauſe he is the greateſt happineſs to himſelf; ſo Sin, the greateſt Evil to it ſelf: for there can be no worſe puniſhment of it than it ſelf; therefore when God would give a Man over, as an Enemy he means never to deal withal more, he gives him up to Sin.

And, 3. It is ſo evil, as it cannot have a worſe Epithet given it than it ſelf; and therefore the Apoſtle, when he would ſpeak his worſt of it, and wind up his Expreſſion higheſt, uſque ad hyperbolem, calls it by its own Name, ſinful Sin, ἁμαρτωλὸς ἁπαρτία, Rom. 7. 13. that as in God being the greateſt good, quicquid eſt in Deo, eſt Deus ipſe, therefore his Attributes and Names are but himſelf, idem prædicatur de ſeipſo: ſo it is with Sin, quicquid eſt in peccato, peccatum eſt, &c. he can call it no worſe than by its own name, ſinful Sin, Uſe 1. And what have I been ſpeaking of all this while? Why but of one Sin in the general Nature of it. And take the leaſt for inſtance, it hath all this in it that hath been ſaid. And yet there is not a Man here, but has millions of them; as many as the Sands upon the Sea-ſhore; yea, as there would be Atoms, were all the World pounded to duſt: it exceeds in number alſo, and therefore 'ere we go any further, let all our thoughts break off here in wonderment at the abounding of Sin, above all things elſe: for other things, if they be great, they are but few; if many, they are but ſmall: the World, 'tis a big one indeed, but yet there is but one; the Sands, though innumerable, yet they are but ſmall; your Sinfulneſs exceeds in both.

And next, let all our thoughts be wound up to the moſt deep and intenſe conſideration of our Eſtates; for if one Sin abounds thus, what Tongue can expreſs, or Heart can conceive their Miſery, who to uſe the Apoſtle's phraſe, 1 Cor. 15. are yet in their Sins? that is, ſtand bound to God in their own ſingle bond only, to anſwer for all their Sins themſelves; and cannot, in the Eſtate wherein yet they ſtand, of impenitency and unbelief, plead the benefit of Chriſt's Death, to take off and eaſe them of the Guilt of one Sin, but all their Sins are yet all their own, which to a Man in Chriſt they are not; for his own Bonds are cancelled, and given in, and Chriſt entred into Bonds for him, and all his Sins tranſlated upon him.

Now for a proper Character of their Eſtate, and ſutable to this expreſſion:

1. Then a Man's Sins may be ſaid to be ſtill his own, when he committeth Sin out of his own, that is the full frame and inclination of his Heart. Thus the Devil is ſaid to ſin, John 8. 44. ἐκ τῶν ἰδίων, out of his own; the whole frame of his Spirits is in it; which a Man in Chriſt cannot be ſo fully ſaid to do, for he hath a new Creature in him that ſinneth not, 1 John 3. 1, 9. that can ſay even when he ſins, It is not I, but Sin.

And, 2. Then Sin is a Man's own, when he hates it not, but loves it: The World loves his own, ſaith Chriſt, John 15. 29. and ſo doth a wicked Man his Sin, more than any good; which is David's character, Pſal. 52. 3.

And, 3. What is a Man's own, he nouriſheth and cheriſheth; therefore Epheſ. 5. 19. No Man hates his own Fleſh, but loveth it, and cheriſheth it: ſo do Men their Sins, when they are their own. Thoſe great and rich Oppreſſors, Jam. 5. 5. are ſaid to nouriſh their Hearts in wantonneſs, and in pleaſure, as in a Day of ſlaughter; as living upon the cream of Sinning, and having ſuch plenty, plenty, they pick out none but the ſweeteſt bits to nouriſh their Hearts withal. Chap. 18.

4. So what a Man provides for, that is his own; ſo ſays the Apoſtle, A Man that provides not for his own, is worſe, &c. When therefore Men make Proviſion for the fleſh, as the phraſe is, Rom. 13. 14. that is, whoſe Hearts are Carterers and Contrivers of their Luſts, and whoſe chiefeſt care is every Morning, what pleaſures of Sin they have that Day be to be enjoyed, it is a ſign that their Sins are their own.

In a word, 5. When Men live in Sin, 'tis the Expreſſion uſed, 1 Tim. 5. 6. She that lives in pleaſure, is Dead while ſhe lives. When the revenews of the comfort of Men's lives come in, from the pleaſures Sins afford, and that ſupplies them with all thoſe neceſſaries that belong to Life; as when 'tis their Element, which they drink in like Water; their meat, they eat the Bread of wickedneſs, Prov. 1. 7. and it goes down, and troubleth them not; their ſleep alſo, they cannot ſleep till they have done or contrived ſome miſchief, ver. 16. their apparel, as when oppreſſion covers them as a Garment, and Pride compaſſeth them as a Chain, Pſa. 73. their recreation alſo, It is a paſtime for a Fool to do wickedly, he makes ſport and brags of it, Prov. 10. 23. yea their health, being Sick and diſcontented, when their Luſts are not ſatisfied, as Ahab was for Naboths Vineyard; Ammon grew lean, when he could not enjoy his Paramore.

All theſe, as they live in their Sins here, and ſo are dead whilſt they live; and ſo are made the more miſerable, in making the greateſt Evil their chiefeſt Good; ſo when they come to die (as we all muſt do one Day) and how ſuddenly we know not; conſider we carry our Souls, our precious Souls, as precious Water in a brittle glaſs, ſoon cracked, and then we are ſpilt like water, which none can gather up again; or but as a Candle in a Paper-lanthorn, in clay Walls, full of crannies, but a little cold comes in, and often blows the Candle out: and then, without a through change of Heart before, wrought from all Sin, to all Godlineſs, they will die in their Sins. And all, and the utmoſt of all miſeries is ſpoken in that one word: and therefore Chriſt, when he would ſum up all miſeries in one Expreſſion, tells the Phariſees they ſhould die in their Sins, John 8. 28.

Uſe 2. And let us conſider further, that if Sin be thus above meaſure ſinful, that Hell that followeth Death, is then likewiſe above meaſure fearful. And ſo indeed it is intimated to be a puniſhment without meaſure, as by the Diſtinction and difference God puts between puniſhing his Children and the Wicked in Hell, as we find it, by comparing Jer. 30. 11. with Iſa. 27. Have I ſmitten thee (ſays God to his Sons) as I have ſmote them (ſpeaking of wicked Men) ver. 7. No, but I will debate with thee in meaſure, ver. 8. which difference is alſo put in Jer. 30. 11. And indeed, Sin being committed againſt God, the Kings of Kings, it can never be puniſhed enough. But as the killing of a King is amongſt Men a Crime ſo hainous, that no Tortures can exceed the deſert of it: we uſe to ſay, all Torments are too little, any Death too good for ſuch a Crime. Now Peccatum eſt Dei-cidium, as I ſaid before, a deſtroying God, as much as in us lies; and therefore none but God himſelf can give it as full puniſhment: therefore it is called a falling into God's hands, Heb. 10. 31. which how fearful is it, as he ſpeaks there. For if his breath blows us to Deſtruction, Job 4. 9. for we are but duſt-heaps; yea, his Nod, he nods to Deſtruction, Pſal. 80. 16. then what is the weight of his Hands, even of thoſe hands, which ſpan the Heavens, and hold the Earth in the hollow of them? and if God take it into his Hands to puniſh, he will be ſure to do it unto the full. Sin is Man's work, and puniſhment is God's, and God will ſhew himſelf as perfect in his work, as Man in his.

If Sin be malum catholicum, as hath been ſaid, that contains all Evils in it; then the puniſhment God will inflict ſhall be malum catholicum alſo, containing in it all Miſeries; it is a cup full of mixture, ſo called, Pſal. 75. 8. as into which God hath ſtrained the quinteſſence of all miſeries, and the Wicked of the Earth muſt Drink the dreggs of it, though it be eternity unto the Bottom.

Book XI.

And if one Sin deſerves a Hell, a puniſhment above meaſure, what will millions of millions do? And we read that every Sin ſhall receive a juſt recompence, Heb. 2. 3. O, let us then take heed of dying in our Sins, and therefore of living in them; for we ſhall lie in Priſon till we have paid the very utmoſt farthing.

And therefore if all this that I have ſaid will not engender anſwerable Apprehenſions of it in you, (this being but painting the Toad, which you can look upon and handle without Affrightment) I wiſh that if without Danger you could but lay your Ears to Hell, that ſtanding as it where behind the skreen, you might hear Sin ſpoken of in its own dialect, by the oldeſt Sons of perdition there: To hear what Cain ſays of murthering his brother Abel; what Saul of his perſecuting David, and the Prieſts of Jehovah; what Balaam and Achitophel ſay of their curſed Counſels and Policies; what Ahab ſays of his Oppreſſion of Naboth; what Judas of his Treaſon; and hear what Expreſſions they have, with what Horrors, Yellings, Groans, Diſtractions the leaſt Sin is there ſpoken of. If God ſhould take any Man's Soul here, and as he wrapt his into the third Heavens, where he ſaw Grace in its fulleſt brightneſs; ſo carry any Soul into thoſe Chambers of Death, as Solomon calls them, and leading him through all, from Chamber to Chamber, ſhew him the viſions of darkneſs, (and he there) hear all thoſe Bedlams cry out, one of this Sin, another of that, and ſee Sin as it looks in Hell! ——But there is one aggravation more of the Evil and miſery Sin brings upon Men, I have not ſpoken of yet, that it blinds their Eyes, and hardens their Hearts, that they do not ſee, nor lament their Miſery, till they be in Hell, and then it is too late.

Uſe 3. But what, doth Sin ſo exceed in ſinfulneſs, and is the venom of it boiled up to ſuch a hight of Miſchief, that there ſhould be no Name in Heaven and Earth able to grapple with it, and deſtroy it? Is there no Antidote, no Balm in Gilead more ſoveraign, than it is deadly? Surely yes, God would never have ſuffered ſo potent and malicious an Enemy to have ſet Foot in his Dominions, but that he knew how to conquer it, and that not by puniſhing of it only in Hell, but by deſtroying it; only it is too potent for all the Creatures to encounter with. This Victory is alone reſerved for Chriſt, it can die by no other Hand, that he may have the Glory of it; which therefore is the top of his Glory, as Mediator; and his higheſt Title, the memory of which he bears written in his name JESUS, for he ſhall ſave his People from their Sins, Mat. 1. 21. Therefore the Apoſtle Paul, his chiefeſt Herauld, proclaims this Victory with a World of ſolemnity and triumph, 1 Cor. 15.55,56, 57. O Death, where is thy Sting? O Grave, where is thy Victory? the ſting of Death is Sin, the ſtrength of Sin is the Law: but Thanks be to God that gives us the Victory through our Lord Jeſus Chriſt. Which yet again adds to the Demonſtration of the ſinfulneſs of it: for the ſtrength of Sin was ſuch, that like Goliath, it would have defied the whole Hoſt of Heaven and Earth. It was not poſſible the Blood of Bulls and Goats ſhould take away Sin, Heb. 10. 4. Nor would the Riches of the World, or the Blood of Men have been a ſufficient ranſome; Will the Lord be pleaſed with Rivers of Oyl? ſhall I give my firſtborn for my tranſgreſſion? No, ſays he, there is no proportion, for thy firſtborn is but the Fruit of thy Body, and Sin is the Sin of the Soul, Mich. 6. 7. it muſt coſt more to redeem a Soul than ſo, Pſal. 49. 9. No, couldſt thou bring Rivers of Tears inſtead of Rivers of Oyl, (which, if any thing, were like to pacify God,) yet are they but the excrements of thy Brains; but Sin is the Sin of thy Heart: yea, all the Righteouſneſs that we could ever have done, rap or rend, as we ſay, cannot make amends for one Sin: for ſuppoſe it perfect, (when as yet it is but Dung, Mal. 2. 3. and menſtruous Cloth,) yet thou oweſt it already as thou art a Creature; and one Debt cannot pay another. If then we would think to go a begging to all the Angels, who never ſinned, let them lay all their ſtock together, it would beggar them all to pay for one Sin: no, it is not the merit of Angels will do it; for Sin is the tranſgreſſion, the deſtruction of the Law, Pſal. 109. 126. and the leaſt ἰῶτα is more worth than Heaven, and all that is therein. Onely,

Only, though it be thus unconquerably ſinful by all created Powers, it hath not gone beyond the Price that Chriſt hath paid for it; the Apoſtle compares to this very Purpoſe, Sin and Chriſt's Righteouſneſs together, Rom. 5. 15, 20. 'Tis true, ſays he, that Sin abounds, and that one Sin, τὸ παράπτωμα, and inſtanceth in Adam's Sin, which ſtained all Mens Natures to the end of the World; yet, ſays he, the Gift of Righteouſneſs by Chriſt abounds much more; abounds to flowing over, ὑπερεπλεόνασε, ſays the Apoſtle, 1 Tim. 1. 14. as the Sea doth above Mole-hills, Mal. 7. 14. Though therefore it would undo all the Angels, yet Chriſt's Riches are unſearchable, Epheſ. 3. 8. he hath ſuch Riches of Merit, as are able to pay all thy Debts the very firſt Day of thy Marriage with him, though thou hadſt been a Sinner Millions of Years before the Creation to this Day: and when that is done, there is enough left to purchaſe thee more Grace and Glory than all the Angels have in Heaven. In a word, he is able to ſave to the utmoſt all that come to God by him, Heb. 7. 5. let their Sins be what they will.

Uſe 4. But then we muſt come to him, and to God by him, and take him as our Lord, and King, and Head, and Husband, as he is freely tendered: we muſt be made one with him, and have our Hearts divorced from all our Sins for ever. And why not now? do we yet look for another Chriſt? And to allude to what Naomi ſaid to Ruth, Is there yet any more Sons in my Womb, that they may be your Husbands? So ſay I, Hath God any more ſuch Sons? or is not this Chriſt good enough? or are we afraid of being happy too ſoon, in being married inſtantly to him?

But yet if we will have Chriſt indeed (without whom we are undone) how ſhall we then continue in Sin, which is thus above-meaſure ſinful? No, not in one. The Apoſtle ſpeaks there in the Language of Impoſſibility and Inconſiſtency. Chriſt, and the reign of one Sin, they cannot ſtand together.

And indeed we will not ſo much as take Chriſt, until firſt we have ſeen more or leſs this Viſion here, and Sin appear to us, as to him, above meaſure ſinful: naturally we ſlight it, and make a mock of, and account it Preciſeneſs to ſtick and make Conſcience of it: but if once Sin thus appears to any but in its own Colours, that Man will look upon the leaſt Sin then as upon Hell it ſelf; and like a Man afrighted, fear in all his Ways, leſt he ſhould meet with Sin, and ſtarts at the very Appearance of it; he weeps if Sin do but ſee him, and he do but ſee it in himſelf and others; and cries out as Joſeph did, How ſhall I do this, and ſin? and then a Man will make out for Chriſt, as a condemned Man for Life, as a Man that can no longer live, O give me Chriſt, or elſe I die; and then if upon this Chriſt appear to him, and manifeſts himſelf, as his Promiſe is to them that ſeek him, John 14. 21. his Heart thereupon will much more deteſt and loath it: he ſaw it evil before, but then it comes to have a new Tincture added, which makes it infinitely more ſinful in his Eyes; for he then looks upon every Sin as guilty of Chriſt's Blood, as died with it, though covered by it; the Grace of God appearing, teacheth us to deny all Ungodlineſs and worldly Luſts: The Love of Chriſt conſtrains him. Thinks he, Shall I live in that for which Chriſt died? Shall that be my Life, which was his Death? Did he that never knew Sin undergo the Torment for it, and ſhall I be ſo unkind as to injoy the Pleaſure of it? No, but as David when he was very thirſty, and had Water of the Well of Bethlehem brought him, with the Hazard of Mens Lives, he then poured it on the Ground; for ſays he, It is the Blood of theſe Men: So this Man, even when the Cup of Pleaſures is at his very Lips; It coſt (ſays he) the Blood of Chriſt, and ſo pours it upon the ground. And as the Love of Chriſt conſtrains him, ſo the Power of Chriſt doth change him. Kings may pardon Traitors, but they cannot change their Hearts; but Chriſt pardons none, he doth not make new Creatures and all old things paſs away, becauſe he makes them Friends, Favourites to live with, and delight in; and if Men put on Chriſt, and have learned him, as the Truth is in Jeſus, they put off as concerning the former Converſation the old Man, with the deceitful Luſts; and he ceaſeth from Sin, that is, from the Courſe of any known Sin; they are the Apoſtles own Words which ſhall judg us. And if we ſhould expect Salvation from him upon any other terms, we are deceived; for Chriſt is the Author of Salvation to them only that obey him, Heb. 5. 9. 1 Pet. 5. 1, 2.

CHAP. II.

Aggravations of ſinning againſt Knowledg, demonſtrated: And the Reaſons aſſigned, why Sin is thereby aggravated.

ROM. 1, 21.

Becauſe that when they knew God, they glorified him not as God, neither were thankful, but became vain in their Imaginations, and their fooliſh Heart was darkned.

THERE are two general Aggravations the Apoſtle inſiſts on, in theſe two Chapters, of the Gentiles Sinfulneſs: 1*ſt*, Their Unthankfulneſs, chap. 1. ver. 21. which afterwards in chap. 2. 4. he inlargeth upon, ſtiling it a deſpiſing the Riches of God's Goodneſs. 2*dly*, Of Rebellion, in ſinning againſt Knowledg: that when they knew him, they glorified him not as God. Both which I ſhall inſiſt on, in order to the aggrandiſing the actual Sins of Men unregenerate: (as for the Sinfulneſs of their Natures and Luſts, I reſerve that to another Method.) I begin with this of ſinning againſt Knowledg, becauſe it hath the Priority here in the Apoſtle's Diſcourſe: For in this firſt Chapter he indigitateth this as the height of their ſinning, that they ſinned againſt Knowledg: for bringing in a long, large, and particular Indictment of many ſeveral Sins, as Idolatry, ver. 23. unnatural Uncleanneſs, ver. 26, &c. and all kinds of Unrighteouſneſs, ver. 29. he doth both in the beginning and end of the Bill, bring in this Aggravation, that they ſinned againſt Knowledg in all theſe. So ver. 18. there he begins this Indictment and Promulgation of God's Wrath above all, for this, that they with-held the Truth in Unrighteouſueſs; as being as much as all that Unrighteouſneſs they had committed, barely in it ſelf conſidered: and then again in the end, when he comes to pronounce final Sentence, he comes in with this, after all Particulars had been reckoned up, Who knowing the Judgment of God againſt thoſe which do ſuch things, yet do them.

Doct. So that this Doctrine is clear from hence, that to ſin againſt Knowledg, either in omitting good Duties, which we know we ought to perform, or committing of Sins we know we ought not to do, is the higheſt Aggravation of Sinfulneſs.

I put both in, both Sins of Omiſſion and Commiſſion: for ſo the particular Sins the Gentiles are taxed for here, are of both ſorts; as not glorifying or worſhipping God, as well as turning his Glory into a Lie, &c. To omit Prayer, when your Conſciences tell you, you ought to perform it: to omit holy Diſcourſe, examining the Heart, when you know you ought to do them, are as well Sins againſt Knowledg, as to tell a Lie againſt your Knowledg, or as to ſteal and forſwear, or murder, or be drunk, &c.

Now when I ſay, it is an Aggravation to theſe Sins, my meaning is this: That take any Sin thou thinkeſt moſt groſs, and view it barely in the Act of it, put the Act nakedly in the one Scale, be it a Sin of Uncleanneſs or Drunkenneſs; and then put this Circumſtance which was added to it in the other Scale, viz. that before and when thou didſt it, thou kneweſt it to be a Sin, this alone weighs as much, yea more than the Sin it ſelf doth: that as it is ſaid of Herod, that he added this to all his other Sins, that he caſt John into Priſon, who told him of his Herodias, and ſo it is made as much as all his former Sins. To like purpoſe is this brought in here, that in and unto all their Unrighteouſneſs, this this was added, they with-held the Truth, that is, the Light of their Conſciences (which is as a Prophet from God) they did impriſon in Unrighteouſneſs, ver. 18. And therefore when Daniel would convince Belſhazzar of his Deſervedneſs to loſe his Kingdom, and that he was not able to hold weight in the Ballance, Dan. 5. 22. what puts he into the other Scale againſt him to weigh him up, and to ſhew he was too light? ver. 21, 22. he tells him how his Father knew the God of Heaven, and how that his Knowledg coſt him ſeven Years the Learning amongſt wild Beaſts, and thou (ſays he) his Son kneweſt all this, and yet didſt not humble thy ſelf. Here is the Aggravation weighs down all: he knew the God of Heaven againſt whom he ſinned, and that Judgment on his Grand-father for his Pride; and then withall he tells him, that this God, in whoſe Hands is thy Breath, and all thy ways, thou haſt not glorified. Chap. 2.

I name this Place amongſt many others, becauſe it is parallel with this in the Text. I'le name no more, but give Reaſons and Demonſtrations for it.

1. The Greatneſs of this kind of Sinning might many ways be made appear; we will demonſtrate it only by comparing it with other kinds of Sinning.

To ſin, though out of ſimple Ignorance, when that Ignorance is but the cauſa ſine qua non, of ſinning, that is, ſo as if a Man had known it a Sin, he had not done it, doth not yet make the Fact not to be a Sin, though it leſſeneth it: For Luke 12. 48. He that did not know his Maſter's Will, was beaten, when the thing committed was worthy of Stripes, though he did not know ſo much, becauſe the thing deſerves it: And the Reaſon is, becauſe the Law being once promulged, as at firſt to Adam it was, and put into his Heart, as the common Ark of Mankind; though the Tables be loſt, yet our Ignorance doth not make the Law of none Effect. For the Law of Nature for ever binds, that is, all that was written in Adam's Heart, becauſe it was thereby then publiſhed in him, and to him for us. But poſitive Laws, as I may call them, as to believe in Chriſt, &c. a-new delivered, bind not, but where they are publiſhed. Joſiah rent his Clothes, when the Book of the Law was found, becauſe the Ordinances were not kept, although they had not known the Law of many Years; yet becauſe they ought to have known it, therefore for all their Ignorance, he feared Wrath would come upon all Iſrael. So alſo Levit. 5. 17. Sins of Ignorance were to be ſacrificed for: yet ſtill however it leſſeneth the Sin, therefore he ſhall be beaten with few Stripes.

And ſure if Ignorance leſſeneth them, Knowledg aggravates: for contrariorum eadem eſt ratio: therefore he that knows, ſhall be beaten with many Stripes. Yea, ſuch Difference is there, that God is ſaid to wink at Sins of Ignorance, Acts 17. 30. The time of this Ignorance God winks at. Whilſt they had no Knowledg, God took no notice: yea, and he abates ſomething for ſuch Sins, becauſe the Creature hath a Cloak, hath ſomething to ſay for it ſelf; (as Chriſt ſays, John 15. 22.) but when againſt Knowledg, they have no Cloak. Yea farther, Chriſt makes a Sin of Ignorance to be no Sin, in compariſon: So there, If I had not ſpoken and done thoſe Works never Man did, they had had no Sin; that is, none in compariſon, but now they have no Cloak, no Shelter to award the Stripes, or Plea to abate them.

And that you may ſee the ground of this vaſt Difference between Sins of Ignoranee, and againſt Knowledg. Conſider, 1. that if a Man ſin (ſuppoſe the Act the ſame) out of Ignorance merely, there may be a Suppoſition, that if he had known it, he would not have done it; and that as ſoon as he doth know it, he would or might repent of it. So 1 Cor. 2. 8. If they had known it, they had not crucified the Lord of Glory. The like ſays Chriſt of Tyre, Sidon, and Gomorrah, That if the ſame things had been done in them, they would have repented. But now when a Man knows it before, and alſo conſiders it in the very committing of it, and yet doth it, then there is no room for ſuch a Suppoſition, and leſs Hope. For what is it that ſhould reduce this Man to Repentance? Is it not his Knowledg? Now if that had no Power to keep him from his Sin, then it may be judged, that it will not be of Force to bring him to Repentance for it; for by ſinning, the Heart is made more hard, and the Knowledg and the Authority thereof thereof weakned and leſſened, as all Power is, when contemned and reſiſted; Rom. 1. 21. Their fooliſh Heart becomes darker. Ariſtotle himſelf hath a Touch of this Notion in the third of his Ethicks, that if a Man ſin out of Ignorance, when he knows it, he repents of it; if out of Paſſion, when the Paſſion is over, he is ſorry for what he hath done: but when a Man ſins deliberately, and out of Knowledg, it is a Sign he is fixed and ſet in Miſchief; and therefore it is counted Wickedneſs and Malice. And hence it is, that thoſe that have been enlightned with the higheſt kind of Light, but that of ſaving Grace, Heb. 6. 4, 5. and Heb. 10. If they ſin wilfully after ſuch a Knowledg of the Truth, God looks on them, as thoſe that will never repent. And therefore likewiſe the School gives this as the reaſon why the Devils ſin obſtinately, and cannot repent, becauſe of their full Knowledg they ſin with; they know all in the full Latitude that may be known, and yet go on.

2. The vaſt Difference that in God's Account is put between Sins of Knowledg and of Ignorance, will appear by the different Reſpect and Regard that God hath to them, in the Repentance he requires and accepts for them; and that both in the Acts of Repentance, and alſo in the State of Grace; and that Repentance, upon which God accepts a Man, or for want of which he rejecteth him.

1*ſt*, When a Man comes to perform the Acts of Repentance, and to humble himſelf for Sin, and to turn from it, God exacteth not that Sins of Ignorance ſhould particularly be repented of; but if they be repented of but in the general, and in the lump, be they never ſo great, God accepts it. This is intimated, Pſal. 19. 12. Who can underſtand his Error? Cleanſe me from my ſecret Sins: that was Confeſſion enough. But Sins of Knowledg muſt be particularly repented of, and confeſſed, and that again and again, (as David was forced to do for his Murder and Adultery) or a Man ſhall never have Pardon.

Yea, 2*dly*, a vaſter Difference yet will appear between theſe two, if we take an Eſtimate of them, by what Conſiſtency they have with the State of Grace: A Man may lie in a Sin he doth not know to be a Sin, and yet be in the State of Grace, as the Patriarchs in Poligamy, and in divorcing their Wives: but to lie in a Sin againſt Knowledg, is not compatible with Grace; but unleſs a Man maintaineth a conſtant Fight againſt it, hateth it, confeſſeth it, forſaketh it, he cannot have Mercy; this cannot ſtand with Uprightneſs of Heart. A Friend may keep Correſpondency with one, he ſuſpects not to be an Enemy unto his Friend, and be true to his Friendſhip notwithſtanding: but if he knows him to be an Enemy, he muſt break utterly with him in all Correſpondencies in ſuch things in which he acts as, or is an Enemy to his Friend; if he will lean to the one, he muſt leave the other.

Yet farther, in the 3*d* Place, So vaſt is the Difference, that ſome kind of Sins committed out of, and againſt Knowledg, utterly exclude from Mercy for time to come; which done out of Ignorance, remained capable of, and have obtained it; as perſecuting the Saints, blaſpheming Chriſt, &c. Paul's Will was as much in thoſe Acts themſelves, and as hearty as it is in thoſe that ſin againſt the Holy Ghoſt: for he was mad againſt the Church, and ſet with all his Violence to purſue them; not ſinning willingly only, but carried on with Fury, as hot and as forward as the Phariſees that ſinned that Sin; only ſays he, 1 Tim. 1. 13. I did it ignorantly, therefore I obtained Mercy. Though it was ignorantly done, yet there was need of Mercy; but yet in that he did it but ignorantly, there was a Capacity and Place for Mercy, which otherwiſe had not been. But thus to ſin after a Man hath received the Knowledg of the Truth, out of a ſettled Frame of Spirit ſo to ſin, and with Malice againſt the Truth; ſhuts a Man out from Mercy, Heb. 10. and there is no more Sacrifice for Sin, for ſuch Sins; I ſay, ſuch Sins as theſe, thus directly againſt the Goſpel, when committed with Knowledg. For Sins againſt the Law, though againſt Knowledg, there was an Atonement, as appears Lev. 6. from ver. 1, to 8. where he inſtanceth in forſwearing: But to perſecute the Saints and Chriſt's Truth with revengeful Malice, after Knowledg of it, there is no more Sacrifice: not that ſimply the Sin is ſo great in reſpect of the Act it ſelf of Perſecution, for Paul did perſecute with the ſame Acts of Perſecution, making havock of the Church,

Acts

Acts 8. 3. Breathing out Threatnings and Slaughter, Acts 9. 1. and the worſt of the Phariſees could execute no more than he intended; but what he did in this kind, he did out of Ignorance: So vaſt a Difference doth Knowledg and Ignorance put between the Guilt of the ſame Sin in theſe Caſes. Chap. 2.

And therefore indeed, to conclude this in the laſt Place, this is the higheſt Step of the Ladder, next to turning off; the very higheſt but of ſinning againſt the Holy Ghoſt: which muſt needs argue it the higheſt Aggravation of Sinning, when it aſcends ſo high; or when it brings a Man to the brink, and next to falling into the bottomleſs-Pit irrecoverably. And therefore to ſin preſumptuouſly (which is all one) and to ſin againſt Knowledg (as appears, Numb. 15. 26, 27, 28, 29, 30.) it being there oppoſed to ſinning out of Ignorance, (ſuch a Sin as David did, of whom it is ſaid, 2 Sam. 12. 9. That he deſpiſed the Word of the Lord: which Phraſe alſo is uſed to expreſs Sins of Preſumption, ver. 31. of that 15*th* of Numbers.) To ſin, I ſay, preſumptuouſly, is the higheſt Step unto that other: So in David's Account, Pſal. 19. 12, 13. for firſt he prays, Lord keep me from ſecret Sins, (whereby he meaneth Sins of Ignorance) and then next he prays againſt preſumptuous Sins, (which, as the Oppoſition ſhews, are Sins againſt Knowledg:) For, ſays he, If they get Dominion over me, I ſhall not be free from that great Offence: that is, that unpardonable Sin which ſhall never be forgiven; ſo as theſe are neareſt it of any other, yet not ſo as that every one that falls into ſuch a Sin commits it, but he is nigh to it, as the Scripture ſpeaks, nigh unto Curſing. For to commit that Sin, but two things are required, Light in the Mind, and revengeful Malice in the Heart; not Malice alone, unleſs there be Light; for then that Apoſtle had ſinned it: yet ſo as Knowledg is the Parent of it, It is after receiving the Knowledg of the Truth, Heb. 10. 17, 18.

Theſe are the Demonſtrations of it: The Reaſons are,

Reaſon 1. Firſt, Becauſe Knowledg of God and his ways is the greateſt Mercy next to Saving-Grace: He hath not dealt ſo with every Nation. Wherein? In giving the Knowledg of his ways: and as it is thus to a Nation, ſo to a Man; and therefore Chriſt ſpeaking of the Gift of Knowledg, and giving the Reaſon why it ſo greatly condemneth, Luke 12. 48. ſays, For to whom much is given, much is requird: As if he had ſaid, To know his Maſter's Will, that is the great Talent of all other: there is a much in that. Thus it was in the Heathens Eſteem alſo; they acknowledged their fooliſh Wiſdom in moral and natural Philoſophy, their greateſt Excellency: and therefore Plato thanked God for three things, that he was a Man, an Athenian, and a Philoſopher. And Rom. 1. 22. the Apoſtle mentions it as that Excellency they did profeſs. And Solomon, of all Vanities ſays, this is the beſt Vanity, and that it exceeds Folly as Light doth Darkneſs, Eccleſ. 2. But ſurely much more is the Knowledg of the Law, and of God, as we have it revealed to us; this muſt needs be eſteemed more excellent. And ſo the Jews eſteemed theirs, as in this ſecond Chapter of the Romans the Apoſtle ſhews, that they made their boaſt of the Law, and their Form of Knowledg of it, and approving the things that are excellent. And what do the two great Books of the Creatures, and the Word, and all means elſe, above all ends elſe, ſerve for, but to increaſe Knowledg? If therefore all tend to this, this is then the greateſt Mercy of all the reſt.

Reaſon 2. For, Secondly, God hath appointed Knowledg as the immediate Guide of Men in all their ways, to bring them to Salvation and Repentance, for to that it leads them. It is that ſame τὸ ἡγεμονικὸν, as the Philoſopher call'd it: and therefore the Law, Rom. 7. 1, 2. is compared to an Husband, (ſo far as it is written in, or revealed in the Heart) that as an Husband is the Guide of the Wife in her Youth, ſo is the Law to the Heart. And whereas Beaſts are ruled by a Bit and Bridle, God he rules Men by Knowledg: And therefore if Men be wicked, againſt or notwithſtanding his Light, they muſt needs ſin highly, ſeeing there is no other Curb for them, as they are Men, but this: If he will deal with them as Men, this is the only way: and therefore if that will not do it, it is ſuppoſed nothing will.

It

Book XII. It is Knowledg makes Men capable of Sin, which Beaſts are not; therefore the more Knowledg, (if Men be wicked withal) the more Sin muſt neceſſarily be reckoned to them: ſo as God doth not ſimply look what Mens Actions and Affections are, but chiefly what their Knowledg is, and accordingly judgeth Men more or leſs wicked. I may illuſtrate this by that compariſon, which I may allude unto; That as in Kingdoms God meaſures out the Wickedneſs thereof, and ſo his Puniſhments accordingly; principally by the Guides, the Governours thereof, what they are, and what they do; as in the 5th of Jeremy the 4th Verſe it appears; where God firſt look'd upon the poor people, but excuſeth them, Theſe are fooliſh, and know not the Way of the Lord: And therefore God would have been ſtill moved to ſpare the Kingdom, notwithſtanding their Sins: But from them at the 5th Verſe he goes to view the Rulers, I will get me to the great Men, for theſe have known the way of the Lord; and when he ſaw that theſe had broken the Bands, then, How ſhall I pardon thee for this? So is it in his Judgment towards a particular Man, when God looks down upon a Man, and ſees him in his Courſes exceeding looſe and wicked, he looks firſt upon thoſe rude Affections in him, which are unclean, prophane, debauch'd, greedy of all Wickedneſs: Ay but, ſays he, theſe are fooliſh of themſelves, but I will look upon his Underſtanding, and upon the ſuperior Faculties, which are the Guides of theſe Affections, and ſee what they dictate to theſe unruly Affections, to reſtrain them; and when he finds that the Guides themſelves are enlightned, and have known the way of the Lord, and that the Will and Affections, though informed with much Knowledg, yet break all Bands; then, How ſhall I pardon thee? Thee, who art a knowing Drunkard, and a knowing unclean Perſon, &c. ſo as thus to ſin, aggravates and makes Sin out of meaſure ſinful.

Now that Knowledg and Reaſon is a Man's Guide, will further appear by this: That even erroneous Knowledg doth put an Obligation, a Bond, and a Tie upon a Man: which can be in other Reſpect, but becauſe Knowledg is appointed to be a Man's Guide. Thus if a Man thinks a thing (which is in it ſelf common and indifferent) to be a Sin, and forbidden, (as Rom. 14. 4.) although the Law forbids it not, yet to him it is unclean, though in Chriſt it is not unclean, that is, by the Law of Chriſt, as there the Apoſtle ſpeaks. For this his Knowledg and Judgment of the thing, hath to him the Force of a Law: for it propounds it to him as a Law, and as from God; the ground of which can be no other then this, that God hath appointed this Reaſon of his to be his Guide: and the Will is to follow nothing that is evil, no, not which is repreſented to it, as evil: this is the Law of meer Nature in all Conditions. Yea if a Man ſhould do an Action which is in it ſelf good, if he thought it to be Evil, he ſhould Sin, and ſo è contra, for he goes againſt the dictate of Nature. So that erroneous Knowledg, though againſt the Law, is a Law to me, though not per ſe, yet per accidens. Now therefore if to go againſt a falſe light of Conſcience be a Sin, when yet it proves that the Commandment it ſelf allows the thing which was done, and was for it, then to go againſt the true light of the Law in a Mans Conſcience, how ſinful is it?

Reaſon 3. Again, thirdly, the knowledg of the Law binds the Perſon ſo much the more to Obedience, by how much the more he knows it: And ſo though it would be a Sin, when he knows not the Law to tranſgreſs it, yet when he knows it, it becomes a far greater Sin. 'Tis true indeed, that Conſcience and the Law, when they thus meet, make up but one Law, not two diſtinct Laws: and therefore in ſinning againſt Knowledg, though a Man doth not commit two diſtinct Sins, yet however the Knowledg of it doth add a further degree of Sinfulneſs to it: As a Cloth is the ſame Cloth when it is white, that it was when it is dyed with a Scarlet die; yet then it hath a dye, a tincture given it, which is more worth than the Cloth: and ſo when you Sin, not knowing the Law, the Sin indeed is the ſame for the ſubſtance of the Act, it would be if you had known it; yet that Knowledg dies it, makes it a Scarlet Sin, as Eſay ſpeaks, far greater and deeper in demerit, than the Sin it ſelf: and the ground of this is, becauſe all Laws then come to be in force, force, when they are promulged, and made known; but God's Laws the more or oftner made known, the more ſtill they bind. Therefore Deut. 11. 12. & 3. 8. God ſtraitens the cords more, the binding force of the Law more upon thoſe Jews Conſciences, to whom he at firſt perſonally with Majeſty had promulged it, than upon their Children, though upon theirs alſo. Now if all God's Laws, being made known to Adam, bind us, and are in force, and this when we know them not; then if we do know them, or might know them, they bind much more: and ſtill the more clearly we know them, the obligation increaſeth, and the Guilt inſuing with it: and the rather, becauſe now after our fall in Adam, when we come to know them, they are a new promulged, in a way of peculiar Mercy; we having defaced the knowledg of them in our fall. Chap. 12.

Reaſon 4. Fourthly, When the Law, being known, is broken, there is the more contempt caſt upon the Law, and the law-giver alſo; and ſo a higher degree of Sinning. And therefore Numbers 15. 30. He that Sins out of knowledg, is ſaid to reproach the Lord, and to deſpiſe the Word. And therefore Saul ſinning againſt knowledg, Samuel calleth it Rebellion: and though it were but in a ſmall thing, yet he parallels it with Witchcraft. So alſo Job 24. 13. They are ſaid to rebel, when they Sin againſt Light; becauſe thereby, Rebellion comes to be added to Diſobedience: For Knowledg is an Officer ſet to ſee the Law executed, and fulfilled; and makes God preſent to the Conſcience. Therefore Rom. 2. 14. it is called a Witneſs; and therefore in ſinning againſt Knowledg, Men are to ſaid to ſin before the Face of the Lord himſelf; Now what a great contempt is that? Therefore alſo, Pſal. 50. the Hypocrite in his ſinning againſt Knowledg, is ſaid to caſt to caſt the Law of God behind his back: ſo as there is a Contempt in this ſinning, which is in no other.

Reaſon 5. Fifthly, The more Knowledg a Man ſinneth againſt, the more the Will of the Sinner is diſcovered to be for Sin, as Sin. Now, voluntarium eſt regula & menſura actionum moralium: Willingneſs in ſinning, is the Standard and Meaſure of Sins. The leſs Will, the leſs Sin: at leaſtwiſe ſo much of Sin is added, by how much the Will is more in it: and if ſo, then it mnſt needs follow that the more the Will cloſeth with it as Sin, or rather though it be Sin, as it doth, the more it knows it ſo to be, the more of ſinfulneſs ariſeth and is reckoned: and therefore the higheſt degree of ſinning is expreſt to us, by ſinning willingly, after Knowledg, Heb. 10. Now though an ingnorant Man commits the Act as willingly, (as when Paul perſecuted the Church) yet he commits it not, conſidered by him as Sin, till he hath the Knowledge of it: but then when it is diſcovered to be Sin, and the more clearly it is ſo diſcovered, the more the Will may be ſaid to joyn with it as Sin, although not in that degree as it doth in Men that ſin againſt the holy Ghoſt. Therefore the Apoſtle ſays, To him that knows to do well, and doth it not, to him it is Sin, Jam. 4. 17. Becauſe by his knowledg the thing is repreſented as Sin; and ſo he cloſeth with it the more under that Notion and Apprehenſion.

Reaſon 6. Sixthly, In ſinning againſt Knowledg, a Man condemns himſelf: but when out of Ignorance meerly, the Law only doth condemn him. So Rom. 2. 1. A Man having knowledg in that wherein he judgeth another, he condemneth himſelf. So alſo Rom. 14. Now as Self-murder is the higheſt degree of Murder, and an aggravation of it, ſo Self-condemning muſt needs be reckoned. God took it as a great advantage over him that hid his Talent, that out of thine own Mouth I will condemn thee, thou wicked Servant.

CHAP. III.

What it is to ſin againſt Knowledg, explained by ſeveral Diſtinctions concerning it, and by ſetting forth the ſeveral ways of ſinning againſt Knowledg. A ſpecial application to ſuch as go on in a ſtate of Impenitency againſt Knowledg.

THE Doctrine being thus proved;

Firſt, I will explain, what it is to ſin againſt Knowledg.
Secondly, I will give the Aggravation of ſo ſinning.
Thirdly, I will give Rules to meaſure Sins of Knowledg by, and the greatneſs of them in any Act.
Laſtly, The uſe of all.

For the firſt, What it is to ſin againſt Knowledg.

To explain it, I premiſe theſe Diſtinctions:

The firſt Diſtinction, That it is one thing to ſin with Knowledg, another thing againſt Knowledg.

There are many Sins do paſs from a Man with his Knowledg, which yet are not againſt Knowledg. This is to be obſerved for the removal of a Scruple, which may ariſe in ſome that are Godly, who elſe may be wounded with this Doctrine through a Miſtake.

A Regenerate Man is, and muſt needs be ſuppoſed guilty of more known Sins, than an Unregenerate Man; and yet he commits fewer againſt Knowledg than he.

Firſt, I ſay, he is guilty of more known Sins, that is, known to and within himſelf: For he takes notice of every ſinful Diſpoſition that is ſtirring in him, every By-end, every contrariety unto Holineſs, deadneſs to Duty, reluctancy to ſpiritual Duties; and every Man when regenerated, beginneth to ſee and know more evil by himſelf, than ever he did before: he ſees, (as the Apoſtle ſays of himſelf, Rom. 7. 10.) all Concupiſcence; and the holier a Man is, the more he diſcerns and knows his Sins: So ſays the Apoſtle, Rom. 7. 18. I know that in me dwells no good thing: and, ver. 21. I find when I would do good, Evil is preſent with me: and ver. 23. I ſee another Law. All theſe, he ſays, he perceived and found daily in himſelf. And the more holy that he grew, the more he ſaw them: For the purer and clearer the Light of God's Spirit ſhines in a Man, the more Sins he knows; he will ſee Luſts ſtreaming up, flying in his Heart like Motes in the Sun, or Sparks out of a Furnace, which elſe he had not ſeen: the clearer the Sun Beams are which are let into the Heart, the more thou wilt ſee them.

But, in the ſecond place I add, that nevertheleſs he ſins leſs againſt Knowledg: For then we are properly ſaid to ſin againſt knowledg, when we do take the fulfilling of a Luſt, or the performance of an outward Action, a Duty, or the like, into deliberation and conſideration, and conſider Motives againſt the Sin, or to the Duty, and yet commit that ſin, yield to it, and nouriſh that Luſt, and omit that Duty; here now it is we ſin not only with Knowledg, but againſt Knowledg; becauſe Knowledg ſtept in, and oppoſed us in it, came to interrupt and prevent us in the Sin, or came to ſtir us up more, and provoke unto the Duty. But now in thoſe failings in Duty, and ſtirring of Luſts in the Regenerate afore-mentioned, that ariſe, but are not deliberated upon, the caſe is otherwiſe; they are committed indeed with Knowledg, but not againſt it: For it is not in the power of Knowledg to prevent them; for motus primo primi non cadunt ſub libertatem: but yet though ſuch Sins will ariſe again and again, yet, ſays a good Heart, they muſt not think to paſs uncontrouled and unſeen: Therefore let not our poor Souls miſtake me, as if I meant in what, I have or ſhall ſay throughout this Diſcourſe, of all Sins which are known or obſerved to be Sins by them, but I mean ſuch Sins as are committed againſt Knowledg, that is, when Knowledg comes and examines a Sin, in or before the committing of it, brings it to the Law, conteſts againſt it, condemns it, and yet a Man approveth it, and conſenteth to it; when a Duty and a Sin are brought before Knowledg, as Barabbas and Chriſt before Pilate, and thy Knowledg doth again and again tell thee, ſuch an Act is a great Sin, and ought to be crucified, and yet thou cryeſt, Let it go, chuſeſt Barabbas rather than Chriſt: And ſo for a Duty, thy Knowledg tells thee again and again, it ought to be ſubmitted unto, and yet thou omitteſt it: Theſe are Sins againſt Knowledg: now ſuch Sins againſt Knowledg break a Man's Peace, and the more conſideration before had, the more the Peace is broken.

The ſecond Diſtinction is, That Men ſin againſt Knowledg either directly or collaterially, objectively, or concomitantly, and as a ſtander-by.

Firſt, Directly, when Knowledg it ſelf is the thing Men abuſe or fight againſt, and ſo becometh the Object, the Terminus, the Butt and Mark it ſelf ſhot at; this is to ſin directly againſt Knowledg it ſelf.

The ſecond way, collaterally, is, when Knowledg is but a Circumſtance in our Sins; which falls out, when the pleaſure of ſome Sin (we know to be a Sin) is the thing aimed at by us, and our Knowledg ſteps but in between to hinder us in it, and we commit it notwithſtanding, though we do know it; here Knowledg is indeed ſinned againſt, yet but collaterally, and as a ſtander-by, ſhot at per accidens, concomitanter, and by the bie; as one that ſteps in to part a Fray is ſmitten, for labouring to hinder them in their Sin, as the Sodomites quarrelled with Lot: theſe two are both found in this Chapter, and therefore come fitly within the compaſs of this Diſcourſe.

Firſt, This collateral kind of ſinning againſt Knowledg is mentioned in ver. 21. where he ſays, They knew God, yet they glorified him not: there Knowledg is made but a Concomitant of their ſinning; they ſinned againſt it but collaterally. But then that other kind of ſinning directly againſt Knowledg, is mentioned, They liked not to retain God in their knowledg: that is, they hated this Knowledg it ſelf, ſo as now they did not only love the particular Sin, they knew to be Sin, but alſo they loved not the knowledg of it; ſo that becauſe both are thus clearly inſtanced in, we will ſpeak of both more largely.

Now Sins directly againſt Knowledg it ſelf are many: I will reduce the chief of them unto two Heads.

Firſt, In regard of our ſelves.
Secondly, In regard of others.

Firſt, In regard of our ſelves, five ways we may thus ſin againſt knowledg it ſelf.

1. When we abuſe Knowledg to help us to ſin: as firſt, to plot and contrive a Sin, as Judas plotted to betray his Maſter, if he could conveniently; ſo the Text ſays, Mark. 14. 11. he would do it wiſely: and thus thoſe that came to intrap Chriſt with moſt cunning Queſtions, did Sin, and thoſe who plot againſt the Juſt, as Pſal. 37. 12.

So, 2dly, when Men uſe their Wiſdoms to tell a cunning Lie, to cover a Sin; as Plato ſays, Men of Knowledg ſunt ad mendacia potentiores & ſapientiores: whereas Fools, though they would lie, yet often tell Truth 'ere they are aware.

Book XII.

But alſo, 3*dly*, when they abuſe moral Knowledg, which yet, as Ariſtotle ſays, is leaſt apt to be (I am ſure ſhould leaſt be) abuſed, ſo as to make a ſhew of good Pretences to cover their Sins, and diſſemble them; not only by finding out ſome cunning artificial Colour, as David did in the Matter of Uriah, — Chance of War (ſays he) falls to all alike: but when Men are ſo impudently hypocritical, as to make uſe of religious Pretexts, (as the Devil ſometimes doth) as Saul, who pretends to Samuel, I have done the Will of the Lord: and when Samuel told him of the Cattel, O, ſays he, they are for a Sacrifice; when God had expreſly commanded to kill them all: But this ſhift ſhifted him out of his Kingdom. Samuel pronounceth him a Rebel in it, Rebellion is ſin againſt Knowledg. Thus alſo Iezabel coloured over the the ſtoning of Naboth with a ſolemn Faſt: So Judas fiſheth for Money with a charitable pretence, This might have been ſold, and given to the Poor. In Sins againſt Knowledg uſually the Mind endeavours to find out a colour, and that provokes God more than the Sin, becauſe thereby we go about to mock him. We ſee Men cannot endure a Shift, much leſs the all-knowing God, not to be mocked. And we ſee it hard to convince ſuch an one. David was fain to be brought to the Rack, 'ere he would confeſs, when he had a Shift; and Men do ſeek ſuch Shifts only in caſe of ſinning againſt Conſcience: for elſe there were no need; they would be ſure to plead Ignorance, as Abimelech did.

2. When Men neglect the getting and obtaining of Knowledg, which Knowledg might keep and hinder them from ſinning, and which might make them expert in Duties. This is as much as to ſin againſt Knowledg, although the Sins be committed out of Ignorance; yet that Ignorance being through their own Default, it comes all to one: when it may be ſaid of Men, as the Apoſtle doth of the Hebrews, Chap. 5. 12. That for the time they have had to learn, they might have been ſuch and ſuch proficients in Knowledg. As if a Man had an Apprentice, who through Negligence and want of heeding, and obſerving what he daily ſees and hears about his Trade, might have got for his time much Knowledg in his Trade, whereby he might have ſaved his Maſter much, which he new hath loſt him; and rid and perfected much Work, he daily ſpoils him; ſuch careleſs blockiſh ignorance, it is juſt for his Maſter to correct him for, and to charge on him all that waſte and loſs, becauſe he might have known how to have done better. And therefore theſe Gentiles who thought Ignorance in it ſelf no Sin (wherein they yet erred) yet the neglect of Knowledg upon this very ground, is made a great Sin; and ſo far from excuſing their Sins, as that it aggravates them: So here they ſhall not only be reckoned with, for the actual knowledg they had attained to, and ſinned againſt, but alſo for what they might have had and have picked out of the Creatures. For to this purpoſe it is the Apoſtle brings in this here in the 20*th verſe*, that the Power of God being clearly ſeen in the Creatures, they neglecting to ſpell and read it, ſo much Knowledg as they might have got, God yet would reckon to them, and aggravate their Sins by.

3. (Which is yet much worſe,) when Men refuſe Knowledg, that they may ſin the more freely; and ſo ſtop the Ear, leſt they ſhould be charmed: As when Men are loth, and afraid, and dare not read ſuch a Book as diſcovers, or might diſcover that Truth to them, the ſubmiſſion to which would prejudice them, and this to the end that they may plead ignorance of their Sin. Thus alſo thoſe that aſſent not to Truth, when it comes ſtrongly upon them, but ſeek to evade it. But, 1 Cor. 14. 38. when the Apoſtle had clearly diſcovered the Truth in thoſe things controverted, ſo as who ever was ſpiritual, or not fully blind, might ſee, and would acknowledg the Truth: Then he ſhuts up his Diſcourſe about them, thus, in ver. 27. If any any be ignorant, let him be ignorant: for it is wilful, it is affected; he ſpeaks this, as elſewhere, Rev. ult. He that is unjuſt, let him be unjuſt ſtill: that is, he that will be unjuſt, and refuſeth to turn, let him go on. This is a great Sin: for God, you ſee, gives ſuch a Man over: one that is but neglectful, or dull of Capacity, God will take pains with him to teach him, bear with him, as Chriſt did with his Diſciples; but if he be wilfully ignorant, he lets him die in his Ignorance, and yet will reckon with him, as if all his Sins had been commited againſt Knowledg, becauſe he refuſed to know.

The

The 4*th* is, to hate the Light, and to indeavour to extinguiſh it. This is yet much worſe, when Men hate the World, and the Miniſters of it, the Examples of God's People, and the Light they carry with them, (they ſhining as Lights in a crooked Generation, Phil. 2. 15. and Men hate theſe as Thieves do a Torch in the Night, and fly againſt the Light, as Batts do, and as the Jews did, John 3. 20.) This, Chriſt ſays, is the great condemning Sin of all others. So theſe Gentiles put Socrates to Death for reproving them. And thus Men ſin alſo, when they labour to extinguiſh the Light in their own Conſciences, and like not to retain God in their Knowledg, ver. 28. but would ſtudy the Art of Forgetfulneſs: when Men have put the Candle out, and drawn the Curtains, to the end they may ſin, and ſleep in Sin more freely and ſecurely. Thus thoſe alſo ſin in a higher Meaſure, who have had a clear Conviction, that they ought to be thus and thus ſtrict, and that they ought to ſanctify the Lord's Day, and pray privately, but now have loſt this Light, and think they need not be ſo ſtrict: when Men continue not in what they were once aſſured of, as the Apoſtle ſpeaks, 2 Tim. 3. 14. theſe ſin againſt their Knowledg, and are the worſt of ſuch Sinners. And this Eſtate Ariſtotle himſelf makes, ſtatum maligni, the State of a wicked one, namely, when the Sparks of Light are extinguiſh'd or hated. For when any Man's Light is loſt, and turned into Darkneſs by ſinning, then, as Chriſt ſays, How great is that Darkneſs? When good Laws are not only not enacted or not imbraced, but repealed alſo, (it is Ariſtotle's Similitude to diſtinguiſh an incontinent Perſon, and a wicked Man) this is an high kind of ſinning: So of thoſe Gentiles it is ſaid, their fooliſh Heart was darkned; they had extinguiſh'd ſome of that Light God gave them. As ſome drink away their Wits, ſo ſome ſin away their Conſciences; and thus by Degrees they firſt ſin away the Light of the Word they had; as they in Jude, who were religious once, and then they quench even that little Spark of Nature that is left: alſo ver. 10. corrupting themſelves in what they know naturally.

5. Men ſin againſt Knowledg yet worſe, when they hold Opinions againſt their Knowledg. So many are ſaid to do in 1 Tim. 4. 2. he foretells they ſhould ſpeak Lies in Hypocriſy, and invent Lies that ſhould have a pretence of Holineſs; which they know to be a Lie, for elſe they ſhould not be ſaid to ſpeak Lies in Hypocriſy; but they do it to maintain their Honour and Greatneſs, which muſt down if they acknowledg their Doctrine falſe; and though many are given up to believe their Lies, 2 Theſ. 2. 11. as Puniſhments of their not loving the Truth; yet others of them ſhall know they are Lies, and yet vent them for Truths. Thus when Men faſhion their Opinion to the times and ways of Preferment, and their Dependances on great ones, or to maintain and uphold a Faction, or out of Pride, having broached an Error, maintain it, though the pulling out that one Tile doth untile all the Houſe. Theſe are the two Cauſes given of perverting the Truth, 1 Tim. 6. 4, 5. namely, Pride and Covetouſneſs, and ſuppoſing gain Godlineſs, and ſo faſhioning their Religion accordingly: when Men are Knights of the Poſt, that will write or ſpeak any thing whereby they may get Gain and Preferment.

Secondly, Men ſin directly againſt Knowledg in regard of others.

1. By concealing it; The Apoſtle indeed ſays in a certain Caſe, Haſt thou Knowledg? keep it to thy ſelf: He ſpeaks it of Opinions or Practices about things indifferent, which might ſcandalize the weak; but if thou haſt Knowledg, which may edify thy Brother, thou oughteſt to communicate it. Socrates knowing there was but one God, ſaid in his Apology for his Life, that if they would give him Life, upon Condition to keep that Truth to himſelf, and not to teach it to others, he would not accept Life upon ſuch a Condition: and I remember he expreſſeth this Reſolution in Words very nigh the ſame Words the Apoſtle uſed, Acts 4. 20. Whether it be better to obey God than Men, judg you. And, We cannot but teach the things we have heard and ſeen, ſays Chriſt: for Knowledg is a thing will boil within a Man for Vent, and would not be impriſoned: It is Light, and the End why Light was made, was to be ſet up to give Light. And Chriſt argues from an apparent Abſurdity, to put a Light under a Buſhel, which may give Light to all the Houſe: Haſt thou

Know-

Book XII.

Knowledg of God, and of his ways (if withall thou haſt but a good Heart) thou canſt not but ſpeak, ſpecially where thou haſt Freedom and a Calling to do it, as unto thoſe in thy Family thou haſt, to thy Wife in thy Boſom, &c. God took it for granted, that Abraham would teach his Children what he ſhould know from him: The ſame Diſpoſition is in the Children of Abraham.

2. When Men indeavour to ſuppreſs Knowledg. As the Phariſees, they kept the Keys of it in their Hands, and would not open the Treaſures of it themſelves, nor let others do it neither. So they (Acts 4. 16.) could not deny but a great Miracle was done by the Apoſtles (ſay themſelves) but that it ſpread no further, let us threaten them, and charge them that they ſpeak no more in his Name. And this they did againſt their Conſciences, by their own Profeſſion, we cannot deny it; as if they had ſaid, if we could we would, but it was too manifeſt it was the Truth, as the Teſtimony of the Miracle wrought by God argued it to be. So when Maſters keep their Servants from the means of Knowledg, they are thus guilty.

3. When we would make others ſin againſt their Conſciences. The Phariſees, when the blind Man would not ſay as they ſaid, they caſt him out; they would have had him ſay, that Chriſt was a Sinner, when through the ſmall Light he had, he judged it evident enough, that a Sinner could not do ſuch a Miracle, as was never done ſince the World began. And ſo Jezebel made the Judges and Witneſſes ſin againſt Conſcience, in accuſing Naboth. Thus to conſtrain Men by Club-Arguments, from avoiding Perſecution, as thoſe did the contrary-minded, Gal. 6. 12. and not from Evidence of the Truth, or by Reaſons that might convince them and their Conſciences: therefore he ſays, they conſtrained them. The Perſwaders might indeed glory, (as there 'tis ſaid) as having their Cauſe and Side ſtrengthned, but they wan little Credit to their Cauſe by it; for as the Perſwaders Arguments were ſuited to Fleſh, ſo the others yielding was out of Fleſh, and ſo they glory but in your Fleſh and Weakneſs, ſays he. As the Papiſts urged Cranmer, not by Arguments, but Threats and Promiſes, to recant; this is the greateſt Cruelty in the World, to have a Man murder himſelf, ſtab his Conſcience. To offend a weak Conſcience is a Sin, if but paſſively, when thou doſt ſomething before his Face, which his Conſcience is againſt: but if thou makeſt him wound his own Conſcience, and to do an Act himſelf, which his own Conſcience is againſt, it is much worſe: As if thou beeſt a Maſter, and haſt a Servant who pleaded Conſcience, that he cannot lie for thy Advantage in the Shop, or who will not do unlawful Buſineſs on the Sabbath-day, and pleads Conſcience, wilt thou ſmite him, and whip him? God will ſmite thee, thou whited Wall: how dareſt thou ſmite him, and ſo cauſe him to do that for which God will whip him worſer? Shew Mercy to thoſe under you, inform their Conſciences, wring them not, you may hap to break the Wards if you do.

1*ſt*, Now for Sins committed collaterally, or per modum circumſtantiæ, againſt Knowledg, (which was the ſecond Branch of this Diſtinction) they are done either when particular Acts of Sin are committed, and Duties omitted, againſt Light and Knowledg; and ſo the Saints may and do often ſin againſt Knowledg. Or,

2*dly*, In regard of a known Eſtate of Sin and Impenitency perſiſted in; when Men continue and go on in ſuch a State againſt Conviction of Conſcience, that ſuch is their Eſtates.

For, 1. becauſe particular Acts of Sin committed againſt Knowledg are infinite, and there will be no end of inſtancing in Particulars, therefore I will not inſiſt thereon: Only, in brief, this Diſtinction concerning ſuch Acts may be obſerved, and the Obſervation of it may be uſeful; That ſome Acts of Sins againſt Knowledg are merely tranſient; that is, are done and ended at once. And though the Guilt of them is eternal, yet the Extent of the Acts is finiſhed with the committing it, and reacheth no further: as a vain Oath, Breach of the Sabbath, &c. which Acts cannot be repealed, though they may be repented of. But others there are, which though the Act may be but once outwardly and profeſſedly done, yet have an habitual and continued Permanency, Life, and Subſiſtence given them, ſuch, as that until a Man doth actually reverſe and reeal them, he may be ſaid continually to renew thoſe Acts, and every Day to increaſe a new Guilt of them, and to maintain them, and ſo habitually to commit them. As it is with Laws, which though made but once, are yet continued Acts of the State, whilſt they ſtand in Force unrepealed: ſo is it in ſome Sins. For Inſtance, when a Man doth take Goods from his Neighbour unjuſtly, the Act indeed is done but once: but till he reſtores them, he may be ſaid to ſteal them every Day, every Hour; he continues to do it habitually: So a Man having ſubſcribed to Falſhood, or recanted the Truth publickly; the Act, though done but once, yet until a Retraction be ſome ways made, he continues that Act, and ſo is daily a-new guilty of it. So if a Man ſhould marry one, whom it is unlawful for him to marry, (as Herod did) though that ſinful Act of Eſpouſals, whereby they entred into it, was ſoon diſpatch'd; yet till a Divorce, he lives in a continual Sin. And ſuch Acts (of this latter ſort, I mean) againſt Knowledg are moſt dangerous to commit; becauſe to continue thus in them, though but once committed, hazards a Man's Eſtate: And indeed Men find, when they come to repent, the greateſt Snare, and Trouble, and Difficulty in ſuch kind of Sins; to extricate themſelves out of them by a meet and true Repentance. Chap. 3.

But as concerning the firſt Branch of this Diſtinction, namely, of particular Acts committed againſt Knowledg, (which is diſtinct from the laſt part of this Diſtinction thus briefly touched) I will anon give ſeveral Aggravations and Rules, whereby to meaſnre the Sinfulneſs that is in ſuch Acts ſo committed: but in the mean time, the ſecond part of this former Diſtinction muſt be inſiſted upon, and therefore I will bring in theſe Aggravations and Rules which concern particular Acts, after I have briefly ſpoken to this other, which is; That,

2. Their ſinning againſt Knowledg, who go on in an Eſtate of Sin and Impenitency, which they know to be damnable: As Pharaoh, Exod. 9. 27. who confeſs'd, that he and his People were wicked, and yet hardened himſelf in Sin moſt dangerouſly: and yet three ſorts of Men may apparently be convinced thus to ſin.

1*ſt*. Thoſe that keep out and withdraw themſelves from profeſſing Chriſt and his Ways, and the Fear of his Name, out of Shame or Fear of Man, or of loſing Preferment, or the like worldly Ends, when yet they are convinced that they are God's Ways, and ought to be profeſſed by them. I do not ſay, that all, who do not come in to profeſs Chriſt, and that do not join themſelves with his People, that they go on againſt Knowledg; for many are ignorant and miſtaken about them: but when Men are convinced of the Truth, and Neceſſity of profeſſing and confeſſing of it even unto Salvation (as the Apoſtle ſpeaks, Rom. 10.) and yet out of Fear or Shame, keep ſtill on the other ſide, drawing in their Horns altogether, theſe go on in an Eſtate of Impenitency againſt Knowledg very dangerouſly unto their own Souls. For put all theſe together, and it muſt needs appear to be ſo: As firſt, when they are convinced that this is the Truth, and that Salvation and the Power of Religion is only to be found in ſuch Ways, and among ſuch a ſort of Men. And ſecondly, that theſe are neceſſarily to be practiſed and profeſſed. And yet, thirdly, out of Shame, &c. keep ſtill aloof off, and go on a contrary way; theſe muſt needs know, that they go on in an Eſtate of Impenitency againſt Knowledg. This was the Caſe of many of the Phariſees, who therefore ſinned highly: they believed, and were convinced, that Chriſt was the Meſſiah; and if ſo, then to be confeſs'd, and followed, and to be cleaved unto: and then alſo they muſt needs know, that his Followers only were the Children of God: Yet, John 12. 42. it is ſaid, though they thus believed on him, yet they durſt not confeſs him for fear of the Jews, and of the Phariſees, and of being put out of the Synagogues. At the latter day, Chriſt ſhall not need to ſever ſuch from the reſt, as he will do the Sheep from the Goats; for they willingly have ſevered themſelves, remaining all their Days amongſt thoſe whom they know to be Goats, and refuſe the Company, and Fold, and Food, and Marks of the Sheep, which they know to be ſuch: they may apologize, and make fair with the Saints, that their Hearts are with them, but they will be rank'd at the Day of Judgment, as here they ranked themſelves, with the Workers of Iniquity. Of theſe doth the Pſalmiſt ſpeak, Thoſe that turn aſide by their crooked ways, them ſhall the Lord leave with the Workers of Iniquity.

Pſal 125. ult.

Thoſe alſo thus ſin, and are to be joined with theſe, who know the Terms of Salvation, and how they muſt part with all for Chriſt, and yet will not come to the Price, ſuch do go deſperately on againſt Knowledg in a bad Eſtate, and do judg themſelves unworthy of eternal Life. Thus the young Man in the Goſpel, he was told, that he was to ſell all, and he knew Heaven was worth it, and was convinced of the Truth herein, that thus he ought to do, for he was ſorrowful, but yet went away: now if he had not known that he went away without Happineſs, he needed not have been ſorrowful at all; he knew the Bargain of Salvation was not ſtruck up until he ſhould yield unto Chriſt's Terms propoſed, and likewiſe what it ſtuck at, and yet ſtill reſted in his former Condition, and choſe rather to injoy his many Poſſeſſions: This Man now went on in his impenitent State againſt Knowledg.

2dly. As alſo thoſe who upon the ſame or like ground defer their Repentance, theſe go on in a bad Eſtate, and muſt needs know they do ſo; for in that they promiſe to repent hereafter, and take up Purpoſes to do it, when they ſhall have gone on but a little while longer, to add Drunkenneſs to Thirſt, they do thereby profeſs that there is a Work of Grace, which they muſt attain to, e're they can be in the State of Grace: for they would not promiſe ſo much hereafter, but that they know not how, without ſuch a Work, they ſhould be ſaved. Whilſt therefore ſuch ſhall reſt without preſent Indeavouring after it, ſo long they are judged in themſelves to be in a bad Eſtate at preſent. When Men know the Curſes due to their preſent Eſtate, and yet ſay as he, Deut. 29. 19. I will go on in the way of my Heart, and ſhall have Peace afterward. This Man ſins moſt highly, and therefore God's Wrath ſmoaks againſt that Man, and he ſays of him, that he will not be me merciful to him, in that Place.

3dly. Sunk and broken Profeſſors, ſuch cannot but go on in a bad Eſtate againſt Knowledg: when either Men are faln from the Practice and Profeſſion of what is good, which once they thought neceſſary to Salvation; or when they continue to hold forth their Profeſſion in Hypocriſy. Thoſe that have eſcaped the Pollutions of the World, through the Knowledg of Jeſus Chriſt, but are returned to their Vomit again. Some of theſe are ingenuous, and acknowledg both themſelves faln, and their preſent Eſtate moſt miſerable, and yet go on in it; and ſuch are to be pitied; and yet are in a moſt dangerous Condition. Saul when he was faln away, yet had this Ingenuity a while left, he deſired Samuel to pray to his God for him; and told David, that he was more righteous than he; yet ſtill went on in his evil Courſes, and in the End (ſome have thought) ſinned againſt the Holy Ghoſt: but I cannot affirm that.

But others there are, who though they be faln from all the inward, powerful and ſecret Performance of Duties they once did practiſe, and from all Conſcience of ſinning, yet retain their Profeſſion, which they know to be but an out-ſide; theſe of all others go on againſt Knowledg; and Rev. 22. 15. they are ſaid to make a Lie; not only to tell a Lie in Words, but to make a Lie in Deeds. Now a Lie is a Sin of all others moſt againſt Knowledg, and indeed againſt a double Knowledg, both facti and juris; and ſo is this. 1. That they profeſs themſelves to be that they know they are not. 2. That they will not indeavour after that State they know they ought to get into, if ever ſaved. This is the Condition of many, who having been convinced of the Power of Religion, and have launched forth into a Profeſſion, and hoiſt up Sail, but now the Tide is faln, the Spirit withdrawn, the Conſcience of Sin extinguiſh'd in them; yet for their Credit ſake ſtill bear their Sails up as high as ever: even as many Merchants do, who are ſunk in their Eſtates, ſtill bear a fair Shew, yea, will ſeem richer than ordinary, by purchaſing Lands, &c. Such a Profeſſor was Judas, he began ſeriouſly, and thought to have gone to Heaven, and was earneſt in good Duties at firſt; as they alſo, 2 Pet. 2. 18. they really, or ὄντως, eſcaped the Pollutions of the World through the Knowledg of Chriſt, but in the end Judas became a groſs Hypocrite, one that pretended the poor, when he loved the Bag, and on the ſudden betrayed his Maſter: when yet the Diſciples knew knew it not, ſuſpected Judas as little as themſelves; and the End of thoſe alſo, in that fore-named Place in Peter, it is ſaid to be worſe than their beginning. Now becauſe ſuch ſin ſo highly againſt Knowledg, therefore their Puniſhment is made the Rule of all other wicked Mens; thus when it is ſaid, that other Sinners ſhall have their Portion with Hypocrites: Even the wicked Angels Puniſhment is made the Meaſure of Mens, Go ye curſed into the Fire prepared for the Devil and his Angels: ſo among Men, ſuch groſs Hypocrites, their Puniſhment is made the Rule, and ſo the chief of all kind of Torments which Sinners of the Sons of Men ſhall undergo. Chap. 3.

Now let me ſpeak a Word to all ſuch as thus go on in a State of Impenitency againſt Knowledg: this is a high kind of ſinning, and of all the moſt deſperate, and doth argue more Hardneſs of Heart, and deſpiſing the Riches of God's Goodneſs. For if, as in Rom. 2. 4. to go on in a Sin, when a Man [knows not] that is, conſiders not, that God's Mercy leads him to Repentance, is yet made the Sign and Effect of a very hard Heart, treaſuring up Wrath; then much more, when thou knoweſt and conſidereſt thou art in an Impenitent Condition, and haſt many Motions leading thee to Repentance, is thy Heart then much more to be accounted hard. When a Man commits a particular Act againſt Knowledg, he haply and uſually ſtill thinks his Eſtate may be good, and that he ſhall not loſe God utterly, or hazard the Loſs of him; only his Spirit, being at preſent empty of Communion with him, he ſteals out to ſome forreign or ſtoln Pleaſure: but when a Man knows his Eſtate bad, and that he is without God in the World, and yet goes on, he doth hereby caſt away the Lord, and profeſſeth he cares not for him, or that Communion which is to be had with him, as Eſau did his Birth-right.

David, though he deſpiſed the Lord, yet he did not caſt away the Lord, as Saul did: for Saul ventured utterly to loſe him, knowing his Eſtate naught. David, when he ſinned, thought God's eternal Favour would ſtill continue, though for the preſent he might loſe the Senſe of it, and reſolved never to leave God, but return.

But when a Man goes on in a State of ſinning, he ventures the utter Loſs of God and his Love, and ſlights it, and knows he doth ſo: when a Man knows that he is condemned already, as being impenitent, and that all his eternal Eſtate lies upon the Non-payment of ſuch Duties of Repentance, &c. and that the Guilt of all his Sins will come in upon him, and that a Writ of Execution is out, and yet goes on, this is more than to commit one Act, or ſeveral Acts, againſt Knowledg, whereby a Man thinks he brings upon himſelf but the Guilt of that one Sin; and upon the committing of which, he thinks not the Mortgage of all ſhould lie, though it deſerves it; herein Men ſhew themſelves more deſperate.

CHAP. IV.

What it is to ſin againſt Knowledg, further explained by Rules, whereby to eſtimate the heinouſneſs of particular Acts of ſinning againſt Knowledg, both Before and In committing them.

IN the next place, I come to thoſe Rules, whereby you may meaſure and eſtimate ſinning againſt Knowledg in any particular Act of ſinning; and they are either before the Sin, or in ſinning: three of either, which I make a ſecond Head, to explain this Doctrine by.

Firſt, Before.

The firſt Rule is, The more thou knoweſt, and didſt conſider the iſſues and conſequents of that Sin thou didſt commit, the more thou ſinneſt againſt Conſcience in it. Thus in Rom. 1. ult. Thou knowing (ſays the Apoſtle) that thoſe that commit ſuch things, are worthy of Death; that is, thou conſidereſt that Hell and Damnation are the iſſue and deſert of it, and yet committeſt it; yea, and this when haply Hell-fire at preſent flaſheth in thy face, and yet thou goeſt on to do it. In this caſe Men are ſaid to chooſe Death, and to love it, Prov. 3. 36. When a Man conſiders, that the way to the Whore-houſe is the Way to Death, (as Solomon ſpeaks); ſo when thou, a Profeſſor, conſidereſt with thy ſelf before, This Sin will prove ſcandalous, and undo me, diſable me for ſervice, caſt me out of the Hearts of good Men, and yet doſt it. Thus that fooliſh King was told again and again, Jer. 38. 17, 18, 19. that if he would yield to the King of Babel, he ſhould ſave his Life, and City, and Kingdom, and live there ſtill; but if he would not, he ſhould not eſcape; but, as Jeremy further told him, ver. 23. Thou ſhalt cauſe this City to be burnt with Fire; yet he would not hearken: This is the Word of the Lord, (ſays Jeremy) and he knew it to be ſo; and yet being a weak Prince, led by his Nobles, he would not follow his Counſel. And thus Judas fully knew the iſſue; Chriſt had ſaid again and again, Wo be to him by whom the Son of Man is betrayed, and yet went on.

The ſecond Rule is, The more Conſultations, Debates and Motives againſt it did run through thy Heart before thou didſt it, ſo much the greater and more heinous is thy Sin. How often did Mercy come in, and tell thee, that if thou lookeſt for any hope or part in it, thou ſhouldſt not do ſuch an Evil? How often came that in, Shall I do this, and ſin againſt God? Did any Scripture come in to teſtify againſt thee in the nick? Did God ſend in the remembrance of ſuch a Mercy paſt, to perſwade thee? or ſome Mercies to come, which thou dependeſt upon him for? That which made Spira's Sin ſo great, was ſuch Debates as theſe before: and this made Darius's Sin, in caſting Daniel into the Lions Den, ſo great; he debated it with himſelf, Dan. 6. 14. he was ſore diſpleaſed with himſelf, and labour'd to the going down of the Sun to deliver him; he conſidered that he was at his right Hand in all the Affairs of his Kingdom, and a Man entrapped merely for his Conſcience, and that to put him to death, was to ſacrifice him to their Malice; he knew him to be holy and wiſe, worth all the Men that ſought after his Life, and yet yielded: Theſe Conſiderations troubled him before, and alſo after, inſomuch as he could not ſleep for them, ver. 18. Now becauſe that every ſuch Conſultation ſhould ſet an impreſſion upon the Heart, and countermand the motions of Sin; when therefore thou doſt it, maugre all ſuch Debates and Motives to the contrary, this is much againſt knowledg, and very heinous. Therefore the Phariſees, Luke 17. 30. are ſaid to have rejected the Counſel of God, εἰς ἑαυτοὺς, in or againſt themſelves: the Words will bear either in themſelves, becauſe they knew it, and took it into conſideration, and yet rejected it; and againſt themſelves, becauſe it was their deſtruction.

Chap. 4.

The third Rule is, That the more Confirmations any Man hath had of the knowledg of that which he ſinneth in, and Teſtimonies againſt it, the greater is his Sin: When a Man hath had a Cloud of Witneſſes, perhaps made from his own Obſervations againſt a particular Sin, and yet doth it, and goes on in it, it is the more fearful. To go on againſt that one ſingle Witneſs, the bare light and grudging of natural Conſcience only, is not ſo much, comparatively, as when it is further confirmed, and backed by the Word written, which a Man hath read, in which a Man meets with ſuch Scriptures, wherein again and again ſuch a Practice is condemned, and he obſerves them; and then alſo hears it reproved in Sermons; and of all Sins elſe, perchance heareth in private Conference that Sin ſpoken againſt; yea, hath in his eye many Examples of others ſinning in the like kind, which have been puniſhed, yea haply himſelf alſo: yet to ſin againſt all theſe, how heinous is it! Sometimes God orders things ſo, as a Sin is made a great Sin by ſuch fore-warnings: ſo he contrived Circumſtances in Judas his ſinning; for Judas knew that Chriſt was the Saviour of the World, he knew it by all the Miracles he had ſeen, as alſo by his gracious Words and Converſe; and he profeſſed as much in following of him, and he had the written Word againſt it, Thou ſhalt not murder the Innocent, how much leſs the Meſſiah. But yet, further, God to aggravate his Sin to the higheſt, orders it ſo, that Chriſt ſhould tell him of it when he was to go about it, pronounceth a Wo to him, John 22. 22. that it had been good for that Man that he had never been born, Mark 14. 21. And the Diſciples they were ſorrowful at Chriſt's Speech, that he ſhould ſuſpect any one of them, and ſhewed their abomination and deteſtation of ſuch a Fact; and ſo there was empanelled a Jury of eleven Men aforehand againſt him; yea, and Judas againſt himſelf, he impudently asked Chriſt himſelf, if it were he? Yea, and Chriſt gave him a Sop, and told him, thou haſt ſaid it, and do what thou doſt quickly: which even then might argue to his Conſcience, that Chriſt was God, and ſearched and knew his Heart; and yet he went out, and did it immediately. How did he ſin againſt the Hair, as we ſpeak? and how did all theſe Circumſtances aggravate his Sin?

But yet a more clear Evidence of this, is that Inſtance of Pilate, whom God would have ſtopp'd in his Sin of condemning Chriſt, who when examining him before the Phariſees, he could find no fault with him, as concerning thoſe things whereof they accuſed him, Luke 23. 14. yet to allay their Malice, unjuſtly ſcourged him, ver. 16. and further, he ſent him to Herod, as being willing to rid his hands of him. Herod alſo found nothing worthy of Death in him, ver. 15. which was another Witneſs might have confirmed him concerning Chriſt's Innocency: Yea, yet further, that the Fact might be more aggravated, a moſt notorious known Murderer's Life was, by God's diſpoſing it ſo, put into the ballance with Chriſt's, and either the one or the other condemned; and when the People yet choſe Barrabas, ſtill Pilate ſtands it out, Why (ſays he) what Evil hath he done? ver. 22. and then he diſtinctly conſidered, that he was delivered up through Envy: Yea, and when he was upon the Bench, and ready to pronounce Sentence, God admoniſh'd him by his own Wife, Mat. 27. 19. (whom God himſelf had admoniſhed in a Dream) ſhe in the very nick ſending him word, ſhe had ſuffered many things by reaſon of him that night, and therefore have nothing (ſays ſhe) to do with that juſt Man: yea, he himſelf, when he condemns him, waſheth his Hands of it, to teſtify he judged him not guilty. And thus it falls out in many ſinful Buſineſſes which Men are about, that God often and many ſeveral ways would knock them off; and ſtops them in their way, as he did Balaam; reproves them, as he did him by a dumb Aſs, 2 Pet. 2. 16. ſo theſe by ſome ſilent paſſage of Providence; and not only ſo, but by his Spirit alſo, ſtanding in their way, with the Threatnings ready drawn and brandiſh'd againſt them, and ſet to their Breaſts, as the Angel did with a drawn Sword againſt Balaam, and yet they go on: this is dreadful.

There are three Rules alſo, whereby the Sinfulneſs of Sin, as it is againſt Knowledg, may be meaſured, from what may be obſerved In the Act: as,

Book XII.

1. The leſs Paſſion, or inward Violence, or temptation to a Sin committed againſt Knowledg, the greater Sin againſt Knowledg that is argued to be; for then the Knowledg is the clearer, Paſſion or Temptation being as a Miſt. But then to ſin when a Man is not in paſſion, is to ſtumble at Noon-day: for as Drunkenneſs takes away Reaſon, ſo doth Paſſion (which is a ſhort Drunkenneſs) cloud and miſt a Man's Knowledg. And ſo Ariſtotle compares the knowledg of an incontinent Perſon, to the knowledg of one that is drunk. When Peter denied his Maſter, though he had warning of it before, and ſo it was againſt knowledg, and it was by lying, and ſwearing, and forſwearing, which are Sins of all other moſt directly againſt Knowledg, yet he was taken unexpectedly, 'twas a ſurprizal; when that which might ſtir up Fear to the utmoſt in him, was in his view; for he was then in the Judgment-Hall, where his Maſter juſt before his Face was arraigned for his Life, and he thought he might alſo have preſently been brought to the Bar with him, if he had been diſcovered to have been his Diſciple; ſo as his Paſſion being up, his Soul was diſtempered, Reaſon had little time to recover it ſelf; and therefore though it was againſt Knowledg, yet the leſs againſt Knowledg, becauſe Knowledg had laſam operationem, it had not its perfect Work upon his Heart: But now Judas, in betraying his Maſter, had not only warning before, but was not tempted to it, but went of himſelf, and made the offer to the Phariſees, ſought how conveniently to do it, plotted to do it, had his Wits about him, having had time enough to think of it, and therefore it was (beſides the heinouſneſs of the Act) more alſo againſt Knowledg, and ſo the greater. David when he went to ſlay Nabal, was in hot Blood, in a Paſſion; but when he plotted to kill Uriah, he was in cold Blood: he was drunk when he lay with Bathſheba, but ſober when he made Uriah drunk; he went quietly and ſedately on in it. And we find David blamed only in the matter of Uriah, not ſo much for that of Bathſheba.

2. The more Sorrow, Reniſus, or Reluctancy, and regretting of Mind there is againſt a Sin, it is a ſign that the knowledg of it is the ſtronger and quicker, and ſo the Sin the more againſt Knowledg; for that gain-ſaying and diſpleaſure of the Mind againſt it, ariſeth from the ſtrength and violent beating of the Pulſe of Conſcience, and oppoſition of it againſt the Sin; it ſprings from the greater and deeper apprehenſion of the Evil in the Action which is then in doing: and though that Reluctancy be a better ſign of the Eſtate of the Perſon, than if there were none at all, (as there is not in thoſe who are paſt feeling, and commit Sin with greedineſs, whoſe Eſtate is therefore worſe, and more uncapable of Repentance) yet the Fact it ſelf is argued to be the more heinous, for it argues it to be againſt ſtrong, active, ſtirring Knowledg. This argued Herod's Sin to be much againſt Knowledg (as indeed it was) in beheading John, Mark 9. 26. the Text ſays, he was exceeding ſorrowful: now ſorrowful he was, becauſe he apprehended what a great Sin it was to behead John, who he knew was a juſt and holy Man, ver. 20. and had preached many a good Sermon to him, and had been in his Heart many a time, and who was one that had a great place in his Eſtimation, for he obſerved him; and was wrought much upon by his Miniſtry; and he knew that he did but ſacrifice him to the Malice of a wicked Woman. And in this caſe the Sin is made ſo much the greater, in that Conſcience doth ſtir up a contrary violent Paſſion in the Heart againſt the Temptation; and therefore yet to do it, when there is ſuch a Bank caſt up that might reſiſt it, and then to break all down, ſuch a Sin waſtes the Conſcience much.

3. On the contrary, the more hardneſs of Heart there is, and want of tenderneſs, in committing that Sin, which a Man knows to be a Sin, it is argued thereby to be the greater Sin againſt Knowledg; not only the greater Sin, but the greater Sin againſt Knowledg. For hardneſs of Heart in ſinning is an effect of having formerly ſinned much againſt Knowledg before: for as the Light of the Sun hardneth Clay, ſo the Beams of Knowledg and Conſcience, lightning upon Mens Hearts, uſe to harden them, and do make them in the end paſt feeling. And therefore in 1 Tim. 4. 2. ſinning againſt Knowledg is made the cauſe of a ſeared Conſcience, and ſo to ſpeak Lies in Hypocriſy; that is, knowing that that they are Lies, and ſuch Lies as damn thoſe that receive and entertain them as Truths; that they might all be damned who believe that Lie, (as 2 Theſſ. 2. 11, 12. the Apoſtle propheſying of the very ſame Perſons, ſpeaks) and if ſo, then it is no wonder if it follows, having their Conſciences ſeared with an hot Iron; it is not a cold Iron will ſear their Conſciences, and make them inſenſible, but an hot Iron, a burning and ſhining Light, which once having had place in their Conſciences; and being rejected, they begin to be hardned and ſeared. For Knowledg makes Sins, and the apprehenſion of them, familiar to a Man, and ſo leſs terrible and frightful in the end, as Bears and Lions do become to their Keepers through Cuſtom. Judas had a Heart when he came to betray his Maſter; ſurely his Conſcience had ſmitten him at firſt more for nimming out of the Bag, than it did now for this of Murder: he could never have had ſuch a hard Heart, had he not had much Knowledg. Was it not an hard Heart in him, that when he was challenged to his face, he could ſet a brazen Face upon it, and had the impudence to ask as well as the reſt, Is it I? when alſo Chriſt curſed him to his face, and the Diſciples all abhorred it. Had not Judas lived under ſuch bleſſed and glorious Means, and ſinned long againſt Knowledg, all this would have ſtartled him, and have ſtaggered him in his purpoſe; but he goes on as if it were nothing; though when he had done it, his Conſcience was then opened too late. When a Man formerly hath been troubled with a ſmall Sin, more than now with a groſs Lie, which he can digeſt better than once the other: or when before, if he omitted praying, it troubled him; but now he can go a Week without, and is not ſenſible of it, it is a ſign that his Knowledg hath hardned him.

CHAP. V.

Aggravations of ſinning againſt Knowledg, drawn from the differing Kinds or Degrees of Knowledg which Men ſin againſt.

THus having given ſuch Rules, whereby you may eſtimate the ſinfulneſs of particular Acts, I ſhall now proceed to other ways of diſcovery, namely, Aggravations taken from the kind of Knowledg a Man ſins againſt, viz. to ſin againſt what kind of Knowledg is moſt hainous and dangerous. And there are five, drawn from the ſeveral Qualifications of that Knowledg, and of the Light which Men Sin againſt. I may ſay of Knowledg, what the Apoſtle doth of Star-light, One Star differs from another in Glory; and ſo do Lights of Knowledg even in Men unregenerate; at leaſt they differ in greater or leſſer Degrees. And the greater, or the more ſtrong and efficacious the Light and Knowledg is, the greater ſtill is the Sin of Knowledg thou committeſt againſt it. And this I make a third general Head to explain this Doctrine by. All theſe five Rules being applicable and common both to particular Acts againſt Knowledg, and alſo unto lying in an Eſtate of Impenitency againſt Knowledg, and all other Particulars which have been mentioned.

Firſt, then, To ſin againſt the inbred Light of Nature, that is, in ſuch Sins, as though thou hadſt wanted the Light of the Word in, thou yet wouldſt have known to be ſuch: This is a high kind of ſinning. Such the Apoſtle ſpeaks of, Jude 10. What things they know naturally, in theſe they corrupt themſelves, as brute Beaſts; putting, as it were, no difference of Actions, no more than Beaſts, no not in what Nature teacheth them, and therefore therein are as Beaſts: for it is the Light of Nature puts the firſt difference between Men and Beaſts: and in ſuch kind of Sins it is that the Apoſtle inſtanceth, in this firſt Chapter to the Romans, as namely, that of unnatural Uncleanneſs, in three particulars: As, 1. Self-uncleanneſs, ver. 24. ἐν ἑαυτοῖς, that is, alone by themſelves, ſo Beza and Theophilact underſtand it; which he makes there the firſt degree of unnatural Uncleanneſs, which is therefore unnatural, becauſe thou deſtroyeſt that which Nature gave thee for propagation, quod perdis homo eſt. 2. Even their Women did change the natural uſe into that which is againſt Nature, ver. 26. Then, 3. the unclean Love of Boys, Men burning in Luſt with Men, verſe 27. (be it acted in what dalliance it will, though not ariſing to an act of Sodomy) doing that which is unſeemly, verſe 27. which he therefore ſays, is the perverting the uſe and intent of Nature, and ſo is a Sin againſt Nature, leaving the natural uſe of the Woman. My Brethren, I am aſhamed to ſpeak of ſuch things as are done in ſecret. Theſe kind of Sins, by the Apoſtle's ranking them, are made a further degree of Unnaturalneſs, in that they are made the Puniſhments of other Sins, which yet were againſt the Light of Nature alſo: as was that, of their not glorifying God when they knew him: Yet becauſe the Light of Nature was not ſo clear in their Conſciences, as to that point of their Knowledg of God, in compariſon to theſe, in that reſpect theſe are made the Puniſhments of the other, as being more clearly againſt Nature; ſo for Men to be diſobedient to Parents, ſtubborn towards them, and without natural affection, as the Apoſtle ſays, ver. 30, 31. this is high againſt Nature. So Unthankfulneſs, and requiting Evil for Good, is againſt a common Principle in Mens Minds; Do not the Gentiles do good to thoſe that do good to them? Your Hearts uſe to riſe againſt ſuch an one, out of common Humanity; or if you ſee one cruel and unmerciful, which is another Sin reckoned up, ver. 31. there being uſually Principles of Pity in all Mens Natures, by Nature; therefore alſo for one Man to prey upon, and tyrannize over another, as Fiſhes do over the the ſmall Ones, as Habakkuk complaineth, *ch.*1.4. this is againſt Nature; which teacheth you to do as you would be done unto. So Covenant-breakers, and Lying, and Forſwearing, mentioned, ver. 30. Inventers of Evil, and Truce-breakers, are Sins againſt Nature, and natural Light: Lying is alſo againſt a double Light, both moral, & juris, which tells us ſuch a thing ought not to be done; and facti, whilſt we affirm a thing that is not; the knowledg of the contrary Truth ariſeth up in us againſt it, though there were no Law forbad us: of all Sins elſe, the Devil's Luſts are expreſſed by theſe two, Lying, which is a Sin in the Underſtanding, and Malice in the Will, John 8. 44. Chap. 5.

Secondly, To ſin againſt that Light which thou didſt ſuck in when thou wert young, to ſin againſt the Light of thy Education, this is an Aggravation, and a great one. There is a Catechiſm of a bleſſed Mother, Bathſheba, which ſhe taught Solomon, when a Child, put in among the Records of Sacred Writ, Prov. 31. wherein ſhe counſels him betimes, not to give his ſtrength to Women; ſhe fore-told him of that Sin: and becauſe it is incident to Kings moſt, they having all Pleaſures at command, ſhe tells him particularly, It deſtroys Kings, though it deſtroys others alſo: And ſo alſo, not to drink Wine, was another Inſtruction there he was forewarned of by her: this aggravated Solomon's Fault the more; for, read the ſecond Chapter of Eccleſiaſtes, and we ſhall find there, that he was moſt guilty in the inordinate Love of theſe two; but he had not been brought up ſo, his good Mother had not thus inſtructed him. And thus alſo when God would aggravate his own Peoples Sin unto them, he recalls them to their Education-Light, they had received as it were in the youth and nonage of their being a Nation when at firſt in the Wilderneſs. So, Jer. 2.2. Go and cry to them, I remember the kindneſs and towardlineſs of thy Youth: he puts them in mind of their Education by Moſes their Tutor, and their forwardneſs then. And ſo, Hoſ. 12. When he was a Child, I loved him; and then God had their firſt Fruits, ver. 3. this he brings to aggravate their back-ſliding in After-times, ver. 5. Therefore the Apoſtle urgeth it as a ſtrong Argument to Timothy, to go on to perſevere in Grace and Goodneſs, That he had known the Scriptures from a Child; and therefore for him to fall, would be more heinous. The Reaſon is, becauſe the Light then infuſed, it is the firſt, and a Virgin-light, as I may call it, which God in much mercy vouchſafed to prepoſſeſs the Mind with, before it ſhould be deflowred and defiled with corrupt Principles from the World; and did put it there to keep the Mind chaſte and pure: Then, when the Mind was as the Air, free, and not died or tainted with any other Colour, (as Glaſs often uſeth to be) and ſo diſpoſed to receive the Beams of Light more purely and unprejudicedly, whereas afterwards it is miſted with Tinctures of Principles from the World; The Heart alſo being then more ſoft and tender, and ſo fitter to receive the deeper impreſſion from ſuch Light. Yea, we ſee ordinarily in experience, that the knowledg brought then in doth ſeaſon Men ever after, whether it be for Good or for Evil; it fore-ſtalls, and prejudgeth a Man againſt other Principles; and though a Man comes to have more acquired Knowledg and Reaſon afterwards, put into him, when he is come to perfect Age, yet the ſmall Light of his Education, if it were to the contrary, doth bias him, and keeps him fix'd and bent that way. We ſee it is thus in opinions about Religion, the Light then entertained, can never be diſputed out: ſo in Mens Ways and Actions, Train up a Child in the Way he ſhould go, and when he is old he will not depart from it, Prov. 22. 6. To ſin therefore againſt this Primitive Light, (when it is about what is good and Holy,) and to put out the Beams thereof, or defile it, and to wear out the Impreſſions of it, how wicked is it, and what a Wretch art thou to do ſo?

Many of you young Scholars have had a good Bathſheba, that inſtructed you, not to pour out your ſtrength to Drink or Women, but to pray privately, and to fear God, ſerve and love him; and when you come hither, you have good Tutors alſo, who teach you to pray; Miniſters, who inſtill bleſſed Truths into you, from which, one would think, you ſhould never depart; which if you do, the greater will be your Condemnation.

Think

Book XII.

Think how grievous this is: for if it is made an Excuſe for many a Man in Sinning, that it anſwers his Education, that he never knew or ſaw better; then muſt needs the contrary be an aggravation of Sinfulneſs. And therefore as it was Timothy's Commendation, That he knew the Scriptures from a Child; ſo it will be thy Condemnation, that thou kneweſt better from a Child, and yet rebelledſt againſt thy Light.

Thirdly, The more real and experimental the Light is Men Sin againſt Knowledg with, ſtill the more Sin. As when they have learnt it from the Examples of Godly Men, whom they have lived amongſt; or the Obſervation of God's dealings with themſelves or others, and not only from the Word notionally. To ſin againſt ſuch Light, this adds a further degree: Not only to ſin againſt the bare Light of Nature, but further, when Nature hath beſides lighted her Torch at the Scripture, and then when beyond all this, the real Examples and Obſervations made of God's dealings with a Man's ſelf and others, ſhall heighten all this to him, this makes a Man's ſinfulneſs much more grievous: for, as exempla efficaciùs docent quàm præcepta; ſo the Knowledg got by Experiments of Mercies or Judgments, is of more force and evidence. Knowledg learn'd by Experience is, and ſhould be the moſt efficacious. Therefore Chriſt himſelf, who knew all things already, yet learnt (in the School of Experience) by what he ſuffered. A little of Knowledg diſtilled out of a Man's own Obſervation, is moſt precious every drop of it; therefore the Apoſtle urgeth it on Timothy, 2 Tim. 3. 14. Continue in the things thou haſt learned, and been aſſured of, knowing of whom thou haſt learned them. Wherein there is a two-fold Motive, and both emphatical; Firſt, He was aſſured in himſelf; And, ſecondly, that which ſtrengthned that Aſſurance, and was a means to work it, was the Example of the holy Apoſtle, and of his own Parents, knowing of whom thou haſt learned them. And ſo, ver. 10. the Apoſtle again urgeth his own example, Thou haſt fully known my Doctrine, and manner of Life; and then alſo brings to his Mind the Education of thoſe his godly Parents, who inſtructed him. Hence alſo, Iſa. 26. 10. it is made an aggravation, that in the Land of Uprightneſs Men deal unjuſtly. Thus Light drawn from the obſervation of God's Judgments upon others, it much aggravates. It is laid to Belſhazzar's Charge, Dan. 5. 22. Thou kneweſt all this, how God dealt with thy Father Nebuchadonozer. So ſome of you come here, and live in a religious Society, and ſee ſometimes one, ſometimes another of your Colleagues turn to Chriſt, yea, haply Chamber-fellow converted from his evil Courſes, and yet you go on; this is ſinning againſt a great Light.

Fourthly, The more powerful the Light is that is in thee, and more ſtirring in thy Heart, and joined with a taſte, the greater the Sins committed againſt it are to be accounted. The more thou haſt taſted the bitterneſs of Sin, and God's wrath, and haſt been ſtung with it, as with a Cockatrice, the more thou haſt taſted God's Goodneſs; or the more God hath drawn nigh to thee, ſtirring up thy Affections in Prayer, and in the Ordinances, the more of ſuch a Knowledg, and yet ſinneſt, the ſo much worſe. In John 5. 35. Chriſt aggravates the Jews unbelief on himſelf, and their preſent hardneſs, that John was to them, not only a ſhining, but alſo a burning Light; that is, they had ſuch knowledg engendred by his Miniſtry, as wrought Joy and Heat as well as Light; therefore it is added, they rejoiced therein for a ſeaſon. And thus the fall of thoſe, Heb. 6. is aggravated, that it was ſuch a Light as had taſting with it. For to explain this, you muſt know, that between ordinary national Light, or that aſſenting to ſpiritual Truths, which is common to Men, from traditional Knowledg living in the Church, that between it and true ſaving Light, or the Light of Life, there is a middle kind of Light, which is more than the common Conviction Men have, and leſs than having the ſaving Light of Life: It is a Light which leaves alſo ſome impreſſion on the Affections, makes them feel the Powers of Heaven and Hell, and to be affected with them. Now the more of ſuch Light againſt a Sin, be it Drunkenneſs, or Uncleanneſs, or Oppreſſion, and yet falleſt into it again, the more grievous. For this Knowledg adds a high degree, and that of a more precious Light, unto the common and ordinary Knowledg of moſt Men, and is by a ſpecial Illumination mination of the Spirit. And therefore as thoſe Jews, who had not only common means of Knowledg, but Miracles alſo, and yet believed not, John 12. 17. ſhall be more condemned; ſo thoſe who have ſuch taſting Knowledg ſet on by the Holy Ghoſt, which is as much, yea more than if a Miracle were wrought, for it is above Nature, a ſupernatural Work of the Spirit within a Man. And therefore to ſin againſt ſuch Light, and ſuch only, is that which diſpoſeth a Man in the next degree of fitneſs to ſin againſt the Holy Ghoſt. Chap. 5.

Fifthly, To ſin againſt profeſſed Knowledg, is an Aggravation alſo, and an heavy one. To ſin againſt a Man's own Principles, which he teacheth others, or reproves or cenſureth in others. Titus 1. laſt, Thoſe that profeſs they know God, and yet deny him, theſe are moſt abominable of all others: For theſe are Liars, and ſo ſin againſt Knowledg, as Liars do: 1 John 2. 4. ſuch an one is called a Liar in a double reſpect, both in that he ſays he hath that knowledg he hath not, it not being true Knowledg; and alſo, becauſe he denies that in Deeds, which he affirms in Word, which is Paul's reaſon to Titus: And this is ſcandalous ſinning. So, Rom. 2. 24. The Jews boaſting of the Law, and of having the Form of Knowledg in their Brains; this cauſed the Gentiles to blaſpheme, when they ſaw they lived clean contrary thereunto. And therefore a Brother that walks inordinately, was to be delivered to Satan, to learn what it was to blaſpheme, 1 Tim. 2. 20. that is, to learn to know how evil and bitter a thing it is, by the Torments of an evil Conſcience, to live in ſuch a courſe, as made God and his Ways evil ſpoken of, as it befel David when he thus ſinned. Yea, 2 Cor. 5. 10, 11. though they might keep company with a Heathen, becauſe he was ignorant, and profeſſed not the Knowledg of God; yet if a Brother, one that profeſſed, and ſo was to walk by the ſame Rules, did ſin againſt thoſe Principles he and they profeſſed, then, keep him not company, ſays he. Thus did Saul ſin: All the Religion he had and pretended to, in his latter days, was, rooting forth Witches out of the Land: yet in the end he went againſt this his Principle; he went to a Witch in his great Extremity. And thus God will deal with all that are hollow in the end, and ſin ſecretly againſt Knowledg: He leaves them to go on againſt their moſt profeſſed Principles.

Theſe are Aggravations in general, applicable both to any act of ſinning, or going on in a known ſtate of ſinning.

Uſes. Now the uſe of all that hath been ſpoken, what is it but to move all thoſe that have Knowledg, to take more heed of ſinning than other Men; and thoſe of them that remain in their natural Eſtate, to turn ſpeedily and effectually unto God: For if ſinning againſt Knowledg be ſo great an aggravation of Sinning, then of all Engagements to Repentance, Knowledg is the greateſt.

Uſe. 1. Thou who haſt Knowledg, canſt not ſin ſo cheap as another who is Ignorant: Therefore if thou wilt be wicked, they Wickedneſs will coſt thee ten times more than it would another. Places of much Knowledg, and plentiful in the means of Grace, are dear Places to live in, in ſin. To be Drunk, and Unclean, after enlightning, and the Motions of the Spirit, and powerful Sermons, is more than twenty times afore; thou mighteſt have committed ten to one, and been damned leſs. This is Condemnation (ſays Chriſt) that Light came into the World. Neither canſt thou have ſo much pleaſure in thy Sin as an ignorant Perſon; for thy Conſcience puts forth a ſting in the Act when thou haſt Knowledg, which does ſubject thee to Bondage and the fear of Death. When a Man knows how dearly he muſt pay for it, there is an expectation of Judgment embittereth all. Therefore the Gentiles ſinned with more pleaſure than we. Therefore, Epheſ. 4. 18, 19. the Apoſtle, ſpeaking of them, ſays, that through their ignorance and darkneſs, and want of feeling, they committed Sin with greedineſs, and ſo with more pleaſure; they not having Knowledg, or Hearts ſenſible of the Evils that are the Iſſues and Conſequents of ſuch Courſes.

Book XII.

Uſe 2. Thou wilt in ſinning againſt Knowledg, be given up to greater Hardneſs. If the Light that is in thee be Darkneſs, (ſays Chriſt) how great is that Darkneſs? Therefore the more Light a Man hath, and yet goes on in Works of Darkneſs, the more Darkneſs that Man will be left unto, even to a reprobate Mind in the End.

Uſe 3. It will procure thee to be given up to the worſt of Sins, more than another Man: for God when he leaves Men, makes one Sin the Puniſhment of another, and ſo the worſer ſtill the Puniſhment of the former; but above all, reſerves the worſt for Sinners againſt Knowledg. Theſe Gentiles, when they knew God, they worſhipped him not; God gave them up to the worſt of Sins, whereof they were capable, as unnatural Uncleanneſs, &c. But theſe are not Sins great enough for thee that are a Sinner of the Chriſtians; to be given up to Drunkenneſs, or Adultery, &c. otherwiſe than to diſcover thy Rottenneſs, theſe are too ſmall Sins; but thou ſhalt be given up to inward Profaneneſs of Heart, (as Eſau was, having been brought up in a good Family) ſo as not to neglect holy Duties only, but to deſpiſe them; to deſpiſe the good Word of God and his Saints, and to hate Godlineſs and the Appearance of it; thou ſhalt be given up to contemn God and his Judgments, to trample under Foot the Blood of the Covenant; or elſe unto deviliſh Opinions. Thoſe other are too ſmall to be Puniſhments of thy Sin: For ſtill the End of ſuch an one muſt be ſeven times worſe than the beginning, as Chriſt ſays it ſhall. If thou wert a Drunkard, a Swearer, or an unclean Perſon before, and thy Knowledg wrought ſome Alteration in thee, thou ſhalt not haply be ſo now, at thy Fall, but ſeven times worſe; profane, injurious to Saints, a Blaſphemer or Derider of God's Ways and Ordinances.

Uſe 4. When thou comeſt to lay hold on Mercy at Death, thy Knowledg will give thee up to more Deſpair than another Man. Knowledg, though when it is but newly revealed, it is an Help; yet not made uſe of, recoils and turns againſt the Soul, to wound it, and to work Deſpair: and this, both becauſe we have ſinned againſt the means that ſhould have ſaved us; as alſo, becauſe ſuch as ſin againſt Knowledg, ſin with more Preſumption; and the more Preſumption in thy Life, the more Deſpair thou art apt to fall into at Death. Therefore Iſa. 59. 11, 12. what brought ſuch Trouble, and Roarings like Bears, upon thoſe Jews? and that when Salvation was looked for, that yet it was ſo far off from them in their Apprehenſions? Our Iniquities (ſay they) teſtify to our Face, and we know them. Now then, Sins teſtify to our Face, when our Conſcience took notice of them, even to our Faces, when we were committing them; and then alſo the ſame Sins themſelves will again teſtify to our Faces, when we have recourſe for the Pardon of them. Therefore thou wilt lie roaring on thy Death-bed, and that thou knoweſt them, will come as an Argument, that thou ſhalt not have Mercy. As Ignorance is a Plea for Mercy, I did it ignorantly, therefore I obtained Mercy; ſo I did it knowingly, will come in (if God leave thee to the Efficacy of thine own Guilt) as a Bar and a Plea againſt thee, therefore I ſhall not have Mercy.

Uſe 5. Both here and in Hell, it will prove a great Executioner and Tormenter. In this Senſe it may be ſaid, Qui auget ſcientiam, auget dolorem: He that increaſeth Knowledg, increaſeth Sorrow, as Solomon ſpeaks: for Knowledg inlargeth our Apprehenſion of our Guilt, and that brings more Fear and Torment. Have they no Knowledg, who eat up my People? Yes, there is their Fear (ſays David). Therefore Heb. 10. 28. after ſinning againſt Knowledg there remains not only a more fearful Puniſhment, but a more fearful Expectation in the Parties Conſciences. And this is the Worm in Hell, that gnaws for ever. Sunbeams of Light breed theſe Worms in the ſtinking Jakes of our Hearts.

But then you will ſay, It is beſt for us to be ignorant, and to keep our ſelves ſo.

Chap. 5.

I anſwer: No, for to refuſe Knowledg, will damn as much as abuſing it. This you may ſee in Prov. 1. 23. Ye Fools (ſays Wiſdom) you that hate Knowledg, turn, and I will pour my Spirit upon you, and make known my Words unto you. Well, ver. 24. they refuſed, and would none of his Reproof: therefore ſays God, I will laugh at your Calamity: that is, I will have no Pity; but inſtead of Pity, God will laugh at you; and when your Fear comes, I will not anſwer, becauſe ye hated Knowledg, ver. 29. ſo as this is as bad as the abuſing Knowledg. There remains therefore no middle way of Eſcape, to extricate thy ſelf out by, and avoid all this; no other Remedy, but true turning to God: otherwiſe thou canſt not but be more miſerable than other Men. Yea, and this muſt be done ſpeedily alſo: for thou having Knowledg, God is quicker in denying thee Grace, and in giving thee up to a reprobate Mind, than another Man who is ignorant. He will wait upon another that knows not his Will; and waits twenty, thirty, forty Years, as he did upon thoſe Children of the Iſraelites that were born in the Wilderneſs, and had not ſeen his Wonders in Egypt, and at the Red Sea: but thoſe that had, he ſoon ſware againſt many of them, that they ſhould never enter into his Reſt. Chriſt comes as a ſwift Witneſs againſt thoſe to whom the Goſpel is preached, Mal. 3. 5. he makes quick Diſpatch of the Treaty of Grace with them. Therefore few that have Knowledg, are converted when they are old, or that lived long under the Means. And therefore you that have Knowledg, are ingaged to repent and turn to God, and to bring your Hearts to your Knowledg, and that ſpeedily alſo, or elſe your Damnation will not only be more intolerable than others, but a final Sentence of it paſs out more quickly againſt you, which is ſtiled by the Prophet, The coming forth of the Decree. Therefore, as Chriſt ſays, John 12. 36. Whilſt you have the Light, walk in it: For that Day of Grace, which is very clear and bright, is uſually a ſhort one. And though Men may live many Days and Years in Nature after, and injoy the common Light of the Sun, yet the Day of Grace, and of gracious Excitements to repent, may be but a ſhort one.

Book XII.

CHAP. VI.

Aggravations of Mens ſinning againſt common Mercies: upon a Diſcovery of the Riches of them. The Goodneſs of God in them all one with Bounty. The Greatneſs of it. What Patience ſuperadds to Goodneſs; and what Long-ſuffering to Patience.

ROM. 2. 4, 5.

Or deſpiſeſt thou the Riches of his Goodneſs, and Forbearance, and Long-ſuffering, not knowing that the Goodneſs of God leadeth thee to Repentance?

But after thy Hardneſs and impenitent Heart, treaſureſt up unto thy ſelf Wrath againſt the Day of Wrath, and Revelation of the righteous Judgment of God.

THE high and deep Aggravations of the actual Sinfulneſs of unregenerate Men, is the general intended Scope of theſe Treatiſes. Thoſe that greaten Mens ſinning againſt Knowledg are diſpatch'd. This other follows, the Aggravations of ſinning againſt common Mercies, leading Men unto Repentance. Which is the ſecond common-place Head, by which the Apoſtle in his exact Method in this Epiſtle exaggerates the Heathens ſinning in theſe Words; as he had done by their ſinning againſt Knowledg, in the foregoing part of his Diſcourſe.

To ſet forth the hateful Iniquity of theſe Gentiles Sinning and Impenitency in this Reſpect, He ſpreads before their View the Riches of that Goodneſs, Forbearance, and Long-ſuffering in God; and that as leading every one of them continually unto Repentance, which they in every Sin deſpiſed, through the Impenitency and Hardneſs of their Hearts; and thereby juſtly ſtored and heaped up another Treaſure of Wrath and Judgment againſt themſelves, equal unto, and proportionable to the Riches and Precioulneſs of the Mercies expended on them. The great God carefully keeping an Account of, and laying up by him the Remembrance thereof, as Men uſe to do their precious Treaſures againſt an opportune Seaſon, and a ſet-Day wherein to bring them forth for their beſt Advantage. Thus God ſpeaks of what accrues as Forfeitures to his Juſtice by Mens Sins, Deut. 32. 34. Is not this laid up in ſtore with me, and ſealed up among my Treaſures?

There is another infinitely far ſurpaſſing Treaſure of unſearchable Riches of Mercy and Grace, which, like thoſe Indies to us, had lain hid undiſcovered to theſe Gentiles for many Ages.—The Mercies of Eternity, the ſure Mercies of Chriſt our David,—which God had begun a-new to break up in thoſe Days, and which are continued down unto us in our Days, and are daily proclaimed unto us. Ho, every one! I will make the ſure Mercies of David yours: Seek ye the Lord while he may be found. Let the Wicked forſake his Way, and the unrighteous Man his Thoughts, and let him return unto the Lord, and he will have Mercy upon him, and to our God, for he will abundantly pardon. And by the neglecting and deſpiſing of this ſuper-excelling Treaſure, it is, that our Sins (that live under the Knowledg and Tender thereof) are all aggravated unto a Guilt, and treaſuring up a Wrath, as far exceeding that of theſe poor Gentiles here in the Text, as Heaven exceeds the Earth.

Eph. 3. 7.

Iſa. 55. 1, 3, 6, 7.

But to the intent that our Thoughts and moſt ſerious Apprehenſions, may climb up to the View and Senſe of the Greatneſs of our Sinnings in deſpiſing theſe Goſpel-

Goſpel-Mercies, by a comparative Eſtimate made and taken, from what Aggravations are found in Mens Sinnings againſt the Riches of common Mercies; common to us with the very Gentiles here: I therefore have ſingled forth this as the more ſpecial Subject, (though about common Mercies) rather than the other, which is deſervedly the more uſual Theme of Pens and Tongues: This alſo being ſubſervient to the Illuſtration of that other. Chap. 6.

Now there is not a more ready or direct way to come to underſtand our Sinfulneſs herein, than to diſplay the Riches themſelves of that Goodneſs, which Men ſin againſt: And this we ſee is the Courſe the Apoſtle himſelf here took.

My Purpoſe therefore is to unlock and carry you firſt into that more common Treaſury of outward Mercies, and lead you through the ſeveral Rooms thereof, all which do continually lead you unto Repentance: That then reflecting upon our ungrateful Waſte, and Abuſe of ſo many Mercies in ſinning againſt them, our Sins, every Sin, the leaſt, may yet appear more ſinful unto us, who are leſs than the leaſt of all thoſe Mercies. Know then, that beſides that peculiar Treaſure of unſearchable Riches of Grace laid up in Chriſt, there is another untold Mine of Riches the Earth is full of, as the Pſalmiſt tells us, and the Apoſtle here, which theſe Gentiles only heard of, and which we partake of, all, as much as they. As there are Riches of Grace offer'd to you, which can never be exhauſted; ſo there are Riches of Patience ſpent upon you, which you will have ſpent out in the end; the Expence of which, caſt up, will alone amount to an immenſe Treaſure, both of Guilt in you, and of Wrath in God, as theſe Words inform us. Pſal. 104. 24.

To help you in this Account, I ſhall,

1. Diſplay the Riches themſelves.
2. Aggravate your Sinfulneſs and Impenitency thereby.

To the Diſcovery of theſe Riches.

1. In general, ſhew what this Goodneſs (or Bounty) here ſpoken of, and Patience and Long-ſuffering in God are.
2. That there are an infinite Riches of theſe ſpent upon the Sons of Men.
3. That all theſe lead Men unto Repentance.

1ſt, That God is ſaid here to be good or bountiful: 2dly, Patient or forbearing: 3dly, Long-ſuffering. Theſe ſeem to note out three Degrees of his common Mercies unto Men. Concerning which particularly.

1. He is a good, or a bountiful God: for ſo I exegetically expound it. For though it be true, that Goodneſs and Bounty may differ: yet when Riches of Goodneſs are ſaid to be communicated, as here, then it imports the ſame, and is all one with Bounty. And indeed his Scope is here to inſinuate, how God that is good, he did good: which is the ſame, the ſame Apoſtle expreſſeth concerning theſe Gentiles, Acts 14. 17. He left not himſelf without witneſs, in that he did good, filling our Hearts with Food and Gladneſs. Correſpondent to which is that Speech alſo of God's Dealings with thoſe that lived before the Floud, Job. 22. 16. Yet he filled their Houſes with good things, ver. 18. ſo that Goodneſs here is all one, and to ſay, God was bountifully good in his beſtowing all good things. Now therefore that which I would here enlarge upon, is, how all thoſe noble and royal Qualifications and Properties, which concur to make one truly good and bountiful, do meet and abound in God, in all thoſe good things which he doth beſtow; and are found truly in none but in him: ſo that it may be truly ſaid, that there is none good but God, or bountiful but God, as Chriſt ſays of him. Pſal. 119. 68.

Now this Bounty in the general, which is in God, may be thus deſcribed. It is a free, willing, and a large giving of what is merely his own, looking for no Recompence again.

To explain this, that you may ſee that all theſe Conditions are required to true Goodneſs, and all of them to be found in God only.

1. He

Book XII.

1. He that is bountiful, he muſt be a Giver and Beſtower of good things; and all he beſtows, it muſt be by way of Gift, not by way of Recompence unto, or by Deſert from the Party he beſtows all on: Therefore Chriſt ſays, Luke 6. 33. that to do good to thoſe who have done, or do good to us, is not thank-worthy; nor is it Bounty. But God is therefore truly good, becauſe he ſimply, merely and abſolutely gives away all which he beſtows: For he was not, nor can any way become beholden to any of his Creatures, nor had formerly received any thing from them, which might move him hereunto. So Rom. 11. 35. Who hath firſt given him, that he may recompence him again? Nay, until he gave us a being, we were not ſo much as capable of receiving any good thing from him.

2. He who is truly termed good or bountiful, all that he gives away muſt be his own: And ſo all which God beſtows, it is his own, and he alone is ſuch a Giver. So Pſal. 24. 1. The Earth is the Lord's. The Ground we tread on, the Place we dwell in; he is our Landlord. But is that all? for the Houſe may be the Landlords, when the Furniture is the Tenants; therefore he further adds, And the Fulneſs of it is his alſo: that is, all the things that fill the World, all the Furniture and Proviſion of it. Both, all the Moveables, (ſo Pſal. 50. 11, 12.) The Cattel and the Fowls upon a thouſand Hills are mine, ſays he; and alſo all the ſtanding Goods, the Corn and Oyl (which you ſet and plant) are mine, Hoſ. 2. 9. yea, and the Pſalmiſt in the ſame 24*th* Pſalm, adds further, that they who dwell therein are his alſo: not the Houſe and Furniture only, but the Inhabitants themſelves. And this, by the moſt ſure, and moſt ſoveraign Title that can be, better than that of Purchaſe, or Inheritance of and from another: for he hath made them; All is thine, becauſe all comes of thee, ſays the ſame David, 1 Chron. 29. 11, 12. And all things are not only [of him] but [through him] Rom. 11. 36. that is, they cannot ſtand nor ſubſiſt without him. Even Kings (the greateſt and moſt bountiful of Men) their Bounty is but as that of the Clouds, which though they ſhower down plentifully, yet they firſt receive all from the Earth below them.

3. He gives largely, it is not Bounty elſe. Now God is therefore ſaid to be rich in Goodneſs, becauſe he is abundant in it. So we find it, comparing Pſal. 33. 5. which Pſal. 104. 24. in which it is ſaid, that the Earth is full of his Goodneſs, and his Riches; which we may judg of, by what he ſays in the 27*th* Verſe of that 104*th* Pſalm, of what an Houſe he keeps, and what Multitudes he feeds: All theſe (ſaith the Pſalmiſt) wait on thee, that thou mayeſt give them Meat, and thou openeſt thy Hand, and they are filled with Good. King Ahaſuerus, to ſhew his Bounty, made a Feaſt to his chief Subjects, but it was but for half a Year, and not to all his Subjects: ſome few half Years more would well-nigh have beggar'd him; but God doth thus continually, and that to all. The greateſt and moſt bountiful of Men, when they would expreſs the largeſt of their Bounty, ſpeak but of giving half of their Kingdom (ſo Herod, and he did but talk ſo too) but God beſtows whole Worlds and Kingdoms, as Daniel ſpeaks, chap. 4. 35. and gives them to whom he pleaſes.

4. He that is bountiful, muſt give all he gives freely and willingly. Which, though I put 'em together, yet may imply two diſtinct things. As firſt, that he that gives, muſt be a free Agent in it, who is at his choice, whether he would give any thing away or no. The Sun doth much Good to the World, it affords a large Light, and even half the World at once is full of its Glory: yea, and all this Light is its own, that is, not borrowed from any other created Light caſt upon it, as that of the Moon and Stars is; yet this Sun cannot be called good or bountiful, becauſe it ſends forth this Light neceſſarily and naturally; and cannot chuſe but do ſo; nor can it draw its Beams. But God is a free Giver, he was at his Choice, whether he would have made the World or no; and can yet when he pleaſeth, withdraw his Spirit and Face, and then they all periſh, Pſal. 104. 29. A ſecond Requiſite is, it muſt be done willingly alſo; that is, no way conſtrained, nor by extorting, ſo as to be wrung from him, who is, and will be called Bountiful. A willing Mind in matter of Bounty, is more accepted than the thing, 2 Cor. 8. 12. Now of God it is ſaid, Dan. 4. 22. that he gives the Kingdoms of the World to whom he will, and none ſways him, him, or can ſtay his Hand, ver. 35. yea he gives all away with Delight. So Pſal. 104. 31. having ſpoken of his feeding every living thing, and of other the like Works of his Goodneſs, throughout that Pſalm, he concludes with this, God rejoiceth in all his Works: that is, doth all the Good he doth to his Creatures with Delight; it doth him good (as it were) to ſee the poor Creatures feed. Chap. 6.

Laſt of all, looking for no Recompenſe for the time to come. This is another Requiſite in Bounty. Says Chriſt, Luke 6. 34. If you give, to receive again as Sinners do, this is not thank-worthy: but ver. 25. ſo doth not your heavenly Father: For, (ſays he) Do Good, and hope for nothing again; ſo ſhall you be like your Father; and then therein you ſhall ſhew your ſelves true Children of the [moſt high.] In which Word, he inſinuates a Reaſon why God gives all thus: becauſe he is ſo great and ſo high a God, as nothing we do can reach him; as David ſpeaks, Pſal. 16. 2. My Goodneſs extends not unto thee: He is too high to receive any Benefit by what we do. And even that Thankfulneſs he exacts, he requires it but as an Acknowledgment of our Duty, and for our good, Deut. 10. 12.

And ſo much for the firſt, namely, what Goodneſs and Bounty is: and how God is truly good, and he only ſo. But this Attribute of his, and the Effects of it, he exerciſeth towards all our Fellow-Creatures, and did to Adam in Paradiſe. But now to us-ward, (as the Apoſtle ſpeaks) namely, the Sons of Men now fallen, he extendeth and manifeſts a further Riches, namely, of Patience and Long-ſuffering, which the Devils partake not of; the good Angels, and other Creatures that ſinned not, are uncapable of. For in what he beſtows on us, he is kind to ſuch as are evil and unthankful, as Chriſt ſays, Luke 6. 35. Mercy is more than Goodneſs, for Mercy always doth reſpect Miſery: and becauſe all the Creatures are ſubject to a Miſery, (Rom. 8. 20, 21, 22.) of Bondage and Vanity, therefore his tender Mercies are over all his Works. But yet, Patience is a further thing than Mercy, (as Mercy is than Goodneſs) being exerciſed, not towards miſerable Creatures only, but towards Sinners, and includes in it more, and three things further exerciſed towards them.

1*ſt*, Not only that thoſe Perſons he doth good unto, do offend, and injure him; but that himſelf alſo is exceeding ſenſible of all thoſe Wrongs, and moved by them, and alſo provoked to Wrath thereby; it is not Patience elſe. So in 2 Pet. 3. 9. It is not Slackneſs, (ſays he there) God is not ſlack: that is, he ſits not in Heaven as one of the Idol Gods, that regarded not what Acts were kept here below; or took not to heart Mens Carriage towards him; but is long-ſuffering, or patient; that is, he apprehends himſelf wronged, is fully ſenſible of it, and is angry with the Wicked every Day; he hath much ado to forbear, even when he doth forbear, and lets them alone; he exerciſeth an Attribute, a Vertue towards them, namely, Patience in keeping in of his Anger; which is as to keep Fire in ones Boſom. Pſal. 7. 11.

But, 2*dly*, this is not all; He doth not ſimply forbear and reſtrain his Anger, but vouchſafeth all that which he forbears them in, that they might repent; and his Mercies as Means leading to Repentance. So it follows in 2 Pet. 3. 9. But God is long-ſuffering to us-ward, and his long-ſuffering hath this in it, not willing that any ſhould periſh, but come unto Repentance. So alſo Rev. 2. 21. it is called Space to repent. And all the Bleſſings he vouchſafeth, he gives them as Means and Guides to lead them to Repentance, as here. And Matth. 18. 29. Have Patience with me, and I will pay thee all, ſaid the Debtor: that is, give me a longer Day and Space to pay the Debt in, and be willing to accept it when I bring it, and let me lie out of Priſon, that I may be enabled to pay it.

3*dly*, There is yet a further thing in his Patience, namely, awaiting, and Expectation that Men would come in and repent. So Luke 13. 17. Theſe three Years have I come ſeeking Fruit, but have found none: There was an Expectation, a Longing, a Deſire it would bring forth Fruit, O when ſhall it once be! ſays God, Jer. 13. laſt.

In the laſt place, that other Attribute of Long-ſuffering (which is the third) is but as a further Degree of Patience; but Patience lengthned out farther, that is, when God hath been thus patient, long hath forborn and waited for their coming Book XII. coming in, and that not for three Years, but haply thirty, forty Years, and ſtill they turn not; his Patience then begins (as we would think) to be worn out, and his Anger begins to ariſe, as if he could forbear no longer; (as it was towards that Tree, Why cumbereth it the Ground? Cut it down) yet he goes on to ſpare a Man another Year, and many more Years ſtill after that; and endureth, with much long-ſuffering (as Rom. 9. 22.) the Veſſels of Wrath, endures to wonderment above meaſure, beyond all Expectation, beyond all Patience, as it were; this is Long-ſuffering.

CHAP. VII.

The exceeding Riches of this common Goodneſs, Patience, and Long-ſuffering in God, towards Us as Sinners.

THE ſecond general Head is, That there are [Riches] of this his Goodneſs, &c. expended on us.

It is a Rich Goodneſs, Patience, and Long-ſuffering. Rich in themſelves in regard of their Abundance, as they came from him; and rich alſo in regard of their precious uſefulneſs unto us, as they may be improved by us.

Firſt, In themſelves, they are rich: If we conſider what is expended all that while. He lays out, not ſimply his Power to ſuſtain and uphold all things, and to maintain us freely: ſo to do were nothing to him in Compariſon. For whilſt he doth but ſo, nothing goes out of Purſe, or is detracted from him, (as I may ſpeak) he feels not the expence either of Power, Providence, &c. All this coſt him but words: For he upholds all, creates all by the Word of his Power, Heb. 1. And thus to maintain the Angels, and to have maintained all Mankind before they fell, had been no more. But (my brethren) when now he maintains us Sinners, not ſimply Power goes forth from him, but his Glory is expended and taken from him, and for the while waſted, detracted from; he loſeth at preſent, every day, infinitely by us, and he is ſenſible of it; every Sin takes Glory from him, robs him, as he himſelf complains. In that he who made the World, and upholds it, keeps it together, as the Hoops do the Barrel, it would fall to pieces elſe, to nothing; In whom all live, as Fiſhes in the Sea, yea, Upon whom all live) that He ſhould live unknown, unthought of, unſerved; yea, diſgraced, diſhonoured in the World, and have this World loſt to him, as it were; and Sin, the Devil, wicked Men, to have all the Glory from him, to be exalted, to carry the whole World before them: This ſpends upon him, he had need of Riches to bear this.

2. Conſider the multitude of Sinners, that thus ſpend, and live upon theſe Riches, no leſs than all the World: He had need of multitude of Patience in him. He forbears not One, but all and every One. We look upon one Man, and ſeeing him very wicked, we wonder God cuts him not off; we wonder at our ſelves, that God did not cut us off before this, when once our Eyes are opened: nay, then caſt your Eyes over all the World, and ſtand amazed at God's forbearance towards it. Take the richeſt Man that ever was, to have Millions of Men in his Debt, it would undo him ſoon. All the World are in God's Debt, and run ſtill in debt every day, more and more, and yet he breaks not, nay breaks not them.

Nay, 3. To manifeſt this Abundance yet more, conſider not only the Multitude he forbears, but the Time he hath done it. To forbear much, and to forbear it long! Now he hath forborn and been out of Purſe from the beginning of the World, ſince Men were upon the face of the Earth, five thouſand ſand Years and a half already; and how long is it yet to the Day of Judgment, we know not: And yet ye ſee, He is as Patient, and as bountiful now in the latter days of the World, as he was at the firſt. Did the greateſt Convert that ever was, that had not lived paſt thirty Years in his ſinful Eſtate (for he was young when he held the Stoners Clothes that ſtoned Stephen) and yet was the chiefeſt of Sinners, did he yet (as himſelf ſays) think himſelf a Pattern of Long-ſuffering, 1 Tim. 1. 16. thought it a great matter God ſhould forbear ſo long? What is the whole World then? if he, being but one ſmall poor Veſſel, was ſo richly laden with the Riches of God's Patience, how is this great Bark of the World then fraught, that hath gone over ſo vaſt a Gulf of time? how much of theſe his Riches have been laden in it? Chap. 7.

And then, 4. Add to this the expenſive Prodigality of all theſe Sinners in all Ages; every Sinner ſpends ſomething. As how laviſh are Men of Oaths? All the thoughts of Mens Hearts from their youth up they are evil, and only evil, and continually: and how much then hath every Man ſpent him? Every Sin is a Debt.

In the ſecond place, This is a rich Goodneſs and Patience in regard of the preciouſneſs, and uſefulneſs to us.

1. Precious, in regard of what all theſe Manifeſtations of his Goodneſs and forbearance coſt, even the Blood of his Son, who as a Lord hath bought and purchaſed all wicked Men; their Lives, and their Reprieval, all that time that here they live; and all the Bleſſings and Diſpenſations of Goodneſs, which they here enjoy. Chriſt's Mediation ſo far prevails with God for all the World, that it puts a ſtop to the preſent Proceedings of Juſtice, which otherwiſe had pronounced of all, That day thou ſinneſt, thou dieſt. So that as Chriſt may be called the Wiſdom and the Power of God; ſo alſo the Patience and the Long-ſuffering of God. For, for his Sake, and through his Means, it is exerciſed: God would not vouchſafe a Drop of Mercy, but for his Son. Which, I take clearly intimated, in that dealing of his with the Jews, (Exod. 23. 20. compared with Exod. 33. 2, 3, 4, &c.) Immediately after God had given the Law, (by the Rules and Threatnings whereof, God the Father in his Government was to proceed) and after they had tranſgreſſed it, He there declares, that he could not go with them: For (according to the Rules of his Government) he ſhould deſtroy them, but his Angel he would ſend with them, even Chriſt, and he might ſhew them Mercy, for he was to be the Purchaſer of it: And that Chriſt was that Angel, appears, in that God tells them, ver. 21. that his Name was in him, (as by other Scriptures in the New Teſtament) who alſo would deſtroy them, if they turned not and repented, according to the Rules of his Law, the Goſpel.

2. And Precious, in regard of the uſefulneſs to us, this his Goodneſs and Long-ſuffering tend and ſerve unto. This makes this Stock of Time afforded you, by God's Goodneſs, to be Riches indeed, that it is ſpace to repent, Rev. 2. 21. Not a time of Reprieval only, but to get a Pardon in: and this makes all the good things we enjoy to be precious indeed, that they are Means, leading us by the Hand to Repentance. Rich it is, becauſe if your Time be laid out as it ought, you may obtain thoſe far ſurpaſſing Riches of Glory reſerved for hereafter; Win, and gain Chriſt by it, and all his unſearchable Riches. All things receive their Worth and Valuation from what they tend to, and from what depends upon them, and the uſe they might be put to. A Bond, a Man's Will, which in it ſelf (as it is a piece of Parchment) is not worth one Shilling; yet an Eſtate of many Thouſands may lie and depend upon them. And ſo our Time is not ſimply precious in it ſelf, but in regard of the Opportunities of it. And accordingly, we do uſe more or leſs, to eſtimate and count Time precious, as the Buſineſs allotted to it, is of more or leſs Conſequence: Thus in the ordinary Affairs of our Lives, when a Matter falls out that concerns us, and requires diſpatch, and we are caſt into ſtraits of time about it, we count every Minute precious: ſo this Time of ours (which is the chief and principal of that Stock, put into our Hands by God's Patience) being ſpace to repent in, to gain and trade for Heaven with, in this reſpect every Minute of it, is as much as Heaven is worth; and one Hour of it may be as much in worth, as all the Time you are to ſpend for ever, after this Life ended: every Minute hath an influence into Eternity. And however you account of it, yet the Ballance of the Sanctuary thus eſtimates your Time, in calling it your Money: Why lay you out your Money for what is not? &c. (i.e.) this precious Day and Time of Grace; and the Thoughts, Cares, and Endeavours which are brought forth and minted in this Time allotted you, theſe are your Money to obtain Heaven by. And thus it hath been eſteemed by holy and godly Men, who yet had leſs need to value it, having done the main Buſineſs it was allotted for. David in Pſal. 39. 13. being brought very low, O ſpare me a little, that I may recover my Strength, before I go hence, and be ſeen no more. So Hezekiah, Iſa. 38. how did he ſue for; and when he had obtained fifteen Years, how did he bleſs God? ver. 20. of that chapter. Or if by this now ſaid, you yet judg not ſo, think with thy ſelf, what at the Day of Death thou wouldeſt account of an Hour, of a Month, a Year? what others, who have lain gaſping, who would have given a World for Time again? as I have heard one crying Day and Night, Call Time again! or if not then, O what in Hell?

Iſa. 55. 2.

The third thing I am to ſhew, is, That all this of Goodneſs, Patience, and Forbearance, is afforded towards you as a Means, and as an help to bring you to Repentance. Acts 17. 28. God (ſays the Apoſtle there) hath allotted to Men, both their Times to live in, and alſo their Places of Abode and Habitations, all richly furniſhed with Bleſſings to uphold their Lives and Beings. And to what end are theſe thus afforded? That they might ſeek the Lord, if by groping after him (even as Men in the dark) they might haply find him. But Men being in the dark, and deſtitute of Guides to bring them unto God, may yet be as far off from finding him as ever: Therefore add but the words of my Text, here, to what the Apoſtle ſays there, and we ſee, that this Goodneſs of God takes us by the Hand, and leads us to Repentance; to turn from Sin unto God, and ſo to find him. And thus you are led unto God, by the help of three ſeveral Guides, which each after other ſweetly lead you and point you out to this.

1. All this Goodneſs bears witneſs to your Hearts of a gracious Hand of God's that extends it ſelf in all theſe; therefore in that 17*th* of the Acts, he ſubjoyns, God is not far off from any of us. That there is a good God beſtows all things on you, is a thought lies at next Door unto the enjoyment of the Bleſſings; it is not far off. Yea, and they all (ſays the Apoſtle to the ſame Gentiles, Acts 14. 16.) do bear witneſs of him, though they went on in their own ways, yet (ſays he there) God left not himſelf without Witneſs; that is, not without ſome thought and impreſſion on their hearts that his good Hand beſtowed all on them, when he filled their Hearts with Food and Gladneſs.

2. His Goodneſs having brought thus God to Mens Thoughts, then your own Conſciences take you, and lead you down into your ſelves, and bear Witneſs, that you by walking in your own Ways, do nothing but provoke and offend this good God. So Rom. 2. 15.

3. And then, there is an indelible Principle common to all Men, teaching them to love thoſe who love them; which therefore, after the two former have brought you hitherto, doth point you to Repentance, as the concluſion. [Shall we go on to ſin againſt this God, ſo good? return evil for good?] Is not this a natural neceſſary Conſequent out of all theſe, to ſay, as they, Let us therefore fear the Lord, who giveth us the early and the latter rain? as it is Jer. 5. 26, 27. And though Men are ſaid not to know this, in the Text, yet the meaning is, they do not throughly and effectually conſider thus much, ſo as thereby to be brought to Repentance, yet however there is ſuch a Witneſs, even of all this, in all Mens Hearts; and thus they are led on unto Repentance, would they but ſee their Way, and follow their Guide.

CHAP.

Chap. 8.

CHAP. VIII.

A particular Enumeration of ſome eminent common Mercies, throughout Mens Lives: And Aggravations of ſinning againſt them.

THE improvement of all this ſhall be an Expoſtulation (as here the Apoſtle carries it) with ſinful and impenitent Men, for going on to ſin againſt all this Mercy; together with an Aggravation of their ſinfulneſs hereby. Men, if Young, do uſually take the advantage of this their precious Time, (which out of much long-ſuffering in God is vouchſafed to them) and of all thoſe precious Opportunities and Bleſſings they enjoy, to improve them only, in reaping and gathering in unto themſelves the Pleaſures of Sins; making the Time of Youth and middle Age their Harveſt of Sinning, and yet think to eſcape by repenting afterwards: and then when Old, after they have already enjoyed a long and fair Sun-ſhine Day to have turned to God in, and wherein to have ſown much Seed to the Spirit, the comfort whereof they might now have reaped; yet as they have altogether neglected this to do, all their Life, ſo in old Age they go on to do ſo ſtill, even whilſt they ſee they have any Day left, be it never ſo near the ſetting: and do chooſe rather deſperately to venture their Eſtate in the World to come, upon the Riches of his Mercy pardoning, (though without all care and endeavour to change their Hearts or Lives) upon the experience they have had of the Riches of his Mercy forbearing them in this World, thinking to find him the ſame in both. With all ſuch, let me reaſon a little, and from the Riches of God's Goodneſs, Patience, &c. ſpent upon them, at once expoſtulate with them for their Impenitency, and aggravate to them their Sinfulneſs, and alſo, if poſſible, prevail with them to go on to deſpiſe it thus no longer. And if there be any Principle of common Ingenuity, any Spark (I do not ſay of Grace, but of Goodneſs of Nature) left unextinguiſh'd, me-thinks it ſhould affect you, and do ſome good on you e're I have done.

And to that end, conſider a little, and compare together God's loving Kindneſſes towards you, and your unkind Dealings towards him.

To begin at the beginning of thy Being: how much Riches of Goodneſs were there laid and buried in thy Foundation? when the firſt Corner-ſtone was laid, when thou wert made a Man, (beſides the coſt which hath been ſpent upon this Building ſince) and curſed as thou art, even that very Foundation was laid in bloody Iniquities, in which thou wert conceived; and the very Materials of Soul and Body, thou conſiſteſt of, being tempered with Sin, like the Stone in the Wall, and Beam out of the Timber, cry out every moment to God againſt thee, Raſe it, Raſe it, even to the very Ground. Hab. 2. 10, 11. Pſal. 137. 7.

Conſider how but the other Day thou wert meer Nothing, and when an infinite number that never were nor ſhall be, were in as great a poſſibility of Being as thou (for when he made this World, he could have laid it aſide wholly, and created Millions of other Worlds) yet he choſe Thee to have a Room in this, but one World, (for he means to make no more) and this World could have ſtood without Thee, and did before thou wert, and ſhall do when art gone: yet he called Thee forth out of Nothing, and by his Almighty Power, bad thee ſtand forth when there was no need of thee. I ſay, he choſe Thee to have a Being: for as there is an election of Perſons to Salvation, ſo out of things that were not, and were but entia poſſibilia, unto Being. And Wretch that thou art, if thou repenteſt not, thou deſtroyeſt what God hath made, and hadſt better have kept Nothing ſtill, and never have peept out; or elſe to skulk into the firſt Nothing again, for thou art loſt; better never to have been born.

2. Conſider yet more Goodneſs. Thou mighteſt have been admitted into the loweſt Form of Creatures, have been a Worm, a Flea, a Flie, which we Men fillip and cruſh to Death at Pleaſure; but to be made a Man, created one of the States, Barons, Lords of the World; the firſt Hour admitted into the higheſt Order; crowned a King in the Womb, as David ſays of Man, *Pſal.*8.5. made a little lower than the Angels, but crowned with Glory and Honour; made to have Dominion over all the Works of his Hands. The one half of thee is more worth than a whole World, [thy Soul] as Chriſt ſays, that went to the Price of Souls; upon which God hath beſtowed an Eternity of being, and made it the Picture of his Eſſence, his Image, when other Creatures were but his Footſteps. And thy Body that other Piece, and indeed but the Caſe, the Sheath (as Daniel's Phraſe is, and the Chaldee hath it, Dan. 7. 15.) Of thee what a curious Workmanſhip is it? wonderfully and fearfully made, as David ſays, Pſal. 139. 15. curiouſly wrought in the lower Parts of the Earth. So there he calls the Womb: becauſe, as curious Workmen, when they have ſome choice piece in hand, perfect it in private, and then bring it forth to Light for Men to gaze at: And God out of a Tear, a Drop, he hath limned out the Epitome
Eccleſ. 12. 2. of the whole World; the Index of all the Creatures, Sun, Moon, Stars, are to be found in thee. And yet Wretch as thou art, thou art withal the Epitome of Hell, and broughteſt into the World with thee the Seeds and Principles of all the Villanies that have been acted in the World; and if thou repenteſt not, thou hadſt better have been a Toad or Serpent, the hatefulleſt of Creatures; and wouldſt change thy Condition with them one Day.

3. Being a Man, haſt thou all thy Members that belong unto a Man? it is becauſe he wrote them all in his Book, Pſal. 139. 16. If he had left out an Eye in his common Roll-Book, thou hadſt wanted it; is not that a Mercy? ask the Blind. If thou hadſt wanted thoſe Windows to look out at, thy Body would have been a Dungeon, the World a Priſon. If a Tongue (which is thy Glory) or an Ear, thou hadſt lived among Men, as a Beaſt among Men. And yet when God gave thee all theſe, what did he but put Weapons into an Enemies Hand? for haſt thou not uſed all theſe, as Weapons of Unrighteouſneſs? Inſomuch as the Tongue, but one Member, is by the Apoſtle called, a World of Iniquity; and if thou repenteſt not, thou hadſt better (as Chriſt ſays) have entered into the World without an Eye, an Ear, a Tongue, than with theſe to go for ever into Hell.

4. When thou wert taken out of the Womb, (where thou didſt remain but whileſt thou wert a framing) what a ſtately Palace hath he brought thee into, [the World] which thou findeſt prepared, and ready furniſhed with all things for thy Maintenance, as Canaan was to the Children of Iſrael; a ſtately Houſe thou builedſt not, Trees thou plantedſt not, a rich Canopy ſpangled, ſpread as a Curtain over thy Head; he ſets up a Taper for thee to work by [the Sun] till thou art weary, Pſal. 104. 23. and then it goes down without thy bidding, for it knows its going down, ver. 19. then he draws the Curtains over half the World, that Men may go to reſt, Thou cauſeſt Darkneſs, and it is Night, ver. 20. An Houſe this World is, ſo curiouſly contrived, that to every Room of it, even to every poor Village, Springs do come as Pipes to find thee Water. So Pſal. 104. 10, 11. The Pavement of which Houſe thou treadeſt on, brings forth thy Food, ver. 14. Bread for Strength, Wine to chear thy Heart, Oyl to make thy Face to ſhine, ver. 15. Which three are there ſynecdochically put for all things needful to Strength, Ornament, and Delight. The very Chambers of that Houſe (as David calls them) drop Fatneſs, and water the Earth, ver. 13. He wheels the Heavens about, and ſpins out time for thee: every Moment of which time brings forth ſome Bleſſing or other, and no one is barren. Therefore Pſal. 65. 11. the Year is ſaid to be crowned with Goodneſs: a Diadem of Goodneſs encircles it round. And of theſe common Mercies which the pooreſt do enjoy, Some underſtand that Speech of the Apoſtle, 1 Tim. 6. 17. Who gives us all things richly to enjoy. In the all things, pointing to the general rich Benefits of this Univerſe, which the living God beſtows upon us the pooreſt Believers Believers as well as rich, whoſe Pride in Riches he doth by that Conſideration quell. And yet thou haſt filled this World thou thus art brought into, with nothing but Rebellions, as God hath done with Bleſſings; and haſt piled up Sins to Heaven; and thou haſt preſſed all theſe Armies of Bleſſings thou findeſt the World filled with, to fight againſt their Maker, under the Devil's Banner, whom thy Wickedneſs ſets up as the God of this World. And as the Year is crowned with Goodneſs, ſo thy Years with Wickedneſs, and no Moment is barren, but all thy Imaginations are evil continually: Yea, thou haſt ſinned againſt Heaven and Earth, having ſubjected the whole Creation unto Vanity, laden the Earth, and filled it ſo with Wickedneſs, that it groans, the Axeltree of it is even ready to crack under thee, and the Ground thou treadeſt on to ſpue thee out. Chap. 8. Rom. 8.

5. Since thou cameſt into the World, what a long time hath God ſuffered thee to live in it; he hath not ſpared thee three Years only (as he did the Figtree) but thirty, forty. And when thou firſt madeſt bold to thruſt forth thy traiterous Head into the World, Death (which thy Sin brought into the World with it) might have arreſted thee, and told thee, this World was no Place for thee, for Hell is only our own Place, Acts 1. 25. thou ſhouldeſt have been executed the firſt Day. And is not ſo much time of Eaſe from Puniſhment infinite Mercy? Caſt but your Thoughts upon the Angels that fell, that were caſt to Hell upon the firſt Moment of their ſinning; do but think with your ſelves, what they would give to have ſo much time cut out of that Eternity they are to run through, and to have it ſet apart for Eaſe, and to be void of Torment. If the rich Man in Hell, made it ſuch a great Suit, and counted it ſo great a Favour to have but one Drop of Water (which could but for a little while, ſcarce more than a Moment) have cooled and eaſed, not his whole Body, but the tip of his Tongue only; how much more would he have thought it Mercy, to have lived ſo many Years again as he had done free from Torment? what is it then for thee, to live ſo many Years free from the falling of the leaſt Drop of that Wrath, whereof the full Vials ſhould have been poured out many Years ago? The ſame Law was out againſt us, which was out againſt the Angels; that Day thou eateſt, thou ſhalt die the Death: what puts the Difference? the Apoſtle tells us, his Long-ſuffering to us-ward: not to them: for in chap. 2. 4. he had told us, that he ſpared not the Angels which fell, but poſted and threw them into Hell as ſoon as they had ſinned. 2 Pet. 3. 9.

6. But further, is this all? hath it been barely a time of Eaſe given thee, a time of Reprieval? No, it hath been more, Space to repent, and ſo to obtain thy Pardon in, Rev. 2. 21. And as it hath been more than Eaſe of Torment unto thee, ſo alſo conſider it hath been more than Slackneſs in him that hath afforded it to thee, as the Apoſtle there doth tell us. It is not that he hath took no notice of thy offending him, but he is ſenſible of every idle Thought, of every Oath, vain Word, and as the Scripture tells us, he is pained at the very Heart, inſomuch as he repents that ever he made thee; he is angry with thee every Day thou riſeſt, every time he looks on thee; when ever he meets thee going into the Tavern to be drunk, the Whore-houſe to be unclean, when he meets thee reeling in the Streets, he hath much ado to forbear killing thee, as he had to forbear Moſes when he met him in the Inn: He is ready to have a blow at thee, and it ſhould not need be any great Stroak, or fetching his Arm about; if he did but blow on thee, thou wert conſumed. To ſuffer thee to live, doth therefore coſt him much Riches of Patience; but to cut thee off, need coſt him nothing, he can do that with Eaſe. But further, all is joined with a Willingneſs that thou ſhouldſt repent, and not periſh, as that Place tells thee. Gen. 6. Pſal. 7. 11.

It were much Mercy for a Traitor to be reprieved, to have a Leaſe of his Life for twenty Years, though there were no Hope nor Means of obtaining his final Pardon after that time ſpent, and this alſo, though but for one Treaſon, and though all that time of his Reprieval he carries and behaves himſelf never ſo obediently. But unto thee, this time hath been more than a longer Day of Life, and putting off the Execution (which for the Guilt of that firſt Rebellion ſhould have been acted on thee in the Womb) it hath been time to repent in. And yet conſider if this time of thy Reprieval hath not made thee ſo much the more rebellious? and if thou haſt not ſpent all this time in making up the Meaſure of thine Iniquity full? and hath it been Willingneſs only in God that thou ſhouldeſt not periſh? yea more, joyned with waiting alſo, when it ſhould once be, thinking the time long, as longing and deſiring that thou wouldſt repent, that he might pardon thee. Thus Jer. 13. ult. God expreſſeth himſelf, When ſhall it once be? yea, and conſider how many Days of Paiment have been ſet, and how many Promiſes made, and broken, all by thee, and yet ſtill he waiteth unto Wonderment. Thou receivedſt Preſs-Money at thy Baptiſm, when thou didſt promiſe to forſake the Devil and all his Works, and to begin to ſerve him, when thou ſhouldſt begin to diſcern between Good and Evil. But no ſooner did the Light of Knowledg dawn in thy Heart, but thou beganſt to fight againſt him; and thy firſt Thoughts to this Day have been only and continually evil. And then (haply) in thy younger Years, before thou hadſt taſted of the Pleaſures of Sin, he gave thee an inkling, by means of thy Education, of his Goodneſs, and of that Happineſs to be had in him, and thou hadſt the firſt Offer of him, e're thy tender Years were poiſoned by the World; and he hath dealt with thee again and again, both by his Word and Spirit; not waited only, but wooed thee, and hath been a Suiter to thy Heart long: and I appeal to your Hearts, how many Promiſes you have made him, of turning from all your Rebellions to him, after ſuch and ſuch a Sermon, as were brought powerfully home; In ſuch a Sickneſs, and in ſuch a Strait, thy Conſcience knows full well: And ſtill God hath made Trial of thee, and given thee a longer Day; and though thou haſt broke with him again and again, yet he hath forborn thee again and again, and hath waited this twenty, thirty, forty, fifty, ſixty Years, when thou ſhouldeſt come in, and be as good as thy Word, and ſtill thou haſt failed him. And yet behold and wonder, and ſtand confounded at the Riches of his Long-ſuffering, that after ſo many Years Expence and Promiſes broken by thee, Expectations failed in him, and many Mockeries of him, after all this, he is yet willing to accept of the Remainder, if thou wouldſt ſpend the reſt of the time left thee in the Fleſh, according to his Will, as the Apoſtle ſpeaks, 1 Pet. 4. 3. even to loſe Principal, Uſe and all, for what is paſt, and requires but the ſame Compoſition which was propounded the firſt Day; yea and not only ſo, but with Promiſe to become a Debtor unto thee, to beſtow further Riches on thee than ever yet thou ſaweſt, or art able to conceive: yea and all this, when he could have his Penny-worths out of thee another way, and loſe not one Farthing by thee, but by puniſhing thee in Hell, recover all to the utmoſt Farthing.

7. Neither hath it been barely and ſimply an Act of Patience and Forbearance, though joined with this Willingneſs, thou ſhouldſt not periſh; or merely a permiſſive Act of ſuffering thee to live. But God ſhews forth yet more Riches of Goodneſs joined with this Long-ſuffering; in him ye live, and move, and have your being; And doſt thou live in him only? nay thou liveſt on him alſo, upon his Coſt and Charges; I have hung upon thee (ſays David) from my Mother's Womb. And conſider what thy Life is, that of ſo ſmall a bottom, he ſhould ſpin out ſo long a Thred! Had he not drawn it out by his immediate Power, as the Spider doth her Web out of her own Bowels, it had been at an End the ſecond Minute; to maintain that radical Moiſture, that Oil that feeds the Lamp, and Light of thy Life, that radicale Balſamum; this is as great a Miracle as the maintaining the Oyl in the Cruze of that poor famiſhed Widow. And further yet, hath he maintained thee only? Nay more, hath he not defended thee, took thy part, protected thee, took thee under his Wing, as the Hen doth her Chickens, to ſhelter thee from thoſe many Dangers thy Life hath been expoſed unto? Otherwiſe, how many ways, e're this, hadſt thou been ſnatch'd away out of the Land of the Living? Is thy Caſe the Caſe of the Fig-tree only, (which before we mentioned) that when God cried, Cut it down, another cried, Spare it? but there have been many have cried, Cut thee down, and God hath cried, Spare thee: There is never a Minute but the Devil would have had a Blow at thy Life, as he longed to have had at Job's. That thou, a poor lump of Fleſh, ſhouldſt walk through, and in the midſt of ſuch an Hoſt of fierce and cruel Enemies, whoſe Hearts are ſwelled with Malice lice at thee, and God ſhould ſay to him, concerning thee, as he did to Laban concerning Jacob, Touch not this Man! And yet if thou wert not liable to his Malice and Power, yet, Chap. 8.

Conſider how many Dangers and Caſualties beſides, which thou haſt been kept in, and from; as Falls, Drowning, Killing, many waies: how often have the Arrows of Death come whisking by thee, took away thoſe next thee, (haply of thy Kindred, Brother, Siſter, Yoke-fellow, of the ſame Houſe, Family with thy ſelf) and yet have miſſed thee? And if we look no farther than theſe Days of Mortality we have lived in; two great Plagues in this Kingdom, how have the moſt of us all here ſurvived, and now the third is increaſing and growing upon us? To have our Lives in ſuch dear Years of time, when to have our Life for a Prey is Mercy enough, as Jeremy told Baruch. That theſe Arrows ſhould flie round about us, over our Heads, and miſs us! that God's Arreſts ſhould ſeize upon Men, walking, talking with us, and ſpare us! How often, many other ways, hath thy Neck been upon the Block, and the Axe held over, and yet hath fallen beſides! To go no farther than thy own Body, the Humors thereof, if God ſhould not reſtrain them, would overflow and drown it, as the Waters would the Earth, if God ſhould not ſay to them, Stay your proud Waves. And when in a Sickneſs they have been let out, yet God hath kept a Sluce, that ſo much ſhould break forth, and no more, as ſhould purge and waſh the Body, and make it more healthful; as the overflowing of Nilus doth the Ground. And when, at ſuch a time, thy Body hath been brought low and weak, and like a crazy rotten Ship in a Storm, taking in Water on all ſides, ſo that all the Phyſicians in the World could not have ſtopt thoſe Leaks; he hath rebuked Wind and Sea, hath careened, mended thee, and launched thee into the World again, as whole, as ſound, and ſtrong as ever; and God hath ſaid, as Job 33. that Thou ſhouldſt not die. In a word, if thou conſider but what thy Life is, and the Dangers it is ſubject to, thou wilt acknowledg it is as great a wonder to preſerve it, as to ſee a Glaſs that hath been in continual uſe, gone through many Hands, and hath had many Knocks and Falls, to be kept for forty, fifty, ſixty Years whole and unbroken: God hath carried thy Life in his Hand, as it were a Candle in a paper Lanthorn in a ſtrong windy Night, and kept it from being extinct, when as we often ſee in many, that a little Cold comes in, (but at a little cranny) and blows their Candle out, as Job ſpeaks, Chap. 21. 17.

Jer. 45. 5.

And, 8. How have theſe Years and Hours of thy Time been filled up with His Goodneſs? and with how many Comforts? For a Traitor to live, though but upon Bread and Water all his Days, what Favour is it? And ſo hadſt thou lived all this time never ſo miſerably, though all thy Days thou hadſt eaten thy Bread in Darkneſs, and hadſt had much Sorrow with thy Sickneſs, (as Solomon ſpeaks.) Some there are, who, as Job ſpeaks, die in the bitterneſs of their Souls, and never eat with pleaſure, ſcarce ſeeing a good Day; and if this had been thy caſe, yet this had been infinite Mercy. Even whatſoever is on this ſide Hell, is Mercy. In Lam. 3. 22. ſay they, in the worſt eſtate the Church was ever in on Earth under the Old Teſtament, It is thy [Mercies,] not Mercy only, but multitude of Mercies are ſhewn us, that we are not conſumed, becauſe his Mercies are renewed every Morning. If at the brink of Hell, and not in, is Mercy. But hath he not all this while filled thy Heart (put for the inwards of Man's Body) with Food and Gladneſs, as the Apoſtle ſpeaks, Acts 14. 17? It were infinite to go over the particular Kinds of common Comforts, which God vouchſafes Men here: not half the Riches of Goodneſs is yet told: It would require an Age to make an Inventory of them.

Eccleſ. 5. 17.

Job 21. 25.

Haſt thou a Houſe in the World to hide thy Head in, and keep thee from the Injuries of the Weather? (which was more than Chriſt had) God is thy Landlord, (though it may be thou payeſt him no Rent;) he it is that builds the Houſe, Pſal. 127. 1. Haſt thou a Bed to lie upon? he makes it, eſpecially in thy Sickneſs, Pſal. 41. 3. Haſt thou Sleep? (which is the Nurſe of Nature, the Parentheſis of all thy Cares and Griefs,) he rocks thee aſleep every Night; and as he gives thee a Houſe, ſo he gives thee Reſt. It is God keeps off thoſe Gnats of diſtracting Cares and Griefs, and Thoughts and Terrors of Conſcience

Book XII.

ſcience would buz about a Man, and keep one continually waking. And when thou ſleepeſt, is thy Sleep pleaſant to thee? God makes it ſo. Haſt thou Clothes to cover thy Nakedneſs? read old Iacob's Indentures, Gen. 28. 20. and thou ſhalt ſee by them whoſe finding they are at; If thou wilt give me Rayment, that is one of his Conditions there mentioned. Yea, do thy Clothes keep thee warm? even this is attributed to him, Job 37. 17. He fills thee, feeds thee, ſpreads thy Table, ſerves thee, fills thy Cup, as David deſcribes his Goodneſs, Pſal. 23. 5. and gives thee thy Meat in due ſeaſon; and hath not failed thee a Meals Meat, but thou haſt had it at thy appointed time, as Job ſpeaks. And haſt thou Health? which is the Salt to all theſe Bleſſings, (without which thou wouldſt ſay, thou hadſt no pleaſure in them) He is the God of thy Health, and keeps off Diſeaſes. I will put none of thoſe Diſeaſes on thee; I am the Exod. 15. 26. Lord who healeth thee; that is, do preſerve thee from them, which elſe would ſeize upon thee. And theſe Mercies he vouchſafeth unto you that are the pooreſt, and loadeth you with theſe and the like Benefits every day, Pſal. 68. 19.

But haſt thou Riches added to theſe, and Abundance? The Bleſſing of God maketh rich, Prov. 10. 22. Though thou hadſt them by Birth, yet he made thoſe Friends and Parents of thine, but Feoffees in truſt for thee; They were no more, it was God who bequeathed them, Eccleſ. 2. laſt. Or whether thou haſt got them ſince by thine own Induſtry, it is he gives thee power to get Wealth, Deut. 8. 18. Prov. 12. 24. and out of a ſmall Eſtate maketh Men great, Job. 8. 7. It is he that by his Providence hath ſtop'd the ſecret Iſſues and Drains of Expence, at which other Men's Eſtates run out; hath ſtopt that Hole in the bottom of the Bag, as the Prophet ſpeaks. And with theſe Riches, hath he given thee a Heart to uſe them? This, as it is a farther Mercy, Eccleſ. 5. 19. and Chap. 6. 2. ſo it is ſaid to be from him, as it is noted there.

Or, haſt thou Credit (which is better than Riches: ſo ſays Solomon, Prov. 22. 1.) it is God who gives it, not thy Wiſdom, Parts, or Worth: Eccleſ. 9. 11. Favour is not always to Men of Skill; that is, not acceptation of what they do, without a farther Shine and Bleſſing from God. Therefore beſides the Gift of Wiſdom, he gave a further promiſe of Honour alſo unto Solomon, 2 Chron. 1. 11. It is God who faſhions Mens Opinions. The Apoſtle prays Rom. 15. 31. to God, his Service might be accepted of the Saints, though no Service was like to be more acceptable, for it was the gathering and bringing in of Alms and Relief to them. It is he rules Mens Tongues, bids Men bleſs, as well as he bad Shimei curſe: and he hath kept thee from ſuch groſs Sins, which as Flies, would have putrified the Ointment of thy good Name, who alſo conceals thoſe thou haſt committed, and hides thee from the ſtrife of Tongues, Job. 5. 21.

Haſt thou Friends, or do any love thee? (wherein much of the Comfort of our Lives conſiſts; and therefore David ſays of Jonathan, 2 Sam. 1. 26. Thou wert pleaſant to me) it is God who gives favour in Mens Eyes; ſo he did Joſeph, Gen. 39. 21. If any Man or Creature doth thee a Kindneſs, he toucheth their Hearts, (as it is ſaid of the Men who clave to Saul) and viſits for thee; He made the Ægyptians to be beyond all reaſon the Iſraelites Friends, gave them Favour in their Eyes, as the Text tells us. And hence, Gen. 33. 10. Jacob ſayes, He ſaw the Face of God, in reconciled Eſau's Face, for God's Favour appeared in his Look. He put you into your Callings, Ranks and Stations, gives you all your Skill, Succeſs in them; The meaneſt of Trades, as to Sow, and Plough, and Threſh, they are from the Lord, who is wonderful in working, (Iſa. 28. from 23 to the end) even as well as the Skill of the moſt curious Ingraver, Limner, or Embroyderer; as of Bezaleel the Scripture ſpeaks; God was his Maſter, taught him. Haſt thou enlarged Parts and Gifts, for higher Imployments? it is not thy Birth or Age, hath acquired them unto thee: Job 32. 8, 9. Great Men are not always wiſe, therefore it goes not by Birth; nor have the Aged always Underſtanding; nor goes it only by Experience, but it is the Inſpiration of the Almighty gives Underſtanding. And haſt a Calling anſwerable to thy Parts, to be a Scholar, and ſo haſt thy Mind Mind enriched and enobled with the beſt and choiceſt Jewel the World hath, Wiſdom and Knowledg; whereby the Mind is elevated as much above other Mens, as they are above Beaſts? God hath been thy great Tutor. The Mind of Man is God's Candle, and he maketh wiſer than a Man's Teachers, as he did Moſes in Egyptian learning, Daniel, David. Chap. 7. Prov. 20. 27.

To conclude, Haſt thou comfort in all theſe? in Riches, Learning, Credit, Wife, Children, Meat, Drink, &c. He puts in all the Sugar, Delight and Pleaſure, that eſpecially depends on him, even to faſhion the Heart to all theſe. As Aire lights not without the Sun, nor Wood heats not without Fire; ſo neither doth thy Condition comfort thee without God. And therefore, Acts 14. 17. it is ſaid, He filled their Hearts, as with Food, ſo, with Gladneſs.

And beſides all theſe, conſider the many peculiar Paſſages and Turnings of his Providence towards thee for thy Good; the Workings of things together, ever and anon to do thee a good Turn; the packing and plotting all for thee, better than thou couldſt have plotted for thy ſelf: as thy Relief in many Straits, Succeſs in many Buſineſſes. He works all our Works in us, and for us, as Iſaiah ſpeaks, Iſa. 26. Thou mayſt ſay he hath taken ſuch ſpecial Care and Providence of me, as if he had regarded no Man elſe in the World.

And now when thou haſt conſidered all, bethink thy ſelf withal a little, of thy dealings towards him: what have been the Effects and Fruits of all this Goodnnſs? hold up thy Head, Man, look God in the Face. It is well yet, that Shame begins to cover thee. How hath that his Patience and Long-ſuffering, vouchſafing thee ſpace to repent, wrought with thee? how nigh to Repentance hath it brought thee? Such is the perverſeneſs of Man's Nature, as Solomon tells us, Eccleſ. 8. 11. that becauſe Sentence againſt an evil Work is not preſently executed, therefore the Hearts of the Sons of Men are fully ſet to do evil: Becauſe God defers Puniſhing, they defer Repenting: thou thinkeſt to ſpend the moſt precious of thy Time and Strength in Sinning, and to give God the Dregs, the Bottom, the laſt Sands, thy Dotage, which thy very ſelf and Friends will be weary of. And all theſe Bleſſings and Comforts which God hath vouchſafed thee, how haſt thou uſed them againſt him? This Oil which ſhould have been Fuel to thy Thankfulneſs, hath encreaſed the Fire of thy Luſts; and thy Luſts have conſumed all, Jam. 4. The Riches he hath given, thou haſt made Idols of, and ſacrificed thy deareſt, morning, daily Thoughts and Affections unto, as God complains, Ezek. 16. from the 15, and ſo on: [His Meat] (as at the 29. ver. there he calls it) thou ſacrificedſt to thy Belly, which thou haſt made thy God; thy Strength to Women: the Wealth he hath given you, you have made uſe of, but to live at an higher Rate of Sinning, and to procure the ſweeteſt Bits, the daintieſt and moſt coſtly Sins: The edg of that Sword of Power God hath put into thy Hand, thou haſt turned againſt him and his, haply both his Children and Miniſters; ſo that God, by giving thee all theſe, hath but made thee the more able to offend him, and hath ſtrengthned an Enemy; and his ſparing thee thus long, hath but made thee more bold to do it; all his mercies have but fortified thy Heart againſt him.

Do ye requite the Lord thus, ye fooliſh People and unwiſe? as Moſes expoſtulates the caſe, Deut. 32. 6. As Chriſt ſaid to the Jews, For which of all my good Works do ye ſtone me? So ſay I to you, for which of all his Mercies is it ye ſin againſt him? What, to fight againſt him with his own Weapons; to betray all he gives you into the Devil's (his Enemy's) hands? What Iniquity did you ever find in him, thus to deal? God will one Day thus expoſtulate his Cauſe with you, and heap Coals of Fire upon all your Heads, (if that you turn not) becauſe you have rendred him Evil for Good: and all theſe Mercies, thus abuſed, will be as ſo many Coals to make Hell-Fire the hotter. And to reaſon this point yet further with you out of the Text, and from what Arguments it will after all this afford to work upon you.

Book XIII

Conſider, firſt, what it is thou doeſt: whileſt thus thou goeſt on, thou art a Deſpiſer of the Riches of his Goodneſs. That which is oppoſite to Goodneſs, muſt needs be tranſcendently Evil. What, art thou Evil, becauſe God is Good? and ſo much the more Evil, by how much more he is Good; ſurely there muſt needs be an unexhauſted Treaſure of Wickedneſs in thee, which will alſo cauſe in the end a Treaſure of Wrath in him.

What, and ſin againſt Mercy, Patience, Long-ſuffering, added to Goodneſs? Mercy of all Attributes, as the richeſt ſo the moſt glorious: for it is that God glories in: in the abuſing of which therefore he thinks himſelf moſt debaſed; of all Attributes the tendereſt: What, kick againſt his Bowels? ſo are his Mercies ſtiled: Canſt hit him no where elſe but there? To deſpiſe a Man's Wiſdom, Power, Learning, is not ſo much as to deſpiſe his Love. What canſt thou imagine will become of thee, when thou comeſt to die? What is it thou wilt then come to plead and cry for? O, Mercy, Mercy! why, Wretch that thou art, it is Mercy thou haſt ſinned againſt. Riches of Mercy and Patience abuſed, turns into Fury. I may allude to that ſpeech, 1 Sam. 2. 25. If a Man ſin againſt his Brother, the Judg ſhall judg him; but if againſt God, who ſhall plead for him? So, hadſt thou ſinned againſt any other Attribute, Mercy might have pleaded for thee; but if againſt Mercy it ſelf, what ſhall?

Well, if thou goeſt on thus to do ſo ſtill, thou haſt a hard Heart; it argues the greateſt hardneſs of all other; that is the ſecond. You uſe not (however it comes to paſs) to deal thus with the worſt of Men, not with Sinners like your ſelves; but to them that love you, you render Love again, Luke 6. 33. and will you deal thus with God? Is it a ſmall thing to weary Men, but you muſt weary God alſo? ſays Iſa. 7. 13. He thought it infinitely leſs to abuſe Men than God; but you carry your ſelves as Men to Men, but as Devils towards God; herein ye have not the Hearts of Men in you; not Principles of common humanity, whereby ye differ from Beaſts. The Cords of Love are called the Cords of a Man, Hoſ. 11. 6. the Spirit of Man breaks, melts under Kindneſs. Beaſts indeed ye uſe to prick with Goads, but the Cords of a Man are the Cords of Love; no Principle being more deeply engraven in Mens Hearts than this, to do good to thoſe who do good to you, Mat. 5. 46. Nay, would ye had herein yet but the Hearts of Beaſts; The Oxe knows his Owner, and the Aſs his Maſter's Crib; but my People have rebelled againſt me. A Sin ſo much againſt Nature, that he calls upon thoſe Creatures, who have no other kind of being then of Nature, viz. the Heavens to ſtand aſtoniſh'd at it. But as Nature elevated by Grace, riſeth higher than it ſelf, ſo being poiſoned with Sin, it is caſt below it ſelf; Sins againſt it ſelf, and the Principles which are begotten in and with it ſelf: if it were not ſo, how were it poſſible thou ſhouldſt hate him who never did thee hurt? and go on to wound him, who weepeth over thee? and deſpiſe that in him moſt, which ſeeks to ſave thee? and load him with Sins (as Amos 2. 13.) who loads thee daily with his Mercies, Pſal. 68. 19.

Iſa. 1. 2.

There is a third Conſideration the Text ſuggeſts, to ſhew the fearfulneſs of thy Sin in this reſpect; and that is, that thou goeſt on every Minute, thou continueſt in Sin and impenitency, by deſpiſing his Goodneſs, to treaſure up Wrath againſt the Day of Wrath. To ſin againſt Mercy, of all other encreaſeth Wrath; thou muſt pay Treaſures for Treaſures ſpent. As thou laviſhly ſpendeſt Riches of Mercy, ſo God will recover Riches of Glory out of thee: God will not loſe by thee, but will reckon with thee in Wrath for every moment of Patience ſpent: For every Sand of Long-ſuffering that runs out, he drops in a drop of Wrath into his Vialls, and it will prove a Treaſure, ſuch a Treaſure as ſhall bring in an eternal Revenue of Glory unto God, of all his Glory loſt, and Riches ſpent, with advantage; ſuch a Treaſure as will ask an Eternity of Time to be ſpent upon thy Deſtruction, and yet be never emptied or made leſs; and the longer thou goeſt on, the greater heap it will ſwell unto. And doſt thou know and conſider how faſt this Treaſure fills, and how much the longer thou goeſt on to add to it, ſtill the laſt Year more then all all the Years before? every minutes Impenitency adding to this Heap and Sum, as new Figures added in a Sum uſe to do; the firſt is but One, the ſecond makes it Ten, the third an Hundred, the fourth a Thouſand; and what a Sum will this grow to?

Ah but thou wilt ſay, Tuſh, I am in Proſperity, in Health, Wealth, and Eaſe, and to Day ſhall be as to be as to Morrow, and much more abundant, Iſa. 56. 12.

Well, but fourthly, conſider out of the Text, that there will come a Day at laſt, the Morrow whereof will be a Day of Wrath: It is treaſuring up now, but is not brought forth till the Day of Wrath, till which Day thou mayeſt go on and proſper: And thus Job giving us the Reaſon why wicked Men proſper, ſays, chap. 21. They are reſerved to the Day of Wraths; in the Plural, becauſe Treaſures are laid up againſt then. Thou art yet ſpared, becauſe thy Sins are not yet full, and ſo that Treaſure is not yet full, as the Sins of the Amorites were not; and ſo all this thy preſent Proſperity fits thee but for Hell. So, Rom. 9. 22. they are ſaid to be Veſſels fitted for Deſtruction, by Long-ſuffering. And ſo Nahum tells us, they are but as Stubble laid out in the Sun a drying, till it be fully dry, Nah. 1. 10. that it may burn the better; and like Grapes that are let to hang in the Sun-ſhine till they be ripe, Rev. 15. 16. and ſo thou for the Winepreſs of God's Wrath.

But thy ſenſeleſs Heart may hap to ſay, I ſee no ſuch thing, and theſe are but threats: I think ſo, therefore it is ſaid in the Text, that it is a Treaſure; which, as Treaſures uſe to be, is hid till that day comes, and then revealed, as the words of the Text have it. For though thou ſeeſt not this Day a coming, yet God, who ſits in heaven, ſees thy Day a coming, as David ſpeaks, Pſal. 37. 13. who there is therefore ſaid to ſee it, to ſhew that the Sinner himſelf ſees it not. And it is coming faſter than thou art aware of it, 2 Pet. 2. 3. Damnation ſlumbereth not, though thou dreameſt not of it; lingreth not: as an Hue and Cry, it is ſent out, and is on its courſe, and will in the end overtake thee; and that when thou leaſt thinkeſt of it, as a Thief in the Night; when thou art aſleep, yet dreameſt not of it, 2 Theſſ. 5. when thou art leaſt prepared for it, as in the old World, when they were eating and drinking: As God watcheth when his Child is at the beſt and ripeſt for Heaven, and then takes him to himſelf; ſo he will watch thee to take thee at the worſt and ripeſt for Hell, and give thee no time to prepare; They go down to Hell in a Moment, Pſal. 73. 19.

Chap. 1.

AN Unregenerate Man's Guiltiness BEFORE GOD

In Respect of SIN and PUNISHMENT.

BOOK XIII.

Of the Punishment of Sin in Hell; that the Wrath of God is the immediate Cause of that Punishment.

Heb. 10. 30, 31. For we know him that hath said, Vengeance belongeth unto me, I will recompence saith the Lord. And again, The Lord shall judg his People. It is a fearful thing to fall into the Hands of the living God.

2 Thes. 1. 8, 9. In flaming Fire, taking Vengeance on them that know not God, and that obey not the Gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ: Who shall be punished with everlasting Destruction from the Presence of the Lord, and from the Glory of his Power.

Rom. 9. 22. What if God willing to shew his Wrath, and to make his Power known, endured with much Long-suffering, the Vessels of Wrath fitted to Destruction.

CHAP. I.

The Subject and General Division of the Discourse.

WE have seen how sinful and guilty every Man is in his unregenerate Condition; what last remains, is to consider the Greatness of that Punishment, which all this Sinfulness deserves: a Punishment so great, that it cannot be comprehended by our Thoughts, nor ever be sufficiently expressed: For what Hell and Destruction are, is a Mystery, as well as what Heaven is: And the true and proper Notion or Conception of either, are a Riddle to the most of Men. As Eye hath not seen, Ear not heard, nor hath it entred into the Heart of Man (the Natural ral Man) what God hath prepared for thoſe that love him; ſo, nor what God hath prepared for them that hate him. For it is the ſame, and no other Puniſhment but that which is prepared for the Devil and his Angels, as Chriſt ſays. And what it can be that ſhould torment them, or be the immediate Executioner of Vengeance on them, the Imagination of Man confined to worldly Agents and Inſtruments, cannot divine or take in.

Other Scriptures go Metaphorically to work, in ſetting out this Puniſhment by things outwardly, ſenſibly dreadful. But theſe Scriptures (of all other) that are my Texts, do more plainly, and without Parables declare it to us, in its immediate Cauſes, and from them do leave us to infer the Fearfulneſs.

For inſtance, other Scriptures ſet it out to us as a Priſon, 1 Pet. 3. 19. large enough, to be ſure, to hold Men and Devils, [The Wicked ſhall be turned into Hell, and all the Nations that forget God, Pſal. 9. 17.] As alſo by their being retained in Chains of Darkneſs; 2 Pet. 2. 4. where Men muſt lie till they have paid the utmoſt Farthing, Mat. 5. 26. where is nothing but Darkneſs, utter Darkneſs, Blackneſs of Darkneſs, Jude 4. that is, an emptineſs of all Good, not a Beam of Light to all Eternity. Alſo a place of Torment, Luke 6. 48. where there is not admitted one drop to cool ones Tongue (Luke 15.) in the midſt of the moſt raging ſcorchings. Alſo, I find it elſewhere expreſſed by the moſt horrid Puniſhments and Tortures that were found amongſt the Nations, cutting Men in pieces, dividing them in the midſt, (διχοτομήσει, Mat. 24. 49, 51.) tearing them in pieces, Pſal. 50. laſt, cutting them up to the Back-Bone, Heb. 4. 12, 13. * drowning Men in perdition, 1 Tim. 6. 9. and that with Milſtones about their Necks, as Chriſt adds, Mat. 18. 6. to make ſure they never riſe again: alſo unto a being caſt bound Hand and Foot, Mat. 22. 13. into Fire to be burnt alive: a Furnace of Fire, twice in one Chapter, Mat. 13. 42, 49, 50. A Lake of Fire; and ſo drowned over Head and Ears for ever. A Lake fed with a Stream of Brimſtone, which (of all matter that feedeth Fire) is the moſt fierce. Then again, Eternal Fire, and that never to be ſlack'd or extinguiſh'd. And you may with the like Analogy, go over what ever elſe of torment is moſt exquiſite to outward Senſe.

* See for this the interpretation hereof in the Child of Light, &c. pag. 49, 50.

Rev. 14. 19. & 19. 20. & 20. 10, 14, 25. & 21. 18. Mat. 3. 1. & 18. 8. & 25. 41.

But theſe and all elſe you can imagine, as but Shadows and Similitudes (as I may ſelf heard one upon the Rack of terror of Conſcience cry out, in a like compariſon, Theſe are but Metaphors to what I feel). And indeed unto what the thing it ſelf is. As to ſay of Heaven, there are Rivers of Pleaſures: a City, whereof the Streets are of Gold, the Gates of Pearl, and ſuch like; they are but metaphorical Deſcriptions; for it is God himſelf that is the Fountain of Life: and oppoſitely it is ſaid, of the Wrath to come, That God is a conſuming Fire, Heb. 12. laſt.

But theſe Scriptures which I have read, they all ſpeak Eſſences, Quinteſſences. And as Hell is ſaid to be Naked before the Lord, and without a covering; ſo do theſe words lay Hell open nakedly (not unto our Senſes, but) to the underſtanding of us, and then they leave us to infer how fearful! And although theſe Scriptures conſiſt of words that differ, yet they conſpire together in the ſame Scope and matter, viz. to ſet out Damnation to us in the true and proper Cauſes, and the real horridneſs thereof argued from thoſe Cauſes.

Job 16. 16.

I ſhall confine my ſelf to two Heads; And in handling thereof, what the one of theſe Scriptures is wanting in, the other will ſupply; in what the one is dark, the other explains.

The Heads themſelves, I ſhall take as I find them in the firſt of theſe Scriptures, Heb. 10. 31.

Firſt, That God himſelf, by his own Hands, that is, the Power of his Wrath, is the immediate Inflicter of that Puniſhment or Deſtruction of Men's Souls in Hell: [It is a falling into the Hands of God.]

Secondly, The dreadfulneſs of that Puniſhment, inferred and argued therefrom; It is a [fearful thing] to fall into the Hands of the Living God.

Which

Chap. 1.

Which two are the Doctrinal parts of this Diſcourſe.

For the firſt, That God himſelf is the immediate Inflicter, &c.

For Explication. We muſt diſtinguiſh; how that God performs two parts herein. 1. Of a Judg, to give forth the Sentence by his Authority. 2. Of an Avenger, a party injur'd and provoked, and, as ſuch, the Inflicter. My ſcope in this Diſtinction, is, that we may in reading the Scriptures that ſpeak of this Puniſhment, know how to put a Difference, and not transfer the whole of God's Agency in this matter, unto that of Sentencing it as a Judg only. And beſides that many Scriptures do apart ſhew this Diſtinction, there are ſome that ſtill carry along with them both theſe Agencies, or Hand of God, in it together, and yet as diſtinct; the one under the Term of Wrath and Vengeance, the other under the Notion of its being a Judgment, [the Judgment of God, and the Judgment of Hell-Fire] * as Mat. 23. 33. Thus firſt the Text, Heb. 10. terms it ſome while [Vengeance and fiery Indignation, ver. 30. 27.] then again—Judgment, as ver. 27. a [fearful looking for of Judgment, and ver. 30. The Lord will judg, &c.] The like, Rom. 2. 5, 8, 9. where all is reduced in like manner to theſe two, God's righteous Judgment, and his Wrath and Indignation treaſured up. Alſo, 2 Theſſ. 1. [The righteous Judgment of God] ver. 5, 6. there is the Sentence, and [deſtroyed from the Glory of his Power] as the inflicting Cauſe, ver. 9. likewiſe Rom. 9. as Soveraign Lord he ſhews, ἐξουσίαν Authority in this Puniſhment, ver. 21. and then as the immediate Inflicter, Wrath and τὸ δυνατὸν, the Power of his Wrath. And ver. 22. that Speech of our Saviour, about this Matter. One Evangeliſt, Luke 12. 5. records it, Who is able to caſt into Hell: * namely, as a Judg who caſts a Malefactor into Priſon. The other, Mat. 10. 28. Who is † able to kill the Soul, and to deſtroy Body and Soul in Hell. Noting thereby that he uſeth his Intrinſick Power and Force as the Inflicter.

* Quid à juſto Dei infligitur. Gerard de inferno. Sect. 30.

* Ἐξουσίαν ἔχοντα. † Τὸν δυνάμενον.

I ſhall be large in handling and proving this latter, as a great Truth, concerning which I further premiſe, That I would not be underſtood to exclude other Miſeries as inflicted by Creatures, uſed as God's Inſtruments accompanying this, but that which I contend for, is, that principally and eminently above all ſuch, it is the Wrath and Indignation of God himſelf, working immediately in and upon Mens Souls and Conſciences, that is intended in theſe and other Scriptures. This is the Subject of the firſt Section of this Diſcourſe.

And let it be noticed now at the entrance, that the ſame Scriptures and Reaſons that ſhall be brought to prove this in this firſt Section, will be found again to ſerve as new Arguments by Way of Inference, to ſet out and infer the latter alſo; that is, the Dreadfulneſs of it, as will appear in the ſecond Section.

CHAP.

CHAP. II.

The firſt ſort of Proofs from Scriptures: Firſt, thoſe three prefixed as the Texts.

LET us firſt ſee what the Scriptures ſpeak more directly to this great Point.

Heb. 10. 28, 29, 30. 31. He that deſpiſed Moſes Law, died without Mercy, under two or three Witneſſes: Of how much ſorer Puniſhment ſuppoſe ye, ſhall he be thought worthy, who hath trodden under foot the Son of God, and hath counted the Blood of the Covenant wherewith he was ſanctified, an unholy thing, and hath done deſpite unto the Spirit of Grace? For we know him that hath ſaid, Vengeance belongeth unto me, I will recompenſe, ſaith the Lord. And again, The Lord ſhall judg his People. It is a fearful thing to fall into the Hands of the living God.

In order to the Proofs, from hence obſerve the Occaſion of the Apoſtle's mention of this Puniſhment here, to be his having treated of the higheſt Sin and kind of Sinners, the Sin againſt the Holy Ghoſt. By the occaſion of which he gives us to underſtand what for the Subſtance is indeed the Recompence of all manner of other actual Sins ſmall and great: the Puniſhment being in ſolido, one and the ſame to all; though with a vaſt Difference of Degrees. And therefore it is ſaid unto all that are found wicked at that Day, whether of greater or leſſer Proportions and Sizes of Wickedneſs, Go into Fire prepared for the Devil and his Angels. The Devil is the greateſt of Sinners, yet all go with him into the ſame Torment, that is, for Subſtance the ſame. And upon the like ground, what is here ſpoken by way of Eminency concerning the Puniſhment of theſe the higheſt ſort of Sinners of the Sons of Men, is true of all others; there being but one common Fire or Puniſhment, in the Subſtance of it, for all.

2. Obſerve the manner of his ſetting forth the Dreadfulneſs of that Puniſhment to us. It is only by way of Inſinuation. For ſeeing he could not expreſs the Soreneſs of it; he thought fit to ſuggeſt only, who is the immediate Author and Inflicter of it: and ſo leaves it to our Thoughts to infer, how dreadful it is! This in General.

To argue the Point in hand out of this Text, let us take theſe things along with us.

1. You ſee he here brings in the great God, as an enraged Enemy, challenging the Execution hereof to himſelf. This Vengeance belongeth to me; or, as Rom. 12. 19. Vengeance is mine, I will recompence; as if he had ſaid, Let me alone with it.

2. In that when he would ſet out the Severeneſs of this Puniſhment (which is his profeſſed Aim, ver. 29.) as infinitely exceeding all thoſe kinds of corporal Deaths in Moſes Law, he inferreth the Soreneſs of this from God himſelf as the Avenger: We [know him] that hath thus ſaid, Vengeance is mine; that is, what a great and powerful God he is. The Saints only know God by Faith in Himſelf, and his Greatneſs, as Heb. 11. and that ſo as no other Men in this Life do. And by what we know of him, and the Apprehenſions we have of Him, we cannot but forwarn what that Puniſhment muſt needs be, when God himſelf ſhall thus ſolemnly profeſs himſelf to be the Avenger. 'Tis argued you ſee both from what this God is, and from that Knowledg the Saints have of Him. They, and they alone know Him in his Love, and have taſted and found that his immediate Loving-kindneſs is better than Life: and from the Law of Contraries, they know that his Wrath muſt be more bitter than Death. They are able to meaſure what he is in his Wrath, by what he is in his Love. And ſome of the Primitive Saints, eſpecially the Apoſtles, who had the firſt Fruits of the Spirit, knew and had taſted how good the Lord is in his Love, by immediate Impreſſions of it on their Souls, in Communion with Himſelf. The like Tenour of Speech has that in 2 Cor. 5. 11. We knowing the Terror of the Lord: It is termed [His Terror] as noting out that which is proper to Him and his Greatneſs, in his being able to puniſh and deſtroy Sinners. Chap. 2.

Moſes, who in the Old Teſtament had ſeen the Glory of God the moſt immediately of any Man (and was therein a Type of Chriſt) was thereby made ſenſible of this very thing, as touching this Puniſhment; and therefore complains in the very like Language, Pſal. 90. Who knows the Power of thine Anger? Lamenting how the Generality of Men did not know it, becauſe indeed they knew not God. But we (ſays the Apoſtle) have known him, &c.

3. And thereupon he further calls this Puniſhment, [a falling into God's Hands.] That very Phraſe often notes out immediate Execution: as in ordinary Speech it doth. When a Father or a Maſter threaten a Child, or a young Servant, already corrected by other Hands at their Appointment, yet when either would threaten more ſeverely, they'l ſay, Take heed how you fall into my Hands, or come under my Fingers, when they mean to correct them themſelves.

4. And then that the Apoſtle thereupon infers from this the Dreadfulneſs thereof, even from this, It is a fearful thing to fall into the Hands of God. Reaſon tells us that the Soreneſs of any Torment, the Fearfulneſs of any Death, ariſeth from the Power, Force, Violence, or Efficacy of that which is the immediate Agent or Cauſe inflicting it. As why do we argue burning or dying by Fire, a more terrible Death, in reſpect of Torment, than drowning in Water? But that Fire, being the immediate Agent or Inſtrument applied to that Execution, hath a more fierce and violent working than Water hath; which diſpatcheth a Man more eaſily. Now therefore the Fearfulneſs and Soreneſs of this Puniſhment (and that with Difference from that by Creatures, compare for this ver. 28, 29.) being here argued, that it is a falling into God's Hands; and we knowing this withal, that he is in himſelf able to work by his fierce Wrath, more powerfully and exquiſitely upon the reaſonable Soul of Man ſinful, than all created Agents whatever; and the Soul it ſelf being alſo capable of ſuch a working upon by him. This doth ſtrongly argue his own immediate Execution by his own Hands to have been intended.

5. In ver. 27. he termeth the immediate Cauſe inflicting this Puniſhment, a fiery Indignation devouring the Adverſaries. Indignation or Wrath is of ſome intelligent Nature provoked. And whom ſhould this refer to? or whoſe Indignation can it be ſuppoſed, but of this God, who himſelf (as the Apoſtle expounds, and comments upon it) hath ſaid, Vengeance is mine, ſaith the Lord? And this Indignation is called fiery, becauſe it works as Fire; is in tormenting like to Fire; or as a flaming Sword, red hot, when it is made the Inſtrument of ones Death, which wounds and kills; and doth torment with a ſuperadded Anguiſh. For the further opening of which, I ſhall at preſent only ſay two things.

(1.) That God compares himſelf in this reſpect, unto a devouring or conſuming Fire, in this very Epiſtle, Heb. 12. ult. Our God is a conſuming Fire. There are two Creatures which God aſſimulates himſelf unto, in contrary Reſpects. 1. To Light, as often. And God is Love, 1 John 4. and both theſe are ſpoken of him in reſpect of what he is to the Saints in Glory. Light is of all Creatures the moſt comfortable: And in his Light it is we ſee Light. And the State of Glory is therefore termed the Inheritance of the Saints in Light, Col. 1. The 2*d* is to Fire: and this on the contrary, in relation to what he is to Men in Hell. And the Parallel runs upon what he is immediately unto both, by Analogy of Reaſon. Of all Creatures Fire is the moſt dreadful, the moſt raging, ſubtile and piercing in its Operation; and ſo God in his Wrath muſt be underſtood under that Similitude to be: and therefore it is his Wrath is termed fiery Indignation.

(2.) Thoſe Words in their Coherence, are an Alluſion to thoſe extraordinary Puniſhments executed under the old Law. For in ver. 28. he inforceth his Argument (the Scope of which was to aggravate this Puniſhment as à minori)

Book XIII from the Inſtances of thoſe Puniſhments that did befal Men that died for deſpiſing Moſes Law; ſome of them we read were deſtroy'd by Fire, and therein he more eſpecially refers us to thoſe Examples of Nadab and Abihu, who periſhed through Fire, Lev. 10. 1, 2. where the very Words the Apoſtle here uſed to ſet out this Puniſhment by, are uſed by Moſes, and ſo more evidently ſhew the Alluſion to be made thereunto. There went out Fire from the Lord, and devoured them, ſays that Text; and yet he argues from thence the ſurpaſſing Soreneſs of this Puniſhment above that, from that Fire, though it were a Fire even from Heaven it ſelf that kill'd them. But more of this hereafter.

I come, ſecondly, to that other Scripture, 2 Theſſ. 1. 8, 9. In flaming Fire, taking Vengeance of them that know not God, and that obey not the Goſpel of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt: [Who ſhall be puniſhed with everlaſting Deſtruction from the Preſence of the Lord, and from the Glory of his Power.] Where it is to be obſerved, that though he mentions [flaming Fire] and the Miniſtry of his mighty Angels, which accompany Chriſt's appearing, yet he clearly reſolves the ultimate and immediate Cauſe of wicked Mens Deſtruction, into the immediate Preſence and Glory of Chriſt's Power, ver. 9. Who ſhall be puniſhed with everlaſting Deſtruction [from the Preſence of the Lord, and from the Glory of his Power.] So as herein is ſet forth:

Firſt, The Puniſhment.

Secondly, The Cauſes of that Puniſhment.

1. For the Puniſhment, there is, 1ſt, the Nature of it; it is termed Deſtruction. 2dly, The Duration of it, everlaſting Deſtruction.

2. The Cauſes of it: From or by the Preſence of the Lord, and the Glory of his Power. That Particle ἀπὸ, which we tranſlate [from] is cauſal, imports the efficient Cauſe, as in all thoſe Salutations, Grace and Peace [from] the Father, and [from] Jeſus Chriſt, it doth, Rom. 1. 7. 2 Cor. 1. 2. that is, as from the Fountain, the principal and ſole Authors and Efficients of Grace and Peace. And thus the word is uſed in Multitudes of Places elſe. And accordingly we find in other Scriptures alſo, that God and Chriſt are the immediate Cauſes of Peace. Thus 2 Theſſ. 3. 16. Now the Lord of Peace [Himſelf] give you Peace, &c. and chap. 2. 16, 17. The Lord Jeſus [Himſelf] comfort your Hearts. Now on the contrary, when in like manner he ſays, Everlaſting Deſtruction [from] his Face, Preſence, and the Glory of his Power; it may, and is to be underſtood the Lord Himſelf, perſonally by his own mere Preſence, and by the Strength of his own Power, inflicteth their Deſtruction for ever: they die by no other Hand. This Particle [from] (as in Speech we often uſe it) hath led ſome from the true Intent of the Apoſtle. They thereupon ſuppoſing this the meaning, that they are puniſhed with Deſtruction [from the Preſence] that is, out of the Preſence of Chriſt; as if this were the fulfilling that Speech of Chriſt, Depart [from me] into everlaſting Torment. This, though it be true of this Deſtruction ſpoken of here, in reſpect of Chriſt's local Preſence, conſider him as he is Man; yet, as Slater upon the Place well ſays; "To him that attentively conſiders the Words, the Cauſes of Deſtruction are held forth herein. For, 1ſt, he ſays not ſimply or alone that they are puniſh'd from his Preſence, but further adds [from the Glory of his Power] the ſame Particle ἀπὸ or [from] being therefore in common to be applied to the one as well as the other. Now the Intent of the latter, from his glorious Power, cannot note forth that they were puniſhed out of, or from without his glorious Power, as in reſpect of Abſence; but the contrary, that the Preſence and Efficacy of it is to be that which is the Author of their Puniſhment, ſo that it imports nothing leſs than Abſence, or a Withdrawment by God, or a throwing them out of his Preſence; but poſitively an Efficiency or Energy put forth by him; and ſo carries with it the Relation and Influence of an efficient Cauſe: If indeed he had added inſtead hereof, either [from his Glory] or [from his Bleſſedneſs] unto that other [from his Preſence] it might have carried both unto pœna damni, the Puniſhment of Loſs; that is, to note out what they had loſt, and wanted the Communication of, and ſo their Excluſion from the Participation of God's Face and Bleſſedneſs, (which is more ordinarily termed his Preſence) and together therewith with had noted out an Excluſion alſo of this Senſe which I argue for; but his ſaying alſo [from the Glory of his Power] manifeſtly notes Power put forth in Execution, and inflicting that Deſtruction, and glorifying Himſelf, on them thereby. Chap. 2.

And, 2. further know that the Word here uſed is not Poteſtas, as of a Judg, that is, Authority, whereof John 5. 27. The Father hath given the Son of Man Authority to execute Judgment: And in relation unto which in ver. 5. of this Chapter, he had termed it, The righteous Judgment of God. But the Word is ἰσχὺς, which ſignifies inward perſonal Strength, Vigor, Robur, ſuch as a Giant hath in his own * Limbs. And therefore when their Deſtruction is ſaid to be from his Power, as thus denoting perſonal Strength, the Intendment muſt needs be to denote a putting forth of that Strength which is in himſelf to deſtroy them. Parallel with that in Rom. 9. 22. What if God willing to ſhew his Wrath, and make his [Power] known on the Veſſels of Wrath fitted to Deſtruction; of which anon.

* Ipſa vis naturæ per ſe conſiderata. Illyricus.

Yea, and 3. even this other Phraſe, [deſtroyed from his Preſence] doth likewiſe as fully cloſe with this Senſe, to note the efficient Cauſe of their Deſtruction. The Word in the Original is, [from his Face] ἀπὸ τοῦ προσώπου: now God's Anger and Wrath is as well, and very frequently expreſſed by his Face in Scripture, as his Favour uſeth to be. For the Face as well holds forth Anger and Wrath, as Favour and Grace. Thus Lev. 20. 6. I will [ſet my Face againſt] that Soul, and will [cut him off:] that is, I will put forth mine Anger to deſtroy him. And Lam. 4. 26. where it is tranſlated the Anger of the Lord, in the Hebrew, and in your Margents, it is, The Face of the Lord. As there is the Light of God's Countenance, in which is Life; ſo the Rebuke of God's Countenance, at which we periſh, Pſal. 80. 16. Even as the Wax is ſaid to melt at the [Preſence] of the Fire, Pſal. 68. 2. and often elſewhere.

So then to be deſtroyed [from his Face and Preſence] is all one as to ſay, from his Anger and Wrath. And we have both exegetically met in one Scripture, Rev. 6. laſt, They ſaid to the Mountains, Fall on us, to hide us [from the Face of him] that ſitteth on the Throne, and [from the Wrath] of the Lamb; and ſuitably this Deſtruction here in 2 Theſſ. 1. is ſaid to be both from God and Chriſt. Even as the Happineſs of Heaven is immediately from the Preſence of God and Chriſt, Rev. 21. 23. And the City had no need of the Sun, neither of the Moon to ſhine in it: for the Glory of God did lighten it, and the Lamb is the Light thereof. Thus on the contrary is it in Hell, and ſo at the Day of Judgment it is the Face of God, and the Face of the Lamb, that the Wicked moſt of all do dread, as that which is the Inflicter of their Torment.

As for any Objection from thoſe Words, in flaming Fire, &c. I ſhall anſwer it afterwards.

Book XIII

CHAP. III.

The Paſſage in Rom. 9. 22. explicated, only ſo far as concerns the Execution. Several Particulars in the Words that ſhew the Power of God's Wrath to be the inflicting Cauſe, and immediately inflicting this Puniſhment. An Explication of a fourth Scripture, Rom. 2. 8, 9. added, for the Confirmation of all.

ROM. 9. 22.

What if God willing to ſhew his Wrath, and to make his Power known, endured with much Long-ſuffering the Veſſels of Wrath fitted to Deſtruction.

I Shall inſiſt on this Paſſage but ſo far as it reſpects the Execution of this Deſtruction in Hell, after much Long-ſuffering paſſed, and not to touch at all upon any thing of that Point of Rejection from Eternity, whether intended or not. But that the Words ſhould reſpect the Execution in Hell, (which is the Point only before us) I take that as clear, and much for granted. And the Reaſon is, becauſe it is the Glory of Heaven, which in the next Words the Apoſtle joins with it, and ſets by it, as Parallels illuſtrating each the other: So ver. 23. And that he might make known the Riches of his Glory on the Veſſels of Mercy, which he had afore prepared unto Glory: In Heaven namely. The only thing which by the way I obſerve, is, That the Sin of the Creature is that which prepareth or fitteth the Creature for the Execution of this Puniſhment. And a Difference may be obſerved in this (though otherwiſe a Parallel) as put in cautiouſly by the Apoſtle; that God himſelf prepareth the Saints to Glory, ver. 23. but the other are fitted, that is, by themſelves, unto Deſtruction, ver. 22. e're he deſtroyeth them.

The Point before me is, that God's Wrath and his Power are to be the immediate Inflicters of that Deſtruction. There are ſeveral Particulars in the Words, which taken ſingly, might perhaps be ſufficient to prove this, but laid all together, will become a ſtrong Eviction thereof.

1. That God's Wrath and his Power, or the Power of his Wrath, are ſpoken of as the inflicting or executing Cauſes, is evident: For it is a Power of Efficiency here ſpoken of, as whereby God produceth this Deſtruction, as a Cauſe doth its proper Effect: and accordingly He is ſaid to make known and ſhew his Power and Wrath therein; like as the Force and Virtue of an efficient Cauſe is made known and demonſtrated, in and by the Effect it produceth. And ſo is ſpoken to the ſame Effect, with what, in chap. 1. 20. he had ſaid, that his Power and Godhead is clearly ſeen from the Creation of the World, and underſtood by the things that are made. He that is, ὁ δυνατὸς, the Mighty One, (as the Bleſſed Virgin there, by way of Eminency, ſtiles him) Luke 1. 49. is ſaid to ſhew Strength with his Arm, ver. 51. And here, to make known τὸ δυνατὸν αὐτοῦ, (a Word ſuited to that other) his τὸ poſſe, or what is poſſible to be done by him. It is then a Power of Strength, and Energy, or Efficacy, with his own Hands and Arm, and that according to the utmoſt of his Ability, as the Word imports: And ſo the Power here ſpoken of, is an inflicting Power, that works and effects this Deſtruction; and not that of Authority only, or a Power of Liberty to do as one pleaſeth, as the Potter with the Clay. For that kind of Power he had before aſcribed to God in this matter, in the foregoing Verſe, which this Word here is diſtinct from. And this is one Step: unto which add:

2. It

Chap. 3.

2. It is his Power joined with his Wrath; that is, the Power of his Wrath, or his Wrath in the Power of it. For thus Moſes, the Man of God, Pſal. 90. 11. had long afore put them together, when he ſpeaks of this very Wrath in Hell, of which here the Apoſtle doth. For after he had, 1. ſet out the Time and Condition of Man in this Life, The Days of our Years are threeſcore Years and ten, &c. and then, 2. We fly away; ſo expreſſing Death, and our going into another World: Then, 3. follows, [Who knows the Power of thine Anger?] as that which ſucceedeth and ſeizeth after Death upon the moſt of Mankind dying in their Sins. The Apoſtle here mentions Power and Wrath apart; but Moſes there maketh Power an Attribute of his Wrath: and ſo conſidered, it hath a double meaning, and both ſerving our purpoſe: 1. That Wrath ſtirs up his Power, and draws it out unto this Execution; and therefore Wrath is the firſt of the two here mentioned. Yea further, that it is his Power, as it becomes heated, inflamed, and intended by Wrath, that inflicteth this. And as a Man in his Anger ſtrikes a greater Blow; ſo may God be ſuppoſed to do, when repreſented as thus ſmiting in his ſore Diſpleaſure. And 2. That God's very Wrath and Anger, if but ſhewn and revealed by him to Mens Souls, hath ſuch a Power in it, that that alone is enough to deſtroy them. The neareſt reſemblance that the Scriptures make of this Wrath, is that of Fire, (of which anon) and that as Fire melting Wax by the very preſence of it. As therefore when we would expreſs the Power of Fire, we ſay, [the Power of the Heat] that is in Fire, that thus melts and conſumes, &c. its Heat being in it ſelf ſo fierce and vehement a Quality, that when but applied, it thus works. So here, it is the Power of his Wrath; if it be kindled but a little, that deſtroys, if but made known once, or diſcovered. And as in the Text, it is a ſhewing his Wrath, and thereby his Power in deſtroying is made known. It is but his being angry, and ſhewing it. And this is the Greatneſs of God, that his very Wrath diſcovered, ſhould have this Power. And how receptive the Conſcience is of it, I ſhall after ſhew. As, in his Favour (if but manifeſted to Mens Souls) is Life, Pſal. 30. 5. So, in his Anger, when diſcovered by himſelf, there is Death. If the Wrath of a King be as the roaring of a Lion; and where the Word of a King is, there is Power; then what is the Terror and Power of the Wrath of the Great God, that alone ſtrikes dead? And thus underſtood, it is an Argument of it ſelf alone, that the Power of his Wrath doth ſpeak an immediateneſs of God's Execution.

A ſecond Particular is, That that which makes God willing, by reaſon of Sin, to execute this, is thereby to obtain a Glory unto his Power, by ſhewing his VVrath. So as, that although he hath already ſhewn his Power in creating the World at firſt, and upholding it by the Word of his Power, and other Effects, that yet over and above, and beſides all this, he takes the advantage of Sin, to ſhew (as the Riches of his Mercy in ſaving from Sin, ſo) the Greatneſs of his Power another way, namely, in deſtroying for Sin. And accordingly in that 2 Theſſ. 1. 9. there is a peculiar Glory attributed unto that Power of his, from or by which Men are deſtroyed, [puniſhed from the Glory (ſays that Text) of his Power] or from his Power, giving a Demonſtration, or ſhewing his Glory therein; that is, unto that end, that it might be known how great and powerful a God he is in Himſelf, by the Judgment which he executes, as the Pſalmiſt ſpeaks.

Now then from hence, 'ere we add the other two Particulars, the Argument riſeth thus; That if God ſhould execute this by Creatures only, and not immediately by himſelf, he attained not the full of this his End; and that upon a double Account.

1. Becauſe, when all had been done that could have been, by his powerful arming and ſetting on of Creatures to puniſh the Sinner; yet ſtill himſelf being able to give a greater Demonſtration of Power this way, if Himſelf would take it in hand; and the Soul of Man being fully capable of his immediate workings upon it, and Sin alſo deſerving it; and the Wrath of God being firſt or laſt to come upon impenitent Sinners to the uttermoſt. Therefore until this Demonſtration were given, he had not made a full proof of his Power: Which the Apoſtle here profeſſeth to be his aim. And,

Book XIII

And, 2. in that after all other Inſtances and Demonſtrations of Power given in Creation, Miracles, in Converſion of Souls, that is, take his creating part in it, &c. all which he hath done, immediately himſelf, without the intervention of created Influences; that he ſhould, laſt of all, be willing to give forth anew, or ſhew forth his Power afreſh in this Work alſo; and yet ſhould not then give a Demonſtration of like immediate Power, but execute it only at ſecond Hand by Creatures alone; this would fall ſhort, and hold no proportion with that Power already ſhewn forth in thoſe fore-paſt Works: and then this being the laſt, or one of the laſt, after all his other Works ended, purpoſely to ſhew forth his Power in, it had not been ſuch a Demonſtration of Power, as in his laſt Work (wherein he profeſſeth to ſhew forth any Attribute) he uſeth comparatively to give: For ſtill his manner is, in the ſhewing forth of any Attribute, to give greater Demonſtrations thereof in his latter Works than in the former: Of which more afterwards.

Add this to it, which heightens the Argument; That the Apoſtle ſpecially ſingleth forth this Attribute of Power, and by way of Eminency mentioneth it, in ſpeaking of this Puniſhment, as that Attribute, whereof God is willing to give fulleſt Demonſtration in this Work, above any other Attribute, or Attributes, in himſelf, therein. In all the great Works of God, ſome one ſpecial Attribute hath ſtill the Honour given it, as being in a way of Eminency put forth; as in Man's Salvation, Mercy and Grace, Epheſ. 2. 9. in Man's Glorification, Riches of Glory and Mercy, as here, ver. 23. But look down into Hell, and it is his Power, which (as here in difference from thoſe other) is ſaid to be the predominant Attribute, that he would ſhew forth, and which appeareth there. And the comparing of theſe two, Salvation and Damnation, as they ſtand in an oppoſite Parallel, this in ver. 22. and the other in ver. 23. doth confirm this Obſervation; taking in withal that other Paſſage in 2 Theſſ. 1. 9. where they are ſaid to be puniſhed from the Glory of his Power, which manifeſtly gives the Glory unto his Power, in this Work, above any Attribute. His Soveraignty and Authority is ſeen in Salvation as much (if not more) as it is in Deſtruction. I [will] have Mercy on whom [I will,] &c. But his Power or Omnipotency, that is ſaid to be ſeen in deſtroying for Sin. Whereof perhaps one Reaſon is, becauſe there is ſhewn in this, a duplicated Power: a contrary Stream of Power running croſs and thwart, in its Effects, in this. For at the ſame Inſtant (and that lengthned out for ever,) God ſets himſelf by his Power, to deſtroy the Creature, utterly, in reſpect of its Well-being: Whilſt yet again, on the other hand, as great a Power is requiſite to uphold it in Being and Senſe, and to prevent its ſinking into its firſt nothing, or from failing before him, in reſpect of Being to bear it. And in that reſpect to continue the Creature to be, &c. and to endure the Weight of God's Power in Wrath, to be dry Stubble in a Flame never conſumed; this is more than for God to create. This puts the great God upon a double Expence of Power.

A third Particular, in this Rom. 9. 22. that contributes to this, is, That as the Cauſe inflicting is termed the Power of his Wrath, ſo the miſerable Subjects hereof are denominated Veſſels of Wrath: Even as on the other ſide, thoſe ſaved, are termed Veſſels of Mercy. Common Uſe of Speech tells us, that Veſſels ordained to be filled with ſuch or ſuch Materials, have their Denomination, from that Matter they are ordained to contain, and are filled withal. You ſay this is a Veſſel of Oyl, that a Veſſel of Wine; theſe here you ſee are ſaid to be Veſſels of Wrath. If you demand whoſe Wrath? God's. What if [God willing to make known his Wrath.] Now as touching its Oppoſite here, [Veſſels of Mercy,] all will acknowledg that when it is ſpoken of as in relation to Heaven (as here it is) it importeth Souls their being ſet apart to be immediately filled with the Love and Mercy of God: that as God is Love, ſo that they, as Veſſels, ſwim in that Ocean for ever: That they dwell in God immediately, and are filled with Fulneſs of him. And why ſhould not then, this other of being Veſſels of Wrath, be intended in the ſame Senſe alſo, and that Senſe be urged accordingly? Eſpecially ſeeing it is evident that one Scope of the Apoſtle here, was to make a Parallel between the eternal Glorification of the one, and eternal Deſtruction of the other; and accordingly between what are to be the Cauſes of them. And if ſo, the Law of this Parallel will alſo carry it to this, that as the Saints in Heaven have an immediate Participation of God, that likewiſe in Hell, there ſhall be oppoſitely an immediate Participation of God's Wrath. In Heaven they are not ſaid to be Veſſels of Mercy, becauſe God ſhews them Mercy, only, by created Benefits or Gifts beſtowed; or becauſe they have God's Mercy communicated by Creatures (though it muſt be affirmed that there is a Confluence of theſe) but becauſe God himſelf appears all in Love, Mercy, and Kindneſs to them. Chap. 3.

And it is not nothing, that, according to the ſame Analogy of Speech, unto this Particular, in Multitudes of Scriptures in the New Teſtament. This Deſtruction is ὀνομαστικῶς, by way of Singularity, Eminency, and ſimply ſtiled Wrath; and the Wrath of God. And ſo it bears away that Denomination from all other Puniſhments by Creatures (except that by Magiſtrates in God's ſtead, and who bear the Image of God, Rom. 13. 5.) ſo bearing the Name of its immediate Cauſe.

The Baptiſt he began that Stile in the New Teſtament: [The Wrath to come,] Matth. 3. by way of Diſtinction from all that is executed in this Life. And the whole New Teſtament afterwards much uſeth that Phraſe. As when the Day of Judgment is ſtiled the Day of Wrath, Rom. 2. and elſewhere. It is equivalent to ſay, a Child of Hell, Matth. 23. 15. and a Child of Wrath, Epheſ. 2. 3. to ſay, fitted to Deſtruction, as Rom. 9. and ordained to Wrath, 1 Theſſ. 5. 9. to ſay, Damnation haſteneth, 2 Pet. 2. 3. and the Wrath of God cometh on the Children of Diſobedience, Col. 3. 6. As in like manner on the contrary, ſaved from Wrath, Rom. 5. Delivered from Wrath through Chriſt, 1 Theſſ. 1. ult. is all one, and ſaved from Death and Hell, elſewhere. And this is uſually termed the Wrath of God, ſo Joel 3. ult. Col. 3. 6. and Epheſ. 5. 6. Rom. 9. 22.

That which I would obſerve from both, is, that according to the general Analogy of common Speech in all Languages, the Puniſhment as the Effect, bearing the Denomination of that, which is the immediate Inſtrument of the principal Agent in that Puniſhment, (thus the Torture by the Rack, is called the Rack; Whipping, the Rod: So in Deaths, Crucifying was termed the Croſs; Hanging, the Gallows: Thus 'tis in the Puniſhments which Men execute:) that in like Analogy of Speech, this ultimate Puniſhment ſhould ſo generally be termed Wrath, and the Wrath of God, by way of eminency and difference from all other fore-running Effects of Wrath, executed by Creatures in this Life; this ſtill ſtrengthens the former Notion, that it is indeed the Wrath of this God it ſelf, in a way of eminent difference from what by Creatures he doth in Wrath pour out, that is the Inflicter of that Puniſhment.

I ſhall for the cloſe of this, caſt in one Scripture-Teſtimony more, both to confirm this Interpretation of Wrath given upon Rom. 9. and the whole of the Point in hand. It is

Rom. 2. 8, 9. —Indignation and VVrath, Tribulation and Anguiſh unto every Soul of Man that doth Evil, &c.

I obſerved afore from the ſecond Verſe of this Chapter, how that this Puniſhment was termed both the Judgment of God, ver. 2. as denoting God to be the Judg, and alſo [VVrath,] as of God the Avenger. Now in theſe Words, ver. 8, 9. the Apoſtle purſueth the latter more fully, when he ſays, Indignation and VVrath, Tribulation and Anguiſh to every Soul of Man. Theſe are two Pairs or Conjugates of Cauſes, and Effects. 1. Indignation and VVrath, as the Cauſes. 2. Tribulation and Anguiſh, as the two Effects; and that on the Souls of Men, which are the Veſſels of this VVrath and Indignation, and Subjects of that Tribulation and Anguiſh thence ariſing. And truly his inſtancing in the Soul, which (though it often ſignifies the whole Perſon, yet) here ſeems purpoſely done, as being that in or of Man, which alone is immediately capable of this Indignation and VVrath of God, and the Impreſſions or Effects of Anguiſh there-from, and is the proper Seat of that Anguiſh and Tribulation. And that Phraſe Phraſe of Wrath, its being ſaid to be [treaſured up] in the 5*th* verſe, Suits this. For what is the Treaſury or Magazine thereof, but the Heart and Boſom of God Himſelf, in which it lies hid, as Treaſures uſe to do in ſome Secret place? Even as the Saints Life is ſaid to be hid in God, Col. 3. 3. compare Deut. 32. 24.

I ſhall but further ſuperadd that noticed ſaying of Luther, (which, out of deep Experience of the Wrath of God in his Soul, at his firſt Humiliation and Converſion he had learned) The Wrath of God is Hell, the Hell of Devils and all damned Spirits.

CHAP. IV.

That this immediate Wrath of God is in Scripture ſet forth unto us under the Similitude of Fire, and fiery Indignation. The Examples of Perſons devoured by Fire in the Old Teſtament, Shadows of this Puniſhment by the immediate Wrath of God. This the Fire wherein the Devil and his Angels are tormented.

THere hath been nothing more divertive of the Thoughts of Men from apprehending, or ſo much as imagining God's immediate Wrath to be a Cauſe of that Puniſhment in Hell; then that the Scriptures do ſo often make mention of Fire, &c. as the Inſtrument thereof, and ſo Mens conceptions do terminate therein, and go no further.

But I ſhall rather on the other Hand, make an Argument of it. Namely, that indeed the Scriptures do ſet out this immediate Wrath of God under the Similitude, Reſemblance, and Repreſentation of Fire; and that, ſometimes, when Hell-fire is ſpoken of, the Wrath of God is intended thereby.

Unto which I yet preface this: That I muſt not, nor dare I ſay that there is no material Fire in Hell ordained for Puniſhment to Mens Bodies: but that it is Rational, that the Body having ſinned as well as the Soul, it ſhould have a meet Recompence of Reward ſuited thereto, as well as that the Soul ſhould. But yet ſo, as either of them have this meeted out to them, according to their vaſtly differing ſhare, and hand, and acting which they had in ſinning; in which the Soul is always the principal Actor, and in ſome Sins the ſole Agent and Subject. To be ſure in Heaven there is a confluence of created Excellencies, ſuited to the Bodies of Saints, made Spiritual, as well as God Himſelf, the Happineſs of their Souls; and ſure I am that on the contrary, it is diſtinctly ſaid of each and apart, That God deſtroys [both Body and Soul] in Hell, Mat. 10. 28. And accordingly, each of them, with a Puniſhment ſuited unto each.

The Paſſage of Scripture, unto which the gathering will be of ſeveral others, for the Proof of this my preſent Aſſertion, (which is the Subject of this Chapter,) is that of our Apoſtle in the 28. ver. of this Heb. 10. a little afore my Text; he there ſetting forth the Judgment to come, in the Cauſes and Effects of it, to be,

A fiery Indignation, devouring the Adverſaries.

I did but touch upon it before, when I drew out other Arguments from this Text, but then reſerved a fuller handling of this by it ſelf.

The Original hath it, [The Indignation of Fire.] But Indignation is in, and from the Heart of an intelligent Perſon provoked, which is God, as the Text ſhews. Grotius therefore interprets it, The Anger of God, but adds, putting forth it ſelf by Fire: I ſuppoſe he means by corporeal Fire, as its Inſtrument.

ſtrument. But why not rather the Anger of God Himſelf, devouring his Adverſaries as Fire; and ſo to relate to the manner of his Anger its working, as repreſented under the Similitude of Fire, ſeeing God Himſelf is, in this Epiſtle, ſtiled a Conſuming Fire? which interprets this. Chap. 4.

And in this Expreſſion of [fiery Indignation which devoureth,] he hath particular Reference unto thoſe, of all other, the moſt extraordinary Judgments upon Nadab and Abihu, Lev. 10. 2. There came out [Fire] from the Lord, and [devoured] them. They are in terminis, the very Words of the Apoſtle here: And we may take in alſo (that ſo we may have two Witneſſes too, to confirm this our Interpretation of the Apoſtle's Alluſion) That two hundred and fifty Princes periſhed by Fire from the Lord, in the Rebellion of Corah, Numb. 16. 35. This as for what Examples is referred unto.

Now to raiſe up our Thoughts, unto how much a ſorer Puniſhment the fiery Indignation that remained for theſe Goſpel-Adverſaries ſhould be, he ſuggeſts how tranſcendently the Goſpel exceeds the Miniſtration of Moſes Law, in theſe Words that follow; He that deſpiſed Moſes Law died without Mercy, under two or three Witneſſes: of how much ſorer Puniſhment ye, ſhall he be thought worthy, who hath troden under Foot the Son of God, and hath counted the Blood of the Covenant, wherewith he was ſanctified, an unholy thing, and hath done Deſpite to the Spirit of Grace? Moſes Law (the old Covenant, as joined with the Law Ceremonial,) was ſprinkled, or Conſecrated with the Blood of Beaſts, Chap. 9. 19, 20, 21. But the Goſpel of the New Covenant, and the Perſons enlightned thereby, have been ſanctified by the Blood of the Son of God. If then ſuch an extraordinary fiery Judgment befel the Deſpiſers of this Moſes Law, thus ſprinkled, &c. what fiery Indignation proportionably muſt it be that ſhall befal the treaders down, both of the Book, Covenant, and ſacred Blood of Chriſt? And in this lies the Weight and Strength of the Apoſtle's Argument.

That Maxim of the Judicial Law which is annexed, that Deſpiſers died without Mercy under two or three Witneſſes, is brought in for that grand Circumſtance's ſake, whereby the Apoſtle heightneth both the Iniquity of thoſe Perſons, deſtroyed by Fire, who ſinned before many thouſand Witneſſes, the whole Congregation of Iſrael: As likewiſe, this other far tranſcending Guilt of theſe Adverſaries, who had renounced Chriſt and his Blood only, before the whole World and Chriſtian Church. So Chap. 6. 6. 'tis ſaid they did put the Lord Jeſus to an open ſhame; and they are the ſame Perſons, whom he threatens this againſt here, and ſpeaks of there.

But ſtill, by what ſurpaſſing Proportion may we eſtimate, or ſuppoſe (as the Apoſtle calls us to do) how much this fiery Indignation is ſorer, than that outward devouring them by Fire. 'Tis certain that Moſes Law, and that ſprinkling with Beaſts Blood, &c. which he argues from, held but the proportion of Types, Figures and Shadows: But the New Covenant, and Chriſt's Blood, &c. of the Subſtance and Reality comparatively to theſe. Then in like manner, his intent in propoſing theſe Examples of Judgments by Fire, was as of thoſe that hold the Proportion but of a Type, a Figure of this fiery Indignation that is to come upon the treaders down of the Blood of Chriſt. For indeed a meer bodily Death the ſharpeſt (as thoſe by Fire were) is but as the Shadow of Death, unto the ſecond Death (the thing intended here) which is utterly another kind of thing.

In Heb. 10. ver. 1. He ſays of the Good things of the Goſpel, that what the Law held forth, were but the Shadows of thoſe good things to come, as Canaan of Heaven, Chap. 4, &c. the like Col. 2. 17. And why may it not be alſo ſaid, that as all the good Things under the Law, the beſt were but Shadows of thoſe good things to come, ſo that the higheſt and worſt of outward evil things Executed then, were in like manner but Shadows of thoſe Evil things which the Goſpel brings to light, as the Puniſhment of Sin. And we may ſee in his ſucceeding Diſcourſe in this ſame Chapter, how he having firſt inſtanced in the Good, he after inſtanceth in the higheſt of Evil, in theſe Words I am upon, ver. 27, 28, 29, 30, 31. And in like manner the like extraordinary Judgments then, are expreſly ſaid to have happened to them as Types, (so in the Greek and Margin) 1 Cor. 10. 11. Types, not meerly monitory of like Events, but withal Prefigurative of Punishment of an higher kind, &c. What Death could be outwardly sorer, than to be destroyed of Serpents? ver. 9. and those fiery too, Numb. 21. 6. the Effects of whose Stings are described to be as Dolorous as being burnt alive. But under the Gospel, Sin and the Law, and so God's Wrath, these as the Substance are set out to be the Sting of that Death to come, 1 Cor. 15. 55. Again, ver. 10. destroyed of the Destroyer. Who was the Destroyer then? Angels. So Heb. 11. 28. And what Destruction or Destroyer under the Gospel is it, that is typified out by these? even God Himself: who, as by Christ, is said to kill the Soul, and destroy Body and Soul in Hell: So, ere the Apostle took off his Pen from prosecuting that Argument, in the very same Chapter, he in full Effect says as much, in setting before them, how it was God's Power and Wrath, instead of those other Destroyers, with which Sinners have now to do. Ver. 22. Do you provoke the Lord to Jealousy? are you stronger than he? I might confirm this Notion from other Types, 1 Cor. 15. 44, 45. This fore-laid.

To approach nearer to our Purpose in Hand, there are two things further to be done. 1. As touching the Type it self, what kind of Fire that was which devoured them: And the manner of their Deaths.

The Fire was another manner of Fire, than this our Elementary common Fire. This was Fire from Heaven, and therefore said to be a Fire [from the Lord] that devoured them; it was such a Fire, as blasts of Lightning are, which strike, and blast, and shrivel the Spirits of a living Body in an instant: which is evident by the manner of their Deaths. The Hebrew Doctors say of it, that it was a Fire which burnt their Souls, not their Bodies; their meaning is, their Bodies were not consumed or devoured by it: for Lev. 10. 5. 'tis said, They carried their Bodies and Coats into the Tent, as untouch'd. It was therefore such a Fire (as Lightning is from Heaven) which useth to strike, and lick up Men's Spirits in an instant, when yet in the mean Time, it consumes not, breaks not so much as Skin or Flesh; which our Elementary Fire preys first and most upon. It was therefore a far subtiller Fire then Culinary or Kitchin Fire: which suitably served as the fittest and neerest Type of this fiery Indignation; and of the Vengeance, which it executes. And this was but the Shadow.

The second is, What the Substance answering to these Types should be? This I shall set out by two things:

1. What is the thing, or Subject devoured by this fiery Indignation? It is the immortal Souls of Men: these are the Fewel which this Fire doth prey upon. As to the Truth of the thing it self I need not insist on it: But the Analogy of that as the Shadow, and this as typified thereby, that is the matter afore me.—Let it be considered, that the Death and Destruction of of the immortal Soul in Man, could not any other way be more lively shadowed forth, than by such a devouring (as Moses word is) or licking up the vital and animal Spirits than run in the Body, when yet the Body it self remains unburnt: Thereby demonstrating, that it was such a Fire as struck immediately at that which is the Fountain of Life it self in the Body, and at that which is the Bond, the Vinculum, the Tye of Union between Soul and Body: for such are those Spirits. And yet not so much, as to singe the outward Bulk or Carcase of the Body. There could have been nothing invented in the whole compass of Nature, to have Born a resemblance so near, to shadow forth the Immortal Soul, as those Spirits running in Man's Blood and Arteries, do; which, some affirm to be the very Animal and Vital Soul in Man. Sure I am, they are as the Oyl whereby Life is preserved and fed; and in the Blood is the Life, says Moses, our best Interpreter in this. Neither doth this Shadow hold a Similitude in this particular only, but in another like Case as evidently. The pouring forth of the Blood of the Beasts that were sacrificed under the Old Law, was particularly ordained to signify Christ his pouring forth his Soul unto Death, as Isaiah speaks; As well, as in General, that the Sacrifice of those Beasts did typifie forth Christ's Sacrifice, in the whole whole of it. And this was as near a Repreſentation of that Particular, as could any Way be made, by what was Corporeal in Beaſts, or elſe in the whole Creation (for a Sacrifice of Mankind, or the Blood of Men, God liked not to be made to him, in his Worſhip) could poſſibly have been found to pourtray it forth.

The ſecond thing is, That the Subſtance ſhadowed forth by that Fire, was no other than the Indignation or Wrath of the great God himſelf, which is termed Fiery Indignation here.

For Proof of which, I inſiſt not, that ſome Shim thereof this Shadow it ſelf doth caſt, in Moſes his ſaying again and again in Terminis, that a Fire [from the Lord,] &c. which hath a great Emphaſis and Reſemblance of this in it. But for proof I ask, Firſt, Where ſhall we find, or how ſhall we imagine any created Fire ſo to exceed that Fire from Heaven, recorded in that Story; and ſo far exceeding it as the Subſtance doth a Shadow; or ſuch as ſhould melt down Immortal Souls? You may ſooner Invent or imagine a Fire, ſo much comparatively hotter than that of the Sun it ſelf, (which is the contract of Fire and Light) and ſo much exceeding it, as ſhould be able to ſhrivel up this Sun into a burnt black Coal: as to imagine any ſuch created Fire, ſo Tranſcending this of Lightning from Heaven, as ſhall thus devour Reaſonable Souls and Immortal Spirits; that in the Subſtance of them (as being Spirits) do bear the Image of God. In what Furnace will you think to find ſuch a Fire? No where but in the Boſom of him, who hath here ſaid Vengeance is mine; even even of God himſelf.

2. To confirm this. What created Fire can be conceived more ſubtile or powerful, than the Angels themſelves are conceived to be? whom, as Heb. 1. 7. out of the Pſalms, the Apoſtle compareth to Flames of Fire, that is in our (European Language) to Lightning. Now then I ask when Chriſt ſays, Mat. 25. 41. Go into the Fire prepared for the Devil and his Angels, (ſhewing that Man's Puniſhment ſhall be from the ſame Hand, that the Puniſhment of thoſe evil Angels is;) what Fire can be ſuppoſed ſuch, that can Work on Angelical Natures, who themſelves have Power over Fire; of Fire of Lightning from Heaven, as in Job's Caſe was ſeen: None other but that, which as the Apoſtle reſolves us, (if we will reſt in it) That our God is a conſuming Rev. 14. Fire, Heb. 12. ult. So that conſideration the State and Condition of the Devil; I cannot but celebrate that fore-cited concluſive Speech of Luther's, Ira Dei eſt infernus Diaboli & omnium damnatorum, It is the Wrath of God that is the Hell of the Devil, and of all the Damned: For there can be no other Fire, in which the Devils can be tormented. Outward waſhings may as ſoon reach Conſcience, as Heb. 9. 9. 1 Pet. 3. 21. as ſuch created Fire to torment an Angel.

3. Let us conſider other Scriptures, which (as I ſaid) do gather about this, to give Teſtimony to this Interpretation.

Firſt, That of the Prophet Iſaiah, Chap. 33. 14. The Sinners in Sion are afraid, fearfulneſs hath ſurprized the Hypocrites: Who among us ſhall dwell with the [devouring Fire?] Who among us ſhall dwell with [Everlaſting Burnings?] I ſhall afterwards have Occaſion to take Notice of this Scripture by way of Uſe. In the mean time, ——obſerve, that it is God Himſelf, who is meant by this devouring Fire, here. For in a ſmart and quick Retortion, (and it is a moſt Elegant one) the Prophet gives Anſwer: He that walketh Righteouſly, and ſpeaketh Uprightly, He ſhall dwell with Him (whom you that are Hypocrites ſo much dread, and have cauſe enough to do ſo) with him ſhall an Upright Man dwell: Who is, and will be unto you in the State you are in, a Devouring Fire. And thus they are reproved, and taught what it is to be Hypocrites, by the oppoſite Condition of the Upright, and the differing Event of being ſuch. And further, that it is God himſelf there the Prophet intendeth, as with whom the Upright ſhould dwell: The Words following do alſo ſhew, ver. 16. He ſhall dwell on High (namely with that High and lofty one, that dwells in the High and Holy Place, &c. Do but punctually compare that Iſa. 57. 15. with this here) likewiſe ver. 17. Thine Eye (O thou upright Soul) ſhall ſee the King in his Beauty; that is, (as Chriſt ſays) the pure in Heart ſhall ſee God. The Reſult is, that the ſame God, who appears all in Flames, and as a devouring Fire, unto Hypocrites in Hell; is all Light and Beauty to the Upright in Heaven. Like as unto a ſound and vigorous Eye, It is a pleaſant thing to behold the Sun, as Solomon ſpeaks; but to ſore Eyes it is a Terror.

Add to this Pſal. 21. 8, 9. Thine Hand ſhall find out all thine Enemies, thy right Hand ſhall find out thoſe that hate thee. Thou ſhalt make them as a fiery Oven in the time of thine Anger: The Lord ſhall ſwallow them up in his Wrath, and the Fire ſhall devour them. This the Chaldee Paraphraſt interprets of the Fire of Hell. And ſo you have all meet to interpret this Fire to be meant of the Wrath of God himſelf. 1*ſt. God a conſuming Fire*, Heb. 12. ult. Then, 2*dly.* God himſelf to be that devouring Fire, Iſa. 33. 14. And, 3*dly*, his Wrath interpreted to be that Fire by the Pſalmiſt. And loe, how theſe all meet in this one ſaying, The fiery Indignation that devours the Adverſaries! Which the Apoſtle himſelf alſo interprets of God himſelf, afterwards. We know him that hath ſaid, Vengeance is mine. And it is a fearful thing, &c.

Particularly for that Scripture, even now cited, Iſa. 33. 14. If we conſult the Context, the occaſion of bringing in that horrid Out-cry, Who among us, &c. (as Interpreters agree) was that the Prophet had ſet forth, in the Verſes before, that moſt wonderful and prodigious Slaughter of the King of Aſſyria's Hoſt, when an hundred foreſcore and five thouſand (as 2 Kings 19. 15.) were in one Night deſtroyed by an Angel. And thereupon the Prophet in this Paſſage is to be underſtood, either to have related what an Impreſſion of Dread this ſo unparallel'd a Judgment had made upon, and ſtruck the Hearts of the Hypocrites in Sion with: As that which had made them to cry out thereupon, O how then ſhall we dwell with everlaſting Burnings? that is, with God himſelf. For they may well be ſuppoſed to have reaſoned thus with themſelves; if one Angel that is but a miniſtring Spirit to God, is able to blaſt and conſume ſuch a Multitude in one Night; how ſhall we have to do with God Himſelf, who is that infinite immenſe devouring Fire, and all thoſe Angels but as Sparks, and his Miniſters. And ſo according to this Meaning, themſelves are brought in, ſpeaking by the Prophet, as the Men of Bethſhemeſh did upon the like Judgment, 1 Sam. 6. 20. Who is able to ſtand before this holy Lord God? Or elſe thoſe Words may be ſuppoſed to have been the Prophets own Meditation and Uſe of Inſtruction, deduced from that Example; which he uttereth, as forewarning the Sinners in Sion to conſider, That if God be ſo terrible in the Judgments he executes by others, his Angels, who are Flames of Fire; how will you endure to dwell with God himſelf, and have immediately to do with him for ever, who is a devouring Fire and everlaſting Burnings? &c. And our Saviour's Speech is not remote from this of Iſaiah, when, ſpeaking of Hell, it is the Fire prepared for Hypocrites, (ſays he) Matth. 24. 51. Even as here, Iſaiah profeſſeth to ſpeak this of and unto the Hypocrites in Sion, as the Perſons above all other forewarned, when Hell is threatned. Again, as in Iſaiah, God himſelf is called the devouring and everlaſting Fire, ſo here in the Text, his Wrath is termed fiery Indignation devouring. And the Word tranſlated Adverſaries here, falls out alſo to be a Word decyphering Hypocrites or falſe Profeſſors, ὑπεναντίους, under-hand Enemies: who are alſo ſaid to look for, in their trembling Conſciences, this fiery Indignation: even as of theſe Hypocrites Iſaiah alſo ſpeaks, as being the Expectants of Hell. And again, our Apoſtle, chap. 12. 31. Our God is a conſuming Fire. So as upon ſeveral Accounts it is, that God himſelf and his Wrath is, more eminently, that Fire in Hell the Scriptures ſometimes ſpeak of.

If it be objected out of my Text, Is it not ſaid, He cometh in flaming Fire
2 Theſſ. 1. 8, 9. with his Mighty Angels? Will he not then uſe corporeal Fire, as alſo the Might of his Angels, and both as Inſtruments of his Execution, and their Deſtruction; and to that very End mention the Might of his Angels?

I anſwer, 1. This Fire here is not mentioned, as that which is the Cauſe of their everlaſting Deſtruction: but as that which is a Concomitant of Chriſt's Appearing; and alſo a Fore-runner or Harbinger to that Judgment, he comes to pronounce Sentence of, whereof the Deſtruction that follows is the final Execution. Judges uſe for Terror, and for a Demonſtration of their Authority, Work, and Office they are imployed in, to have viſible Inſtruments of Death carried before them, as Enſigns of their Power: A Company of Halberds or the like for their Guard to go before, and environ them round; which yet are not to be the immediate Inſtruments of the Execution of Malefactors it ſelf, but accompany their Perſons at the Examination and Sentence. And as to this or the like Uſe, is this Guard of Angels, and of flaming Fire mentioned, to be underſtood to ſerve: Both theſe referring evidently unto that his Appearing. Who ſhall be revealed from Heaven with his mighty Angels in flaming Fire, but not ſpoken of, as the Cauſes of the Deſtruction it ſelf that follows. Chap. 4.

to

The Angels further ſerve to gather Men from all the four Corners of the World, Matth. 13. 41, 42. to hale and bring them before the Judg; and after Sentence, to caſt them into the Place of Torment, called there a Furnace of Fire: but not of their making, but God's. They do but deliver them into the dreadful Place, wherein Execution is acted and performed.

2. This Fire which he appears with, is to to burn up this viſible World, as a fore-running Sign, to ſhew the Fierceneſs of the Fire of that Wrath which ſhall after prey and ſeize upon the inviſible World; that is, Mens Souls and Devils for ever. Not that Mens Souls are to be burnt up with no other Fire, than what the World is burnt withal, but that which burns the viſible World, is an Example and Demonſtration of that other Fire, that is kindled in his Anger, that ſhall in the end, burn to the Bottom of Hell, Deut. 32. 22. This as to what may be objected out of that Place.

3. I deny not from other Scriptures a created Fire in Hell: Let but that alſo be allowed which ſome of the Ancients alſo ſpeak of, that there is a double Fire there: One inward in Mens Souls; another outward. Gerſon aptly applieth that Place of the Pſalmiſt fore-cited, Pſal. 21. 19. unto that of this inward Fire, Thou ſhalt make them as a fiery Oven; the Lord ſhall ſwallow them up in his Wrath, and the Fire ſhall devour them. The Fire of an Oven is a fit Similitude of a Fire within, as into which Fire is put to heat it, and the Heat made more intenſe by the Cavity or Hollowneſs of the Place. Whereas to be caſt into a Furnace of Fire, as Chriſt ſpeaks, or into a Lake of Fire, as Apoc. imports a Fire without, into which the Matter or Perſons to be burnt are caſt.

And thus much for bare Scripture-Teſtimonies. Many other there are which might be here collected to confirm this, but are ſcattered in ſeveral parts of this Diſcourſe in a duer place.

CHAP. V.

A ſecond ſort of Proofs. Demonſtrations from Inſtances both of wicked Men and holy Men, who have felt in this Life Impreſſions of God's immediate Wrath: And that ſuch Impreſſions are Evidences of what, in the Fulneſs, is in Hell.

A Second ſort of Proofs, are Demonſtrations from Inſtances, in Scripture, of Perſons in this Life, who have felt Impreſſions of this Wrath of God in their Souls, upon God's rebuking them for Sin. And theſe Inſtances of Experience, upon Record, being added to thoſe foregone Scripture-Teſtimonies, will ſerve as ruled Caſes, joined unto Maxims in Law, alledged both of them for the Proof of one and the ſame thing; and will give yet more clear Demonſtration what is meant by Wrath, and what Hell is in the Fulneſs of it: And being joined to the former, do altogether give an abundant Evidence of this great Truth.

I ſay, 1. Of Men in this Life: And if any ſhould deny the Truth hereof, or that which we have been proſecuting, themſelves perhaps e're they die may be made miſerable Examples, verifying of both; and out of their own woful Experience, live to confeſs and acknowledg the Truth herein. For God doth in this Life ſingle out ſome, both of his Children and others, to whom he gives a Taſte what the one ſhould for ever have undergone, but that Chriſt did it for them; and of what the other muſt undergo for ever, without Repentance. Whereof thoſe Inſtances that follow, are undeniable Evidences.

And, 2. Theſe Terrors are wrought by God's immediate Hand; and from immediate Impreſſions and Repreſentations of his Wrath, made by him on their Souls, and to their Conſciences. For as God puts Joy into the Hearts of his Children in this Life, by the immediate Light of his Countenance, as Pſal. 4. ver. 6. Lord, lift up the Light of thy Countenance upon us: and ver. 7. Thou haſt put Gladneſs in my Heart, more than in the time that their Corn and their Wine increaſeth: and again, VVhom though we ſee not, yet believing, we rejoice with Joy unſpeakable and glorious, as the Apoſtle ſpeaks of thoſe primitive Saints: Even ſo when he is pleaſed to rebuke Man for Sin, he doth the like, in a way of Contraries, on Men both good and bad; correcting them, by and with Anguiſhments from the like immediate Stroak of his own Anger. God is the Father of all Spirits: and of the Spirits of his own Children upon a double Creation. And if the Fathers of our Bodies corrected us, and had Power to do it with bodily Puniſhment, by bodily Inſtruments; do we think that our Souls which lie naked before God, (Heb. 4. 13.) are not as immediately ſubject and expoſed to his Correction, as a Father of Spirits? And if ſo, that then he may and doth ſometimes chuſe to correct even his own Children with no other Rods but of his own? which are the immediate Emanations, Streamings and Dartings of his own Diſpleaſure: which when they feel, they wax pale and wan, and wander up and down, like unto Ghoſts in Hell, as if they were cut off by his Hand. And that thoſe Anguiſhments which either of theſe feel, are from God's immediate Hand alone; thoſe that have felt the Smart thereof, do readily acknowledg: for it is not in the Power of any Creature to ſtrike ſo hard a Stroak.

Heb. 12. 9.

And you ſhall hear ſome of themſelves by and by, ſpeak out ſo much, whilſt they were under the preſent Senſe thereof. Theſe things premiſed;

There are two things to make this Demonſtration compleat.

Firſt, The Inſtances themſelves of Perſons in this Life: On the Evidence of which the main Streſs lies, for the Proof of the Aſſertion.

The

The Second is, That ſuch immediate Impreſſions of Divine Wrath, are Evidences of what kind of Torment it is, which in the Fulneſs of it befalleth Men in Hell; and that both proceed from the ſame immediate Cauſe. Chap. 5.

The Inſtances are of two ſorts: That ſo we ſtill may have under two or three Witneſſes, this Word eſtabliſhed.

Firſt, Of good and holy Men.
Secondly, Of bad and wicked Men.

1. For Inſtances of holy Men, there are divers of them. As of Job, ſee his Complaints, chap. 6. ver. 2, 3, 4, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12. The Arrows of the Almighty are within me, the Poiſon whereof drinks up my Spirit: The Terrors of God do ſet themſelves in array againſt me. O that it would pleaſe God to deſtroy me, that he would looſe his Hand and cut me off! Which with other Paſſages in that Chapter, I ſhall after open at large. Again, chap. 13. 24, 26. Thou holdeſt me for thine Enemy, thou writeſt bitter things againſt me, and makeſt me to poſſeſs the Sins of my Youth: alſo chap. 16. ver. 12, 13, 14, 15. God, he alſo hath taken me by my Neck, and ſhaken me to pieces, and ſet me up for his Mark: His Archers compaſs me about, he cleaveth my Reins aſunder, and doth not ſpare; he breaketh me with Breach upon Breach, he runneth upon me as a Giant. I ſhall here only ſingle out that of Heman, which is a moſt full one, and alone ſufficient; and reſerve the explicating that of Job's Caſe, wholly unto the ſetting forth the Dreadfulneſs, which is the Subject of the ſecond Section.

Heman complains at the third Verſe of that Pſal. 88. My Soul is full of Trouble, &c. And what was the matter of that Trouble, and the inflicting Cauſe thereof? Ver. 7. Thy Wrath lies hard upon me, and thou haſt afflicted me with all thy Waves: Selah. Thoſe Words [Thy Wrath lies hard, &c.] others read, ſuſtains it ſelf, or bears up it ſelf upon me; which is, as if a Giant ſhould with his whole Weight ſtay himſelf upon a Child. And thou haſt afflicted me with all thy Waves. The Waves of that immenſe Ocean of Wrath (for unto ſuch Waves he again compares theſe Terrors in ver. 16, 17.) he ſays they came over him continually; and overwhelmed his Soul, as Billows of the Sea wallowing and tumbling upon a Jonah caſt into them. And ver. 14, 15, 16. he ſets out his Condition ſuch, as wherein there was not only a Privation of God's Favour, and that God ſeemed to reject his Soul, as if he never meant more to look upon it, or regard it; ſo ver. 14. Why caſteſt thou off my Soul? But further, poſitively, ver. 15. I ſuffer thy Terrors. And ver. 16. Thy fierce Wrath goes over me, thy Terrors have cut me off. The Blows which God gave his Soul were ſo hard and ſharp, that to his feeling they not only wounded or cut into, but cut off this Soul at every Stroak. The like follows ver. 17. and this put him into the Condition of Men in Hell. I am free among the Dead, ver. 5. that is, of that Society, Number and Company; and as one of them, that are cut off from thy Hand, or (as the Margent renders it) [by thy Hand.] All which are, as if he had ſaid, they are not the Strokes of Creatures I feel; or of thine Anger, as conveyed by Creature Diſtreſſes, but of thine own immediate Hand; and ſuch, as thoſe that are in Hell it ſelf, do feel from thee. Theſe are Notes and Degrees beyond, and higher than the Ela of Dolours from or by the Hands of Creatures, though ſet on by God: They are ſtrains of another Key, the doleful Air of which doth ſound another Hand and Stroak, (purely Divine) that did immediately ſtrike upon their Heart-ſtrings that ſpake theſe things. Theſe are the Reſoundings of Blows and Stroaks which God's own immediate Hand gave upon the bare Spirit, of one wounded by him; he that attentively liſtens to them, will ſoon perceive and eſteem (as they ſaid) this Man ſtricken and ſmitten of God himſelf. Creature-Diſtreſſes give a far leſs Report.

But that it was God's own immediate Hand, is more plainly by himſelf expreſſed, ver. 16. Thy Terrors have cut me off: and ver. 15. while I ſuffer thy Terrors, I am diſtracted, and ready to die from my Youth up (as in the ſame Verſe) thy Terrors, ſo he termeth them (he ſpeaking to God) or the Terrors [of thee] that is, 1*ſt*, From Thee efficiently, and from thy Hand ſetting them on.

And

Book XIII

And 2dly, Of Thee, as ariſing in me from and with dreadful apprehenſions and thoughts of Thee objectively, and of Thy ſore Diſpleaſure repreſented to my Soul by Thee. And ſo God's Terrors are every way ſet forth in diſtinction from Diſtreſſes from Creatures, or ſuch as are made mediately by or from Creature-afflictings, although they alſo be from God. Thus in like phraſe of Speech it is appoſitely ſaid, 1 Pet. 3. 14. Be not afraid of their Terror; he ſpeaks it of Men that were Perſecutors, and threatned the Saints. Their Terror, objectivè; that is, the Terror of them, or that Terror which the apprehenſion of their Power, Greatneſs, Strength, Threatnings, &c. may poſſibly work in you. In a like Senſe, thy Terror here is ſpoken of God. And the other great Apoſtle, ſpeaking of this ultimate Puniſhment of Hell, he in like phraſe termeth it, the Terror of the Lord, 2 Cor. 5. 11. that is, that Terror which is peculiar and proper to him, in and to the Souls of Men, who is the terrible God, (as he ſtiles himſelf in Moſes;) and ſays Nahum, Who can abide, or ſtand in the fierceneſs of his Anger?

There are further two Effects, which Heman there relateth, of this his having ſuffered theſe Terrors, or that befel his Spirit whilſt theſe Terrors were upon him. 1. That he was continually ready to die; the Wrath that lay on him was ſo heavy, as it even well-nigh thruſt his Soul out every moment, and made the Spirit to fail. And, 2. It made him not himſelf (as we ſay) put him out of his right Mind. VVhilſt I ſuffer thy Terrors, I am diſtracted. For the intention of a Soul taken up with, and extended by the Wrath of God, is ſuch, and is wound up ſo high, as the String is ready to crack. You uſually terms this in ſuch Perſons deeply wounded, [Trouble of Conſcience] (but that is more common) whereas this Diſpenſation requires an higher Word, it is indeed the VVrath of God, or the Terror of God in Conſcience, making it as a fiery Oven within it ſelf, as the Pſalmiſt ſpeaks. This for the Inſtances of Good Men.

A ſecond Inſtance is of Bad and Wicked Men. What was it cauſed Judas to hang himſelf? The Prophecy of the Pſalmiſt, and the Apoſtle's Reference to it, have reſolved us, that it was the Curſe or VVrath of God entring into his Soul: The Pſalm is the hundred and ninth, which was penned on purpoſe about him; the Apoſtle's Reference and Application is in Acts 1. 20.— In the Pſalm 'tis ſaid, ver. 18. as he loved Curſing, that is, Sin, which is that accurſed thing, before God, ſo the Curſe of God came into his Bowels (or Inwards) like VVater, and like Oil into his Bones, and filled all within him full of Anguiſh and Torment: and ſo was fulfilled that Saying, Indignation and Wrath, namely of God, cauſed Tribulation and Anguiſh in his Soul. The Similitudes or Alluſions there are elegant; That as there are Spiritual Oils which Mens Bodies being anointed withal, they ſoak into the Bones, &c. they cool, refreſh, and repair Spirits and Strength, and allay fervent Heats and Pains; into which more inward Parts, other Medicines more craſſe and druggiſh, cannot ſoak, or come. In the way of a contrary vertue or effect, he compares the Curſe of God on his Soul, unto a ſpiritual Oil, of a piercing, penetrating Violence, that ſtrikes in, as Quickſilver, into the Bones and nervous Parts, and fills them with unſufferable Torments. He compareth alſo this Curſe, and the Effects of it, unto ſuch painful Diſeaſes as are cauſed by ſharp corroding Waters in the Bowels; as of the Gout in the Bowels, which when it poſſeſſeth thoſe Inwards, is mortal and intolerable. The Apoſtle's Alluſion elſewhere is correſpondent to both theſe of the Pſalmiſt, when he ſays, The Word of God (through the Power of the Spirit) is a ſavour of Death unto Death in ſome Mens Hearts, as of Life unto Life in others, 2 Cor. 2. 16. The meaning whereof is, that look as venemous and ſulphurous Vapours and Damps in Mines and Caverns, ariſing out of the Earth, do ſtrike up ſuch Scents or Smells, as often kill, by extinguiſhing the Spirits of thoſe that deſcend into them; ſuch Exhalations of Hell and Wrath, doth the Spirit of God, by the Word preached, exhale and draw forth, and cauſe to aſcend in ſome Mens Conſciences, which gives them the very Scent of Hell it ſelf: They are the Savour or Odour of Death aforehand, [unto Death] and Damnation, and ſo are Vapours of the ſame kind, out of the ſame Matter that is laid up in the Mine or Treaſury it ſelf; as thoſe out of the Earth uſe to be. Chap. 5.

The ſecond thing requiſite to be added for the compleating the Demonſtration, is, That ſuch immediate Impreſſions of Divine Wrath in this Life, are ſure and certain Evidences (I ſay not as to what Perſons, but) of what kind of Torment it is, which in the fulneſs of it befalleth Men in Hell, and that both do proceed from the ſame immediate Cauſe. This needs not much probation, for the Inſtances afore given, carry their own Evidence with them of this thing to any intelligent Reader. And this general Reaſon for it, will readily occur to any one's Thoughts, that ſurely God will not puniſh them in Hell with a Puniſhment of a leſſer ſort or kind, (for we ſpeak not now of Compariſons of Degrees) than what his Diſpenſation reacheth forth unto ſome Men in this Life: for that is the proper Day, and Time, and Seaſon of Wrath, and of the Fierceneſs of his Wrath; in which the Fruits of their own Doings, are every way in their full Ripeneſs and Maturity to be returned to them; and theſe Inflictions in this Life are but the Buds and the Blooms that precede, yet both from the ſame Root and Cauſe. Now to be puniſhed by God's Wrath but mediately, through the force only of created Inſtruments, &c. as of material Fire, or the like, (if that were all the Puniſhment there) this were certainly by a lower kind or ſort, than to be puniſhed immediately from the Wrath of God it ſelf; as will abundantly appear in the ſecond Section, when I ſhall ſet out the Dreadfulneſs of ſuch a Puniſhment.

But let us particularly weigh the Inſtances themſelves, as we have ſingly and apart delivered them.

1. Thoſe Diſpenſations to wicked and bad Men, as Judas, &c.
2. The ſame as they are exemplified in good and holy Men, as Heman, &c.

And either of them will afford an Argument for the proof of this Propoſition in hand.

1. Theſe direful Impreſſions of God's immediate Wrath, when they do befal wicked Men, what are they to them? Not only Pledges or Fore-runners of that Puniſhment to come, (for ſuch all ſorts of Afflictions are unto wicked Men) but further, theſe are Spices and Grudgings, and leſſer intermitting Fits of thoſe future, fiery, burning, and continued Calentures and Fevers; yea, Earneſt-pennies of Hell, and ſo of the ſame kind with what in full Men ſhall there receive.

As we uſe to ſay and ſpeak of thoſe glorious Joys, which ſome Saints aforehand have the privilege to partake of, that they are pure Drops of thoſe Rivers of Pleaſure, flowing immediately from the ſame Fountain of Life: So we may as confidently ſay of thoſe breakings forth of Wrath upon wicked Mens Souls here, that they are the Sippings of that Cup of VVrath without mixture, (as the Revelation diſtinguiſheth it from thoſe in this Life) whereof the Wicked muſt drink the Dregs, though it be to Eternity, unto the bottom. And therefore we may make a true and warrantable meaſure, of what all ſuch Men are to look for in Hell, by what ſome few of them do partake of here. Rev. 14. 10.

And the Argument is ſtrong every way, from the one of theſe unto the other. For as Heaven and Hell are Parallel in a way of contraries, as out of Rom. 9. 22, 23. hath been ſhewn; ſo thoſe unſpeakable glorious Joys, and theſe contrary extraordinary Horrors and Anguiſhes, on the other hand, do hold parallel alſo, in being (in their ſeveral kinds) Prelibations and Taſtes of what is to come in the other World. And in this very poſture and tendency doth the Apoſtle ſet theſe two Diſpenſations together in this Life, in a parallel way, (as in Rom. 9. he doth the other) whilſt in the ſame Scripture, 2 Cor. 2. 15, 16. he compares thoſe Joys (common in thoſe Times) in them that are ſaved, to the breakings forth (at the opening of the Goſpel, as of a Box of Spiknard) of a ſweet Odour or Savour of Life unto Life, (namely, of the Life to come) aforehand, ſenſing their Souls with ſome of thoſe Perfumes that are fetch'd from that Country, and only grow there: and on the contrary, ſuch alſo he declares thoſe precurſory Savours or Odours of Death in their kind to be, which do ariſe from the threatnings of the ſame Word in Horrors upon many that periſh, which he pronounceth to be the very Evaporations of that Lake of Fire and Brimſtone, which is the ſecond Death, in ſtiling them the Odour or [Savour of] Death [unto Death] ſo ſpeaks he. Theſe Men often ſmell the ſcent of Hell in their Conſciences, and the Spirits of it do ſtrike up into their Souls. The very Aſhes and Smoak of that Veſuvius or Ætna of Hell, (I allude unto the laſt Words of Deut. 32. 22.) do fall upon them, which lightning upon Men in this Life, do, as thoſe Aſhes of the Furnace (Exod. 9. 8, 9, 10.) miraculouſly did, they cauſe Sores and Blains upon Mens Conſciences. And however, if the Apoſtle did therewithal intend the more common Diſpenſations by the Word, and ſo both the Ordinary and Extraordinary, of which we now ſpeak. Yet ſtill take and compare thoſe extraordinary Joys in the one, as a Savour of Life, with the extraordinary Horrors, that are the Savour of Death, unto the other; and in their Proportion there is ſtill the like Reaſon of both, as to the matter in Hand; and an alike preſignificancy in either of thoſe two eternal Eſtates.

Again, that each of theſe are alike, by and from God, and by his more immediate Hand diſpenſed. This I take from that Phil. 1.28. and ſubmit the interpretation of it. Where, exhorting Chriſtians unto an holy Courage and Confidence in their appearings (for the Cauſe of Chriſt) before their Perſecutors Tribunals: In nothing be terrified by our Adverſaries, ſays he. And upon ſuch a Bold undauntedneſs on their part, two Effects he tells them do often follow; and both from God alike, as two wonderful contrary Effects. Firſt, In themſelves, God elevateth and raiſeth up that their Confidence of Faith into a glorious Aſſurance and taſte of Heaven and Salvation, whither they are a going; ſo in theſe Words, Which is a Token to you (your ſelves) of Salvation. But on the contrary, which is, an evident token (namely, in their Perſecutor's Conſciences) of Perdition, if they Repent not, and that (namely, both theſe Effects) [of God.]

Two things I obſerve:

1. That theſe two contrary Effects run parallel ſtill, and that in order to, and of their being Tokens either of Salvation or Perdition; as in that other place, 2 Cor. 2. And ſo that as the Joys put into the Hearts of theſe Confeſſors, are the firſt Fruits of the Spirit, and therefore of the ſame kind with what Fruit and Harveſt they reap in Heaven; and thereupon alſo a Spirit of Glory (is ſaid) to Reſt upon them in ſuch a Caſe; it being it ſelf initial Glory, and the firſt Fruits of Glory, in a Way of Glory. Thus on the contrary, thoſe Terrors God ſtrikes their Adverſaries Hearts withal, are like Tokens and Evidences of Hell, no other than the Suburbs, the firſt Fruits of Hell, and Shadow of Death.

Rom. 8.

1 Pet. 4. 14.

And, 2. I obſerve, (which is that for which I quote it) that both theſe extraordinary Effects are alike wrought in the Hearts of either, by the ſame or like Hand, namely, Impreſſions from God. The Apoſtle therefore adds, ἀπὸ τοῦ κοίνου, unto both, [and that of God,] He being the immediate Author of the one as well as of the other; and both unto a like, though contrary purpoſe. And the Reaſon why God thus often takes that Seaſon and occaſion to put forth his immediate Power in the Conſciences of either, at ſuch a Time, is, becauſe his Glory is in no Paſſages of Providence in and upon Earth ſo highly intereſted and engaged, as upon ſuch Trials, wherein both his Truth and Children are brought to the Bar at once, and therefore is then pleaſed to diſcover ſomething more than Ordinary (though ſecretly) in the Spirits of Men. Have they no Fear, ſays the Pſalmiſt, that Eat up my People like Bread? One would think ſo, they look ſo big, and fall too ſo heartily to devour them: Yes, ſays the Pſalmiſt, anſwering it, there were they in great Fear. [There] that is, upon ſuch an Occaſion, at ſuch a time; and yet the ſame Pſalmiſt tells us, that there was no Cauſe of Fear, (compare for that, Pſal. 14. 4. with Pſal. 54. 4.) that is, not from Creatures. What was the matter then? or whence comes this great Fear? God is in the Generation of the Righteous, ſays the Pſalmiſt; thence was their Fear: [and that of God]. So the Apoſtle in that very Caſe. God takes part with his Children, and ſo ſtrikes strikes and Terrifies their Adversaries Souls, as he comforts theirs; and this is to them an evident Token, and as the first Baptisms, Washings or Sprinklings of that Perdition, which their Souls will be everlastingly Drowned in (as the Apostle's allusion is in Timothy) if they turn not. Chap. 4.

The and truth real Verification of both these so immediate Effects by God, and from God, (he as with a double-edged Sword striking contrary Ways at once.) Multitudes of Instances of both kinds the Story of the Martyrs doth relate; and particularly in the Examples of those persecuting Emperors Galerius and Maximinus, as Eusebius hath recorded them. Insomuch as that lamentable out-cry in the sixth Seal, Rev. 6. 16. Which the Kings of the Earth, and mighty Men (the Persecutors) are brought in so loudly uttering, in saying to the Mountains, Fall on us, and hide us from the Wrath of the Lamb. Mr. Mede and others have applied (as the Time and Order of the Visions of that Prophecy require) unto those Great Persecutors in the Roman Empire, whom authentick Antiquity hath related to have been terrified and struck with Horror, by God and the Lamb, in prodigious extraordinary Ways of Confusion; and those Terrors, such as Stories have related them, as were the livelier Representations of that Great Day of Wrath, ver. 17. And are therefore set out under the Notion thereof, as having been to them the very imperfect beginnings of it. This for the Argument from the instances of wicked Men.

II. The Argument is as strong, though not so direct, from the instances of Holy Men.

For, 1. This Dispensation to them, is not only an Argument in common with other Afflictions of this World, in their being a manifest Token of the Judgment of God; and that therefore a sure and certain Judgment is to come upon the Wicked, as he there argues. But this kind, being a Judgment of a spiritual Nature (as immediate inflictions of Wrath are) and properly belonging unto Souls, as they are the Subjects of the other World: It argues therefore upon a more proper Account, that the Punishment to come is of the same Kind therewith.——And such they must needs be, unless we will suppose, that God whips his own Children in this World with Scorpions, but wicked Men in the other World, but as with Rods in comparison of them. For it must be acknowledged, that these God's own blows, from his own immediate Hand, are sorer, and cause Wounds of a deeper Blew, than what are given by him through Creatures. Surely God hath not laid up gentler Rods for the wicked in Hell, then he puts in ure towards his Children: Have I smote them as I smote thee? Isa. 27. 7. I will correct thee in measure, Jer. 30. 1. not so them. The equity of those ruled Cases, (which the Reader may consult) Jer. 25. 15, 16, 17, 28, 29. Luke 23. 31. and 1 Pet. 4. 12, 17. do hold in this, and give us Warrant in like manner to argue, That if his own Children do Drink of so bitter a Cup here: then surely You, the Wicked of the Earth, shall much more Drink of the very same. And these Scriptures alleadged, and the strength of this our Inference, are all resolved into that of Psal. 78. 8. In the Hand of the Lord is a Cup, whereof the Wicked of the Earth shall (finally) drink the Dregs. And the Force therefore lies in this, That if such kind of Judgments and fiery Trials as these (I allude unto that Speech of the Apostle) thus falling upon their Spirits from God himself, do begin at some of the Houshold of God, then where will the Ungodly and Sinners appear? For his own People do but begin in this Cup to them who are to drink the Dregs, whereof themselves have but the Droppings. 2 Thess. 1. 9.

2. This dispensation of Impressions of Wrath, when it doth befal either the Godly or the Wicked, although there are differing Ends and purposes from God towards either; yet as they are one and the same in Substance (as other Afflictions are) so also they meet in this one and the same Issue, namely, to be an Evidence and Demonstration what Hell it self in the Extremity of it is. For as in the Wicked they are imperfect Teſtimonies of what they ſhall undergo, to the End they may repent; ſo in the Godly they are Evidences of what they have deſerved in Common with thoſe, and all wicked Men; and to ſhew that they are alike Children of Wrath, even as others; alſo unto them, they are ſenſible Experiments of what they ſhould have undergone, but that Chriſt hath ſaved them from the Wrath to come, that ſo they may be thankful, and love much. And many other holy Ends there are; yet ſtill ſo, as theſe contrary Lines do Centre in this, that Hell is prelibated and taſted by the one as well as the other.

Ephes. 2. 1.

But for a clear Eviction, that theſe Terrors in the Godly are no other than the very Shadow of Death, or vive and lively Reſemblances of what Men feel in Hell; Hear what themſelves ſay of it, whilſt under the Senſe thereof. Firſt, Heman for all the reſt, while you find him as with his Mouth put in Hell, into the very Duſt of Death, bemoaning himſelf thus, ver. 5. I am free among the Dead, like the Slain that lie in the Grave, whom thou remembreſt no more: and that are cut off from, or by thy Hand. When he ſays [Slain] it is in Language, the ſame which Chriſt uſeth of that Execution, Luke 19. 27. Slay them before me. And the whole of it is all one, as to ſay, My condition is like unto a Man's that is in Hell; and in ſome reſpects the ſame. Not that it had the ſame Conſequents, all Effects of Deſpair that Wrath hath upon the Damned: but in reſpect it is God's hand that inflicteth it, and alſo the ſame Wrath it ſelf he felt; And David who had experimented them, expreſly terms them the Pains and Sorrows of Hell, Pſal. 18. 5. and 116. 3. and elſewhere. And Jonah ſays the like, whilſt he was in the Whale's Belly for his Rebellion againſt God. Compare for this, Heman's Speeches, Pſal. 88. 6, 7, 16, 17. with theſe of Jonah, chap. 2. 2, 4. And ſo you have out of their own Mouths this Aſſertion verified; and the Conſequence we have inſiſted on, confirmed.

CHAP. VI.

A Third ſort of Proofs from Reaſons. 1. God's Juſtice. 2. Avenging Wrath, otherwiſe not ſatisfied. A Demonſtration added.

I Come now to the Reaſons of it, which will ſhew the Neceſſity of this Courſe, namely, of God's taking it into his own Hands. It might be wondred at, that the great God having an Hoſt or Army of Creatures ready to be his Avengers, ſhould over and above what they might do, himſelf ſet his Hand to this: But God and Chriſt are ſo far from eſteeming this a ſtaining of their Glory, as earthly Judges think it would be to Execute any themſelves, that this being a Trophee of regaining Honour debaſed by the Creature, they account it a part of their Glory. Thus God here challengeth it to himſelf, Vengeanee is mine, as a Glory he would not give to any other. And Chriſt is ſo far from accounting, that he ſtaineth his Raiment with their Blood, Iſa. 63. as that he glories to tread the Wine-preſs of his Father's Wrath alone. He glories in it.

There are two Reaſons drawn from the final Cauſes of this Puniſhment, which makes this Diſpenſation neceſſary: 1. It is for the Glory of his Juſtice. 2. It is an act of avenging Wrath, retributing Vengeance. Which two do center in this as a third, That it is to be Deſtruction to the Perſons it falls upon, as the Iſſue of both. All which can never be attained but by an Execution made by God's own immediate Wrath.

I ſhall found theſe Reaſons, as I did the other Proofs, upon what I find Foundations for in theſe very Texts I have choſen.

1. It is an Act of Juſtice; ſo in this Heb. 10. I will repay; and 2 Theſſ. 1. 6. It is a righteous thing in God. Τὸ δίκαιον ἀνταποδοῦναι, to repay again or recompence, and verſ. 9. Οἵτινες δίκην τίσουσιν, who ſhall pay or lay down a Puniſhment juſtly ſentenced; which in Heb. 2. 2. is called a juſt Recompence of Reward. And Rom. 6. laſt, the Wages or Reward of Sin. And this is the laſt Paiment, and all that for ever, Sin in them, or God for Sin, ſhall have; and therefore that whereby the Glory of God is to be fully recovered.

2. It is an Act of avenging Wrath, as in both theſe places is expreſſed.

Let us ſee what evidence of Reaſon each of theſe apart do afford, much more put together.

1. Juſtice. Concerning that the Aſſertion is, That if there be a Satisfaction made for Man's Sin unto God's Juſtice, but ſo far as it may be attained upon the Creature to be puniſhed in Hell, God himſelf will ſet his immediate Hand to it, and Juſtice requires this.

1. I ſay, A Satisfaction, ſo far as may be attained upon the Creature that hath ſinned, and which is to be the Subject of this Puniſhment. I put this in, becauſe otherwiſe it muſt be affirmed of Chriſt alone, that he gave full Satisfaction unto God's Juſtice, in whom there was ἔνδειξις δικαιωσύνης Θεοῦ, a Manifeſtation or Demonſtration of God's Juſtice for Sins that were paſt: yet ſtill, as although a full Satisfaction can never be had from or upon the Creature, (therefore in Hell they always Suffer) yet God doth recover what can be had, and paieth himſelf out of them as far as it will go; as thoſe Phraſes, Paying the utmoſt Farthing, Mat. 5. 26. and, Selling them and all they had to make Money thereof, Mat. 18. 25. do ſhew. Rom. 3. 25.

2. In this Caſe, that which Juſtice will require unto any tolerable Equitable ſatisfaction in this Puniſhment, is, that as Exact a proportion be obſerved, as poſſibly there may be, and as the Subject is capable of. The Juſtice of God as it is according to Truth, ſo exactneſs and Equity: and the work of God

God is perfect in every kind; and performed in due Weight, Number and Meaſure, but above all elſe where Juſtice is profeſſed. You may hear Juſtice ſpeak in Iſaiah, chap. 59. According to their Deeds, [accordingly] he will repay Recompence to his Enemies. There is an [According] and an [Accordingly] to that: So as all due Meaſures and Rules of Proportion every way ſhall be obſerved. Which Meaſures being ſet out in this matter, will evidently demonſtrate that God's immediate Hand is neceſſarily required thereto.

1. Let the Demerit of Sin be weighed: And for that in the General, I refer unto the firſt of theſe Treatiſes of the Heinouſneſs of Sin. And we ſhall find, that although the craſſer part of Sin is an inordinate Luſting after, or Enjoyment of things created, or ſinful Comforts in Creatures; yet that the great and Foundation-Evil of it lieth in an Averſion or turning off from God, and therein and thereby there is a reflecting upon God an immediate Slight or Undervalue, to an Infiniteneſs of Diſhonour and Contempt caſt upon his Goodneſs, Bleſſedneſs, that is to be had in him; as alſo to his Soveraignty, Prerogative, Supremacy, Holineſs, &c. which are ſhewn forth and laid at Stake of every of his Laws, whereof Sin is the Tranſgreſſion. Now if indeed it could have been ſuppoſed, that Sin were nothing elſe but that groſs and craſs Part ſpoken of, the Injoyment of Creatures, than a Puniſhment by Creatures only, might equivalently have been even with that its Obliquity of debaſing its own Excellency unto Creatures: But it being an immediate Reflection upon God himſelf, none can fill up the Proportion of a meet and full Puniſhment, which Juſtice doth require for this, but God himſelf. I may make uſe of Eli's Speech, 1 Sam. 2. 25. If one Man ſin againſt another, the Judg ſhall judg him, and revenge it: but if againſt God, who ſhall intreat for him? Thus he. And upon the ſame or like ground of Reaſon I infer, If one Creature wrong another, a Creature of the ſame kind can revenge it. If a Man ſhed Man's Blood, ſo far as it is wrong to the bare Creature, By Man ſhall his Blood be ſhed; ſo ſays the Law in relation to Man's Day in this World: But if Man ſin againſt God, who ſhall recompence it, when God's Day comes wherein he is to be glorified? None, ſo as to give Satisfaction to his moſt exact Juſtice, but God himſelf.

Yea further, if we retained to that Opinion of many learned Men, That Adam's Injoyment of God for ever, in that holy Eſtate of Innocency, ſhould have been of God, but as manifeſted in and by Creatures, and his holy Law, and not as in himſelf, or as in Heaven, &c. yet this would not ſerve for a Rule whereby to eſtimate, or make Proportion, that therefore this Puniſhment ſhould oppoſitely be only from God, by and through Creatures. For whatever his Injoyment ſhould have been, whether of God mediately, or of God as in himſelf immediately, I diſpute not: yet to be ſure when God was caſt off by him, or is by us immediately and directly reflected upon, [even God as God] which is that, whereby every Man's Sin is heightned in Rom. 1. 21. the meaning whereof is, that God as in himſelf is debaſed by Sin. So that as the Apoſtle ſays in the like Caſe, Rom. 5. 15. [Not as the Offence, ſo is the free Gift.] On the contrary, upon the like ground, Not as was the Caſe or Merit of Adam's Righteouſneſs, ſo is the Demerit of Sin; and ſo, nor of Puniſhment. Becauſe there is ſo tranſcendent an Unduеneſs, yea, an Injury done to the great God himſelf by the Creature in Sinning, over and above the Proportion of all created Grace or Obedience. For all Obedience was due, and all Man's Reward in obeying was from the mere Goodneſs of God, which he, and his Obedience, and all depended upon: and ſo the Proportion thereof is no way to be look'd at, either as the Meaſure of the Evil of Sin, or of what is to be the Puniſhment thereof. Sin we are ſure is ſo great an Evil, as no mere Creature, but Chriſt God-Man, and his Obedience or Suffering, could have ſatisfied God for, in the behalf of another. And why may it not alſo be ſaid, that as none but he, that was ſubjectivè God, could ſatisfy God for the Demerit of Sin, committed againſt God objectivè? ſo that Sin is ſuch an Evil, as cannot in the Sinner himſelf be throughly puniſhed unto the Satisfaction of Juſtice, but by God himſelf efficiently; that is, God to be the Inflicter thereof immediately.

A ſecond equitable Rule of Proportion, that Juſtice (requiring the fulleſt Satisfaction that may be had) will exact, is, that the principal Author and Actor in the Sin ſhould principally bear the Puniſhment. This not only Vengeance (which is the ſecond Topick) doth in a more eminent manner aim at, and affect, but Juſtice doth call for it alſo; the Juſtice both of God and Men. Now the Principal in Sin is known to be the Soul of Man. Which I ſhall urge, when I come to ſhew how Vengeance alſo ſeeketh to wreck it ſelf thereon. That which ſerves to my preſent purpoſe (which is this, that in the Point of Satisfaction, to be made unto God's Juſtice, it is moſt proper for God himſelf to puniſh Sin in the Soul) in order thereunto, is, Chap. 6.

1*ſt*, To enquire, What is it in the Soul or Spirit of Man, which God, when he comes to deal ſtrictly and down-rightly, as a Judg of Mens Souls, hath principally to do withal? All muſt acknowledg that it is Conſcience that hath to do with God as a Judg: for it muſt be that in Man, which is the moſt proper Seat of the Guilt of Sin, which Guilt is the Obligation unto Judgment and Puniſhment. And this to be Mens Conſciences, the Scriptures hold forth, and every Man's own Soul feels. Hence alſo to be purged from an evil Conſcience, is all one, and to be perfectly acquitted from the Guilt of Sin. And for God no more to remember our Sins, or to be atoned with us as a Judg; is all one as to ſay, that we on our parts have no more Conſcience of Sins, Heb. 10. 2, 3, 10, 11, 17 Verſes compared. Conſcience is that part of the Soul, whereby God as the Judg arraigneth every Man. It is the Hand which a guilty Soul holds up at God's Bar for all the reſt of Man; and is God's Witneſs within Man againſt himſelf, Rom. 2. 15. and that in order unto Judgment, as follows in ver. 16.

Again, 2*dly*, I enquire, when it ſhall come to the Execution of the Puniſhment ſentenced? What is it in the Soul or Spirit of Man that is moſt directly and naturally capable of Anguiſh and Torment, and what that part is, which God may moſt properly ſtrike a Man's Soul in, when he would rebuke him for Sin? Certainly, ſtill a Man's Conſcience. All Beaſts have one tender Part above any other, that moſt grieves them, if ſmitten: This, in guilty Man is Conſcience. We ſee it in Cain and Judas, God burnt them both in this Hand; in the Hand of Conſcience in this World.

Having by theſe two Enquiries, ſtated the Principal, both in Guilt, and in being the Seat of the Execution; I ſhall for the Proof hereof, as alſo in order to the clearer making forth the Argument before us, namely, That Juſtice requires God's immediate Hand, &c. I ſhall in a more ample manner ſet together theſe five enſuing Aſſertions.

1. That Conſcience, and the intellectual or underſtanding Power in Man's Soul, are God's Engagee, and the Principal in a double Reſpect. 1*ſt*, Conſcience is reſponſible for the whole in Man: or if you will, Principal in the Obligation. As being that, which, by its own Acknowledgment of a Judgment made unto God when he ſhall come to judg, binds over it ſelf, and with it ſelf, the whole Soul for the Payment. And upon that Account is to be reckoned the chief Obligee: and therefore the Execution is juſtly to be ſerved upon it, and through it upon the whole Soul. 2*dly*, If we take in together with Conſcience, the underſtanding part in Man; the Intelligentia, or the Spirit of the Mind in the Summity of it; that is, really to be accounted alſo the Principal, in reſpect of its ſhare in the very Acts of Sinning; ſo as juſtly the Guilt of every Act is refunded upon it as the principal Actor. For it is betruſted by God, with the Steering and Management of the whole Soul, with the Conduct of it, as the General. By reaſon of that Light, God at firſt ſeated in it, it was appointed for ever to be the Guide and Leader of the Will and Affections. And therefore God juſtly requireth the Account, or the Defaults and Miſcarriages of the whole, at its Hands. According to the Enquiry of thoſe Rules declared concerning Rulers of the People, Jer. 5. 4, 5. Theſe have known the Way of the Lord, &c. As alſo from that other like to it, given forth touching the Prieſts, and which we find ſo often inculcated in Ezekiel, I will require their Blood at the Prieſts Hands. And all theſe founded upon one and the ſame common Ground, common unto Conſcience with theſe; namely, Conſcience and Knowledg there being the Guides: And yet, in that Conſcience gives but an ineffectual weak warning againſt Sin (which ſhould powerfully ſway the whole) and the Spirit of the Mind, or the practick Underſtanding doth ſtill wickedly give ſecret Conſent unto Sin, &c. Hence therefore that Denunciation in Ezekiel holds, that God will require the Blood of [the Soul] at his Hands. Although the Soul (the Will and Affections) do periſh too, in their Iniquity, as it is there ſpoken. And, for this Cauſe it becomes Juſtice to puniſh this chief Agent and Offender, or this great Miniſter of State in Sinning, and to make theſe the Seat of the Execution above any or all other Faculties.

2. It will furthermore agree with the Rules of Juſtice, yea, it will be a ſpecial Trophy unto Juſtice, to have Sin it ſelf in the Guilt of it, made as far as poſſibly, to be it's own Tormentor, and Inſtrument of the higheſt Puniſhment in and unto the Soul that hath ſinned. There is no Sword like unto that, will Juſtice ſay, to ſlay a Sinner withal. It is of all other the moſt proper and exquiſite way of puniſhing. For the Sinner to eat (for ever) of the Fruit of his own Ways, and to be filled with their own Devices; and their Iniquity to ſlay them. This is the juſteſt and higheſt Doom which Wiſdom it ſelf can invent, or God's Power execute. The very ſame doth Jeremy alſo ſpeak, chap. 2. 19. Thine own Wickedneſs ſhall correct thee: know therefore, and ſee, that it is an evil thing and a bitter, that thou haſt forſaken the Lord thy God. Certainly for the Sinner to feel in the moſt intimate and immediate manner that may be the Bitterneſs of the Guilt of Sin; and to find that that, above all other Puniſhments that can be inflicted, is the ſharpeſt and ſevereſt; this is a tranſcendent Strain of Juſtice indeed. Now this is moſt exquiſitely accompliſh'd through that proper Capacity which Conſcience and the intellectual Part in Man have as to this very thing: And in their being the Seat of the Guilt of Sin, they are thereby further fitted to become the Veſſel or Receptacle of this the higheſt Puniſhment. This is in a great meaſure verified by that in Iſa. 59. 11, 12. We roar all like Bears: And what was it that cauſed this? For our Tranſgreſſions are multiplied before thee, and our Sins teſtify againſt us: For our Tranſgreſſions are with us; (they dwell with and poſſeſs us, and we poſſeſs them, as Job alſo ſpeaks:) And as for our Iniquities, we know them. It was their very knowing of their Sins, as ſet on by God, that made them thus roar, which is the loudeſt and wildeſt Tone of Grief, and Note of inſufferable Torment. And obſerve, how that that Knowledg had two things in Contemplation, which cauſed the Roaring. 1*ſt.* Sin, together with the Wrath of God, our Tranſgreſſions are multiplied before thee: And ſo they had God in their Eye as a Judg; which thoſe Words ſhew, We look for Salvation, but it is far from us, ver. 11. And, 2*dly. They teſtify againſt us.* This was the Accuſation of their own Conſciences themſelves. So as it was Conſcience which was the Seat, the Habitation, (as it were) where theſe two took up their Dwellings, continually quartered upon, and poſſeſſed. Jeremy ſays the ſame, To ſee and know how bitter a thing it is to ſin, &c. And though theſe Scriptures ſpeak not immediately of Hell, yet they do clearly point out to us, what, and wherein the moſt exquiſite Puniſhment of Sin lieth, and by what effected; namely, Knowledg of Sin and Wrath: whether it be in Men in forerunning Anguiſh in this Life, or hereafter in Hell in the Fulneſs of it.

Prov. 1. 32.

3. It is not, nor can it be the mere ſpiritual Evil that is in Sin, as Sin is Sin, and an Oppoſite to true Holineſs, and as it ſtands in a Contrariety to the Holineſs and Goodneſs of God; that is not it which Men in Hell ſhall ſpiritually know and ſee, ſo as to lay to Heart the Evil thereof in that reſpect: No, for that is the peculiar Effect of Grace, and proper to the Saints; even as to ſee the Beauty that is in Holineſs as it is Holineſs, likewiſe is——It is therefore Sin in the bitter Effects thereof only, whereby Souls ſtill remaining wholly ſinful, (as thoſe in Hell do) can come to know this Bitterneſs of Sin.

Now to proſecute this: The Evil of Sin is not ſufficiently or perfectly felt, no, not in the Effects of it, by the Conſcience of a Sinner, (ſo as it may be) until it be felt in that which is the higheſt, and moſt tranſcendent, and proper, per, moſt immediate and firſt-born Effect thereof, of all other. And that is no other than the Wrath and Indignation of the all-powerful God: For that his Wrath ſhall break in upon the Sinner, and ſo conſidered, it is the moſt proper Effect of all other of the Demerit of Sin, God being ſtirred up and provoked thereunto by Sin. Do you provoke the Lord to Jealouſy? 1 Cor. 10. 22. The like, Jer. 7. 19. Sins are as a Heap of Charcoal, wicked Mens Conſciences the Oven, and God's Wrath the Fire: Let this Fire be put into this Coal, and let both meet in a guilty Conſcience, and it inſtantly becomes a fiery Oven within it ſelf. And as concerning all other Puniſhments, I may ſay it, That all other, of what kind, or from whomſoever, although they are all the Effects and Deſerts of Sin, according to that in Jeremy: Thy Way and thy Doings have procured theſe things to thee, and this is thy Wickedneſs; as it follows there in Jer. 4. 18. Yet ſtill theſe are all of them deficient, and fall ſhort in repreſenting unto the Heart and Conſcience the Demerit of Sin, even ſo far as by the Effects it may be known, and the Soul yet further is capable to feel: But if once the Wrath and Indignation of the Great God come into the Soul and Conſcience, this, when felt, doth bear ſome anſwerable Proportion, as an Effect, unto ſo great an Evil as Sin is, which it hath deſerved; and when revealed unto and impreſſed upon the Sinner's Conſcience, it hath alſo the fulleſt Dimenſions of ſuch an Evil (even to the Sinner alſo) as Sin juſtly deſerveth, as far as any way the Creature is capable. Then it is that the Sinner feels and takes in the Evil of Sin, not as in ſecundary outward Effects only, (and ſuch all other Puniſhments whatſoever are in Compariſon to the Wrath of God, and therefore fall ſhort) but in this Caſe it feels immediately the Demerit of Sin, in that which is the Cauſe, the only Cauſe, the higheſt Cauſe of all other ſecundary Puniſhments which Sin hath alſo deſerved, whereof it alſo is the Cauſe. And this Diſpenſation of immediate Wrath riſeth up unto the exacteſt Demonſtration of the Evil that is in Sin, which any way from Effects can be made or given unto the Creature.

Chap. 6.

4. Of this immediate Wrath (as it is an Evil of Puniſhment) the Conſcience and intellectual Part in Man's Soul is not only capable to be made the Veſſel, the Receptacle thereof, but it lies immediately expoſed unto it. It is bare and naked unto him with whom we have to do, Heb. 4. 13. as in reſpect to God's Knowledg, ſo of God's puniſhing, as I have elſewhere ſhewn. Conſcience is as an open Door or In-let; or as an open Window is to the Sun, ſo is it to God, for him to come in at any time. That when-ever God will but take upon him to perform and execute the part of a Judg and Avenger, a Conſcience that is guilty, lies expoſed nakedly and barely unto his Anger, to receive the Strokes and Impreſſions of it. For I ask, What is God's Juſtice againſt Sin, but his juſt Anger againſt Sin? (as Rom. 3. 5. the Original hath it.) And what is a guilty Conſcience, but that in Man that is naturally ſuſcipient or apprehenſive of it? And theſe two are ſuited as Faculty and Object, and are (as it were) made one for the other; there needs no third or other thing (if God but pleaſe to hold forth his Anger, and apply the Corroſive to the Sore, ſo this unto the Soul) to convey his own Diſpleaſure by; Conſcience hath an Ear to hear what God will ſpeak, without any Medium to convey the Voice. Look as Faith is a Principle peculiarly fitted to take in God's free Grace, and Chriſt's Righteouſneſs; ſuch is Conſcience (when guilty) unto God's Wrath, immediately ſuſceptive of it. If God will but ſet a Man's Sins in order before him, and withal ſay unto Conſcience, I am angry; yea, look but angrily, and preſent himſelf as ſuch; then Conſcience inſtantly, like the ſenſible Plant, is ſtruck, ſhrinks, and falls down. For if God be angry but a little, as Pſal. 2. laſt, and rebuke us in his Anger, Pſal. 6. 1. then, at the very Rebuke of his Countenance we periſh, Pſal. 80. And it is moſt certain that God can reveal his Anger to the Soul immediately, as well as his Favour. And what is this Puniſhment we are ſpeaking of, but the Revelation of the righteous Judgment of God, revealed, as before others, ſo principally to a Man's own Soul? as ver. 9. And what is that Judgment, but God's Judgment, expreſſed, as in ſentencing, ſo in ſhewing his Anger and Wrath againſt Sin? as the whole Stream of that Scripture ſhews. It is therefore the Wrath and Face of God and the Lamb, when diſcovered, which a guilty Conſcience flies from, Rev. 6. 16. That, as Luther ſays, Animus ſibi malè conſcius potius ad Diabolum ipſum ferretur, quam ad Deum accederet; It had rather be brought before the Devil, and ſee his Face, than ſee God's. Terror of Conſcience, what is it, but all one with God's Wrath in Conſcience? See it in its contrary. Peace (which we call Peace of Conſcience) which paſſeth Underſtanding, is rather denominated the [Peace of God] which paſſeth Underſtanding, Phil. 4. 7. than Peace of Conſcience, although Conſcience be the Subject pacified, and whoſe Peace and Quietus eſt it is. And in like manner, Terror is ſtiled the Terror of the Lord, 2 Cor. 5. 11. And theſe things may perhaps afford as true a Light towards the underſtanding of that Maxim of the Apoſtle, Rom. 2. 8, 9. Indignation and Wrath, (viz. of God) Tribulation and Anguiſh unto every Soul (as the Seat of their Anguiſh) of Man that doth evil, as any other: and withal ſhew how it comes to paſs, that this Tribulation is executed from that Wrath, even by the reception of Conſcience: For of Conſcience alſo the following Words, ver. 15. do there ſpeak, and that as in order unto Judgment, ver. 16.

5. I add, as a Corollary from this, that Conſcience, though it be thus naked and open to God and his Wrath, yet it is ſo great a Secluſe, ſo faſt and privy a Cabinet, ſo intimate a Power and Principle in and unto the Soul it ſelf, and ſo entirely reſerved unto God himſelf, who is the Lord thereof, as it is not immediately ſubjicible to, or to be broke open by Creatures; no, not thoſe who are ſuperiour Spirits to it, either Angels or Devils; they are not able to terrify the Conſcience, until it hath been firſt made raw and tender by God. God only made the Heart, and God only knows the Heart, and God only can come at, and ſtrike at the Root of the Heart. The Devils or Angels can come but into an outward Room, the Fancy, and caſt in Images thereinto; the Fancy being the Soul's Looking-Glaſs, wherein it vieweth its own Thoughts, and from which it takes off into it ſelf the Species that are caſt in there: Alſo they may ſtir bodily Paſſions, (both which I have elſewhere ſhewn) but they cannot enter into the Cloſet of the Soul. God only is intimior intimo noſtro, as the Ancients expreſs it; God only is greater than our Hearts, as the Apoſtle expreſſeth it. Conſcience is a Book ſo faſt claſp'd, as it is God's Prerogative alone to open it, which he then at that Day will do: and thereunto that likewiſe may be applied, He openeth, and none ſhuts; and he ſhuts, and none opens. That Speech holds as true of Conſcience, as of any other thing. And as it is a Book which he alone can open, ſo in which he alone can write over every Man's Sins, not with Ink, but with Wrath, which like Aqua fortis, every Letter of it ſhall eat into the Soul. According unto that in Job, Thou writeſt bitter things againſt me, and cauſeſt me to poſſeſs the Sins of my Youth, Job 13. 26. Let no Man therefore imagine, that Devils are the greateſt Tormentors of Men, or of their Conſciences in Hell: Or if any would affirm it, I would demand, Who it is that torments the Conſciences of Devils themſelves? Certainly none but God. They now believing there is a God, do tremble; but in Hell they fear him, and for ever have to do with him. And it is as ſure, that the ſame God, with whom thoſe Spirits and their Conſciences have for ever to do, the Conſciences of Men ſhall alſo.

And as for all other mediate or outward Ways of Judgments executed, in which the Wrath of God is revealed from Heaven but as at the ſecond hand, take the foreſt and ſevereſt of them that ever God executed by Creatures; yea, ſuppoſe all of the ſeveral kinds of providential Judgments (I call them ſuch which are executed upon Men in this World afore-hand) which God hath, as Judg of all the World, in his riding Circuit through all Ages ſince the Fall, revealed his Wrath from Heaven by, againſt all ſorts of Unrighteouſneſs of Men, (as the Apoſtle ſpeaking of theſe Judgments, ſays in Rom. 1. 18.) ſuppoſe, I ſay, they were let fly upon any one Sinner all at once, yet would they not reach or touch that Man's Conſcience, further than as God ſhould, over and above the efficacy of them, ſtrike the Conſcience it ſelf with his Anger and Diſpleaſure, revealed more or leſs by himſelf therewith. And although in all ſuch Judgments, his goings forth are as of a Judg, and he accompanies ſuch Judgments more or leſs, but as with ſome ordinary light and glimmerings of an angry Deity; yet his coming as a Judg upon Mens Conſciences, at the Day of Wrath, and Revelation of the righteous Judgment of God, (as if he had never revealed his Wrath before) this is another manner of coming, and ſhewing himſelf a Judg indeed, rendring Indignation and Wrath upon the Souls of Men: and of that Judgment it is the ſame Apoſtle in the ſecond Chapter treats, as of that other in the former. Chap. 6.

And I may ſay of all the former, in compariſon to this latter, that they all are but as the Batteries of the Out-works, and as Bullets ſhot againſt the Walls in a Siege, which may indeed terrify the Inhabitants, and make them tremble; and ſo theſe the Soul, as by remote effects in the Suburbs of it. But the latter is as ſhooting in of Granadoes, which have been laid up with him in his Treaſury, carrying Fire from thence in them, the Fire of his fierce and ſoreſt Indignation; and theſe himſelf alone can ſhoot into the Inwards of Mens Souls. And this is as ſhooting Fire into the very Magazine, into that which is the moſt inward in the Soul, and fortified againſt the entrance of all created Powers; the Magazine where all the Gun-powder lies, that is, the Guilt of a Man's Sins; ſo as there needeth nothing elſe to blow up all. If his Wrath doth but touch, it takes, and ſets all on Fire. Deut. 32. Rom. 2.

Yea, give me leave upon the ſame ground, and by the like reaſon, further to ſay, That all the material Fire in Hell, by which the Soul ſhall and will ſuffer by way of a Compatibility, (as it is termed) or ſuffering by and with the Body an unſpeakable Torment, and this for the Sins a Man is guilty of; yet theſe Flames nor theſe Puniſhments (taken materially, and abſtracted from this Revelation of God's Wrath) would not break into Conſcience, not until God did therewithal break in with the Fire of his Wrath, and make the Conſcience and intellectual Spirit of the Mind, a fiery Oven within it ſelf, as the Pſalmiſt expreſſeth it in Pſal. 21. 9. almoſt in theſe very Words.

This being the ſtate of Matters between God the Judg of all, and the Souls and Conſciences of Sinners, as touching that due and equitable Puniſhment for Sin, and the execution thereof, which Mens Souls are capable of; I ſhall now compleat the Reaſon why the Juſtice of God ſhould move him to be willing; yea, and that there is in reſpect unto Divine Juſtice a kind of requiſiteneſs (if not neceſſity) for the Great God to take this courſe, to puniſh the Sinner by the Revelation of his own immediate Wrath: and this I ſhall do, by gathering together what hath been ſaid, from which the Arguments for both theſe two Aſſertions that follow, lie fair.

1. That God for his Juſtice-ſake ſhould be willing. For Conſcience being the principal Engagee obliged unto God as a Judg, and the underſtanding Power in Man the eminent Tranſgreſſor; and both lying ſo naked and immediately expoſed unto God's Wrath, and capable to receive the Revelation of it. An Anguiſh made thereby in the Soul, is the moſt proper, natural, ſuitable Reward unto Sin, to pay the Sinner home in his own Coin, as alſo the moſt ready, direct and ſhort way for God to take.

If therefore we ſuppoſe Juſtice be left to have but its free and full courſe; if Juſtice (according to the Prophet's Language, and God's own Rule and Direction given unto us) run down as Waters, and Righteouſneſs as a mighty Stream, in its proper natural Channel, and ſo as to fall into that moſt capacious Veſſel or Receptacle that is in Man to receive it. Again, if Divine Juſtice hath a will to put and lay its Charge and Execution where principally it is to be laid, even againſt the Principal, whether in the Obligation for Sin, or in the guilt of the Act of ſinning. Or if it be deemed, that Divine Juſtice will take a recovery where the fulleſt and faireſt Advantage lies, and recover his principal Debt of that which is the principal Debtor; and from that in Man which is capable to afford the moſt due Satisfaction and Puniſhment, as being that which is the Treaſury of all the Guilt of Sin, and moſt exquiſitely capable to ſuffer, and thereby to make fulleſt payment for all: Then we may conclude that aſſuredly God is willing to wreck his juſt Anger, and in his Wrath to break forth upon the Conſcience and intellectual Faculty of the Sinner in Hell, by the immediate Revelation of his Wrath, and that upon all the Accounts fore-mentioned, thereby to puniſh it.—And we may well ſuppoſe that his Juſtice is willing to do this, becauſe God is (as the Pſalmiſt with an Emphaſis) Judg Himſelf, Pſal. 50. 6. and judgeth for Himſelf, Prov. 16. 4. and for the Recovery of his own Glory, and Revelation of his Righteous Judgment. And this Courſe of immediate Wrath being a way above all other ſo natural, ſo ready, ſo direct, ſo compendious, and ſo ſuited to the demerit of Sin, (as hath been ſhewn) we may well think that God will be rather willing to ſhew his Wrath (as the Apoſtle ſpeaks) this way, (if we could ſuppoſe there might be another) becauſe this ſo falls in with, and agrees unto the Rules and Proportions of Juſtice fore-mentioned, which are moſt near and ſacred to him.

2. The ſecond Aſſertion, That it is alſo requiſite, yea, neceſſary, (I ſpeak it, as in relation to Juſtice attaining its Ends.) For all mediate Puniſhments executed by Creatures being deficient, as unto that wherein the very Eſſence of this Puniſhment lies, they all not reaching the Inwards of the Spirit of the Mind and Conſcience; and ſeeing that without God's Wrath revealed therewith by God himſelf, all ſuch Puniſhments would not compleat the Juſtice of God in a Puniſhment in any tolerable meaſure ſuitable: Then if Juſtice will have its perfect Work, and bring its Suit againſt the Sinner unto the ultimate iſſue, it is requiſite God himſelf put his immediate Hand to the Execution; otherwiſe this Work of Juſtice will not be perfect, (as yet every of his Works in their kind are ſaid to be:) and ſo he ſhould not only fall ſhort of ſatisfying his Juſtice, but alſo by not doing that towards it which is in his power to do, and which he is Lord of, he ſhould not in any tolerable meaſure content it: Eſpecially if we further conſider, that when all is done that can be, this Puniſhment will not ariſe to a perfect Satisfaction, (for the Creature's Puniſhment will not afford it, and therefore it doth for ever ſuffer) but only unto what may be had out of them towards it. I ſhut this Point up therefore with this, that if God be Judg Himſelf, he will do this Work Himſelf, which none elſe can perform for him, and without which all elſe would be utterly imperfect and defective. For, upon what hath been afore argued, I may ſay of all other Puniſhments and Puniſhers (although ſet by God upon a Man) what the Apoſtle ſays of thoſe legal Ordinances, (though inſtituted by God for his Worſhip) That they could not make the Service perfect, as pertaining to the Conſcience: So, nor all outward Torments, take them alone without God's Wrath accompanying them, they cannot make a perfect or compleat Puniſhment as pertaining to the Conſcience.

And all this alſo ſhews one ſufficient reaſon of Difference, why earthly Kings and Judges leave the Execution of Traitors and Offenders wholly unto others; becauſe they have no more Power, as in reſpect of Execution, to inflict a condign Puniſhment than other Men; but others can do it as exquiſitely, and their Juſtice be as fully ſatisfied thereby: but it is not ſo here. And for theſe cauſes God is ſo far from ſtaining his Glory thereby, (which other Judges would eſteem to be ſo) as that it is the only way fully to recover his Glory. And ſo much for that Argument drawn from ſatisfying of Juſtice.

A ſecond Reaſon is drawn from ſatisfying of Vengeance, or Avenging Wrath as againſt Enemies, which heightens Juſtice. Thus in many Places in the Old and New Teſtament, Deut. 32. Rom. 12. 19. 2 Cor. 10. 6. Rev. 6. 10. in which laſt place God is ſtiled both a Judg and an Avenger; [Judg and Avenge] ſay the Saints there. A Judg moſt commonly doth Acts of Juſtice in the behalf of others: but an Avenger is one that doth, or ſeeks Juſtice in his own Cauſe, and in his own Behalf and Intereſt; therefore the next a-kin, ſeeking the Life of a Murderer, was termed an Avenger of Blood. Now God is more nearly concerned in this, than any Creatures can be, in what may concern Vengeance in them, for whatever Injury. This is therefore Pœna Vindictæ, as of one enraged and provoked; Patience having been abuſed, as Rom. 9. 22. and ſo is turned into Fury.

Now there are two Properties of Vengeance, from whence I argue this, being put together.

Firſt, That it is the property of Revenge to vent it ſelf upon that which is principal in the Injury, and to make that the Veſſel of its Wrath, it will never be be ſatisfied elſe. Now that is the Soul of Man, which is the chief Seat and Subject of the Corruption of Sin, the chief Cauſe of the Act proceeding from thence, and that in which the Guilt ariſing from both doth principally abide. The Body is but inſtrumental in what the Soul doth; yea, and in ſome, and the greateſt Sins, the Soul hath the ſole and immediate Hand: This Soul therefore which is the chiefeſt Veſſel of Sin, muſt be the chief Veſſel of Wrath: Indignation and Wrath upon every Soul of Man that doth evil, Rom. 2. 8. whereof this undeniable Inſtance is given by God, that the Soul is it that ſuffers for the whole Man until the Reſurrection, as the Inſtance of the Rich Man ſhews: and it muſt be no leſs an immediate Sufferer, although not the alone Sufferer; but much more, after the Day of Judgment, unto Eternity. Chap. 6.

A ſecond thing which Vengeance affecteth is, that the Perſon that wrought the Injury die by the Hand of Himſelf, that is, the Avenger; It loves to do that Work it ſelf. And this eſpecially holds good in this Cauſe of God; and ſeeing it is to recover Glory to God by ſhewing Vengeance, He comes to be glorified, rendring Vengeance from the Glory of his Power.

I need not go about to form up any Argument from hence, for theſe two things, eſpecially the latter, do ſpeak home unto the Point; and being added unto what hath been ſpoken in the former Head of Juſtice, may be ſufficient.

There is a third thing which (as I ſaid) both Divine Juſtice and Vengeance do conſpire in, and that is, the utter deſtruction of that which is the principal Offender, (which is the Soul) it is the nature of Vengeance to work the deſtruction of that it is ſet againſt. And in this caſe of Sin, God's Juſtice alſo doth the ſame; the demerit of Sin is ſuch, as it exciteth Vengeance to it. And therefore in both theſe places which are my Texts, Deſtruction is mentioned as the iſſue and product of this Revenge and Wrath. So in 2 Theſſ. 1. 6,7. To render Vengeance on them, who ſhall be puniſhed with everlaſting Deſtruction: And Rom. 9. 22. To make known the Power of his Wrath on thoſe Veſſels of Wrath fitted to Deſtruction. Deſtroyed they ſhall be, though not in regard of Being, for they are to be Veſſels of Wrath, and therefore to be ſtill kept whole, in reſpect of Being, elſe they could hold no Wrath: and that is another Property of Vengeance, to have the Party made ſenſible of its Miſery, and that his Enemy is even with him. And therefore God upholds their Being, but deſtroys their Souls in regard of Well-being. Now that is never, till it be ſtripp'd of every Comfort, and every Corner of the Soul be filled with Miſery: for if any Corner be empty, it is not deſtroyed, it will not die.

Now this third or laſt thing doth of it ſelf afford at leaſt a Demonſtration, ab effectis, from the Event and Effects of this Puniſhment, That therefore it is God's immediate Hand that inflicts this Puniſhment: Which Demonſtration is to be added unto the former Reaſon, which was drawn from the Cauſes of it. For I argue, asking this Queſtion, What is able to fill the Soul of Man with Good or Evil? The Soul which was created in ſo large a Capacity, as to be filled with God, and with none but God himſelf; he only is able to fill the vaſt Corners of it with either. Creatures like it ſelf may afflict and torment it much, eſpecially whilſt in the Body, ſo much, as to cauſe it to deſire Death, and a being out of the Body; but the Soul they are never able to deſtroy. The Soul is a Caſtle ſo ſtrong built, as it can bear the Aſſaults of all its Fellow-Creatures, and ſuſtain it ſelf, and not ſink into Deſtruction. Nothing can deſtroy the Well-being of the Soul but God's Power. For it is ſaid, They may kill the Body, but God only can kill the Soul. And elſe, according to that Argument of Chriſt, Fear not them that can kill the Body only, &c. they were to be feared as God himſelf is, if they could kill the Soul, as God can do. For Chriſt ſays, God is therefore to be feared, and only to be feared, becauſe he can deſtroy both Body and Soul. And he redoubleth it with an Emphaſis, Fear him, yea, I ſay unto you, Fear him, Luke 12. 5. Indeed one Evangeliſt ſays, Fear him, which after he hath killed, hath power to caſt into Hell, which expreſſeth no more but an act of Authority to ſentence and caſt into Hell, as the Judg doth into Priſon. Yet the other Evangeliſt puts it upon this, becauſe he is able to kill the Soul, and that only he is able to deſtroy both Body and Soul in Hell. He ſays not Book XIII not barely to caſt into Hell as by way of Authority, but adds, kills and deſtroys in Hell, when they are caſt thither; for God is both Judg and Avenger: and therefore if it be Deſtruction, 'tis evident He only can, and muſt do the Execution. And therefore in the Text, 2 Theſſ. 1. 8, 9. their being puniſhed with everlaſting Deſtruction, is attributed to the Glory of his Power. Theſe are ſome of the Reaſons of this great Point.

CHAP. VII.

A fourth ſort of additional Confirmations, drawn from the Harmonies that are between it and other Divine Truths.

I Shall in the laſt place caſt in ſome Harmonies, or Congruities and Correſpondencies, which this holds, and makes up with other Divine Truths: and in ſuch Harmonies and Concords, there is much of Reaſon, at leaſt to confirm, if not demonſtrate Truths in Divinity.

1. To begin where I left. Hereby it comes to paſs, that as the Souls of Men and other Spirits were immediately made and created by God, (who is therefore in a peculiar reſpect, and with an oppoſite diſtinction to the Fathers of our Bodies, ſaid to be the Father of Spirits, and the God of the Spirits of all Fleſh) ſo that their laſt Termination or End ſhould be into and by his immediate Hands alſo; this makes up a congruous and ſuitable Diſpenſation. That look as they receive their firſt Being from him, likewiſe they ſhould return to him, as Eccleſiaſtes ſpeaks, as to their ſole and immediate Author and Creator; and ſo receive from him, as a Father of Spirits, their Portion at his immediate Hands. And Man's ultimate End, either way, is called their Portion, Pſal. 11. 6. Mat. 24. 51. whether it be in Bleſſedneſs as their Inheritance out of his Love, or Miſery as the Wages of their Sin. And thus hereby God himſelf is made the end, and the beginning or terminus, the Alpha and Omega of Souls, to whom be Glory for ever.

2. Thereby alſo there comes to paſs an anſwerableneſs and a proportion held between the two Conditions of Heaven and Hell; which the Apoſtle ſeems to make the ultimate aim and determination of God's Counſels; unto which all in this World are but Preparations, as he calls them, (thus Rom. 9. 22, 23.) for the ſhewing forth of his own immediate Glory; What if God willing to ſhew his Wrath, and to make his Power known, endured with much long-ſuffering the Veſſels of Wrath fitted to Deſtruction: And that he might make known the Riches of his Glory on the Veſſels of Mercy, which he had afore prepared unto Glory?

And thirdly alſo, It is ſaid, that after that Chriſt the Judg of All, hath delivered up his Adminiſtration and Kingdom unto his Father, then God ſhould become all in all, 1 Cor. 15. 28. (not in reſpect of Being) that is, not as if the Being of all things ſhall return into God again, as ſome have wickedly dreamed; or, that God's bleſſed Being, and the Creatures ſhould become one; that can never be. 'Tis a contradiction to ſay, a Creature made out of nothing ſhould come to be of it ſelf; and ſuch God in his Being is, but all in all in reſpect of immediate Diſpenſation. And ſo look as to the Veſſels of Mercy, he will then be all in all, ſo that they ſhall not need the Light of the Sun and the Moon, &c. (that is, the Comfort of any Creature, though all created Excellencies in the Spirit, and Quinteſſence of them ſhall be there) why ſhould it not be alſo meant that the ſame God (which makes up a Parallel, ſeeing Mens Sins deſerve it) ſhall be all in all in Hell too, in a contrary way to the other?

4. And the rather this may be thought, becauſe when God ſhall have cauſed this viſible World to paſs away, the Earth and the Heavens, we now behold (as ſome judicious Divines have inclined to think from Job 14. 12. and other Scriptures) either by turning them into nothing, or into their firſt Chaos: and ſo there being none (that is, of this old World) left, but pure Heaven and Hell, Hell, (which are as two ſpiritual Places or Worlds) and therein theſe two ſorts of Creatures rational, either thoſe who are wholly Spirits, (as Angels good and bad) or the Spirits of Men, (whoſe Bodies are raiſed ſpiritual, and ſo fitted for that other kind of World) both of which are capable of Happineſs or Wo from him. That then theſe two ſorts of intelligent Natures, God and they being left thus alone, (the brutiſh part of the World being done away) ſhould have to do with him for ever immediately, either in a way of Wrath or Bleſſedneſs. And ſo God ſhall be all in all, in either Worlds; and this to be the final ending, and Cataſtrophe of all. But theſe I urge not, but only mention. Chap. 8.

CHAP. VIII.

The Dreadfulneſs of this Puniſhment argued from all and each of the Particulars treated of in the former Chapters. That it is a falling into the Hands of God immediately: That it is the Deſtruction of the Soul: That it is for the Glory of God, and the manifeſtation of his Power: That it is Satisfaction of God's Juſtice and avenging Wrath. The Dreadfulneſs of it argued alſo from thoſe Inſtances of good and bad Men, their having ſuffered theſe kinds of Terrors in this Life. And laſtly, That it is a falling into the Hands of the Living God.

HEB. 10. 31.

It is a fearful thing to fall into the Hands of the Living God.

THE ſecond thing at firſt propounded to be handled, was the Dreadfulneſs of this Puniſhment. It is a fearful thing to fall into the Hands of the Living God. Which being an Inference from the foregoing Words, and not a ſimple Affirmation only, do come in with an amazing kind of Implication, wherein the Apoſtle leaveth it to our own Thoughts to conceive of, and is as if he had ſaid, How dreadful muſt it needs be! which I leave to your own Thoughts to conceive of, I not being able (ſays he) to utter or expreſs the Terror of it.

Hence the genuine and natural way of handling this Part, is to ſet it forth by way of Inference or Corollary, from that former Point, which we have diſpatch'd. I ſhall therefore accordingly draw forth Demonſtrations of the Dreadfulneſs thereof, from thoſe fore-cited Scriptures, or Grounds already laid in the fore-gone Chapter, which doth afford ſufficient Topicks unto this Head.

Firſt; Let us take the main Doctrine it ſelf, as in the General it is uttered here, That it is a falling into the Hands of God Himſelf, and not of Creatures only; and a being puniſhed from his Preſence, and the Glory of his Power, immediately, as 2 Theſſ. 1. 9. And then extend and widen your Apprehenſions, to take in how fearful this muſt be, which I ſhall demonſtrate by a comparative Gradation, raiſed thus:

I. If it were but a giving us up into the Hands of mere Creatures to afflict, and they aſſiſted by God, but with the common and ordinary concurrence of his his Power, which joins with, and upholds the Agency of all things in their workings; whether in comforting us, or in diſtreſſing of us: this the loweſt Degree of ſuppoſition. And yet conſider how dreadful this Suppoſition would render to our Thoughts, ſuch a puniſhment to be: if God ſhould be but as the looker-on, and withal the ſetter of them on: or (as in the Scripture phraſe, Mat. 18. 34.) but only deliver us up to theſe Tormentors. As when it is termed a being caſt into a Lake of Fire and Brimſtone, ſuppoſe it were a Lake of material corporeal Fire only, wherein thy Body is caſt; and thy Soul, no otherwiſe to ſuffer than by what the Spirits of that Body it is united to, and dwells in, is by that Fire made ſenſible of: And ſuppoſe withal, the Spirits thereof were kept up, in their utmoſt ſenſibleneſs, of what torment that Fire could inflict; and thy Body continually flaming, (as the Buſh in Exodus) and yet never burnt up; how terrible is it for Fleſh and Blood to think but this of it! Or, to uſe another Compariſon, If a Man were bound Hand and Foot with his Mouth ſet open, and were caſt into a Pit, wherein, as in the Apoſtles Sheet, let down from Heaven, were all manner of Creeping things, Toads, Serpents of all ſorts, fiery Scorpions, Cockatrices, Vipers, Adders, Snakes, &c. Flies, Hornets, Lice, Piſmires and Frogs, &c. And that theſe ſhould bite and ſting thee, with exquiſite Pain and Torment; alſo creep in at thy Mouth, down into thy Inwards, gnaw and ſwell thee there. How did but one ſort of theſe Creatures, when ſent by God, afflict Pharaoh and all the Egyptians? A Man in this Caſe, ſhould endure not only the Pains mentioned, but beyond them the torture which Antipathy, Contrariety and natural Abhorrency works, which is of all other moſt exquiſite, and turns Nature backward (as of Jordan it is ſaid) into a recoyl; and wreſteth it againſt it ſelf, and throws it off its hinges. I need not inſtance, how by this way of Antipathy, a Cock makes a Lion roar, a Mouſe the Elephant to tremble, a Serpent or a Toad, a Spider, ſets the whole of Nature in Man into an inconſiſtency; a Man knows not how to bear up, ſuſtain himſelf, or be himſelf. But beſides what Pains or Torments, theſe, or any of theſe, can inflict.

II. Let us proceed in our Suppoſition a ſtep further. If God ſhould ſo far further aſſiſt, as to ſet his Wiſdom a-work, and that only to find out and invent, what mixture of Torments from Creatures would be moſt exquiſite of all others. As if a King (whoſe Wrath is compared to the roaring of a Lion, who yet ſets but others to Torment) ſhould but order ten Men to invent Torments for one poor Man (as the Sicilian Tyrants did.) Hence, Majus tormentum ſiculi non invenire Tyranni. And then conſider, for the Exageration of this unto your Thoughts.

1. That the Nature of Man is ſo framed, as it is capable to receive diſcomfort, as well as comfort from every Creature: the leaſt Creature hath a Sting in it, as well as Honey, unto ſomething or other, in Man's Nature, if it be applied and turned againſt it.

2. God knows all the Ingredients in the Creatures Natures; as alſo it is ſaid, he knows our Frame, and ſo therewith the ſuitableneſs of Senſe in Man's Nature thereunto. Think then what Puniſhment from their mixture, can he invent and temper; and put all the Venoms, (the dregs) into one Cup, as the Pſalmiſt ſpeaks: And as by ſome leſſer proportion we may eſtimate this, by what thoſe that know the Secrets of Nature can effect, above what other Men, as Solomon did.

3. Now, raiſe up your Apprehenſions from theſe two Steps of compariſon thus firſt laid: If, (as the Pſalmiſt ſays,) He that made the Eye, ſhall not he ſee? ſpeaking of that infinite Omniſcience in God himſelf, above what is in the Creatures: Say I then in this Caſe, if the Creatures that God hath made, may thus be ſuppoſed able to work Anguiſh to a Man, Dolour and Miſery: what then can God, the great God, that made all theſe himſelf, immediately inflict? As the Prophet Iſaiah ſlighteth the Ægyptians and their Aſſiſtance, Iſa. 31. 3. Thus, Their Horſes are Fleſh, not Spirit, and the Egyptians that ride them are Men, and not God. So we may of all theſe Suppoſitions, and ſtill ſay, theſe are but of what Creatures can do; who are Creatures, and not God; Fleſh, and not Spirit. Chap. 8

III. That we may yet heighten the dreadfulneſs of this immediate Hand of God, let us make a third Suppoſition, beyond the former; that God not only ſhould uſe his ordinary Concurrence with Creatures, but (as ſometimes he hath done) arm thoſe Creatures with his own Wrath, over and above the Activity of their ordinary Sphere of Workings; heating that Sword of created Powers he ſtrikes with, red hot in the Furnace of his fiery Indignation: And ſo intending the Power of Creatures beyond their Strength; yet ſtill ſo as to uſe them as the ſole Inſtruments of that Anguiſh wrought: conveying his Anger with them but as at ſecond Hand. And ſo, as the Man, ſo afflicted, is ſenſible, not of the Stroke of the Creatures only, but of God, and his Wrath accompanying and ſeconding it, through them. This would be yet more Dreadful than the former, and yet ſtill fall ſhort of what the Doctrine hath held forth, that himſelf is the Avenger, and ſtrikes immediately.

1. This latter is more dreadful to ſuppoſe than the former; yea, is not a bare Suppoſition; for if God conveys his Wrath with the leaſt Affliction, and in his Providences fights againſt a Man, and the Heart is thereby made ſenſible of his Wrath therein: this, as it often falls out, ſo it uſeth wonderfully to enflame and rage in Man's Spirit: even as a poiſoned Arrow uſeth to do the Fleſh, which it ſelf alone would only Pierce and wound, (but as it is an Arrow;) but if further dipp'd in Poiſon; or, as the Apoſtle's compariſon is, Eph. 6. made a fiery Dart, it works a further Anguiſh and Torment. Now there is no Creature, but if armed with God's Wrath, or if it be but a Meſſenger, and a Repreſenter of God's Anger, but it is infinitely more Dreadful than of it ſelf otherwiſe it is. What is leſs than the ſhaking of a Leaf, which ſeems it ſelf to Tremble? But if God ſend faintneſs of Heart, and Terror with it, and by it, into a Man's Heart, the very Sound of the ſhaking of a Leaf chaſeth them, Lev. 26. 36. Every Graſs-blade, burniſhed with God's Wrath, ſtrikes Terror into the Heart, as that flaming Cherub did into Adam's. This is experimented in Men troubled in Mind, unto whom, Iratumq; refert quælibet herba Deum. Every Creature preſents an angry God, and ſtrikes trembling of Heart into them. They fear where no Fear is. The light, which of all Creatures is the moſt amiable and pleaſanteſt, yet to a Spirit wounded, the Beams thereof are dreadful; and when it is Day, he wiſheth it were Night, and that Darkneſs might for ever cover him; and why ſhould the Light ariſe, ſays he, to diſcloſe my Rebellion againſt my Maker? Thus Job, chap. 4. 20. Wherefore is the Light given to him that is in Miſery? Even as on the contrary, to a Soul God's Face ſhines on, every Creature ſtrikes up Comfort and Gladneſs into it. He hears the Thunder, (which made Caligula tremble) 'Tis my Father's Voice, ſays he: views the Stars; theſe are mine, ſaith he. The greateſt Afflictions to ſuch an one do turn into Joy, knowing he hath a Treaſury of Love in the Boſom of his Father that ſent them. The perfect contrary is here.

2. This latter Suppoſal of God's arming the Creatures with his Diſpleaſure, and conveying it by them, falls yet lower, and is leſs than God's immediate Wrath from himſelf; even as God's Love conveyed by Ordinances and means, is a far lower Diſpenſation than the immediate Communication thereof from himſelf. God's Power, though never ſo great, yet in working by and through an Inſtrument, is abated, leſſened, ſtinted in working. You may have read and heard (perhaps) the compariſon between God's Power and the Creatures, in reſpect of Torment, thus expreſſed: That the one is, but as if a Child ſhould ſtrike a Blow, in compariſon of a Giant. But to the caſe in Hand, I have uſed to raiſe it thus: A Giant that can of himſelf give a great Blow immediately, if he yet ſhould take but a Straw to ſtrike withal, the Stroke would prove but ſmall; and yet it would be greater than if a Child ſhould ſtrike with it; Why? becauſe his Power is limited and enervated by the Inſtrument he ſtrikes withal. Now what are all the Creatures, though in God's hand, but as Straws in a Giant's? And yet how terrible is his Wrath when conveyed by them? I conclude this with Alluſion to that Speech of Rehoboam, 1 Kings 12. 10. The weight of God's little Finger is heavier than that of the whole Creation: And if they be able, or God by them, to ſcourge us with Whips, than God himſelf immediately with Scorpions.

Having thus conſidered how the immediateneſs of God's working doth comparatively exceed that of the Creatures, or of himſelf by the Creatures: In the Fourth place, Let us go on more ſadly, in a poſitive way, to conſider, What his immediate Power is; what the Strength of thoſe Hands is which Men muſt fall into. And how may this amaze you? As it is ſaid of God's Wiſdom, There is no end of it, no Searching of his Underſtanding; ſo nor of his Power. And how can I diſcover or unbare that Arm before you? I begin to do it thus: God had begun to enter into a Conteſt with Job, and touched him but with his little Finger; and Job ſoon felt him, and cries out: If I ſpeak of Strength, or think that way to grapple with him, He is ſtrong, Job 9. 19. If but his little Finger be ſo ſtrong, as Job found it, what is his Fiſt, which Ezekiel next ſets forth the Strokes of his Wrath by? And what God himſelf there ſpeaks, againſt covetous and bloody Men, Ezek. 22. 13, 14. do you apply to every Sin you live and go on in. Says God, I will ſtrike with my Fiſt at thy diſhoneſt Gain. And can thy Heart endure, or thy Hands be made ſtrong, in the Day in which I ſhall have to do with thee? Let every one that heareth or readeth this, who yet go on in their Sins, conſider with themſelves: Am I able to ſtand it out, and encounter this God? And encounter him thou muſt, if thou goeſt on in thy Sins. Or can my Heart endure? ſayſt thou. The Apoſtle puts the very ſame conſideration upon the Corinthians Spirits, when guilty of Idolatry. (And 'tis the ſame caſe of Uncleanneſs, or any other known Sin) Do you provoke the Lord to Jealouſy? are you Stronger than he? 1 Cor. 10. 22. As if he had ſaid: Do you not conſider what a powerful God you have to do withal, and that immediately? Can you grapple with him, think you? or make your part Good with him? Hear yet further, by what Way it is that the Apoſtle ſets forth to us the Strength of God, and let us make a further Eſtimate thereby, as to the matter in Hand. The Apoſtle in the ſame Epiſtle, though upon another Occaſion, chap. 1. 25. had ſaid, That the Weakneſs of God is ſtronger than the Strength of Men. In which Speech, he evidently puts our thoughts upon making of a Meaſure of what is to be accounted more or leſs, ſtronger or weaker in God, in reſpect of the putting forth his Power by what the Scriptures do expreſs of him, after the ſimilitude of Man, as in Job the compariſon is of his little Finger; and in Ezekiel, of his Fiſt: whereof the one is weaker (in Man) and the other ſtronger. Now in Man, what is weaker than his Breath? which will ſcarce blow away a Straw (and his weakneſs is uſually expreſſed by this, that his Breath is in his Noſtrils.) Now eſtimate the Strength of God according unto what is ſaid in the Scriptures of God, (and that as to this point of deſtroying us) after the manner of Men. By the very Breath of his Noſtrils we are conſumed, Job. 4. 9. His Power is ſuch, that he needs put forth no more (as it were) to Deſtroy us. His very Weakneſs is enough. Job had in the ſame verſe, firſt ſaid, by the Blaſt of him we Periſh; but becauſe a Blaſt imports ſome forcibleneſs, the utmoſt might of what is in a Man's Breath, and it is a Man's putting forth his Breath with a more than ordinary Violence; therefore by way of Diminution and Correction he adds, by the breath of his Noſtrils; that is, (ſtill meaſuring it, as ſpoken after the ſimilitude and manner of Men) by the moſt ordinary and weakeſt putting forth of his Power. And yet we ſee if he puts forth no more, he blows us to Deſtruction, when his intent is to deſtroy: And why? for of us the Scriptures uſe a compariſon ſuitable thereto, in ſaying that were are but as the Duſt of the Ballance, Iſa. 40. 15. Yea, all the Nations (put all together) are but as the ſmall Duſt of the Ballance: As that little little that is left in the Ballance, when what is weighed is taken forth; which is eaſily blown away with a Man's Breath. Again, yet lower, in Man; his Nod is of leſs Force than his Breath: and yet, Lo, at the Rebuke of his Countenance we periſh, Pſal. 80. 16. He can look on one that is proud, and abaſe him; and his Eye can caſt about Rage and Deſtruction, Job 40. 11, 12, 13. He had ſaid before, ver. 9. Haſt thou an Arm like God? He riſeth from the Power of his Nod, the Weakneſs of his Power, unto the Power of his Arm: And ſo may we, from his Looks to his Breath, from that to his little Finger, from that to his Fiſt, from that to his Arm and Hands, in which his Strength is ſaid to lie, Luke 1. 51. O think how dreadful then it muſt needs be, to fall into thoſe Hands, (as here in the Text;) into thoſe Hands, I ſay, that meaſure the Waters in the hallow of them, that ſpan the Heavens, and at the ſame time comprehend alſo all the Duſt of the Earth in one Graſp, as one of us doth a little Pibble. And ver. 15. Takes up the Iſles as a very little thing; as you would do Hazel-Nut-ſhells out of a Pail of Water. Now for thee, a poor Graſhopper, to be taken into thoſe Hands, and to be grip'd and cruſh'd, and ſqueezed with the Might thereof. But the Scripture-Expreſſions go further yet, to have this God, like a Mill-ſtone, fall upon thee with his whole Weight, which is Chriſt's Compariſon, Matth. 21. 44. Thy Wrath lies hard upon me, ſaid Heman. You ſee in Summer little green Flies, creeping upon green Leaves, which if a Man doth but touch, they die: ſuch a ſlight Creature art thou in Compariſon to this God. Or further, (as Job's Compariſon is) that this Great and Mighty God ſhould run upon thee as a Mighty Giant, with his full Force, the utmoſt of his Force, as a Man doth upon his Enemy; yet ſo Job ſpeaks of it, chap. 16. 14. And in another Place, the ſame Job, that he ſhould take thee about the Neck, and throttle thee. O what do we, poor Potſheards of the Earth, ſtriving with our Maker? as Iſaiah ſpeaks, chap. 45. 9. Or, as Chriſt ſpake from Heaven, will Fleſh think to kick and ſpurn againſt ſuch Iron Pricks and Pikes, which run up into the Soul, whilſt it ſtrikes upon them?

And that we may yet further have a through Senſibleneſs of our Obnoxiouſneſs and Expoſedneſs to this Great God, let us withal conſider his abſolute Soveraignty over us, as well as his Power. What an inconſiderable Portion doth any one Soul (and every one is ſingly to deal with him for his own Particular) bear unto this Infinity of Being and Glory? to whom not one Nation, but all Nations; and not only all Nations that are now extant in the World, but that ever have been, or ſhall be, are counted as nothing, yea, leſs than nothing. What a little thing is this Iſland of ours, to the whole Body of Nations? And yet all Iſles are to him but a little thing, as Iſaiah ſpeaks. Lord, think thou, what am I to Thee! or any Man! that thou ſhouldeſt regard him? Yea, and being ſinful, why ſhould any Man (as he is of himſelf) think that God ſhould have any Stick or Demur within him, to with-hold himſelf from deſtroying him every Moment? For loe, even the greateſt of Men, that have been of greateſt Wiſdom, Parts, (being Sinners) he hath in his Diſtance and Greatneſs laid them aſide, and regarded them not at all, Job 38. laſt, He regards not the Wiſe in Heart. What is all, or any Excellency in thee to him?

There is therefore no way but to turn unto him, and ſeeing you muſt fall into his Hands, prevent him by putting your ſelves into his Hands. This great Arm of his may be held: Iſa. 27. 5. Let them take hold of my Strength; Fury is not in me. There is an Arm alſo of another one, that is, Chriſt, who can deal with God for thee, and overcome him. [Iſa. 53. 1. To whom is the Arm of the Lord (ſo he terneth Chriſt) revealed?] Thus you have ſeen and heard ſomething of the Greatneſs of this God, and that but in general, as he is the Author of this Puniſhment, and thereby this Puniſhment aggrandized unto us, and yet how little do we know of him? as Job ſpeaks.

Secondly; Subjoin hereunto the Conſideration of what is the eminent Subject of this Puniſhment, the Soul of Man; and that the Iſſue of this Puniſhment is no leſs than the Deſtruction of that Soul. And theſe two (which I join together) will afford further Reflections, to help us to conceive of the Fearfulneſs of this Puniſhment. And the Conſideration hereof cometh in moſt pertinently next unto the foregoing, wherein the Power of the Agent was ſpoken to; but now in this the Capacity of the Subject or Patient, and the Receptivity thereof of Impreſſions from this Worker.

That the Soul is the immediate Veſſel of this Wrath, that I ſpake to before, Matth. 10. 28. Fear not them that kill the Body, but are not able to kill the Soul: but rather fear him which is able to deſtroy both Soul and Body in Hell. The former Part of which Words evidently import, 1. That the Soul alone, and immediately in it ſelf, and not only in reſpect of what it ſuffers with or from the Bodies Suffering, is the Subject of this Puniſhment, though the Body alſo is. And, 2. Chriſt concludes, that it is the Deſtruction of both Body and Soul.

You know alſo the Rule, That the Meaſure of every Agent's working upon another muſt be taken from the Capacity of the Subject which the Impreſſion is made upon, as well as from the Power of the Agent that works. Fire works more fiercely upon Oyl and Brimſtone, than upon Stones, or upon Duſt or Sands. You may diſcern this in the Parts of your own Body: Rhume falling upon the Lungs doth not torture ſo, as falling upon a Tooth, a Joint, or Eye. How alſo are the inward Parts capable of more exquiſite Torment, as by the Stone, &c. bred in them, than the outward are, by any Cuttings or Wounds?

Now the Soul of Man is capable of more exquiſite Impreſſions from God's Hand, in that it is an intelligent Spirit, and in the ſubſtantial Faculties of it aſſimulated to him, made in his Image, a Spirit as God is, that hath an Underſtanding, and other Faculties, to receive and take in from him what he is pleaſed to pour forth into it by them; and is accordingly more ſenſible thereof, than the Senſes of the Body are or can be ſuppoſed to be from Creatures. The Prophet Nahum ſeems to have conſidered this, chap. 1. ver. 5, 6. When ſetting out God's Wrath to Men in the Effects of it, he firſt conſiders, how it works upon inanimate Creatures, that are at ſuch a Diſtance (in reſpect of the kind of their being) from God's: It kindleth a Fire, ſays he, which maketh the Hills to melt, and the Earth is burnt up at his Preſence; yea, the World, and all that dwell therein, (which he will one Day burn up with Fire.) Now from theſe the Prophet infers and raiſeth up our Thoughts. Doth he work thus upon inſenſible Creatures, as the Hills, and the Earth, and the whole World? Do the Elements melt with fervent Heat? Are the Heavens ſhrivel'd up as a Scrole of Parchment before him, by the Violence of that Fire which he ſends forth? Conſider then, O conſider, ye Sons of Men, how will the Fire of his Wrath work upon your intellectual Souls? And as unto this Scope and Coherence with the former, I underſtand what follows, ver. 6. Who can ſtand before his Indignation? who can abide in the Fierceneſs of his Anger? He here turneth his Speech, and applieth it to Men. For the Souls of Men being in their Beings and Kind nearer of kin to him, Spirits, as he is the great Spirit, and the Father of Spirits, which were made only for God, and to be filled with God, have accordingly a more intimate Senſe of his Workings on them. And 'tis as if he had ſaid, If then he ſends forth ſuch a Fire as melts and diſſolves the Earth, Mountains of Iron or Braſs; how much more will it be able to melt Wax? And ſuch are Mens Souls to God, comparatively to other Creatures. Chriſt ſpeaking of his Soul, when he had thus to do with God, in the Day of his Anger, Pſal. 22. 14. (that Pſalm was all made of him) My Heart is melted like Wax, it is melted in the midſt of my Bowels. And towards this Senſe doth Sanctius ſeem to underſtand that Complaint of Job's, uttered to his Friends, concerning thoſe Terrors of God which he felt within him, Job. 6. 4, 11. Verſes compared; Is my Strength the Strength of Stones? Or is my Fleſh, my Nature or Conſtitution, of Braſs, that I ſhould be able to encounter with this Indignation of the Almighty? Stones and Braſs have no Senſe in them, (or but a dull Senſe, if their Opinion ſhould hold true, de ſenſu verum,) they have no Blood nor Spirits to make them ſenſible of theſe Arrows of God's Anger he had ſpoken of, ver. 4. Ay, but Job meaneth to ſay, I have a Soul made of other Metal, ſuited to God, the great Spirit, whoſe Arrows I feel, which is exquiſitely ſenſible of all his Actings. Take the Statue of a Man made of Braſs, or cut out of Stone, and ſlaſh and cut him, and he feels it not; but cut the ſame

Limbs

Limbs that anſwer to theſe in a living Man, made of Fleſh and Blood, with the ſame Knife, and what Torture is it? You may ſee this, and aggravate it to your ſelves, by what inferior Spirits to this great Father of Spirits, as Angels and Devils, can work upon Man's Soul, that is a Spirit like themſelves, being yet inferior to them. When Saul had but one evil Spirit ſent from the Lord, how diſtracted and terrified was he, though in the midſt of the Enjoyments of a Kingdom? 1 Sam. 16. 14. Alſo that great Apoſtle, that had his Spirit fortified, as having been newly feaſted with the Joys of Heaven, and that not as at a Diſtance only, but as a Spectator, that ſtood by, preſent there, 2 Cor. 12. Yet one Angel, Satan buffeting him, he was ſo diſturbed and put to it, as he knew not what to do, or how to bear it: only God told him, My Grace is ſufficient for thee. Well, but do Mens Souls in Hell fight with Fleſh and Blood, yea, or with Principalities and Powers chiefly? No, that is but whilſt they are the Rulers of this World, as there 'tis added. And yet if theſe Spirits have ſuch Power over our Spirits to buffet and terrify them; what hath God the Father of them? Chap. 8.

Again, conſider how the Soul is capable of more Joys and Sorrows, than the bodily Senſes are, and this by how much it doth exceed them in its Eminency and Capacity. The Soul is able to drink up all the Pleaſures the whole Creation can afford the bodily Senſes, or they bring in: to drink them up (I ſay) even at one Draught, and yet would in the midſt of it, ſtill cry, Give, Give. Now as it is in the Body of a Man, look whatever part is capable of more Pleaſure, it is alſo capable of more Pains: So the Soul proportionably; look how capable it is of greater Joys (as it is from God) it is as much of Sorrows alſo, unto the ſame Extention and Intention of them.

Add II. As to this Point, That as the Soul is thus vaſtly capable of more Sorrow and Anguiſh: So further, that theſe Souls to be puniſh'd are filled with Sin, and in that reſpect termed Veſſels of Wrath fitted to Deſtruction, Rom. 9. 22. Take a Barrel of Wood; and of it ſelf it will burn as it is Wood: but if withal it be pitch'd within, and full of Tar and combuſtible Matter, it will burn more rageingly. Of unfruitful Branches, apoſtatizing from Chriſt, it is ſaid, John 15. 6. That they are caſt into the Fire, and they are burned; that is, they burn to purpoſe, make a mighty Fire. That Clauſe [And they are burned] is added by way of Auxeſis or Emphaſis, elſe it needed not. We ſee when Sins were but laid upon Chriſt by Imputation, who in himſelf was ſeparate from Sinners, and had no Conſcience of Sin, how yet the Anger of God againſt Sin dealt with him, as undertaking to be a Surety for Sin. And can you drink, ſays Chriſt, the Cup that I am to drink of, that is, ſo as to bear it and not be overcome with it? Now in Luke 23. 31. you may ſee, how Chriſt infers from his Sufferings, as being the Sufferings of one who had not been himſelf perſonally guilty of Sin; what therefore, with difference, thoſe in whom Sin is inherent, muſt expect. Weep for your ſelves (ſays he) for if they do thoſe things to the green Tree, what will be done in the Dry? that is, who are fit combuſtible Matter for the Fire; and, as the Prophet ſays, are as Stubble fully dry, Nahum 1. 10. And of the Terribleneſs of God's Anger, he had before diſcourſed (as was even now obſerved) in all that Chapter.

Again, III. In the Soul, ſome Faculties are more capable of Anguiſh from his Wrath than other; even as in the Body ſome Parts are more of Pain. If a Man would avoid a ſcalding Drop to be let fall upon any Part, of all other he would fence his Eye. You ſee how a Mote, a Flie troubleth it; a ſcalding Drop of Oyl would much more. So it is in the Faculties of the Soul. You read there is the Spirit of the Mind, Epheſ. 4. 23. Now God will wound, even that, and aims at it, in this Puniſhment. A wounded Spirit who can bear? (ſays Solomon.) If a Man's Fleſh be torn and cut, he may yet bear up himſelf, but if his Bones be broken, Who can ſtand? Now the immediate Stroaks of God are ſo compared by David, as unto the breaking of the Bones, in compariſon of other Dealings of God with, and Inflictions from God towards us.

The next thing which I mention but as an Appendix to this Head, is, that it is the Deſtruction of the Soul. So Chriſt and the Apoſtle again and again.

They

Book XIII

They are ſaid to be loſt: and though Men may metaphyſically diſpute, that it is better to be, though in Hell, than not to be: Yet Chriſt hath ſaid, It were better not to have been born. I ſhall ſay no more as to this Head, than what the Apoſtle expreſſeth this by, in 1 Tim. 6. 9. in ſaying, [That Men are drowned in Perdition and Deſtruction:] One would think, for him to have expreſſed Death and Deſtruction, it might have been enough to have ſaid, that a Man were drown'd, or ſunk down to the Bottom of Waters, or the like Materials that would ſuffocate a Man: But to ſay he is drowned in Perdition it ſelf, or that Perdition and Deſtruction are the Pit, the Lake he is plunged into; what can be ſaid beyond it? And yet here he is not content with one ſingle Word to expreſs that by either, as to have ſaid drowned in Perdition, but muſt double it: and add another Word [Deſtruction] alſo. Deſtroyed, therefore over and over: Drowned over Head and Ears, as we ſay, and all that is in them, drowned and ſunk into Perdition; the whole Soul: yea, the whole Man. No Part above Water. Deſtroyed with a double Deſtruction: both for Object double, and alſo for the Subject of it, both Body and Soul: ſo Chriſt ſays.

The Third Head, that affords matter of Exaggeration to our Thoughts, whereby to infer the Fearfulneſs of this Puniſhment, is taken from the Ends, or final Cauſes mentioned in that firſt Section. The Ends, I ſay, which God hath in, and is provoked by, unto this Puniſhment. And as I then ſingly argued from each of them the Immediateneſs of God's Hand therein; ſo now I ſhall from each of the ſame, the Dreadfulneſs hereof. There were three Attributes of God in ſpecial, and his Glory in common, which God aimeth at the Manifeſtation of, in this ultimate Guerdon or Reward for Sin. 1. The Manifeſtation of the Glory (that's in common;) then particularly, 1*ſt*, Of his Power; 2*dly*, The ſatisfying of his Juſtice; 3*dly*, Of his Wrath. The Scriptures I then had Recourſe to, do ſpecify all theſe. I ſhall ſpeak to theſe in this Section, and to the other in the following.

1. In General, that he aimeth at his Glory in it (which is God's general Aim, and is common to theſe and all other Attributes) is evident. His Glory, (as it is to be manifeſted to us) is but the Reſult or Shine of all or any of his Attributes, manifeſted in that Place of Prov. 16. 4. The Lord hath made all things for himſelf, that is, for his Glory (for that is himſelf: My Glory I will not give to another) it follows, yea, even the wicked for the Day of Evil. The Day of Evil there, is the Day of Puniſhment: the Wicked themſelves alſo making and preparing themſelves by Sin thereto; but ſo as thereupon God manifeſts his Glory upon them, as well as upon all things elſe; which he hath made in their ſeveral ſeaſons and kinds. And Solomon doth mention this of Puniſhment as one eminent Inſtance of all things elſe, whatever, that are for his Glory, and which will be ordered then by him, thereunto in a ſpecial manner: And becauſe (it being ſo great an Evil) Men might think otherwiſe; Yea, but ſays Solomon, God ſeeks and will have a Glory out of this Puniſhment, as well as out of all things elſe; of which ye all acknowledg, that God made them for himſelf. And ſo in that 2 Theſſ. 1. 9. They are ſaid to be puniſh'd from the Glory of his Power, that is, from his Power, glorifying himſelf on them, as I before expounded it. And as it is for the Glory of this his Power, ſo by the ſame Reaſon of all, or any of thoſe other Attributes, he is pleaſed to put forth therein.

I ſhall premiſe two Maxims, from whence fore-laid the Inference, for the Dreadfulneſs of this will more readily riſe, in an infinite Height, unto our more ſerious and ſober Apprehenſions.

The Firſt: That all things which God doth for his own Glory, he will perform them like himſelf; that is, like God: and ſo make the utmoſt of every thing, that that ſubject Matter, whatever it be, will afford of Glory to him. This Rule is aſcertained to us, as from the Nature of God; ſo from that ſaying of the Apoſtle, Rom. 1. 21. where he condemns the Gentiles, that they glorified him not as God, that is, in ſuch a manner as was worthy of him; they came not up to that height of Glory, ſo great a God muſt have given unto him from Creatures. Now if it be the Sin of Creatures, that they fall ſhort in glorifying God as God; then be aſſured that if God himſelf undertakes and profeſſeth to do a thing for his Glory, he will, in the whole of it, and Iſſue thereof, either glorify himſelf as God, or never begin to eſſay or meddle with it, but would have let it alone for ever. Chap. 8.

2. From hence, take this alſo along with you, to carry it in your view, through each particular that follows; That then, if God ſeeks to glorify himſelf in a way of Puniſhment, that Puniſhment muſt be Anſwerably great and proportioned to raiſe up a Glory unto God, ſuch as ſhall Glorify him, as God, in that way. For it is the Puniſhment or the Judgment it ſelf which he executes (as the Pſalmiſt ſays) out of which this Glory muſt ſpring. This Puniſhment, as it is a Puniſhment, is that, wherein God will be glorified as God. That is, it is the Soil which this Crop of his Glory is to grow up out of, and the Crop or Harveſt of Glory can be but what the fertility of that Soil, as ſuch, affords: Theſe things in general fore-laid.

Now, 3. The greatneſs or vaſt comings in of that Glory, God reckons upon from this, may riſe up in your View, by theſe Particulars.

1. Had it not been that in compariſon of other Works of his, an infinitely exceeding Revenue of Glory would have ariſen unto him from this, God would never have ſet his Heart or Hand to this Work of all other: I ſay it again, He would never have ſet his Hand to this Work of all other. For as he is Creator, he hath a Love to all, and hates nothing that he hath made, he loves no ſuch Bloody work for it ſelf; nor would have ever embrued his Hands in the Deſtruction of his Creature, had it not been for an exceeding weight of Glory; and as being juſtly provoked thereto, it becometh a juſt Prize, on that Hand preſented to him: which he will be ſure withal to manage and perform with the utmoſt Righteouſneſs. It is certain, that this is to him opus alienum, a work ſtrange to his Nature, as the Prophet ſpeaks. He does not naturally, nor nor willingly (ſays the Lamentation) afflict, or grieve the Children of Men. Lament. 3. 33. Men's Quarrelings and Cavils hereabout did put him long ſince to his Oath, and he hath cleared himſelf by Oath in Ezekiel, As I live I will not the Death of a Sinner; that is, not ſimply, as if I delighted in it for it ſelf, as a God that is cruel; (which was objected) and therefore I ſay peremptorily it muſt be an infinite maſs of Glory, after much long-ſuffering and impenitency of Men, that moves him to it. And if ſo, then according to the Principles even now mentioned, do you that are impenitent Sinners look to it, for ex veſtro cario (I allude to Job's Speech, Skin for Skin) out of the Blood of your Souls, and their Deſtruction, ſhall this Tribute and Tax of Glory be raiſed, according unto what your Sinfulneſs ſhall be found to have been. And O then, do you collect how fearful it is like to be! View it in a contrary, and indeed though an Inſtance far tranſcending the Proportion of this, yet in reſpect of holding ſome likeneſs to God's proceeding in this, will conduce to heighten our Thoughts about this. It is a Conſideration that helps our Faith (and 'tis a great one) that for God to deliver up his own Son to Death, and for himſelf to bruiſe him, (you have it all in a ſhort ſaying, Iſa. 53. 10. It pleaſed the Lord to bruiſe him) and that this ſhould be the Object of his good Pleaſure, there muſt have been ſome incomprehenſible vaſt deſign of Glory to accrue there-from, to be attained by doing it; ſome high End and far tranſcending Deſign that was to be the Iſſue and Product of it. Which as you know was the Glory of his Mercy and love in the Salvation of Men: Glory to God on high, Good will to Men. And this is as great an Evidence and argument to our Faith, that God is reſolved to ſave Sinners, as can be given. For what hath been thus done to Chriſt, is paſt recalling; not to be recompenſed any other way than by ſaving many by the knowledg of him, as God there ſpeaks. Now as this Inſtance of the higheſt kind ſerves to evidence this thing to us, ſo though in a far leſſer Proportion, you may take ſomewhat alike Illuſtration at leaſt in the Point in Hand; That certainly it muſt be a great ſurpaſſing Maſs of Glory that will come in unto him by this Puniſhment for Sin, which ſhould any way gain him to be ſo much as willing to it, againſt which otherwiſe he hath ſo much in his own Nature;

Book XIII

Nature; who had it withal in his abſolute Power to have given effectual Grace to all, as well as to ſome; which latter all acknowledg he hath done. Even as it was in his Power to have ſaved the World without Chriſt's Death, Mark 14. 36. Oh! ye Sons of Men, know and underſtand your God, and be moved thereby to turn unto him: and the more by this, that it muſt and will prove an infinite Puniſhment that is coming upon you; becauſe were it not, an immenſe ſum of Glory would accrue to him out of it, and that but upon your final impenitency: He that is a God ſo good in himſelf, would never elſe bring it upon you. And according to that firſt Maxime premiſed, it muſt be the ſorcneſs of the Puniſhment from whence that Glory muſt ariſe.

2. Conſider herewith, how that he hath reſerved this, as his laſt Work in that other World, when this World ſhall come to be folded up as a Garment, and a final concluſion be put to all theſe other Diſpenſations and Works of Glory that are now on Foot. And as Solomon told us that he hath made the Wicked for himſelf and for the Day of Evil; So Job alſo tells us, That the Wicked is reſerved to the Day of Deſtruction, and ſhall be brought forth at (or to) the day of Wrath: [Reſerved] by God, till after all his other Works of wonder are ended and gone, then to be brought forth as a Trophie of his Glory. Both themſelves and all their Sins are reſerved till then, and laid up amongſt God's Treaſures, to be then made publick. The Salvation of his Elect, and the Deſtruction of the Wicked, are the laſt and only Works that then remain, and do remain, and are purpoſely kept unto that Time, when he means to ſhew himſelf to be God indeed; and to make all Men and Angels know that he is God. It is an Argument of the fearfulneſs of that Puniſhment the Devils ſhall undergoe, Jude 6. 2 Pet. 2. 4. That he hath reſerved them in everlaſting Chains unto the Judgment of the great Day. It is a certain Rule, that God's latter Works do ſtill exceed and put down the former: So far, as the former ſhall not in Compariſon be remembred, Iſa. 65. 17. Jer. 3. 16. When God would make his Apoſtles (as to this World) the greateſt Spectacle of Miſery that (excepting what he made his own Son, who was the firſt-born among many Brethren) he ever put upon Saints, Prophets or Martyrs, that had preceeded and were before them. How doth the Apoſtle expreſs his Deſign in it, 1 Cor. 4. 9. I think (ſays he) that God hath ſet forth us the Apoſtles [laſt] as it were Men appointed to Death, for we are made a Spectacle unto the World, and to Angels, and to Men. Alluding to thoſe Gladiators, brought up laſt upon the Stage, as a Spectacle to the People. The thing I cite it for, is, that the greateſt Work in that kind, he appointed to be at laſt: As alſo, was that which immediately preceded it, the coming of his Son in the laſts Days. And but this of puniſhing the Wicked in his laſt, and very laſt, of all that he will do for ever.

3. Eſpecially let us withal, conſider beſides, how all his Actings and Works whereby to glorify himſelf for ever, ſhall be reduced and contracted to theſe two. He gives over all other of Providence, and Spiritual Diſpenſations by Ordinances, and ſets down and betakes himſelf to theſe two alone. God hath nothing elſe to do in the other World. And he hath no other revenue of manifeſted Glory that remains Extant; he lives and reigns eternally in or upon theſe two: And yet this is then, when he is reſolved, to the utmoſt to be glorious. And yet all is but what comes out of theſe two Works, the Salvation of the Elect, and Deſtruction of the Wicked.

4. Again, Conſider theſe two are uniform Works, and unvarying; and without Shadow of turning: In this World he makes a Variety and enterchange of Providences; which are exerciſed in ſuch Works as he ſometimes takes up, and then lays down again at Pleaſure; he ſets one thing againſt another, as Solomon ſpeaks. Every Day and Age produceth a Variety and alteration. And this is, becauſe his Glory, that appeareth but imperfectly in ſome one (as in this and that particular) may have an additional Perfection in ſome other; that ſo, all that Variety, may like ſmall pieces in Tapeſtry, make that piece of Work compleat. And yet we ſee how in this Mixture, and often, but in ſome one ſingle Work or Piece, wrought and done but once, how much of God's Glory appears to the wonderment of Men and Angels. Whereas now this laſt Work of puniſhing Wicked Men (as likewiſe that other of Salvation) are but as one continued Diſpenſation of one Woof, and uniform for ever, without change, variety or interruption. The whole ſtream of God's Activity contracts it ſelf unto, and runs in theſe two Channels and no more, in omne volubilis ævum: And how ſtrong muſt you needs ſuppoſe theſe two Streams, each of them to be? when as the Manifeſtation of the Deity, doth now run ſo ſtrongly in a thouſand Rivolets. This in General, from the Manifeſtation of his Glory. Chap. 8

I named three Attributes in Particular, which God doth more eminently ſhew forth in this great, and laſt Work of his.

Firſt, His Power.
Secondly, Juſtice.
Thirdly, Avenging Wrath, to the end to Gain a Glory to himſelf out of all theſe.

Firſt, His Power: That you have in two Places, Rom. 9. 22. What if God willing to ſhew his Wrath, and to make his Power known? His Power you ſee, is mentioned Diſtinct from his Wrath, though indeed it will provoke to be the Power of his Wrath: But I ſhall diſtinctly ſpeak of it. You have it alſo mentioned as that Attribute which ſhall be moſt glorified hereby, in 2 Theſſ. 1. 9. Who ſhall be punniſhed with Deſtruction from the Glory of his Power. I afore ſpake ſome things of the greatneſs of God's Power, as in relation to this Puniſhment, in ſhewing how fearful it is to fall into the Hands of God, in the firſt Head or Demonſtration in this Section, I ſhall only here add,

1. This general Rule concerning it, That the drawing forth of Power or Activity by God in any Work, is ſtill, but what is proportionable and Anſwerable to the Work: that is, the Effect ſhall be anſwerable in greatneſs to the Power that is ſaid to be put forth. It is certain, God over-acts nothing. Now the Effect, wherein this Power of his is put forth, is here ſaid to be Deſtruction. And therefore that Deſtruction muſt be conceived proportioned to the Power, that is ſaid to be exerted. There was never Work which God ever did, wherein he profeſſed to ſhew forth a tranſcendency of Power, or of any other Attribute, but it was wonderful and glorious in its kind. All his Attributes are himſelf, and ſo as great as himſelf. This viſible World, in its kind, what a glorious Building is it? conſiſting of Heaven and Earth: And to what end was it that he profeſſed he made it? you have it, Rom. 1. 20. That by the Creation of the World, might be underſtood his eternal Power and Godhead. And if he that created and raiſed up ſuch Beings out of nothing, ſhall profeſs yet further, to make his Power known, and will uſe that Power, and put it forth in deſtroying, to ſhew forth the Glory of it, how great will that Deſtruction be, which muſt bear a Proportion to ſuch a Manifeſtation? That after God hath in ſo great and ſo various Works preceding this, ſufficiently (as we might think) ſhewn himſelf God, in point of Power, or what a powerful God he is; that yet after all, as if in all theſe he had not given ſo full Proof or Demonſtration of Power, and as not ſatisfied with all the former, as not enough, he ſhould be after all, willing, as the Apoſtle ſays here at laſt, to begin a new Work, which ſhould make the Ears of the whole Creation tingle, on purpoſe to make his Power known! This is it ſwallows up my Thoughts into Aſtoniſhment, knowing both, that according to the Rule before given, his laſt Works ordained to ſhew forth any Attribute, muſt infinitely exceed the former, that ſerved to the making known thereof. And that again puts a new Amazement into my Thoughts, to think how, or wherein ſo much a greater proportion of Power ſhould be ſpent. If it were barely to annihilate, and bring the Creature to its firſt Nothing, there needs not an extenſion of Power; it were but withdrawing that Word of his Power that holds up, and bears up all things, Heb. 1. 3. and theſe, as all, would fall to nothing. But over and above, you read here, of ſuch a Deſtruction, as draws out his Power poſitively, and makes his Power known afreſh. Specially, when again I conſider as to this Particular, that to deſtroy the well-being of any thing, is in the ordinary Experience of us Creatures, more eaſy than to give being. A Man that cannot make alive the leaſt of Creatures, not the leaſt Fly or Flea, can yet with an eaſy touch deſtroy them. I hinted before ſome Reſpects, wherein this Deſtruction might exceed, in reſpect of Power concurring to it, that of the Creation. In the Creation there was but a ſingle expence of Power, namely, or meerly raiſing up out of Nothing: But in this a double. For the Wrath of God exerted in the fierceneſs of it, hath a tendency to bring, and would if no other Power intervened, bring the Sinner unto nothing; as that Speech of Jeremy doth imply, Correct me not in thine Anger, leſt thou bring me to nothing; as alſo that of Nahum, Who can ſtand in the fierceneſs of his Anger? ſo as under this his preſſure of the Creature unto nothing, for God to uphold that Creature in being, is equivalent unto a continual educing it out of nothing again. O what Deſtruction muſt that then be in the execution of it, in which God will poſitively put forth more Power than in creating! and thereby after all other works of Power ſhewn, get himſelf the Name among the whole Creation, of being a powerful God indeed. But of this Deſtruction more hereafter. Thus much for that of Power.

Jer. 10. 24.

The ſecond Attribute is Juſtice, which he will to the utmoſt ſhew forth in this Puniſhment. So in the Text, The Lord ſhall judg his People. And 2 Theſſ. 1. 9. δικην τισεσιν, they ſhall lay down, or pay a Puniſhment: And ver. 6. It is a righteous thing in God to [recompence] Tribulation, &c. And indeed God's Power herein is not put forth ſimply out of Soveraignty, or for it ſelf, but is drawn out by Juſtice and Wrath, to execute what they are provoked unto. I before gave this as one Reaſon why God himſelf muſt Execute this Puniſhment, becauſe elſe the Puniſhment will not come up to ſatisfy his Juſtice. But now I make uſe of the ſame, to infer the Dreadfulneſs thereof: That it is the falling into the Hands, as of a potent God, ſo of a juſt God recompencing for Sin, and extending his mighty Power to inflict a Puniſhment, which ſhould in Juſtice hold proportion with the demerit of Sin, that ſo the exactneſs of his Juſtice might appear.

Now to heighten our Apprehenſions of the Dreadfulneſs of this Puniſhment, from this particular: Conſider,

1. The Infinite demerit of Sin. Which is not enough known or conſidered by the miſerable Subjects thereof; becauſe indeed God himſelf, in his Holineſs, and in his Greatneſs, is not known by them. Now becauſe Men will not otherwiſe know, nor be ſenſible of Sin, in the Spiritual evil of it againſt God; therefore it is that God is put upon it thus to make Men know it, and what God himſelf is; for Men to ſin againſt him, by ſuch dreadful Effects, as in Juſtice ſhall hold proportion with their Sin, and the Deſert thereof. And God profeſſeth, he will herein be exact, Heb. 2. 2. So, as every Tranſgreſſion ſhall receive [a juſt Recompence] of Reward. Not ſuch or ſuch Sins, ſome few more eminent Sins only, but [every Tranſgreſſion] ſhall have a Reward proportionate. He that is the Judg of all the World, ſhall not he be exact? as Abraham in another Caſe, Gen. 17. Yes, in this ultimate Puniſhment he will be ſure to be, as Iſaiah ſpeaks, Chap. 28. verſ. 17. To lay Judgment to the Line, and Righteouſneſs to the Plummet. As Carpenters do, when they would fit things one to another, and make things uniform and correſpondent, and ſquare them adequately to an hairs Breadth, as we ſay. And thus will God do in Judging. He will bring his Line and his Plummet, take meaſure of the Hainouſneſs of every Sin, and mete a Puniſhment adequate thereto. And if ſo, then this Puniſhment how dreadful will it be? If thou wilt be ſevere to mark what is done amiſs, who will be able to ſtand? ſays the Pſalmiſt. The Heinouſneſs of Sin is meaſured by the Greatneſs of that Glory whereof it is the Debaſement; and that Debaſement done to him, further meaſured by this, that it is, by ſo mean things, as we Creatures are to God. And ſo is eſtimated by the worth of that Perſon againſt whom it is committed, which therefore could by no other ther means be expiated, but by the Debaſement and emptying of as great a Glory, due to the Perſon of the Son of God, appearing in our Nature, as one Perſon therewith. Sin, the Apoſtle tells us, Rom. 7. 13. is above meaſure ſinful. And hence accordingly this Puniſhment is eſtimated to be above meaſure fearful. Thus Jer. 30. 11. and Iſa. 27. 7, 8. God putting this very Difference between his puniſhing godly Men his own Children, and his puniſhing wicked Men: Hath he ſmitten him, as he ſmote thoſe that ſmote him? No; for he puts this Difference in the 8*th* ver. He ſmites his own in meaſure. You may then take the Compaſs, the Magnitude, and Depth of it by this; that therefore oppoſitely his Puniſhing the other exceeds all Meaſure. Sin is the Creatures proper Work, and Puniſhment is God's Work. [Vengeance belongeth unto me,] ſays the Text; he challengeth it as his. Now it is certain, God will ſhew himſelf as perfect and as Exact in his Work as Man and Satan have been in theirs; he will not be exceeded or out-gone by them. The Lord is known, ſays the Pſalmiſt, by the Judgment that he executeth, Pſal. 9. 16. If the Creature be ſo wicked, as to bring forth ſo heinous an Evil (in genere moris) as Sin is, which is Malum Catholicum [a Catholick evil] and accordingly hath the Name of all Evil given it, as virtually and tranſcendently containing all that God or Man calls Evil; then be aſſured, that God, who is ſo juſt, will be as ſure to bring forth, by Way of return upon the Creature, a Puniſhment, that ſhall be in genere Pœnæ, in it's kind, Malum Catholicum, an univerſal Evil alſo. And ſuch Ezekiel terms it, ſpeaking of the Evil of Puniſhment: It is an Evil, and an only Evil, Ezek. 7. 5. That is, ſuch an Evil as ſhall be nothing but Evil, and that ſhall contain the Spirit, the Quinteſſence of all Evil in it. Therefore, Pſal. 75. 8. In the Hand of the Lord there is a Cup, and it is full of Mixture. As if an Artiſt, that knows the Nature of all Simples, ſhould temper a Cup that is full of all ſorts of Poiſons, and which is a Compound of the bittereſt, loathſomeſt Ingredients this Earth puts forth. Even thus hath God ſtrained the Quinteſſence of all Evils into one Cup; and it follows there, The Wicked of the Earth muſt drink the Dregs of it. Which Phraſe alſo argues ſuch a Mixture as this we ſpeak of; the bittereſt of all is at the Bottom; and 'tis Eternity to the Bottom, and they muſt not, nor ſhall not leave a Drop, but ſuck out the Dregs, as the Prophet's Phraſe is, Ezek. 23. 34. Thou haſt a Cup of Abomination, and when thou haſt fill'd up thy Meaſure, then will God take a meaſure of thy Cup, and fill the ſame proportion of Dregs and Mixture to thee, in a Cup of his tempering.

2. Conſider, that in the manifeſtation of this Attribute of Juſtice, there muſt of all other (next unto that of Mercy) be a more ſpecial Glory intended and deſigned by God himſelf, unto which this Puniſhment muſt bear an eminent proportion, as being the Matter wherein it appears. I ſaid before, that if God profeſſed to manifeſt any Attribute of his whatever, it ſtill hath been done in ſuch Effects of Wonder, as all the Creation is ſet admiring of. Now of all other Attributes, theſe two of Juſtice and Mercy are the prime, which he ſets the greateſt Value upon the manifeſtation of. And therefore ſtill look how they are more Eminent, or by how much the more Eminently he intends to manifeſt them above other Attributes; by ſo much muſt the Effects, in and by which he manifeſteth them, exceed and excel all other Works.

Now that theſe are the brighteſt Jewels in that Crown of his Glory, and which he intends moſt to Embeliſh, may be ſeen in this: 1. That he hath choſen the choiceſt and moſt excellent of his Creatures, as the Stuff or Materials in which to ſet theſe forth; namely, Angels and Men, and Chriſt himſelf the Head of all. That look as curious Engravers, when they would ſhew their beſt Art, and chiefeſt Workmanſhip, they cull out the choiceſt Materials, as either precious Stones, Cedar, or Marble, to work upon; and ſo Embroiderers, the fineſt Stuff or Cloth for the Ground-work, they would embroider Gold or Pearls upon: Thus hath God ſingled forth Angels and Men, the chief of, and more noble Creatures (in the Stuff they conſiſt of) than the reſt of his whole Creation. Power and Wiſdom is ſeen in other Creatures, but Vindictive Juſtice, as alſo Grace and ſaving Mercy, only on Men and Angels. And, 2. Although he hath ſhewn forth more of Wiſdom and Power in the Frame and Fabrick of Men and Angels, than in the whole of Heaven and Earth; yet ſtill, comparatively, more of Juſtice and Mercy in theſe two, than that all, or any of the other Attributes, ſhewn forth in and upon them, comes unto. Whereof this is ſufficient Evidence, that they have the Name of Veſſels of Mercy, and Veſſels of Wrath, Rom. 9. You read nowhere, that they are termed Veſſels of Power, or Veſſels of Wiſdom: which is a Token that they are fill'd with theſe, in that they carry away the Denomination, (which is uſually à Principaliori,) as if no Attributes elſe in Compariſon ſeemed to appear: and yet how much of Power and Wiſdom is ſeen in the Fabrick of Man, David tells us, I am wonderfully or fearfully made. So then, thoſe that ſhall prove to be the miſerable Veſſels of this his Wrath and Juſtice, ſhall be ſo fill'd with the Puniſhment, whereby this Juſtice is made known, as ſhall deſervedly bear the Name of Wrath and Judgment engraven upon it, of all other Attributes. The Day in which he will judg the World, Acts 17. 31. is elſewhere called, the Day of Deſtruction, the Day of Wrath, the Day of Judgment, &c. It beareth its Denomination from this very Work we ſpeak of.

And further, conſider how he hath given out before-hand, almoſt ſix thouſand Years before, concerning this Work, above all Works elſe, and hath poſted it upon Enoch's Pillars, (you know the Tradition I allude to) as you uſe to do Citations, Jude 14, 15. or as you do indicere Diem, ſet a Day for the moſt ſolemn Works. Enoch, the ſeventh from Adam, propheſied hereof, ſaying, Behold, the Lord cometh with ten thouſands of his Saints, to execute Judgment upon all, &c. And further and beſides, God ſpeaks of Preparations to have been all along made by him, during the Time of this World, againſt that Day. The Perſons are a fitting, Rom. 9. The Puniſhment a preparing; prepared for the Devil and his Angels, even from their very firſt Fall. Now certainly God would never raiſe up in us, by ſuch Words given out by himſelf, ſo great Expectations, if the Reality, the Execution, the Thing it ſelf, ſhould not Anſwer to all theſe. Yea, after all his other Works of Wonder finiſhed and perfected, he profeſſeth to come on purpoſe to be glorified. And in what? as well in rendring Vengeance in the Deſtruction of Wicked Men, as in the glorifying his Saints, 2 Theſſ. 1. 6, 7, 8, 9, 10. Seeing it is a righteous thing with God, to recompence Tribulation to them that trouble you: And to you that are troubled, Reſt with us. When the Lord Jeſus ſhall be revealed from Heaven, with his mighty Angels, in flaming Fire, taking Vengeance on them that know not God, and that obey not the Goſpel of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt: Who ſhall be puniſh'd with everlaſting Deſtruction from the Preſence of the Lord, and from the Glory of his Power: When he ſhall come to be glorified in his Saints, and to be admired in all them that believe, in that Day. He carries on the glorifying himſelf, and of his Power, in the one, as well as in the other.

Yea, and to render the Solemnity of this Work and Day yet greater, he calls a General Aſſembly of all Men and Angels, that are, or have been, or of Men that yet ſhall be, in either Worlds, to be preſent, and ſee the Execution.

To conclude: It is therefore called the Great Day, as that, Reſerved to the Judgment of the Great Day, Jude 6. and other Speeches. And why the Great Day? but from this Work of that Day, that ſhall be done upon it; which this Day ſhall then bring forth, and produce. As Days have their Stile and Denomination from the Work of the Day. Opus diei in die ſuo. So this (as was ſaid) is called the Day of Deſtruction, Wrath, &c. And if ſo, then that Stile of Greatneſs muſt be from the Greatneſs of the Work that ſhall be done thereon. And ſo the Judgment of the Great Day, becauſe great will the Judgment be that is to be executed on that Day.

Laſtly; God hath in the mean Time ſuffered his Glory to be debaſed, himſelf to be leaſt regarded in the World, Sin and the Devil to carry all before them, and Sinners to have the Glory: relieving himſelf in the mean time, that he hath a Treaſure of Glory to be broken up at that Day, Rom. 2. 3. When he will come on purpoſe to be glorious. He hath ſuffered an Eclipſe of ſix thouſand Years, that in the end he may break forth with a redoubled Glory. And all that Glory muſt come in this Way, even from this Puniſhment he ſhall execute. And it muſt be a recovery of greater Glory, than he ſhould have had by Man's Holineſs, in that firſt State by Creation, or God would never have let Sin have come into the World; he meant not to be a Loſer. Chap. 8.

I come next to argue this from the third Attribute, his Wrath: or if you will, his Power and Juſtice, as intended, and heightned to Extremities by Wrath: And though he will be juſt in what he doth; yet it is Juſtice put on by Wrath. He recompenſeth Sin, not only as Rector Univerſi, Judg of all the World, and ſo upon the account of Publick Rules given forth, to vindicate the Equity and Righteouſneſs of which, he puniſheth the Tranſgreſſions of them; But over and above he doth it, as reſenting an Injury, a perſonal Affront given to himſelf, his Perſon; and this draws forth his Wrath and Vengeance on his own behalf.

As it is termed Vengeance, ſo Zeal, in Heb. 10. 27. and 1 Cor. 10. 22. Do you provoke the Lord to Jealouſy? In Nahum 1. 2. See what a Conglomeration there is of Attributes and Effects.

[God is jealous,] that's the firſt. He compares that in God unto that in Man, which, Solomon tell us, is the Rage of Man, Prov. 6. laſt.

Again, 2. The Lord revengeth, the Lord revengeth. That is the Effect; and he ſays it twice, as ſpeaking of one who is enflamed with Anger.

Then, 3. To ſhew how fiercely in revenging he executes it, even with Fury, he adds, The Lord revengeth, and is furious, who yet profeſſeth elſewhere of himſelf, Fury is not in me; that is, of my ſelf it is not, Iſa. 27. 4. But as he is provoked by Sin and Impenitency, ſo Fury is in him. The Lord is furious.

Then, 4. Follows the Subject thereof, and what they are to him, whom his Fury waxeth ſo hot againſt, Enemies and Adverſaries. [The Lord will take Vengeance on his Adverſaries, and he reſerveth Wrath for his Enemies.] Which accords with this Text: Vengeance is mine, I will recompence the Adverſaries, verſe 27.

And, 5. If any urge: Yea, but is not God merciful, and ſlow to Anger? Yes, ſays he, ver. 3. The Lord is ſlow to Anger. But he brings it in to ſhew, that in this Caſe it is that very Patience of his, which in the iſſue Works up unto that Fury: Laſa Patientia fit Furor.

And then, 6. He further warns them to conſider, that in the Execution of this Fury to the utmoſt, his Power comes to be Engaged: The Lord is great in Power.

And laſtly, He will not at all acquit the Wicked, that lives and dies in his Sins: Which is a Clauſe or Proviſo he ſtill puts in, even when he ſpeaks the greateſt things of his Mercy. See Exod. 34. 6, 7.

And although the very reading this Deſcription of God, as an Avenger, ſhews forth alone its own Dreadfulneſs; yet further to clear, and enlarge upon it, conſider,

1. How it is Juſtice heightned by Wrath to a Fury, and all of theſe whetting on, and drawing out the Greatneſs of Power. And to this purpoſe we find, as was obſerved, Power and Wrath joined, in Rom. 9. 22. and Pſal. 90. Who hath known the Power of thine Anger? His Jealouſy draws out his Strength, and his Power works in a way of Wrath. Take a Man, let his Blood, his Fury be up, and thereby all his Spirits are intended and ſtirred, and he is able to ſtrike a greater and heavier blow than at another time. As Sampſon in his Fury againſt the Philiſtims, he pulls down the Pillars of the Houſe. Now bring this to God, and though his Power is the ſame, and not greater, when he executeth Vengeance on his Enemies, than at all other times; yet being attributed to him after the manner of Men, it imports to us ſomething of Analogy, (whereby the working of his Power in ſuch a Caſe is ſet out) which it holds with what is in Men in the like Caſe.

Book XIII

And ſo ſhews, (1.) That if ever he did or will upon any Occaſion, or can be ſuppoſed to ſhew forth Power and Strength, it will be in this, for he is in Fury; and in that Fury talks of the Greatneſs of his Power, which in Men in their Fury uſeth to be at the higheſt, and they ſhew forth their Strength in no Acts ſo much as thoſe which they do in Fury.

(2.) That comparatively therefore unto other Works of his, wherein he ſhews forth Power, he is to be ſuppoſed to ſhew forth more of Power in in this. Conſider therefore, if God ſhewed forth Power in creating the World, &c. Yet according to this Analogy, I may ſay of all thoſe kinds of Works whatever, (ſpeaking after the manner of Men) that he did them cooly, as it were, but this he doth in Fury, and ſo may well be ſuppoſed to put forth more of Power in theſe in that Reſpect, than in thoſe other.

2. Avenging Wrath is more than ſimply Anger. A Man is Angry with a Friend, and ſo is God often with his Children. And then he ſtirs not up all his Wrath, as Pſal. 78. But the Butt and Mark, which Revenge ſhoots its Arrows at, is an Enemy, as both out of Nahum, and the 27*th* verſe of this Chapter, was obſerved. And not only ſo, but ſuch as are irreconcileable Enemies: for that is the ſtate of Men in Hell, and the poſture of their Spirits there towards God, to be fixed in Malice. Now when Vengeance in God ſhall be extreme, who ſhall be able to bear it?

3. Juſtice hath a mixture of Pity mingled with it, but when 'tis a Caſe of Revenge, there is a Decorum put upon the extremity of Juſtice. It is the revenge of an Injury. Which though in the Creature, who it ſelf is a Subject of God's, (who only hath the Soveraignty of Power,) it is therefore inglorious and unworthy, yet in God, who is the Supreme, in Caſe of wrong and Injury to himſelf, this hath a Glory in it; Vengeance is mine, ſaith the Lord. No wonder then if it be termed Severity, Rom. 11. 23. and James 2. 13. expreſly, Judgment without Mercy. And perhaps in that Reſpect alſo it is, that, Rev. 14. 10. it is termed, Wrath without mixture, that is, pure Wrath which hath no mixture; Not a Drop to cool ones Tongue. And again, Wrath to the uttermoſt, as 1 Theſſ. 2. 16. the Apoſtle ſpeaks of that Wrath, which upon the Deſtruction of Jeruſalem (the Type of the Day of Judgment) befel that Nation. And ſo it is ſet forth in the Language of the Wrath at the great Day, as Grotius hath obſerved, which is Wrath to the uttermoſt. And as God is ſaid to reſt in his Love ſhewn to his Children; ſo his Wrath ſatisfies it ſelf in accompliſhing Vengeance, Ezek. 7. 8, 9. I will accompliſh

Zeph. 3. 17. mine Anger upon thee: and I will judg thee according to thy Ways, and I will recompence thee for all thine Abominations. And mine Eye ſhall not ſpare, neither will I have pity: I will recompence thee according to thy Ways, and thine Abo-

Iſa. 27. 11. minations that are in the midſt of thee, and ye ſhall know that I am the Lord that ſmitteth. And therefore is often called a Sacrifice, as Mark. 9. 49.

And this anſwers an Objection may be made. Did not David expreſly chooſe rather to fall into the Hand of God than Man? 2 Sam. 24. 14. The anſwer is at Hand in the ſame place, for his Mercies are great. That is David's Reaſon for it there. And ſo indeed the Difference lies in chaſtiſing Anger, and avenging Wrath, And David there ſpeaks of God's chaſtiſing his Children in this World, but in the World to come you ſee the Caſe is altered: It is the falling into the Hands of an Avenger, who in that Execution profeſſeth to ſhew no Mercy: He that made them, will have no pity on them.

Laſtly, conſider how Wrath ſets all that is in God againſt a Man, whets and ſharpens the whole Activity of every Attribute. What is the reaſon that in the Text when this dreadful Execution is ſpoken of, the Attribute of the [living God] is mentioned rather than Power? &c. The Life of God ſpeaks the whole of his Attributes. The whole of his Nature and Godhead, as it is active and working: this Life imports. In Hell God draws out all his Forces, all his Attributes into the Field, whereof Wrath is the Leader and General. All his Perfections conſpire either to ſtir up and enkindle Wrath, or to aſſiſt him in the Execution. How Power is drawn forth and intended I ſhewed before. Wiſdom, that marſhals all into Order, ſets both thy Sins in order in the view of thy Conſcience, Pſal. 50. 21. and ſets his Terrors in Battel array againſt thee,

'tis Job's Expreſſion, Chap. 6. 4. and the ſame Word in both places. And as it marſhalls all, ſo whets on to Vengeance, Prov. 1. 25. Ye have ſet at naught all my Counſel, I will therefore laugh at your Calamity, I will mock when your Fear cometh. 'Tis Wiſdom ſpeaks this, ver. 20. Be not deceived (ſaith the Apoſtle) God is not mocked, Gal. 6. 7. It imports two things: Chap. 8.

1. That Sinners think to illude and deceive God. As what is it elſe to think to defer Repentance to the laſt, and then to come and flatter, and look to be ſaved, as if they had ſerved him from the very firſt Moment of their Lives? they herein think to go beyond God.

2. That in ſuch caſes, God's Wiſdom takes it and reſents it to the height. Nothing adds unto Provocation more, in a Man that is Wiſe, than to perceive how another Man thinks to go beyond him, and impoſe upon his Wiſdom. And it is Wiſdom in a Man, that makes him he would not be mock'd, deceived or trifled withal; this Principle riſeth up in God's Heart, the Judg of all the World. Again, his Holineſs crys out to him againſt the Sinner: Thou art a pure God; and, I can endure to behold no Iniquity; and the Eyes of my Glory have been provoked by this Sinner continually. Then ſays Juſtice too, I muſt be ſatisfied to the utmoſt Farthing, and have the laſt drop of Blood that is in their Souls: and this their Puniſhment executed on their own Perſons, is all I ſhall have or can recover for all the Diſhonour hath been done thee. For Chriſt, through their unbelief, hath not taken off one Farthing of their Debt, but all is left and remains upon their own Score. And I can no other way recover Glory, but by having it out of them: And therefore it is that an Eternity is required, becauſe, but by an Eternity of Suffering it is that they can come to ſatisfy. Prov. 27. 20. Hell and Deſtruction are never full, or [ſatisfied] as the next Words ſhew the meaning to be. Then ſays Truth and Righteouſneſs, their whole Lives have been contrary to my Love, the whole Actings and the Courſes of them have been but a making a Lie, a Web of Hypocriſy, continually woven and vended. Rev. 22. 15. That love and make a Lie, and Rom. 3. 13. Their Tongues are full of falſhood and Deceit; and again, give them their Portion with Hypocrites: whom of all elſe I hate, ſays Truth. Then boils up Jealouſy, every Creature hath been an Idol, and made their God, and ſet up in God's ſtead, and they have been enflamed with them (as of Idolaters the Prophet ſpeaks:) Idols of Jealouſly have all their Luſts been: and the Glory due to me hath been given to them. But you will ſay, will not Mercy at laſt ſpeak a good Word for them? will it not allay and moderate all theſe? No, but turn as fiercely againſt them as any other Attribute, and plead; I indeed did a long while reſtrain all theſe other Attributes that were provoked every Moment, [Whom God endured with much long-ſuffering, ſays Rom. 9. 22.] And that they have lived ſo long free from Wrath, hath been by means of me, I waiting for their Repentance, which hath coſt me Millions. I have ſpent Riches on them, in forbearance of them: All which now is to be reckoned to them in Wrath. You have it Rom. 2. 4, 5. They have deſpiſed the Riches of his Goodneſs, and Forbearance, and long-Suffering, not knowing that the Goodneſs of God leadeth them to Repentance. But after their hardneſs and impenitent Heart, treaſure up unto themſelves Wrath, &c. And ſays Grace, I was preſumed on, and made a ſtale to, and defender of their Luſts; and was turned into Wantonneſs, Jude 4.

And thus all in God, is ſet (as it were) on Fire againſt a Sinner, and (as I may ſo ſpeak) do turn all in him into Fury. And ~~look~~ as to God's People, all in God is aſſimulated into Love towards them, and they live and dwell in Love, and ſee nothing elſe, as it were in God, but Love: God is Love (ſays the Apoſtle) namely, to his own, 1 John 4. 16. Nothing elſe appears; or rather, all that is in him, appears in that Hue, under that Die, with that Tincture. So here on the contrary, all in God is turned into Fury: Læſa patientia fit Furor. Though he is not ſo of himſelf: Fury is not in me, ſays he, Iſa. 27. but Sin hath made him ſuch.

A Fourth head of Demonſtrations, is taken from the Inſtances given both of Good and bad Men. Which Inſtances, as I then alledged to prove the immediimmediateneſs of God's inflicting it: So now I ſhall from thence preſent ſome Inferences of the fearfulneſs hereof. Do but ſit down a little with Job and Heman, who were the Inſtances of Good Men: Or go to that Roll which the Scriptures have recorded of Cain and Judas, and others, or which Eccleſiaſtical Stories, or preſent Examples of our Age have afforded, of Men in Horror: weigh and perpend their Crys and Roarings, and conſider what a ſad Spectacle ſuch Inſtances afford.

1. Of good Men: Heman I inſiſted in before, and acquainted you with his Complaints as ſad as Man can utter: I reſerved that of Job, ſpecially for this Place, as I then profeſſed. All the while that he had but Afflictions common to Men; and although he was every Way ſurrounded with them, as being viſited with a loathſom Diſeaſe, his Body fill'd with Dolours and Pains, his Children loſt, Servants deſtroyed by Fire from Heaven; his Eſtate quite gone unto an Extremity of Poverty; his Wife abhorring his Breath, and tempting him to Blaſphemy: All this while the Text tells us, Chap. 2. 10. That in all this did not Job ſin with his Lips, but was quiet and Patient, as the Holy Ghoſt in the New Teſtament takes notice of him, Jam. 5. You have heard of the Patience of Job. Well, but God himſelf in the End came in upon him with his immediate Wrath. And now will you hear of his Impatience too? He was not prick'd to the quick till now. But then he begins to Curſe the Day of his Birth, Chap. 3. 1, 2, 3. and at that rate talks all along that Chapter. For brevity, let us only conſult his Lamentations, in Chap. 6. ver. 2, 3, 4. O that my grief were throughly weighed, and my Calamity laid in the Ballances together, for now it would be heavier than the Sand, therefore my Words are ſwallowed up. The reſts that follows, I ſhall add by and by. What was it cauſed this ſudden Out-cry and Alteration in Job's Spirit, from that ſtill and ſedate Frame we left him in before? What was it the thoughts of his loſt Eſtate, Children, Wife's unkindneſs, or the Pains of his Bones and Body, &c. or his downfal from a petty Kingdom? Did theſe begin now at length ſo ſadly to return upon him, ſo as in the end his Spirit ſhould begin to take them in, and lay them at length to Heart, which at firſt he in an holy Gallantry had made ſo light of? O no, he had fully concocted and digeſted all that had been occaſioned from all or any of theſe, and had quieted himſelf with one or two good Cordials, namely, that the Lord hath given, and the Lord hath taken, and bleſſed be the Name of the Lord, Chap. 1. 21. And again, ſhall we receive Good from the Hand of the Lord, and not evil? Chap. 2. 10. which had carried away all that Sorrow might have been ſtirring in him from theſe. What might be the matter then, that was the Cauſe of theſe ſo high Diſturbances? The next Words ver. 4. do enform us, For the Arrows of the Almighty are within me, the Poiſon whereof drinks up my Spirits; the Terrors of God do ſet themſelves in Array againſt me. Let us go on duly to weigh and conſider theſe Paſſages of his.

Heman, he in his Horrors had complained, Pſal. 88. 7. That God's Wrath lay hard or heavy on him, and ſays no more of it: But Job here, in like manner feeling the like weight thereof, goes about to expreſs how heavy, and how great the Burthen was of his Grief, that was cauſed thereby. And he calls for a mighty Scale to weigh it in: Such a Scale as might be large enough to contain all the Sands of the Sea. O that my Grief were throughly weighed, and my Calamities laid in the Ballance together! for now it would be heavier than the Sand of the Sea. His meaning is, that to have his Grief and Calamity put in one of the Scales, and the Sand of the Sea in the other, his Calamity would be infinitely heavier. His invention was heightned by what he really felt: The greatneſs of it made him Eloquent. (For as Love, ſo deep ſenſe of Miſery uſeth ſo to do.) And he pitcheth, as you ſee, upon the weightineſs of Sand, to expreſs it by, which is of all things the weightieſt, as Solomon tells us, Prov. 27. 3. A Stone is heavy, and the Sand is weighty. Yea, and the Sand of the Sea: which, take both, thoſe Sands within the Sea at the bottom of it, and thoſe alſo ſcattered without on the Shoar, they do make an immence Bulk and Body condenſated, if they were gathered together into one heap: (as the Waters were into one place, when God made made the Sea.) Job had a moſt ſublime Fancy, as the high ſtrains of that whole Book ſhew: And this is in view a Compariſon vaſt and great enough, (one would think) as could be uſed. But yet further, obſerve how he breaks off that Attempt of his, to expreſs it by this or by any ſuch Compariſons, though in appearance never ſo hyperbolical. Which breaking off, his next Speech utters: My Words (ſays he) are ſwallowed up! As a ſmall thing is ſwallowed up of a greater, as a drop of the Ocean, as one ſmall ſcattered Sand would be, in the Bulk of all thoſe Sands of the Sea, when caſt in amongſt them: So were all theſe his vaſt Expreſſions and Compariſons he had uſed, although thus great; (which yet from all Rhetoricians, would have had the name of Hyperboles, far exceeding the reality.) But yet in his ſenſe and feeling were ſwallowed up by the Thing it ſelf. I feel my Words fall ſhort, ſays he: ſo Broughton paraphraſeth on thoſe Words. And therefore he cuts himſelf off from uſing any more or higher Decipherings of it, of any kind, if any could have been found, as being all but meer Metaphors, too light, and holding no Weight with that far exceeding weight of Miſery, he felt (as the Apoſtle on the contrary, comparing preſent Afflictions and the Glory to come together, ſpeaks) but Job here, he gives it clean over as a thing unexpreſſible. And in ſtead of all Eſſays that way, he chooſeth rather to ſpeak and ſhew the Cauſe thereof the ſame, which I in this Treatiſe have endeavoured to do. And thereby he ſets forth in a Reality, the dreadfulneſs of it indeed; And more than by all things whatever, that his Grief could have been compared unto. This you have in theſe Words, [For the Arrows of the Almighty are within me.] He had ſores without, in his Body; and Afflictions in his outward Man or Condition; Fears without, and Terrors within; he complains not that you hear of them at all. O, but they are theſe Arrows that are within me, (ſays he) the Arrows of the Almighty; that is, which none but an Almighty Hand could ſhoot, and ſhoot ſo deep; ſuch Arrows, as could come out of no other Forge or Quiver. The Soul of a Man is a Spirit of a vaſt depth, and God, and God alone can ſhoot up into it, unto the Arrow Head. And yet again, beſides the ſtrength of the Arm that ſhoots them, and the forkedneſs of the Arrows themſelves, they were all, as Arrows that are dipt in Poiſon, envenomed with the Guilt of his Sins (which as chap. 13. 23. and 26. God had now ſet on upon his Soul, Thou makeſt me poſſeſſs the Sins of my Youth:) Thus it follows in the next Words, [and the Poiſon thereof drinks up my Spirit.] They do not only let out the Spirits, (which Wounds made by other Arrows uſe to do) but they drink them up. The Strength and Violence of the Venom of them had ſuch an Efficacy on his very Soul, and the very Spirit and Life thereof, as they drank all up. Again, it follows, [And the Terrors of God have ſet themſelves in Array againſt me.] God drew forth his Wrath (as it were) into a well-ordered Army, into Rank and File, at once to fall upon him. If one Man had a whole Army ſet againſt him, and each armed Man therein were to ſhoot a Bullet, or an Arrow into him at once; and if withal we could make the Suppoſition, that that Man ſhould have his Life ſtill renewed after each Wound given, ſo as never to die; and yet they ſtill to renew to ſhoot all at once every moment: how dreadful is this to any ones Thoughts thereof? but yet theſe are but Men, not God, whoſe Arrows he ſays theſe were. O that he would deſtroy me! (ſays Job) that is, kill me out-right, ſo ver. 8, 9. O that I might have my Requeſt! and that God would grant me the thing that I long for! Even that it would pleaſe God to deſtroy me, and that he would let looſe his Hand, and cut me off. Well, But Job, canſt thou not ſtir up thy Spirits and harden thy ſelf againſt all theſe preſent Sorrows? The Spirit of Man will bear its Infirmity, if it be ſteel'd with Reſolution. To this Job himſelf gives Anſwer by way of preoccupation, to this Effect: That if Death indeed, or a being utterly cut off, ſhould come upon me with all that Hoſt of Fears (whereof elſewhere Job tells us, Death is the King) I could harden my ſelf againſt that; yea, and to endure the Pains of the moſt exquiſite Tortures any kind of Death could inflict: if thereby God would thus cut me off. Then indeed (if ſuch News of Death were brought me) I ſhould yet have comfort; yea, I would harden my ſelf in Sorrow. So ver. 10. And let it be the worſt Death he can put me to, for ſo it follows, let him not ſpare. O but they are theſe Arrows of his own within me! theſe I cannot bear. So ver. 12. Is my Strength the Strength of Stones, or my Fleſh Braſs, that I ſhould be able to endure, and bear up my ſelf againſt theſe Encounters? O no. Read on thoſe his Expreſſions further roared forth by him, in Chap. 16. ver. 12, 13, 14. He hath broken me aſunder: he hath alſo taken me by the Neck, and ſhaken me to pieces, and ſet me up for his Mark. His Archers compaſs me round about, he cleaveth my Reins aſunder, and doth not ſpare; he poureth out my Gall upon the Ground. He breaketh me with breach upon breach; he runneth upon me like a Giant. What ſhould I inſtance in more, or how to comment on them!

That which in the ſecond place, is proper next to be done, is to provoke thoſe that are ſecure Sinners, &c. and others alſo that are awakened, to raiſe but up their Thoughts from the Conſideration hereof, to infer and gather how dreadful this Puniſhment in Hell muſt be, above all, that theſe Diſpenſations can repreſent unto us. And this is moſt ſtrongly inferred from theſe Examples, whether they be the Examples of Good Men, as Job was; or bad Men, as Cain and Judas were, in both which I formerly inſtanced in.

I ſhall make Inference from each of theſe apart, as in the firſt Section, I alſo did in arguing from them, the Immediateneſs, &c.

Firſt, From theſe of good Men. If you conſider that all theſe Terrors, which Job and Heman endured from God, were yet all in Love, out of ſo ſolid and ſubſtantial a Love, permanent and abiding in God's Heart, all this while towards them; and that all theſe were but Chaſtiſings of them for Tryal, and to make them partakers of his Holineſs. And beſides, what manner of Anger was it towards them? It was but Anger, which Love ſtirred up: and thoſe his Afflictions were accompanied and joined, all with everlaſting kindneſs and thoughts of Peace all the while. According to that in Iſa. 54. 8. In a little Wrath I hid my Face from thee, for a moment, but with everlaſting kindneſs will I have Mercy on thee, ſaith the Lord thy Redeemer. Yea, thoſe two known Cordial Recipes, ſo frequently made uſe of, and commonly taken by moſt Chriſtians in their Diſtreſſes, and cited by two Apoſtles, and Chriſt himſelf from Heaven, Happy is the Man whom God correcteth: Therefore deſpiſe not thou the Chaſtning of the Almighty; were firſt ſpoken and directed unto this our Job, whilſt in the midſt of theſe Afflictions, in chap. 5. 17. And are particularly applied to that his Condition, in the worſt of it, by the Holy Ghoſt, Jam. 5. 11. Yea, and all this that was upon Job, was in it ſelf (how great ſoever it ſeemed to his ſenſe) but the touch of God's little Finger, Job 1. 11. O think then how great will that Vengeance be, which is pure Wrath, Rev. 14. which is out of Fury, as was ſhewn; which is, the fiery Indignation of Patience abuſed, boy'ld up into Fury! This that befel them, is ſaid to be but a little Wrath, and for a Moment. And yet (as alſo it is ſaid, Pſal. 2. ult.) If God be angry but a little, who is able to abide it! then what will this laſt and extream Vengeance reſerved for Hell be? Theſe Chaſtiſements of Job's and Heman's were in Compariſon of what awaits Men in Hell, but as Rods of Birch or Ruſhes, which we uſe to whip our Children withal, Pſal. 89. 32, 33. Then will I viſit their Tranſgreſſions with the Rod, and their Iniquity with Stripes: Nevertheleſs, my Loving-kindneſs will I not utterly take from them, nor ſuffer my Faithfulneſs to fail. Theſe were all Rods of Mercies own gathering and making, the Stripes whereof are not ſo deep, but they may be, and were healed again; as in the ſame Book you alſo find it, chap. 5. 18. He maketh ſore, and bindeth up; he woundeth, and his Hands make whole: and ſo was Job in the Iſſue thus healed; and Heman likewiſe, and made thereby one of the wiſeſt Men in the World. Yea, but theſe wherewith wicked Men in Hell are eternally laſh'd and cut off, are Rods of Revenges making; Rods of Iron (as the Pſalmiſt in that ſecond Pſalm ſpeaks) to break them in pieces like a Potters Veſſel, never to be ſet together again or made whole. Again, thoſe Jam. 1. 12. chap. 5. 11. Heb. 12. 5. Apo. 3. 19.

1 Kings 4. 37.

Chap. 8.

thoſe ſtroaks on the Children of God, are in meaſure, as Iſa. 27. 7, 8. but of theſe in Hell, it may be, and is ſaid, that Wrath cometh upon them without meaſure. Again, in the midſt of theſe Corrections, he remembers Mercy; but in this of Hell, there is Judgment without Mercy, Jam. 2. 13. In thoſe other Stripes given his Children, God himſelf is afflicted, and feels every Stroak he gives them, as Jer. 31. 20. and Iſa. 64. But in theſe in Hell, Vengeance and Juſtice do ſatisfy themſelves in their deſerved Damnation. It is ſtiled a Sacrifice to him. Mark 9. 48, 49. compared, and elſewhere.

Secondly, The ſame Inference, may be much more raiſed from thoſe Inſtances given of bad Men, ſuffering in this Life the like Terrors, to theſe mentioned: If we but conſider that when they fall and ſeize upon them in the greateſt extremity, that yet then they are in Compariſon to what remains to them in Hell, but as the ſippings of the Top of that Cup here, the Dregs whereof are reſerved for them there, to drink to the Bottom, as Pſal. 75. 8. In the Hand of the Lord there is a Cup, and the Wine is red: it is full of mixture, and he poureth out of the ſame: but the Dregs thereof all the Wicked of the Earth ſhall wring them out, and drink them. Thoſe Words he [poureth out the ſame] and [but the Dregs thereof] are an oppoſition each to other; ſhewing how that in this Life, God promiſcuouſly poureth forth the ſame from the upper part thereof, both upon good and bad. And that all that, is but the overflowings of what is uppermoſt; but the Dregs, the brackiſh bitter Stuff, is reſerved for Hell. And the Truth is, Men can bear but the ſippings thereof here. Should they drink but a little deeper, their Souls would be giddy, and reel out of their Bodies in a Moment. As the Joys of Heaven cannot be inherited by Fleſh and Blood, ſo nor the Torments of the fulneſs of this Wrath. But in Hell their Bodies ſhall be nealed (as we ſpeak of Glaſs) that they may endure this Fire. All the Terrors of Conſcience here, are as is ſaid of the Joys of the Saints, but the earneſt-Pennies, Farthing-Tokens, in compariſon to that great, immenſely vaſt Treaſure of Wrath to come, you have heard the Scriptures ſpeak of. All here is but the Shadow of Death; and yet if that can wither Men's Souls ſo, what will the blackneſs of Darkneſs do? as the Apoſtle ſpeaks of this. The utmoſt threatned here, is, that the Anger of the Lord ſhall ſmoke againſt a Man, Deut. 29. It is but Smoke: but in Hell, it breaks forth into raging Flames * of the fierceſt Fires, that fill every Corner, and break out at all the Windows of the Soul.

* Luk. 16. 24.

The fifth and laſt Head, which repreſents the dreadfulneſs of all this unto an infinity, is, that it is a falling into the Hands [of the living God,] The living God. The former Exaggerations have been raiſed from falling into the Hands of the Great, Powerful, Juſt and Avenging God; but this further, of the Living God. Which of all other Attributes, the Apoſtle hath ſingled forth to ſet out the dreadfulneſs of it by, and is therefore moſt of all to be heeded by us; as having as much weight in it, to the thing in Hand, as any of the other. [The living God] notes out, not only God's activity, and how the whole of his Life and being is engaged and active in this Puniſhment (as was noticed) but further, both, that, 1. He ſhall execute this to Eternity, and 2. That during that whole ſpace of Eternity, he will permanently continue to inflict it. His being the living God, notes out, 1. Eternity; 2. With a continuation of acting all that while: and ſo his being the living God, both threatens and effecteth, 1. an eternal, and 2. a continual Death in thoſe that are the Subjects thereof. And to imply ſo much, it is that he hath that Denomination, ſpecially and ſo eminently given him here, when this Puniſhment is ſpoken of.

Firſt, conſider, thy Soul is an immortal Soul, as to the duration of it: and that this great God is the living God. And Sin in thee, and the Injury of it to God, is an eternal Stain, which Hell Fire cannot eat out, or ſatisfy God for, but in an Eternity of time. And therefore whilſt God lives, and thou liveſt, he will inflict it on thee. That's one meaning.

Book XIII

Again, God's Life, as it is in himſelf a continual Act, ſo in its being attributed to him with reſpect to this Puniſhment, it imports his continued acting therein without Ceſſation or Intermiſſion. For he doth it, as the living God. Job, whilſt he endured the Terrors of the Almighty, complains they were ſo inceſſant, that God ſuffered him not to take Breath, Job. 9. 18. he followed his Stroaks ſo thick, with one Breach (as he there ſpeaks) upon another.

You have both theſe ſet forth in one and the ſame Scripture, Rev. 14. 10, 11. He ſhall drink of the Wine of the Wrath of God; and he ſhall be tormented with Fire and Brimſtone in the preſence of the Holy Angels, and in the preſence of the Lamb: and the ſmoak of their Torment aſcendeth up for ever and ever. And they have no reſt Day nor Night. Firſt, they have no reſt Day nor Night; That ſhews they have no intermiſſion. And then, that the ſmoak of their Torment aſcends up for ever, ſhews the Eternity. Yea, and further, to ſtrike our dull Hearts with the ſenſe of this Eternity, if one [ever] be not enough, another is added, [for ever and ever.] Which Eternity, as you know, our Saviour is ſtill careful to indigitate, when he ſpeaks of Hell, in love and warning unto Mens Souls, that they might be moved by the Moment thereof, to endeavour to eſcape it.

Now it being thus, this infinitely ſuperadds unto all the former. The former Heads have given Demonſtration to us, wherein the Subſtance of this great Puniſhment conſiſts: and then comes in this, as the fatal and final rouling Stone upon the Grave or Sepulchre of Souls: And with the Grave, Hell is oft parallel'd. Or theſe two imports thereof, are as two Mill-Stones hung about the Necks of thoſe that are plunged into this Lake, to ſink them down for ever: For theſe two things mentioned, do Work in the Spirits of thoſe that undergoe it, perfect Fear, and perfect Deſpair. The Effects of both which make up a perfection of Miſery in ſuch a State.

1. Perfect Deſpair. Hope was given to reaſonable and intelligent Natures (and in peculiar unto them) to be as a breathing-hole in time of Miſery, to keep up Life in ſuch an one, whereby to ſubſtain it ſelf. And the reaſonable Soul being in its duration Eternal, and having an Eternity of Time to run through and Sail over, hath this Priviledg (denied to Beaſts) to take a proſpect or fore-ſight of Time, that is yet to come, and if it can ſpy out any ſpace or ſpot of Time, in which it ſhall have happineſs or Eaſe, or out-live its Miſery, it will not utterly die; yea, it will harden it ſelf againſt preſent Miſery with this Thought, that however it ſhall not always be thus with me. But on the contrary here, by Reaſon of this ability of fore-ſight, it comes to paſs, that a wretched Soul in Hell, viewing and turning over all the leaves of Time to Eternity, both finds that it ſhall not outlive that Miſery, nor yet can it find one ſpace or moment of Time of Freedom and Intermiſſion, having for ever to do with him who is the living God. And then it dies and dies again, and ſinks into a Gulph of Deſpair for the furture, as well as it is ſwallowed up with preſent ſenſe of Wrath.

2. Perfect Fear. Which theſe likewiſe cauſe, and keep up within that Soul, and that continually, of all their Miſery that is yet to come. And the nature of Fear is, to out-ſtrip a Man's Miſery; and to take them up before they come, as Hopes uſe to do our Comforts: So as by reaſon thereof, it comes to paſs that the Soul is not only tormented by what it at preſent feels, but with the thought of all that is to come; which ſtill further ſtrikes the Soul through and through. So as this Thought, that it will be with me thus for ever and ever, makes it compleatly miſerable. Yea hereby, the Soul doth come all along in every inſtant to endure and be poſſeſſed in Fears and dreadful Apprehenſions of all that Woe, that in Eternity is yet to come, as well as that at preſent.

CHAP.

Chap. 9.

CHAP. IX.

The Inferences and Uſes of the Doctrine. If God puniſheth Sins, he is not the Author of it. Let us be firmly perſwaded of the reality of this Wrath to come. Let us adore and fear the Greatneſs of God, and be moved to turn to him. Let us conſider what it is to Die, and what the State of the other World is. Let Believers learn highly to value that Salvation which Chriſt obtains for them.

IF God in his Wrath be the immediate Inflicter of that Puniſhment for Sin, then certainly he is not the Author of Sin. Fulgentius, among other highly-evincing Demonſtrations of it, caſts in this: Iniquitatis cujus eſt Ultor, non eſt Autor; God is not the Author of Sin, whereof he is the Avenger. Which Maxim is founded upon an high Principle of Reaſon and Equity. God puts the whole of this matter ſo far off from himſelf, that he lays all, both Sin and Puniſhment, wholy upon Man; ſo as although the Puniſhment it ſelf be from his own juſt Wrath, that is provoked to inflict it, yet even thereof he thus ſpeaks, Do they provoke me to Anger? ('tis true they do;) but do they not provoke themſelves, to the Confuſion of their own Faces? So as he aſcribes his own Wrath, that inflicts that Puniſhment, wholy to themſelves, returns even that upon themſelves. As if he had ſaid, I am angry indeed, &c. 'tis true, yet they are more the provoking Cauſes of that Anger than my ſelf. They ſpight but themſelves, when they ſin againſt me. Like unto which is that Speech alſo, Rom. 2. 4, 5. Thou treaſureſt up Wrath unto thy ſelf: [Thou to thy ſelf] although it be God's Wrath in his Breaſt that is treaſured up, yet the treaſuring of it up is aſcribed unto themſelves.

God will ſend his Son Jeſus Chriſt on purpoſe to clear all ſuch imaginable Suſpicions and Suppoſitions that Men or Devils can caſt upon him, for condemning of Men, or executing this Puniſhment himſelf. Enoch, the ſeventh from Adam, propheſied, ſaying, Behold, the Lord cometh with ten thouſand of his Saints, to execute Judgment upon all, and to convince all that are ungodly among them, of all their ungodly Deeds, which they have ungodlily committed, and of all their hard Speeches which ungodly Sinners have ſpoken againſt him. His work at that Day is to convince, (yea, and to convince is named firſt) as well as to execute Judgment. And it is certain, that in Order thereto he will ſpeak all Fairneſs, Equity, Juſtice, and Reaſon, ('twere not Conviction elſe); and he will have all his Saints and Angels about him, as Judges and Witneſſes. He will have all the World to hear it, and how equal it is for him to execute ſo ſore a Vengeance. And as he will convince them of their Deeds to be ungodly and deſerving it, ſo of their hard Speeches; and that (whatever his Decrees were,) they themſelves were ungodly, and their Deeds ungodly, and ungodlily committed. Mark but how he doth ungodly them. And he will convince them, and ſtop their Mouths for ever. Chriſt ſent him in the Parable ſpeechleſs to Hell, Mat. 22. 12. And this is one great Service the Man Chriſt Jeſus is to do for God at the latter day: And if he ſhould not do this ſatisfyingly, and clear all theſe things, he muſt ſhut up his Books, and come off the Bench, and proceed no further, either to Sentence or Execution.

Let our Meditation upon what hath been delivered, be what Moſes hath prompted to us; and let us make the ſame uſe thereof which he alſo did.

The 90*th* Pſalm was penned by Moſes, (as the Title ſhews, A Prayer of Moſes, Moſes, the Man of God) and it was compoſed by him in his latter Days, after he had ſeen his forty Years, a whole Generation in a Nation of Men, removed out of this World, and their Carcaſes fallen in the Wilderneſs; a Spectacle ſo ſad, as perhaps not any one Man in the World hath ſeen, or Age afforded, (but at the Flood) before or ſince, in ſo ſhort a compaſs of time. His Song is a Funeral Elegy, or Meditation of Death, made upon that whole Generation, verſe 3. Thou turneſt Man to Deſtruction; and ſayeſt, Return, ye Children of Men. And verſes 5, 6. Thou carrieſt them away, as with a Flood. In the morning they are like Graſs which groweth up; in the morning it flouriſheth and groweth up, in the Evening it is cut down, and withereth. And God from that time began alſo to ſtint and limit Man's Years to that meaſure which it hath held to unto this Day, Verſ. 10. The Days of our Years are threeſcore Years and ten; and if by reaſon of Strength they be fourſcore Years, yet is their Strength but Labour and Sorrow: for it is ſoon cut off, and we fly away. Our Souls fly away like Birds when the Shell is broke; and then Hell follows, (as the Revelation ſpeaks) as in reality, ſo in Moſes's Diſcourſe. And that was it which was the matter of deepeſt and ſaddeſt thoughts in this Meditation unto him of any other. Verſe 11. it follows, Who knoweth the Power of thine Anger? Even according to thy Fear, ſo is thy Wrath.——— Which he utters, Rev. 6. 8.

Book XIII

1. By way of Lamentation. He ſighing forth a moſt doleful complaint againſt the Security and Stupor he obſerved in that Generation of Men in his time, both in thoſe that had already died in their Sins, as well as of that new Generation that had come up in their Room, who ſtill lived in their Sins. O! ſays he, Who of them knoweth the Power of thine Anger? namely, of that Wrath which followeth after Death, and ſeized upon Men's Souls for ever; that is, who conſiders it, or regards it, till it take hold upon them? He utters it,

2. In a way of Aſtoniſhment, out of the Apprehenſion he had of the greatneſs of that Wrath: Who hath known the Power of thine Anger! that is, who hath or can take it in according to the greatneſs of it? Which he endeavours to ſet forth (as applying himſelf to our own Apprehenſions) in this wiſe, Even according to thy Fear, ſo is thy Wrath. Where thoſe words [thy Fear] are taken objectivè, and ſo is all one, and the Fear of thee: And ſo the meaning is, that according to whatever proportion our Souls can take in, in Fears of Thee and of thine Anger; ſo great is thy Wrath it ſelf. You have Souls that are able to comprehend vaſt Fears and Terrors; they are as extenſive in their Fears, as in their Deſires, which are ſtretched beyond what this World, or the Creatures can afford them, to an Infinity. The Soul of Man is a dark Cell, which when it begets Fears once, ſtrange and fearful Apparitions riſe up in it, which far exceed the ordinary proportion of worldly Evils, (which yet alſo our Fears uſually make greater than they prove to be:) But here, as to that Puniſhment, which is the effect of God's own immediate Wrath, let the Soul enlarge it ſelf, ſays he, and widen its Apprehenſion to the utmoſt; fear what you can imagine: yet ſtill God's Wrath, and the Puniſhment it inflicts, are not only proportionable, but infinitely exceeding all you can fear or imagine. Who knoweth the Power of thine anger? [It paſſeth knowledg.]

Now the Uſe Moſes makes of all this Doctrine of Death and Wrath, in the next following ver. 12. is this: So teach us to number our Days, that we may apply our Hearts to Wiſdom. This he ſpake to God in behalf of that preſent Generation that then ſurvived; and by ſpreading before them all theſe Conſiderations, thereby alſo exhorteth them to that which is the only true Wiſdom, even to turn unto the Lord, ſo to eſcape that Wrath that is to come. And he, as an holy Man, that knew the Terror of the Lord, doth thus perſwade Men; And O let our Souls be perſwaded by it. And to this end, Uſe 1. I would firſt perſwade you to believe, that there is this Wrath to come. We knowing the Terror of the Lord; that is, our ſelves being aſſured by believing, that ſuch a Wrath is in the Heart and Breaſt of God againſt impenitent Sinners, as alſo underſtanding what and how dreadful that Wrath is, we do perſwade Men, 2 Cor. 5. 11. And for Men to apprehend and believe it, is the firſt moſt effectual Engine to perſwade them by. God did not, 'ere he placed theſe Souls of ours in our Bodies, firſt carry them down to Hell, and then up to Heaven, that ſo we having a fore-knowledg of either by Sight and Senſe, might then be left to act in this World accordingly: But God hath left only the Revelation of both theſe unto Faith, in this World, by the Word. —Heb. 11. 7. 'Tis ſaid, Noah being warned of God of things not ſeen as yet, moved with Fear, prepared an Ark to the ſaving of his Houſe: By the which he condemned the World, and became Heir of the Righteouſneſs which is by Faith. Chap. 9.

You know how the Day of this great Wrath to come (the Day of Judgment) is aſſimilated by Chriſt to the Days of Noah, Mat. 24. 37, 38, 39. and that (among other) in reſpect of the Security and Unbelief that is and will be afore it comes, in the Hearts of Men about it, (which is Chriſt's ſpecial Scope there.) And the Place in the Hebrews cited anſwerably, reckoneth that Faith of Noah (who being forewarned of the Flood, was moved with Fear, and prepared an Ark to ſave himſelf and his Family) amongſt thoſe other Inſtances of Saving Faith, which that Chapter doth enumerate, as that which had this Wrath to come ſignified thereby in his Eye; ſhewing withal the Foundation of the Condemnation of that World, to lie in this, That though Noah declared this Wrath to come unto them, by his Preaching and Example, (for as he was a Preacher of Righteouſneſs, ſo of this Wrath, as Enoch alſo had been) yet they believed it not, becauſe it was unſeen, as the Words of that ſeventh Verſe are. For theſe things then happened in Types of what was to fall out concerning this great Wrath to come; that Deſtruction of the old World being but the Shadow of this, as expreſly 'tis interpreted to be, 1 Pet. 3. 20. The Spirits in Priſon which ſometimes were diſobedient, when once the Long-ſuffering of God waited in the Days of Noah while the Ark was preparing. The like Figure whereunto is Baptiſm, which now alſo ſaves us. If the Ark was of Salvation, then the Flood of Damnation; and that, then, as the word [alſo] now evidently ſhews. This Wrath, it is a thing to come, as that of the Flood then was to them, ſtiled therefore the Wrath to come; and ſo it is a thing not ſeen, and ſo is reckoned amongſt the Objects of Faith.

Men indeed have ſome leſſer ſtitches in Conſcience afore-hand, both from it and about it, but little do they imagine that theſe will or ſhould ever become the matter of ſuch torturing Aches, as they riſe up to in the end: Men do as little imagine this of theſe fore-running Warnings, or ſecret Gripings and Twitches, as the Old World did then, that the uſual Clouds of Heaven that cauſed Storms, would have ever ſwell'd to the drowning of the World. Nor indeed doth this fall out to Mens Souls, until the Curſe or Wrath of God enters, like Oil into their Bones, as the Pſalmiſt ſpeaks of Judas, Pſal. 109. 18.

For this Wrath is in the mean time a thing hidden in the Breaſt and Boſom of the Almighty, and is therefore termed a Treaſure of Wrath; a Treaſure, becauſe hid, ſo Treaſures uſe to be; (they are termed hidden Treaſures, Prov. 2. 4. and elſewhere.) And for the ſame reaſon, the coming of it upon Men, is called the Revelation of the righteous Judgment of God. As the things belonging to Mens Peace, ſo their Deſtruction, are hidden from their Eyes. Though Damnation ſlumbers not, 2 Pet. 2. 3. but is on its March, and proceedeth in its approaches towards them, every Hour nearer and nearer; yet Men ſlumber in reſpect of the belief thereof, and not ſo much as dream of it in their Slumber, 1 Theſſ. 5. 3, 6, 9. The Apoſtle's Complaint there, is the ſame in effect with that of Moſes, Who knows the Power of thine Anger, ſo as to apply his Heart to Wiſdom? Luke 19. 42.

The Baptiſt, who began the publiſhing of the Goſpel, he began it with forewarning Men of this Wrath, and ſtiled it, the Wrath to come. And Chriſt, whoſe Office was to preach that Goſpel, ſeconds him therein, and terms it Hell-Fire, &c. Now obſerve how he ſpeaks to the Phariſees about it; O ye Generation of Vipers, who hath warned you to flee from the Wrath to come! Mat. 3. 7. 'Tis Vox admirantis; as if he had ſaid, 'Tis ſtrange that the preaching of Wrath to come, ſhould any way ſtartle yours ſo hardned Hearts, as to ſee you here attending at my Sermons; and that the Conſideration thereof ſhould any way arreſt, or make any dint upon your Souls. The reaſon of his Wonder was, becauſe indeed Men believe it not, or very ſlightly. Who hath demonſtrated it unto you? as his Word is. And Chriſt uſeth the very ſame Word about this matter, Luke 12. 5. I will forewarn you, (or demonſtrate to you) whom you ſhall fear, even him that can deſtroy in Hell. All this ſtill tends to ſhew how hidden it is from the moſt of Men. The very ſame Unbelief is more darkly, and in other Terms, expreſſed in the Old Teſtament: Deut. 32. 29. O that they would conſider [their latter end!] And, Eccleſ. 11. 8, 9. Remember the Days of Darkneſs, for they are many: But know thou, that for all theſe things God will bring thee to Judgment.

Now to help you a little in the belief of this:

Beſides what the Scriptures ſpeak hereof:

1. Conſult thine own Heart. Thou haſt a buſy Principle within thee. Conſcience, that like a Spy ſent in from an adverſe Party into anothers Quarters, obſerves and takes notice of all that paſſeth; not thy Actions or Speeches only, but what is done in thy Privy-Chamber, or Cloſet of thy Soul: and not only ſo, but thou maieſt hear the noiſe of his Pen ſtill a running, and punctually writing that which it obſerveth; and there is not a Motion, a Luſt, a Deſire, a Purpoſe, an End, a flying Thought, but it diligently doth ſet down, and can give thee the Senſe thereof; and thou canſt not ſtop the Courſe hereof. And what is the meaning of all this? but that thy Judgment is continually a preparing, thine Examination a taking all thy Life long. For, where there is a Regiſter, a Clerk of the Aſſize thus buſy at work, there is a Judg, whoſe Officer he is. Be wary therefore what thou doſt! Thou art ſurprized and undone, if thou heedeſt not; for all this is in order unto Judgment. And as Letters written with Onion or Limon Juice, appear not at the preſent, ſo may not the Impreſſes of theſe ſad Lines againſt thee, yet bring but thy Soul to this Fire we have been ſpeaking of, and every Character, Tittle, yea, Accent, or Aggravation of Sin, will be made viſible and legible: And hence it is the Books are ſaid to be opened, Rev. 20.

2. Again, do you not hear daily the Noiſe of Cannon-ſhot from Heaven let off, and the Bullets fly about your Ears, and ſee them ſtrike this Man and that Man in your view? It is the Apoſtle's Conviction to the Gentiles, Rom. 1. 18. That therefore there is a Treaſury of Wrath to come, which he ſpeaks of, chap. 2. 4. becauſe at preſent even in this World, The Wrath of God is revealed from Heaven againſt all Ungodlineſs and Unrighteouſneſs of Men, that withhold the Truth in Unrighteouſneſs. The meaning whereof is, There is no ſort or kind of Unrighteouſneſs or Ungodlineſs, but in the Inſtance or Example of ſome Man or other, God hath by ſome manifeſt Judgment ſhewn his Wrath againſt it, in the view and Obſervation of the very Heathens themſelves, of and to whom it is he ſpeaks this. There was never a Nation of the Heathens, but the Stories of it would have afforded a Theatre of God's Judgments againſt all ſorts of Evils in one Perſon or other, ſingled out by Decimation (as it were) in this World, to ſhew thereby that there was an hidden Wrath to come in the other World, which would fall upon all the reſt, who yet eſcaped at preſent. Thoſe few and ſcattered Inſtances manifeſted a Treaſury, a Magazine of Wrath in Heaven; his Phraſe is, from Heaven, that is, in and from God: which the Heathens alſo were ſenſible of, witneſs their Sacrifices of Atonement directed unto Heaven. And this to be the Apoſtle's Scope is clearly ſeen, in that he proſecutes this in the following Chap. 2. ver. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5. Therefore thou art inexcuſable, O Man, whoſoever thou art, that judgeſt: for wherein thou judgeſt another, thou condemneſt thy ſelf; for thou that judgeſt, doeſt the ſame things. But we are ſure that the Judgment of God is according to Truth againſt them which commit ſuch things. And thinkeſt thou this, O Man, that judgeſt them which do ſuch things, and doeſt the ſame, that thou ſhalt eſcape the Judgment of God? Or deſpiſeſt thou the Riches of his Goodneſs, and Forbearance, and Long-ſuffering? not knowing that the Goodneſs of God leadeth thee to Repentance? But after thy hardneſs, and impenitent Heart, [treaſureſt up unto thy ſelf Wrath againſt the Day of Wrath, and Revelation of the righteous

Judgment

Judgment of God.] And unto this account you may put the enumeration of thoſe inſtances of Judgment made by the other Apoſtles, as thoſe upon the Angels that fell, and on the old World, on Sodom and Gomorrah, Corah, &c. whereof though ſome were outward and temporal Puniſhments, yet becauſe they were Evidences of that Wrath to come upon like impenitent Sinners, both theſe Apoſtles do to that purpoſe allege them, and make uſe thereof to beget this Belief in us. For ſo expreſly the one begin his Diſcourſe thereof: 2 Pet. 2. 3, 4, 5. Whoſe Judgment now of a long time lingreth not, and their Damnation ſlumbreth not. For if God ſpared not the Angels that ſinned, but caſt them down to Hell, and delivered them into Chains of Darkneſs, to be reſerved unto Judgment; and ſpared not the Old World, but ſaved Noah, the eighth Perſon, a Preacher of Righteouſneſs, bringing in the Flood upon the World of the Ungodly: And turned the Cities of Sodom and Gomorrah into Aſhes, condemned them with an Overthrow, making them an Enſample unto thoſe that after ſhould live ungodly. Then the other Apoſtle adds: Jude ver. 7. They ſuffering the Vengeance of Eternal Fire. The Lord knoweth how to deliver the Godly out of Temptations, and to reſerve the Unjuſt unto the Day of Judgment to be puniſhed. Conſider alſo what his Wrath hath been to whole Nations; and how he ſays, he will one Day turn all the Nations into Hell that forget God, as the Pſalmiſt tells us, Pſal. 9. 7. He hath Priſons large enough, and Chains ſtrong enough to hold them all. When the Jews ſaw one hundred and eighty thouſand of the Aſſyrians Hoſt killed in a Night, before the very Walls of Jeruſalem, Fearfulneſs ſurprized the Hypocrites; their Hearts melted with Terror to think what the Wrath of God muſt be for ever: Iſa. 33. 14, &c. Chap. 9.

Uſe 2. Then learn to adore and fear the Greatneſs of our God, to the end to turn to him.

Where he ſhews Favour, his Favour is Life, Pſal. 30. 5. yea, his Loving-kindneſs is better than Life. Pſal. 63. 3. Whom have I in Heaven but thee? There needs no other there.

On the contrary, if he be provoked, there needs no other Judg or Avenger but himſelf. I may ſay, the Weapons of his warfare within himſelf, are mighty to revenge all Diſobedience. This great General needs not borrow, nor call in the Aid of his Creatures, (though in reſpect of their being his Militia, he is ſtiled the Lord of Hoſts,) to make War, and deſtroy. That very Face of his gives Life, and ſtrikes Dead and kills. In thy Preſence is Fulneſs of Joy, Pſal. 16. ult. And from his Preſence is Deſtruction, 2 Theſſ. 1. 9. O hide us, ſay they, Rev. 6. 16. from the Face of him that ſits on the Throne, and from the Wrath of the Lamb. They point to the Fountain of their anguiſh, and ſpeak what above all was it they dreaded. It is greatly obſervable, what and how God talks to Job, to this very purpoſe: Says God to Job, chap. 40. Wilt thou contend with me? So verſe 2. he begins to dare him: Come, ſays he, let this be among other one Trial of thy Power, (who had been a Prince, &c.) in compariſon of mine: Take upon thee, (as I mean to do) and be Judg of all the World: Put on thy Judges Robes, and thy biggeſt Looks: Thus verſe 10. Deck thy ſelf with Majeſty and Excellency, and array thy ſelf with Glory and Beauty. And particularly try; try what thou canſt do or effect, when thou art moſt Angry, by thy meer Looks: Caſt abroad the rage of thy Wrath, ver. 11. Throw Sparkles of thy moſt fiery Indignation from thine Eyes. —Can'ſt thou look a Man dead, and cover a Man's Face for ever with Confuſion? Look on every one that is Proud, and bring him low: So verſ. 12. Hide them in the Duſt together, be they never ſo many; and bind their Faces in ſecret: that is, cover them with Confuſion of Face, with a look or rebuke of thy Face; make them run into Holes, or ſeek Mountains to cover them, to avoid the Terror of thy Looks. Now all this I can do (ſays God) with a meer Look, whenever I pleaſe: And I can as eaſily ſave alſo, as I can thus deſtroy, (which thou canſt not do thine own Soul) as the next Verſe inſinuates, Then will I confeſs thine own Hand can ſave thee. You ſee he reſolves ſaving and deſtroying into the ſame Power of his, and maketh the ſame eſtimate of either; which the Apoſtle alſo doth, chap. 4. 12. There is one Lawgiver, who is able to ſave and to deſtroy.

My Exhortation therefore in fine is, Let us not fear Creatures, but fear Him, and make him your dread: and learn to know what a God ye walk before every Day, and have for ever to do withal. Chriſt that came out of his Boſom knowing him, doth (Luke 12. 4. & 5. compared with Mat. 10. 26. & 28.) upon knowledg of this God make this ſame Exhortation; I ſay to you, (ſays he) and I will forewarn you, (he ſays it twice, and it is as if he had ſaid, Take it from me that know him) Fear him that is able to deſtroy Body and Soul. The Apoſtle ſuccenturiates, We know him that hath ſaid, Vengeance is mine: ſo here, Heb. 10. And again, We knowing the Terror of the Lord, 2 Cor. 5. 11. which they know, by an eſtimate taken from his Goodneſs, that his Wrath muſt be anſwerable. And Moſes alſo, that had ſeen his Back-parts, and his Glory; He cries out, Who knows the power of thine Anger? Hypocrites and carnal Profeſſors (as thoſe were whom God profeſſedly takes to task Pſal. 50.) think to play with the great God, and deal with him any how, (as we ſay) as with a Man that is their Fellow. They know him not. Pſal. 50. 21. Theſe things haſt thou done, and I kept ſilence, and thou thoughteſt I was altogether ſuch an one as thy ſelf: And what things they had done and were guilty of (ſee if thou haſt not been guilty of the ſame or like) the 18, 19, & 20 verſes ſhew; When thou ſaweſt a Thief, then thou conſentedſt with him, and haſt been partaker with Adulterers. Thou giveſt thy Mouth to Evil, and thy Tongue frameth Deceit. Thou ſitteſt and ſpeakeſt againſt thy Brother, thou ſlandereſt thine own Mother's Son. And God was ſilent or long-ſuffering. (The like you have, Iſa. 57. 11, 12. Of whom haſt thou been afraid, that thou haſt lied, and haſt not remembred me, nor laid it to thy Heart? Have not I held my peace even of old, and thou feareſt me not? &c.) But mark what is the Iſſue of all this; in Pſal. 50. 21. it follows, But I will reprove thee, and ſet them in Order before thee. They had never felt the ſmart of his Anger in all their Lives, and little thought that the Lion was in him: but it follows, Conſider this ye that forget God, leſt I [tear] you in Peices, and there be none to deliver. O take heed and turn to him, or on the ſudden he will ſtart up like a mighty Lion, and tear your Souls in pieces, as a Giant might do Cobwebs, and prey upon the Blood of your very Souls, and break the Bones thereof as a Lion could of the moſt ſilly Creature. Add to this,

Uſe 3. Conſider, What it is to die, and what the State and Condition of the other World is. It is to have to do with God immediately, either in Wrath or Love; and from his own Hands, as well as from the immediate Sentence of his Mouth, to receive thy Weal or Woe. —That we come naked into this World, and go as naked out of it, was Job's Meditation firſt; after that David's, Pſal. 49. 15. We ſhall carry nothing away, that is, of what belongs to this World; then after him Solomon the Son, Eccleſ. 5. 15. As he came forth of his Mother's Womb (ſpeaking of Man) naked ſhall he return, to go as he came, and ſhall take nothing of his Labour, which he may carry away in his Hand. The Effect of which divine Meditation comes to this, to put ſecure and careleſs Man upon the conſideration of his immortal Soul's condition, which firſt cometh into this World naked (as well as his Body:) And poor thing! the meaning of its firſt cry (if the Soul it ſelf could then ſpeak out its Mind) is, I am an empty thing, and have brought nothing with me; who will ſhew me any good? But after its being grown up, it begins to find a World richly furniſhed with all things to enjoy, as the Apoſtle's Phraſe is, 1 Tim. 6. 17. But yet again when he goes out of this World, he is then turned out of Houſe and Home, as perfectly naked as he came into it: and, as Rev. 18. 14. The Fruits that thy Soul luſted after, and all things which are dainty and goodly, are departed from thee, and thou ſhalt find them no more at all. Death is therefore compared unto the breaking or failing of a Merchant or Tradeſman proving Bankrupt, Luke 16. 9. That when ye fail, &c. ſays Chriſt; of which I have elſewhere ſpoken.

Now

Now if this be thy Caſe as to this and that other World, think with thy ſelf what thine eternal Soul muſt then betake it ſelf unto, and alſo unto whom in that other World. My Doctrinal part hath informed you that it is God himſelf, God immediately, —Eccleſ. 12. 7. The Spirit returns unto him that gave it. To explain which, There was that evident difference put in the making Man's Soul at firſt from that of his Body, that God made the Body out of the Earth, but the Soul was breathed in by God; and therefore not out of any preexiſtent matter, as the Souls and Forms of all other living things are. And upon this Diſſolution or ſeparation of each from other, it is that Solomon ſays, Then ſhall the Duſt return to the Earth as it was, and the Soul to God that gave it; that is to ſay, the ſame common Law befalls either in their kind, that to other things in their kind; they are reduced unto their firſt Principles. And ſo ~~look~~ as the Body is materially reſolved into the Earth, which was the firſt matter of it; ſo according to ſome kind of Analogy thereunto, (and ſo far as the Soul is capable of a like return unto God,) the Soul returns to God that gave it; as having been the immediate Original of it, not materially, as a Spark is out of the Fire, but as the immediate Efficient. It came from God by way of Gift, God gave it; that is, freely and voluntarily produced it by a ſole ſingle free Act of his Will and Power, whereby he created it out of nothing; and ſo in the whole of it, it was an entire and meer Gift of his. And therefore in the beginning of his Exhortation, verſe 1. of this Chapter he had aforehand laid this as a Foundation for it, Remember thy Creator, or Creators; and is ſo ſtiled, becauſe he is in a more ſpecial manner thy Creator, than of our Bodies, or of other Creatures; and that becauſe himſelf immediately gave thy Soul, in ſuch a manner as he produced not our Bodies, nor material Subſtances. —And hence it is it returns to him, as the immediate Judg or Arbiter of its eternal Condition. It returns to Elohim; which, as A Lapide and Ferdinandus have obſerved in their Comments, ſignifies alſo a Judg as well as a Creator, and ſo was choſen out here, as a word more fitly ſerving that his ſcope, than any other Name of God's. Now then think what it is to die; it is to return to God, ſo as eternally and immediately to have to do with him.

And then withal conſider the different Diſpenſations of this Great God towards you in this World, and that next. In this World Mens Souls having Creature-Comforts, God communicates himſelf unto them thereby; and by reaſon of his Patience and Long-ſuffering to them added hereto, they hear not of, nor from him immediately: the moſt of Men do not otherwiſe than in theſe mediate Ways. I was altogether ſilent, ſays God, Pſal. 50. He anſwers them neither good nor bad. And thus though he is not far off from any of us, but Men live and move in him, in reſpect of his Power to uphold them, as Acts 17. 28. or, as verſe 25. He giveth Life and Breath unto all things; (which Clauſe doth interpret that other, ver. 28.) Yet as to converſe with, or intimate knowledg of him, he is the unkown God, ver. 23. and Men live without God (in that reſpect) in this World, as Eph. 2. 12.

But although Men thus live without God here, they ſhall not live (I might ſay [not die] rather, for it is a Death,) without God in the World to come. I beſeech you think with your ſelves, how your Converſe with this Great God in this World is (I expreſs it by that of Men with a Lion, comparatively,) but as through a Grate, (as that of the Spouſe's with him, is ſaid to be but through a Lettice, Cant. 2. 9.) And he keeps to the Laws of his ordinary Providence: he breaks not forth immediately, but lies ſtill and quiet; and through his Patience ſuffereth and permitteth Men to walk by him, and do all their Hearts deſire, and lets them alone. But, Brethren, when you come to die; it is as if one were turned in unto that Lion with the Grate open; and thoſe Repagula of his Patience removed, your poor Souls, your naked Souls, are upon him immediately, and muſt (in a clean contrary Way to what the Saints do) dwell with him for ever. —The Conſideration of this ſtruck Dread and Horror into the Hearts of the Sinners of Sion, (as it may well do in any Soul that hath not Communion with God.) Iſa. 33. 14. The Sinners in Sion are afraid, fearfulneſs hath ſurprized the Hypocrites; [who among us ſhall dwell] with the devouring Fire? Who amongſt us ſhall dwell with everlaſting Burnings? (I opened that place before, and ſhewed that this devouring Fire was God himſelf:) Theſe ſpeak one to another as Men affrighted uſe to do, and as ſtruck on the Sudden with apprehenſions of the greatneſs of that God, whom their Conſciences (now awakened) told them they had to do withal for ever. And they look trembling one upon the other, and the common Cry and voice among them thereupon is, Whoſe Portion will this prove to be? For it will be the Portion of ſome: or, Who of us, or all Creatures, is able to bear it, or endure it? And upon this Conference (as I may term it) and inquiſition among themſelves, God by the Prophet ſteps out and anſwers them, but in a clean contrary Way, and to their further Confuſion, and tells them: There are thoſe that ſhall dwell with me thus immediately, unto who I will be Glory and Happineſs, who ſhall walk in the comfort of this Fire which you thus dread; and who (like the three Children in that fiery Furnace) ſhall be refreſhed therein. So it follows, He that walks righteouſly, and ſpeaks uprightly, he ſhall dwell on high. And therefore it further follows, 1. as a Promiſe to the upright and pure in Heart, ver. 17. Thine Eyes ſhall ſee the King in his Glory. And 2. with a further threatning to the Hypocrites, Thine Heart, who art an Hypocrite, ſhall meditate Terror, ver. 18.

Amos 4.

Now then again, ſeeing you have thus to do with the great God alone for ever, let every one of us prepare to meet our God. This neceſſarily puts you upon ſeeking of him here in this World, and to ſeek that Face and Favour of his, in which alone is Life. You muſt therefore alſo give up your Souls unto him here, to live in him, as in your chiefeſt Good, and not in your Luſts; and to live to him, as your higheſt End and conſtant Intereſt; and as whoſe Glory ſhould act and ſteer you in all your ways; and not unto your ſelves. And therefore you, that have neglected this great God, or ſerved him but in Formality and Hypocriſy, (which in Scripture hath the denomination of thoſe that forget God) who never knew what it is to have intimate Communion and Fellowſhip with him through Faith in Prayer and other Converſes, joined with hearty Love unto him, and to the Intereſt of his Glory: Think, O think with your ſelves, when you come to die, that you muſt go to him, and be with him for ever, in that ſenſe I have given. Think with thy ſelf thus: My Soul will be turned naked out of this World, and there is nothing, no not a Rag of any of the Comforts I purſue after here, which ſhall be carried with it from hence; but it is the great God I muſt be turned naked unto, and appear before; and if my Soul be found naked of his Image too, (which to have renewed in me was the only Errand he ſent my Soul for into this World) and if I bring not that along with me, as my current Token, Ticket, and Paſs into the other World, there will not be a dwelling-place of Bliſs for me, to receive me into; not ſuch an one as the Apoſtle ſpeaks of for the Comfort of the Saints, 2 Cor. 5. 1, 3. We know that if our earthly Tabernacle be diſſolved, we have a Building of God; if ſo be we ſhall not be found naked, ver. 3. that is, devoid of his Image, as alſo of Chriſt's Righteouſneſs. But inſtead thereof this great God will be unto me as a Furnace, and I muſt dwell with thoſe everlaſting Burnings ſpoken of, even for ever.

And then think with thy ſelf again: What Communion or Correſpondency hath my Soul kept and held with God? what Acquaintance hath it had with him? For otherwiſe it will be ſtrange you ſhould commend your Souls into his hands, (as Chriſt did, and the Saints uſe to do when they die) and that with a deſire and intention to live that Eternity with him which is to come, and yet not to have lived at all with him, or to him here. How doſt thou think thou canſt look him in the Face at thy firſt appearance before him? If they ſhould take thy Soul away from thee this Night, as Chriſt's ſpeech is, how canſt thou think God ſhould then at firſt look on thee, much leſs take thee into Eternal, immediate Boſom-communion with himſelf for ever? I pray, upon what acquaintance? And ſo may God alſo ſay unto thee. O therefore remember thy Creator in the Days of thy Youth; learn to know and fear him; Acquaint thy ſelf with him, and be at Peace: Receive the Law, I pray thee, from his Mouth, &c.

Job 22. 21, 22.

Again,

Again, think with thy ſelf, What do I purſuing after the things of this Life with my deareſt Affections, and utmoſt Intentions? Alas! I am to live for ever with God, and not with theſe. The Apoſtle ſets forth a Manifeſto upon it, 1 Tim. 6. 7. We brought nothing into this World, and it is certain (or manifeſt, ſays he, τὸ δῆλον) we carry nothing out: and thereby provokes them to purſue with might and main after Godlineſs, which alone is great Gain, and only current Money in the other World. And this is the manifeſt Coherence of thoſe two Sayings, following immediately one the other in thoſe two verſes, ver. 6, 7. But Godlineſs with Contentment is great Gain. For (ſays he) we brought nothing into this World, and it is certain we can carry nothing out: the latter being a Motive to the former. And therefore alſo upon the ſame ground it follows, Truſt in the living God, and not in Riches, (ſo neither in Learning, Wiſdom, Credit, &c.) ver. 17. For why? It is the living God whom you are to have to do withal for ever. Although he hath for the preſent given you, and provided all things in this World richly to enjoy, (as it follows there) yet he hath reſerved himſelf for you to enjoy in the other World. And it is the [living God] in my Text likewiſe, into whoſe Hands you fall as of a Judg and Avenger, if you fall ſhort of Godlineſs. And it is this living God you muſt be made Happy in and by for ever.

Heb. 10.

The great Theme and Subject of Eccleſiaſtes, you know, is, that All is Vanity and Vexation of Spirit. Now you may obſerve, how Solomon upon this very ground and account I have now been preſſing, doth ſet a freſh Stamp upon, and his laſt Seal unto that Truth, that all is vain, Eccleſ. 12. 8. even from this ground, That a Man's Spirit returns unto God that gave it, ver. 7. Read and obſerve the coherence of thoſe two Verſes, ver. 7, 8. Then ſhall the Duſt return unto the Earth as it was, and the Spirit ſhall return to God who gave it. Vanity of Vanities, (ſaith the Preacher) all is Vanity. He had in the beginning of this Book pronounced them Vanities, chap. 1. Vanity of Vanities, &c. And he had all along proved them vain at the beſt, as they are enjoyed in this World, unto thoſe who enjoy them moſt abundantly, moſt freely. But now when in the concluſion he had brought Man himſelf, that is, the enjoyer of them, and diſcourſed him into his Grave, laid him in the Duſt, and ſaid thereupon that his Soul muſt immediately go to God, then he cries out anew, (having reſerved it for the concluſion of all, and that alſo upon an account greater than all the former:) [Vanity of Vanities, ſaith the Preacher, all is Vanity:] and thereupon infers, as the cloſe, Let us hear the concluſion of the whole matter, Fear God, and keep his Commandments, ver. 13. For God ſhall bring every Work unto Judgment, with every ſecret thing, whether it be good, or whether it be evil. You may obſerve how the Apoſtle in a parrallel manner alſo ſpeaks, It is appointed for all Men to die, and after this the Judgment, Heb. 9. ult. juſt as Solomon here.

Let me next deal ſtrictim, or at downright blows with you. I firſt ſerve every Soul here with an Arreſt, that he was once a Child of Wrath, Eph. 2. 3. Children of Wrath by Nature as well as others; let every Man clear himſelf of it unto God as he can; all were born ſuch, and continue ſuch until now, 1 John 2. 9. if they have not become otherwiſe, by an Eſcape made (from the ſenſe of this Danger) which is termed by the Baptiſt a flying from the Wrath to come, Mat. 3. 7. an eſcaping the Damnation of Hell, by Chriſt, Mat. 23. 33. As the Murtherer did when he ran to the City of Refuge from the attach of the Avenger of Blood, (as in Heb. 6. 18. the alluſion is) a flying for refuge unto Chriſt. Which eſcape is made by a ſolid, and ſerious, and over-powring Apprehenſion of that Eſtate to be ſuch, as that a Man continuing therein, he apprehends he is every Moment obnoxious to this Wrath, which drives him unto Chriſt as a Deliverer from that Wrath, joined with a giving a Man's ſelf up to him: Both which, through the Power of the Holy Ghoſt accompanying them, do work a change of Heart and Life in him, an actual turning of the Soul unto God from all Sin to Godlineſs. And until a Man be thus ingrafted into Chriſt, and thereby made a new Creature in him, All this Wrath, as Chriſt ſays, John 3. ult. remains or abides upon him. Which word [remains] imports (as was ſaid) his condition to have been originally, and in it ſelf, and from the beginning, uninterruptedly under Wrath; until ſaving Faith, which is accompanied with Regeneration and true Repentance, puts the difference. So as there needs no more to be enquired of ſuch a Man, but what have you to ſay for the Alteration of your Eſtate? without which it is one and the ſame that it was at the firſt; he continues under Condemnation until now: Wrath remains. As we uſe to ſay, an Outlawry, a Sentence of Death remains upon a Man till pardoned. He ſays not only that the Wrath of God is coming upon ſuch a Man, (as the Apoſtle's Phraſe is) but it abides, &c. the Apoſtle indeed ſays, it comes, as in reſpect to the execution of it; but Chriſt ſays, it abides on a Man, in reſpect of a Man's being bound over unto it, until the Son doth make him free.

John. 8.

Then again think with your ſelves, how that this Wrath of God is declared to be againſt all Ungodlineſs and Unrighteouſneſs of any kind, continued in a way of Diſobedience. And be thy Sins ſmall or great, yet whilſt thou art in that Eſtate, this Wrath is in their proportion due unto all that Ungodlineſs and Unrighteouſneſs in thee, and remains upon thee for them. Firſt, againſt all Ungodlineſs, tho it be but in deadneſs, averſeneſs unto, and running aſide from God unto the Creature: whereupon follow Neglects, Contempts of him, Enmities to him, and thence Omiſſion of Duties towards him, and not glorifying him as God, as there ver. 21. And, ſecondly, all Unrighteouſneſs unrepented of and continued in; the enumeration of the Particulars of which you may have in the ſame Chapter, verſ. 29, 30. Being filled with all Unrighteouſneſs, Fornication, Wickedneſs, Covetouſneſs, Maliciouſneſs, full of Envy, Murther, Debate, Deceit, Malignity, Whiſperers, Backbiters, Haters of God, Diſpiteful, Proud, Boaſters, Inventors of evil Things, Diſobedient to Parents, &c. And to ſtrike thy Heart yet more, think what Sins the Apoſtle more eſpecially ſingleth out, as thoſe for which he ſpecially indigitates that the Wrath of God cometh upon the Children of Diſobedience, Col. 3. 5, 6. Even Fornication, Uncleanneſs, inordinate Affection, evil Concupiſcence, and Covetouſneſs, which is Idolatry: For which things ſake the Wrath of God cometh upon the Children of Diſobedience; that is, that live in them in a Way of Rebellion and Diſobedience unto God.

And conſider, they are not Heathens only, whom the Wrath of God is poured forth upon; though ſo, Pſal. 79. 6. Pour out thy Wrath upon the Heathen that have not known thee; and Pſal. 9. 17. All the Nations that forget God ſhall be turned into Hell: But it is alſo thoſe that live under and obey not the Goſpel; and thoſe eſpecially. In 2 Theſſ. 1. 7, 8, 9. The Subjects of this Wrath are reduced to theſe two, thoſe that know not God, they were theſe Heathens; and thoſe that obey not the Goſpel, that is, who profeſſing it, and living under the means of it, even the Children of the Kingdom, (as they are called Mat. 8. 12. and Mat. 13. 41.) there ſhall be gathered out of the Kingdom (that is, the viſible Profeſſors of Religion in the ſtrictneſs of it) all things (that is, Perſons) that do offend, and do Iniquity, or are workers of it. Thoſe firſt and eſpecially, that have given ſcandal by doing Iniquity openly, and repented not, and then thoſe that ſecretly [do Iniquity;] that are found workers of it in any kind, they ſhall be gathered (ſays Chriſt) and caſt them into a Furnace of Fire; and Hypocrites eſpecially, they are made the meaſure and ſtandard of all other that are caſt into it, both by Chriſt and the Prophet Iſaiah.

But not only theſe, but in Mat. 12. 22. He that but wanteth the Wedding-Garment; not the poſitive doers of Iniquity only, but that want true Grace, Sincerity of Faith, and Love unto Jeſus Chriſt; the wanting all thoſe Graces, Col. 3. 12. Gal. 6. 15. which as a Garment he ſhould have put on (as in thoſe places) that came to ſuch a Wedding, the Wedding of ſo great a Perſon. And when there, he ſays to ſuch an one, Friend, (it is an upbraiding Speech, ſuch an one as Chriſt uſed to Judas, Mat. 25. 40. becauſe he had profeſſed himſelf to be a Friend, but is diſcovered to be a falſe and feigned one) how comeſt thou hither? here is no room for thee. And though Chriſt is ſaid to ſpy out but one ſuch among that Company, yet it is the caſe of many: For, that the concluſion of that Parable, verſ. 14. importeth, Many are called, few are choſen: and ſo that one Perſon is profeſſedly made but the Inſtance or Example ample of what Chriſt will do with all others that are ſuch; who will prove many. And it is ſaid that he was ſpeechleſs, or ſtrangled as with an Halter (as the original word ſignifies) through obſtupefaction of Spirit. Now of this Man, and all other ſuch, Chriſt the King ſaith, ver. 13. Bind him Hand and Foot, (that he may not be able to help himſelf, or deliver himſelf) and caſt him into outer Darkneſs, there ſhall be weeping and gnaſhing of Teeth. And the true reaſon is, becauſe if Mens Eſtates be found unrenewed or unregenerate, (as this Man's was through want of true Grace) then the Sins of their whole Lives do abide upon their ſcore, and are charged upon them. And every ſuch an one, even the fineſt-ſpun Hypocrite, hath Sins enough (if he had no other) in thoſe very deficiencies and fallings ſhort of true and ſpiritual Grace, which he wholly wants. And the higheſt and moſt ſublimated work of the Spirit, which a Man remaining unregenerate is any way capable of, through heavenly enlightnings, and taſtings of the Powers of the World to come, ſtirring up but Self only, and the Affections thereof towards Spiritual Things, is capable of being diſcovered, not only that it is a deficient Work, and ſhort of true Holineſs at that day: but alſo when all the inward Obliquities, Motives, Ends, Purpoſes, Affections, that are in ſuch Mens Hearts; that were the Influencers and Guides of their Ways and Actions, are diſcovered, it will be found that they all are matter of Wrath, as truly as their other Sins: And their Perſons will be proved to have continued under the Wrath of God abiding on them, as well as groſſer Sinners. And that there will be the diſcovery of theſe things in ſuch Men, is the genuine ſcope of that Paſſage, Heb. 4. 13, 14. The VVord of God (underſtand it whether of Chriſt, or the Word of Chriſt) is quick and powerful, and ſharper than any two-edged Sword, piercing even to the dividing aſunder of Soul and Spirit, and of the Joints and Marrow, and is a Diſcerner of the Thoughts and Intents of the Heart: Neither is there any Creature, (that is, of the Heart of Man) that is not manifeſt in his Sight with whom we have to do. For unto ſuch Profeſſors among the Jews, as had been enlightned, &c. as chap. 6. of whom you alſo read up and down in that Epiſtle; and yet ſtill remained in real and ſpiritual unbelief, as ver. 11. of this very Chapter compared with Jude ver 5. is this Paſſage particularly directed, and of them intended.

Conſider moreover, that the longer thou goeſt on in this Eſtate, or in thy Sin, the more of VVrath thou treaſureſt up unto thy ſelf, as Rom. 2. Every Moment Sins do add unto that heap. And all thy Sins are barrel'd up in thy Conſcience, as Gun-powder fully dry; and an anſwerable Proportion and Meaſure of Wrath is laid up in God's Heart; and when theſe meet, and that it comes to paſs that the Fire of God's Wrath breaks forth out of his Heart into thine, then thy Soul is blown up in an inſtant, and a Fire kindled that burns for ever in Hell.

And meditate alſo how frail thy Life is, how thin and ſlight a Skreen of Fleſh there is betwixt all this Wrath and thy bare Soul; which if worn, or any way ſliced through, the Soul runs out. Nay, that venemous Spider, thy Soul, dwells but in a Cobweb, which if broken, or any violence be done it, it inſtantly flies away into the other World.—Job, in ſeveral places, delights to compare our Lives and Condition in this World unto a Candle or Lamp: Now let the Candle be let alone to burn it ſelf out fairly to its full length, yet ſome laſt but a very little while, and thoſe of the greateſt ſize cannot long. Oh, but how many intervening Caſualties are there, that afore do put it out? The Candle of the Wicked ſhall be put out, and Deſtruction cometh upon them, Job 21. 17. that is, ab extrinſeco, from without. How many Thieves in the Candle, or fatal Accidents do Men meet with, that unawares conſume it? Immoderate Sorrows and Cares ſwale it; Intemperance, like too much Oil poured thereon to feed it, choaketh and extinguiſheth it; Too much Intention of Mind turns the Flame downwards upon it ſelf, and ſo it evaporates. Often another Man's Breath in Seaſons of Malignity (which fall out more or leſs every Year) blows and puffs it out. A Friends breath comes in with an infectious Vapour, and throws his Soul out who viſits him: Yea, an unskilful or elſe a miſtaking hand of a Phyſician, who undertakes to ſnuff and brighten it; unwarily clean ſnuffs the Candle out.—Yea, Men ſtrong and vigorous go to the Grave in a Moment, as in the ſame 21*ſt Chapter* of Job, ver. 13. Yea, as Pſal. 55. 15. they go quick to Hell: it is an alluſion to Corah, Dathan, &c. Numb. 16. 30, 33. of whom 'tis ſaid twice, They went alive to Hell. Many die ſo ſuddenly, that they are in Hell in a trice, and as it were ere quite dead. And truly the moſt of Men live in this World like ſilly Sheep in a Paſture, as David's Similitude is Pſal. 49. 14. They are put into Hell like Sheep, (ſo ſome:) It notes out their Security in reſpect of that ſlaughter which comes upon them. This Man dies, then that, then another, and they regard it not; even as the Sheep do not, when the Butcher (as his Pleaſure is) takes out firſt one, then another, and carries them to the Shambles, whilſt the reſt feed on; and know not that themſelves are a fatting to the Day of Slaughter alſo.

See Ainſworth.

Let us conſider alſo, what millions of Tranſgreſſions are we guilty of in one Day? O then what in thy whole Life? And what a reckoning will the Sins of thy whole Life come to, when every Commandment ſhall bring in their Bills? and that thou haſt to do with a God, who,

1. Hath all thy Sins before him, Iſa. 65. 6. Behold, it is written before me, but I will recompence, &c.

2. That will never forget any one of them, Amos 8. 7. The Lord hath ſworn, Surely I will never forget any of their Works.

3. With a God who will bate thee nothing, Every Tranſgreſſion ſhall receive a juſt recompence of reward: He ſpared not his own Son. Rom. 8. and will not thee, unleſs by regeneration thou haſt a Portion in his Son. Think with thy ſelf what a caſe thou art in, if thou muſt anſwer Juſtice for all and every one of theſe.

The moſt of theſe things hitherto by way of Uſe ſpoken by me, are no other than what David himſelf ſpends one whole Pſalm together upon; it is Pſal. 49. and ſtyles it, The Meditation of his Heart, ver. 3. which cauſed me to entitle that former about what it is to die, a Meditation rather than an Uſe; as I had done that of Moſes alſo, Pſal. 90. This of David's I ſhall here add, to ſet the deeper Seal and Weight upon all that hath been treated.

He begins the Pſalm, and ſhews the Moment of theſe matters, though in view but ordinary, with as ſolemn a Preface and Proclamation, calling upon attention and heed hereto, as any where we find in Scriptures.

1. In the firſt verſe he ſummons all the World into a Ring about him, Hear ye this all the People; give Ear all the Inhabitants of the World.

And, 2. Particulariſeth forth his Auditors into all ſorts of Conditions, ver. 2. Both low and high, Rich and Poor together. For why? what he was to utter to them, did as much concern the one as it did the other, and behoved them all alike to look to; as being that which eſpecially concerned them in reſpect unto their Being in the other World, how different ſoever their Condition was in this.

And, 3. He cries up the matter it ſelf, as the greateſt Wiſdom, ver. 3. and a deep myſterious Parable and dark ſaying, verſe 4. My Mouth ſhall ſpeak of Wiſdom, and the Meditation of my Heart ſhall be of Underſtanding: I will incline mine Ear unto a Parable, I will open my dark ſaying upon the Harp.—Now what ſhould this matter be? It was to declare two things, which take up that whole Pſalm.

The firſt, how in the ſtyle of a Be it known to all Men, (for we have ſeen he publiſheth it to all) he aloud declares, I for my part am not afraid to die, and go into that other World. Which confidence of his he greatens by this Suppoſition ſuperadded: That if, when he ſhould come to die, all the Sins of his whole Life were preſented before his view, yet notwithſtanding he ſhould not be afraid: thus ver. 5. Wherefore ſhould I fear in the Days of evil, when the Iniquities of my Heels ſhall compaſs me about? A ſtrange confidence! which yet he found reaſon for from God: For he challengeth all or any thing to bring in reaſon to the contrary; let them all ſay, [Wherefore ſhould I fear?]

And

And yet his other Pſalms, as well as his Story, tell us what an infinite number of Sins were upon his ſcore, and how ſenſible he was thereof. —And that this bold Speech of his relates ſpecially to the day of Death, or days wherein he might have cauſe to fear it, (though I will exclude no other times of Trouble, that were yet to come before, in this Life, to be intended by him; which Interpreters wholly carry it unto.) That this is his Scope, I ſhall make appeal to the whole drift of what follows throughout the Pſalm: which concerns the ſtate of wicked Men in their Death, (which I ſhall by and by ſhew:) But ſpecially I argue it from the reference and correſpondency this Speech hath with and to ver. 15. God will redeem my Soul from the Power of the Grave, for he ſhall receive me. Selah. There you have the reaſon or ground of this his Confidence, which he had at firſt-uttered in ver. 5. perfectly expreſſed, as that which he oppoſed unto all Therefore's or Wherefore's to the contrary; yea, though they ſhould be fetch'd from his very Sins, that might (if any thing) make him afraid. But there in that reſolve of his, ver. 15. he centers, and landeth this which he had ſo confidently uttered in ver. 5. And all the reſt of his diſcourſe that comes between, is apparently about the oppoſite condition of wicked Men; as that they muſt die, and what their Eſtate is in and after Death; all which was but to illuſtrate this Confidence of his. Chap. 9.

He plainly in this ver. 5. puts himſelf into the ſuppoſition, as if he were then to Die, and as if Death (the King of Terrors, Job 18. 19.) were ſetting down his ſiege about him, and that all the Iniquities of his heels or Ways, (which are Deaths ſtrongeſt Forces, The Sting of Death is Sin, and the ſtrength of Sin is the Law, 1 Cor. 15. 5, 6.) were as an Army formed up, encompaſſing him round, (which out of Pſal. 40. 12. I have ſhewed to have been his Caſe, and the very Metaphor he there alſo uſeth.) But now David was ſo ſteeled, as though he placed himſelf (thus aforehand) in the full view and face of all theſe, ſingle and alone in the midſt of them; he yet outdares them all, as the Apoſtle did Rom. 8. ult. ſtrengthned with this, for the Lord will receive my Soul; which Phraſe of Speech to be the ſame that a dying Saint uſeth, you all know.—And this part of his Speech, ver. 5. might have come in as comfortable an Uſe as any other, of that former Doctrine, [the innumerable number of Sins;] but that this other part that now follows doth properly belong unto what hath been now laſt inſiſted on; and ſo I rather placed both here.

The ſecond thing is, The oppoſite ſtate of wicked Men in their Lives, and in relation to their dying, and alſo at and after Death; by which he both illuſtrates and expounds his meaning in ver. 5. to be to utter his own bleſſed condition at his Death, ver. 15. and to that purpoſe it is, he further delates upon the Death of wicked Men in the reſt of the Pſalm: And which is indeed a kind of Summary of what in the former Meditation I have preſt.

During their Lives, they truſt in their Wealth, and boaſt themſelves in the Multitude of their Riches, ver. 6. and yet they ſee (as the word is, ver. 10.) that they cannot redeem their own or others precious Souls from bodily Death, or obtain of God by a Ranſom, that they ſhould live for ever. For he ſees the wiſe Man die like as the Fool, and ſo leave their Wealth to others: Thus in ver. 7, 8, 9, 10. That which therefore (miſerable Wretches) they relieve themſelves with againſt this, is, Their inward thought is, that their Houſes ſhall continue for ever, and their Dwelling-places to all Generations: They call their Lands after their own Names, and their Poſterity approve their Sayings, ver. 13. Though when he dies, he ſhall carry nothing away, his Glory ſhall not deſcend after him, &c. And whither goes he when he dies? His Soul (ſo 'tis in the Original, and varied in the Margin,) ſhall go to the Generation of his Fathers, (to the Company of thoſe Giants of the Old World, from whom Hell hath its Name ſo oft in the Proverbs.) And where are they all? The Spirits in Priſon. So the Apoſtle reſolves us, ſpeaking of the Men of the old World, 1 Pet. 3. 19. And they ſhall never ſee Light or comfort more, ſays the Pſalmiſt. But as for me (ſays David, ver. 15.) God ſhall receive me into the boſom of his Love and Bliſs.—And then again upon their dying, They are laid as Sheep in the Grave; Death ſhall feed on them, and prey upon them: The firſt Death upon their Bodies in the Grave, the ſecond Death upon their Souls. And their Beauty ſhall conſume in the Grave: ſo as at the morning (as there) of the Reſurrection, the greateſt Perſonages, that have had ſuch a Gleam of Glory to attend them whilſt they lived, accompanied perhaps alſo with dominion over others, ſhall then riſe ſuch ugly ſhabby Death-eaten and Hell-eaten Creatures, (as we uſe to ſay, Moth-eaten) all their Beauty being preyed upon, (that's his word) and conſumed: And ſuch ſhall they appear in Judgment, where the upright (whom they deſpiſed) ſhall have Dominion over them, ver. 14. But (ſays David) God ſhall redeem my Soul from the power of the Grave: For he ſhall receive me. Selah. Book 13

And for the further illuſtration of all this, and how it relates unto Death, I ſhall only caſt in a manifeſt parallel between what David here had meditated about the condition of wicked Men at Death, with what our Lord himſelf hath ſeconded it withal, in expreſſions fully herewith agreeing, treating of wicked Men's dying alſo; Luke 12. 16. unto ver. 21. 'Tis the Parable of that rich Man, whoſe Soul was taken away that night. 1. Says David, Their inward thought is, &c. ver. 11. And ſays Chriſt, He thought within himſelf, ſo ver. 17. 2. While he lived he bleſſed himſelf, ſo David ver. 18. namely, in thoſe his inward Thoughts about his Goods and Poſterity: And the like ſpeaks Chriſt, to be the inward ſpeech and applauding himſelf, of his rich Man; He ſays to his Soul, Soul, thou haſt much Goods laid up for many Years, take thine eaſe and be Merry. Again, 3. Of this Man Chriſt ſays, Thou Fool, this night, &c. ver. 20. And David of his, This their way is their Folly, ver. 10. 4. And finally, the reaſon of that their Folly, which both Chriſt and David give, do center in one and the ſame: This Night thy Soul ſhall be required of thee, then whoſe ſhall theſe things thou haſt provided be? Thus Chriſt, ver. 20. and David correſpondently, His Soul ſhall go, &c. They ſhall never ſee Light, ver. 19. and he ſhall carry nothing away, but leave his Wealth to others, verſe 10, 17.

But ſtill withal, let us remember what David's concluſion is concerning himſelf at his Death, and which he placeth in the midſt as the center of his Diſcourſe, which hath all this other about wicked Men round about it, to the end to magnify the Mercy thereof to himſelf; But God ſhall redeem my Soul, and ſhall receive me. Selah. The Mercy of both which the laſt Uſe of all, that next follows, doth concern; and ſo ſhuts up this Diſcourſe.

Uſe 4. Let all Believers from hence learn, how to ſet a due and full value upon that Salvation, which they profeſs to expect, and which God hath deſigned to give them.

Our great and gracious God, the more to bind and oblige the redeemed of the Sons of Men unto himſelf, hath twiſted their Salvation of a double Cord of Love. 1. A privitive one, ſeen in what they are ſnatcht out of, which is termed a being ſaved from Wrath, Rom. 5. A delivering from Wrath, 1 Theſſ. 1. 10. An eſcaping the Damnation of Hell, Mat. 23. 33. A not (ſo much as) entring into Condemnation, John 5. 24. 2. The other a poſitive part, The Glory to be revealed; the greatneſs of which no Tongue can utter, or Heart conceive. That Bleſſedneſs or Glory conferred on the elect Angels, and that favour ſhewn them, hath not this privative part of Salvation to greaten it; further than as by Way of prevention, in that God upheld them from falling into the Merit or Deſert of it. Whereas we Men are all become guilty before God, were actually under Wrath, Children of Wrath even as others, one as well as another, Epheſ. 2. And the weight of this he in that Scripture would have them put into the Scale whenever they thought of Salvation; By Grace ye are ſaved: ſo as with a Note of Remark it follows, ver. 8.—God hath thus doubled the Mercy of Salvation to us, on purpoſe to make it Salvation indeed; So great Salvation! as the Apoſtle ſpeaks, Heb. 2. which duplication is ſeen in all parts of our Salvation as well as this, as might be largely ſhewn.

There are many gracious Saints that have had no Impreſſions of Wrath, no fears and terrors of Hell, ſet upon their Souls in their firſt Humiliation; nay, the Conſideration thereof hath had but ſmall influence into their Hearts by way of Motive, in turning them unto God; but it hath been pure free Love hath taken their Hearts, and ſwallowed up their thoughts. Yet mark what I ſhall ſay unto thee in this Caſe, although indeed the leſs thou haſt been moved in thy turning to God with ſuch fears or impreſſions of Hell, it be in ſome reſpect the better, for the more kindly hath God's Work been in that reſpect upon thee; and it alſo argues a ſpecial tenderneſs in God's Heart towards thy Soul, to have reſtrained the Roughneſs of the Eaſt-Wind from blowing on thee, as the Prophet ſpeaks. Yet let me withal ſay, That the more any one hath (after Converſion) taken into conſideration this Wrath, (I do not mean by Terrors, but) by a practical meditation of it, and his own deſert thereof; the more (when joined together with the former, of God's pure Love) it will move his Heart to Thankfulneſs to God for ſaving him. And the more thine Heart hath this way been enlarged, the more of God's Love, which thou art either aſſured of, or relieſt upon, muſt needs be greatned to thee; yea, and prove the higher incentive of Love unto God again from thee. Whereas on the contrary (that I may give a Caution) becauſe there ſeemeth to be ſuch an Ingenuity in Grace its working in that firſt reſpect mentioned, that Wrath hath had no influence at all. Hence ſuch Perſons are apt too much to neglect, or not to mind the Conſideration of God's Wrath at all; no not ſo much as in this latter way mentioned; but thinking to keep up an Ingenuity of Love, they entertain not this at all in their Meditations. But ſure this is far more blame-worthy than that other is commendable; and that by how much there comes thereby to be a Loſs, of ſo much and of ſo great a part of God's Love purpoſely thereby deſigned to be ſhewn: (I term it a Loſs, for what is not ſeen, and the Heart conſiders not, nor is ſenſible of, is as if it had not been.) And further I add, that this valuing of God's Love herein ſhewed, at its own full rate in both reſpects, is a matter of greater moment than the working of thy Love to him, in ſo ingenuous and kindly a Way, (as thou ſuppoſeſt) without all or any conſideration of Hell or Wrath, can ariſe unto. And this by how much God's Love to us, in the full latitude of it, is a thing more precious than our Love to him. Of the two, God had rather have us apprehend his Love towards us in the utmoſt extent thereof, than have our Love, or Love from us to him, to work but in that one way of Ingenuouſneſs: yea, and in the Iſſue you will all find, that if you join the Conſiderations of both together, they will concur to work an higher Ingenuity of Love, than that other way alone can do. Chap. 9.

If we will come to comprehend with all Saints the Heighth, and Depth, &c. of the Love of God and Chriſt, in all the dimenſions of it, we muſt take that Courſe and way in our Meditations about it, which God himſelf hath laid out and deſigned on purpoſe to ſet it forth and greaten it unto us by. Which he hath done as well by ſo great a deliverance from ſo great a Wrath due to us, as by conferring ſo Rich an Inheritance of Glory upon us. And ~~look~~ as God hath two ſuch vaſt Contrivances, of infinite Weight each of them, the one in his right Hand, the other in his left, for the manifeſtation of his Love; ſo we ſhould have two Scales in the Hand of our Faith to weigh each by: And of the two it may perhaps be hard to ſay which is the more maſſy, that is, in the Apprehenſions of ſome of thoſe who have been deeply humbled for Sin, and under ſenſe of Wrath, (though I think Glory carries it by far.)

I obſerve that our Lord and Saviour Jeſus Chriſt himſelf, though but made a Surety for Sin, and though it was impoſſible he ſhould be holden of Wrath or any thing he was to ſuffer, Acts 2. 24. yet he doth conſider, as well for his bleſſing God, as alſo to his own Comfort, in Pſal. 16. 7. and 10. (a Pſalm made wholly of him) and magnify the delivering part of Salvation; Thou wilt not leave my Soul in Hell, nor ſuffer thine Holy One to ſee Corruption: I ſay, he conſiders this as well as the Joy which followed thereon: which yet alſo follows there, ver. 11. Thou wilt ſhew me the Path of Life. In thy preſence is fulneſs of Joy; at thy right hand are Pleaſures for evermore. He reckons up both, as two diſtinct parts of Favour ſhewn in that Salvation of his, which is both the Cauſe and Patern of ours. And that it was to bleſs God for both theſe, which he thus diſtinctly and apart mentions, his Preface to both, ver. 7. I will bleſs the Lord, &c. ſhews. Thus as Man. And there is this further evidence of it, That ~~look~~ as what any one exerciſeth Faith for, and prays for much before it is obtained, that proportionably he is thankful for after. And the ſame is ſeen in Chriſt in this very particular. For as we read in that Pſalm, that he exerciſed Faith for this Deliverance as well as for that Glory: So in like manner, Heb. 5. 7. That he offered up Prayers and Supplications, with ſtrong crying and Tears, unto him that was able [to ſave] him from Death, and was heard in what he feared. And hence it came to paſs, that we find him after his Deliverance ſo greatly bleſſing God for it. So you read of his praiſing God for the ſame in Pſal. 22. from ver. 2. to the end, and in expreſs words, ver. 25. even as well as you may read his Prayer for this Deliverance in the former part of that Pſalm.

If He, who (but for us and our ſakes) needed no deliverance; then how much more lies this upon us, the Perſons ſaved, and unable to ſave our ſelves, diſtinctly to remember both theſe parts of our Salvation with infinite Praiſe and Bleſſing of God's great Name? Bleſs the Lord, O my Soul; and all that is within me bleſs his holy Name, and forget not all (that is, not any of) his Benefits, ſays the Pſalmiſt miſt in his own Perſon, Pſal. 103. 1, 2. And what ſort of Benefits were they? Book 13 it follows ver. 3, 4. Who forgiveth all thine Iniquities; Who redeemeth thy Life from Deſtruction; there is Salvation from Sin and Hell, the privative part: Who crowneth thee with loving-kindneſs and tender Mercies, (over and above deliverance) and ſatisfieth thy Mouth with good things; there you ſee alſo is the poſitive part. You might obſerve the very ſame in this 40. Pſalm, Thou ſhalt redeem me, &c. and, Thou ſhalt receive me.

By all that hath been ſpoken (although you are ſaved from it, yet) look down into Hell a little, as it hath been ſet out to you; And think with your ſelves, Hath God delivered me from ſo great a Death, and given me ſuch a deliverance as this, from a Death ſo dreadful and eternal alſo? How would the Devils and Spirits in Priſon prize an eſcape and deliverance from Wrath preſent and to come, if they could be ſuppoſed capable thereof; yea, if they had no more? A Nobleman or Favourite that hath run into great and high Treaſons, to have but meer Life given him, how would he value it, though he never ſaw the Court more, nor were never reſtored unto his Eſtate and Dignities, had he but wherewithal to live? If a Man were in Danger to be drowned, and a Rope were thrown him and a Crown, and bidden take his choice; with promiſe, Thou ſhalt be King of all the World, if thou come to ſhore ſafe with the Crown on thy Head: of the two he would in this Caſe take hold of the Rope, and refuſe the Crown. And why? becauſe it is Salvation and his Life. But for a Man to be both wafted ſafe to the ſhore, and then arriving there, to have this Crown beſides, how great Salvation would this be valued! ſtupendous Grace and Love!

Theſe things the Saints ſhould conſider chiefly unto two ends and purpoſes;

1. To be thankful to God and Chriſt.
2. To comfort their own Souls.

I. To be thankful both to God and Chriſt.

1. To God the Father. It was his part to contrive the whole deſign of our Salvation, to the end to ſet forth his Love to us. And the Scripture ſpreads before us the Love of the Father herein upon this double conſideration; 1. That he appointed us not to Wrath, (which otherwiſe we ſhould have in the Iſſue and execution, by reaſon of Sin fallen under.) 2. That he ordained us to Salvation. You have an expreſs Scripture for both theſe, ſetting forth the Love of God the Father hereby; 1 Theſſ. 5. 9. God hath not appointed us to Wrath, but to obtain Salvation. Here are firſt, two parts of the Mercy vouchſafed, 1. Deliverance from Wrath. 2. Salvation. Then the Love of the Father in his not appointing us to Wrath, (and ſo not to leave us under it) as well as appointing us to Salvation; and both as Appointments of God, the one as well as the other.

And then in the ſecond Epiſtle, Chap. 2. ver. 13. he provokes them unto thankfulneſs for this; But we are bound to give thanks always unto God for you, who hath from the beginning choſen you unto Salvation, through Sanctification of the Spirit, and belief of the Truth: which he ſpeaks with reference to what was done to others, (ver. 12. compared.) Let me ſpeak to you then in the Apoſtle's Language; O what thanks are your ſelves then bound (if the Apoſtle gave them for others) to give unto God for your ſelves, to whom God hath given Faith and Holineſs, upon both theſe reſpects?

2. To Jeſus Chriſt, for that Hand which he had in this our Deliverance from Wrath: thus expreſly, 1 Theſſ. 1. ult. Ye wait for his Son from Heaven, even Jeſus, who delivered us from the Wrath to come. Here again you have theſe two parts of Salvation ſet together. 1. His coming from Heaven, which they waited for, with hopes of his carrying them thither, as he tells them Chap. 4. ver. 17. We ſhall be caught up to meet the Lord in the Air; and ſo ſhall we ever be with the Lord. Then 2. (which the Apoſtle adds with an Emphaſis) even Jeſus, who delivered us from the Wrath to come. Take in that too, ſays he, and forget it not, to endear your Jeſus to you: and for ever know him by this Character, [It is that Jeſus who delivered you from the Wrath to come.] It was the Father's work indeed to appoint and ordain this Deliverance, and us unto the benefit of it through Faith; but it was our Jeſus, his Son's work, to effect and accompliſh it; 'twas his Soul that paid for all.

And the manner or Way how he delivered us from this Wrath, heightens this his Love yet more; for he delivered us from it by being made himſelf a Curſe for us, Gal. 3. 23.

The ſecond thing I propounded was, To comfort your Souls in the conſideration of this Salvation and Deliverance. Thus Chriſt, Pſal. 16. 9, 10. for his Deliverance, Therefore [my Heart is glad] my Fleſh alſo ſhall reſt in hope; for thou wilt not leave my Soul in Hell, thou wilt ſhew me the path of Life, &c. And David in the 49. Pſalm, which led on to this, doth comfort himſelf alſo ver. 15. when of wicked Men he had ſaid, Like Sheep they are put into Hell, (as ſome read it) Death ſhall feed on them: He then for his own particular comforts himſelf with this, But God ſhall redeem my Soul from the power of Hell, for he ſhall receive me. And the Apoſtle to the Theſſalonians, Epiſt. 1. Chap. 5. having ver. 9. ſet before them (as was before opened) that God had not appointed them to Wrath, but to obtain Salvation; he ſubjoins, ver. 11. Wherefore comfort your ſelves together.

Of the ſeveral parts which the Three Perſons of the God-head bear, in the accompliſhment of our Salvation, and that they have taken on them ſeveral Works appropriate to them therein. CHAP. I.

The Deſign of the Diſcourſe. The two Texts of Scripture explain'd.

Col 2. 2. That their hearts might be comforted, being knit together in love, and unto all riches of the full aſſurance of underſtanding, to the acknowledgment of the myſtery of God, and of the Father, and of Chriſt.

1 Joh. 5. 6, 7, 8.

This is he that came by water and blood, even Jeſus Chriſt: Not by water only but by water and blood, and it is the ſpirit that beareth witneſs, becauſe the ſpirit is truth: for there are three that bear record in heaven, the Father, the Word, and the Holy Ghoſt: and theſe three are one. And there are three that bear witneſs in earth, the Spirit, and the Water, and the blood, &c.

1. WE have heard of the Eſtate of holineſs Man was Created in. 2. Of the Eſtate of Sin and Miſery, he is fallen into. Now follows,

3. His Reſtauration, or that part of the Goſpel which contains the Doctrine of our Salvation, and Redemption out of Sin and Miſery, in all the particulars of it.

 And

Chap. 1.

And this I ſhall divide into three parts, according to three diſtinct works of the three Perſons for the accompliſhment of it: which diviſion is natural and genuine, and ſuited to the things themſelves, according to the diviſion of theſe as the cauſes of them; for Mans Salvation being the higheſt ſtage in and on which God ſhews himſelf, and all in himſelf, the Three Perſons of the Trinity have in their infinite love to Mankind diſcovered themſelves, and appeared therein, not only taking the effecting of it in common among them, (as in all other works they have done) but ſeverally and apart, undertaking to act diſtinct parts therein, ſharing the works thereof unto three eminent Acts or Scenes by which the whole is fully accompliſhed and perfected.

The method therefore which I ſhall purſue, ſhall anſwerably be ſo to handle the Doctrine of our Salvation, as withal to glorifie theſe three glorious Perſons in their ſeveral agencies therein.

The firſt of theſe Texts, Col. 2. 2. makes God as the Father together with his Work, and Chriſt as the Son, together with a Work of his likewiſe, to be both of them the ſubject of that Myſtery—the Goſpel, which in the firſt Chapter he had been ſo much extolling; and as he there attributeth to the Doctrines revealed therein, a riches of glory, to the very knowledge of this myſtery in us, he in this place dignifies with the ſame Titles, calling it all riches of the full aſſurance of underſtanding, to the acknowledgment of the myſtery of God, and of the Father, and of Chriſt; ſo parting and dividing the Doctrine thereof according as theſe apart are the eminent ſubjects, unto which all therein may be and are to be reduced.

1. [Of God] the Goſpel being that myſtery which diſplays, in Mans Salvation, all the Attributes of the God-head.

2. [And of the Father] conſidered as the firſt Perſon (diſtinct from the Son) and alſo from God as here taken for the God-head, as common to all three Perſons, and in ſaying [the myſtery of God, and of the Father,] he means that beſides the manifeſtation of all the divine Attributes of the God-head which is one diſtinct part of the myſtery; the Father hath as the firſt Perſon apart diſcovered the glory of his Perſon in a glorious Deſign and Agency, in the work of our Salvation proper unto him, which collected out of the Scriptures and put together, makes up the deepeſt myſtery.

3. [And of Chriſt] he alſo, as a diſtinct Perſon from the Father, hath both in his Perſon as God-man, and in execution of his Fathers deſign in his work committed to him, all treaſures of Wiſdom and Knowledge objectively for us to know him by, and ſubjectively in himſelf.

4. The Holy Ghoſt the third Perſon, though not mentioned here, yet elſewhere hath frequently aſſigned unto him a third work.

It is the work of Salvation as it hath been tranſacted by the three Perſons is the ſubject afore me.

I come therefore to that other Text of the firſt Epiſtle of John chap. 5. ver. 6, 7, 8. there we find all Three brought in together as diſtinct Witneſſes unto Mans Salvation, or as v. 11. that God hath given Eternal Life unto us that are of the Sons of Men. They are indeed brought in as Witneſſes alſo to another grand matter, which he mentions in the verſes before and after, viz. that Jeſus Chriſt was the Son of God, but yet withal, the ſame verſes all along do tell us, that the end of that their Witneſs to that great truth about Chriſt (as it is revealed to us) was, in direct order unto that other about our Salvation in him, and to draw us on to believe it, and give credit to it, and this is the record, that God hath given to us Eternal Life, and this Life is in his Son; he that hath the Son, hath Life; and he that hath not the Son, hath not Life, theſe things have I written unto you that believe on the name of the Son of God, that ye may know that ye have Eternal Life, and that ye may believe on the name of the Son of God. So that in the iſſue of all it's, our Salvation that is made the great buſineſs and matter the three Perſons do appear as diſtinct Witneſſes unto, here in this place,

Now how do they Witneſs thereto?

I an-

I anſwer, Both by their contributing their Symbol each of them a part to the effecting it (as will anon appear) and then by bringing it home unto our faith and aſſurance as, verſe 13. ſhews. Chap. 2.

There are two things which I inſiſt on out of this Scripture.

1. That they are ſet forth unto believers by the Apoſtle, as three diſtinct Perſons in the Nature of one God.

2. That in the matter of mans ſalvation they have appeared to be three Perſons in their becoming three diſtinct Witneſſes thereunto, and that they are three diſtinct Witneſſes, in being three diſtinct Workers and Operators therein.

CHAP. II.

That there are three Perſons in the God-head who have undertaken diſtinct Offices in the Work of our Salvation.

THough I have already handled this great fundamental point, That in the eſſence and nature of our one God there are found thus plurality of Perſons. Yet I ſhall, both for the explication of this Text in this Epiſtle of John, and for the making my way clearer to the underſtanding of the Reader unto the ſecond point which is the main ſubject afore me, now add what was then reſerved for this place. I then balked any handling of this Scripture which in that Article of the Trinity is made by all Divines, the eminenteſt and moſt proper ſeat for the handling the Doctrine of it; but I ſaw it would be behoveful, that when this great point of the three works of theſe three Perſons ſhould in their due place come to be diſcourſed of, that ſome thing to prove that there are three ſuch Perſons in the God-head ſhould immediately before precede, and revive the Doctrine thereof, in order to the clearer underſtanding of this about their ſeveral Works. And finding that this Scripture in John gave a foundation for both, I choſe to ſet both together, ſo far as this one Scripture at once gives a bottom unto both; rather than part the one ſo far from the other as I ſhould have done if I had treated of the Trinity of Perſons as this Scripture holds it forth; theſe and this other of their ſeveral works out of this ſame head, in this place only. In his diſcourſe of the knowledge of God the Father, &c. Book 1. Vol. 2. of his Works.

1. Then I ſhall give the proof of the Trinity of Perſons in the one Nature of God, who have ſuch diſtinct Works in our Salvation.

The Apoſtle to evidence Chriſt to be the Son of God, and the ſalvation of us men in him, produceth two Trinities of Witneſſes.

1. Three on Earth, which witneſs but as things or evidences uſe to witneſs: I ſay as things uſe to be evidences: as a bloody knife, &c. is of Murder; or as effects are of their cauſes: Thus the blood of Chriſt is one of the witneſſes on Earth, as being ſprinkled on the Conſcience and pacifying of it, is an evidence that Chriſt alone is that Meſſiah and Son of God; his blood having ſuch an effect: So Water (the ſecond) or ſanctification wrought and inherent in us witneſſeth as an effect uſeth to do its cauſe: And ſo the ſeal of the ſpirit which is the third Witneſs on Earth leaving the impreſs of it ſelf on the hearts of men on Earth, witneſſeth as a ſeal uſeth to do: according to that in Epheſ. 1. After ye believed ye were ſealed with the holy ſpirit of promiſe.

2. But then there are three in Heaven; and theſe do witneſs as Perſons uſe to do, the Father, the Word, the Spirit; of which three he affirms that they are one, namely in Nature, and alſo concurring in Teſtimony: And then concludeth concerning this thing, a Truth witneſſed unto by theſe latter three: verſe 9. If we receive the witneſs of men, (as when two or three men come in as witneſſes to a thing it is accounted valid) the witneſs of God, (that

(that is, of God one in Eſſence being theſe three in Perſons, and each of them God; and each three giving their diſtinct witneſs) this witneſs is greater, becauſe it tranſcendently containeth at once all that may be required in any ſufficient Teſtimony, according to the rules whereby men do eſtimate the validity of a Teſtimony: and it is the Teſtimony of God himſelf to boot.

1. Verity and faithfulneſs is required to a ſufficient Teſtimony: that the Perſons witneſſing be of credit, and reputation, and fide digni, Worthy to be believed; and this is ſuperabundantly found here, in that it is the Teſtimony of God, verſe 9. This is the witneſs of God, ſays he, and verſe 10. He that believeth not God hath made God a lyar: which to do was to deny the whole of Religion: God is of known repute with all Nations, it being a received Maxim, God cannot lye, Titus 1. 2.

2. But beſides, in this Teſtimony of God there is found a plurality of Witneſſes, there being three in that one Nature of God: And a plurality doth according to the Laws of men found a validity, In the mouth of two or three witneſſes every Word is eſtabliſhed: And this validity as from a plurality of witneſſes the Apoſtle had in his eye appears in his uſing the plural when he ſpeaks of the witneſſes of men in the plural (as will more fully appear after) no one ſingle Teſtimony of one man, though of never ſo good repute, is received: and both theſe do in the coherence, and the Apoſtles knitting things together, ſeem manifeſtly to have been his ſcope, if we narrowly do eye and put all together in the foregoing 7. verſe with verſe 9. for firſt, he had numbred and counted them three ſeveral witneſſes and yet of thoſe three (though three as witneſſes) he ſays they are but one, and that oneneſs he means, is not barely, in reſpect of their concurring in witneſſing one and the ſame thing: for he by this doth diſtinguiſh this Oneneſs of theirs from that of the witneſs on Earth, that they indeed agree in one, but of thoſe he further ſays that they are one: Now what one thing is it that they ſhould be ſaid to be but their being one God, for the Father who is the firſt of the three, he is acknowledged by all to be God, and that to be his Nature; if therefore the other two and he are but one, then they are one God in Nature with him, and ſo it neceſſarily, follows they are but one God, and yet three diſtinct witneſſes, and ſo it comes to paſs there is both the higheſt verity; [God,] and a full plurality of [three] in God teſtifying the ſame thing, they being one God; now he having premiſed and forelaid theſe two aſſertions thus in the 7. verſe he then brings down and contracts the ſtrength of both into the 9. verſe, thereby to urge and exact Faith from us, in theſe words, If we receive the witneſs of men, (in the plural) the witneſs of God is greater, wherein his ſcope is to greaten (as the word is) this Teſtimony of the three, which is it he is now upon; for the clearing of which look what the one part of the ſentence is not explicite in, the other part containeth and ſupplies, (as the uſe and manner of the Scriptures is, when it ſets things out by oppoſitions and compariſons made between two things, which is found in the Proverbs almoſt every verſe) and thus by that rule there are two arguments to greaten this Teſtimony ſuggeſted and involved in theſe two ſentences, the one from the comparing a Teſtimony of man with this which is Gods: the other couched in that he ſays of men in the plural, in which his perfect reference and aſpect is unto the plurality of thoſe witneſſes he had ſpoken of and counted three, verſe 7. and ſo his drift is to ſet the number alſo of the three witneſſes (there ſpoken of) in oppoſition to, and compariſon with a plurality of men that uſe to come in as witneſſes, which plurality is that which makes their Teſtimony with men to be received, and ſo the 7 verſe comes down into this of the 9th, and falls with this infinite and irreſiſtible weight upon our faith, that if the witneſſes of two or three men, who are but men, is received, how much more ſhould the record of three ſuch witneſſes in Heaven who are God, be received, by being ſo much greater, as witneſſes that are God, are greater then man or all men?

It may be objected that the next words that follow (For this is the witneſs of God) which he hath teſtified of his Son, being ſpoken particularly of the Father ther (to whom as a Father it only is, that Chriſt bears the relation of being a Son) that therefore the ſence of thoſe foregoing words in verſe 9. [The witneſs of God is greater] is wholly contracted unto the particular Teſtimony of the Father, and ſo are underſtood of the Fathers ſingle Teſtimony, whom all acknowledge to be God; to which I anſwer; Chap. 2.

1. That this prejudiceth not, but ſtrengthneth rather this our interpretation of that former paſſage, for it was neceſſary that the Fathers Teſtimony ſhould be in a particular manner on this occaſion ſpecified, becauſe the thing or matter in a ſpecial manner Teſtified unto by all was, that Jeſus Chriſt was his Son; and ſo his relation as a Father unto him as his Son, and his Teſtimony thereby to own him (as his Son as in ſuch a caſe it becomes a Father to do) was in a ſingular way requiſite to be added to the other. And thus the witneſs of the Word and Spirit is ſtill involved in this of the Fathers, in that he in this his ſingle Teſtimony of his Son is brought in but as the fore-witneſs of the other two namely to utter the Matter it ſelf which they all joyntly witneſſed to, which was that Chriſt was his Son, and ſo we find at his Baptiſm (unto which this whole paſſage of our Apoſtle doth point) the voice uttering it, was the Fathers only in ſaying, this is my well beloved Son, (for he only could ſay it and own him as his Son) but the Holy Ghoſt ſhewed his conſent unto it, in deſcending as a Dove, and the Son of God himſelf owned it by his receiving Baptiſm upon it; and ſo there was the Teſtimony of more Perſons then one, even the whole three, as John here had ſaid afore that they were witneſſes, as well as the Father, and that theſe three are one; and ſo ſtill the firſt paſſage or ſentence in verſe 9. if we receive the witneſs of men, of a plurality of men, the witneſs of theſe three, who are one God, is greater, holds ſtill good, yea is confirmed thereby.

2. But 2. I anſwer, By calling in the help and light of another Scripture, which evidently ſpeaks to this ſence I have given of the Words, ver. 9. and the comparing thereof with this hath greatly confirmed me, both in this aſſertion in hand, and in this interpretation given of this place. And it is a Scripture in which Chriſt himſelf, in his arguings with the Jews by way of conviction who and what manner of Perſon he was, ſpeaketh the ſame things, that we have heard John doth here; and both having been recorded by one and the ſame Pen, namely of this our Apoſtle, have the more evidence by comparing one with the other: and become more fully explicative one of the other; and what the one is obſcure in, the other clears.

Now theſe paſſages of Chriſts which I mean to hold this intelligence with, theſe here are in the 8. and 10. Chapters of the Goſpel of John.

In the 8th. Chap. verſe 17, 18, 19. It is alſo Written in your Law that the Teſtimony of two men is true: I am one that bear Witneſs of my ſelf, and the Father that ſent me beareth Witneſs of me: then ſaid they unto him, Where is thy Father? Jeſus anſwered, Ye neither know me nor my father: if ye had known me, ye ſhould have known my Father alſo.

The Parallel between theſe two Scriptures of Chriſts and John's Epiſtle here runs thus along.

1. As in the Epiſtle of John, &c. the thing witneſſed unto is, that the Perſon of Chriſt is the Son of God the Father: ſo in this of the Goſpel of John, verſe 12. I am the light of the World: though I bear record of my ſelf, yet my record is true: I know whence I came, and whither I go: and verſe 19. If ye had known me you ſhould have known my Father alſo. and verſe 24. If ye believe not that I am He (the great He, and only Meſſiah, Son of God) ye ſhall die in your ſins: they ſaid, Who art thou? Jeſus ſaith, The ſame that I ſaid unto from the beginning, even the very Son of God: For that was it he had all along ſaid, and from the beginning averred in the ſubſtance of it; yea to his now very end alſo: and they underſtood him well enough ſo to mean, as appears by their quarrelling with him for it here, and by the queſtion is ask'd him at his Death by their high Prieſt: ſo from the beginning to the end it was that which he held forth.

2. As in the Epiſtle the Apoſtle puts a weight upon the plurality of theſe witneſſes for this matter witneſſed; ſo Chriſt in that part of that Goſpel, ver. 14. doth juſt the ſame: Though I bear record of my ſelf, yet my record is true: ver. 16. For I am not alone, but I and the Father that ſent me: and verſe 18. I am one that bear witneſs of my ſelf; and the Father that ſent me beareth witneſs of me: yea and expreſly in the 5th. Chapter ſpeaking of his Father as a witneſs, he ſays, verſe 32. There is another that beareth witneſs of me, and I know the witneſs which he witneſſeth of me is true: now theſe two the Father and himſelf here, are two of, yea the very ſame witneſſes mentioned in the Epiſtle here: The Father, and the Word: therein then both places they agree.

3. Theſe witneſſes do witneſs as diſtinct Perſons in both places: and therein eſpecially doth one place clear the other, as to this point you ſee I drive at: For in this latter (the Goſpel) Chriſt plainly, and purpoſely pleadeth the validity of this Teſtimony of his Father and himſelf, upon this very ground (which the Jews would all acknowledge) It is written in your Law that the Teſtimony of two men is true: verſe 17. and then ſubjoyns verſe 18. I am one that witneſs of my ſelf; and the Father that ſent me another: So then theſe two do witneſs as Perſons: and ſo he expreſly argueth the validity of their Teſtimony, he argues from this that they were two Perſons, and that in as great reality and truth as that two men (that come in for witneſſes) are I ſay two Perſons; for upon that ground it is that the Teſtimony of two men is received as valid: we uſe to ſay there are two Perſons that witneſs: And doth not the Apoſtle here in the Epiſtle as plainly enforce and intend the very ſame plea, and allegation which Chriſt uſed; when here he ſays if we receive the witneſs of men verſe 9. of men in the plural; and that when two men at leaſt come in and affirm the ſame thing; we are to receive it as legal, and of force.

So as the Argument holds ſtrong from the comparing theſe two Scriptures together either way, 1. That theſe being ſuch witneſſes as men are in Law Caſes, that therefore they are Diſtinct Perſons, and do witneſs as Perſons, and not as things uſe to be evidences of a matter ſo or ſo. And 2. That the ground why they are (even according to mans own rule and Law) to be acknowledged Authentick witneſſes, is becauſe they are two diſtinct Perſons, and as really ſuch, and therefore are to be denominated and called Perſons, and eſteemed by us, as ſuch as really as two men are, and thereupon their witneſs is admitted; now when unto theſe two witneſſes, the Father and the Son, the Apoſtle adds a third, the Spirit, his meaning muſt be that he is alſo a witneſs of the ſame rank and ſort, and hath the ſame ſtation and rank in Heaven that the other two have, the ſame order that they two were off: and therefore is another diſtinct third Perſon, together with them, in that he is a witneſs together with them: and his witneſs alleged to all intents and purpoſes as the ſame that the others, both Father and Son are, ſo that here is an invincible Warrant to Style theſe three in Johns Epiſtle by the name of three Perſons after the ſenſe and uſage of man in ſpeech) for they could not have been alleged and cited as a plurality of three legal witneſſes elſe, nor are they witneſſes in reality and truth further then in reality they are Perſons.

4. We find in another altercation Chriſt had with the Jews, John 10. 30. him to affirm: My Father and I are one; thoſe then whom in this 8. chap. he had declared ſo manifeſtly to be two, as witneſſes, and ſo alſo Perſons, the ſame two in the 10. ch. he as manifeſtly profeſſeth to be but one: and doth not the Apoſtle here in the Epiſtle ſpeak juſt the ſame? There are three witneſſes in Heaven, and theſe three are one; only what is defective in Johns ſpeech, Chriſts ſpeech ſuppiles, [are one] the Apoſtle had not that word are, though it is neceſſarily and ordinarily underſtood. John wrote both theſe paſſages, and uniformly purſued the ſame drift and intent in either; and look in what ſence or purpoſe Chriſt uttered the one and the other of theſe two Paſſages, in the ſame ſence the Apoſtle did alſo in his Epiſtle; and what was it the Jews themſelves underſtand by his ſaying my Father, and I are one? but that as verſe 33. he that was but a man, made himſelf God. And ſo plain it is that in Scripture Language (and

(and not in the reality of the thing it ſelf only) and in terminis you have, one God, and three Perſons,and that in two ſeveral Scriptures thus at once compared. Yea and in this 8. chap. he doth in other large expreſſions affirm no leſs than in that 10th. Chapter he had done, for, verſe 19. if ye had known me, ye ſhould have known my Father. Take two men (unto whom in reſpect of Teſtimony Chriſt had compared himſelf and his Father, as they are two witneſſes and two Perſons)and they are ſuch two Perſons as are not one and the ſame man, and yet they may and ordinarily do concur in Teſtifying one and the ſame thing, and their Teſtimony is received, and yet he that knows the one, doth not neceſſarily(or perhaps not at all)know the other, for every man bears the nature of man apart to himſelf,and dividedly from the other;but here theſe, though diſtinct,as Perſons,(as being diſtinct witneſſes)yet in nature they are altogether one;in that he that knows the one muſt neceſſarily know the other,and in the Epiſtle the Apoſtle ſhews plainly that they are not one only, in reſpect of agreeing in one,in witneſſing the ſame thing(as thoſe 3 on Earth are ſaid to do) but as noting a nearer oneneſs, he ſpeaks thus of theſe three in Heaven, that theſe three are one, and ſo are one in nature. Chap. 2.

5. The laſt Parallell and concluſion of the whole is, that both Chriſt and John do a'ike urge and infer and ſet out the high validity of the Teſtimony of theſe Heavenly witneſſes in both, yea all reſpects, as infinitely Tranſcending that of two or three that are but men, when witneſſes, which will appear by the comparative of the one with, or rather taken from the other. Firſt Chriſt urgeth indeed the plurality of his own and his Fathers witneſſes, but with all the Tranſcendency of them, as ſuch my Father,ſays he, you all acknowledge to be God, therefore if I ſhould alledge him only,it would infinitely excell any plurality even of all men, for let God be true and all men lyars, and would weigh down the ballance in which all men put together are found to be too light ; if God were but one Perſon only, this were ſuperabundant, if he Teſtified it, but Chriſts intent is to urge his own Teſtimony of himſelf to be valid as a witneſs with his Father, I am one that bear witneſs of my ſelf, and my Father that ſent me. Now in the Law (which he had alledged in the verſe afore for the value of a Teſtimony) a mans own witneſs of himſelf, if he were a meer man was to be reckon'd as no witneſs at all, as Chriſt ſpeaks, John 5.31. and here verſe 14.does imply; yea it is then rejected with ſcorn,and had he been but a meer man, or ſo intended it, it muſt have been eſteemed ſuch and no other, how came it to paſs then, and why then doth he urge the Law of two witneſſes, when himſelf was one of them, yea further had he been but a meer man, it had been the greateſt preſumption, yea impudence that ever had been ſhewn to have yoked himſelf thus as a witneſs with God himſelf, and to have offered, to have come in, and ſet himſelf down with God in this matter; his meaning therefore plainly was, and muſt be underſtood to be: that himſelf was a Perſon as creditable as God himſelf, and that he was God as well as his Father, and not a meer man, and as ſuch it was he ſtood forth, yea ſtands out with the Father, as equal with him in witneſſing,becauſe in Nature equal with him, and as truly God as he, and he ſtands upon it, verſe 14. and out-dares alſo all ſuch allegations and exceptio ns againſt his Teſtimony, on his own behalf with theſe words, Though I bear record of my ſelf, of my ſelf (which in no caſe uſeth to be admitted) yet my record is true, for I know whence I came,and whither I go : as if he had ſaid , I my ſelf know what a Perſon I am, and know my Original out of Gods Eſſence and Boſom,and that I am the Son of the living God, and ſo equal with my Father as ſuch, and ſo my Teſtimony is equal to that of my Fathers,and verſe 16. I am not alone, but I and the Father (which is as high as Ego & Rex meus.)And hence it is that Chriſt argues the Tranſcendent weight of his Teſtimony joyned with his Fathers, that here is a plurality , a two of Perſons, that are both of them God. And now let Chriſt go on as he doth, verſe 17. It is written in the Law, that the Teſtimony of two men, though but meer men,(ſo the oppoſition runs) is true, his inference inſinuated is from this comparative of that Chap. 3. of Men as the loweſt to riſe to this as the higheſt, how much more, or infinitely much more than muſt the teſtimony of two ſuch Perſons, as I and my Father, yea of two Perſons that are God, one God, be of validity with you. And therefore he boldly further goes on in v. 18. I am one who teſtifie of my ſelf, and the Father that ſent me, beareth witneſs of me; and look as he is God, ſo alſo am I my ſelf, and therefore if you received according to your Law the Teſtimony of two men that are but Men (that are or may be liars) how much more of two Perſons that are God, thus Chriſt argues here in the Goſpel. Now go to the Epiſtle, doth not the Apoſtle ſpeak the very ſame intendment and inference, and almoſt the ſame words, for having firſt ſaid, There are three that bear Record in Heaven, the Father, Word and Spirit, and theſe three are one, v. 7. he cloſeth upon it, and infers and preſſeth upon our Faith, v. 9. if we receive the witneſs of men (of two or three men that are but men) the witneſs of God, (viz. in theſe three ſeveral Perſons, who are one God, as v. 7.) muſt be greater. And is not this effectually the ſame you heard Chriſt himſelf even now to ſay? And ſo theſe two Scriptures fall in every way parallel, and give light to each the other. And both for the confirmation of my firſt aſſertion propounded, the Trinity of the Perſons. Than which thus enforced there is not found a greater.

CHAP. III.

The common concurrence which the Three Perſons have in other Works, beſides our Salvation That being one in Eſſence they join in the operation of all External Works.

I come now to ſhew how theſe Three Perſons have for the diſcovery of themſelves undertaken ſeveral works for the effecting our Salvation: which is the thing inferred out of the Text; and may be the ſubject of the reſt that follows.

For the foundation of it out of this text, I ſhewed before, how Mans Salvation was one main thing ſet out by the Apoſtle in this chapter; as that unto which theſe three were Witneſſes, as well as that Chriſt was the Son of God: and they are termed Witneſſes to it by a real ſetting their ſeveral Hands unto it, that is, to the effecting of it; the main object of our Faith (which John here would confirm) lies in this perſuaſion that God hath perfectly prepared and really, and cordially given Eternal Life to the Sons of Men: To verifie the infinitely ſerious, and real intent of God therein; he alledgeth theſe three Witneſſes, who are not Verbal Witneſſes only, in averring of it in words to our hearts, and in the Scriptures, but real Witneſſes, that witneſs by what they have done; that are and have been at infinite coſt and pains to accompliſh it: and not in common only, but all three ſingly and apart; Chriſt in ſhedding his Blood, the Holy Ghoſt in applying it, and Working in our Hearts all that is requiſite to eſtate us in it, and to aſſure us of it. And ſuch real teſtimonies in working our Salvation in us and for us, are the ſtrongeſt and weightieſt kind of teſtimony, Chriſt ſays, John 10. 37. If ye believe not me, believe the works, and 38. a Teſtimony by works is the moſt valid teſtimony of all other; and it ſhews that God is moſt full and intenſe, and hearty in it; when we ſhall hear how all that is in God, Perſons, as well as Attributes, have ingaged and ſet themſelves a work about it.

My method in handling this great point ſhall be.

1. To clear the eminently diſtinct Hand each Perſon hath in this ſole work of our Salvation, by ſetting by it, and concurring with it, that common concurrence, rence and concealed (as to us) which they have in all other their works, beſides in other things. Chap. 3.

2. To give proofs to their diſtinctly eminent Hand in this Work.

For the firſt I ſhall ſpeak to two things.

1. In general how in all other works, beſides this of our Salvation, they have a joynt concurrency, yet not any viſible appearance in any one; not of one Perſon more than another held forth to us; although therein they have really and inviſibly a diſtinct hand, as in the works of Creation and Providence, &c.

2. How beſides this diſtinct co-operation in ſuch works in common alike to them, that yet in the Works of our Salvation they have declaredly ſome one work Attributed to one more than to another, and ſo have by parts the whole diſtributively, and by parts ſhared among them; both which propoſitions put together do wonderfully ſet forth that peculiar glory which is deſignedly made to appear in the Work of our Salvation.

1. As for all other works, beſides this of our Salvation in common to them, every one hath a joint Hand, and yet diſtinct in each: which that place confirms, John 5. my Father works hitherto, and I work, and yet concealed as to us.

The explanation of this I diſpatch briefly in theſe four aſſertions.

1. As things are in being ſo in working; which axiom holds in God himſelf as well as in his Creatures; hence, that as all Three Perſons have in common but one Eſſence; ſo one equal Hand in works. For all Operations flowing from Eſſence, therefore when the Eſſence is but one, the Operation muſt needs be one and the ſame, which here muſt be underſtood quoad ſubſtantiam operis, for the ſubſtance of the work; and hence as their Eſſence is equal, ſo their concurrence is equal in this reſpect, even in the Work of Redemption, which yet is appropriated in a more eſpecial manner unto Chriſt.

2. Yet though they be but one Eſſence, yet they are three diſtinct Subſiſtencies or Perſonalities, and ſtill that Axiom follows us, that the Operation of each follows the diſtinction of their Exiſtences, and bears the reſemblance of them; and look what order or diſtinction they have in ſubſiſting, they have in operation to accompany it, but the diſtinction of their perſonality (if abſtractly conſidered from the eſſence) being but modus eſſendi; therefore in like manner the diſtinction of their operation and concurrence, is but modus operandi, a diſtinct manner of concurring.

3. Hence look what order and dependance they have and hold in their Subſiſtency, the ſame they have and hold in their Working: hence as the Father is the Fountain of the other two Subſiſtencies begetting the Son, and breathing the Holy Spirit, ſo he is in like manner the Fountain of all action, and Operation, John 5. 19. The Son can do nothing of himſelf but what the Father ſhews him, and he ſees the Father do; the Father begins, the Son carries on the motion, the Holy Ghoſt from both perfects, conſummates, and executes the work, 1 Cor. 8. 6. the Father of whom are all things, the Son, by whom are all things, the Holy Ghoſt through whom, thus in Creation the altima manus, the laſt hand is attributed to him, by his Spirit he hath garniſhed the Heavens, Job 26. 13. garniſhing is the ultimate work, the conſummating of all; and is therefore made his: ſo the forming the Creatures into their perfect forms out of that rude Maſſe is attributed to the Spirit of God.

But 4. Although there be this order and diſtinction in their concurrent operation between themſelves, yet in all thoſe ordinary works ad extra, common to them all, this is not made to appear to us by any diſcernable characters, Chriſt ſays indeed, in John 5. My Father hitherto works (ſpeaking of thoſe of Creation and Providence) but there is nothing in the Works themſelves that manifeſts any appropriation, of what the hand of the one is more peculiarly than of the other, when God goes to make Man, he may ſay as he did, Let us make Man, which imports an [Us] a plurality of perſons to have concurred in it, yet the diſtinction of that Us appears not in any diſtinct works that went to the perfecting of that workmanſhip, the making of the Soul is not attributed eſpecially unto one, and of the body unto another: no nor yet in the whole frame of Heaven and Earth. In the Creation God indeed manifeſted his Attributes, as his Eternal Power and Godhead, Rom. 1. 20. and yet but in ſcattered beams, and not all, as you heard, but there are not ſo much as veſtigia Trinitatis footſteps of the Trinity, or of that diſtinction in the Perſons ſhines in them.

And though in Adam ſome Schoolmen have endeavoured to demonſtrate a ſhaddowing forth the Trinity in the faculties of the Soul, yet it is at the beſt and utmoſt of it (if ſo much) but ſuch a ſhaddowing this forth, as when we uſe to fetch ſimilitude from things created, to expreſs things Divine by: and thus things Earthly ſerve (as Chriſt ſays) by way of Parable or Similitude to ſhew forth Heavenly, as the firſt Birth ſhaddows forth, the new birth which he had been diſcourſing of then; yet they are remote enough from holding forth as proper effects, or being characteriſtical demonſtrations of them: thus when ſome would argue this ſame from the diſtinction of thoſe three powers of the Soul, the Underſtanding, Memory and Will, fancying the Memory in Man ſhould peculiarly reſemble one Perſon, ſuppoſe the Holy Ghoſt; and the Underſtanding the Son; and the Will the Father: others that in Mans Soul the Underſtanding, the Will, and the power to act, and put forth the acts of theſe, are lively characters of the Perſons: but theſe all are ſo obſcure and uncertain in their evidence or character of theſe three Perſons and their diſtinction; as they all vaniſh as ſhaddows, when wiſtly pried into, and moſt narrowly ſearched into when applied.

Joh. 3. 3. and the 12. v. compared.

I dare not be too definitive concerning his works of Grace towards the Elect Angels, who beſides that unto them the three Perſons may be ſuppoſed to be made known by Revelation, yet not in them, at or from their Creation, but what may have further been from Gods Election of them, which is a ſupercreation Grace, and which was the Fathers work on them, even as the election of us Men is the Fathers alſo; or what from their Union with Chriſt, as their Head, may have had, and doth appear of theſe Perſons to them thereby; and what other work in them ſhould anſwer to the Holy Ghoſt, and his order and diſtinction is not ſo fully revealed to us.

This for their conjunct Operation in common works as they may be compared with thoſe of our Salvation.

CHAP. IV.

Of their diſtinct appearance in the Work of Mans Salvation. And that their ſeveral works bear the reſemblance of their ſeveral Perſonalities.

BUT God reſolving to manifeſt all that was in himſelf, or he would not manifeſt himſelf at all, for he will be glorified as God to the utmoſt, theſe three glories or Perſons therefore deſigned and contrived among themſelves ſuch works as ſhould ſeverally, and apart, ſerve to make known that there were three Perſons as well as ſeveral Attributes, that ſo all of God, and the whole that is in him might be manifeſted to his Creature.

And this is diſpoſed of ſo by them, that their ſeveral works bear the reſemblance of their ſeveral ſubſiſtences, as far as poſſible this was repreſentable unto us, in and by outward works and effects: in that they ſhould be ſuch as ſhould have the impreſs or print of the diſtinction of theſe Perſons, together with the order of their ſubſiſting in a more conſpicuous way upon them.

And how ever it is in the works of Creation of the World, and of Man and of the Angels in this reſpect, yet we may be ſure that the cleareſt compleat Revelation and Manifeſtation of theſe three Perſons, their diſtinction, order of Perſonality, was by God himſelf reſerved until the Goſpel ſhould be Preached, and that Chriſt his Son ſhould appear, and be made manifeſt to the World, when it was that Mans Salvation came firſt upon the ſtage, to the end that Mans Salvation, and the works thereof, might have the moſt eminent, and peculiar honour of this thing: and this firſt manifeſtation of thoſe perſons then was accompanied with a prodigy of the moſt pregnant, and high ſignificancy that ever was or could be given; The Heavens opened, which was the greateſt viſible wonder ſhewn in the Heavens, that had been from the Creation: even as the Earths opening her Womb was the greateſt wonder that this terreſtrial Globe ever did afford, and the ſignificancy of it was that the revelation of it was only from Heaven: and that the witneſſes then appearing, the Father, Son and Holy Ghoſt were in Heaven, a myſtery that would never have been underſtood, and entertained but by ſuch a means; and this manifeſtation of it did then refer to our ſalvation, as well as teſtifie to Chriſt's being God's Son; for it cloſeth with this, hear him, as in whom I am well pleaſed; namely, with you of Mankind: Where we have 1. The Names of the three in their diſtinction recorded; firſt, the Father, who ſays, This is my Son; ſecondly, the Son, to whom and upon whom Heaven opened, and the Holy Ghoſt deſcended; thirdly, the Holy Ghoſt: Their diſtinct names are expreſs. 2. Their diſtinction is manifeſted by three different outward Symbols, the Father in a voice, to ſhew that God is inviſible, the Son manifeſted in Fleſh, praying upon the banks of Jordan: the Holy Ghoſt deſcending on him in the likeneſs of a Dove. Three differing actions of each: the Father with an open publick voice, to the hear-ſay of all, ſpeaks and calls from Heaven, This is my Son; the Son he Prays, ('tis here ſaid;) the Holy Ghoſt deſcends.

And theſe are the three Witneſſes in Heaven, which the Epiſtle of John ſpeaks of as Witneſſes to this truth, that Chriſt is the Son of God, ſo to us and our Salvation, that we are the Sons of God; and as this Θεοφανία (as they call it) or appearance was made in three outward different Symbols at Chriſts Baptiſm; ſo our Baptiſm is ſealed up to us (to be manifeſted in us) the three works of Father, Son and Spirit, namely, of Election, Redemption, and the Application of both, which is the ſpecial work of the Spirit. And therefore we are Baptized in the names of all three, Father Son and Holy Ghoſt, ſo as although in other works theſe Perſons act really as three diſtinct Perſons among themſelves; and are known unto themſelves to do ſo; yet in this great buſineſs of our Salvation they become three diſtinct Witneſſes or diſcoverers of themſelves unto us, and whereas afore, and in other works, their order in working in every work, was known but among themſelves, now in theſe ſalvation works they viſibly appear; and diſtributively in ſeveral works proper unto each, through the works bearing the proper Character of their Perſonality; and ſo evidencing their diſtinction, and order, TO US.

Look then as great Perſons when they are Witneſſes, or would confirm a matter, have their diſtinct ſeals; and their Names ſet to in ſuch a diſtinct Character as the hand and ſeal of each may be differenced from the other; ſo it is here, and as Mens ſeals bear their Coat of Arms Engraven on them often, bearing the memory of ſome eminent exploit they have done, whereby their Houſes, and Antiquity is known; ſo it is here, as there are three Witneſſes, or Perſons witneſſing, ſo three works in our Salvation, which bear the Impreſs, Stamp, and Similitude of their ſubſiſtence apart; and the order, and rank of their diſtinct ſubſiſtings.

And though all concurr to ſet on the Stamp of each, even of theſe, yet the ſtamp it ſelf impreſſed in each work, bears the Character of one Perſon more than of another, I ſhall manifeſt this in the particular inſtances of each of theſe works.

1. There is Eternal Election, or ſetting forth the Perſons that ſhall be ſaved, and the benefits, &c. which is the entrance, the ground work, the Foundation (as 2 Tim. 2. 19. it is called the foundation of the Lord. Hence this is peculiarly attributed to the Father, whoſe Perſon is the Original, the Fountain of the other two, and who is the firſt both in ſubſiſting and working.

2. There is Redemption, which is the next and ſecond work in this, which ſuppoſeth Election, depends on it, and flows from Gods decree, and ſpeaking to his Son, and this is appropriated to the Son, which work bears the impreſs and likeneſs of his ſubſiſtence, and the order of it, as alſo of his working with the Father, for as his Perſon is from the Father, ſo this work Committed to him is from that other, the Fathers work, and the Father is ſaid to ſend him.

3. There is the application of both. And this is aſcribed to the Spirit more eminently; for as his ſubſiſtence proceeds from both, ſo this work ſpringeth both from Election and Redemption, and is the laſt, as his ſubſiſtence is. God the Father he ſet out the benefits to be beſtowed, made the Will what he would have beſtowed, and how much, and upon whom; God the Son he undertook to be the Executour, ſees it diſpoſed of; And God the holy Ghoſt he is as the Agent or Attorney whom both uſe to convey all to us: God the Father was as David; God the Father drew the Platform of the Temple, and left the materials; but God the Son, as Solomon he builds it, rears it according to the pattern; & God the Holy Ghoſt he is the overſeer of the Work, and gives Graces and Gifts to build it. Which when it is built they dwell in it all of them in Glory, when God will be all in all. As the Phyſician preſcribes, the Apothecary Tempers, and his Servant applies the Phyſick as a Plaiſter or the like, ſo God the Father preſcribes all, Chriſt made a Plaiſter of his Blood, and the Spirit he applyes it and ſprinkleth that Blood on our Conſciences. And 2dly, for the ſimilitude and alluſion I uſed of three ſeals ſhewing the diſtinction or priority of theſe Perſons, the Scripture Warrants it.

1. The Fathers ſeal and impreſs you have, 2 Tim. 2. 19. The foundation of the Lord remains ſure, having this Seal, The Lord knows who are his (whom he foreknew he predeſtinated, &c.) and in the ſeal of Election you may read the ſimilitude of his perſonality engraven.

2. Jeſus Chriſt in redeeming is ſaid to have his ſeal alſo, as in expreſſions tantamount and equivalent you have, Heb. 9. 15, 16, 17. for comparing the Goſpel to a Covenant, a Teſtament, which is in force upon the death of the Teſtator

Teſtator,he withall inſinuates his Blood ſhed and ſprinkled to be his ſeale to it, ſhewing, verſe 17, 18, 20. that the Old-Teſtament was confirmed by blood. He took the Blood and ſprinkled both the Book and all the People, ſaying,This is the blood (for the ſeal) of the New-Teſtament which God hath made with you and enjoyned unto you, even as Chriſt alſo ſaid,this is the blood of the New-Teſtament,but if you would have a place which in terminis gives it,look Daniel 9. 24. It is ſaid Meſſiah ſhould be caſt off for the ſealing up of iniquity (as it is varied in your margents.) Chap. 4.

3. The Spirit he hath his ſeal, Eph. 4 30. Grieve not the holy ſpirit by whom you are ſealed to the day of Redemption. Sealed in Regeneration which conveys the Image of God, ſealed again in the work of aſſurance, as a comforter, both which make up application.

And as their ſeals, ſo their ſeveral names and hands are ſet, Matth. 28, 29. Go teach all Nations, Baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghoſt.

Baptiſm, though it be peculiarly the Seal of Regeneration, yet withal of the whole of ſalvation and of all that ever God did for us, or will do in us, from firſt unto the laſt. There is one Faith, one Baptiſm, one Hope of your calling, Eph. 4.Baptiſm is adequate to ſet forth the whole Object of our Faith and Salvation, and ſo is the ſeal of all, and becauſe the whole of our ſalvation is tranſacted as by parts,by the Father, Son, and Holy Ghoſt, therefore ſays Chriſt of that Ordinance, Baptize them diſtinctly and diſtributively in the name of the Father, Son, and Holy Ghoſt, and not in their name in Common only; and the diſtinctiveneſs is imported both in the Article put to each τῦ πατρὸς of the Father, τῦ υἱῦ of the Son, τῦ ἁγίυ, πνέυματ☉, of the Holy Ghoſt; But in the particle καὶ, as diſtinctly put to each, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghoſt. And that this is further the import of Baptiſm as holding forth the to tal Object of our faith, and ſalvation in the parts thereof, by enumerating the name of theſe three Authors thereof, that forementionʼd, Epheſ. 4. confirms there is one ſpirit, verſe 4. one Lord, verſe 5. one Father, verſe 6. as one Baptiſm, verſe. 5. that ſeals up all.

CHAP. V.

The Reaſons of the Three Perſons making ſuch a diſtinct diſcovery of themſelves in this Work of our Salvation rather than in any other.

I Come now to aſſign the reaſons why the three Perſons choſe this work of our Salvation, above, all their other works, wherein to make ſuch a diſtinct diſcovery of themſelves.

1. Becauſe as the myſtery of the Trinity is that great myſtery of all other, the myſtery of God, and the Father, and of Chriſt, Col. 2. 2. the higheſt of all things to be known of God; ſo this of mans ſalvation was the chiefeſt of all his ways and works, the greateſt and utmoſt Stage to diſplay his Glory on.

In this Channel the love of God did run moſt ſtrongly, as being that wherein God would ſhew his Love and Grace, which is the intimacy of his Heart moſt, 'tis therefore eminently called Love to mankind.

3. Gods Love is herein ſhew'd to his own, and therefore each Perſon was deſirous, yea zealous to appear, that the love of each might be diſcerned and acknowledged, and that we in a ſpecial and peculiar reſpect might be obliged unto each Perſon and bound to praiſe and glorifie them accordingly, to honour the Son, and the Holy Ghoſt, as well as the Father. In giving proofs from Scriptures of this partition, I ſhall not alledge all ſuch as ſcatteredly attribute Election to the Father, Redemption to the Son, Sanctification to the Spirit, for ſuch proofs would be inefficacious in this reſpect, that we find ſuch works wherein they have a common hand ſcattered attributed unto each; when we are converted we are ſaid to hear the voice of the Son of God; John 5. 25, 26. to be begotten of the Father, Jam. 1. 17. and born of the Spirit, John 3. 6. ſo Creation is ſcatteredly attributed to them all, and therefore to alledge any one place ſingly for any ſuch work, ſhould but prove that that Perſon is ſuppoſed to have an hand therein, ſuch as the reſt have, but if we find any Scriptures at once and together diſtinctly mentioning all three perſons, and withal mentioning theſe three works, and then withal attributing one work to the one, another to another Perſon, in this caſe we may conclude, that comparatively among themſelves, one work is more eminently and properly to be aſcribed to that Perſon it is given to, rather than the other, and that they have ſorted and diſtributed theſe three among them. Now for Scriptures I ſhall name but two.

In the Firſt Chapter to the Epheſians, Election is attributed to the Father of Jeſus Chriſt, who hath choſen us in him before the World was, verſe 4. and who hath ſet forth all thoſe ſpiritual bleſſings we are bleſt withal verſe 3.

2. In the 7th verſe, Redemption is attributed to Chriſt as the Author thereof, whereas in Election, he was made as the ſubject in whom we were choſen, but verſe 7. In whom we have Redemption through his Blood, as ſhed by him, and ſo the principal Author and Efficient of it; then the application and ſealing up of all is attributed to the Spirit, verſe 13, 14. In whom after ye believed, ye were ſealed with the holy Spirit of promiſe, who is the earneſt of our inheritance, &c.

The next Scripture is, 1 Pet. 1. verſe 2. Elect according to the foreknowledge of God the Father, through Sanctification of the Spirit unto Obedience and ſprinkling of the blood of Chriſt.

The Apoſtle Peter to endear the hearts of all Saints he wrote to, unto theſe three Perſons, ſingly ſhuts up their diſtinct agencies in our great and common ſalvation in as few words as was poſſible to utter them in. Salvation was the ſubject he was to write to them about, he in the front placeth and ſets up the Coat of Arms of theſe three bleſſed ones, as the joynt founders of our Salvation, emblaſoning what each did contribute thereunto. Chap. 5.

1. Here are the three Perſons by name mentioned, Father, Spirit, Chriſt.

2. Here are three works mentioned, Election, Sanctification, Blood, both ſhed and Sprinkled.

3. And here is Election attributed to the Father, Elect according to the foreknowledge of God the Father: Sanctification to the Spirit, and the blood ſaid to be Jeſus Chriſt, which is the foundation of Redemption, which is his work, as you heard, Epheſ. 1.7. In whom we have Redemption through his Blood, &c.

I obſerve that in mentioning Election here, he doth not (as elſewhere) make mention of Salvation as the end or deſigned ſcope of it, which yet is uſual every where elſe, Salvation, which as the ultimate end or terminus of all (as verſe 9. he terms the end of your Faith, the Salvation of your Souls) is in common the reſult of the work of all three, and in the verſes following he ſpeaks of it as ſuch, again and again, begotten to an inheritance, verſe 4. kept to ſalvation, verſe 5. and ſo verſe 9, 10. this is the end of ends. But he mentions ſuch intermediate works between Election and Salvation, as are neceſſary and preparatory thereunto, as thoſe which the Perſons undertook amongſt them as means through which Salvation is to be obtained, as, 2 Theſ. 2 13, 14. the words evidently import, that whereas Gods ordination was that without Holineſs no man ſhould ſee God, Heb. 12. and without ſhedding blood there ſhould be no remiſſion, Heb. 9. 22. Theſe Perſons among them took upon them thoſe works, the Father he electeth and electing ordaineth holineſs, and blood as the means through and by which we are to obtain ſalvation, elect in or through, or unto Sanctification, &c. The ſpirit undertaketh Sanctification call'd, therefore Sanctification of the ſpirit, you ſhall ſanctify, ſaid the Father to the Spirit, and to the Son concerning his blood, It ſhall be your blood that ſhall redeem them, ſaid the Father, in electing of us. To clear and open theſe things a little as they are ſet down:

1. Election which is there ſaid to be according to foreknowledge is not vocation in time, but that choice made from everlaſting as thoſe two parallel places ſhew, whom he foreknew, he predeſtinated, Rom. 8. 29. which is all one as here, he elected according to foreknowledge, and together here with that other, 2 Theſ. 2. 13. He hath choſen you from the beginning, that is, from everlaſting, according to foreknowledge, is added, to ſhew the moving cauſe of Election, to exclude all other accordings of works, not according to works, as elſewhere, nor of Holineſs, or faith foreſeen, for he hath choſen us that we might be Holy, Epheſ. 1. 3, 4. not becauſe we were Holy; in Holineſs, or through Holineſs to obtain ſalvation, 2 Theſ. 2. 13, 14. As a means requiſite to it. And ſo here it is not according to foreknowledge of our Sanctification, but according to foreknowledge in and through Sanctification, it is then the foreknowledge ſimply of our Perſons abſtracted from all condition joyned with and importing ſpecial Love and deareſt Affection; for words of knowledge import and declare affections in Scripture Phraſe, depart from me (ſays Chriſt) ye workers of Iniquity, I know you not, that is, I regard you not; anſwerably it is attributed to expreſs Gods knowledge of us with ſpecial Love and regard, Rom. 11. 2. God hath not caſt away his People whom he foreknew, that is, Loved, and out of Love choſe them. 2 Tim. 1. 9.

2. For thoſe other that follow, for the order of them as they are here ranged there is a ſeeming difficulty, ſome underſtand them as ſet in order, as they ſucceed one another in the execution of the electing Decree, namely that Sanctification, whereby is meant the working all the principles of habitual Grace (which we call Regeneration) by the Spirit ſhould be the firſt and immediate medium of Election according to that order or Chain, Rom. 8. Whom he predeſtinated he called, under which Sanctification is intended, as the firſt and next to Predeſtination, and ſo then unto Obedience and ſprinkling of Chriſts blood comes in as the immediate conſequents of that ſanctification firſt wrought;and ſoSanctification is the firſt moſt immediate deſigned fruit of Election,though as a medium God hath Elected or ordained us unto Obedience and ſprinkling of Chriſts Blood.Now how Obedience ſhould follow upon Sanctification habitual,ſo as it might be ſaid, we are elected through habitual Sanctification unto Obedience,underſtanding it of Obedience in our whole courſe to the wholeWill of God,is eaſily underſtood,and granted by all to be the end of habitualGrace,as Operations are of their proper habits,but then how the ſprinkling of the Blood of Chriſt ſhould be the conſequent of Sanctification, ſo as we ſhould in like manner be ſaid to be elected through Sanctification unto this ſprinkling of Chriſts Blood,this contradicts the received Opinion,*i.e.*that juſtification ſhould rather be the medium of Sanctification,and in order go afore it. And that by the ſprinkling of Chriſts blood here,the application of his Blood to us for the forgiveneſs of ſins ſhould be meant is evident, for as ſhedding of his Blood was the work of Redemption, as by him performed on the Croſs, ſo the ſprinkling of his Blood is a work done upon us when we actually come to believe,and is the actual application of it.

Now yet this might ſtand,if as Learned Mr. Pemble and others aſſert, Sanctification doth in order of Nature precede juſtification,and which to me ſeems not remote from Truth, or prejudicial to the Grace of juſtification at all, and withal Conſonant to right reaſon, for if (as all grant juſtification be upon an act of Faith on Chriſt for juſtification, and that not until then we are juſtified, as all do and muſt acknowledge that hold juſtification by Faith according to theScriptures,and that an act of Faith muſt proceed from a principle of Faith habitually wrought, then neceſſarily Sanctification, taking it for the principles of habitual Sanctification, muſt be in order of Nature afore juſtification, for the ſeed and principle of Faith, is a part, and a principal part of Regeneration or Sanctification, as taken in that ſenſe,for the working the principles of all grace, and ſo is agreeable to that order and chain, Rom. 8. 29. where called is put before being juſtified, as predeſtination is put before being called, underſtanding calling of the working the principles of Regeneration.

But for the agreeing of this diſpute as from this place, we may eaſily accord it, if (as Paræus) we ſay that all theſe three, Sanctification, Obedience and ſprinkling of Chriſts Blood are not mentioned here in any ſubordination of the one to the other,as a precedent & medium thereunto, but all of them alike directly and equally to relate to Election as the immediate thing deſigned,& ſo theſe two particles ἐν ἁγιασμῷ and εἰς ὑπακοὴν, come both to one as in Scripture they are uſed to do,and ſo they ſhould be read, as alſo the Vulgar reads them in Sanctificationem & Obedientiam, Elect unto Sanctification unto Obedience and ſprinkling of the Blood of Chriſt Thus much as to the order of the things here mentioned, ſuppoſing by Obedience here to be meant the whole Courſe of aChriſtians Life in Holineſs.

But Secondly for the things themſelves,I prefer another Interpretation above all other which doth give this account of the Apoſtles ſcope to be to enumerate two more eminent effects of Election, namely, Sanctification, and Juſtification,whereof the firſt is attributed more ſpecially to the ſpirit, the other to Faith, and the Blood of Chriſt; as in like manner, Rom. 8. 29. calling and juſtification, are only enumerated of the benefits in this Life that followed Predeſtination; Whom he hath Predeſtinated, them he hath called, them he hath juſtified: But then how ſhould Obedience be interpreted, ſo as to appertain unto juſtification, which if meant of actual Holineſs of Life,it is oppoſed rather thereunto according to Proteſtants Doctrine. The Papiſts that cloſe with this interpretation of juſtification to be intended in the Yoaking Obedience and Chriſts Blood together,greedily catch hold of it,that therefore our good works and actual Obedience is an ingredient matter of our juſtification,as well as the Blood of Chriſt. And you all know they make our Obedience to halve it and bear a ſhare of that Glory with the Blood of Chriſt, but they fall ſhort of their aim in it, in this, that according to their Doctrine, habitual Sanctification is to come in alſo, as an Ingredient with it, as that which helps to conſtitute us righteous, whereas in the Apoſtles ſpeech Obedience and the ſprinkling of Chriſts blood, as they are linked one to another, ſo they are ſeparated both from the ſanctification of the ſpirit. Chap. 5.

Others of our Proteſtant Divines do therefore refer theſe two to juſtification, as the two parts thereof, the imputation of the Active and Paſſive Obedience of Chriſt, and ſo as that part of juſtification [the ſprinkling of Chriſts Blood] which is the Imputation of it to us, is expreſly mentioned: ſo that by Obedience ſhould be intended by an Ellipſis the imputation of the Obedience of Chriſt, namely the active Obedience coupled with his Blood, this interpretation (as I remember) Biſhop Downam glanceth at in his Treatiſe of Juſtification, where I firſt met with it, but I meet with it hinted alſo in Commentators, In Obedientiam Jeſu Chriſti & aſperſionem ſanguinis ejuſdem Jeſu, ſays Æſtius, unto the Obedience of Jeſus Chriſt, and ſprinkling of the Blood of Chriſt; his meaning is that the firſt branch is to be made out and ſupplyed by the analogy of the latter, as is often in Scripture, that as therefore it is expreſly ſaid to the ſprinkling of the Blood of Jeſus: ſo it ſhould be in like manner ſupplyed, to the imputation or benefit of the Obedience of Jeſus Chriſt imputed, this, if there be not Harſhneſs or Violence in it, I ſhould wiſh might ſtand, becauſe it helps out the active Obedience to be the matter of our juſtification. And truly the Argument of ſome againſt it, that we are not ſaid to be Elected unto Chriſts Obedience, ſo underſtood, but rather by it, or through it, moves me not, becauſe Chriſts merits were not the foundation or motive to Election, nor are we any where ſaid to be Elected through Chriſt, or for Chriſt, ſo as not withſtanding that interpoſed ſcruple, this might well ſtand.

Æſtius was a Papiſt and intended not our Juſtification by either, yet if in this his reading the words, he gives us light therein, we may receive it.

But there is another reaſon which is more plauſible, and which gives as juſt an account why Obedience is caſt into and linked thus with Chriſts Blood, as appertaining unto juſtification, and as requiſite to it as Chriſts Blood is, and that is that Peter underſtood Obedience of juſtifying Faith, as it embraceth, receives, and ſubmits unto Chriſts Blood, and the imputation of it for juſtification before God, and ſo this act of Faith as it is abſtracted from Sanctification and Works, as Viewing and Eyeing and ſubmitting unto Chriſts Blood, and Obedience only for juſtification is therefore joyned therewith, in the work of juſtification here intended; and truly the Reaſons on this hand riſe up to a great evidence, if not certainty, that Peter ſhould ſo mean.

1. For firſt, It is not only call'd Obedience to the Faith as, Act. 6. 7. in the Dative caſe, as noteing out Obedience to the Doctrine of Faith, but it is expreſly termed ὑπακοὴ πίστεως, the Obedience of Faith in the Genitive caſe, as noting out the act of Faith, its being termed by way of eminency, Obedience ſo, Rom. 1. 5. and Chap. 16,26. yea in Chap. 10, 16. Obedience to the Goſpel is interpretatively and exegetically made all one, as to believe in theſe words, They have not all Obeyed the Goſpel, for Iſaiah ſays, Lord who hath believed our report? where he interprets our report to be the Goſpel, or glad-tidings and believing to be all one with Obedience to it. And indeed for Men to renounce their own Righteouſneſs paſt, preſent, and to come, and betake themſelves wholly unto, or (as the Apoſtles word in the ſame Chapter is) to ſubmit themſelves to the Righteouſneſs of God, this is the greateſt and higheſt Obedience, and deſerves the name καὶ ἐξοχήν, and the Apoſtle having deciphered it forth as ſo great a ſubmiſſion, in the beginning of that Chapter, under thoſe terms, might well call it Obedience in the following part: and he evidently ſpeaks of juſtifying Faith in oppoſition unto works, as is evident by the 5. & 6. verſes, and ſo in like manner when in Chapter 1. he calls it Obedience, he means that Faith by which the Juſt do live, v. 17. of which he treats in the whole Epiſtle. Πίστει.

2. That which confirms this interpretation that by Obedience ſhould be meant the act of juſtifying Faith, is that in that parallel place, 2 Theſ. 2. 13. we are ſaid to be elected through Sanctification, or [in] or [unto] Sanctification, and belief of the Truth. Faith is joyned with Sanctification there, when Election to the medium of Salvation is ſpoken of.

3. And thirdly, As Paul, ſo Peter himſelf alſo in this Chap. termeth faith Obedience; You have purified your Souls by Obeying the Truth; and ſo look as Paul calls it belief of the Truth, Peter terms it Obeying the Truth, and as Paul calls it Obedience ſimply, ſo Peter here alſo. And that in this ſpeech [Ye have purified your hearts by Obeying the truth] he means Faith, as eyeing juſtification or Chriſts Blood, in the Goſpel, for cleanſing and purifying the Conſcience from the guilt of ſin, is evident by Peters own ſpeech elſewhere, in that great Synod, Act. 15. 9. God hath purified their Hearts by Faith, which he by the coherence evidently ſpeaks of viz. juſtification by Faith, for whether we were juſtified by faith only, or by obſerving the Law, was the point in queſtion there, as in like manner in the Epiſtle to the Galatians, which alſo that of Heb. 9. 10, 13, 14, 15, &c. confirms.

4. Fourthly, Faith as juſtifying is eminently call'd Obedience in the point of juſtification coupled with Chriſts Blood here, and the imputation of it, as the proper Object of that act, and the true effect or conſequent of that act, according as you have it, Rom. 3. 25. God hath ſet forth Chriſt as a propitiation through Faith in his Blood.

And thus underſtanding theſe words, we may by [Sanctification of the ſpirit] underſtand, habitual Sanctification in the heart, and take in actual Sanctification in the Life as included therein, as it is uſually taken, and in that, 2 Theſ. 2. 13. forecited, and then Faith juſtifying as the act, under the name of Obedience and Chriſts Blood, as the Object thereof, and the ſprinkling or application of it by the Spirit upon that act of Obedience.

And thus all three perſons come in, in their proper work for us (which is the thing I aim at) 1. The Father in Election, 2. The Son, as ſhedding whoſe Blood it is, The Blood of Jeſus Chriſt, and that firſt ſhed for our Redemption or Juſtification from ſin, in whom we have redemption through his Blood the forgiveneſs of ſin, as, Eph. 1. 7. and who by his own Blood obtained eternal Redemption for us, Heb. 9. 12. and although the ſprinkling of this Blood to the purifying our Hearts by Faith is a work of the Spirit, as well as Sanctification is ſaid to be, and this in Peters intentment, for, ver. 22. he ſays having purified your Souls to the obedience of the Truth by the Spirit, yet the firſt ſhedding of that Blood (which ſprinkling thereof neceſſarily ſuppoſeth) was by Chriſt himſelf; and by his Blood as ſhed by him it is we are juſtified, when it comes to be ſprinkled on us or applyed unto us. The efficacy, and the Virtue of it, lay, in that it was his Blood, and ſhed by him to that end, therefore, Heb. 9. where this matter is handled and opened out of the type, having v. 24. ſaid he ſprinkled the Blood, in the 22. v. he adds, Without ſhedding blood there is no remiſſion, ſo as the Emphaſis here lyes in the Blood of Chriſt, even as ſhed, but now applyed and eyed by Faith, and ſo the proper eminent work of the ſecond Perſon, the Son, is held forth as well as of the ſpirit, and thus all here falls in with what you have, 1 Cor. 6. 8. But now you are waſhed, which is the general to the two parts of purification that follow, But ye are Sanctified, but ye are juſtified, where Juſtification follows after Sanctification here. And here he attributeth theſe two works unto theſe two Perſons the Son and the Spirit, juſtified in the name of the Lord Jeſus and Sanctified by the ſpirit of our God; Sanctification being by the ſpirit, as juſtification, in the name of Jeſus Chriſt, or by the ſpirit as the author of both, but by Chriſt as the purchaſer and meritorious cauſe of either in the name or Virtue of Chriſt [and of our God] comes in as having an hand in both. And thus much for the confirmation of this great point, which withall hath took in the opening of this obſcure and difficult place.

Chap. 6.

CHAP. VI.

The Uſes. See the great Love of God, that all that is within him, all his Attributes, and all his Perſons ſhould concern themſelves in our Salvation. Since Salvation is ſo great a work, in which the whole Deity is employ'd, let us not neglect it. Let us think how welcome theſe three Perſons will make us at our arrival in Heaven.

IS it thus that all three Perſons joyntly, and ſeverally have their hands thus in mans Salvation, have ſhared it amongſt them into ſo many works, and took them on them, as ſo many Offices, & vouchſafed to bear a Title of Honour there from, as you have heard you that love God, ſee & acknowledge the infinite overflowing love of God therein; God hath loved us (you ſee) with all that is within him; Content nor ſatisfied was he, to ſhew forth all his Attributes therein, and thoſe which had not been in the leaſt diſcovered in the Creation, as Grace and mercy, &c. but he would have the Perſons alſo ſet a work, and employed therein, and thereby manifeſted to us. Oh! let us love God with all that is within us, Bleſs the Lord, Oh my Soul, ſays the Pſalmiſt, and all that is within me bleſs his holy name, Pſal. 103. 1. let all thy faculties come forth as the Stars in their courſes to celebrate his name; if you pray, pray with the ſpirit, pray with underſtanding alſo, if you ſing, ſing with the ſpirit, and ſing with the underſtanding alſo. as the Apoſtle ſpeaks upon another occaſion, and let nothing be untuned or unſtruck in this Conſort; God the Father became our God, and Ordained to give himſelf to us from everlaſting in Election, and delighted to chuſe us, as the Phraſe is, Deut. 10 15. He gave his Son, and he gave Himſelf both to us, and for us, and both gifts are invaluably infinite, and becauſe he had no more left, he hath given his ſpirit alſo, as, 2 Cor. 5. ye have it; when man was firſt made, then only God ſaid, Let us make Man, this was ſpoken, ſay ſome, with a farther eye and foreſight than to the Creation, this counſel expreſſed what ſpecial care they each ſhould have unto the like piece of workmanſhip, was then afore them, even unto the Goſpel ſtate: I will chuſe him to Life, ſaith the Father, but he will fall, and ſo fall ſhort of what my Love deſigned to him: but I will redeem him, ſays the Son, out of that loſt Eſtate: but yet being fallen he will refuſe that grace, and the offers of it, and deſpiſe it, therefore I will Sanctify him, ſaid the Holy Ghoſt, and overcome his unrighteouſneſs, and cauſe him to accept it. And having this Council and reſolution about him, they ſtill ſaid however, Let us make him, and thereupon fell to making him, and have ſince done all this for him. 1 Cor. 14, 15.

Uſe. 2. Salvation is a great work, and ſhall we neglect it? The three perſons have been employed about it, and that from everlaſting, and will not you work out your own Salvation? it is your own; do you think to do that in a trice, they have been doing from eternity? or do you think to do it when you will? Salvation is lock't up by a door of Faith as it is called, Acts 14.27. & to that door there are theſe 3 Keys of theſe 3 Perſons and all muſt, and do concur in it, when 'tis effected, and think'ſt thou to have theſe States of Heaven to come together at thy beck & at thy call? thou mayſt ſooner think to order the great conjunction of the Stars, and Planets, Job 38.31. Canſt thou bring forth Mazoreth? Knoweſt thou the Ordinances of Heaven? Or canſt thou ſet the Dominion thereof upon the Earth? That is, canſt thou order their motion ſo as that their conjunctions or meetings ſhould fall out when thou pleaſeſt? which when they meet have ſpecial influences upon this lower World; canſt thou ſet that Clock? and thinkeſt thou (that canſt not move a mans heart on earth) to call the Trinity together, when thou pleaſeſt, to diſpatch thy buſineſs for thee? Be ſure therefore that thou take their time when thou feeleſt the ſpirit moving thee, then all thoſe Wheels are a moving, and then take thy ſeaſon.

Uſe 3. Think how welcome we ſhall be when we come to Heaven, 'tis ſaid in the Parable, that when men fail, there are friends made with Unrighteous Mammon which will then receive you. But here is a higher company and fellowſhip of friends to us, Father, Son, and Holy-Ghoſt, the three Witneſſes in Heaven that are Chap. 6. and have been, (as you ſee) ſo great friends to us, and each love us for his Works ſake on us & coſt and labour of Love beſtowed: Artifex amat Opus; ſo do each of theſe love their own Work in us; ſaith the Father, This is the Soul which I choſe from Everlaſting, and ſet my Heart upon ſo long agoe; Saith Chriſt, This is that Man that I repreſented upon the Croſs, and the Welcome Day now comes, that I have return of the Travel of my Soul, the Spirit of my Blood; And I (ſays the ſpirit) have took infinite pains with him to keep him, and to bring him to this. And thus all rejoyce and glory in it.

Uſe 4. That theſe three Glorious Perſons thus equally ſhare this Work of ſo much Glory unto God in the higheſt, amongſt them, and one doth not take upon him all, but each bears his part, that each may be Honoured as the other, yea, are jealous of the glory of each other herein, as much as of their own. this may teach us poor narrow Creatures, humility and mutual condeſcenſion, that no man ſhould do or have the honour of all the Work, or ſtrive for it, God hath ſhared his gifts, made diverſities of Operations, and worketh as, and in what meaſure, and by whom he pleaſeth; if there had been contending amongſt theſe Perſons, who ſhould have the Glory of all, or who ſhould be the firſt or ſecond, this work had ſtood ſtill, and man had not been ſaved, but they willingly ſhare it, according to their Order and Priority of ſubſiſting, and involve our Salvation with their Glory.

A DISCOURSE OF CHRIST THE MEDIATOR.

By Tho. Goodwin, D. D.

LONDON,

Printed in the YEAR, M. DC. XCII.

THE CONTENTS OF THIS TREATISE.

BOOK I.

God the Fathers Eternal Counsel and Transactions with Christ, to undertake the Work of Redemption for Man, consider'd as Fallen.

Chap. I. The Exposition of the Words of the Text. What is the great Design of the Gospel. The Excellency of the Knowledge of it. The highest attainment is to see the Gospel in its Original, those Eternal Transactions between God the Father, and God the Son, for the Salvation of Man.

Chap. 2. Some Observations premised. That it is to the Father the Reconciliation is made, and to Him the Affair is chiefly Attributed.

Chap. 3. What as to our Salvation was done by God the Father from all Eternity. The meaning of that Phrase God was Reconciling us in Christ. That God took up a strong Resolution and Purpose to reconcile some of the Fallen Sons of Men to himself. His Motives were not any thing in us, but purely his Love, and his Delight in Mercy. His Love in thus designing Salvation to us magnified by several Considerations.

Chap. 4. That God in pursuance of his Gracious Design to save Sinners, exercised his Wisdom to contrive the fittest means of Accomplishing it. Though God might have pardoned Sin without satisfaction, yet he would not, and the Reasons of it.

Chap. 5. To the effecting of all the Designs both of Justice and Mercy, it was necessary that a full and compleat satisfaction should be made, which we being unable to pay, Divine Wisdom thought of another Person to undertake, and to do it for us. That Gods Justice is contented with this Commutation of the Person, since hereby that Attribute is more glorified, and all the ends of the Law answered, than if we the Offenders had in our own Persons suffered the due punishment of Sin.

Chap. 6. The great Difficulty was to find out a Person of Strength equal to so high an Undertaking. Neither Angels nor Men could have found out, or presented a fit Person. God manifest in the Flesh for Redemption of Man, was a Mystery above all the Thoughts of Angels or Men; and was worthy only of Gods Wisdom to find out.

Chap. 7. When Gods Wisdom had found out a fit Person, yet since this must be his only Son, here was a greater Difficulty for him to overcome, How to give him for us. The depths of Gods Love here, as of his Wisdom before, seen in not sparing his own Son, but exposing him to all the Rigours of Justice, which would not make the least abatements. It was of Free Choice that he made thus of his Son to be a Redeemer, to which he was not Obliged or Necessitated. He appointed his Son to Death for us, and laid his Injunction and Charge on him to perform this his Will.

Chap. 8. Christs Acceptance of the Terms which God the Father propounded to him for Mans Redemption. That his willingness in the undertaking proceeded not only from the Love he had for us, but from that which he did bear unto his Father, and his desire to Obey him, and to perform his Will. That the Elect Redeemed by Christ were first God the Fathers, and by him given in Trust and Charge to Christ to Save them.

Chap. 9. That upon Christs Accepting this Agreement, God the Father to Reward him, engages to bestow all the Blessings which he should Purchase to those Redeemed by him. That all these Blessings of Grace, and Eternal Life, were promised to us in Christ from all Eternity.

The Contents.

Chap. 10. What is the Reaſon that though we receive all theſe Bleſſings by Chriſt, and on the account of his Merits, yet they are ſaid to be given to us of pure Grace.

Chap. 11. That upon the Concluſion of this Agreement or Covenant of Redemption, there was the greateſt Joy in Heaven. The Divine Perſons exulting in the delightful Thoughts, that ſo many wretched loſt Creatures ſhould be effectually Saved.

BOOK II.

The ſole, and peculiar Fitneſs of Chriſts Perſon for the Work of Redemption.

Chap. 1. The Fitneſs of Chriſts Perſon for the Work of a Mediator, hath a great Influence to make it Succeſsful and Proſperous.

Chap. 2. That it was neceſſary for our Mediator to be God. He could not otherwiſe have been preſent at the making of the Eternal Covenant of Redemption: None but God could have the Power to beſtow ſuch great Bleſſings as are thoſe of the Covenant: None but God could be the Object of our Truſt, Faith, and Hope, and Obedience. None but God could be ſufficiently able to ſuccour us at all times.

Chap. 3. Of the Three Perſons in the Godhead, the Son is the fitteſt to be Mediator. What are the Reaſons of it.

Chap. 4. That it was neceſſary our Mediator ſhould be Man. The Reaſons why the Angelical Nature would not have been proper for this Work; and therefore why Chriſt aſſumed not that, but the Nature of Man.

Chap. 5. That it was fit that our Mediator ſhould be both God and Man in One Perſon, that ſo he might partake of the Nature of both Parties, and be a Middle Perſon between them, and fill up the diſtance, and bring them near to one another. That he might be in a better Capacity to communicate unto us his Benefits, and that he might be capable of performing what our Redemption requir'd.

Chap. 6. How the two Natures, the Divine and Humane, which are ſo different, are united into One Perſon, Chriſt, God-Man. That the Son of God did not aſſume an Humane Perſon, but the Nature. The Reaſons why an Humane Perſon could not have been aſſumed. It was our whole Nature which the Son of God took, both Soul and Body. The Reaſons which made this neceſſary.

Chap. 7. That it was not only fit that Chriſt ſhould be Man, but ſuch a Man, as to be like us in the Matter and Subſtance of his Body; And to be like us in his Production and Birth, to be born of a Woman as we are. What are the reaſons of this. What is the reaſon why Chriſt though born of a Woman is yet without Sin. Why he is Man, and of the Jewiſh Nation.

Chap. 8. The Uſes. Since God hath thus fitted us with a Mediator, we may be aſſured that he will fit us with all other things. Let us chooſe Chriſt to be our only Saviour, and truſt in none but him. Is he God? Let us not then fear, or doubt. Hath he taken our Nature? Let us admire his Love in this, and conſider our own Priviledge. Let us endeavour to fit our Natures all that we can for Fellowſhip with him.

BOOK III.

The Fulneſs of Abilities which are in Chriſt, to accompliſh the Work of our Redemption, which are impoſſible to be found in any other Perſon.

Chap. 1. The All-ſufficient Abilities to accompliſh our Redemption, demonſtrated from God the Fathers calling him to it, which he would never have done, had not he known him able. From Gods engaging alſo to furniſh him with Abilities. From Chriſts undertaking it, which he did upon the Knowledge which he had of himſelf, as equal to the great Performance. From the Greatneſs and Excellency of his Perſon, who being God-Man, is able to do any thing. The Reaſons which induced God to fix on this way of Salvation, to be by the Blood and Sacrifice of his Son. An Anſwer to that Objection, How God is ſaid to pardon us freely by his Grace, when yet he requires full Satisfaction to be made.

Chap. 2. That in Chriſt alone there was ſufficient Ability to take away Sin. The Weakneſs and Inſufficiency of any Creature for this Work demonſtrated. That it is for the greater Honour of Chriſt to Effect that, which none could do beſides him. The Inſufficiency of any Creature proved by an Enumeration of Particulars. That the Blood of all Sacrifices could not have ſuch an Efficacy. That we were unable to ſatisfie God by any thing which we could ſuffer, or do. That all the Saints are as unable to help us in this Caſe. That it is beyond the Power of Angels themſelves.

Chap.

The Contents.

Chap. 3. That the most perfect Creature, though having all the Perfections of Christ and Humane Nature, yet could not be our Redeemer. The utmost extent to which the Power of any Creature can reach to save either himself or others, which yet all fall short of that which was to be performed for our Redemption.

Chap. 4. The Inability of the Creature to redeem us demonstrated from the Nature of the satisfaction. First, That which the Law required, a Creature could not answer for us, neither in obeying the Precept, nor suffering the Penalty.

Chap. 5. That no Creatures could make that Satisfaction which an injur'd God required. They cannot compensate the wrong done to him by Sin, nor repair the loss of his Honour.

Chap. 6. That Christ hath made full Reparation of all which was lost by Sin. The Glory of the Law which Sin had darkned, is by him perfectly recover'd. And Gods Image, which Sin had defaced in Man, is more fully restored in him.

Chap. 7. That Christ hath repaired the Loss of Honour, which God sustained by Sin. Satisfaction in point of Honour being to be measur'd by the Excellency, Dignity, and Reputation of the Person satisfying. Christ being God-Man, in this respect makes the greatest which could be.

Chap. 8. What this Excellent and Glorious Person did for satisfaction brings more Honour to God, than ever Sin had done dishonour. The Glory which redounds to God from this Persons condescending to assume Humane Nature, and that too in such a low Condition, and meanest Circumstances.

Chap. 9. The principal matter of Christs Satisfaction was not only in a Diminishing of his Glory, but Despoiling him of it. And that he did this willingly, he humbled himself. And that his Person was the subject of this Debasement and Humiliation.

Chap. 10. The Greatness and Supereminent Worth of this satisfaction as performed by such a Person. That hence the Acts of his Obedience exceed in Goodness all the Evil that is in Sin, and that therefore they make full Reparation since they honour God more than ever Sin had dishonoured him.

Chap. 11. That upon the whole it is evident, That there is all in the satisfaction made by Christ, which Justice can require. An Enumeration of the several Pleas which may be fram'd against the Sinner, and how they are all answer'd by what our Redeemer hath performed.

Chap 12. That all the Pleas which the Law can make against a Sinner are by this Satisfaction of Christ also fully Answered.

BOOK IV.

Christs Willingness to the Work of Redemption from Everlasting, till he accomplished it.

Chap. 1. That there are two things to be considered in the Obedience which Christ performed, The Will, and the Deed. That from all Eternity he Expressed his willingness in his consent to undertake the Work.

Chap. 2. That Christ renewed his Consent as soon as he came into the World. That his Humane Nature from his first Conception agreed to it. That this is apparent from the Scope and Intent of the Twenty Second Psalm.

Chap. 3. Shewing the Mystery of that Appellation given him, Jesus the Nazarite, to have been, that he was thus dedicated from his very Conception to this great work.

Chap. 4. That Sampson, and other Nazarites of the Law, were Types of Christ the great Nazarite, who Dedicated him to the Holy Work of Redemption. By what Rules and Reasons we may judge that Christ was in this respect typified by those Nazarites.

Chap. 5. How Christ was presignified as a Nazarite by these Types. The Parallel between him, and Sampson. How God having thus in the Type foretold, That Christ should be a Nazarite, so wisely order'd it, that both his Conception and Education should be there, that so that Name Nazarite, as an Inhabitant of that City, might belong to him.

Chap. 6. How God wisely ordered it, that the Jews should call Christ a Nazarite, though he was not really born in that City.

Chap. 7 That another Propheſie of Christ Isa. 11. 1. Jer. 23. 5. and Zech. 3. 8. is fulfilled in Christ a Nazarite, or Inhabitant of that City.

Chap. 8 That as Christ expressed his Will and Consent in the Dedication of himself to the Work, so he shewed his chearful Willingness in all the parts of the performance.

Chap. 9. That he did not shrink at the approach of his greatest Sufferings, his Death, but shewed a chearful resolution to the very last moment.

BOOK V.

Christs Actual Performance of our Redemption. In the General, He gave himself for us. The particular Parts of our Redemption are, That he was made Sin, and a Curse; and by his Death obtain'd a Victory over Satan, whereby he delivers us from his Slavery: And hath perform'd all Righteousness which might answer the Law for us. And that Christ as our Great Shepherd takes care to preserve and secure us safe thus Redeem'd, and freed by Him.

Chap. 1. That God presently on Mans Fall making the Discovery to him of a Redeemer, Adam transmitted the Knowledge of him to his Posterity, and he was accordingly proposed to the Faith of the Patriarchs.

Chap. 2. That Christ gave himself for us, to redeem us. What is implyed in that Expression. We should duly consider the Greatness and Value of such a Gift. Christ giving himself is a High Testimony of his own peculiar Love to us.

Chap. 3. It is proved in the General, that Christ was made Sin, and a Curse for us, because he redeeming us who were under the Law, must become that, which we were in the Account, and Judgement of the Law. That Christ was made Sin for us demonstrated, and explained in what respect he was so. Uses drawn from the Doctrines.

Chap. 4. How Christ was made a Curse for us. That it was the curse of the Moral Law, and the whole substance of what it threatned. Arguments to prove that Christ suffered it.

Chap. 5. An Enumeration of the Particulars of the Curse which Christ endured. That assuming our Nature, he took also those Infirmities which Sin hath brought upon us. That a painful wretched Life being the Curse of our first Fathers Sins, the Life of Christ answerably was filled with Miseries and Sorrows.

Chap. 6. What were the Sufferings of Christ, as bearing the Curse of our Sins, more immediately foregoing his Crucifixion, Described in an Exposition of the first One and Twenty Verses of the Eighteenth Chapter of Johns Gospel. A Garden was the Place where he had his first Agonies, and was Apprehended. The Reasons why such a Place was Appointed and chosen by him. The first Nine Verses explained and Observations raised from them.

Chap. 7. The Tenth and Eleventh Verses Explained with suitable Observations raised from them. The willingness which Christ expressed to come to die, and be made a Sacrifice, and would have nothing to hinder it.

Chap. 8. How Christ was taken and bound by those who came to Apprehend Him, and was thus led away by them as the Victims, or Sacrifices used to be to the Altar. That even this his binding hath an Influence on our being loosened from those Chains, wherein Sin hath fetter'd us.

Chap. 9. Peter's Denyal of Christ. That this was an Addition to his Sufferings.

Chap. 10. The Account of Christs Examination before Caiaphas, in the Nineteenth, Twentieth, and One and Twentieth Verses of this Eighteenth Chapter of John. We now come to the other part of Christs Sufferings recorded in this Chapter, and that is a strict Examination of him.

Chap. 11. The last Sufferings of Christ coming to his Death. Both the shame and torments are to be considered in them.

Chap. 12. The Extremity of pain which Christ our Redeemer indured in his Body. His being harrassed day and night without a moments rest. His being Crowned with Thorns, torn with Rods, and at last Crucified.

Chap. 13. The greatest of all Christs Sufferings were those of his Soul. What were the Causes of those Sorrows. The Greatness of those Sufferings. Wherein they did consist. How it could consist with his being the Son of God, to be forsaken of God, and to bear such extremity of his Fathers Wrath.

Chap. 14. Uses of Christs being made Sin, and a Curse for us. We see herein God the Fathers Love, and his own. We should not regret to suffer any thing for Christ. Let us obey and worship Christ in Soul and Spirit. The troubled in Soul should be comforted. We see the hainousness of Sin by the greatness of Christs Sufferings, and the Misery of being without an Interest in Christ. We should charge our Sins upon our selves for Humiliation. We should mourn for them, and hate them.

Chap. 15. The Victory which Christ gained over Satan by his Death. The Glory of this Victory displayed by the Consideration of the Greatness of that Power which the Devil had over us.

That not only Chriſt in his own Perſon ſhould Conquer the Devil, and break his Power, but that we ſhould bear a part in it with him, is implyed in that firſt Promiſe in* Gen. 3. *That the Seed of the Woman ſhould break the Serpents Head. OF CHRIST THE MEDIATOR.

BOOK I.

God the Fathers Eternal Counſel and Tranſactions with Chriſt, to undertake the Work of Redemption for Man, conſider'd as Fallen.

CHAP. I.

The Expoſition of the Words of the Text. What is the great Deſign of the Goſpel. The excellency of the Knowledge of it. The higheſt attainment is to ſee the Goſpel in its Original, thoſe Eternal Tranſactions between God the Father, and God the Son, for the Salvation of Man.

2 COR. v. 18, 19.

And all things are of God, who hath reconciled us to himſelf by Jeſus Chriſt, and hath given to us the miniſtry of reconciliation. To wit, that God was in Chriſt reconciling the world unto himſelf; not imputing their treſpaſſes unto them, and hath committed to us the word of reconciliation.

THESE Words do ſummarily tell us, what is the Argument of that great Myſtery of the Goſpel, as it concerneth Sinners; viz. Reconciliation: Therefore he ſtiles it the Miniſtry of Reconciliation: that is the Title he gives the Doctrine of it; and withal further explains this: To wit, ſayes he, That God was in Chriſt reconciling the world; and ſo the foot of the Angels Evangelical Song, wherein they ſung forth the main end of Chriſts Nativity, was Reconciliation, Luke 2. 14. Glory to God in the higheſt, and on earth peace, good will towards men. This Reconciliation conſiſts of two parts, Peace and good Will.

Book I.

The full ſcope of the words you may conceive, as I have caſt them into this frame; and withal, what alſo is the ſumme of all the Diſcourſe upon them.

Firſt, The word Reconcile imports the whole of Mankind to have been once Created in an eſtate of Amity and Friendſhip with God: For to Reconcile, is to make Friends again, and argues former Friendſhip. And this ſets and limits the Subject of theſe Eternal Tranſactions between God the Father and the Son, to have been Man conſider'd as Fallen.

And Secondly, The whole lump of Men being fallen off from God into a deep rebellion, and become of the Devils ſide and faction: God who is infinite in Love, and rich in Mercy, bearing everlaſting and ſecret good Will to ſome of theſe, now become Rebels; in all Ages hath maintained certain Leiger Embaſſadors in the World, to treat with this rebellious Rout, and to conclude a Peace betwixt them and him: 2 Cor. 5. 20. Now then we are ambaſſadors for Chriſt, as though God did beſeech you by us: we pray you in Chriſts ſtead, be ye reconciled to God. And hath furniſhed them, (as all other Embaſſadors uſe to be) with a large and gracious Commiſſion; the Title of which is, The Miniſtry of Reconciliation: And hath given to us the miniſtry of reconciliation; ver. 18. The ſumme of which Commiſſion hath theſe two principal Parts.

1. On the Part of him; to publiſh and proclaim his Royal and Gratious Intentions towards them: For when two are at Variance, there can be no hope of Peace and Reconciliation, unleſs the Party wronged and injured ſhew an inclination (at leaſt) to liſten to an agreement. Now as to that, he hath impowered and commanded them with all confidence and credence to declare;

Firſt, That whereas they might conceive him moſt juſtly to be averſe to the very motion of it; that yet he, for his part, is not only contented, and inclined to liſten to an Agreement; but is and hath been ever ſo fully willing and deſirous of it, that he hath made it as it were his chief buſineſs, and as that which he hath plotted to bring about; and that he for his part hath been Reconciling the World to himſelf by Chriſt. God [was in] Chriſt reconciling; yea, and from everlaſting hath been. And though all things elſe are of him, as Verſe 18. he Prefaceth unto this; yet this mainly above all other things. Take the whole of them, [All things are of God who hath reconciled us] he hath been (as it were) totus in illo, wholly bent upon this of all things elſe. And whereas it might yet be thought, that he being ſo Juſt, and having declared himſelf ſo Jealous a God, ſenſible of the leaſt Injury, ſo tender of his Glory, and Jealous of the leaſt Violation or Wrong done thereto; that he therefore would require and propound, to have full Satisfaction from them firſt, as the Condition of his and their Accord and Agreement; which that they, or any other Creature for them, either were able or willing to perform, was utterly out of all hope. Therefore,

Secondly, He bids his Embaſſadors declare, that as to that Point, Men need not trouble themſelves, nor take care about it; for he himſelf hath further been ſo Zealouſly affected in this buſineſs, that he himſelf hath made full Proviſion, and took Order for that aforehand, and done it to their hand: He hath been in Chriſt reconciling the world: That is, in him and by him, as a Mediator, and Umpire, and Surety between them and him, this great matter hath been taken up, and accorded: For he and Jeſus Chriſt, his only Son, have from all Eternity laid their Counſels together (as I may ſo ſpeak with Reverence) to end this great difference; and they both contriv'd and agreed, that Chriſt ſhould undertake to ſatisfie his Father for all the Wrong was done to him, all which he ſhould take upon himſelf, as if he were guilty of it; He was made ſin, 2 Cor. 5. 21. that is, a Surety and a Satisfaction for it: And God the Father upon it, is ſo fully ſatisfied, as he is ready not only not to impute their Sins to them, Verſe 19. but to impute all all Chriſts Righteouſneſs to them, and to receive them into favour more fully than ever they were. He was made Sin, that they might be made the Righteouſneſs of God in him. Chap. 1.

2. The ſecond part of our Commiſſion is what concerns Men, the parties to be Reconcil'd; and God hath given us his Embaſſadors, full Povver and Authority to deal with men about it, and to ſtrike up the compact, and perfect this agreement unto a full and final iſſue and end, with charge to tell this Meſſage, indefinitely to all, and every Man in the World; and that founded upon this ground, that Reconciliation is to be obtained from God, for ſome in the World: And thereupon to exhort all and every one that hears it, to be Reconciled; and Men accordingly are to ſeek it as thus revealed to them by us; and theſe Exhortations are to be entertained by them, as if God had exhorted and perſwaded them thereunto. So Ver. 20. Now then we are ambaſſadors for Chriſt, as though God did beſeech you by us: we pray you in Chriſts ſtead, be ye reconciled to God.

And this (my Brethren) is the Goſpel, which is the beſt News that ever Ear heard; or Tongue was imployed to utter; which took up Gods Thoughts from all Eternity, and lay hid in his Breaſt; and which none knew but his Son and Spirit; a News ſo bleſſed and worthy of all acceptation: which as ſoon as it brake out, Heaven and Earth rang with joy again: The Angels could not hold; but as ambitious to be the firſt relaters of it, poſted down to Earth, to bring the News of it: Luke 2. 13, 14. And ſuddenly there was with the Angel a multitude of the heavenly hoſt praiſing God, and ſaying, Glory to God in the higheſt, and on earth peace, good will towards men.

And this being committed unto us to be the diſpenſers of it, this makes our very Feet beautiful in the eyes of broken-hearted Sinners: Rom. 10. 15. And how ſhall they preach, except they be ſent? as it is written, How beautiful are the feet of them that preach the goſpel of peace, and bring glad tidings of good things! This makes our Calling envyed, (if poſſibly it were Envy ſhould befal thoſe bleſſed Spirits) envyed of the Angels themſelves, to whom God hath not betruſted this Glorious Embaſſy, the moſt Honourable Imployment that ever Creature dealt in. Heb. 2. The law was given by Angels, ver. 2. but God hath not put into ſubjection to the Angels the world to come, whereof we ſpeak; (ſpeaking of the Goſpel, ver. 5.) for which Paul brings in that long and famous Thanksgiving, 1 Tim. 1. 11, 12. According to the glorious goſpel of the bleſſed God, which was committed to my truſt. And I thank Chriſt Jeſus our Lord, who hath enabled me, for that he counted me faithful, putting me into the miniſtry. He accounted that the greateſt Mercy which Jeſus Chriſt (next his own Salvation) had ſhown him, and wherein he made him a pattern of his ſuper-excelling Grace, that he committed the Goſpel to his truſt; which of all other Doctrines, tend the moſt to the good of Men. 1 Tim. 1. 15. This is a faithful ſaying, and worthy of all acceptation, that Chriſt Jeſus came into the world to ſave ſinners; of whom I am chief. Tit. 3. 7, 8. That being juſtified by his grace, we ſhould be made heirs according to the hope of eternal life. This is a faithful ſaying, and theſe things I will that thou affirm conſtantly, that they which have believed in God, might be careful to maintain good works: theſe things are good and profitable unto men. What things? See ver. 4. even this Doctrine of Salvation; and theſe things, ſaith he, I would that thou affirm conſtantly, ver. 8. For this is the power of God unto Salvation; as Rom. 1. 16. For I am not aſhamed of the goſpel of Chriſt: for it is the power of God unto ſalvation, to every one that believeth, to the Jew firſt, and alſo to the Greek. i. e. It is the moſt powerful and prevailing means to ſubdue the rebellious hearts of Men, and overcome them: And whereas the Preaching of the Law makes Men often ſturdy, this proclamation of Pardon and Reconciliation, brings men in as voluntaries, and that by troops. Luke 16. 16. The law and the prophets were until John: ſince that time the kingdom of God is preached, (that is the Goſpel) and every man preſſeth into it: Intimating that before, when the Law was moſt Preached and the Goſpel but ſparingly, (and but as a Parentheſis as it were) there were few brought in : But the Goſpel brought them in by heaps and multitudes, for ſo the oppoſition there ſtands, with which Men were ſo taken and affected, that glad was he that could get in with preſſure and crouding.

And therefore we likewiſe freely profeſs to you, that theſe things we would affirm conſtantly, (were men fitted, broken and humbled) and Preach in a manner nothing elſe, for it is the ſumme and upſhot of our Miniſtry; as the Title is given it in the Text, The Miniſtry of Reconciliation. And we would deſire to know nothing among you but Chriſt ; as Paul ſpeaks to the Corinthians, 1 Cor. 2. 2. For I determined not to know any thing among you, ſave Jeſus Chriſt, and him crucified : And this chiefly, Chriſt as Crucified to Reconcile you ; Crucified before your eyes in the Goſpel. Gal. 3. 5. He therefore that miniſtreth to you the Spirit, and worketh miracles among you, doeth he it by the works of the law, or by the hearing of faith ? And as for you, your Work τὸ ἔργον is to Believe ; This is the work of God, (ſayes Chriſt) John 6. 29. to believe in him whom God hath ſent : So our τὸ ἔργον, our Work, is to Preach him to you whom God hath ſent, that you may believe in him, and therefore we account it our miſery, that we are fain to ſpend the moſt of our time in making our ſelves work, as in Preaching the Law we do ; and are fain to come with the great hammer of the Law, and break all your bones in pieces, that we may then, as it is in Eſa. 61. 1. Preach the Goſpel, and bind up the broken-hearted. It is tireſome to us, that we muſt take Men by the throats, and arreſt them by the Law, (as we do) in the name of the great God, and hale them to Priſon, and there ſhut them up under the Law, as the Apoſtles phraſe is, Gal. 3. 23. that then we may bring them Chriſts bail, and by Preaching the Goſpel, proclaim liberty to the captives, and the opening of the priſon to them that are bound : As the alluſion is, Eſa. 61. 1. The Spirit of the Lord God is upon me, becauſe the Lord hath anointed me to preach good tidings unto the meek, he hath ſent me to bind up the broken-hearted, to proclaim liberty to the captives, and the opening of the priſon to them that are bound.

And we do withal proteſt before God and Men this day, that when we come to Preach it, we yet tremble to do it more than any Doctrine elſe : for we are afraid that Men ſhould lye ſtill in their Sins ; thoſe that are Drunkards ſhould be Drunkards ſtill, and unclean ſtill, and leaſt thoſe who with-hold the Truth in Unrighteouſneſs, (their Conſciences telling them that they live and lye in known Sins) leaſt they ſhould go on to do ſo ſtill after the delivery of it ; which if they ſhall do, they had better have been in Hell than in the Aſſembly of Saints to hear the Goſpel. We tremble therefore at it, as knowing that Men cannot hear it, and diſobey it, but under an extraordinary Curſe, oftentimes a final one, and ſuch a one as Chriſt curſed the Fig-tree with, when he ſaid, Never Fruit grow on thee more.

But to come unto that which is my main and principal Intendment and Scope of this Text, and which is the firſt and original part of the Goſpel, viz. The Everlaſting Tranſaction which the Father had with his Son, in calling him to the Work of Redemption of us Men, conſidered as Sinners. Other pieces of the Goſpel ; As thoſe on Chriſts part, his Fitneſs for the Work, his Ability and Performance in being made Sin and a Curſe, do in their due place follow upon other Texts. But attend at preſent unto the Fountain and Original of them all, unto that which ſets all the Wheels going from Eternity ; the Story of which, were it but for the Antiquity thereof, is well worth the hearing ; being with all the greateſt Entercourſe and Treaty about the greateſt Affair, between Perſons of the higheſt Sovereignty and Majeſty, that ever was Tranſacted either in Heaven or Earth, or ever will be. And accordingly, the higheſt form or rank of Chriſtians termed Fathers, have for their attainments this Mark and Character ſet upon them, To know him that was from the beginning, as the higheſt pitch of all : 1 John 2. 14. I have written unto you, fathers, becauſe ye have known him him that is from the beginning. I have written unto you, young men, becauſe ye are ſtrong, and the word of God abideth in you, and ye have overcome the wicked one. The Apoſtle ſpeaks with ſome alluſion to what is the Glory of Old Men, and ſo ſuitably of Old Men in Chriſt. They uſe to boaſt of knowing things that are of Antiquity and of elder years, as having fallen under their obſervation; as it is the property of Young Men to boaſt of their Strength and Vigour. Prov. 20. 29. The glory of young men is their ſtrength, and the beauty of old men is the gray head: i. e. Their Wiſdom, which lyes in their Grey Heads, and which ariſeth from their having the proſpect of former times. John therefore correſpondently commends ſtrong men grown up in Chriſtianity for their ſtrength, as the peculiar excellency of that Age in Chriſt. You are ſtrong (ſayes he) and have overcome the wicked one. But he commends Fathers in Chriſt for their Knowledge in things moſt Antient; and becauſe the Story of him that was from the beginning, is the Ancienteſt of all other that ever was, it is therefore made their Excellency to know it, and is commended to their ſtudy; and the Knowledge of the Eternal Tranſactions of God the Father for Mans Salvation, is the higheſt of their attainments. Chap. 1.

CHAP. II.

Some Obſervations premiſed. That it is to the Father the Reconciliation is made, and to Him the Affair is chiefly attributed.

ERE I come to the Particulars of theſe Tranſactions between God the Father and the Son for our Salvation, I will premiſe ſome General Obſervations out of the Text, which ſhall make way for what follows.

The great buſineſs of Reconciliation (as I ſaid) is both the ſubject of the Goſpel and of this Text, which tells us of thoſe two great Perſons, by whom this great buſineſs was tranſacted, and brought to ſuch a paſs, as Men may come to be Reconciled, and friends with God again; and what they are, that is God the Father, the Party wronged and injured, and Chriſt the means of Reconciliation, the Umpire and Mediator between both: God was in Chriſt reconciling the world.

By God is therefore meant a diſtinct Perſon from Chriſt; for in the former words it is ſaid, That he hath reconciled all things to himſelf by Chriſt: And that Perſon is the Father, as other Scriptures tell us.

Obſ. 1. That the Father is the Perſon to whom Reconciliation is made. Not but that it is made to the reſt alſo: But Firſt, Becauſe he being the Firſt Perſon, the Suit againſt us runs in his Name eſpecially, though it be the Quarrel of all the reſt of the Perſons, and the Injury done againſt all the reſt. Thus in Colledges, and ſuch common Societies, their Suits againſt others are commenced in ſome ones Name, as the Maſters or the like, whoſe Name is uſed for the whole, and ſo this common Quarrel and Suit of Treſpaſs which the whole Trinity hath againſt us, is commenced in God the Fathers Name for all the reſt; and therefore Chriſt is ſaid to be an Advocate with the Father, 1 John 2. 1. as the Party betruſted to take the Atonement, and make an end of the Quarrel in the Name of all the reſt. And

Secondly,

Book I.

Secondly, Because as Creation is attributed to the Father especially, so the Covenant of Works, the Law, the Covenant we were Created under being a Covenant made especially with the Father in the Name of the rest; therefore Sin, which was the transgression of that Covenant, is said to be as it were especially against him; for in the dispensation of that Covenant he ruled immediately: and as the Sins against the Second Covenant are said to be in a more especial manner against Christ and the Holy Ghost, so those against the First which occasioned the performance of Reconciliation, are said to be against the Father: Because therefore the transgressions of the First Testament, as they are called Heb. 9. 15. are especially said to be committed against him, therefore he takes upon him as the Person especially aggrieved, and so the Reconciliation is said to be made to him.

Thirdly, And further, because the other two Persons have other distinct Offices in the work of Reconciliation. The Son he is to transact the part of a Mediator, as the Person by whom Reconciliation is to be performed; and the Holy Ghost, he is to make report of that Peace and Atonement made and shed abroad the love of both. Rom. 5. 5. And hope maketh not ashamed, because the love of God is shed abroad in our hearts, by the Holy Ghost which is given unto us. He speaks of Gods Love in Reconciling us, Ver. 8. 9, 10. But God commendeth his love towards us, in that while we were yet sinners, Christ dyed for us. Much more then being now justified by his blood, we shall be saved from wrath through him. For if when we were enemies, we were reconciled to God by the death of his Son: much more, being reconciled, we shall be saved by his life. Therefore, the Father he bears (if any such part) the part of him that receives into favour, and to whom we are to be Reconciled.

To illustrate this, we are in the same sence and respect said to be Reconciled to the Father, in which we are taught especially to pray to the Father, Our Father, &c.: For the Son and the Spirit do bear other parts in our Prayers; the Son, he is the Master of Requests, the Intercessor, in whose Name therefore our Prayers are to be made: The Holy Ghost, he is the Inditer of our Prayers, and Helper of our Infirmities: Rom. 8. 26, 27. Likewise the Spirit also helpeth our infirmities: for we know not what we should pray for as we ought: but the Spirit it self maketh intercession for us with groanings which cannot be uttered. And he that searcheth the hearts, knoweth what is the mind of the Spirit, because he maketh intercession for the Saints according to the will of God. Therefore the Father, he is expressed as the Party we pray unto; and thus it is in like manner in the business of Reconciliation: It is the Father to whom it is and was to be made, and therefore by him to be first promoted and set on work.

Obs. 2. Observe in the Second place, that as he is made the special Person to whom the Reconciliation is made, so the whole business is in an especial manner attributed to him.

Though it be done and performed wholly by Christ as the Mediator, yet the Father is he who sets all on work, and is said to reconcile by Christ to himself. It is not only that Christ hath been about Reconciling us to him, but that he hath been a Reconciling us to himself, and that in Christ, as having the first, and chief, and main hand in the work, as well as being the Person, to whom Reconciliation is made.

God the Father was not as other Parties injured, that use to carry themselves as meer Passives in an Agreement when it is to be wrought; who though they are at length brought to it, yet they will not seem to condescend to have any hand in it, or to be the first movers or the seekers of it: But God the Father carried himself otherwise in the Reconciling of us; he is active in it, he moves it and sets it on foot, and useth his interest in his Son for the effecting of it. In general he is said especially to do two things.

First, He it is that draws the platform of all the works that the other two Persons do put their hand to effect: Christ sayes, That he himself doth nothing, nothing but what he ſees the Father firſt do ; John 5. 19. Then anſwered Jeſus, and ſaid unto them, Verily verily I ſay unto you, The Son can do nothing of himſelf, but what he ſeeth the Father do : for what things ſoever he doeth, theſe alſo doeth the Son likewiſe. So that he, the Father, the great plotter and contriver, that draws the Draught ; for it is added, He ſhowes all to the Son : Ver. 20. For the Father loveth the Son, and ſheweth him all things that himſelf doeth : and he will ſhew him greater works than theſe, that ye may marvel. As David the Father drew, and gave Solomon the Son, the Pattern of the Temple which he was to build : So God gave Chriſt the Platform of Reconciliation, of the Temple his Church, when he would have it built : the Platform is eſpecially attributed to him, the effecting of it to the Son ; and therefore Chriſt calls them the Works which the Father had given him to finiſh. John 5. 36. But I have greater witneſs than that of John : for the works which the Father hath given me to finiſh, the ſame works that I do, bear witneſs of me, that the Father hath ſent me.

And Secondly, He not only draws the Platform of them, how he would have them done, but the firſt purpoſe and reſolution to have them done, that is attributed to him alſo : Therefore Chriſt reſolves all into his Fathers Will ; Even ſo Father it ſeemed good in thy ſight. Matth. 11. 26. And ſo this Myſtery and Draught of Reconciliation is called the Myſtery of his Will : Eph. 1. 9. Having made known unto us the myſtery of his will, according to his good pleaſure, which he hath purpoſed in himſelf. The Myſtery becauſe he draws the plat, and of his Will, becauſe he reſolves thus and thus to have it done ; who is ſaid, Ver. 11. To work all things according to the counſel of his will. His Counſel draws the Draught, and his Will reſolves thus to have it done ; and all this is there eſpecially attributed to the Father.

Obſ. 3. That he is not only made to have the firſt hand in it, but an univerſal hand in it alſo. All things are of God, who hath reconciled us to himſelf : And all things in the buſineſs of Salvation and Reconciliation are from him : That as it is ſaid of Chriſt in the matter of Creation, That all things were made by him, and without him nothing was made, &c. John 1. 3. So Chriſt ſayes, That he can do nothing, but what the Father firſt doeth. John 5. 19.

So as we find, that all in the matter of Reconciliation is attributed both to Chriſt, and alſo to God the Father, which makes it indeed a great Myſtery, that all ſhould be attributed to both ; ſo that we are beholden to both for all.

Chriſt is ſaid to be all in all unto us, Col. 3. 11. and yet all that he is to us, he is to us of the Father. 1 Cor. 1. 30. But of him are ye in Chriſt Jeſus, who of God is made unto us wiſdom, and righteouſneſs, and ſanctification, and redemption :

As Firſt, All Bleſſings and Benefits we have by Chriſt are of the Father as the firſt donor and giver, though by Chriſt ; as Paul bleſſeth him for Bleſſing us with all Spiritual Bleſſings in Chriſt. Eph. 1. 3. Bleſſed be the God and Father of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, who hath bleſſed us with all ſpiritual bleſſings in heavenly places in Chriſt. Chriſt is indeed Wiſdom and Righteouſneſs, which contains all that our needs require. But who made him all theſe ? He is not any of theſe, not the leaſt of theſe, but as the Father hath made him unto us Wiſdom, &c. 1 Cor. 1. 30. Who is made to us of God, &c. So as all is to be attributed as much to him as to Chriſt.

Yea all we have, and all we are in Chriſt, is ſaid to be of him : Of him ye are in Chriſt Jeſus. In the ſame place, we are indeed in Chriſt, but yet of God in Chriſt. He gives all the being we have in Chriſt, all our ſubſiſtence in him, to which thoſe Bleſſings belong, that we are firſt in Chriſt, and then have all Bleſſings in him : He attributes all this to be of the Father.

Now how all this is to be attributed to both, St. Paul hath elſewhere taught us, uſing this very diſtinction, 1 Cor. 8. 6. The Father, of whom are all things, and we in him ; and one Lord Jeſus Chriſt, as Mediator, by whom are all things, and we by him. By and of puts the diſtinction, which we have obſerved.

Yea,

Book I.

Yea, and Thirdly, Jesus Christ as Mediator, is all and wholly of him the Father, and by his appointment. Whatsoever he is or hath as Mediator, is ordained to him by the Father : Therefore Christ is said to be his King ; Psal. 2. 6. Yet have I set my king upon my holy hill of Zion. And Christ is called his Servant too, Esa. 42. 1. Behold my servant whom I uphold, mine elect in whom my soul delighteth : I have put my Spirit upon him, he shall bring forth judgment to the Gentiles. And it is said also, that God the Father appointed him a Priest ; Heb. 3. 1, 2. Wherefore holy brethren, partakers of the heavenly calling, consider the Apostle and high priest of our profession, Christ Jesus ; Who was faithful to him that appointed him, as also Moses was faithful in all his house. And it was God the Father who raised him up as a Prophet, Deut. 18. 15. The Lord thy God will raise up unto thee a Prophet from the midst of thee, of thy brethren, like unto me ; unto him ye shall hearken. And therefore too Christ is stiled an Heir of his appointment ; Heb. 1. 2. Hath in these last days spoken unto us by his Son, whom he hath appointed heir of all things, by whom also he made the worlds.

Yea Fourthly, Whatever Christ did for us in doing or suffering, it was what his Father appointed him : All that he was to do, Luke 2. 49. and all he was to suffer, Acts 2. 23. it was his Fathers Cup, and he mingled it.

Yea Fifthly, All the Glory he hath as Mediator, the Father is said to give him : John 17. 22. And though it be no robbery for him to be equal with God ; yet that Great Name he hath, God is said to have given him. Phil. 2. 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11. Who being in the form of God, thought it not robbery to be equal with God : But made himself of no reputation, and took upon him the form of a servant, and was made in the likeness of men : And being found in fashion as a man, he humbled himself, and became obedient unto death, even the death of the cross. Wherefore God also hath highly exalted him, and given him a name which is above every name : That at the name of Jesus every knee should bowe, of things in heaven, and things in earth, and things under the earth ; And that every tongue should confess, that Jesus Christ is Lord, to the glory of God the Father.

And the reason of all this is, that which is given there, even the Glory of the Father. The end of Christs great Name, and all that Honour we are to attribute to him is, To the Glory of God the Father. Ver. 11. Though Christ hath a Name above every Name, which we are to magnifie and adore ; yet all this his Name is to the Glory of the Father, who hath the Revenue of all : And therefore when the Lord Jesus Christ gives up his dispensatory Kingdom to his Father as Mediator, God shall be all in all. 1 Cor. 15. 28. And when all things shall be subdued unto him, then shall the Son also himself be subject unto him that put all things under him, that God may be all in all. Why ? Because all was originally from him, therefore all shall end in him, and he shall be all in all.

CHAP.

Chap. 3.

CHAP. III.

What as to our Salvation was done by God the Father from all Eternity. The meaning of that Phraſe God was Reconciling us in Chriſt. That God took up a ſtrong Reſolution and Purpoſe to reconcile ſome of the Fallen Sons of Men to himſelf. His Motives were not any thing in us, but purely his Love, and his Delight in Mercy. His Love in thus deſigning Salvation to us magnified by ſeveral Conſiderations.

THESE things being premiſed, we come now to ſhew what God the Father hath done towards this buſineſs of Reconciliation, how far he hath advanced it, and ſet it forwards.

Now the main of his Work was tranſacted ſecretly from Everlaſting, as we have it here alſo expreſſed to us, 1 Cor. 5. 19. God was in Chriſt, he had ſaid in the former verſe, He hath (actually) reconciled (us) believers by Jeſus Chriſt, but yet leaſt they ſhould think that this was a buſineſs begun of late to be done by him, then when Chriſt dyed, and they were converted; He further ſaies, That he hath made it his main buſineſs from all Eternity, God was in Chriſt, reconciling the World.

And to this purpoſe the alteration of the Phraſe is obſervable, that ſpeaking of actual Reconciliation, as performed by Chriſt, and applyed to them who were now Believers, he ſaith, He hath reconciled us by Jeſus Chriſt, διὰ Ἰησοῦ χριστοῦ, but ſpeaking of this tranſaction from Everlaſting, he ſayes ἐν χριστῷ God was in Chriſt reconciling the World.

And it is the Obſervation of a great Divine *, though not upon this Text yet putting the difference between theſe two Phraſes, of what God is ſaid to do in Chriſt and by Chriſt, as in many places they are uſed; That when God is ſaid to reconcile in Chriſt, or the like, it implies and notes out thoſe immanent Acts of God in Chriſt. The preparation of all Mercies and Benefits we have by Chriſt, from him, and laying them up in him really, for us in Chriſt, as in our Head, in whom God lookt upon us, when we had no ſubſiſtence but in him; when God and he were alone plotting of all, framing of all that was after to be done by Chriſt for us, and applyed unto us: But the Particle, by whom, imports the actual performance of all this by Chriſt, and application of it to us, Eph. 1. 3, 4. Bleſſed be the God and Father of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, who hath bleſſed us with all ſpiritual bleſſings in heavenly places in Chriſt: ver. 4. According as he hath choſen us in him, before the foundation of the world, that we ſhould be holy, and without blame before him in love. We are ſaid to be bleſſed with all Spiritual Bleſſings in Chriſt, ſo that God was then a juſtifying us in him, a reconciling us in him.

* Zanchy.

And further to enlarge this Notion we may obſerve theſe Three Phraſes ſeverally uſed, in Chriſt, for Chriſt, and through Chriſt.

I. In Chriſt, as here and elſewhere.

II. For Chriſt, as to you it is given to ſuffer for Chriſt, Phil. 1. 29. For unto you it is given in the behalf of Chriſt, not only to believe on him, but alſo to ſuffer for his ſake.

Book I.

III. Through Christ, as I am able to do all things through Christ, Phil. 4. 13. I can do all things through Christ which strengthneth me.

1. When he sayes in Christ, he speaks of Christ as of a Common Head, whom God lookt at as such, when he endowed us with all Blessings in him, by way of a Covenant with him for us.

2. For Christ notes out Christ as the Meritorious Cause, for whose sake we obtain those Blessings, for he was to purchase them.

3. And the Third notes out Christ as the Efficient Cause, that dispenseth that Grace as a King to us.

Let us therefore first begin with whatGod the Father hath done who was the chiefest in that secret Transaction between him and Christ from Everlasting, which is the ground work of all in the Gospel, which is therefore said to have layn hid in God, Eph. 3. 9. And to make all Men see, what is the fellowship of the Mystery, which from the beginning of the World, hath been hid in God, who created all things by Jesus Christ.

And we will begin at that which was the Spring and first moving cause of all in him, and that is his will and good pleasure.

First, He took up a strong purpose and resolution to reconcile some of the Sons of Men to him, though they would or should turn Rebels against him, and this purpose began from him, and in him first: Hence the gathering together of all in one, That is the uniting and knitting his Church to himself in one head, who were scattered from him. The gaining and winning them in again, is said to be the Mystery of his Will, and attributed to his good pleasure, whereof he gives no reason, but a purpose taken up in himself, even according to his good pleasure which he hath purposed in himself, Eph. 1. 9, 10. Having made known unto us the mystery of his will, according to his good pleasure, which he hath purposed in himself: ver. 10. That in the dispensation of the fulness of times, he might gather together in one all things in Christ, both which are in heaven, and which are on earth, even in him: Which he hath purposed in himself, i. e. whereof there is no other Motive nor first Mover or Occasioner, but himself, and this is there attributed chiefly to the Father:

To say no more, This he resolved upon, and would have effected, and this with infinite delight in the project of it, so as he should be gladder to see this business effected, and brought about then any that ever he should set his hand unto, his Heart was more in it than in all things else; All things are of God, but this above all:

And it was a great matter that he should pitch so peremptorily and resolutely on this course rather than any other, for he might have took up other purposes enough suitable and advantagious to his ends, but this pleased him above all other, Col. 1. 19, 20. For it pleased the Father, that in him should all fulness dwell, ver. 20. And (having made peace through the blood of his cross) by him to reconcile all things unto himself, by him, I say, whether they be things in earth, or things in heaven. For these Enemies he could have destroyed, and have been glorified in their just destruction. He was able enough to bear the loss of Souls, What is it to him that the Nations perish? He should not have weakned himself awhit by cutting off all the Rebels, as Kings do, whose Glory consists in the multitude of their Subjects. Neither had he any need of Friends, he was happy enough afore they were, and could be as happy still without them: And if he would have Friends, had he not the Angels? that were constant Friends to him, to delight in. One would think he should have prized their Friendship more for the faithfulness of it; and if he had a mind to others, he could have created new ones. But out of these very Stones he would have a new Generation raised up, A Seed of Well-willers, or, a Generation of Children to Abraham: And yet as God offer'd to Moses he might have done in this our case, Numb. 14. 12. I will smite them with the pestilence, peſtilence, and diſinherit them, and will make of thee a greater nation, and mightier than they. God might have made the offer of all Greatneſs and Glory to Chriſt, and as for us, might have deſtroyed us one and all, and have packt us all to Hell for Rebels; He had Priſons enough to have held us, which Kings often want in a General Rebellion, yea, and he would have been glorified in that our juſt deſtruction alſo. There was therefore no neceſſity put him upon this reſolution, but his good pleaſure, which was in himſelf, which made him ſay within himſelf of the Sons of Men, as in alluſion to what is in Jer. 8. 4. Shall they fall and not ariſe, ſhall he turn away and not return? His mind lingred after them, and he is glorified more in the Services than the Sufferings of Men, and he had Angels enough already, thouſand thouſands, and ten thouſand times ten Thouſands, and he would have ſome Men that ſhould ſee his Glory, bleſs him, and be bleſt of him: He loves variety, to have two Witneſſes at leaſt, he creates two Worlds, Heaven and Earth, in them two ſeveral ſorts of reaſonable Creatures as Inhabitants, upon them he would ſhew two ſeveral wayes of Salvation, and all to ſhew his manifold Wiſdom, Eph 3. 8, 9, 10. Unto me who am leſs then the leaſt of all Saints, is this grace given, that I ſhould preach among the Gentiles the unſearchable riches of Chriſt; ver. 9. And to make all men ſee, what is the fellowſhip of the myſtery, which from the beginning of the world, hath been hid in God, who created all things by Jeſus Chriſt: ver. 10. To the intent that now the principalities and powers in heavenly places, might be known by the church the manifold wiſdom of God. And if you would further know, What ſhould be the reaſon of this ſtrange Affection in our God, Why? The Scripture gives it. Chap. 2.

Our God being Love, even Love it ſelf, 1 Joh. 4. 16. And we have known and believed the love that God hath to us. God is love; and he that dwelleth in love dwelleth in God, and God in him. Our God loving where he ſets his Love with an Infinite Love as himſelf is, which love of all things elſe in him he loves to ſhew the utmoſt of, and of all works, works of Love have the moſt delight in them, therefore Mercy is called his Delight, his Darling: Micah 7. 18. Who is a God like unto thee, that pardoneth iniquity, and paſſeth by the tranſgreſſion of the remnant of his heritage? he retaineth not his anger for ever, becauſe he delighteth in mercy. Our God thus being Low, and Mercy his Delight, he would gladly ſhew how well he could love Creatures, he was moſt glad of the greateſt opportunity to ſhew it, therefore he reſolves upon this courſe, to reconcile Enemies, whatſoever it ſhould coſt: And the more they ſhould coſt him, the gladder ſhould they be. The making of a Thouſand new Friends could not have expreſſed ſo much love as the reconciling one Enemy. To love and delight in Friends, who had never wronged him was too narrow, ſhallow, and ſlight a way; He had heights, depths, breadth of Love, Eph, 3. 18. May be able to comprehend with all ſaints, what is the breadth and length, and depth, and height: Which heights and depths of Love he would make known, and which nothing but the depths of our miſery could have drawn out.

And that this is the reaſon, ſee Rom. 5. 8, 10. But God commendeth his love towards us, in that while we were yet ſinners, Chriſt dyed for us, ver. 10. For if when we were enemies, we were reconciled to God by the death of his Son: much more, being reconciled, we ſhall be ſaved by his Life: God commends his Love towards us, that whilſt we were yet Enemies, he gave his Son for us, not to be born only, but to die: Both our being Sinners, and his giving his Son, commends, or ſets out his Love, and that he might commend it, he pitcheth on this courſe. And that this Love ſhould be pitched upon Men, not the Angels that fell: It yet further commends his Love. There were but Two ſorts of Sinners whoſe Sins could be taken away; and of the twain who would not have thought but the fallen Angels ſhould have been propounded firſt, and have paſſed more eaſily, they were fairer and better Creatures than we, and if he regarded Service, one of them was able to do him more than a Thouſand of us, when he had bought us, he muſt be at a great deal of more trouble to preſerve and tend us, than we were able ever to requite in Service and attendance upon him: He muſt allow us much of our time to ſleep, and eat, and to be idle in, to refreſh our Bodies, and tend us as you would tend a Child; rock us aſleep every Night, and make our Beds in Sickneſs, Pſal. 41. 3. The Lord will ſtrengthen him upon the bed of languiſhing: thou wilt make all his bed in his ſickneſs: And feed us himſelf in due ſeaſon: Whereas the Angels they could ſtand in his preſence Day and Night and not be weary: And beſides, the Nature of the Angels had been a fitter Match a great deal for his Son: They are Spirits, and ſo in a nearer aſſimilation to him. Who ever thought he ſhould cloſe to match ſo low as with us? All this makes for us ſtill the more love, for it was the more free: And the more unlikely it is that he could love ſuch as we, the more his Love is commended. The leſs we could do for him or for our ſelves, the more it would appear he did for us. He is Honoured more in our Dependance than our Service; He hath regard to the lowneſs of his Spouſe and Handmaids, and lets the Mighty go, Principalities and Powers: he loves ſtill to prefer the Younger, and make the Elder ſerve them, Rom. 9. The Angels are miniſtring Spirits for their good: Among Men, he culls out ſtill the Poor, the Fooliſh, not many Wiſe or Noble, and he makes as unlikely a choice amongſt his Creatures.

Chap. 4.

CHAP. IV.

That God in pursuance of his Gracious Design to save Sinners, exercised his Wisdom to contrive the fittest means of Accomplishing it. Though God might have pardoned Sin without satisfaction, yet he would not, and the Reasons of it.

AS Gods purpose was thus strongly bent upon the Salvation of Men, so his Wisdom and Council were exercised about the means whereby it might be effected, and it is a business that requires the depths of his Wisdom. We silly Men set upon many projects, which at first view delight and affect us; and we are hot upon them, which yet upon consultation we find not feasible, and so leave them, meeting with such difficulties in them, as we know not how to compass them: Though when the Heart is fully set upon any business, it will set Wit and Invention a work, to find out all means that Wit can reach to.

Now as Gods strong purpose and delights were in this great Work, so also his Depths of Wisdom were in it also. Therefore, Gods will is said to have Council joyned with it, to work all by Council, Eph. 1. 11. He works all by Council to effect and bring to pass what his Will hath pitched upon, and the stronger his Will is in a thing, the deeper are his Councils about it, and this business as he resolves to have it carried, will prove such as will draw out his depths of Wisdom.

And therefore as you have seen his Will thus strongly pitcht upon it, as his highest and deepest project to manifest the dearest Affection in him to the utmost, so you shall now see his Wisdom soar as high (indeed infinitely) out of our Sight, Thoughts, and Imaginations, to find out a correspondent means, not only to effect it, but in effecting it, to shew both Love and Wisdom, and give full satisfaction to his Justice, which was infinitely beyond the reach of any created Understanding to have found out.

There was one way indeed which was more obvious, and that was to pardon the Rebels, and make no more adoe of it; for he might if he had pleased have ran a way and course of meer Mercy not temper'd with Justice at all, he might have pardoned without satisfaction, I will not now dispute it; only this I will say for the confirmation of it, To punish Sin being an Act of his Will, as well as other Works of his ad extra, may therefore be suspended as he himself pleaseth. To hate Sin is his Nature, and that Sin deserves Death, is also the Natural and inseparable Property, Consequent and Demerit of it; but the expression of this hatred, and of what Sin deserves by actual punishment, is an Act of his Will, and so might be suspended.

But besides, That this way would not manifest such depths of Love, though thus to have pardoned one Man had shewn more Love than was shewn to all the Angels who never sinned: It also was not adequate and answerable to all those his Glorious Ends, and Purposes, and other Resolutions in this Plot, which he will be constant unto, and make to meet in it; (and it is the proper use of Wisdom to make all ends meet) and God will not break one Rule or Purpose he takes up; and he hath other projects afoot besides: For,

First, He meant to give a Law, whereof he will not have the least iota to perish or be in vain, Matth. 5. 18. For verily I say unto you, Till heaven and earth pass, one jot or one tittle shall in no wise pass from the law, till all be fulfilled. Which Law might both discover what was Sin, and what an heinous thing thing it was, and ſhew by a threatning the puniſhment which it naturally doth deſerve, and what the Sinner might expect in Juſtice from him, this was neceſſary; for vvhere there is no Lavv, there is no Sin, Rom. 5. 13. Sin is not imputed where there is no law: And othervviſe there ſhould have been no Sinner actually capable of puniſhment.

Secondly, Giving this Lavv, he takes upon him to be a Judge, and the Judge of all the World: For in the very making of the Lavv, he declares himſelf to be ſo.

Thirdly, If ſo then he is engaged upon many ſtrong Motives, to ſhevv his Juſtice againſt Sin in that puniſhment he threatned; Though ſtill in that he is Judge of all the World, and the Maker of the Lavv, he could if he pleaſed forbear to execute thoſe threatnings, (ſeeing a Note of irrevocation vvas not added to them;) for he that made the Lavv may repeal that part of it, yet moſt ſtrong Motives theſe are to execute them.

For is he not the Judge of all the World? And is it not a Righteous thing vvith God to render vengeance, 2 Theſs. 1. 5, 6. Which is a manifeſt token of the righteous judgment of God, that ye may be counted worthy of the kingdom of God, for which ye alſo ſuffer: ver. 6. Seeing it is a righteous thing with God to recompenſe tribulation to them that trouble you: And ſhall not the Judge of all the World do right, Gen. 18. And is he not therefore to ſet a Copy to all Judges elſe, being Judge of all the World: Primum in quolibet genere, eſt menſura reliquorum, and is not he an abomination to him that juſtifies the Unrighteous, and condemns the Innocent, Prov. 17. 15. Theſe may not diſpenſe vvith the Lavvs, becauſe they are but his Juſtices, and though he might diſpenſe being the Supreme Judge, yet if all the World be his Circuit, and he means to condemn the Angels by the Lavv, and ſhevv his Juſtice on them, hovv vvill he clearly overcome vvhen he judgeth them as it is in Rom. 3. 4. Stop their mouths, as it is at the 19. verſe, if he ſhevvs not his Juſtice againſt thoſe Sins he pardons. And though he might ſay to them, Pay vvhat you ovve, vvhat is that to you: Yet even the Men he pardons, and pardons to that end to ſhevv his Mercy vvould eſteem Sin leſs, and pardon leſs if it vvere procured and obtained lightly, and ſhould Sin vvhich is the greateſt inordinacy, and vvould not be brought in compaſs in his Government, vvhich doth order all things, be left to its extravagant courſe, and paſſed unregarded, and eſcaped as free as Holineſs.

And again are not all his Attributes, his Nature, his Juſtice, as vvell as Mercy? His Hatred of Sin, as vvell as the Love of his Creature, and is not that Nature of his pure Act, and therefore active, and therefore provokes all his Will to manifeſt theſe his Attributes upon all occaſions, doth not juſtice boyl vvithin him againſt Sin, as vvell as his Bovvels of Mercy earn tovvards the Sinner: Is not the Plot of Reconciliation his Maſter-piece, vvherein he means to bring all his Attributes upon the Stage; and ſhould his Juſtice, and this expreſſed by a Lavv keep in and ſit dovvn contented, vvithout ſhevving its ſelf? No, and therefore he reſolves to be Juſt, and have his Juſtice, and Lavv ſatisfied as vvell as to juſtifie the Sinner, Rom. 3. 26. To declare, I ſay, at this time his righteouſneſs: that he might be juſt, and the juſtifier of him which believeth in Jeſus. And as to run a courſe of meer rigorous Juſtice pleaſed him not; ſo likevviſe nor to ſtretch the pure abſolute prerogative of Mercy: Wherefore ſome of the Fathers, have after the manner of Men brought in Mercy and Juſtice here pleading; the project of Mercy vvas his delight, as Mercy is, Micah. 7. 18. And he had reſolved above all to ſhevv it; but then Juſtice alſo is his Scepter, vvhereby he is to Rule and Govern, and Judge the World; vvherefore his Wiſdom, as a middle Attribute ſteps in, and interpoſeth as a means of Mediation betvveen them both, and undertakes to compound the buſineſs, and to accommodate all, ſo, as both ſhall have their deſire and aims, their full demonſtration and accompliſhment.

CHAP. V.

To the effecting of all the Designs both of Justice and Mercy, it was necessary that a full and complete satisfaction should be made, which we being unable to pay, Divine Wisdom thought of another Person to undertake, and to do it for us. That Gods Justice is contented with this Commutation of the Person, since hereby that Attribute is more glorified, and all the ends of the Law answered, then if we the Offenders had in our own Persons suffered the due punishment of Sin.

THIS Accomplishment of all the designs both of Justice and Mercy must be by satisfaction, by full and adequate ransome, ἀντίλυτρον, 1 Tim. 2. 6. Who gave himself a ransom for all, to be testified in due time; which is redditio æquivalentis pro æquivalenti, which the Sinner of himself would never have been able to perform, there is no thinking of it, Rom. 5. 6, 7, 8. For when we were yet without strength, in due time Christ died for the ungodly. ver. 7. For scarcely for a righteous will one die: yet peradventure for a good man some would even dare to die ver. 8. But God commendeth his love towards us, in that while we were yet sinners, Christ died for us. We are said to be without strength, and it is there brought in, as the great demonstration of Christs love in dying for us, when we were yet without strength: And if nothing we are, much less any thing we have or can offer; the blood of Bulls and Goats are not able; It is not possible to take away Sin by it, Heb. 10. 4. For it is not possible that the blood of bulls and of goats, should take away sins: Add to them all the Creatures that are the appurtenances of Man which man hath to give, as Gold, Silver, pretious Stones, not the whole World of them would do: For nothing less Noble than Man can be a sufficient surety for Mans Life which Sin deprives us of. All such things are not worth a Soul, which is to be lost for sin, said he that paid for one, Matth. 16. 26. For what is a man profited, if he shall gain the whole World, and lose his own soul? or what shall a man give in exchange for his soul? And as it is in Micah 6. 7. Will the Lord be pleased with rivers of oyl, nay with thy first born of thy body for the sin of thy soul. There is no proportion, God would never have turned away so fair a Chapman, if his Justice could afford so cheap a commutation. And as not Rivers of Oyl, so nor Rivers of Tears, which (as all other actions that come from us) are defiled, and become but as puddle-water.

His Wisdom therefore thought of a Commutation, so as that that satisfaction should be performed by a surety in our stead, who might be a Mediator, and Umpire; and who might take our Sins upon himself, and upon whom God might lay the iniquity of us all, Isa. 53. 6. and exact the punishment as Junius reads it, that might become a suretie, Heb. 7. 21, 22. For those priests were made without an oath: but this with an oath, by him that said unto him, The Lord sware and will not repent, Thou art a priest for ever after the order of Melchisedec. vet. 22. By so much was Jesus made a surety of a better testament. That might make satisfaction, being made sin, 2 Cor. 5. 21. For he hath made him to be sin for us who knew no sin; that we might be made the righteousness of God in him. That being made of a woman might be under the Law, Gal. 4. 4. But when the fulness of time was come, God sent forth his Son made of a woman, made

And his Juſtice will be content to admit of ſuch a Commutation, and that ſuch a ſatisfaction ſhould be performed by a ſuretie in our ſtead: For when all Parties are ſatisfied, and no wrong is done to any, Juſtice may well be ſatisfied. For if the Parties undertaking it be willing, Volenti non fit injuria; and the great Undertaker having power over that thing which he offers to lay down for ſatisfaction, being Lord of it, no other one is wronged.

Neither is the Party to be ſatisfied wronged, if he that undertakes it be of ability fully to ſatisfie and to fulfil what he deſires, and if being the Law-giver he be willing to aſſent to this act of his, and to accept it: For, being Lord of his own Law, he may diſpenſe with the Letter of it, if ſo be thoſe Holy ends, which his Council had in making it, beaccompliſhed, and attained; and if the reaſon of the Law and Law-giver be ſatisfied, then is the Law. Now the ends and grounds of giving Gods Law were to declare and ſhew forth his Juſtice, and hatred againſt Sin where ever he found it. Now his Juſtice and hatred of Sin is as fully manifeſted when puniſhment is executed upon a Party, and aſſuming our ſins on himſelf, and undertaking to be a Surety, as if the Sinner himſelf were puniſht, if not more in that [he] doth but undertake it for another, and yet is not ſpared. As God is ſaid to hear our Prayers, and fulfil his promiſe; when he anſwers to the ground of our Prayers, though not in the thing: So are the cries of Sin, or Juſtice againſt the Sinner anſwered, and Gods threatenings fulfilled when another is puniſht, becauſe all the ends of the Lawgiver are fully accompliſht. It is true, the Tenor and Letter of the Law is diſpenſed with, but not the Debt, that is as fully exacted as ever; 'tis but a diſpenſation of the Partye obliged, not of the obligation it ſelf, or of the Debt, or of the reaſon why the Debt is exacted: It is not wholly ſecundum legem, nor yet contra, κατὰ νόμον ἀλλὰ κατὰ νόμε ἀλλὰ ὑπὲρ νόμον ἢ ὑπὲρ νόμε, 'Tis a ſaying no leſs ſolid than elegant, and therefore the more elegant, becauſe it was antiently uſed in another caſe. And although the Law doth not mention or name a Surety, and the Malefactors ſingle Bond be only mentioned therein, and the threatning directed againſt him, and his Name is only in the project, becauſe the Law in it ſelf ſuppoſeth as yet none elſe guilty, and can challenge none elſe: Yet if ſome other that is Lord of his own action, ſubject himſelf to the Lavv vvillingly, vvhich Will of his is a Lavv to him; and the Lavv-giver himſelf that is Lord of the Lavv accepts this, as ſeeing the ſame ends ſhall be ſatisfied, for vvhich he made the Lavv; in this caſe the Lavv takes hold of the Surety or Undertaker; and he may let the Malefactor go free.

And novv that his Wiſdom hath found a courſe and vvay of Mediation, betvveen his Juſtice and his Mercy; yet vvho is there in Heaven and Earth ſhould be a fit Mediator, both able and vvilling to undertake it, and faithful to perform it?

CHAP. VI.

The great Difficulty was to find out a Person of Strength equal to so high an Undertaking. Neither Angels nor Men could have found out, or presented a fit Person. God manifest in the Flesh for Redemption of Man, was a Mystery above all the Thoughts of Angels or Men; and was worthy only of Gods Wisdom to find out.

THE difficulty is still behind; a Mystery so great as would have nonplust Heaven and Earth, Angels and Men, Nodus Deo vindice dignus: So as if God had referred it to a Consultation of Men and Angels, and impannell'd all intelligible Natures upon this Grand Jury for to save Men, and offered but thus fairly; though none of you can do it, yet find you but out the way and Person, and I will set my power to the effecting of it, they would have returned in a verdict and Bill of ignoramus. After millions of years consultation their thoughts would not have presumed to have waded into this depth, so far as to think that Justice might dispense in the least measure with so Holy a Law, and admit a Commutation.

But impossible it was they should have thought of the Person that should give full satisfaction to his Justice, it passed all created Powers to perform it (as I shall shew, when I shall shew Christs ability to this work;) and as it passed their power to effect it, so their skill and reach. We who could never have found out a remedy for a cut finger, had not God prescribed and appointed one, could much less for this, it being a case of such difficulty. The Devils they could not imagine any way no more for us than for themselves; and therefore tempted Man, thinking him when he had sinned sure enough, and Hell Gates so strongly lockt, that no Art could find or make a Key to open them, or Power to break them open. Adam, poor Man, he trembled, and knew not which way to turn him, and thought God would have flown upon him presently; The good Angels they know it but by the Church, Eph. 3. 10. To the intent that now unto the principalities and powers in heavenly places, might be known by the church the manifold wisdom of God. In this streight God himself aforehand set his depths of Wisdom awork to find out one, in and by whom all things might be accommodated; and out of those Infinite depths found out and invented a way and means of effecting our Reconciliation, even in the incarnation and death of his own Son: Before the wound given he provided a Plaister: And to allude to Abrahams Speech, provided a Sacrifice unknown to us, and a sufficient remedy to salve all again; which otherwise had been past finding out.

For the assumption of our Nature into one Person with the Son of God, was a thing thought credible when revealed, because possible, yet hardly so conceived, even by Mary, when it was told her by the Angel, Luk. 1. 34. How can this thing be? saies she. There is nothing in all the Works of Nature to make a correspondent Example for it; yea Nature denyes such a Composition, to confound Heaven and Earth; all other Religions abhor it: It was the great stumbling-block of the Jews as they object it to him, John 10. 33. The Jews answered him, saying, For a good work we stone thee not; but for blasphemy, and because that thou, being a man, makest thy self God.

Book I.

But ſuppoſe that Myſtery had been made known, as ſome ſay it was, to the Angels, That Chriſt in our Nature ſhould be a Head, a Mediator of Union; The ſtomaking of which, ſay ſome, was their fall: Yet to have imagined him a Mediator of Reconciliation; and that he ſhould ſatisfie God for us, and be made Sin and a Curſe, they would have trembled to have thought it, if God had not firſt ſaid it. Nay when Chriſt told his Apoſtles what he was to ſuffer, their thoughts ſeemed to abhor it: Maſter ſpare thy ſelf, ſays Peter, Matth. 16. 21, 22 From that time forth began Jeſus to ſhew unto his diſciples, how that he muſt go unto Jeruſalem, and ſuffer many things of the elders, and chief prieſts, and ſcribes, and be killed, and be raiſed again the third day: ver. 22. Then Peter took him, and began to rebuke him, ſaying, Be it far from thee, Lord: this ſhall not be unto thee.

This Invention therefore Gods Wiſdom alone is to have the Glory of, and therefore it is called, The hidden wiſdom of God, as in a myſtery, 1 Cor. 2.7. But we ſpeak the wiſdom of God in a myſtery, even the hidden wiſdom which God ordained before the world unto our glory. The chief piece of which Myſtery is God manifeſt in the Fleſh, 1 Tim. 3. 16. And without controverſie, great is the myſtery of godlineſs: God was manifeſt in the fleſh, juſtified in the ſpirit, ſeen of angels, preached unto the Gentiles, believed on in the world, received up into glory: Which had God not revealed, none could ever have reacht; for it lay hid in God, Eph. 3. 9. And to make all men ſee what is the fellowſhip of the myſtery, which from the beginning of the world, hath been hid in God, who created all things by Jeſus Chriſt.

And which when revealed is without controverſie, ſo great a myſtery, 1 Tim. 3. 16. that the very Revelation of it is the greateſt Argument that can be brought to prove the Truth of our Religion; for all Men that underſtand it, muſt and will with amazement, acknowledge and confeſs, That ſo great a Plot could not have been hatcht in the Womb of any created Underſtanding. As Sin was our invention, Eccl. 7. 29. ſo Chriſt alone was Gods; and therefore Chriſt is called, The Wiſdom of God; which is not ſpoken of him Eſſentially as Second Perſon, but manifeſtativè, as Mediator; becauſe in him his Wiſdom to the utmoſt is made manifeſt.

CHAP. VII.

When Gods Wisdom had found out a fit Person, yet since this must be his only Son, here was a greater Difficulty for him to overcome, How to give him for us. The depths of Gods Love here, as of his Wisdom before, seen in not sparing his own Son, but exposing him to all the Rigours of Justice, which would not make the least abatements. It was of Free Choice that he made thus of his Son to be a Redeemer, to which he was not Obliged or Necessitated. He appointed his Son to Death for us, and laid his Injunction and Charge on him to perform this his Will.

NOW the Person is found out, and the way clear how it should be done, which Difficulty his Wildom hath expedited; yet the finding out the Person hath brought a greater with it; for if none but he that was his Son could do it, and though a Son, yet if he become a Surety, Justice will not have him spared. He that spared not his own Son, but delivered him up for us all, how shall he not with him also freely give us all things? Justice would abate nothing; without Blood there is no remission, and not the best Blood of his Body would serve, but of his Soul too: He must bear our Sins; Isa. 53. 5. But he was wounded for our transgressions, he was bruised for our iniquities: the chastisement of our peace was upon him, and with his stripes we are healed. He must pay God in the same coyn we should, and therefore must make his Soul an offering for sin; Isa. 53. 10, 11. Yet it pleased the Lord to bruise him, he hath put him to grief: when thou shalt make his soul an offering for sin, he shall see his seed, he shall prolong his days, and the pleasure of the Lord shall prosper in his hand. He shall see of the travel of his soul, and shall be satisfied: by his knowledge shall my righteous servant justifie many: for he shall bear their iniquities. And if he be made Sin, he must be made a Curse; and which is more than all this, God himself must be the Executioner, and his own Son the Person who suffers, and no Creature could strike stroke hard enough to make it satisfactory. Many a tender Mother hath not the heart to see her Child whipt, much less to whip it her self, although she knows it to be for its own profit and good, when it is in fault; but God, here in this case, must put his Son to Grief. Isa. 53. 10.

To find out the way to accompliſh it, and the Person by whom, drew out but the depths of his Wisdom; but now if the business go forward, it will draw out the depths of his Love. It cost him but his Thoughts afore, now it must cost him his Son, the Son of his Love. If it were to sacrifice Worlds for us, he could have easily created Millions, and destroyed them again for us; as he gave Nations for their sakes; Isa. 42. 1. but what? to sacrifice his only Son, here was the Difficulty.

And if this be the only way (God might have said) bury the invention of it in eternal silence; let it never be made mention of, or come to light, that ever there were such a thing; let it here dye, rather than Christ dye; and therefore though his heart was much set upon this project, yet this might likely have dash'd all, that nothing should serve but the Death of his Son:

Book I.

His Will might be more ſet upon this buſineſs of Reconciling us, than ever in any; but yet not upon ſuch terms as theſe: He might be glad to ſee it done, yet not to coſt ſo dear.

Behold therefore and wonder, and ſtand agaſt! He takes this way to chooſe, and chooſeth Chriſt to this Work; and thus to chooſe him was God the Fathers Work, and indeed a Work of Wonder. Iſa. 42. 1. Behold my ſervant, whom I uphold, my elect in whom my ſoul delights. And ſo Matth. 12. 18. Behold my ſervant whom I have choſen, in whom my ſoul is well pleaſed. That ever theſe two ſhould be put together in one ſentence: Scil. In whom my ſoul delights; with this, Behold my ſervant whom I have choſen to ſuch a harſh and difficult a buſineſs; yet that was the very Reaſon of this choice, therefore he chooſeth him, and therefore it is mentioned with it; for the more he loved him, the more Love he ſhould ſhow in giving him for us.

And obſerve it. It is made an Act of Choice in him, Full and Free: He had other wayes; at leaſt, he was no way neceſſitated unto this. He might have Deſtroyed us, and loſt nothing by us: He might have Pardoned us, and ſhown more Love therein than unto Millions of new created Friends. Yea, ſuppoſe a Creature could have ſatisfied, yet he takes this way to chooſe; it ſuits with the utmoſt extent of all his Ends. If the Sacrifices of Bulls and Goats could (as they could not) have taken away Sin, yet theſe thou wouldſt not, ſayes Chriſt, Heb. 10. 8. but a body haſt thou fitted me. He takes away the firſt, (ſayes the Apoſtle) Heb. 10. 9. that he may eſtabliſh the ſecond. That is, he layeth aſide all other means, (if other could be ſuppoſed) and chooſeth this, and however reſolves to take this courſe ex abundanti: And as in making his Promiſes, it is ſaid, Heb. 6. 17. God being willing more abundantly to ſhew to the heirs of ſalvation the immutability of his counſel, confirms them by an oath, which puts an end to all controverſies. Ver. 16. And becauſe he can ſware by no greater, he ſware by himſelf. So ſay I in this: What if God, ex abundanti, if upon ſuppoſition other means could have done it; yet out of his abundance of Love to us, whom he thinks he can never Love enough, nor to ſhew his Love, do too much for; what if he means to give his Son becauſe he cannot give a greater, and ſo at once to give the greateſt inſtance of his Love and Juſtice: Of his Love, in that he is not only content to commute the Puniſhment, but lay it on his Son. Of his Juſtice, in that he will not only puniſh Sin in us but even in him: He will not ſpare his own Son, Rom. 8. 32. and ſo he will make ſure work indeed, and put an end to all ſuppoſitions, fears, yea poſſibility of miſcarriage: A way whereby to accommodate all things ſo fully, as all conveniences requiſite to this Work ſhould concur, yea abound indeed in Chriſts alone Mediation; the demonſtration of which doth depend upon the ſecond part of the Story, when we hear what Chriſt did do to the effecting of it.

So as it is, and may be a great Queſtion, whether God hath ſhown more Love in pitching on this way, when by other means he might have ſaved us, if he would: Or if no other means could be had, and God was confined to this, yet that God would do ſo much rather than we ſhould not be ſaved. We could have had Pardon without Chriſt, yet to have not Pardon only but Chriſt alſo, this is infinitely more. The Pardon of Sin is a greater Gift than millions of Worlds, but to have Pardon through Chriſt, and Chriſt with the Pardon, though but of one Sin, is more than the Pardon of worlds of Sins.

And further conſider what he choſe Chriſt unto; He appointed him to death, as the Apoſtle ſayes of himſelf in another caſe: Therefore Peter, 1 Pet. 1, 18, 19. ſpeaking of our Redemption by his Blood; which (ſayes he) was verily fore-ordained before the foundation of the world: So as he choſe him not as a Head only, but as a Lamb to be ſlain. Rev. 13. 8. And all that dwell upon the earth ſhall worſhip him, whoſe names are not written in the book of life of the Lamb ſlain from the foundation of the world.

Chap. 7.

In the Diſcourſe of the Knowledge of God the Father, and his Son Jeſus Chriſt. In 2 Vol. of his Works.

I have elſewhere ſhewed how he was appointed to be an Heir; but there is ſome Dignity in that, and yet it was an Humiliation in him, to take that by Appointment which was his own by Natural Inheritance; but to be appointed to Death ſo long afore, and to ſuch a Death; and there was not a circumſtance in it but his Father appointed it, That it ſhould be thus ſhameful, thus painful, &c. This was Love indeed: Acts 2. 23. Him, being delivered by the determinate counſel of God, ye have crucified and ſlain. All was done by the determinate Counſel of God. He not only ſecretly determined it, but which is more, called him to it, moved him in it himſelf to undertake to do all this; for Calling and Election of us are two diſtinct things, and ſo in the deſigning of Chriſt to this Office they are to be conſidered apart.

Now the Father was not only the contriver and deſigner, but had the Heart (ſuch was his Love to us) to be himſelf the firſt propounder alſo of it to him, and withal to tell him he was to be the Executioner, or he ſhould not be ſatisfied by him for Sin. And who ſhould break this to Chriſt, and perſwade him, or bring him off to be willing to it? No Creature had intereſt enough in him, to be ſure. None of us did ever ſpeak to him to dye, nor no Creature mention'd it for us; for none durſt ſo much as to think it: Who did then? His Father owns it as his own work; Iſa. 42. I have called thee in righteouſneſs; and it was neceſſary he ſhould: Both becauſe, Firſt, Chriſt was not to begin to offer it of himſelf. That conceit of Bernards, bringing Chriſt in offering himſelf for poor Man, (as he doeth) ſaying, Take me, Sacrifice me for them, hath no ground; for, he doeth nothing but what his Father propounds: John 5. 19. 20. Then anſwered Jeſus, and ſaid unto them, Verily verily I ſay unto you, The Son can do nothing of himſelf, but what he ſeeth the Father do: for what things ſoever he doeth, theſe alſo doeth the Son likewiſe. For the Father loveth the Son, and ſheweth him all things that himſelf doeth: and he will ſhew him greater works than theſe, that ye may marvel. He is the Second Perſon, and all motions are to begin and come from the Father, who is the Firſt Perſon: And as to this particular, Chriſt ſpeaks in this wiſe; John 8. 42. I came from God, neither came I of my ſelf, but my Father ſent me.

Secondly, It being an Office, and an Office of Prieſthood, he was to be appointed to it. Heb. 5. 4, 5. No man takes this honour to himſelf, but he that was called of God, as was Aaron: So alſo Chriſt (though he had all Excellencies and Abilities in him) glorified not himſelf, to be made an high-prieſt for us.

God therefore called him to it; and this, as making it his own buſineſs, as he was pleaſed to account it, and as ſuch, commended it to Chriſt; and therefore Chriſt calls it his Fathers buſineſs, Luke 2. 49. And he ſaid unto them, How is it that ye ſought me? wiſt ye not that I muſt be about my Fathers buſineſs?

And now will you ſee how, and in what manner it was, he called him, and be amazed at it, to ſee how earneſt he is in it. See his own words, (as the Holy Ghoſt, the great Secretary of Heaven, who alone was by at that great Counſel, hath recorded it) Heb. 5. 5, 6. So alſo, Chriſt glorified not himſelf, to be made an high prieſt; but he that ſaid unto him, Thou art my Son, to day have I begotten thee. As he ſaith alſo in another place, Thou art a prieſt for ever after the order of Melchiſedec: Where we find the very words, he ſpake to him, recorded, He that ſaid to him, Thou art my Son, this day have I begotten thee; ſayes in another place, which records another paſſage then ſpoken, Thou art a prieſt for ever, after the order of Melchiſedec. The Holy Ghoſt brings in both theſe, and joyns them together, and brings that which was in the firſt as the Argument or Motive which God uſed to him to perſwade him, when he moved him to it: He that ſaid, Thou art my Son; ſayes, Thou art a Prieſt alſo, to ſhew the ground of Authority which he

urgeth in it : He that was his Father, and ſo had power to appoint his Son his Calling, (as other Parents have) appointed him as his begotten Son thus to be a Prieſt : And therefore he tells him in the firſt Speech ; That he is his Son, and he begat him ; and therewithal woes him, that as he was his Son, and he his Father ; and puts him in mind of all that mutual Love which was between them upon ſo high a relation ; and ſo much the higher, by how much the thing communicated was greater, in that he was God by his begetting him ; that therefore and thereupon he would take on him this ſo hard and harſh an undertaking. He calls him indeed, and ſpeaks (as if he meant not to be denyed) in the higheſt Language of a Father ; and uſeth his whole intereſt in that ; mentions the deepeſt obligation ; and he notes out the time, it was on his Birth-day ; This day have I begotten thee : As Parents often dedicate their Children, when firſt born to ſuch and ſuch a Calling, as Hannah did Samuel to the Prieſthood, ſo doth God his Son : Yea, he is yet more earneſt, he laid his expreſs command on him, John 10. 18. though the other mentions the moſt commanding argument and relation of all other, viz. As he was his Son. All Obedience as due on Chriſts ſide, and Authority on his Fathers, are ſpoken in ſuch a Word. Yea, and yet to ſhew more vehemency and earneſtneſs, he adds an Oath to it, Heb. 7. 21. He ſwore he ſhould be a Prieſt, and vvhen he hath done, records it. It is written of me, and that ἐν κεφαλίδι τῦ βιβλίυ, in the firſt Page, or beginning of the Book of his Decrees : Yea, and puts his Seal to it, Him hath the Father ſealed, John 6. 27. By all vvhich he precludes him from a refuſal, to prevent all ſuppoſition of denyal.

God the Father you ſee, hath done all that lyes in him, and yet no more than vvas neceſſarily required to this Work, as vvas in part ſaid before, and may be further obſerved out of the 10th Verſe of the 10th Chapter of the Hebrews ; vvherein he ſayes, We are ſanctified through his will, through the offering of the body of Chriſt ; having reference to that his Will of calling him, before expreſt in that 5th Chapter, vvithout vvhich Chriſts offering had not been ſatisfactory, or of force to ſanctifie us.

CHAP. VIII.

Christs Acceptance of the Terms which God the Father propounded to him for Mans Redemption. That his willingness in the undertaking proceeded not only from the Love he had for us, but from that which he did bear unto his Father, and his desire to Obey him, and to perform his Will. That the Elect Redeemed by Christ were first God the Fathers, and by him given in Trust and Charge to Christ to Save them.

NOW the next thing to be considered, is, how this motion takes with Christs Heart, which his Father makes, and what he sayes to it; how he answers it again, and how willingly. And this is as necessary as the former; for besides that it could not be forced on him: For John 5. 26. The Father hath given him to have life in himself, and so to have power over his life. John 10. 18. I have power over my life, and none can take it from me: Besides that, if it came not of him freely, it had not been satisfactory: For Satisfactio est redditio voluntaria, it must be a voluntary payment; and as our Disobedience was free, so must his Satisfaction be. Though he had at last yielded, yet if he sticks at it, we are undone; if he makes but an objection. And is it not infinite Love he should not? being he was the Party to undergo so much debasement. How did the eldest Sons stomach rise, when but the fat Calf was killed for the Prodigal? But the eldest, only begotten Son of God, must sacrifice himself for Enemies, (not the sacrificing of Worlds would serve, whereof he could have created enough) and yet not a thought did arise contrary to his Fathers Will; so his own words, in answer to the former call of his Father, do shew, Lo, I come to do thy will oh God. Heb. 10. 7. The Psalmist, from whence the words are borrowed, hath it, I delight to do thy will: Psal. 40. 8. Lo I come, (sayes Christ) I am as ready, as forward oh God, as thou to have me; not willing only but glad, I delight to do thy will. As the Sun rejoyceth to run his race, so the Sun of Righteousness to run his; for he was anointed with the oyl of gladness above his fellows. Psal. 40. 7. He was as glad to do this Work, as ever he was to eat his Meat; John 4. 34. Jesus saith unto them, My meat is to do the will of him that sent me, and to finish his work: With desire (saith he) have I desired it. Luke 22. 15. And he said unto them, With desire I have desired to eat this passover with you before I suffer. He longed as much, and was as much pained, as ever Woman with Child longed to be delivered, till this Work was accomplisht. Luke 12. 50. But I have a baptism to be baptized with, and how am I straitned till it be accomplished?

It was well for us that his Father struck thus strongly in: For take the Business in it self, you know how unwelcome it must needs be to Christ: Father, if it be possible, (sayes he) let it pass; yet becaus 'twas his Fathers Will, he submits, Not my will, but thine be done. Mat. 26. 39. As it was his Fathers Will he had no reluctancy, neither would simply all our cries or mediation have ever moved him, no more than Straws can move a Mountain, but that it was his Fathers Will, it was enough. For besides that Reason for it, John 10. 30. I and my Father are one, (saith he) and so have one Will and agree in one, there is another thing in it most prevalent, seeing that his Father intreats him thus to do it. The Father resolves to hear him him in all things; and ſhould not he then hearken to his Father, eſpecially when his Requeſt is made upon his Birth-day, (This day have I begotten thee) when all Requeſts are rendered more eaſie and facile to be granted; as Herod on his, would give to the half of his Kingdom: What, and as he was his Father and he his Son, [Thou art my Son] this overcame him. John 10. 17, 18. Though he had life in his own hand, yet (ſayes he) I lay it down becauſe my Father loves me. Surely his Father being ſo earneſt in it, he would not deny him; eſpecially when he added a command to it. This is the Reaſon he likewiſe gives, John 10. 18, 19. I have power to lay down my life, and this command I have received of my Father. It had ſtuck with him from the firſt, and he remembered it ſtill. His Father had Power (as other Fathers have to diſpoſe of the calling of their Sons) to diſpoſe of him; and though he was ſo great a Son, equal to ſo great a Father, yet being a Son he is not exempted from Obedience. Phil. 2. 8. And being found in faſhion as a man, he humbled himſelf, and became obedient unto death, even the death of the croſs. Heb. 5. 7, 8. Who in the days of his fleſh, when he had offered up prayers and ſupplications, with ſtrong crying and tears, unto him that was able to ſave him from death, and was heard, in that he feared; Though he were a Son, yet learned he obedience, by the things which he ſuffered: And when his Father ſhall add an Oath to it alſo, (that is an end of all controverſies between man and man, Heb. 6. 8. much more between the Father and Son,) and laſt of all ſets his Seal to it. It muſt ſtand good, for his Seal ſtands ſure, 2 Tim. 2. 19. there is no breaking of it, and therefore all theſe made Chriſt fully willing.

And this is therefore to be in a more eſpecial manner taken notice of; that we may conſider for whoſe ſake principally Chriſt did dye, and undertake it, and thus ſee whom ſo much we are beholden to. Though Chriſt did it out of Love to us, yet chiefly for his Fathers Entreaty and Command, and out of Love to him: So Chriſt ſayes, John 14. 31. That the world may know that I love the Father, and that as he gave commandment, ſo I do. He ſpake this when he was to go to ſuffer, (For ſaith he) Ariſe, let us go hence.

In the ſixth place, as his Father recommended the Buſineſs to him, ſo alſo he gave eſpecial recommendation of the Perſons for whom he would have all this done; for he gave thoſe of the Sons of Men unto Chriſt, whom he would have Reconciled, and this with a charge to bring them to Salvation.

Hence Chriſt when he was to offer up himſelf, he commits and commends them at his Death again to his Father, and to his Love, upon this great ground and motive, that he himſelf gave them firſt to him; alledging that he himſelf came to have a ſhare in them, by his gift and commendation; John 17. 6. Thine they were, and thou gaveſt them me. A ſtrange gift it vvas vvhich he muſt yet pay for, and muſt coſt more than they vvere worth, and yet he takes them as a gift and favour from his Father; which alſo when he had bought, he likewiſe begged at his Fathers hands, in John 17. 20, 21, 24.

And obſerve, that they were firſt his Fathers; firſt thine and then mine by thy gift; and this was not a late or new acquired propriety of Gods in them, but an antient one, which Chriſt puts him in mind of, thine they were: So that as the Father gave him his Work he was to do, Verſe 4. ſo he gave to him the Perſons for whom he ſhould do it; Ver. 6. ſo as both things and perſons; All things whatſoever thou haſt given me, are of thee: Ver. 7. As he doeth nothing of himſelf, but what he ſees the Father do; ſo as Mediator (and though Mediator) he ſaves not a Man but whom his Father did give him, nor puts a Name in more than were in his Fathers Bill. John 6. 37, 38. I came not to do mine own will, but the will of him that ſent me: And this is ſpoken in relation, not to the Buſineſs only he was to do, but of the Perſons alſo that were to be Reconciled: For it follows, Verſe 39. This is his will, that of all which he hath given me, I ſhould loſe none: And they are not ſaid to be then given to Chriſt only when they are called and begin to believe, but before, even from everlaſting; (of which tranſaction we now ſpeak) ſpeak) for John 6. 37. All the Father giveth me, ſhall come to me; therefore they are not then ſaid firſt to be given when they came but before Chap. 8.

And hence by reaſon of his Fathers giving of them to him, he calls them his Sheep, and that before they are called, which as yet were not of the fold, but which were yet to bring in: John 10 16. And other ſheep I have which are not of this fold: them alſo I muſt bring, and they ſhall hear my voice; and there ſhall be one fold, and one ſhepherd. Yea, and he calls himſelf ſuch a Shepherd, whoſe own the Sheep are; John 16. 2, 3, 4. They ſhall put you out of the ſynagogues: yea, the time cometh, that whoſoever killeth you will think that he doeth God ſervice. And theſe things will they do unto you, becauſe they have not known the Father, nor me. But theſe things have I told you, that when the time ſhall come, ye may remember that I told you of them. And theſe things I ſaid not unto you at the beginning, becauſe I was with you. Ver. 11, 12. Of judgment, becauſe the prince of this world is judged. I have yet many things to ſay unto you, but ye cannot bear them now. He was owner of them (as all Shepherds are not) and delighteth to uſe a phraſe of propriety. His own Sheep they are; how his own? but by Gift from his Father, and by ſpecial Love and Care of his own, and their Names he knows. Joqn 10. 14. I am the good ſhepherd, and know my ſheep, and am known of mine. As God by Name is ſaid to know who are his; and therefore their Names are ſaid to be written in the Lambs Book as well as in his Fathers, Rev. 13. 18. Here is wiſdom. Let him that hath underſtanding count the number of the beaſt; for it is the number of a man; and his number is ſix hundred threeſcore and ſix; yea, they are written in his Heart: And as the High Prieſt had the Names of all the Tribes written on his Breaſt-plate, ſo had Chriſt, the Names of all his written in his Heart, by a Pen of a Adamant, by the Will of his Father, written with ever-living and everlaſting Love; ſo as the Letters can never be worn out.

And as he gave them to be his, ſo alſo with a ſpecial charge to bring them to Salvation, to loſe not one of his tale and number. John 6. 38, 39. This is my Fathers will, who ſent me, (ſayes Chriſt) for which I came down from heaven, that of all that he hath given me, I ſhould loſe nothing. As Laban required his tale of Jacob, ſo doth God of Chriſt. When he ſent him he gave him that Charge, This is the will of him that ſent me. I come with this Errand, Charge and Meſſage, which therefore Chriſt had ſtill in his eye; yea and looks at it, as a Duty enjoyned him, Them I muſt bring, ſayes he; John 10. 16. which hath relation to that Command laid on him.

And as Judah became a Surety to Jacob his Father for his younger Brother Benjamin, to bring him ſafe to him out of Egypt, Gen. 43. 9. I will be a ſurety for him, and if I bring him not unto thee and ſet him not before thee, let me bear the blame for ever, ſo did Chriſt for his younger Brethren, whom God, through him as their Captain and chief Leader, would bring to Glory: Heb. 2. 10, 11. For it became him, for whom are all things, and by whom are all things, in bringing many ſons unto glory, to make the captain of their ſalvation perfect through ſufferings. For both he that ſanctifieth, and they who are ſanctified, are all of one: for which cauſe he is not aſhamed to call them brethren. Who therefore had the charge of conducting them, and to that end he took Fleſh, and in regard to it, gives an account to his Father of them; Behold I and the children which God hath given me. And you may obſerve how careful he was in this his account, and how punctual in it: John 17. 12. Thoſe thou gaveſt me I have kept, and none of them is loſt, but the ſon of perdition. He is exact in his account, as appears in that he gives a Reaſon for him that was loſt, that he was a Son of Perdition, and ſo excuſeth it; and to this end God alſo gave him, as he was Mediator, power over all Fleſh, that he might be enabled to give Eternal Life to thoſe God gave him. John 17. 3. And this is life eternal, that they might know thee the only true God, and Jeſus Chriſt whom thou haſt ſent.

CHAP. IX.

That upon Christs Accepting this Agreement, God the Father to Reward him, engages to bestow all the Blessings which he should Purchase to those Redeemed by him. That all these Blessings of Grace, and Eternal Life, were promised to us in Christ from all Eternity.

CHRIST thus willingly undertaking to dye, and to fulfil his Fathers Will, his Father to gratifie him enters into a Covenant with him, and binds himself to him to bestow the worth and value of all his Obedience in all Spiritual Blessings (both of Grace and Glory, which that his Death should purchase) to those whom he had given him, and that he and his Children should have it out in everlasting revenues of Grace and Glory. As Christ undertook to God, so God undertakes to Christ again, to justifie, adopt and forgive, sanctifie and glorifie those he gives him. All the Blessings his Love intended, Christ was to purchase them; and all the Blessings Christs Death did purchase, he promiseth Christ to bestow on those whom he purchased them for, so as his labour should not be in vain.

This you may observe out of many places; as in general, Isa. 53. 10, 11, 12. Yet it pleased the Lord to bruise him, he hath put him to grief: when thou shalt make his soul an offering for sin, he shall see his seed, he shall prolong his days, and the pleasure of the Lord shall prosper in his hand. He shall see of the travel of his soul, and shall be satisfied, by his knowledge shall my righteous servant justifie many: for he shall bear their iniquities. Therefore will I divide him a portion with the great, and he shall divide the spoil with the strong: because he hath poured out his soul unto death: and he was numbred with the transgressours, and he bare the sin of many, and made intercession for the transgressours, where God makes a promise unto Christ that he should see his seed, and see the travel of his soul, and should be satisfied; for my righteous servant shall justifie many, and this because he underwent so much Sorrow and Grief so willingly, as it is in the former part of the Chapter, and the joy of this was it, that made him undergo it so willingly; Heb. 12. 2. Looking unto Jesus the author and finisher of our faith; who for the joy that was set before him, endured the cross, despising the shame, and is set down at the right hand of the throne of God: And that his joy was this, That he should prolong his days, and though he dyed in the travel, yet should see the travel of his Soul. As though a Woman be in great pains, yet her joy is, that a Man-child is brought forth into the World; and so it was with Christ, his joy is, that many Children should be brought to Glory, and by this he should be satisfied; namely, That many should be justified by him, as it follows there, (for nothing else will satisfie Christ) and that he should divide the spoil with the strong; because he poured out his soul to death: Ver. 12. That is, he triumphed over Hell and Death, and by the Conquest spoiled Principalities and Powers, and obtained Heaven and Everlasting Righteousness, by which himself is not of himself made the richer; God therefore allowes him to divide it, and give it away to others. And God considered also, how that in this Work he was his Servant, My righteous servant (sayes he) shall justifie many. He was his Servant, and did his Business in it, and should he have no Wages, nor Rewards? Yes he should, and the only Reward he seeks for, is the Salvation and Justification of his Elect, and of those whom God hath given him: And therefore we find this very Covenant bargain-wise struck up; and by way of a most elegant Dialogue expressed to us Isa. 49.

which Chapter is, as I may call it, the Draught of the Covenant, or Deed of Gift, betwixt Chriſt and his Father for us; wherein Chriſt firſt begins, and ſhews his Commiſſion as the ground of the Treaty between them; intimating unto his Father, that he had called him to this great Work, Ver. 1. Liſten, O iſles, unto me, and hearken ye people from far, The Lord hath called me from the womb, from the bowels of my mother hath he made mention of my name: And fitted him for it, Ver. 2. And he hath made my mouth like a ſharp ſword, in the ſhadow of his hand hath he hid me, and made me a poliſhed ſhaft, in his quiver hath he hid me. He therefore expects what Fruit and Reward he ſhould have of all his Sufferings. Chap. 9.

His Father offers (as it were) low at firſt, and mentioneth but Iſrael only as his Portion; Thou art my ſervant, oh Iſrael, in whom I will be glorified. Ver. 3. Then he as thinking them too ſmall an Inheritance, too ſmall a Purchaſe for that great Price, foreſeeing the hardneſs of their Hearts, and how few of them would come in, not worth his coming into the World for; ſo that if the gleanings of them were all, he ſayes, He ſhould labour in vain, and ſpend his ſtrength for nought: Ver. 4. Though however he ſatisfies himſelf with this, My work is with thee, O Lord, &c. Namely, that his main end of undertaking it was for his Fathers ſake, and in Obedience unto him.

God therefore anſwers him again, and enlargeth and ſtretcheth his Covenant further with him; (ſayes he) It is a light thing that thou ſhouldſt be my ſervant, to raiſe up the tribes of Iſrael, &c. I will give thee for a light to the Gentiles, that thou mayeſt be my ſalvation to the ends of the earth, Ver. 6. And Ver. 8. I will give thee for a covenant to the people, &c. God you ſee makes this Covenant with him, to ſave both Jewes and Gentiles, as the Reward of his Death.

And this Compact you have alſo expreſt; Pſal. 2. 7, 8. where after he had called him to this Office, (which there he calls the Decree, I will declare the decree, Thou art my ſon, this day have I begotten thee) he ſubjoyns this Covenant made upon it, Ask of me and I ſhall give thee the heathen for thine inheritance, and the uttermoſt parts of the earth for thy poſſeſſion. And this was ſhadowed out by that famous Covenant made with David for his Seed, for an Eternal Kingdom; Pſal. 89. 4, 5. Thy ſeed will I eſtabliſh for ever, and build up thy throne to all generations. Selah. And the heavens ſhall praiſe thy wonders, O Lord: thy faithfulneſs alſo in the congregation of the ſaints: And Ver. 28, 29. My mercy will I keep for him for evermore, and my covenant ſhall ſtand faſt with him. His ſeed alſo will I make to endure for ever, and his throne as the days of heaven: Which Covenant was made with David, as a Type of Chriſt, and is to be meant as ſpoken of Chriſt; and that Covenant too made by God with him for his Spiritual Seed. That Covenant is called the ſure Mercies of David, and is applyed to Chriſt as that Spiritual David; Acts 13. 34, 35, 36, 37. And as concerning that he raiſed him up from the dead, now no more to return to corruption, he ſaid on this wiſe, I will give you the ſure mercies of David. Wherefore he ſaith alſo in another pſalm, Thou ſhalt not ſuffer thine holy One to ſee corruption. For David after he had ſerved his own generation by the will of God, fell on ſleep, and was laid unto his fathers, and ſaw corruption: But he whom God raiſed again, ſaw no corruption: Who therefore is called David, as here and elſewhere; and that Oath God made to David, ſhewed the everlaſting Oath and Covenant made to Chriſt for his Seed. Pſal. 132. 10, 11. For thy ſervant Davids ſake, turn not away the face of thine anointed. The Lord hath ſworn in truth unto David, he will not turn from it, Of the fruit of thy body will I ſet upon thy throne.

And hence further to confirm this, we find Titus 1. 2. That eternal life is promiſed afore the world began; which is to be underſtood in relation to this Covenant. A Promiſe then was made; that is, an expreſſion of an engagement, which is more than a Purpoſe, for a Promiſe is an expreſſion of a Purpoſe; and to whom can this be underſtood to be made ſo long afore, but to our Head Chriſt, and we were then lookt at by God, only as in him; to whom therefore for us he promiſed to give Eternal Life, as the Fruit of his Death. This very Covenant therefore, that God ſtruck with Chriſt for us, this was the Promiſe meant; which was, That as he ſhould dye, ſo he would as certainly beſtow the Fruit and Revenue of his Death in Glory on thoſe he gave to him.

Book I.

So as though God had never expreſſed any Promiſe unto us, yet having made it to Chriſt for us, he would have performed it; therefore he adds, God that cannot lye hath made this Promiſe; and further ſayes, That as before all Worlds he made this Promiſe and Covenant with Chriſt, ſo in due time he hath further manifeſted this his Word by Preaching, &c. All the Promiſes that now are revealed, are but the manifeſtation of that grand Promiſe; but Copies as it were of that which was made to Chriſt, in whoſe Breaſt the Original of our Records are kept, and the application of thoſe Promiſes to us, is but the writing out the Counter-pane of what was done in Heaven. As all Promiſes are made in him, ſo all Promiſes were firſt made to him, and to us as one with him: Therefore ſayes the Apoſtle, Not to ſeeds as of many, but to ſeed, as of one which is Chriſt; Gal. 2. 16. who in our Name, and for us took a Deed of Gift from God the Father, for all Bleſſings we are to enjoy, before the World was: And therefore alſo 2 Tim. 1. 9. Who hath ſaved us, and called us with an holy calling, not according to our works, but according to his own purpoſe and grace which was given us in Chriſt Jeſus, before the world began. There is Grace (ſpoken of) as given us in Chriſt ere the World began; which place explains the former; for as the former ſayes it was promiſed, ſo this, that Grace was given us, and as then promiſed to Chriſt for us, ſo then alſo given us in Chriſt, God looking on us as one with Chriſt: Which Promiſe is made upon that his Promiſe to his Father, To give himſelf for us. The ſumme of all is; His Father promiſeth to him to give all Spiritual Bleſſings in him, and then makes a Deed of Gift to him for our good and uſe; even as Goods may be given to, and by a Feoffe in truſt for one that is yet not born. And ſo our Life is ſaid to be hid with Chriſt in God; and ſo it was from everlaſting there laid up, by God with Chriſt.

And hence alſo we find that all Bleſſings which God in time beſtows, are ſaid to be given in Chriſt, ere they are actually to us. So Eph. 1. 3. God hath bleſſed us with all ſpiritual bleſſings in Chriſt. So his Purpoſe of ſaving us, is ſaid to be purpoſed in Jeſus Chriſt: Eph. 3. 10, 11. To the intent that now unto the principalities and powers in heavenly places, might be known by the church the manifold wiſdom of God, according to the eternal purpoſe which he purpoſed in Chriſt Jeſus our Lord: So to be Reconciled in Chriſt here in the Text: So ſpeaking of our Redemption, he ſayes, which is in Chriſt Jeſus. Rom. 3. 24. Being juſtified freely by his grace, through the redemption that is in Jeſus Chriſt. So all Grace is ſaid to be given in Chriſt, 2 Tim. 1. 9. before the World was. So 2 Tim. 1. 1. Paul an apoſtle of Jeſus Chriſt by the will of God, according to the promiſe of life, which is in Chriſt Jeſus. The Promiſe of Life is ſaid to be in Jeſus Chriſt: Now the Phraſe notes out a tranſaction, an endowment of all theſe on us, not firſt immediately in our ſelves, but in Chriſt for us, and on us in him.

Hence likewiſe in Scripture we read of Promiſes, not only Conditional, That he that believes and repents ſhall be ſaved; but alſo Abſolute; as that in Jeremiah, This is my covenant to give them a new heart, and a new ſpirit, and they ſhall walk in my commandments, Jer. 31. 33. wherein he undertakes to fulfil the Conditions themſelves, and that Covenant muſt needs be made with Chriſt firſt and mediately for us, (and he only knows for whom it is made) even for thoſe his Father gave him.

CHAP.

CHAP. X.

What is the Reaſon that though we receive all theſe Bleſſings by Chriſt, and on the account of his Merits, yet they are ſaid to be given to us of pure Grace.

AND upon this Covenant made with Chriſt, and Compact between God and him for us, comes it, That all things we have by Chriſt, though purchaſed by him, are yet ſaid to be by Grace as well as by Chriſts Merits, becauſe they are beſtowed by a Compact with Chriſt; by vertue of which Compact his Merits are accepted for us: So that though Chriſt layed down a Price worth all the Grace and Glory we ſhall have, yet that it ſhould be accepted for us, and all that Grace beſtowed on us, comes from this Compact and Covenant made by God with Chriſt, to accept it for us; and the acceptation of it for us, depends as much on that Covenant made with Chriſt as on his Merits: Therefore Heb. 10. 10. our Sanctification and Salvation is aſcribed as much to Gods Will and Covenant with Chriſt, (of which he ſpake Ver. 7.) as to Chriſts offering himſelf; for he ſayes, By which will we are ſanctified, through the offering of the body of Chriſt: And therefore, as it is ſaid that Chriſt dyed, ſo alſo it is God that juſtifies: Rom. 8. 33. Who ſhall lay any thing to the charge of Gods elect? It is God that juſtifieth: Juſtifies freely by his Grace: Rom. 3. 24. Being juſtified freely by his grace, through the redemption that is in Jeſus Chriſt. Though Chriſt hath laid down a ſufficient Price, and equal to the guilt of our Sins, yet that God juſtifies us for it, is an Act of Grace: Why, becauſe the acceptation of it for us was out of Covenant; and therefore our Divines ſay againſt the Jeſuits, that his Merits are Merits ex Compacto, and not which abſolutely could oblige God to us: Though they be equal to our demerits by Sin, yet it is only that relation they had to this Covenant made with Chriſt, which gave acceptation to them for us.

And the Reaſon is; becauſe to ſatisfie for another, eſpecially in Corporal Puniſhments, requires the compact and willingneſs of the Party to be ſatisfied, to accept it for him that ſhould elſe undergo it. Let the Satisfaction be never ſo equivalent to the Wrong, yet without a Covenant of the Party to be ſatisfied, it may be refuſed: Therefore Umpires uſe to bind the Parties in Bond to ſtand to their Word; Quando aliud offertur quam eſt in obligatione, ſatisfactio eſt recuſabilis, ſay the School-men. So though Ahab offered Naboth as good a Vineyard as his own, yet he might refuſe it, as he did. This Covenant therefore which God made with Chriſt, to beſtow all the Merits of his Obedience on us, which he called him unto, is the main foundation of all our Happineſs. As it obliged and engaged God firmly to us in Chriſt, ſo it makes all that Chriſt purchaſed to be of Grace. Though he paid an equivalent Price to what we ſhould have done, and much more, yet it is accepted for us out of a Covenant of Grace: And therefore in Rom. 5. 17. though the Apoſtle ſhews and proves, that there is more Merit in Chriſts Obedience to juſtifie, than in Adams Sin to condemn; yet the imputing of it to us, he calls aboundance of Grace, and the gift of Righteouſneſs. Though it was an abounding Righteouſneſs, yet there was an abounding of Grace to accept it for us, and it is derived by way of Gift.

And the ground of all is, becauſe of this Covenant made by God with Chriſt for us, upon which the acceptation of all depends.

CHAP. XI.

That upon the concluſion of this Agreement or Covenant of Redemption, there was the greateſt Joy in Heaven. The Divine Perſons exulting in the delightful Thoughts, that ſo many wretched Loſt Creatures ſhould be effectually Saved.

AND now our Reconciliation being brought to this bleſſed iſſue by God the Father and his Son, their greateſt Delights have been taken up with it, ever ſince; ſo as never in like manner with any thing elſe. There was never ſuch Joy in Heaven, as upon this happy Concluſion and Agreement. The whole Trinity rejoyced in it, (which is the laſt thing, and the Coronis of this Diſcourſe) they not only never repented of what they had reſolved upon, he ſwore and would not repent; Heb. 7. 21. But further, their chiefeſt delights were taken up with this, more than in all their Works, ad extra. Gods Heart was never taken ſo much with any thing he was able to effect; ſo as the thoughts of this Buſineſs, ever ſince it was thus reſolved on, became matter of greateſt delight unto them.

This you may ſee, Prov. 8. 30, 31. Then I was by him, as one brought up with him: and I was daily his delight, rejoycing always before him: Rejoycing in the habitable part of his earth, and my delights were with the ſons of men. Where you have that curious Queſtion in part reſolved; What God did before the World was made? How that Eternity was run out, and what the thoughts and delights of the great God moſt ran on? You have it reſolved by one that knew his Mind, and was of his Councel, the Mighty Coun ellor, as being the Wiſdom of his Father, as he is there ſtiled, that was before God made the World; Prov. 8. 22, 23. The Lord poſſeſſed me in the beginning of his way, before his works of old. I was ſet up from everlaſting, from the beginning or ever the earth was. Then was I (ſayes he) Ver. 30. all the while by him; that came out of his Boſom, John 1. 18. and who therefore compares himſelf in this Prov. 8. to a Child brought up by the Parent, ſo was I (ſayes he) brought up with him. And what did they together? Two things.

1. They delighted one with and in another; the Father that he was able to beget ſuch a Son like him, and of equal ſubſtance with himſelf; I was daily his delight, and he mine, rejoycing alwayes before him: And this was, and would have been delight enough to them, though no Creature had ever been made.

2. But Secondly, next to that, what did they delight in moſt? It follows, Rejoycing in the habitable parts of his earth, and my delight was with the ſons of men. And obſerve it, That next to thoſe Internal, Eſſential and Perſonal delights each in other, the greateſt and deareſt unto thoſe two Divine Perſons were their delights in the ſons of men, of all Gods Works ad extra, in theſe they moſt took pleaſure.

Now what is it, concerning them, ſhould afford God and Chriſt ſuch thoughts ſo long aforehand; but this plot concerning them of Reconciling them again? For to look and foreſee them all at one clap, turn'd Rebels againſt him, and view them muſtering together in troops againſt him; This could miniſter none but ſad and diſconſolate thoughts, and it pained him at the Heart to think of it: Gen. 6. 5, 6. And God ſaw that the wickedneſs edneſs of man was great in the earth, and that every imagination of the thoughts of his heart was only evil continually. And it repented the Lord that he had made man on the earth, and it grieved him at his heart. What was it delighted him then? Men delight only in their Friends not Enemies; Was it in them then as they were at firſt Created in a ſtate of Friendſhip, that God was pleaſed? No then there were but a couple to delight in; but this delight is ſaid to be in the Sons of Men, all the Earth over, in the habitable parts of the earth; which implies, he had ſome in all parts inhabited, who were the deſire and delight of his eyes: And beſides, that firſt Friendſhip, was not worth the thinking of, it laſted ſo little while, and ended in ſo great and general a breach. Theſe delights then were moſt in this, to think that he ſhould win to him, and gain the love of theſe accurſed Rebels, whom he himſelf loved ſo dearly, and that he ſhould ſhew that his Love, by an unheard of way, that ſhould amaze Angels and Men, to take away their Sins, and Reconcile them to himſelf again by the Incarnation, and Death of his Son; and tye them to him by an everlaſting knot, which their Sins ſhould not untye again, nor ſeparate from that his Love. This took up his delights in the Plural; he delighted to think of it again and again; his double delights (as ſome Paraphraſe it) were in this, inſomuch as he glads himſelf with the continual thoughts of it again and again: Which may appear by another Scripture added unto this, which tells us how his thoughts did run upon this ſo dear a Deſign to him (ſpeaking after the manner of men) above all elſe, and that they were taken up with it; as it uſeth to be with us, when we are deeply affected with any thing. So Pſal. 40. 5. Many (ſayes he) are the wonderful works that thou haſt done, and thy thoughts to us ward cannot be reckoned. His Mind hath ran on them from everlaſting, that his thoughts cannot be numbred. There are many Works of Wonder which he hath done for us, which hath exerciſed theſe his thoughts towards us, but above all in this we have been ſpeaking of; therefore he paſſeth by all other Works, and mentions this very Tranſaction, and Calling of, and Covenant with his Son, which we have all this while been ſpeaking of, as that wherein theſe his thoughts have been moſt ſpent and exerciſed with delight. So Ver. 6. 7, 8. Sacrifice and offering thou didſt not deſire, mine ears haſt thou opened, burnt-offering and ſin-offering haſt thou not required. Then ſaid I, Lo I come, in the volume of the book, it is written of me; I delight to do thy will, O my God: yea thy law is within my heart. Chap. 11.

And by all this you ſee that our Salvation was in ſure hands, even afore the World was; for God and Chriſt had engaged themſelves by Covenant each to other for us, the one to dye, the other to accept it for us.

And though Chriſt was yet to come and dye; yea, and though there were not one word of Promiſe written that was made to us, expreſſing Gods Mind, yet this everlaſting Obligation made all ſure, that it ſhould be done.

So as had I no other News to tell you, and could but ſecretly aſſure you of theſe paſſages from everlaſting, they might be enough to perſwade and over-perſwade you to come in, for Mercy and Grace with him; but much more when it ſhall be further told you, what Chriſt hath done to the accompliſhment of all this, and what fulneſs was in him for it, which makes up the Second Part of this Glorious Story.

OF CHRIST THE MEDIATOR.

BOOK II.

The ſole, and peculiar Fitneſs of Chriſt's Perſon for the Work of Redemption.

HEB. ii. 16, 17.

For verily he took not on him the nature of angels; but he took on him the ſeed of Abraham.

Ver. 17. Wherefore in all things it behoved him to be made like unto his brethren; that he might be a merciful and faithful high prieſt, in things pertaining to God, to make reconciliation for the ſins of the people.

CHAP. I.

The Fitneſs of Chriſts Perſon for the Work of a Mediator, hath a great Influence to make it Succeſsful and Proſperous.

IN the Firſt Chapter the Apoſtle ſhewed that our Mediator was God, and the Son of God: In this Second he ſhews that he is Man alſo; and a Man made of the ſame lump with other Men, and Fleſh and Blood as well as we. And he knitts up all with this, That thus it behoved him to be, that he might be a Prieſt to reconcile us to the Father. That therefore which theſe Two Chapters drive at, is to ſhew the Perſonal Fitneſs in all Relations and Reſpects that was in Chriſt for the Work of Mediation between God and us. A Point therefore to be inſiſted on, becauſe it is the drift of theſe Two whole Chapters, and is indeed the Foundation of all that follows, concerning his Offices and Works: Which therefore he mentions not here only, but had intimated it before, in ver. 10. To which we may add, that in Heb. 7. 26. For ſuch an high prieſt became us, who is holy, harmleſs, undefiled, ſeparate from ſinners, and made higher than the heavens. So that his ſingular fitneſs for this Work is a thing that the Scriptures would have us to take ſpecial Notice of, and which God aimed at in chooſing him unto it:

For,

Firſt, (In general to give a Reaſon or two of it:) Fitneſs in the Perſon that goes about a matter of Reconciliation, is more behoveful and available to further it, than all the means and ſatisfaction beſides that can be made. For Reconciliation is a matter of Friendſhip, and therefore is to be wrought in a friendly way; And a word from a Fit Perſon will oft times more prevail to effect it, than a great Ranſom from, and much entreaty by another. How forcible are right words (as Job ſaies)? Fit words, rightly placed and ordered; but eſpecially when from a Fit Perſon: The Perſon adds Grace and Acceptation to them.

Secondly, In reconciling us God likewiſe had a ſpecial regard to this; He aimed not only to have ſatisfaction made to his Juſtice, and ſo to be ſure to have an equivalent Ranſom; but that he might be fully pleaſed. He would have it carried on in the moſt pleaſing and ſuitable way that might be, that ſo his Mind might receive full content in it, and that his Love might reſt in it with delight; and that his Wiſdom alſo might infinitely pleaſe it ſelf in the ſweet Harmony, the Concent, and the fit Accommodations of all things in it; to ſee all aptly meet and accord for the making of his Covenant, as it might be ſure, ſo ordered in all things (as the Phraſe is, 2 Sam. 23. 5.) But above all, That this confluence of Fitneſs ſhould be eſpecially in the Perſon that was to perform it; one that ſhould be moſt pleaſing to himſelf, and moſt fit for the buſineſs; even ſo fit, as none fitter. Thus the Apoſtle in the Text giving the Reaſon why God made him the Captain of our Salvation, and appointed him to ſuffer: It became him (ſaies he) for whom and by whom are all things in bringing many Sons to glory, to make the Captain of their Salvation perfect through ſufferings: That is; Seeing this Work of Redemption was the grand Plot and Maſter-piece of him who is both the Efficient, and End of all things, and that the bringing of many Sons to glory was of his Works and ends the Maſter-piece; it became him therefore to take ſuch a courſe to do it, as was worthy of him, and as might moſt of all and beſt of all ſuit with all his ends, and with that work which contains all his other works eminently in it. And therefore it was meet for him to make choice of the fitteſt Perſon that could be found in Heaven or Earth to be his Captain, and to make him in ſaving us, as perfect as was poſſible, as full and compleat a Saviour in his Perſon and in his Works as could be. And that nothing might be wanting in him which might be thought fit for him who was our Saviour, to perform; he was to ſuffer the utmoſt of ſufferings, rather than he ſhould not be a full, perfect, and complete Saviour: God made him perfect through ſufferings: For (as Chriſt tells his Diſciples, Luke 24. 4.) It behoved him thus to ſuffer: And it was his Speech to John, Matth. 3. 15. Thus it becomes us to fulfil all righteouſneſs. And ſurely, that God, who did all things elſe in a due proportion, in Weight and Meaſure; and this, in his works of an inferiour Kind and Mould, the works of Creation; (wherein we yet ſee, he hath artificially ſuited one thing to another) will much more in this Tranſcendent Work of Redemption cauſe the greateſt Harmony to meet in the Plot and Contrival of it.

And ſo I come to the Point delivered, namely,

That there is a Fulneſs of Fitneſs in the Perſon of Chriſt for this great work of Reconciliation between Us and God.

Firſt, I ſay, [In the Perſon of Chriſt.] For although in the works of his Mediation there may a great correſpondent fitneſs be obſerved, and a harmonious proportion both in relation to the benefits they are to procure for us, and and between themſelves, (as was before obſerved,) yet we muſt now in this Head-bound our ſelves only to the fitneſs in his Perſon; and therein alſo carefully ſever ſuch Conſiderations as tend to diſcover his fulneſs of Abilities for this work; many of which are apt to fall under this Head: Which notwithſtanding we will keep as immixt as we can from theſe which argue his Fitneſs, and reſerve thoſe other for a ſecond Head. Chap. 1.

Secondly, There is not only [a Fitneſs] but a [Fullneſs of Fitneſs;] So that ſuppoſe others beſides him had been able, yet none ſo fit, or in whom there is an Univerſal concurrency both of Fitneſſes and Abilities. And therefore he is deſigned out for this work with an Emphaſis, Col. 1. 20. And (having made peace through the blood of his croſs) by him to reconcile all things unto himſelf, by him, I ſay, whether they be things in earth, or things in heaven. [By him, by him, (I ſay);] And ſo [in him] is with the like Emphaſis repeated, as denoting him to be eminently fit above all others, in Eph. 1. 10. That in the diſpenſation of the fulneſs of times, he might gather together in one all things in Chriſt, both which are in heaven, and which are on earth, even in him.

This premiſed, we will proceed by degrees; and we ſhall find, that there was nothing in his Perſon but what fitted him for this Work.

I. Conſider what he was, before he took our Nature; what this [He] was, mentioned in the 16. ver. [He took, &c.] For he was a Perſon of himſelf e're he took our Nature. And this refers to the Firſt Chapter, where the Apoſtle ſhews, that he was God, and the Son of God, Heb. 1. 3, 5. Who being the brightneſs of his glory, and the expreſs image of his perſon, and upholding all things by the word of his power, when he had by himſelf purged our ſins, ſat down on the right hand of the Majeſty on high: ver. 5. For unto which of the angels ſaid he at any time, Thou art my Son, this day have I begotten thee? And again, I will be to him a Father, and he ſhall be to me a Son? And thus it behoved him to be, that was our Prieſt:

1. It behoved him to be God. It was not fit that any meer Creature ſhould have the Honour to be the Mediator and Reconciler. Could we ſuppoſe that a Creature had been able to have performed it, yet it had been no way fit. The Honour of this Place and Office was too Tranſcendent for any meer Creature; and nothing is more unſeemly and uncomely than an Office of Dignity and Honour miſplaced (as Solomon tells us:) And this Crown of Honour would not have fitted and ſat well on any Creatures Head. An Honour I call this Office, and that, the moſt Tranſcendent; for, to be a Prieſt, was to be taken out, and ſeparated from, and above other Men, to draw nigh to God for them: Heb. 5. 1. For every high prieſt taken from among men, is ordained for men in things pertaining to God, that he may offer both gifts and ſacrifices for ſins. And therefore it is ſuch an honour (ſaies he at the 4th. ver.) as no man takes to himſelf, but he that is called of God, as was Aaron. And yet what was the High Prieſthood of Aaron in compariſon with this; a meer Shadow; not ſo much as an Image of it, as is ſaid of the Types of the Law, Heb. 10. 1. For the Law having a ſhadow of good things to come, and not the very image of the things, can never with thoſe ſacrifices which they offered year by year continually, make the comers thereunto perfect. It was but as the Office of a King at Arms in compariſon of a real King indeed. And therefore this Prieſthood to offer real ſatisfaction is accounted ſuch a Glory, as Chriſt himſelf, (though full of all Infinite Perfections, and in whom the fullneſs of the Godhead dwells) took not upon him till he was called; as chap. 5. ver. 5. So alſo Chriſt glorified not himſelf, to be made an high prieſt; but he that ſaid unto him, Thou art my Son, this day have I begotten thee. The Phraſe uſed is, That he glorified not himſelf to be made an high prieſt, &c. It is not an Honourable Office only this (by which Phraſe Aarons is expreſſed to us:) But it is glorious: He being to be not an High Prieſt only, but to be a great High Prieſt: Chap. 4 14. Seeing then that we have a great high prieſt, that is paſſed into the heavens, Jeſus the Son of God, let us hold faſt our profeſſion. Yea, it is ſo glorious as is fit for none but the King of Glory, who is the only Wiſe God. Which therefore as it is ſo glorious, as Chriſt till called unto it, takes it not on him; ſo it is ſo Tranſcendent a Glory, as God will not beſtow it on, or call any to it but him who is God. My glory (ſaies God) I will not give unto another; Iſa. 42. 8. And this Office he accounts part of it. Read the words going before, (and which occaſioned that Speech) and you ſhall find, that they are ſpoken of the beſtowing this Office upon Chriſt, and the glorifying him by calling him to it, ver. 6, 7. I the Lord have called thee, and will give thee for a Covenant, &c. And then follows, My glory will I not give unto another. As God will not give his Praiſe and Worſhip to Graven Images; (as in the words following) ſo nor this Glory to any Creature, not to any other but to one who is God equal with himſelf. And conſider but that one main end and conſequent of his Mediation, there expreſſed, That he was to be made a Covenant for the People; that is, the Founder and Striker up, and Mediator of a New Covenant for us, (as he is called, Heb. 9. 15.) Yea a Surety, (not only of a New Covenant, (when an Old one is made void) but) of a better Covenant (as he is called, Heb. 7. 22.) eſtabliſhed upon better promiſes, (as it is, Heb. 8. 6.) a better Covenant than the Angels ſtand under, who yet are the moſt glorious of all the Creatures: And therefore he hath obtained (ſaies the Text there) a more excellent miniſtry, by how much he is the Mediator of a better Covenant: Not brought into a better Covenant, or made under a better Covenant (which is our happineſs) but the Maker of that better Covenant it ſelf, yea ſo as to be made that Covenant; and it will be evident that it was not fit for any meer Creature to undertake ſo great an Office.

CHAP.

Chap. 2.

CHAP. II.

That it was neceſſary for our Mediator to be God. He could not otherwiſe have been preſent at the making of the Eternal Covenant of Redemption: None but God could have the Power to beſtow ſuch great Bleſſings as are thoſe of the Covenant: None but God could be the Object of our Truſt, Faith, and Hope, and Obedience. None but God could be ſufficiently able to ſuccour us at all times.

THAT Chriſt the Son of God was the only fit Perſon to be the Mediator, will appear plainly to us upon theſe Conſiderations:

I. If you conſider, That it was fit that he who thus made a Covenant for us, ſhould be preſent at the making of it, and at the firſt ſtriking of the bargain, and ſhould be privy to the Plot, and know the bottom of Gods Counſel in it, and the depth of all his Secrets, and ſhould know for whom, and what he was to purchaſe, and upon what Conditions. Now then this Plot and Covenant having been as Ancient as Eternity, even an Everlaſting Covenant; and it being requiſite that God ſhould have our Mediator by him from Eternity, with whom he might ſtrike it for us; and alſo that he ſhould know all Gods ſecrets, and be admitted into all his Councils from Eternity; therefore no Creature could be capable of this. For who of them hath been his Councellor? And who knows his depths of Election, which are paſt finding out, as Rom. 11. 33, 34. O the depth of the riches both of the wiſdom and knowledge of God! how unſearchable are his judgments, and his wayes paſt finding out! ver. 23. For who hath known the mind of the Lord, or who hath been his counſeller. God may ſay to all the Creatures as he ſaid to Job, Where were you when the Plot of Redemption was laid? And the Platform thereof drawn? And the Book of Life penned, and the Names of my Redeemed ones put in? None but he whoſe Name is Wonderful Counſellor, the Mighty God, and everlaſting Father; as Iſa. 9. 6. was capable of all this, which Names of his are put into that Promiſe of him as Mediator, becauſe it was requiſite that our Mediator ſhould be all this And now he being the Mighty God, he might be of Council with God from Eternity; he was preſent at the firſt pricking down our Names, and foreknew all Gods choice He ſtood at Gods Elbow and conſulted with him, whoſe Names to put in: (Then I was by him, ſaies he) Prov. 8. 30) And ſo became their Everlaſting Father; begetting them in the Womb of Eternal Election.

II If we conſider the Conditions of the Covenant, no meer Creature was fit to undertake them; neither thoſe on Gods part, nor thoſe on ours.

1. Not thoſe on Gods part Was it fit that a meer Creature ſhould be Gods Executour, and have power to leave ſuch Legacies, as the Promiſes of Heaven, Pardon of Sin, &c. are? Without whom, and without whoſe Blood all thoſe Promiſes had been of no force, but had been nothing worth; as Heb. 9 15, 16, 17, 18. And for this cauſe he is the mediator of the new teſtament, that by means of death, for the redemption of the tranſgreſſions that were under the firſt teſtament, they which are called might receive the promiſe of eternal inheritance ver. 16. For where a teſtament is, there muſt alſo of neceſſity be the death of the teſtator. ver. 17. For a teſtament is of force after men are dead: otherwiſe otherwise it is of no strength at all whilest the testator liveth. ver. 18. Whereupon neither the first testament was dedicated without blood. Was it fit that a meer Creatures Hand and Seal should be required to Gods own Will and Testament, or else it could not be of force? Certainly it was too much: And therefore the Apostle, ver. 14. having shewed how Christ by the Eternal Spirit offered up himself; (that is by his Godhead, &c.) he adds, ver 15. For this cause he is the Mediator of the New Testament: Hence it was that he became the Founder of it, that he was The Eternal Spirit, God Immortal: Else he had not been capable of being Mediator of such a Testament; A Testament also, whereby he not only was to undertake to make satisfaction, and to make good all Gods Legacies; but to make good in us, the Conditions on our part, by writing the Law in the heart: For that is the New Covenant, as Heb. 8. 10, 11. For this is the covenant that I will make with the house of Israel after those days, saith the Lord; I will put my laws into their mind, and write them in their hearts: and I will be to them a God, and they shall be to me a people. ver. 11. And they shall not teach every man his neighbour, and every man his brother, saying, Know the Lord; for all shall know me, from the least to the greatest. And if the Mediator had not ingaged to do this, God would not have dealt with him; for he will make sure work in the Covenant, since it was to be a Covenant ordered in all things, and sure; 2 Sam. 23. 5. Although my house be not so with God; yet he hath made with me an everlasting covenant, ordered in all things and sure: for this is all my salvation, and all my desire, although he make it not to grow. And what Creature could do this? Or was it fit that God should put so much trust in any Creature, who finds folly in his Angels, and puts no confidence in his Saints! God would not vouchsafe to Treat or Trade with any meer Creature, upon so high and deep engagements, nor enter into Partnership with them, to share alike, as in that Covenant thus made, God and the Mediator of it were to do.

Book II.

2. The Part which we bear in the Covenant, and our Actings in it rendred it unmeet, that any but the Son of God should have the Administration of it committed to him.

For,

First, If we consider what is the Business and Acts of our Faith, it will be evident, that it was fit and requisite that our Mediator should be such a one, as we might rely upon, and trust in: Now was it fit that any meer Creature should be made and set forth to us as the Object of our Faith? And yet it is that Faith which is the most suitable Condition for the Covenant of Grace: (as Rom. 4. 16. It is therefore of faith, that it might be by grace, and sure to all the seed:) And that Faith must pitch upon our Mediator, as upon a Corner stone laid by God, as a sure foundation, (as Paul and Peter speak) so as he that believeth might not come to be ashamed, 1 Pet. 2. 6. Wherefore also it is contained in the Scripture, Behold, I lay in Sion a chief corner-stone, elect, precious: and he that believeth on him shall not be confounded. Would it then have been, or could any Arm of Flesh have thus secured us, or underpropt our hearts? Or was it fit that any Creature should be propounded to us, as the Object of our Faith as Justifying, and so be set forth as a Propitiation through Faith in his Blood, and Mediation; and so we to be Justifyed by Faith in him? (as the Apostles Expressions are, in Rom. 3.) No, this is an honour not fit to be put upon any Creature; no, not on all the Angels and Saints. Take, not Peter only, (on whom the Papists say the Church is built) but the whole Church and Family of God in Heaven and Earth; and we say indeed, That we believe the Catholick Church, but not in the Catholick Church; We believe only in God, and in Jesus Christ. Any Creature had been too weak a foundation to build the Faith of the Church upon; they could not have borne the weight of it. And therefore, 1 Tim. 3. 16. when the Apostle had said [God manifested in the flesh] he adds, [believed on in the world] for if he who was manifest in the flesh had not been God, he could not have been the Object of Faith And indeed, it was fit for us that we should have one whom we might fully trust, truſt, and whoſe ſufficiency might anſwer all our fears; for if a Creature had been our Mediator, we would have been afraid of a miſcarriage in the buſineſs, as there was ſuch a cauſe of fear whilſt the concern was in the Hands of our Father and Head, Adam; and we ſhould ſtill have feared, that the Devil might overcome us and him again; and though he had held out many years, yet we would have been afraid that one day he might fail and have periſhed. Beſides, we ſhould continually have feared, that the guilt of our ſins would revive again in our Conſciences; for Conſcience being ſubject to God only, no meer Creature therefore could ſtill it, or purge it; but it is the Eternal Spirit alone that can do it, as the Apoſtle ſhews, Heb. 9. 14. How much more ſhall the blood of Chriſt, who through the eternal Spirit, offered himſelf without ſpot to God, purge your conſcience from dead works to ſerve the living God. And it is God alone that can ſubdue iniquities, Micah 7. 18, 19. Who is a God like unto thee, that pardoneth iniquity, and paſſeth by the tranſgreſſion of the remnant of his heritage? he retaineth not his anger for ever, becauſe he delighteth in mercy. ver. 19. He will turn again, he will have compaſſion upon us: he will ſubdue our iniquities: and thou wilt caſt all their ſins into the depths of the ſea. Therefore to take away all fears, it was fit that our Reconciler ſhould be God: And therefore Iſa 35. (throughout which the coming of Chriſt is foretold,) ver. 3. Strengthen you (ſaies the Prophet) the feeble hands, &c. —— ſay unto them that are of a fearful heart, be ſtrong, fear not: Behold, your God will come with vengeance, (namely to deſtroy the enemies of your ſalvation) (he ſaies it again) God will come with a recompence; (and then again he ſpeaks it) he will come and ſave you, and he goes on to ſhew his Kingdom, ver. 5, 6, 7. Then the eyes of the blind ſhall be opened, and the ears of the deaf ſhall be unſtopped. ver. 6. Then ſhall the lame man leap as an hart, and the tongue of the dumb ſing: for in the wilderneſs ſhall waters break out, and ſtreams in the deſert ver. 7. And the parched ground ſhall become a pool, and the thirſty land ſprings of water: in the habitation of dragons, where each lay, ſhall be graſs with reeds and ruſhes. Any other Saviour would have needed Salvation himſelf, except him who is Salvation it ſelf, and ſo Chriſt is called, Luke 2. 28, 29, 30. Then took he him up in his arms, and bleſſed God, and ſaid, ver. 29. Lord now letteſt thou thy ſervant depart in peace, according to thy word. ver. 30. For mine eyes have ſeen thy ſalvation.

The Second Condition is Obedience, even that we ſhould wholly give up our ſelves to his Service for ever; which alſo comes in in our Indentures, and is mentioned in the Covenant on our Parts, and which out of thankfulneſs we could not but performe, as a Due to him that ſhould be our Mediator. For he that ſhould have reconciled us, muſt have bought us, and ſo delivered us from Death and Hell; and if ſo, we muſt then by all right and equity have been his Servants for ever. Now ſurely, God would not have us ſo obliged to any meer Creature, as wholly to ſerve and obey it; and therefore it was fit that none but God himſelf ſhould ſave and buy us out, 1 Cor. 7. 23. Ye are bought with a price: be not the ſervants of men: To prevent which inconvenience, God himſelf would redeem us, that we might ſerve none but him: [Him only ſhalt thou ſerve] for it is his due. The Apoſtle alſo judgeth it an equal thing that Men ſhould live to him, who dyed for them, to redeem them from Death. Thus 2 Cor. 5. 14, 15. We thus Judge (ſaith he) that in that he dyed for all, they who live ſhould not henceforth live unto themſelves, but unto him who dyed for them. It was therefore no way fit that any meer Creature ſhould be employed in this Work: It was fit that none ſhould do ſo much for us, but only he who made us; for to juſtifie us, and to reſtore us out of this miſerable loſt condition, was more than at firſt to create us. For our Miſery was worſe than a not-being; and ſhould it ever be ſaid, that a Creature had done as much for us as God did at the firſt!

Thirdly, Beſides all this: Would we not have had ſuch a Saviour (to chooſe) as might know our hearts, and be able to ſuccour us? On whom we might reſt ſecurely, that he knows Gods mind, and ſearcheth the deep things of him, and who is his Counſellor. And therefore when he ſpeaks to us kindly, we may be ſure God means us good, and in whoſe Face we may read Gods mind. Would we not have ſuch a Saviour as might have an unlimited Power over all Fleſh, to defend us ſo, that nothing ſhould be able to withſtand our Salvation; as John 17. 2. As thou haſt given him power over all fleſh, that he ſhould give eternal life to as many as thou haſt given him. Now ſuch an one muſt be God, who can ſave, not only the Body, but the Soul too. All the Creatures, as they can deſtroy the Body only, ſo they can ſave the Body only; and of the two it is more eaſie to deſtroy than to ſave. When the People of Iſrael were to be led into Canaan, and ſo to be carried thorough the Wilderneſs, and through many Enemies and Difficulties; they hearing (Exod. 32. 2.) that an Angel ſhould go before them, and drive out the Canaanites (ver. 3.) and that God would not himſelf immediately go up with them; it is ſaid, that all the people mourned becauſe of this; yea, and Moſes alſo (at the 12. ver.) was fearful of a meer Angels conduct; his heart was not ſecured thereby, as it would have been, if God himſelf would have been pleaſed to go with them: And therefore he ſaies to God, Thou haſt not let me know whom thou wilt ſend with me; And yet God had told him that an Angel ſhould: But Moſes ſeemed not to underſtand God, but would have had another Anſwer. Thus, When we are fearful, and cannot truſt to the Conduct or Undertaking of one imployed for us, we uſe to ſay, To a Friend that putts it off, and ſends another. You leave me, and ſend I know not whom with me; that is, one that I am not ſecure of, one in whoſe ſufficiency I cannot reſt for the performance: And this therefore, (ver. 4.) is called evil tidings. In Exod. 23. 20. before this, there was an Angel promiſed to go before them, Namely Chriſt the Angel of the Covenant, who indeed was God: (for ver. 21. he ſaies, My name is in him) And then the Peoples hearts were quieted. So that ſome think, that this other Angel in the 23*th*. Chapter was but ſome meer created Angel, whom when they heard to be ſubſtituted in Gods ſtead to be their Leader, then they mourned; and then Moſes alſo complained. However if it were the ſame Angel, yet they underſtood it and conceived of it to be a Creature, and not the Son of God. By which you ſee, that the People deſired that no Creature, no not an Angel ſhould be their Leader, (though one Angel could deſtroy an Hoſt of Men in a Night) but they would have God himſelf, or none. And ſo if we had been to have choſen a Captain of our ſalvation, a Head and Governour to bring us unto glory, (as the Apoſtle ſpeaks; Heb. 2. 10) and withal had known, that there was ſpeech in Heaven of, (and ſo a poſſibility) of having the Son of God for this our Captain; how would we have ſaid as he did of Goliahs Sword, there is none like to this Saviour? Or as they of Joſeph, Can we find ſuch another one as this? And on the contrary, if God had inſtead of him ſent but an Angel to redeem us, how would we have mourned, as the People there did, and as John did, Revel. 5. 4. and have ſaid as Moſes, We know not whom thou wilt ſend with us? We will therefore conclude with that which God ſpeaks, Iſa. 43 11. I am the Lord, and beſides me there is no Saviour.

CHAP. III.

Of the Three Perſons in the Godhead, the Son is the fiteſt to be Mediator. What are the Reaſons of it.

WE have ſeen 'twas meet our Redeemer ſhould be God, and the Godhead it ſelf cannot become a Redeemer but as ſubſiſting in a Perſon, One of the Three ; now which of the Three ſo fit as is the Son ? The Oath and Decree of God makes the Son to be appointed to this Office. And the Reaſons of the Fitneſs and Meetneſs of this Second Perſon are ;

Firſt, If we conſider the Relations of the Three Perſons among themſelves, he is of all the fitteſt to undertake this Work.

1. It was meet the ἰδιώματα, or the proper Titles by which the Perſons of the Trinity are diſtinguiſhed, ſhould be kept and preſerved diſtinct, and no way confounded. He that was to be Mediator, it was meet he ſhould be the Son of Man, the Son of a Woman as his Mother ; (as I ſhall ſhew anon) And this Title and Appellation will fitlieſt become him that is a Son (though of God) already ; and it was not fit there ſhould be Two Sons or Two Perſons in the Trinity, to bear the Relation or Title of Sons. For inſtance, That the Father ſhould in any reſpect be ſaid to be a Son, or to have a Mother, or call David or Abraham Father, was moſt improper ; ſo as this would not become him : And ſo in like manner, it was as unfit for the Holy Ghoſt, who himſelf was to have the hand in his Conception, to be called a Son ; but that the Son of God ſhould, is not improper, for he is a Son already.

2. It was meet that the Son of God ſhould be this Mediator, that the due order that is between theſe Three Perſons be alſo kept. The Father is the Firſt, the Son the Second, the Holy Ghoſt the Third ; and he that is to be Mediator muſt be called to it, and ſent by another Perſon, therefore the Father is not to be Mediator ; for both the Son and the Holy Ghoſt being from the Father in ſubſiſting, are not to ſend the Father, who is the Firſt. And as is the order of their ſubſiſting, ſo of their working, and therefore for the Holy Ghoſt, he likewiſe being the Third Perſon, cannot ſo fitly be Mediator ; for though he might be ſent from the Father and the Son, as he proceeds from both, yet his Work and Task is to work from the Son, and to take off his work wrought firſt, as the Son is to take from the Father : John 5. 19, 20. Then anſwered Jeſus, and ſaid unto them, Verily verily I ſay unto you, The Son can do nothing of himſelf, but what he ſeeth the Father do : for what things ſoever he doth, theſe alſo doth the Son likewiſe. For the Father loveth the Son, and ſheweth him all things that himſelf doth : and he will ſhew him greater works then theſe, that ye may marvel. And as in order of ſubſiſting the Perſon of the Spirit proceeds from him, ſo in order of working, his Work is from the Sons Work ; He ſhall take of mine (ſayes Chriſt) and ſhew it to you : John 16. 13, 14, 15. Howbeit, when he the ſpirit of truth is come, he will guide you into all truth : for he ſhall not ſpeak of himſelf ; but whatſoever he ſhall hear, that ſhall he ſpeak : and he will ſhew you things to come. He ſhall glorifie me : for he ſhall receive of mine, and ſhall ſhew it unto you. All things that the Father hath, are mine : therefore ſaid I, that he ſhall take of mine, and ſhall ſhew it unto you. And therefore he that is to be Mediator to Redeem, muſt be the Son, who may ſend the Holy Ghoſt to apply his Work, who being the laſt Perſon is to appear laſt in the World, and take the laſt Work, which Redemption is not, but the Application of it : And therefore,

Book II.

3. The Father is the Perſon to whom the Redemption is to be paid in the Name of the Perſons, to whom the Reconciliation is made by the Redeemer; and the Holy Ghoſt is he that moſt fitly ſhould apply that Redemption unto us the Redeemed: Therefore the Redemption it ſelf fitly falls to the Sons ſhare.

And Secondly, As thus to preſerve the due Decorum among the Perſons, ſo alſo in reſpect of the Work it ſelf, it was moſt proper to him.

1. He being the Middle Perſon of the Three, bears the beſt reſemblance of the Work, to be a Mediator, to come between for us, to the other Two. Herein the Work and the Perſon ſuit. He was from the Father, and the Holy Ghoſt from him, and it is he in whom as it were the other Two are united, and are One, and ſo he is not able to lay his hands on both. As the Nature of Man is a Middle Nature between the whole Creation, Earthly and Heavenly; and as for one and the ſame Perſon to be both God and Man, was a Middle Rank between God and us Men: So is the Son of God a Middle Perſon between the Perſons themſelves.

2. It beſt ſuited all the particular benefits of Redemption, and the ends thereof. Many Divines, for the demonſtration of this, alledge that the Second Perſon being that Word by whom all things were made, as Heb. 1. 2. and John 1. 3. that therefore it was fit for him to reſtore all; and it is certain, that in thoſe places his working all things is alledged on purpoſe to ſhew 'twas meet he ſhould be the reſtorer of them: It becomes him who hath ſuch an intereſt in the firſt building that he ſhould found them a new, and repair them. It is alledged alſo that he was the Life of Man in Innocency; John 1. 4. In him was life, and the life was the light of men; and therefore he was fitteſt to reſtore that new Life. Eph. 2. 1. And you hath he quickned who were dead in treſpaſſes and ſins. Ver. 5. Even when we were dead in ſins hath quickned us together with Chriſt, (by grace ye are ſaved). Alſo that he being the Image of God, therefore to reſtore it in Man when 'twas loſt, the beſt way was to ſet forth the Original Image, and to bring our decayed Image to this to be conformed. But I alledge not theſe to this purpoſe, as not being certain whether theſe things are ſpoken of him, conſidered ſimply as Second Perſon, or as foreſeen and decreed to be God Man, (as I have elſewhere ſhewn) which deſign, beſides the Work of Redemption, ſerved to all theſe ends and purpoſes: But I ſhall mention one which is the main end of his being Mediator, and for the beſtowing which, Redemption maketh way, that is Adoption and making us Sons; which is made one of the greateſt benefits of all other; Eph. 1. 5. Now it is certain, that to convey this to us, of all Perſons the Son was the fitteſt; Gal. 4. 4, 5. God ſent forth his Son made under the law, to redeem them that were under the law, that we might receive the adoption of ſons: Where there is a double Antitheſis or oppoſition: 1. Chriſt a Son, to make us Sons: 2. Chriſt made under the Law to redeem us that were under the Law. We were Slaves under the Law, who then was ſo fit to redeem us as the Kings Son? We were Servants, who then ſo fit to convey Sonſhip as the Eldeſt Son? And to Sinners convey Sonſhip he could not, till they were Redeemed, as that place ſhews. God was to be a Father to us, and in whom or for whoſe ſake ſo fitly as for his Sons, thorough our Union and Marriage with him? Heaven and the Glory of it is called Adoption, Rom. 8. 23. And not only they, but our ſelves alſo, which have the firſt-fruits of the Spirit, even we our ſelves groan within our ſelves, waiting for the adoption, to wit, the redemption of our body; and to beſtow this on us by a right of Inheritance, for whom was it ſo proper as for Gods own Son, the Heir of all things? This is manifeſt further by theſe Scriptures: John 20. 17. I go to my Father and to your Father; and In my Fathers houſe are many manſions: John 14. 2. As if he ſhould have ſaid, I am his Eldeſt Son, I can bid you welcome thither: And ſo in Rom. 8. 17. Ye are heirs and coheirs with Chriſt; and in many the like places.

In the Diſcourſe of the Knowledge of God the Father, and his Son Jeſus Chriſt. In 2 Vol. of his Works.

Some

Some Divines ſay that no Perſon elſe could have been Mediator, becauſe Sonſhip was to be derived to us; for nothing, ſay they, is communicated by Grace to us but is firſt in the Godhead, or in ſome Perſon in the Godhead, who is made ours, and ſo it is derived thorough Fellowſhip with him. Thus we are made Wiſe becauſe God is Wiſe, Holy becauſe God is Holy, and we made partakers of the Divine Nature, which is the Image of what is in God. Now therefore in like manner if we be Sons, it muſt be thorough a Sonſhip found in one of the Perſons, and our communication with that Perſon, and ſo we are made Sons becauſe he is: I will not ſay it could not have been otherwiſe; ſure I am 'twas fitteſt and comelieſt it ſhould be ſo. Chap. 3.

And alſo that we ſhould be accepted graciouſly, and beloved of God, which of our ſelves, without a Mediator, we could not be; who ſo fit as the Son to make us thus accepted, who is the firſt beloved, the Son of his Love, as he is called Col. 1. 13. Who hath delivered us from the power of darkneſs, and hath tranſlated us into the kingdom of his dear Son: But the Holy Ghoſt proceeds from both per modum amoris, and ſo is rather the reflexion of Love of both wherewith God loves his Son and himſelf alſo.

Then the Son was fitteſt to be the Mediator in reſpect of all thoſe Offices that belong to the performance of this great Work.

As Firſt, If we regard the Office of High Prieſt, who ſo fit as the Son, the Eldeſt Son, to be ſo? It being the Birth-right of the Eldeſt in the Family, by the Law of Nature, to be the Prieſt: Therefore Heb. 5. to prove that he was a Prieſt, the Apoſtle preſently cites that ſaying out of the ſecond Pſalm, Thou art my Son, this day have I begotten thee, as being all one with that other which follows, quoted out of Pſal. 110. Thou art a Prieſt for ever: And eſpecially when the Work of our Salvation and his Mediation was to be tranſacted by Interceſſion; none ſo fit to be an Advocate with the Father, (as John ſpeaks) as Jeſus the Son. 1 John 2. 1. My little children, theſe things write I unto you, that ye ſin not. And if any man ſin, we have an advocate with the Father, Jeſus Chriſt the righteous.

Secondly, If we conſider the Office of being a Prophet, none ſo fit for this as the Word and Wiſdom of the Father; therefore Heb. 1. 1. it is ſaid that in the laſt dayes God hath ſpoken by his Son; who ſo fit to break up Gods Counſels, as the Mighty Counſellour, and next in Counſel to himſelf? None hath ſeen God at any time; but it follows, The only begotten Son, who is in the boſom of the Father, he hath declared him. Joh. 1. 18.

And ſo Thirdly, for the Kingly Office, none ſo fit as the Heir, as Sons uſe to be; none ſo fit to have all Judgment and the Kingdom committed to him as Gods Son.

And laſt of all, if we conſider the Inauguration into theſe Offices and Work of Mediation, it was by an Anointing (as all thoſe Offices of old were. He was to be the Meſſiah, and Gods Anointed; now the Father (as was meet) was to be the Anointer, ſo Acts 4. 27. For of a truth againſt thy holy child Jeſus, whom thou haſt anointed, both Herod and Pontius Pilate, with the Gentiles, and the people of Iſrael were gathered together: and the Holy Ghoſt was to be the Oyl, with which he was to be anointed above his Fellows; as it is expreſly, Acts 10. 38. How God anointed Jeſus of Nazareth with the holy Ghoſt, and with power; who went about doing good, and healing all that were oppreſſed of the devil: for God was with him. So as in this reſpect none but the Son was capable of theſe Offices, and to be Meſſiah or the Anointed one; and ſo accordingly he was Conſecrated a Prieſt for ever.

CHAP. IV.

That it was neceſſary our Mediator ſhould be Man. The Reaſons why the Angelical Nature would not have been proper for this Work; and therefore why Chriſt aſſumed not that, but the Nature of Man.

THAT which next is to be demonſtrated, is, That if Chriſt be a Mediator, he muſt be ſomething elſe than meer God or Second Perſon, as the Text ſaith, He took to himſelf the ſeed of Abraham.

For Firſt, If he be a Reconciler he muſt become a Prieſt, and offer up ſomething by way of ſatisfaction to God; ſo Heb. 8. 3. Every high prieſt is ordained to offer gifts and ſacrifices: wherefore of neceſſity he muſt have ſomewhat to offer; and that which he offers muſt needs yet be greater than all things, but God: For nothing elſe would be a Sacrifice great enough to expiate Sin; and therefore that which he offers muſt ſome way be himſelf, for otherwiſe there could nothing be greater than all things, and yet withal, ſomething elſe than God. And therefore ſtill it is ſaid, He offered himſelf. But if he be God only, he cannot be ſacrificed nor offered up.

And again Secondly, If he be God only, he ſhould Reconcile us to his own ſelf, but he that is a Reconciler muſt be ſome way made divers from him unto whom the Reconciliation is made, for he is to be a Surety to him; and therefore Chriſt being made Man, he as οἰκονομικῶς, or Miniſterially conſidered, is divers from himſelf as φυσικῶς conſidered, viz. as he is the Son of God, and ſo is fit to become a Party between us, and to Reconcile us to himſelf.

And Thirdly, If he be a Reconciler and Mediator, he muſt become ſome way ſubject to God, and leſs than God ratione Officii; As he ſayes, My Father is greater than I; John 14. 28. for he muſt ſubject and ſubmit himſelf, and be obedient, and be content to be arreſted by the Law. He muſt become an interceſſour and intreater, and ſo become ſubject, as Chriſt did, who when he was equal with God humbled himſelf. Phil. 2. 6, 7, 8. Who being in the form of God, thought it not robbery to be equal with God: But made himſelf of no reputation, and took upon him the form of a ſervant, and was made in the likeneſs of men: And being found in faſhion as a man, he humbled himſelf, and became obedient unto death, even the death of the croſs.

Now then, if he muſt take up ſome Creature or other, it muſt be a Rational Creature; and therefore there being but two ſorts of Creatures Reaſonable, Angels and Men, they are both mentioned in the Text, as thoſe that only were capable and fit for this aſſumption. The diſputes of ſome Schoolmen, that the Son of God might have aſſumed any Creature, though Unreaſonable, into one Perſon with himſelf, are in a manner blaſphemous: And to be ſure if ſuch an aſſumption had been poſſible, yet unfit.

Firſt, For his Perſon, for which ſee the Reaſons of the Schoolmen, for there was reaſon that he that is taken up to this Glory ſhould be capable of knowing and loving God.

And Secondly, And above all for this Work, for he muſt be holy. Heb. 7. 26. For ſuch an high prieſt became us, who is holy, harmleſs, undefiled, ſeparate from ſinners, and made higher then the heavens: Such an High Prieſt became us as was holy; he ſhould not fulfil the Law elſe. He muſt love God, for Love is the fulfilling of the Law. He muſt have an Underſtanding and a Will.

Will. He muſt be full both of Grace and Truth ; of Truth in his underſtanding part, of Grace in his Will ; and he was to become obedient to God for us, and to have an holy Will, for the Will of the Godhead could not have become ſubject. Chap. 4.

Now then, ſeeing there are but two Rational Natures, Angels and Men, that can ſtand for this place, it is to be conſidered which of theſe two is the fitter ?

Now conſider this fitneſs as it relates to the Perſon of the Son of God ſimply ſo conſidered ; and ſo the Nature of Angels was a fairer match for him by far. But an Angel though a more fit match for him who is a Spirit, and they Spirits, and ſo there is a nearer aſſimilation, and which he would have aſſumed and united to himſelf (for his Soul when ſeparate was ſtill united to him) yet it was not ſo fit for this buſineſs to Reconcile us, therefore he ſayes Heb. 2. 16. at no hand he took their Nature. He ſuppoſeth it poſſible, he would not elſe have inſtanced in it, but he by no means ſuppoſeth it as fit ; for it behoved him to be made like unto his brethren.

Firſt, It was not ſo fit for us, that he ſhould aſſume the Angelical Nature ; it was not ſo fit.

1. That we being the Perſons to be Reconciled ſhould be beholden to a Stranger, but to a Kinſman of our own Nature. It was a Law in Iſrael that their Prince ſhould not be a Stranger, and it was meet to take place in this, that one ſhould not be a Mediator who is a Stranger.

2. That the relations that were to be between us and him might be founded upon the greateſt nearneſs, and ſo more Natural and kindly, it was meet that the Mediator ſhould be of the ſame Nature with us.

(1.) He that Reconciled us was to be Head to us, and it was fit the Head and the Body ſhould be as near as could be of the ſame Nature, Homogeneal, not diverſe, elſe there would be a monſtroſity in it.

(2.) We were to be made Sons in him, and he to be our Brother, and therefore to be of the ſame Nature, Cant. 8. 1.

(3.) He was to be an Husband to us, and Man and Wife muſt be of the ſame Nature, that ſhe may be Bone of his Bone, and Fleſh of his Fleſh.

3. That he might more Naturally love us more, and we him, it was fit that he ſhould take our Nature Likeneſs is the cauſe of Love ; Brethren that are like each other, love more than the other of the Brethren uſe to do ; therefore God made Man in his Image at firſt, that ſo he might be the nearer object of his Love ; but if he will take up our Nature alſo to himſelf, how will this raiſe his Love yet higher ? His end in Reconciling was to make us like himſelf, and therefore he made himſelf like to us, and we being to partake of a Divine Nature from him, he partakes of an Humane Nature with us ; and therefore he was made in the likeneſs of Man. Kings, whom they love they uſe to apparel like themſelves, their Favourites were ſo of old. As Men are to love Men better than Angels becauſe made of one Blood, and God did it on purpoſe ; ſo Chriſt ſeeing his own Nature in us, and that we are given him, cannot but love us the better, he cannot be averſe to his own Fleſh and Blood.

Secondly, An Angels Nature would not have been ſo fit for the Buſineſs or Work it ſelf : For,

1. Seeing that Juſtice permitted a commutation, it was but comely that yet Juſtice might be ſatisfied in all other points as near as poſſibly might be. It was but fitting that ſatisfaction ſhould be made in the ſameneſs of Nature at leaſt, ſeeing it could not be by the ſame individual Perſons. This Reaſon ſeems to be rendred Rom. 8. 3. For what the law could not do, in that it was weak through the fleſh, God ſending his own Son, in the likeneſs of ſinful fleſh, and for ſin condemned ſin in the fleſh : He took the likeneſs of ſinful fleſh to condemn Sin in the fleſh. Alſo this was meet, that the very ſame Nature that was contaminated and defiled might be cleanſed and purified, that they who are ſanctified and he that ſanctifieth might be of one Nature. Heb. 2. 11.

For

Book II.

For both he that ſanctifieth, and they who are ſanctified, are all of one : for which cauſe he is not aſhamed to call them brethren.

And 2. Seeing that we fell by the Sin of a man, God (that in his Wiſdom and Juſtice loves like proportion to be made up, himſelf making all things in due order and meaſure) ordained that we ſhould be Redeemed by a Man. This Reaſon is intimated 1 Cor. 15. 21. Since by man came death, by man alſo the reſurrection of the dead; and ſo by the like parallel Reaſon, ſeeing by Man came Sin, by Man came Redemption ; the like proportion the Apoſtle alſo holds forth, Rom. 5. 15, 16, 17, 18. But not as the offence, ſo alſo is the free gift. For if through the offence of one, many be dead; much more the grace of God, and the gift by grace, which is by one man, Jeſus Chriſt, hath abounded unto many. And not as it was by one that ſinned, ſo is the gift : for the judgment was by one to condemnation; but the free gift is of many offences unto juſtification. For if by one mans offence, death reigned by one ; much more they which receive abundance of grace, and of the gift of righteouſneſs, ſhall reign in life by one, Jeſus Chriſt. Therefore as by the offence of one judgment came upon all men to condemnation : even ſo by the righteouſneſs of one, the free gift came upon all men unto juſtification of life.

Thirdly, If we conſider the Obedience which the Mediator was to perform for us, it was not fit he ſhould be an Angel. For,

1. He was to fulfil the whole Law, and every Iota of it, and that in a double reſpect :

(1.) For our Righteouſneſs.
(2.) For our Example.

Now in either of theſe reſpects an Angel was not ſo fit, for the Angels were not capable of fulfilling ſo many parts of the Law as an Humane Nature is. An Angel could not perform the Ceremonial, as to be Circumciſed, &c.; nor half the Moral, as to be ſubject to Parents, to be temperate, ſober, to ſanctifie the Sabbath, &c. But it became him that was our Mediator (as far as poſſibly might be) to fulfil all (that is every part of) Righteouſneſs.

2. He was to fulfil all this Righteouſneſs by way of Example : Socinus he would make it all the intent of Chriſts coming into this World ; (but blaſphemouſly) yet this was requiſite that Chriſt ſhould ſet us the greateſt example of Holineſs. 1 Pet. 2. 21. He left us an example that we ſhould follow his ſteps, who when he was reviled, reviled not again, nor was guile found in his mouth. He was to be a viſible Example ; now ſo an Angels obedience could not have been. He was to be a perfect Example and Copy (Follow me as I follow Chriſt, ſayes Paul, 1 Cor. 11. 1.) now ſo an Angel could not have been. All Duties of Obedience that are performed in the Body, as we are Men, they are not capable of ; the Second Table is cut off to them, their Obedience is only Spiritual, and the Duties of the Firſt Table.

As thus an Angels Nature only could not have fulfilled that Law we were to have fulfilled ; ſo much leſs could it have ſuffered what was requiſite : They could have indured Gods Wrath indeed, but not that other Curſe which went out in the Letter againſt us ; they could not dye, not return to duſt, and Bodily Death was threatned, To duſt thou ſhalt return : They had no Body and Soul to be ſeparated by Death, and therefore could not be a Sacrifice for Sin ; for without Blood there is no remiſſion ; Heb. 9. 22. And almoſt all things are by the law purged with bloud; and without ſhedding of blond is no remiſſion ; for without Blood it had not been extenſive, a full Redemption. Now the Angels have no Blood to lay down nor ſhed.

Laſtly, It was not ſo fit that we ſhould be Reconciled by Angels, but by one in our own Nature, that ſo the Devils might be the more confounded. Now ſeeing the Devil had out of Malice ruined Mans Nature, God would have Mans Nature to deſtroy the Works of the Devil, as 1 John 3. 8. He

that committeth ſin, is of the devil; for the devil ſinneth from the beginning. For this purpoſe the Son of God was manifeſted, that he might deſtroy the works of the devil. And God to the Devils confuſion would have him led captive by one who is Man. So Heb. 2. 14. He took the nature of man, that he might by death deſtroy him that had the power of death; it is a Reaſon given of his aſſuming it. If this great Act had been done by an Angel, the Devil might have ſaid he had met with his match, and ſo was foiled; but to have it done by a weak Man, one that was once a babe, a ſuckling, this was a mighty confuſion of him. And thus it is noticed in the 8th Pſalm, which is applyed to Chriſt, Out of the mouths of ſucklings thou haſt ordained ſtrength, that thou mighteſt ſtill the enemy and avenger: Pſal. 8. 2. And this very confuſion and revenge upon Satan, who was the cauſe of Mans fall, was aimed at by God at firſt, therefore is the firſt Promiſe and Preaching of the Goſpel to Adam brought in rather in ſentencing him than in ſpeaking to Adam, That the ſeed of the woman ſhould break the ſerpents head; it being in Gods aim as much to confound him as to ſave poor Man. Chap. 5.

CHAP. V.

That it was fit that our Mediator ſhould be both God and Man in One Perſon, that ſo he might partake of the Nature of both Parties, and be a Middle Perſon between them, and fill up the diſtance, and bring them near to one another. That he might be in a better Capacity to communicate unto us his Benefits, and that he might be capable of performing what our Redemption requir'd.

WE ſee then how much it behoved Chriſt to be Man as well as God, and indeed both; for a Mediator is a Mediator between two, Gal. 3. 20. and thoſe two between whom a Mediator muſt go, were God and Man; and therefore it is ſaid that there is but one Mediator between God and Man, the Man Chriſt Jeſus. 1 Tim. 2. 5. And this was moſt fit: For,

Firſt, Hereby he participates of both Natures, and ſo his Perſon doth bear a reſemblance of the work in general. Mediation was the buſineſs, and who ſo fit as a middle Perſon? Therefore firſt he became medius, a middle Perſon, and then a Mediator; firſt medius, then medians. A middle Perſon in regard of Participation of both Natures, and then a Mediator in regard of Reconciliation and Reconciling both Natures. And a middle Perſon not in order only, as Men are between Angels and Beaſts, and as a middle rank of Men are between thoſe above them and under them, but of participation, as having the Natures of both. A middle Perſon not in place only, as Moſes when he ſtood between God and the People, Exod. 5. 5. but in Perſon. A medium, not only between God and us, but one with God and us, and ſymbolizing with both. Therefore our Divines ſay, that Mediatio operativa is founded, and hath influence from his Mediatio ſubſtantialis, that his Works of Mediation, whereby he Mediates for us, ariſeth from his Perſon, that they ariſe from both Natures, ſo as both Natures have an influence into into all his Works, and they are the Works of both, that ſo he might be totus Mediator, a whole, entire Mediator in his Perſon, and in his Works.

And Secondly, Hereby he is of equal diſtance and difference from both, as he is God he differs from us, as he is Man he differs from God : Yea, and as he is Mediator he takes on him a differing Perſon as it were from himſelf, and what he is eſſentially, as being only the Son of God; for he became leſſer than himſelf in his Office, and emptied himſelf, and ſo is a fit Mediator between us and himſelf alſo, as he is the Son of God, Differt Filius incarnatus, οἰκονομικῶς, a ſeipſo φυσικῶς. The Son incarnate differs Miniſterially from what himſelf is Naturally. As we ſay in Philoſophy, Una & eadem res a ſeipſa diverſa eſt, modo & ratione. One and the ſame thing is differenced from it ſelf by a different modus, or manner of exiſting.

Thirdly, Hereby he is indifferent alſo between both, ſo as not to take part with the one more than with the other, ready to diſtribute to both with unequal hands their due, and be faithful to both. Heb. 2. 17. That he might be a merciful and faithful high prieſt in things pertaining to God, to make reconciliation for the people. Lo here are the matters both of God and Man referred to him, for the cauſe of both was to be committed to him, Τὰ πρὸς Θεὸν, and τὰ πρὸς ἡμᾶς, therefore he partakes of both, and is diſtant from both, as middle thing participates of both extreams, and toucheth both.

Fourthly, He was to make Peace between both, and take away Hoſtility, therefore he takes Pledges both out of Earth and out of Heaven. He takes the chief Nature on Earth and the chief in Heaven, thereby to ſtill the enmity, and to part us who were fighting each againſt other; we againſt God and God againſt us. Now having our Nature and Gods, he had two hands able enough to part us, he could take hold of Gods ſtrength, and hold his hands, as it is Iſa. 27. 5. and ſo make Peace, and having our Nature he had a hand to take hold of our hands alſo.

Fifthly, He is hereby able to draw near to both, and bring both together, and ſo make us one, for is not he fit to do this that is both God and Man ? He joyns our Nature firſt with God in his own Perſon, and makes both one there, that ſo God and Man becoming One in Perſon he might the eaſilier make God and Man one in Covenant. God and Man were at diviſion, and when he would make utrumque unum, he becomes & unum ex utroque : He by this means is in a friendly way able to treat with both, and hath an hand to ſhake with both. He is become the Man Gods fellow ; Zach. 13. 7. if he had been Gods fellow only, and not the Man Gods fellow, he might have drawn near to God, and yet we have been never the nearer, and yet if not more than Man and ſo Gods fellow, (which no meer Man could be) he could not have approached to God ; as Jer. 30. 21. And their nobles ſhall be of themſelves, and their governour ſhall proceed from the midſt of them, and I will cauſe him to draw near, and he ſhall approach unto me : for who is this that engaged his heart to approach unto me? ſaith the Lord. Who but he could have engaged his heart, or aſſumed the boldneſs to have drawn near to God ? And yet withal he being the Man Gods fellow, we may draw nigh to him, and come to God by him, as the phraſe is in the Epiſtle to the Hebrews, for why he comes out of the midſt of us, as in the ſame, Jer. 30. 21. thus Heb. 4. 15, 16. For we have not an high prieſt which cannot be touched with the feeling of our infirmities; but was in all points tempted like as we are, yet without ſin. Let us therefore come boldly unto the throne of grace, that we may obtain mercy, and find grace to help in time of need. And Heb. 10. 21, 22. And having an high prieſt over the houſe of God : let us draw near with a true heart, in full aſſurance of faith, having our hearts ſprinkled from an evil conſcience, and our bodies waſhed with pure water.

Sixthly,

Sixthly, He could hereby communicate the benefit of all he did for us unto us, which without it had not been done, Participavit de noſtro ut communicaret ſuum : He partakes of ours, that he may communicate to us his. We are to participate the Divine Nature, 2 Pet. 1. 4, and therefore he takes part of ours. If we were to have Righteouſneſs from him, it was fit our own Nature ſhould be the fountain ; John 17. 19. For their ſakes I ſanctifie my ſelf, that they may be ſanctified : [I] that is my Deity, ſanctifies [my ſelf] that is my Humane Nature, which he calls himſelf, becauſe it was one in Perſon with himſelf : It was fit that that Nature that ſinned ſhould be ſanctified to condemn ſin in the fleſh, Rom. 8. 3. And hence it is the benefit of his Righteouſneſs is not extended to Angels, becauſe he that ſanctifies and them that are ſanctified, are of one, Heb. 2. 11. which he and Angels are not ; and therefore his Merits reach not in a proper and direct way unto them : The intenſe worth indeed of his benefits ariſeth from his abilities and ſufficiency Perſonal, but the extenſion from his ſo proper fitneſs that he was a Man ; and therefore reacheth only to Men.

Seventhly, That which he was to do for us required he ſhould be both God and Man : For conſider but the principal parts of the Work that he was to do, and it was fit that he ſhould be both, that what did not become the one Nature, the other might do.

1. He was to keep and fulfil the Law, and be ſubject to it, and to merit by keeping it : Now if he had not been Man he could not have been ſubject to the Law, therefore he was made of a Woman, and made under the Law ; firſt therefore made of a Woman, that ſo he might be under the Law : Gal. 4. 4. But when the fulneſs of the time was come, God ſent forth his Son made of a woman, made under the law. And if he had not been God he could not have merited for us by that his keeping the Law, for he had done but what was required, and what was a due, and ſo it could have reacht but to himſelf : For all Creatures, when they have done all they can, are but unprofitable ſervants ; and he that merits muſt do it by his own ſtrength, for otherwiſe what haſt thou that thou haſt not received?

2. He that is our Mediator muſt dye and overcome Death, for he was to reſcue us from Death, and deſtroy him that had the power of it. Now if he had not been Man he could not have dyed, therefore he took ſuch a Body as we have that he might dye, he could not have taſted of Death elſe. Heb. 2. 9. But we ſee Jeſus, who was made a little lower than the angels, for the ſuffering of death, crowned with glory and honour ; that he by the grace of God ſhould taſte death for every man. Ver. 14. Foraſmuch then as the children are partakers of fleſh and blood, he alſo himſelf likewiſe took part of the ſame : that through death he might deſtroy him that had the power of death, that is, the devil. And if he had not been God he could not have raiſed himſelf ; Rom. 1. 4. And declared to be the Son of God with power, according to the ſpirit of holineſs, by the reſurrection from the dead : Therefore John 10. 18. I lay down my life (ſaith he) and take it up again.

(1.) He had not had a Life to lay down if he had not been Man, for the Godhead could not dye.

(2.) If he had not been God he could not have merited by laying it down, it muſt be his own, not in the dominion of another ; now the Lives of Creatures are not their own, and therefore their laying of them down cannot merit.

(3.) He muſt have it in his own power ; if another could take it away he could not have merited, for it muſt be a voluntary laying it down, and there is no meer Man but another may take away his Life from him if God prevent not ; but Chriſt having his Life wholly in his own power, reſign'd it, therefore that Centurion ſaid he was God. Mat. 27. 54.

(4.) He could not elſe take it up again. None ought to dye but Man, none could give up his Life, and reaſſume it, but God ; he had the paſſive power to dye as Man, the active power to dye of himſelf as God.

Book II.

(5.) And ſo for enduring the Wrath of God, if he had not been Man he had not had a Soul to be heavy to the Death ; and if he had not been God it had dyed through heavineſs, if the Godhead had not upheld him that upholds all things.

(6.) Alſo he was to be a Judge, and that he could not be unleſs he had been God : And alſo an Advocate, and that he could not be, unleſs he had been Man.

CHAP. VI.

How the two Natures, the Divine and Humane, which are ſo different, are united into One Perſon, Chriſt God-Man. That the Son of God did not aſſume an Humane Perſon, but the Nature. The Reaſons why an Humane Perſon could not have been aſſumed. It was our whole Nature which the Son of God took, both Soul and Body. The Reaſons which made this neceſſary.

AND now that we have the Reaſons that he was to be both, you will ask how can this be that he ſhould be both ? The Text reſolves it, and ſayes, He took to himſelf : Heb. 2. 16. The meaning is, he did take Mans Nature into One Perſon with himſelf: He not only took on him, but to him, ἐπιλαμβάνεσθαι aſſumpſit ad ; Aſſumpſit non Hominem Perſonam, ſed Hominem in Perſonam : He took not the Perſon of a Man, but Man to be One Perſon with himſelf. He took the ſeed of Abraham, to himſelf, that is, to ſubſiſt in himſelf, not of it ſelf, and to have his ſubſiſtence communicated to it ; this Nature being as an appendix, as a part of him ſubſiſting in him, but communicating the ſubſiſtence of that Divine Perſon to the Humane Nature, that they are Perſonally one, as truly as Soul and Body joyned become one Man ; and therefore the phraſe is, that this Second Perſon was made Fleſh. John 1. 14. And the Word was made fleſh, and dwelt among us (and we beheld his glory, the glory as of the only begotten of the Father) full of grace and truth. Though God dwells in the Saints in Heaven, and fills them with his fulneſs, as a cauſe efficient of all their glory and their chiefeſt good, yet they are not ſo united as that God can be ſaid to be made the Saints, but Chriſt may be ſaid to be made Man, and to be as eſſentially Man as he is God ; made not as the Water was made Wine, and ceaſing to be Water ; but both Natures remaining diſtinct, are made One Perſon, ſo as both became One Lord and One Chriſt ; there is One Lord, 1 Cor. 8. 6. But to us there is but one God, the Father, of whom are all things, and we in him, and one Lord Jeſus Chriſt, by whom are all things, and we by him : God and Man perſonally One : So 2 Cor. 5. 14. For the love of Chriſt conſtraineth us, becauſe we thus judge, that if one dyed for all, then were all dead. One is ſaid to have dyed for all, that is, but One Perſon, though there were Two Natures, God and Man, yet but One Perſon of both. That as in the Trinity there are Three Perſons in One Nature and Godhead, ſo here are Two Natures, One in Perſon and Subſiſtence (the manner of which union hath no ſimilitude in Nature to expreſs it by) ſo as in the concrete the Man Chriſt may be called God, and the Son of God, (ſo Luke 2. 35. That which ſhall be born of thee, ſhall be called the Son of God) though the Manhood cannot be called the Godhead. And then this Second Perſon is ſaid to dwell in that Nature, Coloſſ. 2. 9. The fulneſs of the Godhead is ſaid to dwell in him bodily; and ſo notes out a permanent union, not God to dwell in him only by his Graces, but the Godhead is ſaid to dwell in him, and the fulneſs of the Godhead to fill that Humane Nature, as Fire fills the Iron that is in it; (And not to dwell in him as in the Saints by Grace, and as being their portion, uniting himſelf to them as an Object they love, as God is ſaid to be all in all in the Saints in Heaven, and as the Spirit dwells in us, ſanctifying &c. and as the ſame Spirit dwells in Chriſt) ſubſtantially dwelling in him, σωματικῶς; that is, not only in a Body, noting out the ſubject in which; but the manner, Perſonally, Bodily: Now the Græcians put σῶμα to expreſs a Perſon, σώματα πολλὰ τρέφειν: And ſo Thucidides, σώμασι πολεμεῖν: As the Hebrews put Soul for Perſon; Exod. 15. the Souls came out of the Loins of Jacob; the Grecians uſe the word Body, ſo that Bodily is Perſonally. Chap. 6.

God communicates his Preſence to all Creatures, his Grace to the Saints; but the Son of God communicates his Perſonality, his Subſiſtence to the Man Chriſt Jeſus: (This is the higheſt communication: For his Nature is communicable to none but the Three Perſons) So as our Nature and Chriſts Perſon is One; not in Office only, as two Conſuls or Bayliffs in a Town, that have a joynt Commiſſion; not as Man and Wife only, who are in a relation one fleſh; not Spiritually only, as Chriſt and we his Members are one Spirit, as the Head and Members are one; but they are Perſonally one: So as when we ſee a Man, we ſay, there is ſuch a Man, ſuch a Perſon; ſo when you ſhall ſee Chriſt at the latter day you may ſay as John doth, 1 Joh. 5. 20. This is the true God and eternal life.

God is the Principium of Subſiſtence to all, but in Chriſt he is the Terminus ſubſiſtendi, not yet ſo as if the Perſonal property were communicated, that is incommunicable, as to be begotten of God, and to ſubſiſt of it ſelf, but that the Second Perſon becomes a foundation of ſubſiſtence to the Humane Nature of Chriſt, as an Oak is to the Ivy.

Now to ſhew the grounds why this was fit, (which is the proper ſcope of this Diſcourſe) why this union was requiſite, and fitted him for the Work of Mediation. Had he not been thus God and Man he could not have been Mediator. For,

1. It being neceſſary he ſhould be God and Man, and remain perfectly God and perfectly Man, and the Son of God and the ſame Perſon that he was, therefore they could no way elſe be united to do us good; for they could not the one be changed into the other, for God was immutable; and it was impoſſible that the Nature of Man ſhould become the Nature of God, ſince the Eſſence of the Godhead is incommunicable: And if they had been ſo united as that a Third Perſon out of both had been made, as when the Elements are made one in a Mans Body, as the Soul and Body make one Man, beſides the impoſſibility of it, it had not ſerved this turn: For he that redeems us muſt be God and Man, therefore there is no way but that the Perſonality of the Second Perſon be communicated to the Humane, both Natures remaining united in One Perſon; it cannot be more nor leſs. If the Perſonality of the Son of God had been communicated only by Power and Grace, &c. then his Actions had been of God as the Author or Efficient, but not Actions of the Perſon of the Son of God, as his Perſonal Actions, which ſhould have received a worth from him.

And 2. This will fit us well, for now all that Chriſt as God doth, the Man Chriſt ſhall be ſaid to do for us, that ſo it may be ours; and all that Chriſt Man doth, Chriſt God ſhall be ſaid to do, that it may have an infinite merit in it: For as there is a communication of the Perſonality of Chriſt to the Manhood, ſo of acceptance of all the Humane Nature doth: 1 Pet. 3. 18. For Chriſt alſo hath once ſuffered for ſins, the juſt for the unjuſt, (that he might bring us to God) being put to death in the fleſh, but quickned by the Spirit : And therefore the Blood ſhed ſhall be called the Blood of God, as well as the Man is called the Son of God ; ſo Acts 20. 28. Take heed therefore unto your ſelves, and to all the flock, over the which the holy Ghoſt hath made you overſeers, to feed the church of God, which he hath purchaſed with his own blood : And ſo the Lord of glory is ſaid to be crucified, 1 Cor. 2. 8. Which none of the princes of this world knew : for had they known it, they would not have crucified the Lord of glory. And as the Perſon is One, ſo the Redemption and all that both did, became one Work of Mediation, and One is ſaid to dye for all, Chriſt as One, God and Man, ſo as when he offered up the Humane Nature as a ſacrifice he may be ſaid to offer up himſelf, for it is himſelf, and he poured out his own Soul, &c. Heb. 9. 14. How much more ſhall the blood of Chriſt, who through the eternal Spirit, offered himſelf without ſpot to God, purge your conſcience from dead works to ſerve the living God ? Iſa. 53. 12. Therefore will I divide him a portion with the great, and he ſhall divide the ſpoil with the ſtrong : becauſe he hath poured out his ſoul unto death : and he was numbered with the tranſgreſſours, and he bare the ſin of many, and made interceſſion for the tranſgreſſours.

Now then, if this Manhood be aſſumed into One Perſon with the Son of God, then it could not remain a Perſon of it ſelf, and ſo the Text alſo intimates, calling him the Seed, Heb. 2. 16. as not a Perſon, but an Humane Nature ; ſo as though he took our Nature, and an individual particular Nature, yet that Nature was not a Perſon. Therein indeed his Humane Nature differs from ours ; but that difference is not in any part of the ſubſtance of our Natures but only in a complement of being, or rather a modification of being, a difference in the manner of ſubſiſting, it is no more.

(1.) The Nature is the ſame for being and ſubſtance.

(2.) It is an individual Nature.

But (3.) It is not a Perſon of it ſelf apart for ſubſiſtence ; for that is properly called a Perſon that ſubſiſts in it ſelf, though we all have our being in God, and exiſt by him as in a cauſe thereof, yet we do not ſubſiſt as one with him as a Perſon ; that is, we are Perſons apart and alone of our ſelves, and God and we are two Perſons, but our Nature in Chriſt is one with God, and in God.

The Reaſons of this are two.

1. It was not indeed poſſible that a Perſon (as the Second Perſon was) ſhould aſſume another Perſon ſubſiſting of it ſelf into Perſonal Union with him, it had been a contradiction, and therefore it is impoſſible : For that Two Perſons remaining Two ſhould become One is a contradiction, even as to ſay of an accident (the nature of which is to ſubſiſt in a ſubſtance) that it ſubſiſts in it ſelf is a contradiction. Now to be a Perſon of it ſelf is to ſubſiſt of it ſelf alone ; this is the condition of its ſubſiſting as it is a Perſon, and therefore here in the 16th Verſe of this Heb. 2. when he ſpeaks but by way of ſuppoſition of the Second Perſons aſſuming the Nature of Angels, he doth not ſay, he took not on himſelf an Angel, but not of Angels, that is, the Nature of Angels ; for to have aſſumed the Perſon of an Angel had been a contradiction, and ſo ſuch a phraſe of ſpeech was not fit to have been uſed ſo much as in a ſuppoſition.

2. As it was not poſſible that the Second Perſon of the Godhead ſhould take the Perſon of a Man into Union with himſelf, ſo it was not fit (the demonſtration of which is that which I in this Diſcourſe did aim at) for the Work of Mediation. For although it was neceſſary for that Work that he ſhould be an individual particular Man as we are, particularly exiſting, for elſe he could not merit, nor act, nor ſuffer, for all merits and actions are of individuals ; yet if he had ſubſiſted of himſelf, and been a Perſon of himſelf as Man, all that merit and actions of Obedience would have been but for himſelf. If he had been a Perſon of himſelf apart, ſo his merits would have been for himſelf apart, and he ſubſiſting in his own bottom, and in himſelf as a Perſon, muſt have ſtood by his own Obedience, and ſo all his Obedience would have been but enough for himſelf, and have been ſhut up in himſelf, and confined to himſelf. But he having an individual Nature of Man as we all have, without a propriety of ſubſiſtence, all his Obedience may be common for all others, and as many as he ſhall pleaſe to communicate it unto may have a ſhare in it; it may be a common Salvation, as it is called Jude 3. Beloved, when I gave all diligence to write unto you of the common ſalvation: it was needful for me to write unto you, and exhort you that ye ſhould earneſtly contend for the faith which was once delivered unto the ſaints. For our Nature in him as it is Humane is not circumſcribed or incloſed with a proper ſubſiſtence of its own, but lies like a field unincloſed, not hedged in with Perſonality as all our Natures are. Chap. 6.

And to this purpoſe obſerve the phraſes whereby the Scripture expreſſeth this Nature aſſumed by the Son of God, which are ſuch as do imply, that that which was aſſumed was only a Humane Nature and not a Perſon: As when it is ſaid, He took the ſeed of Abraham, Heb. 2. 16. not a Perſon, but the Seed, our Nature, ſemen eſt intimum ſubſtantiæ, the quinteſſence of Nature, but notes not out a Perſon. So the Word is ſaid to be made fleſh, that word Fleſh noteth out but one Nature aſſumed, not a Perſon; and therefore the Apoſtle ſpeaking of Chriſt, he makes him the Perſon, and his Fleſh or Humane Nature but as an appendix, Rom. 9. 5. Whoſe are the fathers, and of whom as concerning the fleſh Chriſt came, who is over all, God bleſſed for ever. Amen. And ſo in Luke 1 35. And the angel anſwered and ſaid unto her, The holy Ghoſt ſhall come upon thee, and the power of the higheſt ſhall overſhadow thee: therefore alſo that holy thing which ſhall be born of thee, ſhall be called the Son of God. The Angel there ſpeaks of Chriſts Humane Nature which was to be born of Mary, not as of a Perſon but as of a thing, in the Neuter Gender, That holy thing which ſhall be born of thee ſhall be called the Son of God: And beſides he the Man Chriſt could not have been called the Son of God, if he had been a Perſon apart of himſelf, for one Perſon is not predicated of another, the Husband cannot be called the Wife though moſt nearly united, for they are two Perſons: And therefore likewiſe Chriſt himſelf when he was to take our Nature, ſpeaking of that which was to be aſſumed, ſaith, Heb. 10. 5. A body haſt thou fitted me: [Me] notes out the Perſon, the other is but a Body aſſumed, ſo he calls it, becauſe himſelf as God was the Perſon; this was not a Perſon but the Nature of Man, therefore he calls it a Body, and ſo Col. 1. 22. In the body of his fleſh through death, to preſent you holy and unblameable, and unreprovable in his ſight: It is ἐν τῷ σώματι τῆ σαρκὸς, in that Body of his Fleſh.

But though he ſubſiſted not as an entire Perſon, yet it was fit and neceſſary that he ſhould be an whole and perfect Man entire; ſo as though he took not a Perſon on him, yet he took our whole Nature for ſubſtance, every way as perfect as ours, in all the parts of it, both of Soul and Body. He was made like us in all things, ſayes the Apoſtle, Heb. 2. 17. There was nothing wanting eſſential to either, or for the perfection of either part of our Nature, for he will be like us in all things, in all Members of our Bodies, and Faculties of our Souls. It is called Fleſh indeed and a Body, but yet leſt only a Body ſhould ſeem to be meant, he elſewhere is called A man, the man Chriſt Jeſus, as having all belonging to a Man, and he is called that Man, in Acts 17. 31. Becauſe he hath appointed a day in the which he will judge the world in righteouſneſs, by that man whom he hath ordained; whereof he hath given aſſurance unto all men, in that he hath raiſed him from the dead. He had a perfect Body as ours, and a Soul, and both united, and ſo was a whole Man.

1. For the Body, Col. 1. 22. 'tis called the body of his fleſh: They thought he had been a Spirit, but in oppoſition to their conceit, It is I, ſayes he, Mat. 14. 27. and feel ſayes he, hath a Spirit fleſh, and bloud, and bones? Luke 24. 39. And this was fit, that the ſimilitude of our Union might be the nearer, and that we might be truly called Members of his body, as being of his fleſh, and of his bones; as Eph. 5. 30. For we are members of his body, of his fleſh, and of his bones. Alſo becauſe he was to Reconcile us in the body of his fleſh through death, Col. 1. 22. by bearing our Sins upon his Body on the Tree: 1 Pet. 2. 24. Who his own ſelf bare our ſins in his own body on the tree, that we being

being dead to ſin, ſhould live unto righteouſneſs : by whoſe ſtripes ye were healed. If he had not had the Body of a Man, he could not have been faſtned to the Tree, nor endured our Sorrows, the pains of Death. And again, as all our Members are weapons of Unrighteouſneſs, therefore he was to take them all to ſanctifie all to God, and make them weapons of Righteouſneſs.

And that Body did not want a Soul, for his Soul was heavy unto death, Mat. 26. 38. And it was meet it ſhould be ſo, for firſt the chief ſuit and threatning for Sin was againſt the Soul, The ſoul that ſins ſhall dye, Ezek. 18. 20. therefore he muſt pour out his ſoul to death, Iſa. 53. 12. and it is the Redemption of the Soul that is precious, Pſal. 49. 8. For the redemption of their ſoul is precious, and it ceaſeth for ever; that is the chief thing to be redeemed, and that is ſo precious, as nothing but a Soul could be a fit price. He was made like us therefore, that he might ſuccour us in all reſpects. Heb. 4. 15. For we have not an high prieſt which cannot be touched with the feeling of our infirmities; but was in all points tempted like as we are, yet without ſin. Heb. 2. 17, 18. Wherefore in all things it behoved him to be made like unto his brethren; that he might be a merciful and faithful high prieſt, in things pertaining to God, to make reconciliation for the ſins of the people: For in that he himſelf hath ſuffered, being tempted, he is able to ſuccour them that are tempted. And now our greateſt temptations are in our Souls, and therefore he had a Soul to be tempted in all things, Sin only excepted, and ſo he knows how to pity our Souls, and the diſtreſs of them, and he joyes to be a Shepherd of our Souls, 1 Pet. 2. 25. For ye were as ſheep going aſtray; but are now returned unto the Shepherd and Biſhop of your Souls.

And then 2. Both Body and Soul muſt be united, elſe the Body could not dye, for Bodily Death is the ſeparation of Soul and Body, and that was threatned againſt us, and therefore to be executed on our Mediator ; and therefore when he dyed, it is ſaid, He gave up the ghoſt. Mat. 27. 50.

And he muſt be a whole perfect Man, for this Reaſon too, becauſe he was to be a Prieſt and a Sacrifice both, and the Prieſts in the Law were to be perfect Men in all parts of their Bodies, if they had any blemiſh they were not to be Prieſts, and ſo the Sacrifices were to be whole Burnt-offerings, therefore a whole Man was to be offered up by the Son of God.

And he being to redeem the whole Man, it was fit he ſhould take the whole Humane Nature. All that was loſt was to be ſaved by him, Luke 19. 10. He came to ſeek and to ſave that which was loſt : There was not that thing in Man that was loſt (as all was) but he ſaved it, and therefore took the whole of Man into Union with himſelf.

CHAP.

Chap. 7.

CHAP. VII.

That it was not only fit that Chriſt ſhould be Man, but ſuch a Man, as to be like us in the Matter and Subſtance of his Body; And to be like us in his Production and Birth, to be born of a Womanas we are. What are the reaſons of this. What is the reaſon why Chriſt though born of a Woman is yet without Sin. Why he is Man, and of the Jewiſh Nation.

NOW ſeeing he was thus to be a Man: Let us conſider what manner or kind of Man every way qualified was fitteſt in this buſineſs, and we ſhall find that ſuch a Man did God every way make him, for he muſt have an Humane Nature fitted for him on purpoſe, Heb. 10. 5. Wherefore when he cometh into the world, he ſaith, Sacrifice and offering thou wouldeſt not, but a body haſt thou prepared me. A Body haſt thou fitted me, ſo ſome read it, adaptaſti, fitted him with a Body for the purpoſe. And indeed if for all other Works God chooſeth out fit Inſtruments, then ſurely for this great Work of all Works elſe, and accordingly Divines call his Humane Nature Inſtrumentum Deitatis, the Inſtrument of the Godhead. It is not every kind of Body will fit him for this purpoſe of reconciling. Some Schoolmen have thought that not any other Humane Nature but that which was aſſumed could have been aſſumed; ſure I am a greater fitneſs could not have been in any, and all to make up this his Perſonal Fitneſs for a Mediator full, that in him all fulneſs might be found to dwell.

Now concerning what Qualifications are to be in him for this Work, we have this general Rule given us here in Heb. 2. 17 That it became him in all things to be made like to us who were his brethren: So as the liker he ſhould be to us, the fitter Mediator he ſhould be for us, and that for the very reaſon before-mentioned, that becauſe Juſtice admitted of a Commutation, it would yet come every way as nigh to have a full and proportionable ſatisfaction as could be: As ſatisfaction muſt be made in a Nature of the ſame kind by Man, not an Angel, ſo in ſuch a Nature a Man as ſhould be as near a kin to us, and like us as the matter would poſſibly permit, ſo as the buſineſs of Reconciliation be not hindred nor evacuated by it, for then he ſhould have loſt his end.

Firſt, Whereas he might have been a Man of the ſame Nature with us, conſiſting both of Body and Soul, and yet have been created immediately as Adam was out of nothing, yea, or out of Matter in Heaven (as ſome do dream) as his Body it ſelf is now Heavenly and Spiritual, and therefore called the heavenly man, 1 Cor. 15. 48, 49. Yet that he may be like to us, he will take Humane Nature of the ſame lump with ours, and out of which ours is taken; ſo here in Heb. 2. 14. He took part of the ſame; the ſame Fleſh and Blood that we have; and again, ver. 11. Both he that ſanctifieth, and they who are ſanctified are all of one; he ſaies, not only that both are One for Nature and kind, but all are of One, that is One Lump and Maſs, that ſo he might be a little the more akin to us, our Countryman, being made of the ſame Earth we are of: If he had been made of Heavenly Matter, he had been Countryman to the Angels rather, for Heaven is their Country, yea he had been utterly a Stranger to us though of the ſame Nature, as a Man dropt from Heaven would be, as ſome conceive Melchiſedec his Type to have been. And the the reaſon there given is proper and pertinent, for he was to ſanctifie us, and he that ſanctifies and they that are ſanctified, it is meet they ſhould be [of One.] The ground of this Reaſon is taken from that of the Levitical Law, by which the firſt Fruits ſanctified the whole Lump or Maſs which thoſe Fruits were taken out of, and they by this ſanctified the reſt, becauſe they were of the ſame Lump or Maſs as it is expreſſed, Rom. 11. 16. For if the firſt-fruit be holy, the lump is alſo holy: and if the root be holy, ſo are the branches. They were not only of the ſame Species of Creature that the reſt were of, but growing out of the ſame Earth that the reſt of the Fruits did. Now Chriſt as he is called the [Fruit] of the womb, Luke 1. 42. ſo the firſt Fruits, 1 Cor. 15. 20. But now is Chriſt riſen from the dead, and become the firſt-fruits of them that ſlept: Which though ſpoken of the Reſurrection only, yet holds in all even to his very Nature, he is in all things wherein he is like us the firſt fruits, and therefore is to be made like us in all, that he might be the firſt Fruits. And he was to ſanctifie others of Mankind, and this he had not ſo fitly and correſpondently according to the Law of Nature done, had not both they and he been all of one: And beſides God meant not to create anew any of Mankind, and therefore he made Woman of Man rather than of nothing, intending to make out of Adam all which he meant to make, even Chriſt and all.

But then

Secondly, He might have been made of the ſame lump if made of ſome Man in that manner as Eve was out of Adam, made of a Rib, or ſome ſuch part of Mankind; but he reſolves to come nearer yet, and to be made as like in all things as may be, and therefore he will be made of the ſame kind of Matter that we all are made of, even of Seed which is the quinteſſence, the Elixir of Mans Nature, Intimum ſubſtantiæ, and therefore the firſt Title and Appellation he was known by unto the Sons of Men was the Seed of the woman; Gen. 3 15. And I will put enmity between thee and the woman, and between thy ſeed and her ſe d: it ſhall bruiſe thy head, and thou ſhalt bruiſe his heel. So Acts 17. 26 God hath made Mankind all of one Blood, that ſo they might love one another; and he will have this Man that is to be our Redeemer to be of the ſame Blood, that is, of Seed, which is the Blood of Man concocted to an height, and therefore he is not only called a Man, but the Son of Man; Mat. 17. 12. Eve though made out of Man was not filia hominis, a Daughter of Man, nor Adam though a Man, yet not a Son of Man, no. In the Genealogy, Luke 3. 38. Adam is called the Son of God; but Chriſt is to be the Son of Man as well as Man, and that by being made of Seed, which all Men are made of, and ſo in Heb. 2. 16. He took not the nature of Angels, but the [ſeed] of Abraham: And the reaſon is given in the next verſe here, that he might call us Brethren, and not be aſhamed of us: A Brother is more than of the ſame Nature, it notes one made out of the ſame Blood; and God would have the ſame Blood run in his Veins that runs in ours: And this fitted him the more to be a Redeemer, and to have Right to do it by the Levitical Law alſo, for it was proper to a Brother to redeem, and a Stranger could not, Levit. 25. 25. If thy brother be waxen poor, and hath ſold away ſome of his poſſeſſion, and if any of his kin come to redeem it, then ſhall he redeem that which his brother ſold. So that the Church comes to have her wiſh, Cant. 8. 1. Oh that thou wert as my brother, &c. For ſo Chriſt is.

Yea,

Thirdly, He will come yet nearer, even in the manner of his production or being made a Man, as like as may be to that of ours, as near as poſſibly might be, ſo as not to take infection. He will be made of Seed even by a conception, and lye in the Womb and grow up there from a Tear, a Drop, by degrees as Man doth, and be born, and be a Suckling as we, as Pſal. 8. 2 ſpeaks of him, and therefore he is called the Fruits of the Womb, Luke 1. 42. And ſhe ſpake out with a loud voice, and ſaid, Bleſſed art thou among women, and bleſſed is the fruit of thy womb: And more expreſly, Luke 1. 31. Thou ſhalt conceive in thy womb, and bring forth a Son; ſpeaking to Mary. You ſee Chriſt is like to us in being produced both by the ſame way, and to lye in the ſame place, that ſecret and dark Chamber that all Mankind lyes in. Conception is the Groundſeil (as I may call it) of our Nature, which ſin had infected, and it was rotten and corrupted, and from it the Leproſie was ſpread over all the Walls of this Building, In ſin my mother conceived me, ſays David, Pſal. 51. 5. and Chriſt coming to repair and reſtore us from the very foundation, ſanctifies that very way of production, conception, and conſecrates the curious Room and Privy Chamber that all Mankind lies in. Man is ſaid by the Pſalmiſt to be curiouſly wrought in the lower parts of the earth, Pſal. 139. 15. and Chriſt Deſcends even thither, that ſo he may Aſcend the Higher; he takes his flight thus low, in that he Aſcended he Deſcended firſt into theſe lower parts of the Earth, which ſurely is part of the Apoſtles meaning in comparing it with that Pſalm, Epheſ. 4. 9, 10 Now that he aſcended, what is it but that he alſo deſcended firſt into the lower parts of the earth? ver. 10. He that deſcended, is the ſame alſo that aſcended up far above all heavens, that he might fill all things. And that we may be where he is, as he prayes, John 17. 24. He will condeſcend for a while to be where we were, encloſed in the Womb: And that we may come to his Place, his Manſion-Houſe in Heaven, his Fathers Houſe, he will firſt come down to our Place, our Mothers Houſe, for ſuch is the Womb: And therefore he is ſtill called The ſeed of the woman, and made of a woman, Gal. 4 4, 5. But when the fulneſs of the time was come, God ſent forth his Son made of a woman, made under the law, ver. 5. To redeem them that were under the law, that we might receive the adoption of ſons. To the end that he might be fitted to redeem us: This reaſon is expreſly added there, that he might redeem us that were under the law: And this Woman was yet a Virgin, as you ſhall ſee by and by, A Virgin ſhall conceive, Eſa. 7. 14. Therefore the Lord himſelf ſhall give you a ſign, Behold, a Virgin ſhall conceive, and bear a ſon, and ſhall call his name Immanuel. One reaſon of it beſides that which I ſhall anon give, might be, that God would take a new courſe in the rearing up this Humane Nature differing from what was taken afore. If he had made him out of Man, or the Rib of a Man, ſo he had made the Woman before; if out of nothing, ſo he had made the firſt Man before. But to make him of a Woman, and the Seed of the Woman, by Conception, without Man; this was a new thing in the Earth, as the Prophet ſpeaks, Eſa. 43. 19. And God herein kept ſome further correſpondency alſo with Mans ſinning, that (as was obſerved before) as by a Man came Death, ſo by Man ſhould come the Reſurrection, God obſerved a proportion in it. So here, a Woman afore deſtroyed us, and was firſt in the tranſgreſſion; nevertheleſs both ſhe and we ſhall be ſaved by her Child-bearing, or that Child-bearing (as ſome interpret that place. 1*Tim.*2.15.) And Adam layd all the blame on the Woman (reflecting withal on God,) Gen. 3. 12. And the man ſaid, The woman, whom thou gaveſt to be with me, ſhe gave me of the tree, and I did eat. And therefore God preſently to meet with him, ſayes, The ſeed of the woman, not the man, ſhall break the Serpents Head, as if he had ſaid, Thou haſt laid the fault on me for giving thee a Woman, becauſe ſhe hath been the occaſion of thy Fall, but I will be even with thee; (but 'tis in Mercy as Gods revenges on his Children are.) Thou ſhalt have cauſe to thank me more for this Woman, than thou now haſt done, for the ſeed of the woman ſhall break the ſerpents head, and ſo doth God reprove him, and for his unthankfulneſs puts the Honour upon the Woman. Chap. 7.

Objection, Yea but now in the fourth place, you will ſay, This Kindred is too nigh, he had better have marryed our Nature further off, and at a greater diſtance; for thus he is in danger to be made ſinful. Doth not the Pſalmiſt ſay, In ſin my mother conceived me, Pſal. 51. 5. Doth not the Apoſtle ſay, And ſuch an high prieſt became us as was ſeparated from ſinners? Heb. 7. 26. Why then the work of our Redemption will be ſpoyled by this way of Conception of Chriſt, and he be unfitted for the Work.

Book II.

But for Anſwer, though there is a concipiet, yet not a genitus eſt, though there is a Conception, yet not a Generation: It is Conception upon Generation defiles, Man begets in his Image, but Chriſt was not begotten but conceived only, he comes ſo neer you ſee that 'tis but the cutting of a hair keeps him from being infected, and ſo though he will have the ſame ſubſtance, yet ſeparate from Sinners, as there the ſeparation means, quantum ad culpam, as to ſin; non naturam, as to Nature; and therefore though he will be conceived in the ſame place we are, and be of the ſame ſubſtance with us, yet not after the ſame way; and it is not the ſubſtance that defiles, or the place, but the way of framing our Natures, we are framed by generation of Man and Woman, he but by Conception only of a Woman, but made by the Holy Ghoſt, ſo in our Creed conceived by the Holy Ghoſt, ſo in Luke 1. 35. The Holy Ghoſt ſhall overſhadow thee, and Matth. 1. 20. That which is conceived in thee is of the Holy Ghoſt: Not σπερματικῶς, but δημιεργικῶς, as the Builder framing and forming his Body; Therefore it is not ſaid he was begotten of a Woman, but made of a Woman, non genitus ſed factus, and therefore he is called The Man from Heaven, though the matter of his Body was from Earth, 1 Cor. 15. 47, 48. And to this purpoſe 'tis obſervable, that Heb. 10. 5. is with difference ſpoken of Chriſts Humane Nature and ours, A Body haſt thou prepared me, that is God did it, and not Man by Generation, which is the ordinary way of producing Men, and the only way of conveying Sin. The Parents they are therefore ſaid to beget a Man, not becauſe they afford matter and ſtuff, but becauſe there goes a forming Power, vis plaſtica as Philoſophers call it, that doth prepare the Matter, form it, and to uſe the word, which is here, doth καταρτίζειν articulate it for the Soul, which is the utmoſt they do, and for which they are ſaid to beget, and wherein the very Formalis ratio of Generation lyes. Accurately therefore to diſtinguiſh this production of the Humane Nature of Chriſt from the ordinary, though he uſeth the ſame word that ſignifies the manner of making our Bodies by way of articulation, yet he expreſſeth it as done by another hand, [Thou haſt prepared it] the Holy Ghoſt performing that which the vis plaſtica or forming power in all other Generations uſeth to do. Luk. 1. 35. And the Angel anſwered and ſaid unto her, The Holy Ghoſt ſhall come upon thee, and the power of the Higheſt ſhall overſhadow thee: therefore alſo that holy thing which ſhall be born of thee, ſhall be called the Son of God. That though the Matter is the ſame, and this formed by articulation as ours is, yet it is done by the Power of the moſt High, and therefore exempted from Sin; therefore he adds, That Holy One that ſhall be born of thee ſhall be called the Son of God. For becauſe Generation by Men is the only way of conveying Sin, and the formalis ratio of Generation lyes in that vis plaſtica, whereby a Parent forms the birth, (as Philoſophy teacheth) therefore his Body though made of the ſame Matter, Seed, that ours is, and that Seed articulated into the ſame ſhape ours is, yet becauſe by another hand, the power of the moſt high, therefore he is a Holy one, ſeparate from Sinners, his Body being a Tabernacle which God pitcht, not Man, Heb. 8.2. Not of this Building, not built as Mans is, not by the ſame hands, as Heb. 9. 11. But Chriſt being come an high prieſt of good things to come, by a greater and more perfect tabernacle, not made with hands, that is to ſay, not of this building: Man reared it not, nor joynted it, nor framed it, but a Body haſt Thou (O God) prepared. And therefore this Body was of a Virgin without a Father, that as Melchiſedeck is ſaid, Heb. 7. 3. to be without Father and Mother; So Chriſt as Man was without Father, and as God without a Mother; who is therefore the Stone cut out of the ſame Quarry with us, but without hands, Dan. 2 45. that is the help of Nature or by a Man. And it was neceſſary:

For,

1. Otherwiſe his Humane Nature had been a Perſon (the inconvenience of which you heard afore) for terminus generationis eſt perſona. What is produced by Generation is a Perſon.

And,

And,

2. He had otherwiſe had two Fathers, which Nature abhors that one Perſon ſhould have two Fathers. Chap. 7.

And in preparing this Nature of Chriſt, the Holy Ghoſt ſanctified that Matter, and purified it as Goldſmiths do Gold from the Droſs. And his buſineſs being to part Sin and our Fleſh, it was fit he ſhould take ſuch Fleſh as though once ſinful, yet now Sin was parted from it. It is Generation defiles, for that which is born of the Fleſh is Fleſh, John 3. 6. and that as from a Man, by whom Sin is conveyed; but it follows in the ſame place, that which is born of the Spirit is Spirit. Now of Chriſt it is ſaid that which is conceived in thee, is of the Holy Ghoſt, Matth. 1. 20. But while he thought on theſe things, behold, the angel of the Lord appeared unto him in a dream, ſaying, Joſeph, thou ſon of David, fear not to take unto thee Mary thy wife: for that which is conceived in her is of the holy Ghoſt. It is not the matter nor the place we are conceived in defiles, but the being begotten by a Man in the ordinary way of Nature, upon which the Law of Nature ſiezeth, by which a Man is to beget in his own likeneſs. And therefore the difference of the Phraſe uſed here in Heb. 2 11. of Chriſt and us, and that in Rom. 5. 12. ſpeaking of our coming from Adam is obſervable. Here in Heb. 2. 11. Chriſt and we are ſaid to be of One, that is of one lump, but the phraſe that is uſed, Rom. 5. 12 when the Apoſtle ſpeaks of the propagation of Original Sin runs thus, By one Man ſin entred, becauſe all came by and of that one Man; And therefore though Chriſt be made a Son of Adam, Luke 3. 38. as made of that ſubſtance and matter derived from him, yet not in regard of the ſame way of conveying that matter, by fleſhly Generation of a Man, which is the Natural Channel of conveying his Image and Original Sin.

Fifthly, To make up this diſproportion, he will in all other reſpects be yet the more like to us, and ſeeing he muſt not take ſinful fleſh, yet he will take the likeneſs of ſinful fleſh, as Rom. 8. 3. For what the law could not do, in that it was weak through the fleſh, God ſending his own Son, in the likeneſs of ſinful fleſh, and for ſin condemned ſin in the fleſh. He partakes of Fleſh and Blood, Heb. 2. 17. And by Fleſh and Blood are meant Infirmities of all ſorts, he excepts Sin only, a Body paſſible, he might have had a Body exempted, from all Sufferings, or Miſery, but he would not. And this aſſumption of frail Fleſh was the firſt part of ſatisfaction for Sin, and the condemning Sin in our Fleſh is attributed to it, Rom 8. 3. He took not indeed Perſonal Infirmities, as Sickneſs, but what were common to Mans Nature, he did bear Dolores noſtros our griefs, not of John or Peter, not ſuch evils as came from the particular ſins of Men, but ſuch as flowed from the common ſin of Man, nor ſuch as do ſpring from ſin, as not deſpair, though fear, and thoſe he took was to ſhew his love, and as they were part of the Curſe, that he might be able to pity us, and that he might ſuffer and dye and feel the pains of Death, in all which he was left to infirmity as you have it, 2 Cor. 13. 4. For though he was crucified through weakneſs, yet he liveth by the power of God: For we alſo are weak in him, but we ſhall live with him by the power of God toward you. And ſo in this Text he was partaker of Fleſh and Blood that is of the infirmities of Mans Nature as well as of the Nature, that through Death he might deſtroy him that had the power of Death, that is, the Devil: If he had not taken this frail Fleſh, he could not have dyed.

Hitherto you have heard every way what manner of Man he was, and ſuch as in all reſpects was fitteſt for him to be, in all things. But there are two things yet to be added, and both ſuch as will yet make him fitter. I add them that you may every way ſee a fulneſs in it.

Therefore,

Sixthly, Mans Nature you know was diverſified into two Sexes, Male and Female; Now which of the two was the fitteſt for him to aſſume? And this is a diſtinct conſideration from all the former. Of the two a Male was fitteſt, and ſuch was he. It is not ſo directly in the Text, and yet all that is ſpoken of him runs in the Maſculine Gender, Him and He, and ſo this is included. Matth. 1. 21. Thou ſhalt bring forth a Son, and ver. laſt. She brought forth her firſt born Son, and ſo Luke 2. 22. For he was to be our High Prieſt and conſecrated to God as Holy, and ſo thereby to ſanctifie his Brethren, as Heb. 2. 11. hath it, and ſo was the firſt Male Child by the Law, which is on purpoſe noted, Luke 2. 22. Every Male that openeth the Womb ſhall be called Holy to the Lord. And again all his other Offices required it, he was to be a Prophet and to teach Gods Will firſt, Heb. 2. 2, 3. and for ever to be in the great Congregation, and a Woman is not to teach in the Church. He was to be a King, and to rule his Church, and a Woman is not to Uſurp Authority over the man. He was to be an Husband and his Church a Spouſe, and only a Male could fitly bear that Relation. And beſides all this there was this further Harmony in it, that as by the Male, the Man not the Woman, ſin is ſaid to enter into the World, Rom. 5. 19. So by the Man we ſhould be reſtored: And thus indeed both Sexes came to ſhare in this Honour, the Male, in that Chriſt himſelf is a Man, the Female, in that ſhe yet was the Inſtrument of bringing him forth into the World. He is of the Womans Seed, but of Mans Sex, that ſo both Male and Female might be all one in Chriſt Jeſus.

There is now but one thing left, and that is, ſeeing God hath appointed ſeveral Bounds to Mans Habitation, though all are made of one Blood, of what Countrey or Kindred of Men was it fitteſt for our Redeemer to be of? God pitcht it on what of all was fitteſt, that he ſhould be of the Seed of Abraham. This Heb. 2. 16. you ſee alſo hath it. and ſo I could not but take notice of it. As he took the Nature of Man not of Angels, ſo he took the Seed of Abraham more eminently than of any other Nation, although he had by ſome of his Progenitors Gentiles Blood in him, yet he was of Abraham in a lineal Deſcent, Rom. 9. 4, 5. Who are Iſraelites; to whom pertaineth the adoption, and the glory, and the covenants, and the giving of the law, and the ſervice of God, and the promiſes. ver. 5. Whoſe are the fathers, and of whom as concerning the fleſh Chriſt came, who is over all, God bleſſed for ever. Amen. I will not mention any other reaſon of this, but what is proper to ſet out his fitneſs the more for this Work. It was well for us that he took Abrahams Seed, for ſo in him all Nations were bleſſed as was the promiſe, Abraham being Father of all the faithful: But eſpecially he was thereby engaged to keep the whole Law for us; for Abrahams Seed were all to be circumciſed, and he that was circumciſed was a Debtor to the whole Law, Gal. 5. 3. For I teſtifie again to every man that is circumciſed, that he is a debtor to do the whole law And ſo the Law will take hold of him, and ſo hereby he was made under the Law; And this was one reaſon why he was a Male Child alſo, for they only were circumciſed. Thus you ſee Chriſt hereby engaged to keep the Law for us, yea, to ſatisfie for Sin; for the Ceremonial Law was a Bond againſt us, which he muſt cancel and deſtroy.

CHAP.

Chap. 8.

CHAP. VIII.

The Uſes. Since God hath thus fitted us with a Mediator, we may be aſſured that he will fit us with all other things. Let us chooſe Chriſt to be our only Saviour, and truſt in none but him. Is he God? Let us not then fear, or doubt. Hath he taken our Nature? Let us admire his Love in this, and conſider our own Priviledge. Let us endeavour to fit our Natures all that we can for Fellowſhip with him.

WE will now come to Uſes of all this: And ſurely the Doctrine of Chriſt will afford many: For his Perſon is the moſt Uſeful of any in Heaven and Earth. I deferred the Uſes until the laſt, that ſo you might view the Frame of the Doctrinal Part as ſet together without ſeparation.

The Firſt Uſes ſhall be from this, That God choſe him to be Mediator, becauſe of his Fitneſs above all other.

I. Hence learn, and be aſſured, That that Love which thus fitted thee with a Saviour, will much more fit thee with all other things which thou haſt need of. Thou ſhalt have the fitteſt Condition, the fitteſt Calling, the fitteſt Yoak-Fellow, the fitteſt Eſtate [food convenient] as Agar ſpeaks: God will fit thee in every thing. Thus he ſought out a meet help for Adam; Gen. 2. 20. The Fulneſs of Fitneſs in Chriſt to be a Saviour is a Pawn for fitting and ſuiting thee with all things elſe, for he that gave Chriſt, gives all beſides, Rom. 8. 32. He that ſpared not his own Son, but delivered him up for us all, how ſhall he not with him alſo freely give us all things. And believe that as all things do meet in Chriſt, and nothing is wanting that may make him a fit and meet Saviour for thee, ſo all things ſhall conſpire, all things ſhall ſuit and kiſs each other; Sins, Afflictions, Mercies, yea, all Gods Dealings ſhall work together for thy good. Be quiet therefore and truſt him in all; Lean not, (as Solomon ſaies) to thine own wiſdom, Prov. 3. 5. Thou knoweſt not what is fitteſt for thee, as the Sons of Zebedee did not when they asked for a Place that was not fit for them. The Phyſitian knows what is fit for his Patient, better than he himſelf does, and ſo does God: He takes meaſure of thy Spirit, and knows the Compoſition of it; and ſo orders his Preſcripts accordingly. We cannot judge what is fit for us, God only can. If thou hadſt ſeen Chriſt in the Fleſh, poor and deſpiſed (as he was whilſt on Earth) thy Carnal Heart would have judged him as unlikely and as unfit a Man to be the Saviour of the World, as the Jews did; Iſa. 52. 14. (his countenance was ſo marred) Thou wouldſt never have thought that a Carpenters Son ſhould build God a Church; that a Man unlearned ſhould be the Prophet of Gods People. The Jews refuſed him as an unfit Stone to be laid in their Building whom God had yet hewn out on purpoſe, as being only fit to be made the head ſtone of the corner, as a Stone Elect and Pretious, Iſa. 28. 16. Therefore thus ſaith the Lord God, Behold, I lay in Zion for a foundation, a ſtone, a tried ſtone, a precious corner ſtone, a ſure foundation: he that believeth, ſhall not make haſte. 1 Pet. 2. 6, 7. And as much miſtaken are Men in judging of their own Condition.

II. Is

Book II. II. Is Chriſt every way ſo fit a Saviour? then chooſe him, and reſt in him alone. It is neceſſary that a Saviour you ſhould have; for otherwiſe you periſh; and it is as neceſſary that you ſhould have Jeſus Chriſt, or elſe you muſt have none: For there is, there can be no other. But yet, ſuppoſe you ſhould have your choice of many, nay, ſuppoſe there were as many Saviours as Men to be ſaved (as many as the Papiſts would make) yet he ſo tranſcends, that if ye all knew him, you would all make choice of him, and refuſe all others. As who is a God like to our God! So, Who is a Saviour like to our Saviour! Iſa. 43. 11. There is none beſides him. What do you therefore mean to ſtand demurring and deliberating whether you ſhould take him, or no, for your Lord and King (as the moſt Men do?) Do you look for any more ſuch Chriſts, or can you have a better, a fitter Saviour? Let this encourage you alſo to be willingly ſubject to him: What greater Motive can there be to this, then that of all Princes he is the fitteſt to be thy King, (and none fit to be King of Saints but he) and of all Husbands he is the fitteſt to rule over thee? It grieves no Man, nor do any think much to be ſubject to ſuch a Governour, as all Men with one conſent acknowledge to be moſt fit for them: The People rejoyce (ſaies Solomon) when the righteous are in authority, Prov. 29. 2. Now that the Lord Chriſt is King, Let the earth rejoyce, and the multitudes of the Iſles be glad, Pſal. 97. 1.

The Second ſort of Uſes may be taken from this, That our Saviour is God.

1. Is he who is thy Saviour, God! Then fear not to commit thy ſelf to him: Thy God is thy Saviour. If God will juſtifie (though there were no Mediator) who ſhould lay any thing to thy charge? Rom. 8. 33. Surely none would open their mouths againſt you; The Lord that chooſeth Jeruſalem rebuke thee, (ſaid the Angel unto Satan, Zach. 3. 2.) but if God will alſo be thy Mediator, and dye for thee; then much more art thou ſafe: Who ſhall condemn (as the Apoſtle ſaies) it is Chriſt that dyed. Do you know and conſider, Who he is that dyed for you? It is even Chriſt that dyed; (Rom. 8. 34.) who in the beginning of the next Chapter he tells them, Is God over all, bleſſed for ever. In his dayes Judah ſhall be ſaved, Jer. 23. 6. It ſhall be ſo (ſaies the Prophet) for his Name is Jehovah our righteouſneſs. Say to the feeble of heart, fear not; for your God will ſave you; Iſa. 35. 4. When Princes will themſelves in Perſon go into the Field, how doth it incourage their Subjects and Soldiers? Now Jeſus Chriſt who is God, came down into the Field himſelf: Who is this that comes from Bozrah? (Iſa. 63. 1.) It is I (ſaies Chriſt) that am mighty to ſave. The Heathens thought, that if their Gods ſhould but come down, they were ſure of the Victory. Now God came down, and was found amongſt us as a Man, and is become a Captain of Salvation, Heb. 2. 10. therefore let fear have no entertainment with you.

Only in the Second Place,

2. If he be God; although this may raiſe your hearts not to fear diſcouragements (I ſpeak to you whoſe hearts are ſet to be ſaved) yet it may withal ſtrike the greateſt and moſt awful dread upon your Spirit, and provoke you to fear this your Saviour, and not to deal preſumptuouſly with him, nor to ſlight him, and play faſt and looſe with him, thinking you may have Salvation at any time: No, he is God; and God will not be mocked, Gal. 6. 7. You muſt carry your ſelves towards him, as towards God himſelf. Becauſe Chriſt came to be a Saviour, and hath a Nature ſo full of Meekneſs, therefore Men think to deal with him as they pleaſe. But (as God elſewhere ſaies, Pſal. 46. 10.) Be ſtill, and know, that he is God. Therefore when God ſent him before the Iſraelites, Exod. 23. 21. He bad them beware of him, and provoke him not, for (ſaies he) he will not pardon your tranſgreſſions, (that is, he will not pardon you upon any other than Goſpel terms and limits,) for my name is in him: That is, he is God as well as I, and therefore will not ſuffer you you to lie in ſuch Sins as cannot ſtand with the Rules in his Word, and yet pardon you: Think not to deal ſo with him: He will ſave you upon no other terms than I my ſelf would by him. And therefore the Apoſtle, when he had ſhewn how Chriſt was God, as well as Man, in the Firſt and Second Chap. to the Hebrews, to the end that He might be a faithful high prieſt to God, as well as a merciful high prieſt to men, (ver. 17. of the Second chap.) that is, ſuch a Saviour, as was not ſo made up, all of Mercy to Men, but that withal he is as faithful to God: From this therefore the Apoſtle in the 3. chap. makes this uſe, and bids them conſider what an high prieſt they have, (ver. 1.) who was, and will be faithful to God that appointed him, ver. 2. And he bids them to conſider this, to this end, not to neglect the preſent opportunity of Salvation, and think to put Chriſt off for the preſent, and come in to him when they pleaſe, in that he is ſo merciful a Saviour: But (ſaies he ver. 7.) Conſider, that as the Holy Ghoſt ſaies, To day if you will hear his voice, harden not your hearts, ſo take heed how there be in you an evil heart to depart from him, he being the living God; ver. 12. Remember how he dealt with the Iſraelites in the Wilderneſs (his Fathers Name being in him) and how he ſware againſt them, and ſaid, They ſhould not enter into his reſt. Read the whole Chapter, and you will find this uſe made of it, as by the Apoſtle elſewhere it is: So 1 Cor. 10. 4, 5, 6. I would have you Brethren (ſaies he, ver. 1.) to conſider, that Our Fathers had Chriſt for their Captain, as we have, (ver. 4.) and they had him offered unto them in the Ordinances: But they tempting him, with many of them God was not well pleaſed; that is, Chriſt was not well pleaſed, (for ver. 9. they are ſaid to have tempted Chriſt) and he being God, deſtroyed them in the wilderneſs: For in that he was God, he would not be ſo dealt withal by them: Theſe things therefore are examples unto us, (as he there concludes that Diſcourſe) that we may know and conſider, what a Saviour we have to deal withal: Who, as he is Man, (and therefore you might expect all Mercy from him) ſo he is God alſo, and will be faithful unto God to ſave Men, but this, upon his Fathers own Conditions: And if we ſeek not Salvation according to his own Rules, he will take part with his Father againſt us, for his Fathers Name is in him. Chap. 7.

And yet,

3. Withal we may fetch this ground of Encouragement againſt the guilt of great Sins for time to come, that he is God, therefore able to pardon us. Were he meer Man, though he had our Nature, yet he would not endure us: So much Mercy as ſerves to pardon us, never entered into the heart of any meer Creature: [I am God, not Man, therefore you Sons of Jacob are not conſumed.] But the Humane Nature of Chriſt being United to the Son of God, his Will in pardoning doth accompany the Divine Will, and goes along with it: And as in all Acts elſe, ſo in forgiving it is able to hold pace with him.

A Third ſort of Uſes are taken from this, That he who is God hath took our Nature, our whole frail Nature unto himſelf, in that humbled way mentioned.

1. Admire we the Love of God towards us; which (if ever it was ſhewn in any thing) is ſhewn in this; and therefore this is made the great Act of Love, his emptying himſelf, and becoming nothing as it were, that he being equal with God, took upon him the form of a Servant Solomon made a wonder of it, That he whom the heavens of heavens cannot contain, ſhould vouchſafe to dwell in Temples made with hands, 1 Kin. 8. 27. But this is nothing to his being Perſonally United to the Humane Nature, and to dwell Bodily and Perſonally in it, and ſo to be made one with the Houſe in which he dwells, and which he himſelf built; that is, He to be made a Creature who made all Creatures. It is to be admired, that God would ever have it ſaid, That a Creature was God, and that God is become a Creature; yet ſo it is ſaid, John 1. 18. [the word was made fleſh.] For him to be made a Creature is more more then for us to become nothing, or for an Angel to become a Worm. It is therefore made a Myſtery, a great Myſtery that all ſtand agaſt, at, as well Angels as Men, (and this [ὁμολογεμένως] even with one conſent) that God ſhould be manifeſt in the Fleſh : 1 Tim. 3. 16. And without controverſie, great is the myſtery of godlineſs : God was manifeſt in the fleſh, juſtified in the Spirit, ſeen of angels, preached unto the Gentiles, believed on in the world, received up into glory. And if he be made a Creature, let him be made the beſt of Creatures, an Angel, there being ſuch Nobleneſs in them above what is in us. Their Perfections are the Meaſure of ours, and our Perfection is expreſſed but by being like to them. Our Eſtate in Heaven is to be [ὡς ἄγγελοι,] as the Angels. Likewiſe the chiefeſt Wiſdom in any Man is but as an Angels (as it is ſaid of David.) They for their ſubſtance are Spirits, and therefore in a nearer degree of aſſimilation unto God; they are the fitter Matches for him who is a Spirit. Again, if he will aſſume any thing of ours, let it be our Souls only, for our Bodies are vile Bodies, Phil 3. 21. But ſuch was his Love to us, that he will take both, becauſe he means to redeem both, and to make our Bodies glorious, like his own Bodie. And how doth the Apoſtle in this Heb. 2. 16. ſet forth his Love in this, that [ἁ δήπουθε] at no hand he took upon him the nature of Angels, though he could have done it eaſily, and with more Perſonal Honour; but he would [in no wiſe] entertain a thought of it. Such was his Love to us, that he refuſed that Match, his heart being fixed on us. He lets Principalities and Powers go, and hath reſpect to the lowneſs of his Handmaid, Luke 1. 48. the mean Eſtate of our Nature. But yet, if he take our Nature let him take it at its beſt, whilſt in a State of Innocency; let him marry it in its prime, and (as the High Prieſt was to do) when it is a Virgin uncorrupted, unpolluted with Sin or Miſery; or rather, let him take it ſuch as it is now in Heaven, all glorious. But he will out of his love to us, take our Nature on him when it is at the worſt, and then make it glorious, and us like him: When we are Traitors and out of Favour, he will marry Fleſh and Blood out of our Stock and Kindred, ſo to bring us into favour again. Was it not unparallel'd Love in Jonathan then to love David when he was in diſgrace with his Father? Much more would it have been for him out of his love to David as then to have married one of his Children. How exceeding much more then is the love of Chriſt towards us?

For all which as we ſhould admire his Love, ſo withal we ſhould conſider our Priviledge by having our Nature ſo advanced. What a Pawn and Pledge of Love is it to us, to have one of theſe Bodies of ours made more Glorious than all the Angels? To whom Charge is given when he comes into the World to worſhip and adore him; Heb. 1. 6. Who is to have them, and all things elſe put under his feet, and is to be their Lord and Judge; and they all but to be his Guard. What a Prerogative is it that our Nature ſhould be in him made higher in Court than any Queen can be in the Court of any King; and thus it is, ſeeing he is one in Perſon with God, not in Conjugal Relations only; and the reſt of his Brethren are advanced to be his Queen, and the Angels to be but his and her Guard and Servants. And as this is the Priviledge of Our Nature, ſo ſome of the Antients have thought, that the revealing of Gods purpoſe in it unto the Angels before their Fall, was the occaſion of the ſame, and that their caſting out of Heaven was a puniſhment of their proud ſtomaching of the Honour done unto our Nature, that it ſhould be advanced ſo far above them, (as the Apoſtle ſpeaks, Eph.. 1, 21.) And it ſhould teach us not to diſhonour and defile this Nature, (which God hath ſo honoured) with Intemperancy, Uncleanneſs, or any baſe or noyſom Luſts. It alſo may encourage us to come with boldneſs to the Court of Heaven and Throne of Grace, for that our Nature is chief in favour there: Heb. 4. 14. Seeing we have ſo great an high prieſt paſſed into the heavens, let us hold faſt our profeſſion: And ſeeing he was Man toucht with our infirmities; let us therefore come boldly unto the throne of grace, that we may find grace and mercy in time of need. When one of a Kindred is advanced and made a Favourite at Court, how will every one of his allyance, (though never ſo far off) challenge Kindred of him, him, and ſeek favour by him, and hope to be advanced too? And Chriſt is not aſhamed of us his poor Kindred: But being allyed to us by his Nature he dains to call us Brethren, and is grieved that we come no oftner to him, with Petitions of favour to be put up by him. And he not only called us Brethren, when himſelf was with us in a poor Eſtate here below, and lived in our Houſes amongſt us; but likewiſe when he was riſen again, and thereby entred into poſſeſſion of his Kingdom. Even then the firſt Meſſage that he ſent, and the firſt words that he ſpake, were thoſe in John 20. 17. Go to my brethren, and ſay unto them, I aſcend unto my Father, and your Father, &c. You ſee, his Preferment alters him not; after his Reſurrection he calls them Brethren. We ſhould therefore improve this our Affinity and Kindred with him: He took it on him for that very purpoſe. Chap. 8.

And

III. In that he took upon himſelf ſuch a Humane Nature as ſhould be every way fit for the buſineſs of Mediation that he was to perform for us; let us endeavour to fit our ſelves all that we can, for Communion and Fellowſhip with him. The reaſon why we live here abſent from him ſo long, though contracted to him already is, to be fitted for his Bed in Heaven, and for Everlaſting Embraces: Even as Eſther was a long while preparing for Ahaſhuerus his Bed; ſo are we here, in preparing for glory; as it is, Rom. 9. 23. And that he might make known the riches of his glory on the veſſels of his mercy, which he had afore prepared unto glory. The Bride dreſſeth her ſelf here in this life, Revel. 19. 7. Let us be glad and rejoyce, and give honour unto him: for the marriage of the Lamb is come, and his wife hath made her ſelf ready; and prepares to meet her Lord, with whom ſhe muſt live for ever. And look as he took our Nature, let us take his; labour we to be changed into his image, being made partakers of the divine nature: As he took our whole Nature, to ſave the whole of it; ſo let us conſecrate the whole to him, and be ſanctified throughout in body, ſoul and ſpirit; as 1 Theſſ. 5. 23. Cleanſe we our ſelves from all pollution of fleſh and ſpirit; Soul and Body, 2 Cor. 7. 1. And as he came as near in likeneſs to our Nature (as was ſhewn) as poſſibly he could, in Conception, in Birth, and in every thing, yet ſo as he might avoid Sin; ſo ſhould we come as near to him as is poſſible: Be we like him in all things: In his Power and Prerogative indeed we cannot; they are as incommunicable to us, as our Sin was to him; but in Graces and in Holyneſs we may, in Meekneſs and Humility we may. And as he took up our Infirmities, ſo take we up his Croſs; be we willing to be made conformable to him in ſufferings for him. And as his Humane Nature ſubſiſts wholly in the Second Perſon, loſing its own proper Perſonal ſubſiſtence to be one with him, and to become a fit Inſtrument together with him of our Salvation; ſo be we content to loſe our ſelves and our own Perſonal Proprieties, to ſubſiſt only in him and to him, and to be for ever ſerviceable unto his Glory.

BOOK III.

The Fullneſs of Abilities which are in Chriſt, to accompliſh the Work of our Redemption, which are impoſſible to be found in any other Perſon.

HEB. x. 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10.

For it is not poſſible that the blood of bulls and of goats, ſhould take away ſins.

Wherefore when he cometh into the world, he ſaith, Sacrifice and offering thou wouldeſt not, but a body haſt thou prepared me.

In burnt-offerings and ſacrifices for ſin thou haſt had no pleaſure:

Then ſaid I, Lo, I come (in the volume of the book it is written of me) to do thy will, O God.

Above, when he ſaid, Sacrifice, and offering, and burnt-offerings, and offering for ſin thou wouldeſt not, neither hadſt pleaſure therein (which are offered by the law,)

Then ſaid he, Lo, I come to do thy will, O God. He taketh away the firſt, that he may eſtabliſh the ſecond.

By the which will we are ſanctified, through the offering of the body of Jeſus Chriſt once for all.

CHAP. I.

The All-ſufficient Abilities to accompliſh our Redemption, demonſtrated from God the Fathers calling him to it, which he would never have done, had not he known him able.

Book III.

able. From Gods engaging also to furnish him with Abilities. From Christs undertaking it, which he did upon the knowledge which he had of himself, as equal to the great Performance. From the Greatness and Excellency of his Person, who being God Man, is able to do any thing. The Reasons which induced God to fix on this way of Salvation, to be by the Blood and Sacrifice of his Son. An Answer to that Objection, How God is said to pardon us freely by his Grace, when yet he requires full Satisfaction to be made.

HAVING at large laid open that sole peculiar Fitness which is in Christ for the Work of Reconciliation: We will now come to discover likewise that Allsufficient Fulness of Abilities in him, for the accomplishment of this great Work in all particulars required to it. Which First in the General, your Faith may be helpt in the perswasion of, by these Demonstrations Demonstration 1. Because God the Father did call him to this great Work: And had not Christ been fully able to bring you to Heaven, without all possibility of miscarriage; God would never have pitcht upon him. Men may sometimes choose one for a Place of Office and Honour, who yet is not sufficient to discharge it, because they are mistaken in Mens Abilities: but God could not be mistaken, but must needs know, that Jesus Christ was able to go through without miscarrying, and therefore he pitcht upon him. In Psal. 89. 19. Then thou spakest in vision to the holy one, and saidst, I have laid help upon one that is mighty: I have exalted one chosen out of the people. That whole Psalm is a Propheſie of Christ, under the Type of David, and hath in it much of the Gospel, which is called the sure mercies of David. The state of the People of Israel when David came to the Crown (if you take the Psalm of the Type David) was a shattered state; Israel was a wrackt People, all was distracted, tottering and broken; Saul their King and Jonathan his Son slain, themselves overcome and routed by the Philistims; their Religion, State, and all were desperate and staggering: but God chose David, an able Governour, to restore all; and so laid help on one that was mighty. In Psal. 75. David speaking of his coming to the Government and Kingdom, when I shall receive the congregation. Ver. 2. Adds, Ver. 3. The earth (namely, The Land of Judea) and all the inhabitants thereof are out of course: I bear up the pillars of it. Now he therein was a Type of Christ, (who often in the Prophets is called David) for when we were without strength, being Captiv'd by Satan, forlorn and undone, and no Creature able to help us; then did God lay help on one that was mighty: That is, He laid the Task of Saving us upon Christ who was able to do it. Thus also Heb. 7. 16. He was made a Priest, not after the law of a carnal commandment, but after the power of an endless life; that is, He was armed with Power to execute the Office of Priesthood for ever, and to overcome all Difficulties; and therefore he is said to have been made after the power of an endless life, and not after the law of a carnal commandment, as other Priests were. And Ver. 18. the Apostle sayes, Their Office was weak, and not able to bring things to perfection: Those Priests were not able to satisfie God, nor to carry on the Work; but Christ had the power of an endless life, because Christ had power to lay down his life, and take it up again, to survive the encounter of his Fathers wrath, and then to live for ever, and Intercede for for us, and ſo to go through-ſtitch with the Work, and without once fainting, much leſs ſuccumbing or ſinking under it, or failing in bringing it to its full perfection. Chap. 1.

Demonſt. 2. In that God called him, he undertook to make him able; for beſides that God knew Chriſt to be able, and therefore call'd him, it may be further ſaid, that in Calling him, he undertook to make him able. Men if they find one not able for an Office to which he is called, cannot give him Abilities; but God when he gives a Call, gives likewiſe Abilities. Thus of Chriſt it is ſaid, Iſa. 42. 1. 4, 6. Behold my ſervant whom I uphold, mine elect in whom my ſoul delighteth: I have put my ſpirit upon him, he ſhall bring forth judgment to the Gentiles. He ſhall not fail, nor be diſcouraged, till he have ſet judgment in the earth: and the iſles ſhall wait for his law. I the Lord have called thee in righteouſneſs, and will hold thine hand, and will keep thee, and give thee for a covenant of the people, for a light of the Gentiles. Behold my Servant whom I uphold, (ſaith he) mine Elect whom I have called in righteouſneſs: That is, I have both call'd him to this Office, and that in Righteouſneſs. I have not forced it on him, nor put him upon this hard Task unwillingly. 1. He is my Elect: I choſe him of all that ever were or ſhall be. 2. I have called him in righteouſneſs; that is, he being not unwilling to undertake it, but conſenting to it. And 3. I promiſed faithfully to ſtand by him, and not to leave him in it. And 4. He being my Servant in it, therefore certainly I will uphold him through it, as it is Ver. 6. God promiſeth that he will hold his hand, that he ſink not, (even as Chriſt held up Peter by the hand, from ſinking) and will keep him ſo, as (Ver. 4.) he ſhall not fail or fall ſhort to accompliſh the Work of Mediation, in the leaſt tittle; nor ſhall he be diſcouraged; or (as it is in the Original) broken (and yet he was to undergo that, which would have broken the backs of Men and Angels, and have puſht them all to Hell) but he ſhall be backt with all the Power that God hath, even that He hath who made the Heavens, (as it followes, Ver. 5.) which he mentions as engaging all that Power in it.

Demonſt. 3. Chriſt was willing to undertake it, and therefore ſurely he knew himſelf able to go through with it; for otherwiſe he would never have undertaken it. A Wiſe Man will not undertake an enterprize which he is not able to manage and go thorough with; and Chriſt much leſs, he being the Wiſdom of his Father: He will not do as a fooliſh builder, that ſets upon a work which he is not able to finiſh. What wiſe Man will enter into Bond for an other, for more than himſelf is worth, and ſo run a hazard of lying in Priſon all the dayes of his life? Surely no wiſe Man will do this; and much leſs would Chriſt undertake to be our Surety, if he had thought himſelf inſufficient to pay; therefore certainly he knew that he was able to perfect, and conſummate the great Work of our Reconciliation, before he took it upon him.

Demonſt. 4. In that he is God as well as Man, therefore he muſt needs be able for any undertaking, be it never ſo hazardous. If it had been poſſible for his Father to have forſaken him (as he complained that for a time he did) and afford him no ſuccour, no ſupport; but leave him to himſelf, may do his utmoſt againſt him, and make known againſt him the power of his wrath, (as indeed he did) yet he is able alone to uphold himſelf, for that the Fulneſs of the Godhead dwells bodily in him; Coloſſ. 2. 9. and therefore there was an impoſſibility of miſcarriage, as you have it, Acts 2. 24. It was not poſſible that he ſhould have been held under the pangs of death. If any thing would have held him, it would have been Death and Hell; for then his Power was put to it, to raiſe himſelf; but it was impoſſible that he ſhould be held by them; becauſe he was God. It is one of his great Names, Iſa. 9. 7. that he is the mighty God: therefore he is mighty and able to ſave himſelf and others.

Book III.

Now the Particulars of all that Salvation whereunto this All-ſufficiency of his is required, are many; as (not to name all) to make your Peace, pardon your Sins, bring you into favour, ſend his Spirit into your Hearts to change them and dwell there for ever, to ſubdue your Enemies, defend and keep you blameleſs unto the Great Day, and then to raiſe you up, and glorifie you for ever.

But the Foundation of all theſe lies in that All-ſufficiency that was found in Chriſt to ſatisfie for ſin and to juſtifie ſinners; for by that Satisfaction Sin was removed, which before did ſeparate between God and us, and was an hinderance of all Bleſſings from deſcending upon us: for there cannot be ſo much as Peace whilſt Sin remains; and by Chriſts Satisfaction Sin being removed, then likewiſe all the Bleſſings wherein Salvation conſiſts, and which Gods free Favour intended to beſtow, were alſo purchaſed by him. And however that the Application of all be performed by degrees; yet the Purchaſe of all was laid in that one Satisfaction of his, ere he offered to ſet a foot out of the Grave. And therefore Heb. 10. he is ſaid by that one offering (wich was the great and laſt Payment) to have for ever perfected thoſe that are ſanctified: That is, to have done all that which was to be done for that bleſſed eſtate of Perfection which he was to bring them unto. The All-ſufficiency of which Satisfaction is that particular Subject that we are now to handle. The opening of which we reduce to theſe two Heads.

I. More Generally, That in Chriſt, and him alone, there was an All-ſufficiency or Fullneſs of Abilities to be found, to ſatisfie for Sin, and to juſtifie Sinners.

II. More Particularly, That all the ſeveral particular parts of, and what is requiſite to compleat the Juſtification of a Sinner, are fully found in Chriſts Satisfaction: So that there is in it a Fullneſs and Perfection of Parts alſo.

For the Firſt of theſe; viz. That in Chriſt, and in him alone there is an All-ſufficiency to ſatisfie for Sin, and to juſtifie Sinners, I will (as a ground for it) take for my Text Heb. 10. 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10. For it is not poſſible that the blood of bulls and of goats, ſhould take away ſins. Wherefore when he cometh into the world, he ſaith, Sacrifice and offering thou wouldeſt not, but a body haſt thou prepared me: In burnt-offerings and ſacrifices for ſin thou haſt had no pleaſure: Then ſaid I, Lo, I come (in the volume of the book it is written of me) to do thy will, O God. Above, when he ſaid, Sacrifice, and offering, and burnt-offerings, and offering for ſin thou wouldeſt not, neither haaſt pleaſure therein (which are offered by the law,) Then ſaid he, Lo, I come to do thy will, O God. He taketh away the firſt, that he may eſtabliſh the ſecond. By the which will we are ſanctified, through the offering of the body of Jeſus Chriſt once for all.

For the opening of this Point out of theſe words we will proceed by degrees, firſt premiſing ſuch Obſervations as ſhall make way for the clearing of it.

Obſervation 1. You ſee that the Project that he mentioneth, is the taking away of Sins; and nothing had been more eaſie for God to have done. He might have taken away the Sins by taking away the Sinners, and ſo have made ſhort work of it, taking them both out of the way at one ſtroak, by which courſe he might have cauſed Sin to ceaſe, as Ezekiel ſpeaks Ezek. 23.48. But this is not his meaning; for his purpoſe is, ſo to take away Sins, as the Sinners might ſtand ſtill; that is, that they might ſtand in judgment, and be juſtified in his ſight. There are ſome even among Sinners whom he bears a ſecret good will unto, and hath done ſo from everlaſting: but their Sins have ſeparated between him and them, and he would fain ſeparate their Sins as far off from them, that ſo he might draw near to them, and communicate himſelf fully and freely unto them. And becauſe Sin is a burthen which they can neither ſtand under, nor throw from off themſelves: A wounded Spirit who can bear? And further, they can never give thanks enough for his benefits received, much leſs, ſatisfie for Sins, therefore he reſolves to have them took oft, as the word [ἀφαιρεῖν] ſeems to ſignifie. Chap. 1.

But then again, For to take away Sins only, is but half the Deſign. The 4th Verſe indeed mentions no more, becauſe the blood of Bulls could not do ſo much; yet that ſame Will of God mentioned in the 7th Verſe had a further aim, not only to take away Sins, that he might not hate us, but further to give us ſuch a Righteouſneſs, as for which he might have more cauſe to love us than ever, and loving to delight in us. His Will meant not only Peace or Pardon to us, but Grace and Favour: It was, as they ſang, Luke 2. 14. Good will towards Men, as well as peace on earth. His Will is to have us adopted and graciouſly accepted, as well as pardoned: Eph. 1. 5, 6. Having predeſtinated us unto the adoption of children by Jeſus Chriſt to himſelf, according to the good pleaſure of his will, to the praiſe of the glory of his grace, wherein he hath made us accepted in the beginning.

But then again, thus to have taken Sins off from them, might have been done by a ſole, free Act of Pardon paſt from him, and he needed not to have made any more ado about it. I dare not ſay the contrary, as ſome are bold to do; for this Reaſon ſwayes with me, namely, To puniſh Sin, being but an Act of his Will, (as all his other Works ad extra are) and not of his Nature; for what is the reaſon elſe that he ſometimes ſuſpends the puniſhing of wicked Men, out of the riches of his forbearance! it is becauſe to puniſh them is but an Act of his Will. If it were an Act of his Nature, then whoſoever ſinned, ſhould dye for it immediately, but it being an Act of his Will he may ſuſpend it, as he oftentimes doth. And if for a while he thus forbears, why might he not have done ſo for ever, and ſo wholly Pardon? Surely there is no reaſon to the contrary. To hate Sin indeed, is an Act of his Nature, but to expreſs his hatred by puniſhing, is an Act of his Will; and therefore might be wholly ſuſpended. And that which yet further confirms me in it is, that Chriſt when he prayed that the Cup might paſs from him; Mark 14. 36. uſeth this Argument, all things are poſſible to thee. The thing he entreated for was, that the Cup might be taken away; and he intimates this as the ground of his Prayer, that it was poſſible to God, that notwithſtanding he was reſolved to have the Word ſaved, yet to have that end of his brought about another way, though in view there is none that we know of but this. Now there was a truth in this; elſe Chriſt would not have uſed it as an Argument to this purpoſe. The impoſſibility lay only in Gods Will to have it done by Chriſts Satisfaction, and no way elſe; which therefore Chriſt ſubmitted unto (not my will, but thine be done) only Nature in him, to ſhew its averſeneſs to that Cup as ſimply in it ſelf conſidered, ſought a diverſion. And to ſhew that there was another way, he uſeth this as the greateſt Argument, thereby the more to ſet forth his and his Fathers Love, that he yet underwent this moſt difficult one.

Obſerv. 2. Therefore Secondly, Obſerve in the General, that for to take away Sins, God takes Means into conſideration. Why elſe do Bulls and Goats come into conſideration here? He means not to uſe his ſole Prerogative in it, but to do it fairly; and though by a bare Act of his Will he might have done it, yet his Will working by Counſel, Eph. 1. 11. he thought it not ſo fit to do it. The Apoſtle therefore ſpeaks of Blood here, and in Heb. 9. 22, 23. he alſo ſayes, that without blood there is no remiſſion. He will have Blood for Satisfaction; and Ver. 23. the Apoſtle makes it a neceſſity that there ſhould be Sacrifices, yea better ſacrifices than the blood of Bulls and Goats. It was neceſſary (ſayes he) not abſolutely, but in regard of Gods reſolution to ſatisfie Juſtice. And therefore the Heathens offered Sacrifice to pacifie their incenſed Gods; this thought being innate in every Mans Nature, that God muſt be ſatisfied; the Reaſons of which (namely why God required Satisfaction) I ſhewed in that firſt Part of the Story of the Goſpel, (in Gods Eternal Tranſactions with Jeſus Chriſt) only I will now but uſe the ground of it which lies in the Text it ſelf.

1. Con-

Book III.

1. Conſider that the Proje't is, to take away Sins, (as hath been ſhewed) and then for to make way for the manifeſtation of this, it was neceſſary to give a Law, which might both diſcover what Sin was, and how hainous; and alſo ſhew by a Threatning annexed, that Puniſhment which it naturally deſerves, and what the Sinner might in Juſtice expect from God. This was neceſſary; for otherwiſe, where there is no law, there is no tranſgreſſion; at leaſt wiſe Sin is not imputed, where there is no Law; Rom. 5. 13. and then there would have been no Sins actually capable of Mercy, or none to Pardon. Now then, upon Gods giving this Law, he ipſo facto takes upon him to be a Judge, and the Judge of all the World; for in the very making of the Law he declares himſelf to be ſo. So then, he is engaged upon many ſtrong Motives to ſhew his Juſtice againſt Sin in puniſhing it according as he had threatned (as I then ſhewed).

2. Conſider, that if he hath Satisfaction, it muſt be perfect and full; for why elſe is the Blood of Bulls and Goats here rejected, and that with an [impoſſibility] (It is not poſſible that they ſhould take away ſins) but becauſe his end was for to have perfect Satisfaction! 'Tis true, he might have accepted of that for an Acceptilation (as they call it) which ſhould not ſo fully have anſwered his Juſtice; for if he might have Pardoned without any Satisfaction at all, then certainly he might have accepted of ſo much, or ſo little: If he might wholly Pardon, he might then abate, and take but ſomething. And the Reaſon of it is the ſame with the former; for it being an Act of his Will, he might (as Chriſt ſaid) do what he would with his own; he might forgive all, or require all; forgive part, or require but part. Though full Satisfaction be not given, yet the Laws of Men uſe to give ſome Dammages, though never ſo little, unto the Party wronged; though not for Satisfaction, yet for an acknowledgment of the Injury: But God will have Satisfaction to the full, or none at all. He ſtands upon it; and therefore it is that the Apoſtle ſaith, that the Blood of Bulls and Goats cannot poſſibly take away ſin. If God had only required an acknowledgment of that Satisfaction which a Sinner was to make him, he might then have accepted of the Blood of Bulls and Goats to ſatisfie his Juſtice. But on the contrary, in Rom. 3. 26. he declares himſelf to have ſet forth Chriſt as a Propitiation that he might be juſt, and a juſtifier of him that believes in Jeſus: And if he ſpeaks of Juſtice in it, ſurely an imperfect Satisfaction is not worthy to have that name put upon it. In like manner, the Scripture ſpeaks of a Price paid to Redeem us; which argues it to be ſpecial Juſtice; the word [Redemption] it ſelf (which is ſo frequently uſed) doth likewiſe argue it: and it differs from Buying but in this, that it implies a Buying anew that which was ones own before, but yet, by a Price: ſo that this Juſtice of God came to ſet a Price that it would have; and if Juſtice ſets a Price, it will have a full one. We uſe to ſay, What I give I give, but what I ſell I ſell. When Men indeed are ſtreightned for lack of Money, they will ſell their Goods at any under rate; but God was no way neceſſitated; he could have improved his Glory another way, and in the mean time have loſt nothing by us. Therefore if God will ſell, and his Juſtice ſets the Price, he then will have his full Price; he will make a wiſe Bargain, and not ſee our Ranſom undervalued. That Phraſe in 1 Cor. 6. 20. [Bought with a price] may ſeem to be a Tautology, and as if one ſhould ſay, He ſpeaks with his Mouth: for if they be bought, they muſt needs be bought with a Price. But there is an Emphaſis in the Phraſe: the word [Price] is added, to note, that he hath bought them indeed, and over-bought them, and that he hath paid for them, and that, a full Price. Therefore 2 Tim. 2. 6. it is called [ἀντίλυτρον] that is, a Ranſom every way anſwerable and adequate. And beſides theſe Reaſons intimated, add theſe:

(1.) All Gods Works are perfect in their kind: Deut. 32. 4. God loves not to do things by halves, if therefore he goes about to ſhew his Juſtice, he will do it perfectly, or not at all.

(2.) If God ſhould have required ſomething that was not fully ſatisfactory; then the Sinners relieved would have been apt to have thought and ſpoken of it as if it had been fully ſuch; and would have been ready to have upbraided braided God therewith, as being not ſo much beholding unto him for cutting off part of the Payment due. We ſee how conceited proud Nature is of its own performances; and notwithſtanding that God, to convince it of its own inabilities, hath ſet forth his Son as making ſo tranſcendent a Satisfaction; yet it would needs eſteem that little which it is required to do, meerly as an acknowledgment of thankfulneſs, to be in lieu of Satisfaction, and accordingly it ſtands upon it; and we have much ado to break our ſelves of this conceit. How much more then would we have done this, if God had required no other. Chap. 1.

(3.) As to prevent the falſe conceits of our Hearts, ſo alſo for the full quiet and ſecurity of our Spirits, God did ordain that there ſhould be a full Satisfaction made; that ſo we might have perfect Peace in our Spirits, as it is Iſa. 26. 3. Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace, whoſe mind is ſtayed on thee: becauſe he truſteth in thee; and truſt perfectly upon it, as 1 Pet. 1. 21. If it had been an imperfect Satisfaction, the Soul of Man would ſtill have been ſollicitous and doubting, it would ſtill have been prying and queſtioning, whether God would have accepted it or no, fearing it had not been full enough. Wherefore, as to take away our unthankfulneſs, ſo to prevent our Infidelity, it was to be a perfect Satisfaction, even ſuch as his Juſtice ſhall require no more at our hands.

Queſt. But a Queſtion may here ariſe: How can God be ſaid to Pardon freely by his Grace, when yet his Juſtice requires a full Satisfaction?

Anſw. The Anſwer is, that both may well ſtand together. And therefore we have both joined together, Rom. 3. 24, 25. Being juſtified freely by his grace, through the redemption that is in Chriſt. And clearly to ſolve this doubt, Conſider,

1. That it is of Grace that this Satisfaction is tranſmitted, and tranſlated from us unto another: which Satisfaction when it ſhould come from another for us, God was no way bound to accept of: and yet he doth accept it freely. To illuſtrate which; there is this difference between Satisfaction for dammage in Goods, and for Injuries in point of Honour (which is the thing wherein God accounts himſelf mainly wronged): That Satisfaction for Goods (which we call Reſtitution) may be performed for the Debtor by another Perſon, and ſtand as good and valid as if himſelf had done it: But if it be to be made in point of Honour, or that the Puniſhment be to reach the Life of the Party wronging; then to commute, or tranſmit it, it was a matter of Free Grace and Pardon.

2. It was Free Grace unto us however, becauſe we were wholly ſpared: All is freely remitted to us, although he ſpared not his own Son; as it is ſaid, Rom. 8. 32. and eſpecially in that this was done to this end, that he might ſpare us. A Type of this were thoſe two Goats in the Old Law, whereof the one was ſacrific'd, and the other let go free, and was called the Scape-Goat. And although Mercy would not have been ſo much ſhewn in accepting what was a defective and imperfect Satisfaction from our ſelves, as if Mercy had wholly and alone ſupplyed and made up all; yet it was ſhewn as much in accepting what another performed for us (though that Satisfaction was never ſo perfect) as if it had wholly forgiven it.

3. If furthermore we conſider, that it was his Son from whom this Satisfaction was exacted, one ſo dear to him, and one who of himſelf was free from all ſuch Obligations, and put upon it by God, the more to ſhew his Grace; this makes it to be meer Grace; and indeed the more Grace, by how much the Satisfaction was greater. And therefore God is ſaid to commend his love in this, that Chriſt dyed for us: Rom. 5. 8. And Eph. 1. 7. we are ſaid by him to have redemption through his blood, even the forgiveneſs of ſins, according to the riches of his grace. Had Chriſt been one nearer to us then to him, or had he been wholly a ſtranger to God, it might then have been eſteemed to have leſs of Grace in it; but in that he ſpared not his own Son, that he might ſpare us; this makes Grace the more to abound in it, though the Satisfaction be never ſo perfect.

CHAP. II.

That in Christ alone there was sufficient Ability to take away Sin. The Weakness and Insufficiency of any Creature for this Work demonstrated. That it is for the greater Honour of Christ to Effect that, which none could do besides him. The Insufficiency of any Creature proved by an Enumeration of Particulars. That the Blood of all Sacrifices could not have such an Efficacy. That we were unable to satisfie God by any thing which we could suffer, or do. That all the Saints are as unable to help us in this case. That it is beyond the Power of Angels themselves.

THESE Observations having been sent before to make way; We come now to the main Point at the first propounded; viz. That in Christ and in him alone, there is an All-sufficiency of Abilities to take away sins; and that seeing God stood upon a full and perfect satisfaction, He alone was able to effect it. Which Proposition we will branch out into Two; and those both of them founded upon the Text.

I. That it was not possible for any of the Creatures to have made satisfaction, and to have taken Sins away.

II. That in Christs Offering up himself as a Sacrifice, there was an All-sufficiency to do it.

I. The Creatures could not satisfie God, nor take away Sin. The handling and proving of this tends so much the more to set forth, and advance Christs All-sufficiency. As therefore in shewing his Fitness, we made it appear, that his Office was fit for no Creature, but only for himself: So now in declaring his Abilities for this Office, we will shew that none besides him was able to perform it. And for proof of this, we need go no further than the apparent drift and scope of this Text, and of this Epistle, which as it is to shew the Perfection of Christ's Oblation once offered; so it was withal to shew the weakness of all other Offerings; even of those appointed by God himself under the Old Law; and to that end, comparing them all along, with this Sacrifice of his Son. In which comparison you may observe,

1. That a sufficient worth and value was the thing that God stood upon, (as hath been said) So Heb. 9. 23. It was therefore necessary that the patterns of things in the heavens should be purified with these; but the heavenly things themselves with better sacrifices than these. The Apostle speaks of the worth and betterness of Sacrifices, [better sacrifices than these.] So he speaks of a Sacrifice that should perfect them for whom it was offered, Heb. 10. 14. For by one offering he hath perfected for ever them that are sanctified. And chap. 7. 26, 27, he mentioneth Abilities to save, as being required in him who was our High-Priest, Heb. 7. 25, 26, 27. Wherefore he is able also to save them to the uttermost, that come unto God by him, seeing he ever liveth to make intercession for them. ver. 26. For such an high priest became us, who is holy, harmless, undefiled, separate from sinners, and made higher than the heavens. ver. 27. Who needeth not daily, as thoſe high prieſts, to offer up ſacrifice, firſt for his own ſins, and then for the peoples: for this he did once, when he offered up himſelf.

2. You may obſerve, All other Sacrifices were laid aſide as weak, and wanting of this worth and value. So the Apoſtle ſaith, The law made men high prieſts who had infirmities; Heb. 7. 28. For the law maketh men high prieſts which have infirmity; but the word of the oath which was ſince the law, maketh the Son, who is conſecrated for evermore. There was an infirmity and a weakneſs that accompanied all the Sacrificers and Sacrifices. And for this weakneſs of theirs, there was a diſanulling of that commandment for the weakneſs and unprofitableneſs of it, ver. 18. And Heb. 9. 9. He tells us, They could not make him perfect who did the ſervice, and alſo that all thoſe Sacrifices as they could not make the Offerer himſelf that did the Service perfect; much leſs could they make them perfect for whom they were offered, Heb. 9 9. Which was a figure for the time then preſent, in which were offered both gifts and ſacrifices, that could not make him that did the ſervice perfect, as pertaining to the conſcience. Heb. 10. 1. For the law having a ſhadow of good things to come, and not the very image of the things, can never with thoſe ſacrifices which they offered year by year continually, make the comers thereunto perfect. All which argues, that God would have ſuch a ſatisfaction as ſhould make Men perfect, that is, ſhould be fully able to ſatisfie his Juſtice, and their Conſciences. And therefore alſo here in the Text God is brought in, conſulting about, or conſidering, and weighing all other Sacrifices; and when he had found them all too light, the Text ſaies, he laid them all aſide, and pitcht upon, and eſtabliſhed this of Chriſt. And therefore you ſee, this proffer of Chriſt [Loe I come] comes in after Gods refuſal of all others as ineffectual: [then ſaid I, loe I come] Heb. 10. 5, 6, 7. Wherefore when he cometh into the world, he ſaith, Sacrifice and Offering thou wouldeſt not, but a body haſt thou prepared me. ver. 6. In burnt-offerings and ſacrifices for ſin thou haſt had no pleaſure: ver. 7. Then ſaid I, Lo, I come (In the volume of the book it is written of me) to do thy will, O God. Thus Galat. 3. 21. If there had been a law that could have given life, righteouſneſs had been by the law: The Apoſtle ſpeaks as if God would have taken that, or any other courſe, if it could have been ſufficient. And Gal. 2. 21. Do I fruſtrate the grace of God, (ſaies he)? If righteouſneſs be by the law, then Chriſt dyed in vain. What he ſaies of the Law may be ſaid of all means elſe, if any other could be ſuppoſed. The ſame Reaſon that is there given, againſt the Law, (namely, that the Grace in Chriſts Dying, and Juſtifying us, would be fruſtrated) holdeth as well, to exclude the ſuppoſed poſſibility of any other means to make us Righteous. For by that reaſon it appears, that Gods aim and end in Chriſts Dying was to advance the Glory of his Grace, which conſiſts in having the Monarchie and ſole Prerogative in ſaving Sinners. attributed unto it. The height of whoſe Honour and Eminency is this; That it alone Reigns, and hath nor could have any Competitor therein. And therefore if there could be ſuppoſed to be any other means, Chriſts Death would then loſe ſomething of its peculiar Glory; which if it ſhould, he would account himſelf to have dyed in vain, for the Glory of his aim had been defaced and fruſtrated, and his end in his account as good as loſt. As it is the Excellency of God, that he is God alone, and there is none beſides him; ſo of Chriſt, that he alone in our Saviour, and that there is none beſides him. But take this as ſtill ſpoken is oppoſition to all Creatures only: For otherwiſe, that former ſuppoſition that God could have pardoned us by a meer Act of Grace without Chriſts ſatisfaction, doth not detract from this Glory of Chriſts Death, which is not to take away from Free Grace, and to be accounted in compariſon of it, the Principal and only Saviour. Chriſt is content that the Free Grace of his Father ſhould ſhare with him in it, and himſelf to be in this work Gods Servant, But this Competition of Chriſt is with all other means by Creatures; the excluding the poſſibility of which to perform our Redemption, makes Chriſt ſole Heir to this Kingdom and Monarchie of Grace which is deſtructive of the Dominion of Sin; and ſo endears his Death to us. He hath a prieſthood that paſſeth not away; Heb. 7. 21. as the High-Prieſt did by reaſon of Death: But he dies not; and his

Book III.

Office is such, as if he should lay it down, there is not any Creature in Heaven or Earth that could take it up. The fullest Tryal and Manifestation of this is made in a case of less difficulty; (which evidently reacheth this of satisfaction) in the Fifth Chapter of the Revelation; where, as a Prologue to that ensuing Propheſie (which begins Chap. 6.) there is a solemn Proclamation made by a strong Angel, who spake with a loud voice, ver. 2. (as that which might come to the hearing of all Creatures) and the Matter of this Proclamation was this Challenge, Who is worthy to open the Book, (namely of the Revelation, which was Sealed in the Hand of God, that sat upon the Throne, ver. 1.) and to loose the Seals thereof? And there was none (so it is in the Original) that is, no reasonable Creature (we read no Man, but that is too much limited) Man or Angel, in Heaven, or in Earth, or under the Earth, that was able to open the Book, or so much as to look thereon. And John was at this discouraged, and wept much, ver. 4. as thinking, here must be an end of all, and that he should have no further Vision. But God did premise this, on purpose to shew the difficulty of the Work, and to spoil all Creatures of the Glory of it; and the more to set off, and make illustrious the sole Power and Worth that was in Jesus Christ for this Work: Even as Men in their Fictions use to do, when they would Greaten some one Man, whose Story they write. For after this non-plus and dejection, a Stander-by comforts him, and bids him not weep; for lo, the Lion of the Tribe of Judah hath obtained to open the book, &c. And presently a Lamb comes, approacheth the Throne, and takes the Book out of his Right Hand, ver. 6, 7. And upon that, all the Chorus of Twenty Four Elders and Four Beasts (who are there the Church representative of Saints on Earth) do fall down before the Lamb, and set this Crown of Glory upon his Head alone, with this new Song and Shout, Worthy art thou, &c. and thou alone; unto which the Angels give a Respond of Praise, ver. 11, 12. and Heaven, and Earth, and all Creatures eccho to it, ver. 13. Now how much more might all this Solemnity have been used about satisfaction to be made for Sin? To approach the Throne, and take the Book, and open it, was far less than to have the heart to break through an Army, and approach God in his fury and fullness of Wrath for Sin, and to sustain that Wrath, and satisfie it by overcoming it. And this is more then intimated in that very Chapter: For (ver. 9.) the Elders in their Song do attribute this Power of Christ to open the Book, unto the Merit of a far greater Work done, even this of our Redemption, and Christs satisfaction for Sin; [Thou art worthy (say they) to take the Book, because thou wast killed, and hast redeemed us to God by thy Blood:] And how far off then will all Creatures be found to be, and how short of Worth and Power to redeem a Sinner by their Blood, who were all not worthy so much as to look on that Book, much less to open it, not worthy to reveal this Redemption, much less to effect it? Then which there cannot be a stronger proof for this my Assertion. Thus much in General.

Now Secondly.

II. To demonstrate this by an Induction and an Enumeration of all particular means, which may be any way supposed able to help us.

First, Take the Blood of Bulls and Goats, and add to them all the Creatures which Man is lord of, and which are his to give; yet this whole World of Creatures would not be a sufficient Sacrifice for Sin. In Micah 6. 7. there is one comes off with a good round Price, [Will the Lord be pleased with thousands of Rams, or with thousands of rivers of oil: Or shall I give my first-born for my transgression?] And Nature is apt to be thinking of such Sacrifices; But if Justice could have afforded it so cheap, God would not have turned away so fair a Chapman; yet he there turns him away: One reason for which is there intimated, namely, That Sin is the Sin of the Soul, but all these are but the appurtenances of, or at the highest, but Fruits of the Body: Shall I give the fruit of my body for the sin of my soul? The Soul which is lost and forfeited by Sin is (as Christ saies) more worth than a whole World, Matth.

Matth. 16. 26. Yea, the Life of the Body is more worth in a Mans own eſtimation than all that he poſſeſſeth ; [All that a man hath will he give for his life ;] Job 2. 4. but the Redemption of the Soul is yet much more pretious, as the Pſalmiſt ſpeaks, Pſal. 49. 8. And as a Kings Ranſom is more than another Mans ; ſo is the Redemption of the Soul, which in worth exceeds all Creatures, more than of all other Creatures beſides. And yet further, the Sin of the Soul cannot be recompenced by the loſs and Sacrifice of the Soul it ſelf; for by Sin the Glory of God ſuffers detriment, but by a Souls loſs the good of a Creature only is damaged. It is a Rule currant in caſes of Morality and Juſtice, That the injury of a ſupreme Order is not made good by things of an inferiour Rank unto it. What recompence will the forfeiture of a Murderers Goods give to a Man for his Life, or for that of his Friends? What ſatisfaction can Money give for a diſhonour caſt upon a Mans good Name, which Solomon ſaies, is better than riches? Prov. 22. So what is the fruit of a mans body (as it is in Micah 6. 7.) to the ſin of his ſoul? Verily there is no proportion : Yea it falls ſhort in the eſtimation of a Mans own Conſcience.

Unto this diſproportion the Apoſtle adds another, Heb. 9. 23. That the Bleſſings to be purchaſed and obtained by this ſatisfaction, are heavenly; But all ſuch Sacrifices as theſe, are but things earthly; and therefore better Sacrifices than theſe are required. All ſuch External Sacrifices are but enough, (if enough) to ſanctifie the pattern of heavenly things; that is, the Types of the Law ; and this too, but only as they were ſhadows of things to come : Wherefore it was neceſſary that the heavenly things themſelves (the ſubſtance) ſhould be purified with better Sacrifices than theſe. Now Grace is Heavenly, and pardon of Sin muſt come from Heaven, even out of Gods boſom, and will God (think we) exchange Heavenly Commodities for Earthly Treaſures.

Again the Apoſtle adds a third diſproportion unto theſe, Heb. 9. 14. All ſuch ſacrifices cannot reach to the Conſcience. We have Conſciences to be purged, and what are ſuch outward things to purge a Mans Conſcience? As Plaiſters outwardly applyed cannot reach to benefit the Heart or Lungs ; ſo neither can theſe reach the Conſcience. They might ſanctifie the outward Man (as he there ſpeaks) to purge away a Ceremonial outward Uncleanneſs, but not the inward, Jer. 2. 22. Though thou waſh thee with nitre, thy iniquity is open before me, ſaies the Lord. All theſe could not ſatisfie a Mans Conſcience, much leſs Gods Juſtice. Therefore thoſe that were exerciſed in Sacrifices their Conſciences were unquiet, as both the Jews and Heathens were.

2. As for our ſelves, there was no hope that ever we ſhould ſatisfie God, by ought that either we can do or ſuffer.

1. Not by ſuffering any thing, And for this, take the higheſt inſtance ; If there were any hope to ſatisfie by ſufferings, it would be by the ſufferings of Men in Hell, becauſe they are the utmoſt and the moſt extream puniſhment that are threatned as the reward of Sin ; and whereby God recovers all that may be had out of the Creature. A man would think, that after Millions of years expired, the Torments which Men there ſuffer, ſhould ſatisfie for Sin ; but they do not. Thoſe Eternal Flames in which their Souls are ſcorched, do nothing purifie, or diminiſh the ſtain of one Sin : They may indeed deſtroy the Sinner, but they can never take away the Sin ; for therefore it is that they ſhall for ever ſuffer. He muſt for ever remain to be puniſht, becauſe for ever he remains a Sinner. And it is alſo a certain and ſure Rule, that Nulla pœna Nocentis eſt peccati Deletiva, No puniſhment of a Perſon Nocent, is Deletive of Sin : The Sin can never be taken away or blotted out by it.

2. Nor by doing : For,

(1.) We are not able by all our Works to ſatisfie our own Conſciences, which ſtill prick us in the midſt of them ; much leſs can we ſatisfie God, who who is greater then our Conſciences. In Rom. 5. 6, the Apoſtle gives us all up for deſperate, and paſt recovery; When we were without ſtrength (ſaies he) Chriſt dyed for us. We had no ſtrength left us wherewith to do any thing; neither could all the ſtrength that the Law could put into us, by quickning and exciting our Conſciences to do good works, any thing avail us. So Rom. 8. 3. the Apoſtle tells us, that what the Law could not do, for that it was weak through the fleſh, that Chriſt came to do. If any thing had been done by us, it muſt have been by the help of the Law in our Conſciences, directing, inciting, and carrying us on to Obedience: But (ſaith he) our corruption ſtill weakneth the power of the Law, that it cannot do any good upon us, in us, or by us. As when Nature is ſpent, Phyſick is ſaid to do no good through the weakneſs of the Patient; ſo nor the Law through the weakneſs of the Fleſh. And therefore it follows, there being no help in our ſelves, God ſent his Son in the ſimilitude of ſinful fleſh, and condemned ſin in the fleſh.

Neither,

3. Are we thus weak only, but alſo ungodly; and ſo are all our Works. There is not only a weakneſs in all that the Fleſh can do, but alſo a Wickedneſs, or Enmity; ſo that they who are in the fleſh can never pleaſe God; as Rom. 8. 8. Yea, it is impoſſible they ſhould, for their Works are all defiled; and though they were good,

Yet,

4. They could not bring our Perſons into favour. For Sin breaking the firſt Covenant, by the Tenour of which our Works did keep our Perſons in favour; hence we have forfeited all Honour to our Perſons for ever, and ſo unto all our Works alſo, that look as Traitors when their Perſons are condemned, all their Works are void in Law, ſo are ours: So that if we could ſuppoſe our ſelves to love God, yet Dilectio illa nos quidem faceret dilectores ſed non dilectos; though thereby we might be called Lovers of God, yet they could not make us beloved of him again.

5. As we have forfeited all favour to our Perſons for ever; ſo we have forfeited too the having any Graces or Gifts of Grace, whereby we might be ſuppoſed to come into favour. For Sin hath put in a bar againſt us; this being the Eternal demerit of it, that the former Grace be never more beſtowed upon any of that former intereſt; for it is wholly made void unto all ends and purpoſes. And therefore ere ever new Grace be beſtowed, the guilt, and forfeiture and deſert of Sin muſt be forgiven: And how can we ever come to obtain that for our ſelves?

6. If that demerit be cut off by free Pardon, and Grace be anew beſtowed, then that Grace becomes a new favour, for which alone we can never be thankful enough by the Power of all the Grace we receive. We run into a new Debt which we can never requite or ſatisfie for, much leſs by that can we pay our former Debts.

Therefore,

Laſtly, Grace received anew, though in, and through Chriſt, it may indeed come to pleaſe God, as a token of our thankfulneſs (and ſo it doth) yet can it never ſo much as juſtifie us. The Graces of Godly Men made perfect in Heaven ſhall (it may be) be as much and more then that of the Angels. Now then, ſuppoſe it ſuch in this Life, yet all that Grace would not juſtifie us, becauſe we once forfeited all of it, and the receiving of it now were a new Mercy. The Grace of them who are in Heaven may indeed pleaſe God, but it cannot juſtifie them; and therefore much leſs could it ever come to ſatisfie God for ſin. And beſides, Debitum peccati eſt infinitum, The Debt and Guilt of Sin is Infinite, becauſe againſt an Infinite God. Graces would be but finite becauſe in us, and becauſe ours, who are finite Creatures, as our Graces ces alſo are. So then you ſee, Our ſelves could not make God any ſatisfaction. Chap. 2.

3. If you go to all the Saints, they are unable to help you; Matth. 25. 1, 2, 8, 9. Then ſhall the Kingdom of heaven be likened unto ten virgins, which took their lamps, and went forth to meet the bridegroom. ver. 2. And five of them were wiſe, and five were flooliſh. ver. 8. And the flooliſh ſaid unto the wiſe, Give us of your oyl, for our lamps are gone out. ver. 9. But the wiſe anſwered, ſaying, Not ſo, leſt there be not enough for us and you: but go you rather to them that ſell, and buy for your ſelves. The Flooliſh Virgins go to the Wiſe, and ſay, Give us ſome of your Oyl: That is, of your Grace: They would have had ſome of the others Graces to help them; but the Wiſe Virgins anſwered, No, leſt there be not enough for us and you, but go you rather and buy of them that ſell. The Saints then (you ſee) have Grace little enough for themſelves; all the Grace they in Heaven have is little enough to ſave them; and all the Grace they have is borrowed, and cannot juſtifie themſelves; much leſs therefore can it ſatisfie for another. The Papiſts who ſo much extol Works, though they ſay indeed, that good Works do merit for the Saints themſelves, yet not that they can ſatisfie for another.

4. Go from them to the Angels. If they were a grain lighter, they would be found too light, and their Kingdom would depart from them, and themſelves would be ſtript of all their happyneſs. They need Confirmation in their Eſtates themſelves; it is well that they keep their own ſtanding, and their heels from being tript up. All they can do in Obedience to the Law, they owe it; and how can one Debt be paid with another. God ſaies of them, Job 4. 18. That he finds folly in them. If Gods curious Eye enquire and ſearch into them, they will be found defective of that Holyneſs which he deſires, though they be the works of his hands, and though they have ſuch a Holyneſs, as is the perfection of their Natures; and (ſo far as ſuch Creatures can be,) they be perfectly righteous: But yet if they be compared to that Holyneſs wherewith God is delighted, and that which the curious Eye of his Purity would require; he finds a folly in them. And therefore they need, not only a Mediation of Union to confirm them in Grace; but further for this end, that God may be pleaſed with them and their Works; He being ſo curious, that but for a Mediator (whoſe Holyneſs wholly ſatisfies his exact eye) he would be pleaſed with no Works of his own hands whatever; but would rend, and tear, and throw all away, as not yet worthy enough of him; even as Curious Artiſts do their beſt Draughts, as not ſatisfied with them. Yea, if the Angels were but one grain wanting, ſcruple not to ſay, They would be caſt down, yea, fall down, and become Devils. And therefore how can all that they can do be able to help you, ſeeing they have little enough for themſelves.

So you ſee upon a Survey of all particulars, that no Creature could make ſatisfaction to God for Sin.

CHAP.

CHAP. III.

That the most perfect Creature, though having all the Perfections of Christs Humane Nature, yet could not be our Redeemer. The utmost extent to which the Power of any Creature can reach to save either himself or others, which yet all fall short of that which was to be performed for our Redemption.

ADD to all these the utmost Supposition that can be made of the most transcendent Perfection of Grace that may possibly be bestowed upon any mere Creature. Take the Supposition which some of the School-Men have made: That as God appointed Adam a meer Creature to convey and derive Grace to all his Posterity; so if we with them suppose; First, Some one mere Creature as a Head, appointed to satisfie for Sin, and convey Grace to Sinners (as Christ doth): And Secondly, Suppose this mere Creature filled with as much Grace Habitual as Christ had, as much Love, Humility, &c. only that Grace of Union to a Divine Person set aside, which so transcendently elevates all in him above Created Perfections; and then, such a Supposition cannot be denied. Thirdly, Suppose a transcending degree of Favour and Glory appointed as the reward of that Grace, more then is borne towards all other Creatures. Yet though this Creature should lay down all that Glory, quit it self of all that Happiness, and subject it self to all those torments which Christs Soul underwent for us, to the end that our Punishment might be cut off, and we brought into Favour; all this could no way deal with Justice to satisfie for Sinners, and restore them to Favour. Which now we will endeavour to make good from those more near and intimate Demonstrations, which hold forth in them the true grounds why no meer Creature can satisfie for Sin, upon no Supposition, how high soever. By all which the superabundant Grace and Glory of Christ will the more appear, whose Cause herein we plead, and who pleadeth ours in Heaven.

And,

First, To make the clearer entrance, and the better explication and stating of this Point; let us consider and examine how far the Graces of a mere Creature how great soever, have gone, or can go to advantage and promote either the owner of them, or another, in the way of Salvation; and so see the utmost extent of their abilities, and where they have, and must fall short: Which will likewise afford us evident Demonstrations, how far short they come of Satisfaction for Sin, or Justifying of a Sinner.

I. Let us see what they can do for the owner and possessour of them.

1. They can, and do justifie the possessour of them, if he have never sinned. Thus the Grace and Works of the Angels do justifie them before God; which yet is much for God to accept of; for he seeth folly in his Angels; yet this priviledge he vouchsafes to their own Grace. And thus to be justified, is no more then to be accounted Righteous, before Gods Tribunal, and so worthy to live in his sight, and by means of it to enjoy their present condition of Happiness. And thus Adams Grace in Innocency did justifie him; God by his Law and Ordination pronouncing him Righteous by it, (whilst he continued in it) as wanting nothing which his Law required in him for Happiness

Happineſs and Life. And though Grace in Adam and in the Angels, did by a Natural Law and juſt Ordination of God, juſtifie them before him, ſo as, God looking on their Works, did pronounce them Righteous in his ſight, according to his Law ; yet this Law or Ordinance was founded upon no other Obligation from God than the Ordinances and Laws of Providence towards other Creatures ; even ſuch as the Ordinances of Day and Night, (as he ſpeaks of them) and ſo it was but ſuch as when God ſaw all the Creatures which he had made, keep the Ordinances which he had ſet them in, he pronounced that they were all good, namely, in their kind, Gen. 1. 31. they continuing (as the Pſalmiſt ſayes, Pſalm 119. 91.) according to their Ordinances. So whilſt Man continues in the Ordinances which God hath ſet him in, he pronounceth him good in his kind ; that is, Righteous ; Righteouſneſs being his proper goodneſs, and ſuch to him, as the proper goodneſs of all Creatures are in their kind unto them. And as this Righteouſneſs was due to him, and ſo created in him, not by Merit, but as the Native Perfection without which he could not be a Man : So was this pronouncing of him Righteous (and to be in Gods Favour whilſt he continued in that goodneſs) not due of Merit ; (for what can we do towards it) but only as a due approbation and ſuitable reward and conſequence of his goodneſs, meet for God to beſtow, according to that ſpecial Law of Nature, which God had Created him in. And ſo I underſtand that ſame ex debito, Rom. 4. 4. where the Apoſtle ſpeaking of the Covenant of Works, (which was the Covenant of Nature) he ſayes, The reward was of debt, not of grace : That is, there was a Reward, that was a Natural Due to it (which is oppoſed to meer Grace) which notwithſtanding is not of Merit, nor could that deſerve it at Gods hands ; only it was meet and due in a Natural way that God ſhould ſo reward it. Chap. 3.

2. The Grace of ſuch a mere Creature can preſerve it ſelf, and increaſe it ſelf. Therefore Chriſt compares it unto Muſtard-ſeed, the leaſt of all Seeds, which yet growes up to be a great Tree ; and ſo the ſtock that Adam had, he might have kept, by the power that God had given him. As Adam might have maintained his Bodily Life unto Eternity, by Food, ſo his Spiritual Life by keeping the Law, [do this and live.] So that Grace in a pure Creature before the Fall might poſſibly have kept its ſtation :

Yet

3. It could not, nor cannot abſolutely confirm, and eſtabliſh ſuch a Creature in a ſtate of Juſtification ; which is a further thing then ſimply to Juſtifie ; as, to give Perſeverance in Grace is more than to give Grace. Thus the Angels, though alwayes they be juſtified by their own Grace ; yet no Acts of their own did, or could procure a confirmation in that Grace, or ſtrength and ſecurity that they ſhould not, nor could not fall. It is an incommunicable property of Jehovah, not to change, and to have no ſhadow of turning, James 1. 17. It is therefore judged by all Divines that this benefit they have by Chriſt.

4. Much leſs can the Grace of a meer Creature (or ever could) merit a higher condition ; (to do which, is more than to confirm the continuance of the preſent condition) Adam could not earn a condition of a higher Rank, nor by all his Works have bought any greater Preferment, then what he was Created in : To compaſs it, was ultra ſuam Sphæram, above his Sphere, he could never have done it. As for inſtance, He could not have attained that ſtate in Heaven which the Angels enjoy : What ſayes Chriſt ! When you have done all you can, ſay, you are unprofitable ſervants. Luke 17. 10. This he could no more do, then other Creatures by keeping thoſe their Ordinances, can merit to be tranſlated into the glorious liberty which they wait for, and ſhall have at the latter Day. The Moon, though ſhe keep all her Motions ſet her by God, never ſo regularly, yet ſhe cannot thereby attain to the Light of the Sun, as a new reward thereof. And thus no more can any pure Crea-

Book III. ture, of it ſelf, by all its Righteouſneſs, obtain in Juſtice a higher Condition to it ſelf. And therefore the Angels by all their own Grace, have not to this day earned a better Condition than they were Created in. And yet, all this falls ſhort of ſatisfying for Sin; as we ſhall ſee anon.

II. We have taken a view of all that which all the Grace of a mere Creature can do for the owner of it: Let us now Secondly ſee what it can do for another:

And

Firſt, We may ſafely ſay, it can avail leſs for another, then for the Perſon himſelf. For what it doth for another, it doth by vertue of what it firſt doth for it ſelf. If it brings another into Favour, it muſt needs be much more beloved it ſelf.

Secondly, We grant, that it might have been a means of conveying Righteouſneſs through Gods goodneſs and appointment of it unto another. For ſo Adams Grace ſhould have done to all his Poſterity. For as he falling, we now inherit his Sin; ſo if he had ſtood, we by the ſame Law ſhould have had his Righteouſneſs conveyed unto us; and ſo much indeed may the grace of a Creature (that never fell) do for another. But then, take in theſe Cautions with it.

1. That other muſt be one who alſo never fell, it could not do thus for thoſe that were once Sinners, though it might convey Righteouſneſs to another that never ſinned.

2. Though a Creature that never ſinned, might have a ſtock of Righteouſneſs conveyed from another, (as we ſhould have had from Adam) yet that Creature muſt ſtill continue to be juſtified by its own Righteouſneſs, beſides by what was conveyed from that other, (even as well as the conveyer himſelf was by his own Righteouſneſs to have lived) and ſo might notwithſtanding have fallen away. For Adams Righteouſneſs, and the imputation of it, would not alone have been ſufficient to juſtifie us eternally; but our Juſtification muſt have been continued by our own Righteouſneſs. For as although we have Adams Sin conveyed to us, yet we are condemned for our own Sins beſides, and not only for his: So Adams Righteouſneſs being conveyed to us, we muſt afterwards have had, and muſt have continued to work a Righteouſneſs of our own. He was only a means to give us a Stock wherewith to begin, all which we might have ſpent, and it was likely we ſhould.

So that in the laſt place, to draw up all, by a compariſon from the leſs to the greater, it will appear how far ſhort the power of Grace in meer Creatures doth come, of ſatisfying for anothers Sin. You ſee how little it can do for its ſelf; and it muſt needs be able to do leſs for another then for it ſelf, and leſs for a Sinner then for either. It may juſtifie it ſelf; and the poſſeſſour of it may actually live by it, but not ſo another. For though that other may have Righteouſneſs conveyed to him at firſt; yet he muſt ever after live upon his own. The Creatures Grace cannot confirm it ſelf in a perpetual ſtate of Juſtification for time to come, much leſs, merit a better condition. But to ſatisfie for Sin is beyond all theſe; it is as much as to merit a better condition, and more.

(1.) It is as much: For Satisfaction hath to do with Juſtice as well as Merit; for to Merit, is to do that which Juſtice it ſelf ſhall count truly worthy of ſuch a reward: And ſo, to ſatisfie, is at leaſt to offer that for a Satisfaction, which Juſtice it ſelf offended cannot but think worthy to be accepted in recompence. The one undertakes to deſerve of Juſtice rewarding; the other to pacifie and fully content Juſtice offended.

And

And

(2.) It is more : And therefore the Papists themselves, who say that a Mans own Grace may merit for himself, yet deny it to be able to satisfie for anothers Sin. And Reason is for it.

For,

1. In meriting a better Condition, a Man earns but of anothers Goods, and undertakes to do something worthy of a better reward : and there is in it but comparatio rei ad rem. But in satisfying for Injuries, he undertakes to repair Personal Wrongs ; which it is so much harder to repair, as Men love their own Persons more than their Goods. A poor Man may earn some of a Noble Mans Goods by a Dayes work ; but can never satisfie him for a Disgrace.

2. To satisfie for Sin, is more than to do something worthy of a higher and better condition ; because there is a greater distance between a Sinners estate, and Justification to be attained, then is between the estate of one already justified, and a higher condition of favour ; such as was between the estate of Adam, and that of an Angel. There was not such a gulf (as Christ sayes) or distance between Adams Earthly State and theirs, as is between an Offendour, and the favour of God ; which by his Offence is wholly forfeited. He when Innocent was much nearer the most glorious condition which any Creature was capable of. Even as a good Subject, though never so poor and mean, who yet never offended, is nearer the Dignity of a Duke, and more capable of it, then one who is a Traytor, and so hath forfeited not only his Honour, but his Life and the Priviledge of a Subject.

CHAP. IV.

The Inability of the Creature to redeem us demonstrated from the Nature of the satisfaction. First, That which the Law required, a Creature could not answer for us, neither in obeying the Precept, nor suffering the Penalty.

THIS premised, we will now more distinctly consider whereunto satisfaction must be made, wherein it must consist, and according to what it is to be proportioned.

There are two to be satisfied before ever a Sinner can be justified; viz. God, and the Law. For as the evil of Sin is expressed by its enmity unto both these, (as Rom. 8. 7. where the Flesh is said to be enmity against God and his law) so answerably may the Satisfaction that is to be made for it, be measured out by both. I confess that both come to one; for satisfie the Law, and you satisfie God, and so e contra: yet we may take the distinct consideration of each as an help in the search, and for the finding out wherein true Satisfaction for Sin is to consist.

First, For the Law: No meer Creature could satisfie that for us, or make compensation for Sin, as it is the transgression of it.

I. In General, Let us measure Satisfaction by the worth of the Law, and of every Iota of it, which Sin doth what in it lies, to make void and of none effect. In Psal. 119. 126. They have willingly (sayes David) destroyed thy law: That is, what they did tended to destroy it; though yet it doth it not: for not one Iota of it shall pass. Now seeing, Satisfaction is redditio æquivalentis pro æquivalenti; that which is given in way of Restitution must be of an equivalent worth to that which is endamaged; what therefore can any mere Creature have, to render to God, equivalent to this his Law? For is not the least tittle of the Law worth Heaven and Earth, and so all in it, even Saints and all, because Gods Prerogative lies at stake in it? Is it not the Regula, the Pattern, yea the Original Copy of all the Grace which the Saints have: (For all Grace is but the Copy of the Law) and doth it not command all that is in them? What have they then to be deprived of, that is worth it?

II. Let us more Particularly consider those special Debts which the Law requires Satisfaction in and for; which according to the two main parts of the Law, are answerably two. As all Laws, so this, hath

First. A Preceptive Part, Do this and live; and this requires exact Obedience to every tittle of it.

Secondly, A Penal Part. If we trespass in the least, it exacts a Punishment; and that is, Eternal Death.

1. Now therefore when we transgress in the least, we hence first grow into a double Debt, and become Debtors to both parts of the Law, and the Reason hereof is, because all Laws require both. So the Laws of Men do oft times require not only Restitution and Satisfaction to be made to the Party wronged; but they enjoyn a further Punishment as a Satisfaction to the Law it self, which was contemned and broken. And therefore in many

Cases

Caſes though no hurt be done, the treſpaſſer failing of his purpoſe; yet the Law takes notice of the attempt, and puniſheth him for it; becauſe therein the Law is contemned. For in ſuch treſpaſſes againſt Men there is a double wrong; the one to the Party injured, whoſe Goods or Honour is impaired; and the other to the Law, which is ſcandalized by it. And ſo he is not only to ſatisfie for the Perſonal Dammage, but alſo for the Publick Offence, and the vitioſity of the act in breaking Order; and ſo, a double Satisfaction is to be made. Thus alſo it is in Debts; for there is both the Principal, and the Forfeiture alſo. So likewiſe in the Levitical Law, when a Man had wronged his Neighbour in Goods, he was to do two things; not only to make reſtitution due to the Party wronged, and that double at leaſt, as part of a Puniſhment alſo, but he was to ſatisfie the Law beſides, and to offer Sacrifice. And in caſe of Debt, (before inſtanced) until a Man hath paid it, he is to lye in Priſon, to ſatisfie the Law. Chap. 4.

2. We having Sinned, do owe Satisfaction to God in reſpect of his Law; and that, in a double relation and reſpect: Firſt, On our parts: Secondly, On Gods part.

Firſt, On our own: As we are Creatures we owe him Service; and as we are Sinners, we owe Puniſhment.

And Secondly, On Gods part: We owe Satisfaction to him, both as he is our Lord, our Creator and Owner that hath right to us; and alſo as he is our Law-giver.

1. As he is our Lord he hath a right to us, and as a Creditor he gave us our Selves and Graces: and we are his Goods; and ſo do owe him Active Obedience.

2. As he is our Law-giver, ſo he hath the right of a Judge, to whom for our neglect we do therefore owe Puniſhment. For God hath over us, both Jus Crediti or Dominii, and Jus Rectoris; he is Lord of his Law, and Lord of us; and we are his Subjects, and alſo his Servants; and there is in equity very good grounds for both Debts. For we owe him ſubjection for his Benefits beſtowed, although there were no Law: but then in regard of his [illegible], his tranſcendent Excellency, he is our Law-giver and Judge; and ſo he might give us theſe Laws, though it could be ſuppoſed that we had no ſuch benefit from him.

Object. And 3. Whereas it may be ſaid, that the bearing the Puniſhment due to the Offence againſt the Law, may ſeem to ſtand for that Debt of Obedience to the Law.

Anſw. The Anſwer is, that it is clean otherwiſe; for we owe both Puniſhment for Sin paſt, and Obedience alſo. And the Reaſon is evident, namely, in that Puniſhment for Sin is but an Appendix to the Law, and not that which the Law chiefly intends; for it principally aims at Obedience, and does therefore indeed threaten Puniſhment to keep the Creature to Obedience, and therefore to endure the Puniſhment is no Satisfaction to the Law. As though a Debtor ſhould live in Priſon all his life-time, yet he ſhould be in Debt ſtill; and therefore could not be ſaid to ſatisfie the Law, becauſe the principal intent of the Law is to recover a Mans Goods. So that we are for ever bound to God by a double Debt, a Debitum Pœnæ, a Debt of Puniſhment, and a Debitum Negligentiæ, a Debt of Neglect; both which are to be ſatisfied for.

Now for neither of both theſe Debts can either we our ſelves, or any Creature for us, ever ſatisfie God.

(1.) Not we our ſelves; for we can never diſcharge the Debt of Active Obedience, though God ſhould exact no more; for part of it is neglected already; and you may as well call back time that is paſt, as ſatisfie for what is paſt, becauſe we are bound to God for our whole time, even to Eternity. If an Apprentice were bound to his Maſter for ever, and he run away at any time, he can never ſatisfie his Maſter for his time loſt. If he were bound indeed but for ſeven years, then he might afterwards ſerve out his time, though he ran away for a while.

(2.) Nor

Book III.

(2.) Nor can any meer Creature be ever able to give ſatisfaction in our ſtead, upon the ſame grounds. 'Tis true indeed, that a meer Creature might perform and undergo this and all other kind of Obedience that the Law requires, both Active and Paſſive; but not ſo, as that both, or either of theſe Obediences ſo performed by it, ſhould be ſatisfactory to the Law for us, or ſtand us in ſtead. We will prove this, of each ſeverally, and of both jointly: And firſt of either of them ſingly.

1. The Active Obedience performed by any meer Creature for us could not diſcharge or ſatisfie that Debt of Active Obedience which we owe to God, ſo as we ſhould have any benefit by it. Such a Creature may indeed perform it, ſo as to profit himſelf, (as Job ſpeaks, Job 35. 8.) but not ſo as to profit us and himſelf by way of ſatisfaction. The Reaſons of which are,

I. Becauſe his whole ſelf, and all he can do, is in all reſpects wholly and altogether ſubject to the Law already for himſelf, and he can plead no priviledge of exemption whereby he ſhould be any way free from this total ſubjection to the Law: And therefore the Law commanding him, and all the Relations and Reſpects that are in him, all that he can do is little enough for himſelf, to ſatisfie the Law. This is the Reaſon which the Saints themſelves give to put others off with, (for I would not give you School-Reaſons herein, but Scripture-Reaſons) Matth. 25. 8, 9. The Wiſe Virgins ſaid to the Fooliſh when they came to them for Oil, We have little enough for our ſelves. All the Money which any Creature can make, will but ſerve to ſatisfie what the Law requires for himſelf; and he hath nothing over and above what the Law can challenge to benefit another. Do this, and live, ſaies the Law to all that are under the law, and altogether under it; And it is as much as they can do to live by the Law themſelves: They have little enough for themſelves, and nothing over. And this Reaſon holds as fully in the beſt Creature that can be ſuppoſed to have never ſo much Grace (ſet that of Hypoſtatical Union aſide, which is Chriſts ſole Prerogative) as it doth in that Creature that hath never ſo little: For all the Grace that any Creature hath, be it of never ſo large a Revenue, he holds by the ſame Tenure, namely, the Tenure of the Law, that one of never ſo low a degree of Grace doth hold his by: And the Law doth as fully exact all he can do, as being his own Debt, as it doth the others. Even as a Man that hath never ſo much Land; if his Tenure from the Lord in chief be the ſame by the Law, with that of another Man, who poſſeſſeth but a Cottage; and the Conditions of both are to pay the whole Revenue (their own meer and bare ſubſiſtence ſet aſide) the former is as much diſenabled to pay anothers Rent as the latter, though he hath never ſo great Revenues. In this caſe he that hath the leaſt, hath no lack; for God accepts what a Man hath, and he that hath never ſo much hath nothing over: There is an Equality or proportion as the Apoſtle ſpeaks in another Caſe.

II. If we conſider the ground of the Laws thus requiring the whole; it will afford a further reaſon. The Ground why the Law requires this, lies in two things:

1. That whatever the Creature hath, it hath received it from God: And,
2. So received it, and upon ſuch terms, as to give an account of it: So as after it is given, God ſtill challengeth a Right in it, as being wholly his. Hence all that a meer Creature hath, or can have, it owes to God.

1. Becauſe it hath it wholly from God; and therefore God challengeth all again, and obligeth the Creature as a Debtor to him for the benefit received. And then withal there cannot any reſpect of propriety be found, which a meer Creature can challenge, in what it hath received, as having a Title to it, diſtinct from that which God claims to himſelf; but all is wholly and alone his. And therefore the Creature can never lay out any thing for another, which it can call its own ſtock, and ſay, this is mine to diſpoſe of, and I have

I have enough beſides to account with God for my ſelf, another way; For what haſt thou (ſaies the Apoſtle) which thou haſt not received? 1 Cor. 4. 7. Chap. 4.

And 2*ly*. It receives all from God ſo as to give an Account as a meer Steward unto him: So the Apoſtle Peter ſpeaks, A Steward of the manifold grace of God, 1 Pet. 4. 10. and ſo accountable to him for all. Now it is as impoſſible for a meer Creature to ſatisfie God for anothers Debt, or he is as unable to do it, as a Steward can undertake to pay his Maſter for his Fellow-Servants Debt out of the Money his Maſter had betruſted him with. For what can be in this caſe given is the Maſters own already, and in having all reſumed the Maſter hath no more then what he ſhould have; this being a certain Rule and Principle in equity, that it is impoſſible to ſatisfie another Man with what is wholly his own already. And upon this ground doth the Lord refuſe Sacrifices for Sin, even becauſe they are all his already; All the beaſts of the foreſt are mine, Pſal 50. 8, 9, 10, 11. I will not reprove thee for thy ſacrifices, or thy burnt-offerings, to have been continually before me, ver. 9. I will take no bullock out of thy houſe, nor he-goats out of thy folds. ver. 10. For every beaſt of the foreſt is mine, and the cattel upon a thouſand hills. ver. 11. I know all the fowls of the mountains: and the wild beaſts of the field are mine. Therefore David, 1 Chron. 29. 14. acknowledgeth it Mercy enough that God would but accept of their Offerings for themſelves: What are we that we ſhould offer thus freely even for our ſelves? He conſiders both Gods Tranſcendent Excellency in himſelf, and that total dependance which they had on him for all; as it follows of thine own have I given thee, and how can that ſatisfie the Debt? Sin indeed is our own, which we owe for; but Obedience, that is not our own, but comes from the Grace of God and from his enabling. Indeed, if God had given us Grace, as Friends give Gifts each to other, to do what they pleaſe with them, without requiring any account of them, then we might have payd him with that which he hath given us. But he gives Grace to us as he does Talents unto Servants: And therefore he requires anſwerable Service and Improvement of thoſe Talents, of which he takes account according to the number given; and if they be not well uſed, he takes them away. And when we have done whatever we can, we are unprofitable Servants too, Matth. 25. 14, to 30. And it is impoſſible for one who is wholly a Servant, to ſatisfie his Maſter for the Debt of another. Inter Servum & Dominum nulla intercurrit juſtitia, (ſaies Ariſtotle, ſpeaking of meer Servants as in thoſe times,) becauſe ſuch a Servant is pars Domini, Part of his Maſters Goods. And herein let the ſuppoſition made hold good, as, Let the Creature have never ſo much Grace, ſo much the more is he diſenabled to ſatisfie for another; for the more Grace he hath received, the more Service is required from him: Much is required from him to whom much is given, Luk. 12. 48. Yea the Obligation upon himſelf is the greater, and binds him to do ſo much the more; and therefore he can as little, yea leſs ſpare any thing for another, as he that hath leſs.

II. In the Second Place, For Paſſive Obedience, that cannot be ſatisfactory for another. For,

I. Even ſo much Paſſive Obedience as any Creature can undergo, is in it ſelf in ſtrict terms of Juſtice due unto God from the Creature, though not as a Puniſhment, yet as a Tryal of Obedience, if he ſhould be pleaſed to lay it upon the Creature. How elſe could Paul wiſh himſelf accurſed from Chriſt for his kinſmen and brethren the Jews? Rom. 9. 3. and this, as a Duty ſurely! For he did not ſuper-erogate therein, nor do more than God might require: It was no more than what was due unto him.

2*dly*. Both of theſe Obediences muſt be joyntly performed by him that undertakes to ſatisfie; and it is impoſſible for him ſo to perform both.

1. Both

Book III.

1. Both muſt be performed joyntly: For Paſſive Obedience alone would never pay both Debts. To caſt a Man into Priſon payes not the Creditor; and Puniſhment is required by God as he is the Judge of the World; it is Jus Rectoris, and we owe Obedience to him beſides, as he is a Creditor. And though God be content with Paſſive Obedience from thoſe in Hell, becauſe it is all he can get of them; yet he is not ſatisfied with it; and therefore they are for ever to abide there. Its true, that he improves it to his Glory, in that it ſhews the various ways of his manifeſtation of his Attributes upon Creatures; but yet, ſimply, in it ſelf it would not ſatisfie it. Furthermore, the threatning of puniſhment is (as was ſaid) but the Appendix of the Law; not the Primary intent of the Law-giver: And therefore God doth not ſimply delight in it, nor is he ſatisfied with it.

2*dly*. There is an impoſſibility that any Creature ſhould perform both of them joyntly and together; which it muſt do, if it ſatisfie: For from that Creature, though never ſo Excellent, an Eternity both of Active and Paſſive Obedience would be exacted; and he could not diſpatch or end either, nor perform both together. If the Obedience that is ſet him might be ended, or if both could be performed together, he might ſatisfie; but the Law exacts both for ever of us: And therefore the Pſalmiſt makes the Redemption of the Soul too pretious for any Creature to meddle with; Pſal. 49. 8. giving this reaſon why a Man cannot redeem his brother; ſo pretious is the redemption of a ſoul, and it ceaſeth for ever; that is, it ſhall never be accompliſht; ſo the Phraſe is taken elſewhere. The Work is ſo pretious, as it requireth Eternity to do it in. So that that which the beſt of Creatures ſhould do, or ſuffer for us, in any finite term of time would not ſatisfie for what was due from us to Eternity; but it doth require yet a further, and infinite worth in the Obedience to be added to ſupply that Eternity, and it is an utter impoſſibility to perform both together for ever. Look as it is impoſſible to ſerve two maſters, but that a man muſt lean to the one, and neglect the other; *Matth.*6.24. ſo it is impoſſible for the Creature to carry along both theſe Obediences together: For when he were obeying the whole Law, How could he at the ſame ſuffer? And when he were ſuffering, how could he obey the whole Law? All the Graces then exerciſed would have been only Patience, and all little enough to afford him that; there would have been no room for the exerciſe of other Graces. And as God calls us not to do, and ſuffer, at the ſame time; for both cannot ſtand together, ſo neither could any Creature do and ſuffer at the ſame time for us. If indeed he could firſt diſpatch the Active part, and then encounter the torments due unto us, and diſpatch them alſo; then there might be hope: but this he cannot; and to performe both to Eternity is impoſſible.

But yet by making as free and large conceſſions as are imaginable, further to ſhew the impoſſibility of it; Suppoſe that Paſſive, Obedience, and Sufferings for us would ſtand for both Debts; and ſuppoſe alſo, that if their Lives went for ours, they then might ſatisfie as well as we can; ſeeing theirs are as good as ours, and therefore, if Eternal Death in us be a ſatisfaction to Gods Juſtice (which if it be not ſo, God then loſeth by Sin, and then he would not have let it come into the World) then it might be ſo in them for us, and we be freed; yet conſider the inconveniences that will follow:

1. They muſt alwaies be ſatisfying, and it could never be ſaid, it is finiſhed. They muſt lie by it till they have payd the uttermoſt farthing; which they can never do, no more than we our ſelves can; and ſo they could not take away Sins from us; for we could not have an Acquittance till the Debt were payd; we could not be juſtified till our Suretie were acquitted. Therefore if Chriſt had not riſen (ſaies Paul) we had yet been in our ſins, 1 Cor. 15. 17. And therefore the Pſalmiſt ſaies, of the Redemption of the Soul by any Creature, Pſal. 48. 9. it ceaſeth not for ever; that is, ſhall never be accompliſhed, but ſhall alwaies be a doing, and never ended, and ſo, we never be the better, nor the nearer having our Bonds cancelled, And this is the reaſon why

Sacrifices

Sacrifices were rejected, even becauſe every year they were ſtill forced to offer them: Heb. 10. 1, 2, 3. 4. For the law having a ſhadow of good things to come, and not the very image of the things, can never with thoſe ſacrifices which they offered year by year continually, make the comers thereunto perfect. ver. 2. For then would they not have ceaſed to be offered? becauſe that the worſhippers once purged, ſhould have had no more conſcience of ſins. ver. 3. But in thoſe ſacrifices there is a remembrance again made of ſins every year. ver. 4. For it is not poſſible that the blood of bulls and of goats ſhould take away ſins. And ver. 11. it is ſaid, That they ſtood daily offering the ſame ſacrifices. Chap. 4.

2*dly*. Suppoſe yet further, That God, to whom Eternity is but as one inſtant, ſhould therefore give us in our Bond, when the other had entred in his; becauſe though it be to Eternity a paying, yet to him it were as good as payd in hand preſently. Suppoſe this; yet notwithſtanding, one Juſt Man or Angel could ſatisfie but for one of us: Life could go but for Life, and a tooth for a tooth, (as the Law runs) and ſo he muſt ſacrifice as many Creatures as good as we are for ever, as he meant to ſave of us Men. That one Creatures Obedience would not as Adams Righteouſneſs have extended to many; for that was a favour, but this a Debt. And we cannot pay many Bonds with one Summ which is due for one; for every one is a diſtinct Debt and Obligation.

3*dly*, If we grant all this, yet what Creature would have had ſo much love in it towards us as willingly to ſacrifice it ſelf for us? Which it muſt fully do, or elſe it cannot be ſatisfaction; for ſatisfactio eſt redditio voluntaria, ſaies the School. The Apoſtle Rom. 5. 7. ſaies that peradventure for a good man ſome would dare to die: Mark it; he makes a [peradventure] of it; and it muſt be for a good man; that is, one profitable to him (as they expound it) and ſeeing Death is φοβερῶν φοβερώτατον, or he muſt be very hardy, and daring, that would do it. But to encounter Gods Wrath, Who dares do it? Jerem. 30. 21. And their nobles ſhall be of themſelves, and their governour ſhall proceed from the midſt of them, and I will cauſe him to draw near, and he ſhall approach unto me: for who is this that engaged his heart to approach unto me? ſaith the Lord. The Prophet there making a Promiſe of Chriſt to be a Mediator, and one that ſhould be able to draw nigh to God, he gives this reaſon; For who is there that engageth his heart to draw nigh to me? As if he had ſaid, None elſe durſt have ſtept in, to encounter me for you; eſpecially, not for Enemies both to God and themſelves. There is need of a Mediator to reconcile us and the Angels; as that place in the Epheſ. 1. 10. may ſeem to imply, where the Apoſtle ſaies, That God made known unto us the myſtery of his will, that he might gather together in one, all things in Chriſt, which are in heaven and earth. Making us as Friends to himſelf, ſo one to another; and if ſo then antecedently, they could not be the Reconcilers; And further the holier they were, the leſs muſt they needs love us, and ſo not of themſelves would they ever undertake ſuch Work for us.

4*thly*, Suppoſe yet further, That any had ſo much love, or would have been ſo hardy to venture, as with Paul to wiſh they may be accurſed; Yet if they were in Hell but half an hour, they would repent themſelves, and wiſh themſelves out again; and ſo it had been ſpoiled for ever being ſatisfaction, which muſt throughout be voluntary, as our Diſobedience was. And therefore God would not truſt to their help in ſo weighty a buſineſs, wherein his own Will was ſo engaged. It is ſaid in Job 4. 18. Behold he puts no truſt in his ſervants: Which though he might, in ordinary works of Obedience, yet he will never rely on them for ſo great a matter. He finds folly even in the Angels; They are mutable. He truſted one Man once for all, only in matter of Obedience to his Law, which was eaſie and ſweet to him; but ſee how he fail'd, and left all, and that upon no great or ſtrong temptation. He therefore will never hazard the Second Adam to be a meer Creature in a matter of Puniſhment; which that which that he may be willing to undergo, he muſt be fed with ſome delight or hopes of eaſe: No, he will make ſure work now.

Fifthly and Laſtly, Suppoſe any Creature had been ſo full of Excellency, as that the Sufferings of it alone could have been ſatisfactory for all that God meant to ſave, and according to the ſuppoſition formerly made, that he having more Grace than all Mankind; and ſo, being made Heir to more Glory than all Mankind beſides, would have been content to lay all aſide, and to have ſubjected himſelf for ever to undergo all our Puniſhments; yet conſidering all this muſt have been done by him, in obedience unto God, and for his ſake, (for otherwiſe it could not have been accepted, in that ſatisfaction for another muſt be voluntary on both parts, both on his that undertakes it, and alſo by the conſent and acceptation of him that is wronged:) If the Caſe had thus ſtood, then this Inconvenience would have followed, that a Creature ſhould have been Obedient unto God, yea, and performed the higheſt Obedience unto God, whom yet God never ſhould have had an opportunity to reward, becauſe he was to be in Hell for ever: And God will never be ſo behind-hand with any Creature that ſhall do him ſervice, much more, ſo great a Service as this would be.

Chap. 5.

CHAP. V.

That no Creatures could make that Satisfaction which an injur'd God required. They cannot compenſate the wrong done to him by Sin, nor repair the loſs of his Honour.

WEE have ſeen what Satisfaction the Law requires, and how far the Creature would fall ſhort of that : Let us Secondly, now ſee what Satisfaction God requires. And although re ipſa, in the thing it ſelf it comes all to one, to ſatisfie God, and to ſatisfie his Law, and both theſe Heads be really co-incident : Yet our Underſtandings may take a diſtinct conſideration from each ; which will ſerve the better to clear this Point.

Now to make way for the Demonſtrations I intend, let us define in general, what Satisfaction is, and wherein it is to be made.

Satisfaction in general is, when ſo much clear emolument ariſeth to the Party wronged, as was impared by the treſpaſs committed. Now all ſuch Dammages to be repaired, do uſually conſiſt, either in Goods, or Honour ; and Satisfaction for Goods is uſually called Reſtitution ; but Satisfaction for Honour is it which is more properly called Satisfaction.

Now we may conſider a Wrong done to God both theſe wayes, and an anſwerable Satisfaction requiſite.

Firſt, For that of Goods ; though it be a thing which God doth not much reckon, yet ſomething is conſiderable about it ; and therefore the Prodigals wild courſe is expreſſed and aggravated by this, that he ſpent his Fathers goods and ſubſtan e in riotous living ; Luke 15. 13. Therefore alſo God compares himſelf to a Houſe-holder, who commits Goods and Tallents unto his Servants to be by them improved ; Mat, 25. 14. and who, when he reckons with them, doth count up their waſte and expence thereof upon their Luſts : and therefore they are ſaid to conſume them upon their luſts ; Jam. 4. 3. that is, ſo to engroſs them to themſelves, and as it were conſume them, that God gets nothing by the things which he hath made. By reaſon of Sin he hath no profit by thoſe Creatures which Sinners have committed to them ; and the World becomes loſs unto him. And though God ſtands not much upon this (as neither will I ſtand long upon the handling of it) yet thus much is ſoon demonſtrated, that no Creatures were ever able to make Satisfaction for loſſes of this kind : they are not able (as Heſther ſaid in another Caſe) to make good, or countervail the Kings loſs. Eſth. 7. 4.

Now to inſtance in ſome Particulars.

1. Sin by a forfeiture had quite deſtroyed this World, if Chriſt had not upheld it : And can all the Graces in the Creatures make another, or uphold this from falling? Surely no.

2. It blotted Grace out of the heart of Man, and can the power of all the Creatures make one dram of Grace ? Yea could we ſo much as have lighted our Candles that were blown out at their Tapers? Surely no.

3. By Sinners the Law was deſtroyed alſo ; Pſal. 119. 1, 26. They have deſtroyed thy Law. Now if you would ſet a Price upon the Law, one tittle of it is more worth than Heaven and Earth.

4. Through Sin was much Service due unto God loſt. For that we may reckon amongſt Goods ; as a Maſter doth the Service of an Apprentice. Although all Sinners ſhould preſently ceaſe to offend God any more ; yet ſtill God hath loſt ſo much Service from them for the time paſt. Now all mere Creatures being Gods Servants, and owing all their endeavours and ſervices unto him for themſelves: No one of them therefore can do two Mens work, becauſe they owe all they can do, for themſelves; and ſo they can never repay that loſs of Service paſt. God did hire Mankind into his Vineyard for all Eternity; and though we could ſuppoſe they had not committed any poſitive Sin, yet if God had but only loſt ſo much Service from them, and the Sin of that neglect had annihilated them (and it doth as good as annihilate them to God, and therefore he accounts and calls them loſt; as the loſt Sheep, the loſt Son, &c.) and then, if God had come to have entred into terms with any mere Creature for theſe loſſes, and ſhould have ſaid, Give me but the Creatures you have ſpoiled, make me a new World, for your Sin hath ſpoiled this, and ſubjected it to vanity; had any of them power to have done it? Surely no. When God would confute Jobs contending with him, he doth but ask him, whether he could make the leaſt Creature, yea, or being made, command it: Thou! (ſayes God) where waſt thou when I laid the foundations of the earth? Job 38. 4. Haſt thou commanded the morning ſince thy dayes, or cauſed the day-ſpring to know its place? Ver. 12. Out of whoſe womb came the ice? Ver. 29. Canſt thou lift up thy voice to the clouds, (and bid them rain) that abundance of waters may cover thee? Canſt thou ſend lightnings that may go, and ſay unto thee, here we are? Ver. 34, 35. And though thou canſt do none of all this, yet doſt thou contend with me? Let me ſee (ſayes God) what thou canſt do, Job 40. 7, 8, 9. If thou couldſt make, or command the leaſt Creature, then I will confeſs to thee that thine own right hand can ſave thee; Ver. 14. Can all the Angels in Heaven (as powerful as they are) make one hair of thy Head? Can they ſet ordinances in Heaven? Job 38. 33. The Philoſophers feigned them to be but the Movers of thoſe Wheels and Orbes, not the Founders of them. They cannot ſet the Clock, much leſs, make it. And can they make Grace, or can they make the Law whole again, which Sin had broken?

But the truth is, that herein God expecteth not, nor is he capable of any Satisfaction or Reſtitution of Goods; for none can be profitable to him; Job 22. 2, 3. When that Formaliſt thought to oblige God by Sacrifices; If I were hungry (ſayes God) would I tell it thee? Pſal. 50. 12. The world is Gods, and the fulneſs thereof (ſayes the Apoſtle, 1 Cor. 10. 26.) And again, Who hath given to him, and he ſhall be recompenced? Rom. 11. 35. No, it is Glory only that the Creature is capable to give him: So it follows there in Pſal. 50. 15. Thou ſhalt glorifie me. God is not as a King, whoſe Tribute lies as well in Goods, as in Honour; but all the Tribute he expecteth or exacteth from the Creature, conſiſts in Honour, for that is the end of all his works; he made all things for his glory; I formed it (ſayes he in the Prophet) for my glory; Iſa. 43. 7. Of whom and to whom are all things, to whom be glory for ever, ſayes the Apoſtle, Rom. 11. 36. And herein alſo, though it be moſt true, that the Creature can contribute nothing to Gods Eſſential Glory; yet to his Manifeſtative Glory it may, and doth; at leaſt the Creature may take from it, as by Sin it doth; and the Reaſon is, becauſe this kind of Glory is revealed in, and by Creatures. Now it is in this that God expects Satisfaction; and that this Satisfaction in point of Honour does much more infinitely tranſcend the power of any Creature, is the thing which I am now to demonſtrate.

Let us therefore in like manner come to the Particulars wherein Gods Honour ſuffers by Sin, and ſhew how irrecompenceable the injury therein is by Creatures.

1. If it were no more than to ſatisfie for that Tribute of Honour left behind-hand unpaid; for the neglect of that Homage due to God, and which is to come in by our Service of him; what a Quarrel muſt it needs breed, not to be compoſed, or taken up by any Creature? You know, Kings that have Homage due to them from other Kings their equals, though the Tribute it ſelf, or thing to be paid, be ſmall; yet if it be neglected, what Wars and ſtirs hath it bred, merely becauſe it is a matter of Honour neglected! Hence alſo the neglect of paying a ſmall acknowledgment (ſuppoſe a Peppercorn, corn, or the like) or of doing ſome petty Service yearly, do oftimes forfeit great Eſtates; becauſe they are acknowledgments of Honour to the Lord of whom the Tenants hold; and ſo being omitted, they are neglects of an Honour that is due: Now the like ſlight being offered towards God, how great a wrong doth he account it, if no more yet becauſe there is a neglect of his Honour in it? If indeed the terms of our Service between God and us, did ſtand upon free mutual conditions of bargain, as when Freemen are hired, and work only for Wages, who if they neglect a Dayes-work, it is but calling in ſo much of their Wages, and they are even again with him that hired them. If it were thus between God and us, the matter were eaſier to be reconciled; but it carries a Diſhonour with it, ſuch as are thoſe neglects of Service to a great Prince, which Service is not due by any bargain for Wages, but out of Subjection, or as to a Lord by way of Knight-ſervice, not out of Love only and Liberty, but out of Reſpect and Homage. God is deſirous of nothing but Honour from you; and all the Honour the Creatures can give him, is too little for him; it ſatisfies not, neither anſwers to his vaſt Deſires of being glorified, nor to the Dues of his moſt glorious excellency. And therefore, if any be behind-hand unpaid by any of his Creatures, it is a loſs by Creatures irreparable, for they render no over-plus to make it up; and he cannot but account it ſo much loſs to him, and ſhould they now do what they can, ſtill God would want of his Due. Chap. 5.

2. Satisfaction is to be made for Honour debaſed alſo; for Sin caſts a ſoil of diſgrace and debaſement upon the Honour which God hath, and goes about to diſpoil, and rob him of it. It is ſaid, Rom. 2. 23. In breaking the law thou diſhonoureſt God; there is a Diſhonour caſt upon him by it, yea it toucheth upon the height of his Honour; which will appear,

(1.) In that every Law of his is backt with his Prerogative, and is a note of his abſolute Soveraignty; Jam. 4. 12. There is one Law-giver who is able to ſave and to deſtroy; that is, he is the ſupream Potentate of all the World, the abſolute Lord Paramount; and this is ſhewn and declared in giving his Law: And is therefore anſwerably denyed by the Creature in every breach of every Law; to which every Sin is an affront.

Now as amongſt Men, Kingly Authority being the Summity, the Supremacy, the Tranſcendency of all Honour, therefore the Law hath ſo fenced it, that whatſoever is immediately directed againſt it, or is a denyal of it, is Rebellion, and Crimen læſæ Majeſtatis: and to diſgrace a Kings Perſonal Perfections is not ſo much, nay to ſpeak diſhonourably of the Perſonal Imperfections of a King, diſhonoureth him not ſo much as to oppoſe his Kingly Power and Dignity: As to ſay that Kings are not ſo Learned, or ſo Valiant as many other Men; this is not in account ſo high a diſhonour to them, becauſe it toucheth not upon their Soveraignty and Princely Dignity, for they may notwithſtanding be acknowledged and obeyed as Kings: But whatever tends to impair and blemiſh that their Prerogative and Dignity, is held to be the height of Diſhonour, as Kingly Authority is the ſublimity and top of Honour: So now in breaking the leaſt Law of God, we do deny the Soveraignty and Kingly Authority of God. To deſpiſe any of Gods works, and ſleight them, is a diſhonour to the Maker, as Solomon ſayes; but to ſleight his Law is more, becauſe that his tranſcendent Excellency and Kingly Authority is thus engaged in it. Some of the School-Men fondly reaſon to diminiſh and leſſen the hainouſneſs of Sin, ſaying that all the evil of Sin lying ſimply in this, that it is the breach of Gods Law, therefore it is not properly an Injury to God; no otherwiſe then as a thing contrary to his Will: As when a Maſter commands a Servant to do a thing, and he doth the contrary, and ſo, though indeed he diſpleaſeth his Maſter thereby (as doing a thing contrary to his command) yet (ſay they) it is no Injury: But they do not conſider, that not only Gods Will is engaged in his Law, but alſo his ſupream Authority; the Law being made by his Prerogative, and by the ſame Prerogative backt and commanded. Kings indeed in their Laws do not lay all the weight of their Authority upon every Law; but God doth: And therefore every Sin is not only a tranſgreſſion of his Will, but a debaſement of the Soveraignty of his Will.

Book III.

Will. Hence in the promulgation of Gods Laws, there runs this Preface, I am the Lord thy God; therefore do this. Exod. 20. 1. So that his Soveraignty is ſleighted in every Sin, and in it there is a contempt of his Crown and Dignity.

Sin is not only a diſhonour to him ſimply as he is a ſupream Law-giver, but unto all his other Perſonal glorious Perfections. Every contempt of the Authority of a Prince reflects not upon his Perſonal Vertues; but Sin reflects upon all Gods Excellencies; as upon his Goodneſs, &c. for Men ſeek that happineſs and goodneſs in the Creature, which is to be had in God alone, and ſo profeſs him not to be the chiefeſt Good. There is no Attribute upon which a diſgrace is not caſt by the Sins of Men; yea, and therefore they tend to make him no God; Titus 1. 16. In their works they deny God. Traytors may aim to unking a Prince, and to that end rebel againſt him, and yet their Treaſon not reach unto his Life. But Gods Sovereignty, and Perfection, and Glory are himſelf, and his Life; the leaſt detraction from which, is to deſtroy the whole; for quicquid eſt in Deo Deus eſt, whatever is in God, is God himſelf. It is true indeed, that in the event thoſe hurt not God: no more than Snow-balls thrown againſt the Sun can hurt it. God dwells in light which darkneſs cannot approach or touch. Sin hurts him no more than Grace benefits him. But yet, injuries and diſhonours are not meaſured in Morality, by the event only, but by what is the Terminus, the thing they tend to; which is, to un-God the great God, and deſpoil him of all his Titles. To reſolve to kill a King, is accounted Treaſon, as well as to do it, and ſo puniſht for ſuch; therefore Solomon did put Adonijah to death. Even as he who hates his Brother, is counted a Murtherer, 1 John 3. 15. ſo he who hates God, is a Murtherer of God: Now every Sinner is ſaid to hate God, Rom. 1. 30. Peccatum eſt Dei-cidium. It is true, that Phyſically Sin is but Privatio boni finiti, of that good which we might have in God, not boni infiniti, or Dei, not the Privation of God as in himſelf; but as he is to be participated by us. Yet as the Aſtronomers call the Interpoſition of the Moon between the Earth and the Sun, the Eclipſe of the Sun; though the Sun doth really loſe no light by it, but only the Earth; yet becauſe it makes the Face of the World below to be as if there were no Sun, it is therefore commonly called, the Eclipſe of the Sun, and not of the Earth, ſo may it be ſaid of Sin: It is in the guilt of it a Privation of God, and of his Glory, and of his Law: Becauſe though indeed and in truth we only are the loſers; yet it makes to us as if there were no God, as if God had no being; and ſo it may be ſaid to be the Eclipſe of his Being, viz. to us. Therefore Men are ſaid to live without God in the world; Epheſ. 2. 21. and without the Law; 1 Tim. 1. 9. and to be deprived of the glory of God, as being not manifeſted in them nor by them; Rom. 3. 23. Now if it be ſo that the ſinfulneſs of Sin thus lies in ſo great a diſhonour to ſo great a God; what Satisfaction can then be made for the demerit of it, by all the Creatures? For in this reſpect it tranſcends in evil, and outweighs all the goodneſs that is either in the Perſons or Graces of all the Creatures. Indeed it is true, if we take Sin Phyſically, as it is a privation of the contrary Habit of Grace and of our good only, that then it hath no more evil in it then Grace hath Goodneſs; for as Sin ſeparates from God, your iniquities have ſeparated you from me; Iſa. 59. 2. ſo Grace draws the Soul nearer to God, and ſo makes a Man as happy, as Sin makes him miſerable: To draw near to thee is good, ſayes the Pſalmiſt, Pſal. 73. 28. But this is not that ſpecial evil in Sin, for which Satisfaction is required; as neither is it the chief matter of our Repentance for Sin: for no Man ſatisfies for an evil done to himſelf; neither is it Sins having ſo much evil in it againſt us, that hinders a meer Creature from ſatisfying; which notwithſtanding was that that miſled ſome of the Antient Schoolmen, who upon that ground thought a Pure Creature might ſatisfie for Sin; all their Reaſons running upon the evil of Sin as a Privation of Grace, and of God to us only, and as he is our good; not conſidering, that over and above it is an evil againſt God himſelf; Jer. 2. 19. It is an evil and a bitter thing to forſake God: And Sin is accordingly called enmity againſt God, Rom. 8. 7. and a provoking the eyes of his glory. Iſa. 3. 8, It is likewiſe ſaid to be againſt him : So ſayes David, Pſal. 51. 4. Againſt thee, thee onely have I ſinned : He lookt not ſo much at the wrong to Bathſheba and Uriah, as at the diſhonour done to God; and this is the eminent evil to be conſidered in Sin ; for as God is the chiefeſt good, ſo himſelf is the meaſure of all other good and evil. Now then, the evil of Sin lying thus in ſo great a diſhonour unto God himſelf; no Creature can make amends for it. For, Chap. 5.

1. Diſhonour which reflects upon a Perſon of worth, cannot be ſatisfied for but by a Perſon equally worthy and honourable ; for the Satisfaction muſt be made by reſtoring of Honour again, and that will depend upon the honour and worth of the Party honouring. The reſtoring of Honour is to be meaſured by the ſame Rule, and weighed at the ſame Ballance that the Honour of the Perſon diſhonoured is meaſured by : As therefore, Honour is in it ſelf a Perſonal thing, ſo the repairing of it again depends upon the Perſonal worth of him that goes about to repair it. Were we and God equal, ſo as there were as much worth in us to honour him withal, as our diſhonouring of him comes unto; then indeed if we went about ſome way to reſtore again, that Honour that was impaired by us, we might perhaps ſatisfie for it : (And yet the Law is ſo tender of diſhonour, that in caſe of Defamation, it is not enough for a Perſon equally Honourable to ſubmit, and to ſay as much for a Man as he hath ſaid againſt him ; that is accounted Satisfaction ; but the Law enjoins a Penalty beſides) But however, the reſtoring of Honour being a thing Perſonal, doth therefore depend upon the honour of that Perſon who is to reſtore it ; for Honor eſt in honorante, Honour is in him that honours ; the meaning of which Saying may well be this, that Honour depends upon the worth of the Party honouring. Therefore we ſee that honour from a mean Peaſant is not eſteemed or accounted of by one that is highly Noble : And hence it is, that Wrongs in point of Honour, offered by Inferiours to Superiours, do oftentimes tranſcend Satisfaction. It is not ſo in Goods ; a Poor Man may ſatisfie a King in Goods, in caſe he be able to reſtore as well as another. And the Demonſtration of this is, that the beſt way of Satisfaction to be made by ſuch Inferiours, being to ſubmit themſelves, and that ſubmiſſion being a Due from them already, and no more than the diſtance of their Ranks call for ; it therefore reacheth not to Satisfaction. And thus it is in common eſteem, and that founded upon what is in the things themſelves, and not upon common opinion only. And therefore it is evident, that though the Creatures ſhould do that which might bring in as much glory to God as was loſt ; yet becauſe of the diſtance and diſproportion that is between the Perſons, it would never ſatisfie. The aggravation of a diſhonour ariſeth not ſo much from the fact, as from the diſproportion between the Perſons ; for Honour is not inter Res, but Perſonas ; it concerns not Things, but Perſons. To ſtrike, or offer to ſtrike at a Magiſtrate (though we hurt him not) the hainouſneſs of the fault lies not ſo much in the Fact, as in the Diſproportion between the Perſons. Therefore though in the Old Law, a Tooth for a Tooth was Satisfaction enough between Private Men ; yet not ſo in caſe of hurting a Magiſtrate, or ſtriking a Mans Parent, which was Death by that Law, becauſe of the Diſhonour done to them thereby. So upon the ſame ground, for a mad Man to ſtrike the King, is Death by our Laws, not in reſpect of the Fact, or of his Intention ; but in regard of the tranſcendent Honour of the Perſon of a King ; and the diſproportion and inferiority that is in him that ſtrikes him. Now the diſproportion between God and us is ſo infinite, that it makes our ſinning a Diſhonour altioris Ordinis, of a higher kind then is recompenſable by Creatures.

And to enlarge this Demonſtration further : If no Creature can make unto God a reparation of Goods (as was ſhewn) then much leſs can it make Satisfaction for his Glory impaired. For Goods are extrinſecal to a Mans Perſon, and therefore the loſs of them a Man leſs regards ; yea the greater Spirit a Man is of, the leſs he cares for Goods ; and indeed the wrong therein becometh cometh leſs : Even as to wrong a Poor Man in his Goods, is worſe (becauſe of his need) then to wrong a Rich Man ; but the greater any one is in Spirit, the more he regards Honour, and that far above his Goods. Men will loſe their Blood rather than ſuffer a hair of Honour to periſh ; which Diſpoſition though it be often ſet wrong in Men, yet it is a ſpark of Gods Image, and a reſemblance of what is in him. God can bear the loſs of Creatures and Worlds, and never be toucht with it ; but he will not loſe one ray of Honour. For Glory is a Perſonal thing ; it is the Luſtre of his Perſon which he carries and wears about him ; and is intrinſecal to him, which Goods are not ; and therefore God is willing to loſe Creatures, thereby to gain the more Glory. So he caſts away the moſt of Men and Angels for his own Glory. My glory (ſayes God) I will not give to another ; Iſa. 42. 8. But his Goods he doth ; He gave the earth and all the fulneſs thereof, unto the Sons of Men. Pſal. 115. 16. He gives Worlds and Kingdoms away even to the baſeſt of Men, (ſayes Daniel, Dan. 4. 17.) but he will part with none of his Glory that is proper to himſelf, unto any of them. Of all the Goods he poſſeſſeth, his Children are the deareſt to him ; he gives Nations for them, Iſa. 41. 2. and once he gave his Son for them ; they are the apple of his eye ; and he that toucheth them, toucheth the apple of his eye : But his Glory is dearer to him than all his Children, for he formed them for his glory, (as the ſame Prophet there alſo ſayes) Iſa. 43. 7. How hard is it to pacifie Jealouſie, when a Mans Spouſe is deflowred, It is the rage of a man, and he will not regard any ranſom ; (as Solomon ſayes Prov. 6. 34, 35.) How hard then muſt it needs be, to pacifie God, who is ſaid to be jealous of nothing but his honour.

Again, 2. Though it be but the manifeſtation of Gods Glory, which hath a ſoil and a reflexion caſt upon it by Sin, not his Eſſential Glory, (which loſeth nothing by Sin, as it gains not, nor is encreaſed by all the works that Chriſt, or God himſelf hath done) ; yet not all that the Creatures can do is worth the leaſt beam of that his Glory as it is to be manifeſted. For that is the end for which they were all made, and is therefore better then they. And beſides, all they can do to the advancing of it, they do owe it already ; and God ſtands not in need of them to manifeſt it ; he could have let them remain in the womb of nothing, and have raiſed up others to glorifie him.

3. In that Sin ſtrikes at Gods Being, what is there in the Creatures that can make amends for it, they being but ſhadows of his Being, and he the ſubſtance ; whoſe name alone is [I am]. The over-ſhadowing therefore, or the eclipſe of his Being, is more than the deſtruction of ours.

Object. Yea, but you will object, and ſay, that the Grace of a meer Creature may ſeem to vye with all the evil that is in Sin ; and this, in point of Honour. For as Sin is againſt God, ſo Grace though but in an impure Creature, can ſay, I am for God : and as Sin ſets up another God ; ſo this Grace glorifies God as God. Now God being the Object of both, why ſhould they not alike ſet a worth, or a demerit upon what is done, and God accept of Grace, which is for him, as much as condemn and puniſh Sin, the aggravation of the ſinfulneſs of which is, that it is againſt him !

Anſw. For Anſwer unto this :

1. Though it be true that Sin hurts him no more than Grace benefits him ; (in that God is capable neither of benefit nor hurt) even as Clouds take no more from the Sun than Candles add to it. And therefore in Job 35. 6, 7. it is ſaid, What doeſt thou to him if thou beeſt righteous, or againſt him if thou ſinneſt ? For nothing is oppoſed to God immediately, but only to him in his Works : As no darkneſs can obſcure the Sun it ſelf, though his beams it may intercept ; ſo Sin may dim the manifeſtative glory of the Father of lights. Yet, as we meaſure not kindneſſes or injuries by the event, but by what they are in the acts themſelves (as Treaſon is not puniſhed according to the event, but according to the nature of the act plotted or purpoſed) ſo are we to do by Sin.

And

And 2. If we compare the ingredient qualifications conſiderable in the one, and in the other, as the one is an Injury, and the other an Act of Obedience; we ſhall find a great diſproportion between them. For, Chap. 6.

(1.) If an injury is accounted more evil and blame-worthy than all kindneſſes praiſe-worthy and to be accepted; then when the injury is an undue act of us, unworthy of all the obligations between us and another whom we wrong; when 'tis cauſleſs; and when the kindneſſes we do are all due from us; herein lies the diſproportion which makes the obliquity of the injury of Sin the more tranſcendent. All the Obedience we perform is due from us to God: You do (ſayes Chriſt) what you ought to do: Luke 17. 10. But in this (as Chriſt again ſayes) we hate God without a cauſe; John 15. 24, 25. And what iniquitie have you found in me (ſayes he) and for which of all my perfections or kindneſſes to you, do you ſin againſt me? John 10. 32. Now it is this inequality that lies between the one and the other, that makes the obliquity of the one to exceed the goodneſs of the other. As for Example: For a Child to love his Father, though it be good and commendable, yet in ſo doing he doth but his Duty, and even what Nature teacheth to do; therefore this is not ſo praiſe-worthy, as to hate his Father is odious; for he therein goes againſt his kind; there is an unnaturalneſs in it; and therefore we ſee, that one ſuch act does more diſcommend one to Men, than all former acts of dutiful and loving Obedience do, or can commend him. The being Due does diminiſh of the praiſe and commendation of what is good: If you love thoſe that love [you] (ſayes Chriſt Luke 6. 33, 34.) what thank have you? No reward attends ſuch a love although it be good; becauſe it is a due and ſuitable act; but love your enemies (ſayes he); unto whom (in regard of any obligation to them) nothing is due; and then your reward ſhall be great; this is praiſe-worthy indeed. I may turn this ſpeech, and ſay, that to obey God, and love him, and exalt him as God; though it be good, yet what is it but what is due from you, and that which all Obligations tye you to? What does God require of thee O man, (ſayes Moſes) but to love and fear him? Deut. 10. 12. He requires but what is reaſonable and due. Now to do all this is not thank-worthy; for if you knew him, you could not chooſe but love him; but to be rebellious to him; to be an enemy to one ſo good and ſo glorious, and one unto whom you are ſo much beholding; this is unſufferable.

(2.) As in regard of the unduneſs of the act, as from [us] to God, there is a greater obliquity in Sin, than goodneſs in Grace; ſo in regard of [God] alſo. Though the act of a Creature obeying God doth intend Glory to him, as much as a Sinner doth intend Diſhonour to him; yet the Sin is more; and that in regard of him who is the Object of both: For,

1. All the Honour which we can give God is but his due already. We do but attribute that to him which is his own already, and that independantly, without us. What do we in being holy and obedient? We exalt him as God: why, he is God already, whether we exalt him or no; yea, what we can do this way, falls ſhort of that which is his due, in himſelf; for Nehem. 9. 5. He is above all bleſſings and praiſes. But the very formalis ratio of ſinning againſt him, is to ſet up another God, and ſo to attribute that to him, which is not, or that which is below him, that is thereby to affix a new Title of Diſgrace upon him, utterly unworthy of him. As for the Eye to call the Light beautiful and glorious, and to admire it, what is it, but only to ſpeak that of it which it is already? But for the Eye to call Light Darkneſs, this is de novo to coyn and put a diſparagement upon it, and Sin is a new invention of our own, as Eccleſiaſtes ſpeaks, Eccleſ. 7. 29. to diſhonour God. Thus Unbelief makes God a Lyar; and what a wrong is that? It is not recompenſable by all our acts of Faith in believing that he is true; for to believe ſo, is but to declare what is his already; but the other is the invention of a falſhood obtruded upon him by Men. For one to ſpeak Truth, is but little or no commendation; for a Man ſpeaks but what is; but to tell a Lye, is to invent a new thing, that is falſe: and therefore how odious and ſhameful is it? Now

Book III. every Sin is a Lye concerning God, changing the truth of God into a lye, Rom. 1. 25 It declares that of God, which is not: And to be the Inventor of new Gods, or of falſe things of God, what an evil is it? Again to love God, and honour him is a thing due to his Name, Give him the praiſe due to his name, Pſal. 29. 2. and his Excellency challengeth it. Now to love goodneſs, what is it! So, to love God; but what in ancongruity is it to hate goodneſs? For Subjects to honour their King whoſe Title and Prerogative is independant upon them, is not ſo much to him, as it is a diſhonour for one Man to diſparage his Title, and to go about the ſetting up of another King. Now Gods Glory is in, and from himſelf; and therefore he hath reaſon to account it more diſhonour to him, that one Man ſhould rebel, then honour to him, that all ſhould obey him. When I honour him, his Honour ariſeth from himſelf, not me; as the Glory of the Sun ſhining in the Water, is not from the Water, but from the Sun: So when we reflect Glory on God, that Glory ariſeth not out of what we do, but is in himſelf already. But the Diſhonour of him is wholly in us: We are the ſole Inventors of it; and there is no ſuch thing extant, except in a Sinners heart.

Add to this; That all the Grace wherewith we glorifie God, is not a Mans own; but Sin is wholly his own; ſo John 8. 44. when he ſins, he ſins ἐκ τῶν ἰδίων from his own; and ſo in Jude 16. their Luſts are called their own; and Eccleſ. 7. 29. they are ſaid to be our inventions.

Again 3*dly*. If the compaſs and meaſure be taken, of that Diſhonour which Sin tends unto; there will be found a wider diſtance between the two terms of its reach, then there is of the Honour that the Creature can give to God, or then it doth extend it ſelf unto: For the meaſure and compaſs of the Diſhonour is plainly this, To make the great God no God; theſe are the terms the leaſt Sin ſtretcheth it ſelf unto, in the Scope and tendency of the Act, though not in the event, nor in the intention of the Sinner. But when the Creatures glorifie God, though they ſhould glorifie him as God as far as the Creatures can do it, yet if you take the meaſure of the utmoſt Elevation of his Glory by them, there ſtill remains an infinite diſtance between the Honour which they aim to give him, and what is in himſelf; ſo that it falls ſo far ſhort, that it is infinite goodneſs in God to accept it.

As the Concluſion therefore of this Anſwer, and cloſure of this Diſcourſe, I will ſuper-add theſe few Demonſtrations drawn from the Effects, to ſhew clearly, and confirm this, That the leaſt ſin tranſcends in evil the worth of all created Graces, which puts all out of Queſtion, and makes the whole Demonſtration undeniable; for ſatisfaction being reductio ad æqualia, a reducing of things to an equality; Therefore if all their Graces cannot make ſo much goodneſs as ſhall counterballance the evil of Sin: It is impoſſible they ſhould ever ſatisfie: Now that they do not, appears by theſe Demonſtrations.

Firſt, One Sin when it is committed by the beſt of Creatures, prevails more with God, to condemn him, then all his Righteouſneſs to juſtifie him. If one of the Angels did never ſo much, ſo great, ſo long ſervice, yet if after Millions of years he ſinned in the leaſt; all the fore-paſt Service would be forgotten: As a Favourite that hath done much Service at Court, or in the Wars; if after all he ſhould be found guilty of one Treaſon, that one Act would put a blot upon all his former Services, and render them nothing-worth. If a Man doth not all things, yea, (more then that) continues not in all things, he is accurſed: Gal. 3. 10. Now if Sin were not more evil in Gods Judgment, (whoſe Judgment is righteous) then all Obedience is good, then this could not be. It is not as the Phariſees dreamed, that Men ſhould be juſtified, if their good works were more than their Sins; as if their good works being weighed, and found exceeding the other in number, they ſhould therefore carry it; no, a world of good works will be found too light for the leaſt dramm of Sin.

Secondly,

Chap. 5.

Secondly, The Demerit of Sin is more than the Merit of Goodneſs can be, for that the evil that is in Sin does truely deſerve Death ; not only in relation to, or by vertue of a Pœnal Law arbitrarily given, or out of a voluntary compact and agreement between God and the Creature, but in its own Nature. That threatning thou ſhalt dye the death is not added ex compacto only ; neither depends it meerly upon an outward Declaration of Gods Will, but further Sin is ſuch an Evil as in the Nature of the thing deſerves Death ; and that immutably. Therefore that Δικαίωμα τῦ Θεῦ, that Judgment of God written in all Mens hearts, ſaies, that they who do ſuch things are worthy of death ; Rom. 1. 32. and ſo alſo, Rom. 6. 23. The wages of ſin is death. But if you put all the Grace in the World together, it cannot merit at Gods hands his favour : God may out of his bounty oblige himſelf by a promiſe to reward it, but it is not out of the worth of the thing. So it follows there, in that Rom. 6. 23. The gift of God is eternal life, you ſee what an apparent difference the Apoſtle puts between the one and the other. In like manner, Luk. 17. 10. it is ſaid, When you have done all, if you could ſuppoſe you had done all, yet, you are unprofitable ſervants : For Gods Right over us is founded upon his Excellence ; and accordingly, our Obligation to ſerve God, is not from his benefits only, but from a Due unto his own Excellencies : And therefore although there were no reward for our Service, yet Service were due from us. So ſaies Ariſtotle : If any Man tranſcendently excell all others, that Man is to be King over them, and they are bound to ſerve him. Yea, and therefore the Priviledge to juſtifie a Man is ſeparable from our Graces (as in Men ſanctified by the Goſpel) but ſo is not condemnation, from Sin : And therefore although Sin in the Godly redounds not in the event, to the Perſons to condemn them, by reaſon of Chriſts Righteouſneſs imputed ; yet all that Righteouſneſs makes not but that Sin in its own Nature deſerves Death ; and ſo, they are to judge themſelves for it, as worthy to be deſtroyed. But all the Grace that is in them, doth not only not juſtifie them ipſo facto ; but it hath wholly and for ever loſt that Priviledge. Which argues, that it is not ſeated in the Nature of Grace, to juſtifie as to demerit Death is ſeated in the Nature of Sin : For then, though the effect might be retained, yet that property would be inſeparable from it.

And Thirdly, That the ſtrength of Sin is greater then that of Grace, appears by this alſo, that it is able to expel Grace out of the Heart ; as it did out of Adams ; but all the Grace of all the Creatures could not reſtore it.

Fourthly, It is counted more Mercy to pardon one Sinner, than goodneſs to reward and ſave all the Angels. More Riches are attributed even to Gods Mercy and Patience towards Wicked Men, then to his ſimple goodneſs towards other Creatures innocent, though never ſo Holy.

CHAP. VI.

That Christ hath made full Reparation of all which was lost by Sin. The Glory of the Law which Sin had darkned, is by him perfectly recover'd. And Gods Image, which Sin had defaced in Man, is more fully restored in him.

WE have seen the Power of all the Creatures set up, and at a loss as to this the greatest and most difficult business that ever was set on foot, viz. the taking away of sins! Let us now come to lay open that Fullness that is in Christ, for this Work; before which all these Difficulties that have been put, and all our Sins likewise will vanish and melt away as Clouds before the Sun. A Fulness it is, that answers to every defect, and to every particular Objection made. I will begin with that satisfaction that is to be given to God; for in the wrong to him doth the principal knot and difficulty lie.

First, If God should stand upon satisfaction to be made, in point of Goods (which yet, as I said, he doth not) Christ hath therein abundantly made amends: Which although he reckons not as any part of his satisfaction, which only consists in his obedient humbling of himself, yet it may be considered as part of the surplusage and redundancy of it. Let Justice come and bring in her Bill of Dammages; and see if Christ hath not abundantly given satisfaction for them: As,

I. Will the complaint be, of the loss, spoil, and waste made of the World, and of all the Creatures therein, and of the unjoynting that Frame unto the danger of the Destruction of it, which no Creature is able to repair, or to uphold: Then let it withal be remembred, that he that had undertook to satisfie God, had his hand in making this old World, and without him it had not been made; John 1. 10. It is a consideration that both that Evangelist, and the Author to the Hebrews (Heb. 1. 2.) as likewise the Apostle to the Colossians, (Col. 1. 16.) do all suggest to this very purpose, thereby to shew Christs Abilitie to satisfie for Sin: And if God would yet further desire new Worlds to be made him for satisfaction, Christ could make enough. And it may be further pleaded, that this World (as we see) stands and continues still, notwithstanding all the sins committed in it, and that Justice had destin'd it to present ruine the first day that Man should sin. Now whose power is it that upholds it? Is it not Christs, whose very Word is able to underprop it, so Heb. 1. 3. upholding all things by the word of his power, who with one hand holdeth his Fathers hands from destroying this World, and with the other upholds it from tottering. Yea, if it were no more but this, that he who made the World would vouchsafe to admit himself into it, and become a Part of it; and that he whom God did never make nor create, but from Eternity begat, would be made flesh, and become a Creature and Servant (which was an addition to Gods Goods, and worth all that he had made besides) this might make reparation for all such Dammages. And again, at whose Expences are all things here maintained? Are they not at Christs? The Father did as it were deny to lay out any more Power, or Patience in upholding the World, till he should be paid for it; and did not Christ undertake this, and at his due time lay down a Price that fully bought it? Who is therefore called the Lord that bought, 2 Pet. 2. 1. as wicked men, so all the World. And that he who made the World, and is Joint-Heir with God, and and hath as much right to it as He, ſhould to ſatisfie him, lay down his Right, put himſelf out of all, and then take it up upon a new Title, when it was his before, ſo buying what himſelf made, and what was his own: That he ſhould become poor, even not worth the ground he went on when he came into the World, and ſhould ſuffer himſelf not to be owned, (as John ſpeaks) yea to be caſt out of the vineyard as one that had nothing to do with it; will not all this make amends, will not this Poverty riſe to great Riches? The Apoſtle Paul tells us ſo, Wherefore this may well make ſatisfaction to God for Goods loſt. Chap. 6.

2*dly*. If Juſtice complain of the Law defaced, and as it were aboliſhed by Sin; if ſhe plead that through it the Righteous Law is made void, and of none effect; and ſo bring it in, in this Inventory of waſted Goods, conſidered only as it is a Copy of Gods Will, an Expreſſion of his Holyneſs, an Effect of his Wiſdom, and Monument of the ſame, the leaſt iota of which is ſo pretious, as not all in Heaven and Earth can make amends for its loſs: Should Juſtice make this complaint, then let the Reply be, that our Redeemers Head was in the making of that Law; and that the hand of him who is the Mighty Councellor, did guide the Pen that wrote it in Adams heart at firſt; and further that himſelf is the ſubſtantial Image of God, and the πρωτότυπον of the Law: And beſides, when it was loſt, and no Copy on Earth to be found, he it was that wrote it in the Conſciences of Men faln. In which Sence the Apoſtle John ſaies, that it is he who enlightens every man that comes into the World, John 1. 9. And becauſe that was but an imperfect Copy, it was he that farther delivered the Law, of which David ſayes, 'twas perfect, Pſal. 19. 7. The law of the Lord is perfect, converting the ſoul: the teſtimony of the Lord is ſure, making wiſe the ſimple. And renewed it on Mount Sinah, Galat. 3. 19. And in the fulneſs of time himſelf came, and vindicated it from all corrupt gloſſes, in his Preaching, fulfilled it in his Life, and in fulfilling it, writ it out again with his own hands, and ſo ſet a more perfect Copy, then ever was extant, in the hearts and Lives of Angels. I came not to deſtroy the law (ſaies he) but to fulfil it. Yea, and if all the Copies of the Law that are in the World were burnt, they might be all renewed in his Story; inſomuch that he is reckoned a New Founder of it. A new commandment (ſaies the Apoſtle, 1 John 2. 8.) write I unto you; and ſo the Apoſtle Paul ſpeaks of fulfilling the Law of Chriſt, Gal. 6. 2. Bear ye one anothers burdens, and ſo fulfil the law of Chriſt. Yea, and ſuppoſe, that that Covenant (which is the firſt Story and Copy of Gods Will and Wiſdom) had been utterly loſt (like as ſome of Solomons Books were) yet he by his Works of Mediation makes a new Story of another Wiſdom infinitely more glorious, viz. the Goſpel, (whereof he is the Sole Founder, and of whom it is written as being the Subject of it) the leaſt Line of which is worth all the Law; ſo that the Angels ſtand amazed at the Treaſures of Wiſdom that are to be found therein, being deeper than ever were revealed in the Law. The Law, That came by Moſes, but grace and truth came by Jeſus Chriſt, John 1. 17. A new Volume of Truths, which had not been true, if he by his Blood had not made them ſo.

3*dly*. Though Gods Image be loſt by Sin, yet he is ſuch an Image of him, as the very ſight and beholding of him renews it, and changeth men into the ſame image, 2 Cor. 3. 18. But we all with open face, beholding as in a glaſs the glory of the Lord, are changed into the ſame image, from glory to glory, even as by the ſpirit of the Lord. Yea, The Image which he renews is a better Image than that of Adams; it is of a higher Strain and Key, and raiſed by higher Motives.

4*thly*. As for loſs of Service to repair it, He took on him the form of a ſervant, Phil. 2. 7. And ſuch a Servant he was, as was not to have been hired amongſt all the Creatures. They all could not do the work that he did; The government of the whole world is upon his ſhoulders, Iſa. 9. 6. He eaſeth his his Father of it for the preſent, and when he had brought him in infinite Revenues of Glory, he will at laſt deliver up the Kingdom to him, 1 Cor. 15. 24. with a greater ſurpluſage than elſe would have been had out of that begun courſe of Providence taken up at the Creation. And if you will not reckon that, as part of ſatisfaction, yet conſider the Service he did in the Prieſts Office, wherein God acknowledged him his Servant: He diſpatcht more work in thoſe Thirty Three Years wherein he lived, yea, in thoſe three hours wherein he ſuffered, then ever was, or will be done by all Creatures, to Eternity. It was a good Six-dayes work when the World was made; and he had a principal hand in that; neither hath be been idle ſince; I and my Father work hitherto, ſaies Chriſt, John 5. 17. But that three-hours-work upon the Croſs, was more, than all the other. Eternity will not have more done in it, then vertually was done in thoſe three hours; ſo as that ſmall ſpace of time was τὸ νῦν æternitatis. As they ſay of Eternity, that it is all Time contracted into an Inſtant, ſo was all time paſt, and to come, into thoſe few hours, and the merit of them: For he then made work for the Spirit, and indeed, for all the Three Perſons, unto Eternity: He then did that, which the Spirit is writing out in Grace and Glory for ever, yea, and all that ever was or will be done towards the Saints, was then perfected: He perfected for ever them that are ſanctified, by that one offering, Heb. 10. 12, 14. But this man after he had offered one ſacrifice for ſins, for ever ſat down on the right hand of God: ver. 14. For by one offering he hath perfected for ever them that are ſanctified.

CHAP.

Chap. 7.

CHAP. VII.

That Chriſt hath repaired the Loſs of Honour, which God ſuſtained by Sin. Satisfaction in point of Honour being to be meaſur'd by the Excellency, Dignity, and Reputation of the Perſon ſatisfying. Chriſt being God-Man, in this reſpect makes the Greateſt which could be.

BUT the greateſt Evil of Sin lies in the injury by it done unto the Honour, and Soveraign Glory, and to the Perſon of God himſelf; which is the thing that makes Sin ſo hainous, that the Difficulty of ſatisfying God herein is inſuperable by all the Creatures (as hath been ſhewed) unto which notwithſtanding we ſhall ſee Chriſt is as much enabled, as we have ſeen him to be unto the former, to make amends for the Dammage which God ſuſtained.

Honour (as was ſaid) being a Perſonal thing, and a due reſulting out of Perſonal Perfections; anſwerably therefore ſatisfaction therein is fundamentally to riſe out of, and to be meaſured by the Perſonal Worth, Dignity, Excellency, and Reputation of the Perſon who undertakes to ſatisfie. Wherefore, as the foundation of this great Demonſtration, let us conſider briefly the Perſonal worth of Chriſt our Surety, as from whence all his ſatisfaction receives its force and value; and ſo we will go on, to ſhew what his Perſon hath done to make amends therein; and then by comparing (as we go along) both what he is, and what he hath done to ſatisfie, with what is in the diſhonour done to God by Sin (which is the thing to be ſatisfied for) you will ſee all the diſproportions that have been mentioned, and can be thought of, to make Sin ſo above meaſure ſinful, exceeded, and wholly overcome. Now as a Ground-work to this, I will take but that one place

PHIL. 2. 6, 7, 8.

Ver. 6. Who being in the form of God, thought it no robbery to be equal with God.

Ver. 7. But made himſelf of no reputation, and took upon him the form of a ſervant, and was made in the likeneſs of men.

Ver. 8. And being found in faſhion as a man, he humbled himſelf, and became obedient unto death, even the death of the croſs.

A place full, and adequate to my ſcope; wherein (you ſee) the Apoſtle argues the Efficacy of Chriſts Merit, and the worth of it, from hence, that being equal with God, viz. in Glory, (as the oppoſite to [he humbled himſelf] ſhews) he ſhould be humbled: and that he ſhould humble himſelf, and become obedient, &c. and all for the Glory of God the Father. Every word is weighty, and ſpeaks ſatisfaction; and that he, ſo great a Perſon, for greatneſs of Glory equal with God, for right to Glory, one that thought it no robbery to challenge it; for the kind of Glory which was his due, it was not accidental, but ſubſtantial [being in the form of God] that he ſhould be emptied of all, and lay aſide that Honour, which was due unto him, yea, ſuffer all his Glory to be debaſed, and his Honour laid in the duſt, and himſelf to be humbled to the greateſt and baſeſt of Evils, Death, and of all Deaths the moſt ſhameful, the Death of the Croſs, and not humbled Paſſively only, but that he ſhould voluntarily humble himſelf, and become obedient; and that the Object of this Subjection ſhould be but Actions only, not himſelf, his Perſon,

ſo

ſo as, all that he did, or ſuffered, reflected on himſelf, and his Perſon was humbled in all, and all this, to recover Gods Honour loſt; it was to the glory of God the Father (as the cloſure of all hath it) ſurely all this (as you will ſee) muſt needs make a full amends.

Now for the clearing of this Point and Demonſtration, whence it is, that this ſatisfaction ariſeth, I will proceed by degrees, until a full ſatisfaction ſhall riſe up to all your apprehenſions, in a way of juſt Reaſon, as there did unto God himſelf by that one Oblation of Chriſt himſelf for us.

And Firſt, Let us conſider the worth of the Perſon, upon which, the worth of the ſatisfaction doth depend. And to the manifeſting of this, conſider we firſt, that Chriſt had an Eſſential Glory, as he is God which was the Foundation and Ground-work. This I need not inſiſt upon, all knowing it, and taking it for granted, though divers Interpreters judge it not to be, That Glory which the Text doth directly and in the firſt place intend, yet to be ultimately ſuppoſed, as that which is the Original Ground of all that Oriental Tranſcendent Glory, which as God-Man he parted withal, for ſatisfaction to God. And though it be true, that this Glory of his, as he is meerly God, cannot be debaſed, or diminiſhed, and ſo can never properly become the Matter of ſatisfaction for Sin, but it is another Glory, (which I ſhall ſpeak of preſently is the Matter of it) yet this is it that was the Cauſe and Riſe of that God-Mans Glory, and that doth give the Original worth and value to all that Chriſt did, or ſuffered. You ſhall ſtill find, that the Scripture puts the Efficacy of his Actions upon the worth of his Perſon; for indeed, it is the Dignity of the Perſon that dignifies the work. God had reſpect firſt, to Abel, then to his Sacrifice, for the ſake of Abel. Therefore in a proportion the more worth and eſteem the Perſon is of with God, the more worth the Actions are. And therefore, as the worth of Chriſts Perſon was Infinite, ſo muſt the worth of his Actions be. His Perſon raiſeth his Actions in ſtatum ſibi ſimilem, unto a ſtate ſuitable to himſelf, as a King doth his Children to a ſtate anſwerable to his own. And as the Humane Nature being Perſonally united to the Godhead is raiſed unto a Tranſcendent Priviledge, by vertue of that Union, which no other Creature hath; ſo the Actions thereof do by vertue of the Godhead, come to have ſimilem ſtatum; they are raiſed to a proportionable ſtate alſo. And as the Humane Nature is ſanctified through that Union with the Divine, with a ſanctification beyond that of habitual Graces (as the School-Men have rightly obſerved and deſcried) ſo the Actions thereof are Deitate perfuſæ, they have a Divinity in them. As the Humane Nature of Chriſt, by reaſon of its Union with the Godhead, hath more worth and dignity communicated to it, then is, or could be in all Creatures (in all things he had the preheminence, Col. 1. 18.) and therefore when he comes into the World, it was ſaid, Let all the Angels worſhip him, which Honour no Creature muſt have, ſo his Actions and Graces are tranſlated into as high a Rank of Dignity above the Graces and Actions of Creatures, and this by his Perſon, even as his very Humane Nature is exalted above the Rank of all Creatures. And this makes his Blood to be pretious Blood indeed, in that it is the Blood of God, Acts 20. 28. The worth of this Perſon being ſubſtantial, it doth ſe totum transfundere, it transfuſeth or rather caſts its whole worth upon his Actions, to the utmoſt of it. And as all the fulneſs of the Godhead is ſaid to dwell in, Col. 2. 9. and to be Perſonally communicated to the Man-hood, making it as Glorious as a Creature can poſſibly by God be made; ſo the whole Perſon doth caſt a glorious brightneſs, or luſtre, and reflecteth upon the Actions he doth in that Nature, all that Perſonal worth that is communicable. And ſurely this will equal the proportion of Evil that is in our Sins; for as the Offence was againſt an Infinitely-Glorious God; ſo the Works done to take away the Offence, were wrought by one as Infinite. And as the chiefeſt Accent of the Offence lies in this, that it was againſt an infinite Majeſty; ſo the greatneſs of the ſatisfaction made lies in this, that it was performed by the Mighty God; which proportion could never have been filled up by any Creature who was not God; ſatisfaction in point of Honour depending upon the equal worth of the Perſon honouring, and the Perſon diſhonoured. And though the Humane Nature (which is in it ſelf finite) be the Principium quo, and the Inſtrument by which, and in which the Second Perſon doth all that he doth; and therefore anſwerably the Phyſical being of thoſe Actions is but finite in genere entis: Yet all thoſe Articles being attributed to the Perſon who is Principium quod, the Principle which doth, and unto which all is to be aſcribed (for Actiones ſunt ſuppoſitorum, Actions are attributed to the Perſons, becauſe that is ſaid only to ſubſiſt) therefore the Moral eſtimation of them is from the worth of the Perſon that performs them. And thus, though the immediate Principle, the Humane Nature be finite; yet the Radical Principle, the Perſon, is Infinite. And both Natures being one in Perſon, what the one is ſaid to do or ſuffer, the other is ſaid to do and ſuffer; and therefore his Blood is called the Blood of God. Yet this is not ſo to be underſtood, (nor was it neceſſary unto ſatisfaction to God) as if the worth of the Actions of this Perſon ſhould be as infinite as the Perſon is, eſſentially and ſubſtantially; for Chriſts Merits could not be Infinite, as Gods Attributes are; but it is enough to ſatisfaction, that they might be valued ſuch in a Moral eſtimation; for thereby it holds an anſwerable proportion unto the evil of Sin. For as the evil of Sin is ſaid to be infinite Morally only, and in Repute, and Objectivè, as it is againſt an Infinite Perſon, and not eſſentially infinite, as the object of it is; ſo anſwerably the ſatisfaction that it requires to be made for it, needs not to be Eſſentially and Phyſically infinite, (for that were impoſſible) but it is enough if it be (as Sin it ſelf is) Morally ſuch, and in its value ſuch; which then it will ariſe to be, when the Perſon that performs it is infinite; and ſo, this will come to be ſubjectively infinite, as from an infinite Perſon, as Sin is objectively Infinite, as againſt an Infinite God: And ſuch a Perſon is the Second Perſon in the Trinity, and ſuch therefore is his Righteouſneſs, it being the Righteouſneſs of him who is God. Chap. 7.

But Secondly, Although this Eſſential Glory of the God-head gives the worth and value to all the Actions that Chriſt did; yet in it ſelf it was not capable of being debaſed, nor he of being emptied of it; nor could this therefore properly become the Object Matter which ſhould be offered up to God for ſatisfaction. For as in our ſinning Gods Eſſential Glory is not, nor cannot be injured by us, but it is wronged only in the ſhine and luſtre of it, in the putting of it ſelf forth before us Creatures, or the manifeſtations of it (wherein though the Eſſential Glory of his God-head is not obſcured, but the manifeſtation of it only, yet the injury reflects upon that his Eſſential Glory, becauſe that was it that was manifeſted) ſo in like manner is it in Chriſts ſatisfaction. Chriſts Eſſential Glory as he is only God, could of it ſelf alone never have ſatisfied for Sin; for ſatisfaction in point of Honour being to be effected by the leſſening of Glory in the Satisfier to give Glory to him that is to have ſatisfaction; Thence therefore the Eſſential Glory of the God-head (which cannot be empaired of it ſelf,) if it remained unmanifeſted, it could never ſatisfie. But if this Second Perſon putting himſelf forth to be manifeſted will ſuffer himſelf to be obſcured in that Glory which is due to him when he comes to manifeſt himſelf, this indeed will come in to be fit matter for ſatisfaction.

For, Thirdly, If the God-head of Chriſt had gone about to manifeſt it ſelf in Works only, or ſuch wayes as are common to the other Perſons of the Trinity with himſelf, as by creating of Worlds, making of Laws, &c. He had not by thoſe wayes ſatisfied neither; becauſe the other Perſons had had as joint an Intereſt in all ſuch kind of manifeſtations as himſelf had, and the obſcurement of him in ſuch manifeſtations had reflected equally upon the other Two Perſons as upon himſelf. Wherefore over and above that his Eſſential Glory, he muſt have a Manifeſtative Glory, an outward, viſible brightneſs of Glory, and that alſo ſuch as muſt become Perſonal, and proper, and peculiar to him, ſo as to none of the other Perſons; that as it may be capable of being obſcured, ſo alſo that obſcurement of it may reflect upon his Perſon, and upon it alone. O Therefore,

Book III.

Therefore Fourthly, The Son of God, if he make Satisfaction for Sin, muſt neceſſarily be ſuppoſed firſt to take, or to have taken on him the Nature of ſome Reaſonable Creature, either of Mankind, or of the Angels, into Perſonal Fellowſhip with himſelf; which would be both a peculiar way of manifeſting himſelf and of his Glory not common to the other Two Perſons, and would alſo draw in all his Perſonal Excellencies into ſuch an engagement, as that both in the manifeſtation of himſelf in that Nature aſſumed his Perſonal Glory may be intereſted, and alſo in the obſcurement and clouding of himſelf in that manifeſtation all theſe his Excellencies may be ſaid to be abaſed likewiſe, and ſo come to reflect upon the whole Perſon himſelf, who is thus glorious, and upon all that is in him: And thus fitly come to make a full Satisfaction.

Now in the Fifth place, Let us conſider what a Manifeſtative Glory is due to the Son of God, if he aſſume a Creature into One Perſon with himſelf. And herein conſider we, that that Nature or Creature which he ſhall aſſume (be it Man or Angel) muſt by Inheritance exiſt in the form of God; Phil. 2. 6. which [form of God] I here take not to be put for the Eſſence of God, as neither is [the form of a Servant] in the following Sentence, taken for the Nature of Man ſimply conſidered; but for that debaſed appearance in which he in our Nature came into the World, not as a Lord, Glorious, but covered with Infirmities; and this Expreſſion ſeems to be all one with that, Rom. 8. 3. He came in the likeneſs of ſinful fleſh: And ſo in like manner the [form of God] here, is that God-like Glory, and that manifeſtation of the God-head, which was, and muſt needs be due to appear in the Nature aſſumed; for [form] is put for an outward appearance and manifeſtation; in reſpect of which Chriſt as God-Man is call'd the brightneſs of his Fathers Glory, Heb. 1. 2. Brightneſs (you know) is not the ſubſtance of Light, but the appearance of it. And ſo alſo he is called, the image of the inviſible God, Col. 1. 15. The meaning of which is this, that whereas Gods Eſſential Glory is inviſible, (For he dwells in light that no Man can approach unto, 1 Tim. 6. 16.) Chriſt aſſuming our Humane Nature, becomes the Image of it, and ſo makes it viſible to us, God having ſtamped all his glory upon his face; that we might ſee it in him, 2 Cor. 4. 6. For God who commanded the light to ſhine out of darkneſs, hath ſhined in our hearts, to give the light of the knowledge of the glory of God, in the face of Jeſus Chriſt. So that if the Son of God, will aſſume our Nature; then it will follow that unto that Nature there is due a God-like Glory, ſo much tranſcending all Creatures, that all might plainly ſee and ſay, certainly that Nature is United to God; ſurely that Man muſt needs be God as well as Man: Hence,

1. He was to be endowed with Priviledges anſwerable to the Dignity of the Perſon aſſuming that Nature, For if that Nature becomes one in Perſon with the Son of God, he becomes one in the Priviledges of the Perſon alſo, and ſo that Nature is to have a Glory, as of the only begotten Son of God, (as the Evangeliſt ſpeaks, John 1. 14.) proper and peculiar to him. And ſo beſides that Eſſential Glory of his God-head, there will neceſſarily be due to that Perſon in that Nature aſſumed a more Manifeſtative Glory ſhining forth, then could have ariſen to God any other way; for God manifeſted in the fleſh Perſonally, muſt needs have (as his due) more Manifeſtative Glory, and ſo, manifeſt more of the Eſſential Glory of the God-head, then God manifeſted in all his other Works, be they never ſo tranſcendent: Even as there is more Honour due unto a King if he in Perſon ſhew himſelf, then if his Arms only be ſet up, or Proclamations be made in his Name. And in this reſpect Chriſt God-Man may be ſaid in a ſafe Senſe to be equal with God; as here in the Text, not in Eſſence, but in a Communication of Priviledges; that as God hath life in himſelf alone, and it is a Royalty incommunicable to any meer Creature, ſo this Son of Man, when once united thus unto the God-head, is alſo ſaid to have Life in himſelf, John 5. 26. this Equality, or ἰσότης, not being to be underſtood of æquality in proportion, but of likeneſs; and is all one with that which Zachary ſpeaks of his Manhood, when he calls him the man Gods fellow, Zach. 13. 7. one in joint Commiſſion with him. And thus Chriſt himſelf interprets it, John 5. when the Jews looking at him as a meer Man, had objected it unto him as blaſphemie, that he made himſelf equal with God; ver. 18. (it is the ſame Word that is here uſed in the Text) Chriſt anſwered them, ver. 19. And you find that his Anſwer runs upon this, that even as he was Son of Man (which was it that made them to ſtumble ſo at his former words) his Priviledges were ſuch by the Union with the Second Perſon, that he had a true kind of Partnerſhip with God the Father in his Priviledges, and ſuch as did ariſe to a likeneſs, though not to an Eſſential Equality: So ver. 19. 'Tis true (ſaies he) The Son can do nothing of himſelf but what he ſees the Father do; and yet whatever things he doth, theſe alſo doth the Son likewiſe: And ſo, he goes on to ſhew, that he could do like things to his Father, and how he was to be honoured as his Father, ver. 23. and had life in himſelf, as his Father had, ver. 26. and had all judgment committed to him, &c. And that he might be underſtood to ſpeak this of himſelf as God-Man; he expreſly adds, Becauſe he is the Son of Man, ver. 27. Chap. 7.

And hence Secondly, Unto the Son of God thus dwelling in an Humane Nature, (when it ſhall be firſt aſſumed,) all this Honour and Glory is due; it is proper to him; and therefore it is here ſaid in the Text, He thought it no robbery for him to challenge it. Yet of all things God is tender of his Glory; I will not give my glory to another, Iſa. 42. 8.] But Chriſt God-Man dares challenge ſuch a Glory (as we have been ſpeaking of) as his due; and it is no robbery for him to do it, becauſe it is his Right. As, Is Worſhip to be performed unto God? So it is to be given to Chriſt as dwelling in an Humane Nature, Pſal. 45. 11. He is thy Lord, worſhip thou him: Yea, let all the Angels worſhip him, when he comes into the World, and ſo as conſidered with his Man-hood, Heb. 1. 6. and worthy art thou (ſay the Saints and Angels, and all Creatures) to receive Honour and Glory and ſo they fall down before him, Revel. 5. 12. And therefore this high character of him is put in, 1 Cor. 2. 8. that they crucified the Lord of Glory. He was Lord, and Poſſeſſor of all the Glory that God hath, for as his Father hath given him to have Life, ſo Glory in himſelf alſo, as in that John 5. And here in the Philippians he is ſaid to exiſt in this Glory, Phil. 2. 6. not that his Humane Nature had this Glory actually put upon it at firſt: (for he was born as we are, and took upon him the form of a Servant) but becauſe thus to exiſt in this Glory was his due, from which he could not be put by; ſo as, if God would ordain him to ſubſiſt Perſonally in an Humane Nature, it was his due to have exiſted thus gloriouſly in the form of God, and not in the form of a Servant which is put in to ſhew how the form of a Servant was meerly Arbitrary in him, in that another Form was due to him: And in reſpect of that dueneſs is accounted as really exiſtent with an exiſtency of Right, (for it ſhould ſo have done) which is a real exiſtency; even as one that is born a King, though he for ſome end take on him a mean Condition, yet he being born a King, does ſo exiſt, and it prejudiceth not his Right all that while; for it is innate and bred with his exiſting. And therefore the Scripture ſpeaks of Chriſt even as Son of Man, as if as Son of Man he had been in Heaven, and had come down; not that actually he had been there, but becauſe it was his Right to have been there the firſt moment of the aſſumption of that Nature. Thus John 3. 13. And no man hath aſcended up to Heaven, but he that came down from Heaven, even the Son of Man who is in Heaven, He (you ſee) ſaies, that He is in Heaven.

Thus much ſhall ſuffice to have ſhewn the Foundation of ſatisfaction, from the Qualifications, and requiſites in the Perſon.

CHAP. VIII.

What this Excellent and Glorious Perſon did for ſatisfaction brings more Honour to God, then ever Sin had done diſhonour. The Glory which redounds to God from this Perſons condeſcending to aſſume Humane Nature, and that too in ſuch a low Condition, and meaneſt Circumſtances.

NOW to come to the Second Head propoſed, namely to ſhew what it is in, or of ſuch a Perſon, that may become, or is the Matter of, this ſatisfaction offered up to God, for the debaſement of his Glory by Sin: To clear this, I will firſt ſhew what it is, that God reckons not upon, for ſatisfaction in this Perſon; what God cuts off from the Account, becauſe he would be ſure to have full ſatisfaction in ſpecie, in kind, which will alſo ſerve the more to ſet forth the Fullneſs, the abundancy of Chriſts ſatisfaction, when God accepts not of what might have been ſo accounted, but ſtands upon more; which Chriſt performs to him.

As, 1. The very condeſcending of the Second Perſon, who Natively and Eſſentially is ſo great, to aſſume Mans Nature, although in this Form of God deſcribed, inveſted with all that Manifeſtative Glory ſpoken of, and this, from, and upon the firſt moment of his aſſuming it; if this Act of Aſſuming had been done, and undertaken principally in Order, and with intention to ſatisfie God, by bringing in a new Glory to him, greater than that which he loſt by him, and this without the leaſt humbling of himſelf; I ask, why might not this in juſt reaſon have been accounted ſatisfaction?

For, 1. He had thereby leſſened himſelf to give Glory to God. For in that Aſſumption, and in that Communication of himſelf to a Creature, he takes on him ſuch relations as do in ſome reſpects abate of the height of his Native Perſonal Glory, as he is conſidered meerly as Second Perſon: And in reſpect to this Aſſumption, he is made leſs than what before he was. For now it may be ſaid of him, as it was by himſelf, that his father is greater than he, Joh. 14. 28. whereas he might have kept himſelf in a full equality to him in all reſpects for ever, and to have had no ſuch diminiſhing reſpect affixed to him.

And, 2. By this voluntary Act alone, he had brought in unto God a new and further revelation of the God-head, then ever was obſcured by Sin; and it is certain, that he had never aſſumed Mans Nature, and thus leſſened himſelf, but that ſo he might manifeſt the Glory of the God-head in ſuch a manner, as otherwiſe it never ſhould have been. Therefore for him thus to leſſen himſelf to the end to manifeſt and exalt the Glory of the God-head the utmoſt way it could be, or more than otherwiſe it ſhould have been, might not this make amends for the Glory that Sin would take from God? And the reaſon of this is, that ſatisfaction being a return of as much Glory as was loſt, and that by this means (if no other were added) more manifeſtative Glory would come in unto God, then either was, or ever could have been debaſed or impaired by Sin; why therefore might it not have been accounted ſatisfactory, if it had been ordered ſimply unto this end. And further alſo even this would have ſerved to fill up many of thoſe diſproportions found in the Evil of Sin. For as the Evil of Adams Sin (which was the firſt Sin) lay in this, that he who was a Creature, affected and aſpired to be as

God

God (He is beaome as one of us, ſaid God, Gen. 3. 22.) ſo Chriſts Obedience in aſſuming our Nature would herein have anſwered it, that he that is God, becomes a Creature, and on the other ſide, is become as one of us, Men, ſo to bring in a new Honour unto God. So that, look how high our Nature would have aſcended, ſo low doth he deſcend; and as Sin is a turning from God to the Creature, ſo in this Act the Creator deſcends from the height of his Glory to become a Creature, and joyn himſelf in a nearer Union with us then wherein we in ſinning affected to joyn our ſelves to the Creator. Chap. 8.

And then again, 2. All the Works and Actions which in that Nature thus aſſumed in this height of Glory that becomes due to it he will ſet himſelf about, to work, and to ſhew forth the Glory of the God-head of his Father, and of himſelf; even theſe alſo, by reaſon of that worth which his Perſonal Perfections do contribute unto them, might haply be eſtimated ſufficient to give ſatisfaction in point of Honour, though no further debaſement be laid upon our Nature in him. As ſuppoſe, that he would have done nothing therein, but work Miracles, utter his Treaſures of Wiſdom, ſhew forth his Holyneſs and Power, &c. Yet theſe being from a Perſon ſo Infinitely Glorious, have therefore an Infinite Worth in them all, even as all his Actions now he is in Heaven, have; for the Perſon is Infinite, and he it is that gives this acceptance and this luſtre to them. And theſe would alſo have brought more Glory to God, than was loſt, and ſo would have countervailed our Sins. For all the Actions that he doth, and all the Glory that he hath now he is glorified, are all to the glory of God the Father, (as this Text hath it) and therefore if in all that he had ever done he had as directly glorified himſelf, as now in Heaven, yet all of thoſe Actions being further and beſides, to the glory of God the Father, they might ſuperabundantly have made amends for the diſhonour that Sin brought him.

But God reckons all this not as any part of that ſatisfaction which we are a ſeeking after. He accepts not ſimply the Aſſumption of our Nature, though never ſo glorious, and he accepts it not although it were a leſſening of the Second Perſon. In the Scripture I find nothing for it, and what God reckons not ſatisfaction to him, we muſt not account ſuch. Neither do I affirm it; having only pleaded what might be argued, (and what haply God might have reckoned) thereby the more to advance that ſatisfaction which Chriſt hath performed in this Humane Nature; the like whereof I did when I diſcourſed the point of ſatisfaction for Goods. It is indeed the foundation of ſatisfaction, and makes way to it, but is not a part of it. And ſo the Actions of him now glorified in Heaven, though they have ſo much worth in them, yet God reckons them not to be a part of ſatisfaction; for that was all finiſhed here in his Humbled Eſtate, ere ever he aſcended.

And the Reaſon of this, why this Aſſumption of our Nature in a Glorious Condition, or the Actions thereof are not mentioned in Scripture, as any part of ſatisfaction, may be; both becauſe the ſole end of Chriſts aſſuming our Nature, quoad ſubſtantiam myſterii, for the ſubſtance of this myſtery, was not (as I have elſewhere ſhewed) the Redemption of Man; but there were other ends which taken all together are as great as this, if not greater; as, the Manifeſtation of God to the utmoſt: God could not have been manifeſted to the utmoſt, but by leſſening one of the Perſons of the Trinity by an Hypoſtatical Union; as alſo becauſe God would make the Subject of all the parts of ſatisfaction to be Chriſt God-Man, and not the Second Perſon ſimply ſo conſidered, and therefore he muſt be ſuppoſed ordained to aſſume Mans Nature, ere he becomes a fit Subject for ſatisfaction. But the Act of aſſuming our Nature is the Act of the Second Perſon meerly ſo conſidered; and ſo, though done in order to ſatisfaction, as being the Foundation of it, yet is not a Part of it. And thus all this Glory ſpoken of being due to the Perſon in this Nature, and ſo, to ſhine forth in this Nature; for him to lay it aſide when he aſſumes this Nature, and for him then to take the form of a Servant, inſtead of this glorious Form and Manifeſtation of the God-head; this draws the Man-hood alſo into the Merit of ſuch a Debaſement, becauſe a greater a greater Glory was due unto him ; and he might be truely ſaid to exiſt in his Glory, when ever that Nature was aſſumed, for ſo he ought to have done, and it might have been ſtood upon.

In the Diſcourſe of God the Father, and his Son Jeſus Chriſt, Book III. chap. 1, 2, 3, 4. in the ſecond Volume of his work.

So then, the firſt Ingredient into this ſatisfaction lies in the laying aſide the Glory due to the Second Perſon when he ſhould dwell in an Humane Nature; and inſtead thereof, taking on him the form of a Servant, and the likeneſs of Men, or of ſinful fleſh, as Rom. 8. 3. that is, frail fleſh, ſubject to infirmities, and miſeries as ours is here. And ſo, the total Summ of that ſatisfaction which God reckons of as ſuch is here alſo caſt up firſt and laſt to have been, the taking the form of a Servant, humbling himſelf, being emptied, or of no reputation, and becoming obedient in his Life, and this, to the death of the Croſs, as being the laſt part of this payment. And this (you will ſee) will in ſo great a Perſon amount to, and become the Matter of a full and juſt ſatisfaction indeed, even to a flowing over. Which is the Second thing in this head we enquire and ſeek for.

In the Second place therefore, poſitively to lay down and define wherein Chriſts ſatisfaction unto God for Sin, in point of Honour, lies ; it is in brief this, viz. Chriſts voluntary laying aſide all the Glory that was due to his Perſon in his Humane Nature aſſumed, and his ſubmitting himſelf to the utmoſt debaſement due to Sinners, in pure Obedience to his Father; thereby to reſtore and return Glory unto God for the diminiſhing of it by Sin. This God required, and this Chriſt performed, and this is ſatisfaction indeed, even to flowing over. God in his demanding ſatisfaction ſtood ſo much upon his Glory, That,

1. He would not be contented with the meer leſſening of this great Perſon, in aſſuming our Nature glorious ; but he will have him take upon him (as this Text hath it) the form of a Servant, and be found as Men here on Earth, even cloathed with the ſame frail Condition of paſſible Nature that ſinful Men are found in : Nor,

2. Will he be contented with ſuch Actions from Chriſt in that Nature debaſed, whereby Chriſt might ſeek and ſhew forth his own Glory immediately and directly (I ſeek not my own glory (ſaies Chriſt, John 9. 50. (but the glory of him that ſent me ;) but he will have him perform ſuch Actions, and ſubmit to ſuch ſufferings, as ſhall take away Glory from him, and obſcure and vail his Glory due to him. He will have him take the form of a (meer) Servant, and become (wholly) obedient, and not be for himſelf at all ; who yet might think it no robbery to ſeek his own Glory directly with Gods. Nor,

3. Will God be ſatisfied to have this his Glory a little vailed, and in ſome parts clouded ; but he will have him robbed and ſpoiled of all Manifeſtative Glory whatſoever due unto him. He will have him emptied or made of no reputation, (as it is here) the Meſſiah ſhall have nothing left (as Daniel ſpeaks, Dan. 9. 26.) not a Grain, or Mite of the Riches of his Glory, which he could call his own, as God doth. Yea, if there be any debaſement worſe than other, he will have him obedient to it, even to death ; and if any Death be more ſhameful than other, he will have him ſubmit to it, even the death of the croſs. And,

4. God will have all this come from him willingly, heartily, and freely. He is not only thus to be humbled, but he muſt humble himſelf (as the Text alſo hath it ;) who indeed was ſo great, that no other could do it, without his own free conſent : And all this, to the glory of God the Father.

And ere we go any further, do but think with your ſelves that if a Perſon, ſuch as in the firſt head hath been deſcribed, who is equal with God in Glory, will to glorifie God and exalt him, not only condeſcend to leſſen himſelf, and that ſo much, as to have it ſaid, The Second Perſon is made a Creature ; But will further, at the Command of his Father, lay aſide even that Glory which is ſtill due to him when thus made Man, yea, even empty himſelf wholly of all that Glory Perſonally due to him, and take on him the form of a Servant inſtead thereof ; and yet further, will actually become obedient in the performance of all ſuch Actions, not only which it was meet ſo great a Perſon glorified in Heaven ſhould imploy himſelf in, and ſhew his own, and his Fathers Glory jointly in, but ſuch as Men on Earth ſhew their ſubjection in, both as mere Creatures and as Sinners; yea, and not only ſo, but will be obedient to the utmoſt of Sufferings, even to Death, and to the moſt ſhameful and ignominious Death, the death of the Croſs; and will perform all this voluntarily, with an intention of Mind and Will, directing all to this ſole end, ſo to make God alone glorious by, and through his own utter debaſement and obſcurement, falling down thus low to exalt and ſet God up thus high, by his having ſo great a Perſon, and in himſelf ſo glorious, thus obedient to him, and lowered for his Glories ſake; I appeal even to the Juſtice that is in all Mens hearts, if it doth not both equalize the Diſhonour done to God by Sin, and alſo bring in a greater over-plus of Glory than was taken from God by it; and ſo make a full amends. Chap. 9.

CHAP. IX.

The principal matter of Chriſts Satisfaction was not only in a Diminiſhing of his Glory, but Deſpoiling him of it. And that he did this willingly, he humbled himſelf. And that his Perſon was the ſubject of this Debaſement and Humiliation.

BUT to ſpeak yet more diſtinctly: The Matter of his Satisfaction lies in theſe Three Things principally; all which are in the Text.

I. That it was not only a Leſſening of his Glory, but a Deſpoiling and Emptying him of it, or a making him of no Reputation.
II. That this was voluntary in him: [He humbled] Actively; it is not ſaid [He was humbled] Paſſively.
III. That the Subject of this Humbling was himſelf, conſidered both as the Subject Author of all this Obedience; and alſo as the Subject Matter involved in this Obedience and Debaſement; [He humbled himſelf].

I. It was an Emptying himſelf of Glory to glorifie God: which in the ſtricteſt way that Juſtice can require, becometh properly and truly Satisfaction in point of Glory debaſed. To clear this, let us conſider the difference between giving Honour ſimply, and giving Satisfaction for Honour. We give mutual Honour to one another without Debaſing our ſelves, as Inferiours to Superiours, and Superiours to Inferiours by mutual uncovering of the Head each unto other. But if Satisfaction in Point of Honour be ſtrictly ſtood upon, then ſome Acts of Humbling are exacted from the Party that is to ſatisfie, even a taking down of the Glory of the one, to reſtore it to the other: Examples whereof we often ſee, by the Sentence of ſuch Courts as deal in Point of Honour and the reſtitution of it. Now to make uſe of this in the Point in hand; a meer Creature indeed cannot give the ſimple Tribute of Glory that is due unto God, but by humbling it ſelf ſome way, either in Obedience or Worſhip; all the Acts of which have an humbling of the Creature in them. Thus the Angels cover their Faces, and cry, Holy, Holy, Holy, &c. and the Elders caſt down themſelves and their Crowns, and cry, Worthy art thou to receive honour and glory. And the Reaſon is, becauſe of the tranſcendent

dent distance and disproportion between God and mere Creatures; his Glory being so high and soveraign, that they cannot shew forth the greatness of it, but by vailing their own Glory before him. Thus the distance between Kings and ordinary men, being in the institution of it so high and soveraign, the greatness of their Majesty and Glory cannot be held forth but by their Subjects debasing of themselves, and falling down before them. And in this respect, the Creatures debasement could never have satisfied for Gods Honour lost and impaired; because all its debasements are but suitable wayes to give and shew forth that Glory of God which is simply due from them, although they had never sinned. But Christ, though he were lessened indeed (as became God-Man) yet still this Man being one Person with God, and so God, as well as Man, and so, being by right of Inheritance, in joint Commission with his Father, and set up in such a kind of equallity as hath been shewn; hence, as two Kings in joint Commission for the Government of a Kingdom, and by a like Right, though they give Glory each to other, yet not by debasement of their Glory: so nor was Christ to have done, as now in Heaven he doth not; where though he interceeds for us, yet more regio, as a King; sitting (not kneeling, as on Earth) at Gods right hand; and stilo regio, in the Language of a King, [Father, I will] as John 17. 24. It is not performed in a way of an humbling debasement, though in a way that argues a lessening of him. And thus he might have kept his State and Majesty, as now in Heaven he doth, and have given Glory to God for ever, upon such terms, and by such wayes, as should withal have held forth his own Glory jointly and as directly as his Fathers. Thus at the latter day, when he comes to judge the World, he will come in his fullest Glory, and every knee shall bow to him, to the glory of God the Father; this being his due, that he should be honoured together with his Father; that all should honour the Son (sayes Christ, speaking of that Judgment committed to himself) even as they honour the Father. John 5. 22, 23. Thus indeed he might (as now he doth) have glorified God: But then all this in him would not have been satisfaction for the empairing and diminution of Gods Glory by Sin: This is no way to be effected (no, not by Christ) but by an humbling, a lowering, a debasement, an emptying himself of Glory, to restore it to his Father. For look, as in Point of Goods, Restitution is not made but by a parting with some of that Mans Goods, that is to satisfie, to be added to his, who is to be satisfied: so in Point of Honour, if Satisfaction for Dishonour (which is a taking away of Honour, or reflecting disparagement on him who is dishonoured) be to be performed; there must in like manner be a taking away of, or a parting with Honour and Glory in the satisfier done for the injured Persons sake, to give again unto the dishonoured; so as his Glory shall be made up, or shewed forth by the others debasement. For else, it ariseth not to a Proportion: which is the Rule of Justice in such cases. Therefore nothing but a debasement can make a full amends for a debasement; but when so, then a Proportion is observed; and Honour can never be repaired, but out of anothers Honour impair'd, for it must be paid in its own Coyn: and in this case you cannot repair a loss to the one, but you must empair it to the other. And this is the true Reason why Christ now he is glorified in Heaven, though he be as full of Action and Employment as ever, and all to the Glory of his Father, as much as those Actions were which he performed here below; yet all that now he doth in Heaven hath not a Meritoriousness in it, nor is it accounted of as being Satisfactory for Sin, as what he did here below, was: yet all those Actions have an infinite worth in them, in respect of the Person performing them, considered meerly as an Agent and efficient Cause of them: and they are infinitely acceptable to God (as glorifying him) to other ends: but still they arise not to answer the proportion that in Justice, Satisfaction requires. For though they are the Actions of Christ considered as an Inferiour, and one made less, and that in order to the glorifying of God; yet so, as he still having a right to be glorified with God in all, jointly, and as directly as God himself is to be glorified, and accordingly all these Actions as immediately mediately holding forth his own Glory as his Fathers; therefore though God reckons, and accounts of them as a glorifying of himſelf; yet not as a Satisfaction to himſelf for his Glory empaired; becauſe Chriſt is not humbled in any of them, ſo as by a debaſement in them to give Glory unto God, but does now ſhare with God in the Tribute of Glory that comes in, as being his due. But here on Earth he abated of, and hid his Glory: He was emptyed of it, to the end that thereby what was loſt to him might accrue unto God; which debaſement does truly and properly become fit matter for Satisfaction. Chap. 9.

II. That which gives worth and acceptation to this debaſement of his, to make it ſatisfactory, is, That himſelf or his Perſon (ſo great a Perſon) is included in it: He humbled himſelf and became obedient; and ſo, this Obedience of his being in ſuch a way of debaſement does draw and take into it all his fore-named Perſonal Perfections, to contribute an infinite dignity, worth and ſatisfactorineſs unto all he did, or ſuffered; and this, from the conſideration of [himſelf] as being included therein, and ſo in a double reſpect and relation giving a double gilt unto this Obedience, as I may ſo ſpeak.

1. If his Perſon be conſidered as the Worker and Efficient Cauſe of all he did or ſuffered, and withal, as the Root from whence it ſprung, and as the ſubject Author of all thoſe Graces and Self-denyals; this gives a worth to his Obedience and Sufferings.

2. As his Perſon and all his Excellencies are yet further involved as the Materiale, the ſubject Matter it ſelf of this his Obedience, as that which he offered up in all that he either did or ſuffered; ſo the Honour of his Perſon not only gives an influence of worth into his Works of Obedience, as he is the Efficient of them; but further, in that his Honour was reflected upon in them all, and he debaſed himſelf therein. And thus his Perſon is doubly enwrapped in all he did: and therefore in the Text it is ſaid, He humbled himſelf and became obedient; that is, in his Actions of Obedience himſelf was humbled and made ſubject. There is a Reduplication [he] and [himſelf] noting that they came from his Perſon, and that they again reflected upon his Perſon; and were not only proceeding from Perſona infinita, in an infinite Perſon, but are circa Perſonam infinitam, concerned about him.

Now for the Firſt: Conſider him but as the ſubject Author of them; and yet even ſo, all his Graces and Actions in his Perſon thus humbled, receive an infinite value and worth from him. Therefore the efficacy of his Righteouſneſs is put upon this, that it was the righteouſneſs of God, and our Saviour; that is, our Saviour who was God: So 2 Pet. 1. 1. Simon Peter, a ſervant and an apoſtle of Jeſus Chriſt, to them that have obtained like precious faith with us, through the righteouſneſs of God, and our Saviour Jeſus Chriſt. And tho' this relation of his Actions unto his Perſon ſimply and alone conſidered in Chriſt as glorified, God accounts not Satisfaction; yet they coming from Chriſt as humbled, he accepts of all his Graces and Actions, not only as having an infinite worth in them, but alſo as part of Satisfaction. And to that end he conſiders this in them, that they are all from a Perſon ſo infinite, and in that reſpect they add a diſtinct worth to that Satisfaction, which thus humbled he performs from this other that follows; which is,

2*dly*, That his Perſon is further to be conſidered as the Materiale, the Matter of all his Obedience; namely in this reſpect, that his Perſon was debaſed in all that Obedience of his; ſo that it came to paſs, that this his Obedience was not only accepted becauſe the Offerer of it, the Sacrificer, was a Perſon of that worth, but alſo in that himſelf and his Glory became the Sacrifice and Offering it ſelf. He not only gave Honour to God by his Actions, and with his Graces; but did alſo therein give away his own Honour, the Honour of his Perſon. I will make this plain to you by a place of Scripture, namely, Heb. 9. where that that gives weight and efficacy to his Blood to purge our Conſciences (which all the Sacrifices in the World could never have done, as the Apoſtle ſayes, ver. 13, 14.) is made to be this, that through the eternal Spirit he offered up himſelf (as the 14th Verſe concludes) whence obſerve, that he, viz. his Perſon with his Godhead, was conſidered not only as the Offerer, (which those words import through the eternal Spirit) or as the Author of that Action of Sacrificing, as the Priests were of those Sacrifices of the Law; (which is the first consideration mentioned in the former part of this distinction) but besides, himself was the thing offered, as those words shew, offered up himself. So that that Action had a double respect to his Person; both as the subject Author, and as the Matter; both as the Sacrificer, and as the Sacrifice. The Priests, they offered indeed, but it was the Gifts which People brought, so as therein the Priest was one thing, and the Sacrifice an other; but here Christ was both Offerer, and the Offering: there the Giver was one thing, and the Gift another; but here Christ was both the Giver and Gift: Ephes. 5. 2. Who hath loved us, and given himself for us, an Offering and a Sacrifice to God. And this is that which the Scripture mentions to have given a further infinite over-ballancing weight of Merit and Satisfaction, and distinct from the former, unto all that Christ did; namely, that in all he still gave away himself. They were not meer Actions from him and in him, but such as included himself as given, and humbled in them. This, as the places above-mentioned, so that in Heb. 1. 3. does plainly shew; [having by himself purged our sins] mark it; not by Actions meerly from him, but by himself humbled in these Actions and Sufferings. And therefore the same Author to the Hebrews puts the main value upon himself considered as the Person offered, and not only on himself considered as the Offerer; and indeed, he distinctly mentions both. For throughout the 7th Chapter, he shews that it was necessary, that he should be the Priest, the Offerer, that should Sacrifice, and so appease Gods Wrath; shewing oppositely, the insufficiency of the Levitical Priests, although their Sacrifices had had no defect; and so concludes, that such an High-Priest became us, &c. ver. 26, and yet because all the Merit lay not in the bare Person of the Priest as an Offerer, had not the Sacrifice it self been answerable; therefore he further shews in the 9th and 10th Chapters, the worth of that Sacrifice also which by this our High-Priest was offered; which was no other than himself. And this the Apostle shews as considered apart by it self from the former consideration; and therefore in like manner he oppositely shews the weakness and unworthiness that was in all the Levitical Sacrifices, and things offered, as he had formerly done of those Offerers, Chap. 7. still mentioning the worth of that one Sacrifice of himself; shewing that he was also the Person offered, and that that was it which gave that super-eminent worth to his Offering, to take Sins away. And it is plain, that the Apostle considers both these; for he argues the perfection of his Satisfaction from both.

Now to clear this distinction by comparing an instance or two together; when Christ wrought a Miracle, turning Water into Wine; this was an action from him meerly as the Author of it, and wherein he humbled not himself; which therefore made up no part of Satisfaction. It was from him, but it reflected not thus upon, nor included his Person thus in it; but when he was Circumcised, and became obedient to his Parents, and to the Law; all these Actions, as they were from his Person, so also they included in them the Humiliation of himself, and had therefore the whole worth of the Person who did or suffered them, communicated unto them, as being included in them, and as reflecting upon the whole honour of his Person in a way of debasement, for his Glory is himself. Therefore in all his Obedience, doing, and suffering, his Glory being reflected upon, or debased, his Person is said to be involved in the Matter of it; as a Kings Honour is, when he doth an Action that debaseth himself.

Or if you will yet more accurately consider how many wayes himself, or his Person was included in this; then in a word to sum up all.

1. His Obedience was from an infinite Person as the Cause thereof.

And 2. Performed likewise in himself as the immediate Subject thereof: the difference between which two is evident; for the Holy Ghost who is God, when he prayes in us, and helpeth our infirmities, and makes Intercession for us, though he be the efficient of the Prayers made, yet these are not wrought in himself, but in us as the Subject of them, and therefore are called called our Prayers: And hence these Actions of his in us have not this great worth in them, though he be the Author of them. But Christs Satisfaction and Intercession were not only effected by him, but further, were performed in himself as the Subject in whom the Action doth reside, and to whom it appertains for ever. Chap. 9.

3. It was not only performed by him, and in him, but himself was the Matter of the Obedience; [he gave himself.] And so near an alliance of his Obedience unto his Person, must needs every way add an infinite worth unto it. Thus much for the Second requisite to the Matter of Satisfaction.

III. Now in the Third Place add this other also, That all this Obedience and Humiliation was Voluntary and Arbitrary.

1. Voluntary, [He humbled himself] which I know is included in what hath been even now said in that Second Head fore-mentioned, yet something there is, that the distinct notion of it addeth to all the former; and it is a necessary requisite in Satisfaction, which cannot be without it. Wherefore all that Christ did, was voluntarily done by him; [He humbled himself]: For Submission and Obedience forced, or to give Honour to another out of constraint, can never satisfie, but rather prejudiceth it. And as Honour sought for by the Person himself who is to be honoured, is not Honour (as Solomon saith) so constrained Submission in the Person honouring another, redounds not to the Honour of him who is to be honoured, and so not to Satisfaction. And therefore among other defects in the Satisfaction to arise from the Punishment of Men in Hell, this is justly to be reckoned one, that all that Submission and Punishment of Men and Devils is not voluntary, but forced. But now, this of Christs was voluntary: He became obedient.

Yea, and 2. It was voluntary in a further consideration than can be attributed to the Obedience of any Creature, in that it was arbitrary in Christ as well as voluntary. He might have stood upon it by reason of his Prerogative and Equality with his Father, and was at liberty whether he would do that which he did, or not do it. And this the Text intimates, when it premiseth unto this his Obedience, That he was existing in the form of God, and equal with God; that is, he might have stood upon his terms not to have subjected himself in any such way of Humiliation; yet he humbled himself, and became obedient. The Creatures Obedience, though never so voluntary, cannot thus be said to be arbitrary; A necessity lies upon me to preach, (sayes Paul) and wo is unto me if I do it not; and yet he Preached willingly. It is a due from them, but not so from Christ. And this added unto it, makes it fully and properly Satisfaction. And thus much for this Second Head, the Matter of this Satisfaction.

CHAP. X.

The Greatneſs and Supereminent Worth of this ſatisfaction as performed by ſuch a Perſon. That hence the Acts of his Obedience exceed in Goodneſs all the Evil that is in Sin, and that therefore they make full Reparation ſince they honour God more than ever Sin had diſhonoured him.

NOW having thus ſeen the Excellencies of the Perſon who was to ſatisfie, Chriſt God-Man; which Excellencies have an influence into the Worth and Merit of this ſatisfaction made: and having alſo viewed the Ingredients into the Matter of this ſatisfaction for the Diſhonour done unto God; I will now come to rear upon theſe as Foundations, Demonſtrations of the ſuper-eminency that muſt needs be in the Materials of ſuch a ſatisfaction performed by ſuch a Perſon. Which makes the third and laſt head propounded. And whereas there were preſented many inſuperable Mountains of difficulty that lay in the way of all the Creatures, to ſatisfie for Sin, which they could never paſs over, or remove; and ſuch vaſt gulphs of diſproportions between Gods Diſhonour and Debaſement by Sin, and all the Creatures Abilities to repair and reſtore it, by reaſon of the diſtance between God himſelf and them, ſuch that nothing in, or from them could ever make up, or fill; you ſhall now ſee all and every one of thoſe Mountains overtopped and levelled, and before this our Mediator, Chriſt God-Man, become a Plain, all thoſe Chaſmaes and Chinks being filled up, and the way of ſatisfaction made ſo even, and plain, that our Faith may paſs over it, and walk in it, aſſiſted and ſupported even with Reaſons deduced from Principles of Juſtice and Equity; and ſo, all the Principles of Underſtanding in us may come to ſee and receive full ſatisfaction in this ſatisfaction of his.

In making of this Reddition, I ſhall not be able exactly to keep unto the ſame Method I held in the beginning of this Diſcourſe, viz. to bring in the mention of every particular of this ſatisfaction, in the ſame Order that I marſhalled each of thoſe Particulars of the Creatures non-ſatisfaction; ſo, as to ſet the one againſt the other in a Parallel Rank. For the diſpoſing of ſuch Materials as do follow in the way of a Natural Conſequence one from the other, muſt be ſuited unto the Matter it ſelf, not in an Artificial, but according to the Natural dependance wherein one thing may appear to ariſe from another. Hence therefore, when I was to ſhew the Creatures Unabilities, I ſo ranged and placed thoſe things that ſhould demonſtrate, and in ſuch an Order, as might by the conſequence that one thing held upon another, beſt ſet forth the Creatures Inſufficiencies; which therefore was moſt ſuitable to that Subject. And accordingly now that I am to ſpeak of the Abilities that are in Chriſt, I muſt preſent the fullneſs of them in each of thoſe Particulars ſo as will beſt ſuit with this Subject; by ſetting forth one particular after another, as they ariſe from, or depend each on other; arguing in an orderly way from what is to be conſidered in him, that makes this ſatisfaction to make it by degrees riſe up to its height and fullneſs; Yet ſo, as there ſhall be no particular ground of difficulty that made it impoſſible for the Creatures to ſatisfie, that ſhall be lett out unſatisfied in theſe Demonſtrations of the fulneſs of Chriſts ſatisfaction, although not in the ſame Method that in the former part was obſerved.

Chap. 10.

The firſt and loweſt Conſideration from whence I ſhall begin to argue this ſatisfaction of his is that which was in the former head given; viz. That himſelf, or his Perſon is to be conſidered as the Subject of all his Graces, and Obedience. And let us firſt ſee how much even this will contribute towards the ſatisfactorineſs of his Obedience, and equalize the Evil and Diſhonour by Sin; and how far it will carry this on.

You may remember how in the firſt part of this Diſcourſe, viz. The demonſtration of the Creatures unability to ſatisfie, I ſhewed both how far ſhort the Graces of a meer Creature never ſo pure and innocent do fall, as not having any worth in them, more than to juſtifie themſelves, and that by Gods appointment too, and likewiſe how much Sin exceeded in evil the goodneſs and worth of all meer Creatures Graces, and that they did no way ſo much honour God as Sin diſhonoured him. Now let us from this firſt conſideration, that ſo infinite a Perſon is the Subject of Grace and Obedience, ſhew both,

1. How much their Graces are exceeded: And,
2. Alſo the Evil of Sin thereby.

1. Theſe his humbling Graces (as I call them) for ſuch only are matter of ſatisfaction, and his Actions of Obedience ſpringing therefrom, infinitely excel thoſe of meer Creatures, conceive them never ſo vaſt and large. That which makes Grace more excellent than any other Creature, and ſo is the true meaſure of the greater, or leſſer worth in Grace, or Holyneſs, is, that it is the participation of the Divine Nature. Now take but an eſtimate in your thoughts of the vaſt difference between the participation of the Divine Nature in Chriſt, which makes his Graces and Obedience accepted, and that in meer Creatures. The participation of the Divine Nature in the Grace of Creatures, is but by way of a meer ſhadow, likeneſs, or ſimilitude, ſomething reſembling, and ſo the worth thereof is but ſuch as you would have of the picture of a King, that is ſomewhat like him: But the Grace of Union (as Divines call it, and that in way of diſtinction from Chriſts own Graces habitually conſidered, as well as from thoſe in meer Creatures) which derives worth into Chriſts Graces and Obedience, is a kind of Communication of the God-head it ſelf perſonally united, and ſo diffuſing anſwerable worth and acceptation afore God into the Actions of HumaneNature thus united. The difference herein is ſuch, that whereas in meer Creatures ſtanding afore God under a Covenant of works, and the Covenant by meer right of Creation is no other, it is meerly their Graces and Actions that make their Perſons accepted in ſuch a Covenant, and they have no worth from the Perſon at all whoſe Graces they are, but the Perſon from them: Now contrarily, the Graces and Actions of Chriſt do not dignifie the Perſon ſo much, as the Perſon them. So that look in a proportion how much his Perſon exceeds all the Creatures, ſo much in their capacity, and meaſure, and in a Moral value, muſt his Graces and Actions of Obedience excel all theirs. 'Tis true, that for kind his Grace and ours are and would be the ſame, for of his fulneſs we receive Grace for Grace, John 1. 16. But look as what a tranſcendent diſtance there is between the worth and excellency that is put upon the Body, and the Actions thereof in a Man, (by reaſon of that Eternal Soul that dwells in it, and is ſubſtantially united to it) and the Actions of a Beaſt, ſo that one and the ſame kind of Earth is made capable of, and is to be a Partner of Eternal Life, and of Heavenly Glory, by reaſon of the Soul in a Man, whereas that in a Beaſt is ordained but to a Life of Sence. Look in like manner how thoſe Actions are enobled (comparatively to thoſe of Beaſts) wherein the Members of Mans Body are imployed as Weapons of Righteouſneſs, ſo that they are Actions of Eternal conſequence, and acceptation with God: Now an infinitely greater tranſcendent diſtance is there between the worth which the Perſon of Chriſt doth communicate to the Humane Nature, and the Actions thereof, or of his Perſon therein, (it being thereunto ſubſtantially united) and the worth which the Perſon of meer Creatures, though though ſuppoſed to be as full of habitual Grace, as Chriſt himſelf can communicate to their Actions. Though for Metal they had been the ſame that Chriſts were, yet wanting this Royal ſtamp of the Deitie upon them, they had not been Coyn that would have paſt for payment and ſatisfaction. His Glory is ſubſtantial, and communicates its worth to the utmoſt to all, and every Action ſo far as the Act is capable, even as the whole Kings Image is ſtampt upon Three-pence as well as Six-pence, yet Six-pence is of more value becauſe the matter is capable of more, and ſo one Action of Chriſt was capable of more worth than other, yet ſo as in them all there was an Infinite Moral Dignity from the Perſon. And again as all the Godhead in all his fulneſs is ſaid to dwell in him, and his Perſon, ſo all the whole worth that the ſubſtantial Excellency of the Perſon can transfuſe is in like manner ſtampt upon all his Actions. And though the Humane Nature, which in it ſelf is finite, be the Principium quo, the Inſtrument of all, by whom, and in whom the Second Perſon doth all he doth, and therefore anſwerably the Phyſical being of thoſe Actions is but finite, in genere entis, take them as created productions; yet all Chriſts Actions being attributed to the Perſon, who is Principium quod (for Actiones ſunt ſuppoſitorum, Actions are attributed to, and ſaid to be of the Perſons that perform them, becauſe that is ſaid only to ſubſiſt) therefore the Moral eſtimation of them is infinite. And though the immediate Principle, the Humane Nature be finite, yet the radical Principle, the Perſon is infinite, and they being one in Perſon what the one is ſaid to do, the other is ſaid to do alſo; and therefore Chriſts Obedience is called the Righteouſneſs of God, and the Obedience of God.

Yea, Secondly, His Graces do for this reſpect ſo far exceed any that are in Creatures, that their goodneſs (as Pſal. 16. 2. it is called) equals the utmoſt Evil can be ſuppoſed in Sin: For as the Offence is againſt an Infinite Glorious God, ſo the Holy Works are wrought by one as Infinite. And as the higheſt accent of the Eſſence of Sin lies over this head, that it was againſt an Infinite Majeſty, ſo the greatneſs of the ſatisfaction herein lies, that it was performed by the Mighty God. Which proportion could never have been filled up by any Creature who was not God; ſatisfaction in point of Honour depending upon the equal worth of the Perſon honouring, and diſgraced.

Yet it is not ſo to be underſtood, nor was it neceſſary, that the worth of the Actions ſhould be as Infinite as the Perſon, Eſſentially and Subſtantially. For Chriſts Merits could not be Infinite as Gods Attributes are, nor ſo loved by God as his Attributes are, but that they are ſo in a Moral Eſtimation was enough. For look as though Sin was Infinite, yet not ſo Eſſentially, ſo Juſtice required not an Obedience Eſſentially and Naturally Infinite, but Perſonally Infinite, which Chriſts, is, it being the Righteouſneſs of him that is God.

The Second thing propounded to be proved was, That his Graces and Actions of Obedience did exceed in goodneſs the utmoſt Evil that was in Sin, which we ſaw no Creatures Graces did, or can be valued to do.

1. In the general, The Evil of Sin lies in this, That it is committed againſt the great God, and that God is the Object of it: So as the utmoſt aggravation of the Evil of Sin is taken at the higheſt but from the worth of the Object, God and his Glory, againſt whom it is committed; but the worth of all his Graces and Actions being taken from the Perſon, the Subject, the Efficient from whom they do proceed; look how much more reaſon there is that the Perſon who is the Author and Subject of his Actions ſhould conveigh more worth to his own Actions than a Perſon who is but an Object of anothers Action can do to the Action of that other, ſo much doth his Graces having a Perſon that is God, for the Subject of them, exceed the Evil of Sin, that is againſt God, the meer Object thereof. For the Subject conveys worth to his own Actions, as the Father conveys nobleneſs to his Child; his Child inherits it from him, and ſo an Action doth worth from the Perſon from whom it is Natively derived, but that worth, and ſo that evil too, which it hath from the Object is but extrinſecal and borrowed, and therefore the denomination of Actions is taken rather from the Subject than the Object. As when a Man underſtands an Angel never ſo perfectly as the Object of his Underſtanding, it is called Humane knowledge, becauſe Man is the Subject of it, and it is his knowledge; though the Object it is converſant about be an Angel, it is not called Angelical knowledge: So by the ſame reaſon Actions derive more proper Worth and Merit (for both Worth and Denomination ariſe from the ſame Root) from the Perſon from whom they come, and in whom they are, than from the Perſon unto which they tend. And therefore though Sin be done againſt God as the Object, and ſo is hainous, yet becauſe this ſatisfaction was made by God as the Subject of it, therefore it is more meritorious than Sin can be demeritorious. This ſatisfaction ſucks more Nobleneſs from the Subject of it, which is the Root it grows upon, than Sin can take evil and blackneſs from the External Shadow the Father of Lights caſts upon it by the Sinners Eclipſe of him. And the reaſon is, becauſe all participation is founded upon Union, mutual Relation and Conjunction, and the more remote and further off the Union and Relation is, the leſs a thing participates from it. Now the Relation and Conjunction between the Act and the Object is but extrinſecal, it is an External Conjunction that is between them, ſuch as is between a Mans Eye and the Sun, they remain Strangers ſtill, but the Relation, Conjunction and Kindred that is between a Perſon and his Actions is nearer, it is intrinſecal, ſuch as is between the Sun and the Beams that flow from it, which is yet nearer, when the Perſon himſelf is included in the Matter of the very Action, as in this of Chriſt it is; whoſe Perſon is intrinſecally included as the neceſſary part of the ſatisfaction it ſelf. Now if this, that God is but the Object of Sin doth caſt ſuch an heinouſneſs upon the Acts of it which come from us, if ſuch a remote, far off, extrinſecal Relation and Conjunction brings forth ſo much demerit, and makes Sin to abound in ſinfulneſs, what will the ſatisfaction which comes from ſo great a Perſon as Chriſt, God-Man; and includes that Perſon as a part of the ſatisfaction it ſelf, how will this nearer Union and Relation between this Perſon and his Actions beget Worth and Dignity in them?

Chap. 10.

But then add to this further that other Conſideration mentioned which will make a Second head of this Demonſtration, that himſelf was not only the Subject of his Graces and Actions of Obedience, but that himſelf and his Perſonal Worth were included and involved therein as the matter alſo of the ſatisfaction (as I ſhewed at large;) hereby it comes to paſs that the Evil of Sin is again afreſh exceeded to a flowing over. For as the Relation between the Act and the Subject from whom, and in whom, is more near (as is ſaid) than between the Act and the Object, ſo the ſubject matter, the materiale of the Action circa quam hath a nearer affinitie than the Subject in quo, for it includes it, inwraps it into it ſelf. And ſo did all Chriſts Obedience inwrap his Glory in it, and robb'd him of it, and ſo he ſacrificed it to God, and hereby God comes to have Honour payd him double, over and over, not only Honour returned him from a Perſon as Honourable and Glorious as himſelf, which makes it Infinite, and more than ever Sin took from him, (for Honor eſt in honorante, Actions of Honour take value from the Perſon, and as one King may render Honour to another when as yet he keeps his State, ſo might Chriſt have honoured God manifeſting himſelf in a glorified Condition,) but God hath not this ſingle, but a double Subſidie and Tribute of Honour, he will have Chriſt lay down his Glory to glorifie him, he will have the Forfeiture, and not the Principal Debt only. And as Chriſts Obedience reduplicates upon his Perſon, he humbled himſelf, ſo the Honour due to God is reduplicated alſo, ſo that as the Apoſtle ſayes, there is ſuperfluity in his ſatisfaction, 1 Tim. 1. 14. For as if when he who was the Lord of ſo many Worlds became poor for us, it muſt needs purchaſe Infinite Riches as the Apoſtle ſpeaks, ſo if he

who was equal in Glory to God, will debaſe himſelf at Gods command to glorifie and give Honour to him, and give up his own Glory to add as it were to his Fathers; what Honour muſt needs redound to God thereby? John 17. 3, 4. Father (ſayes he) give me the glory which I had ere the world was, I have glorified thee on earth; as if he had ſaid, I have laid aſide the Glory which I had afore the World was all this while, and which was all this while my due, have left Heaven and come to Earth, and all to glorifie thee on Earth, Now glorifie me, &c. Chriſt reflects upon, and drawes and includes all his Glory to contribute and impute this double Worth and Satisfaction to his Obedience.

And to make this demonſtration the more full and ſatisfactory, let us more particularly conſider what was that ſpecial dammage and injury Sin did unto God. It was (as I ſhewed) the obſcuring of the glory of God, and reflecting diſhonour to him. Now then let us but weigh together as it were in two ſcales, that exceeding weight of the glory of Chriſt, who was debaſed, with the glory of God the Father, which was obſcured by Sin; ſatisfaction being a reducing things to an equality, and a making of amends in what is loſt or endammaged; and if it be in point of honour, it is requiſite that as much and as great an honour be debaſed to make reſtitution as was reflected upon or taken away. And here you may remember that Satisfaction in point of Honour doth depend upon the worth and reputation of the Perſon that ſatisfies for it, and what was the worth of Chriſt in his Perſonal Dignity, I have ſpoken to, what is meet for the point in hand. And from thence it is evident that ſuch worth of the party honouring, equally ballances all the diſhonour, which Sin had thrown upon God.

But 2*dly*, As was alſo ſhewed, this Satisfaction of Chriſt is not ſimply a giving Honour to God, but a giving away his own Honour to make Gods Glory the more illuſtrious. Now therefore Chriſt made all his Honour a Sacrifice to God (I ſhewed how himſelf was the matter of the Sacrifice) and therein indeed might eſpecially be ſaid to ſacrifice himſelf, and to humble himſelf, and it is the principal meaning of thoſe expreſſions, for his Glory is himſelf: As a King, conſider him as a King, and his Glory is himſelf, for his being a King is wholly matter of Honour and conſiſts in nothing elſe; and therefore we uſe the word His Majeſty, for the King; ſo God is called the God of glory, Acts 7. 2. and the Father of glory, Epheſ. 1. 17. and Chriſt, the Lord of glory, 1 Cor. 2. 8. and the Jewes paraphraſtically uſe to ſay, the glory of God, to expreſs God himſelf; and we alſo in ordinary ſpeech, ſpeaking of a man of worth, doing any thing diſhonourable or unworthy of him, we ſay, he doth below himſelf, for his Honour is himſelf; and to any Spirit that is Noble, it is a nearer thing than Wives, Children, Goods, or whatever. Now all this in Men is but a ſpark of that Image in God and Chriſt; and in Scripture phraſe it is ſaid of God, that he made all things for himſelf, that is, for his Honour: And though the Honour that he hath by it, is but a manifeſtative Honour and extrinſecal, yet becauſe himſelf is intereſted in it, and it is his, therefore it is called himſelf, and he is as tender of it as of himſelf, My glory I will not give to another, Iſa. 42. 8.

Now therefore let us come to weighing, and put theſe two Glories in the Scales, Gods obſcured by Sin, and Chriſts debaſed for Sin.

A double Glory God hath.

1. The one Eſſential, the Glory of the Godhead in it ſelf.

2. A manifeſtated Glory unto us: And the firſt is reflected upon by Sin, the other detracted from.

And Jeſus Chriſt, the Second Perſon, God-Man, hath anſwerably a double Glory, as was ſhewn, the one eſſential and equal to that of his Father; the other due to be manifeſted in and upon his aſſumption of our Nature. Now look whatever can be ſaid of the proportion of diſhonour done to either of theſe Glories by Sin as concerning God, the like may be ſaid of the debaſement done to and performed by Chriſt, in reſpect of both thoſe his Glories alſo.

And

Chap. 10.

And firſt compare we the reflexion and ſhadow caſt upon their Eſſential Glory on either ſide, and at leaſt the Scales will be even. The Eſſential Glory of God, although it cannot really be empaired by Sin, yet it is reflected on by Sin, and ſo that that Glory which is empaired, (as his Manifeſtative is) being a peculiar belonging to his Perſon, and indeed is himſelf, (as was ſaid); hence all the Eſſential greatneſs that is in God, is taken in to aggravate the guilt of Sin, and hence there is a denomination given to our acts of Sinning, as if they were deſtroying and diſhonouring the Godhead, as Rom. 1. 23. ſpeaking of the Sin of Idolatry, They changed (ſayes he) the glory of the incorruptible God into the image of a corruptible man, and creeping things: He ſpeaks as if they had utterly deſtroyed the Godhead, and turned him into a Creature; thus a denomination is given to Sin, as reflecting on the Eternal Godhead and the Eſſence of it.

Now then to anſwer this evil in Sin, and make all even, it muſt be remembred what was afore ſaid, That Chriſt that was debaſed was God, and his glory Eſſentially equal to his Father, and that though that his Eſſential glory was not empaired, yet all the debaſement of his Perſon in the Humane Nature, reflected as much upon that, as that of Sin doth any way upon Gods. When he appeared in our fleſh, I may ſay, he changed the glory of the incorruptible God into the Image, yea the reality of a crucified Man, a Malefactour, the ſcum and dung of the Earth, yea, a Worm and no Man. And as Sin hath a denomination, as if it did thus and thus to the Eſſential Deity it ſelf, ſo hath Chriſts Sufferings a denomination of reflecting on his Godhead in all his Sufferings; it is called the blood of God, Acts 20. 28. and God may be ſaid to have dyed, and to have been crucified; and ſo it is ſaid, They killed the Prince of life, Acts 3. 15. and crucified the Lord of glory, 1 Cor. 2. 8. Now then all that ſubſtantial glory of his comes in (as was ſaid) as the foundation, to give worth to all he did or ſuffered, as reflected upon thereby. For as no Creature could have ſatisfied, becauſe they have no radical internal worth to fill up this diſproportion, theirs is but a borrowed and extrinſecal glory; ſo if Chriſt had had no other, if indeed his glory had been but a borrowed glory, extrinſecal and but by repreſentation, and but as called God, as Kings are in name, not really and ſubſtantially (as the Arrians and Socinians teach) then his being himſelf made of no reputation, when his glory lay but in reputation, would have had no ſatisfaction in it. God who had a ſubſtantial glory reflected on by Sin, would never have regarded or accounted of receiving any Honour from the humbling of ſuch an one: What is it to have a King at Arms, or one that doth but perſonate a King, crouch unto a King? What glory is it to the Sun to have the Stars to pull in their glory, and be put out, and not to ſhine, when as all their glory is borrowed from it ſelf? The Creatures, although they may rob God of Glory, and reflect Diſhonour upon God, and ſeem to eclipſe him by Sin, yet they can add no Glory to him, as the Moon which receives light from the Sun, may interpoſe between it and the Earth, but ſhe can no way add to the Suns brightneſs, or make it more illuſtrious, no not although ſhe diſappears in the preſence of him, and looks pale; and no more would all the debaſements of the Creature, though directed and intended to give glory unto God. But if there were another Sun as glorious as this, and you ſhould ſee it hide its brightneſs in this Suns preſence, as if not worthy to ſhine together with it, that the Sun might alone appear: Or if you ſhould ſee a King as great in Majeſty as ours, come and leavē his Kingdom and Royalty, and debaſe himſelf to honour our King; what an Honour adds this to the King, when as it would not be ſo much for a Subject to do this. And this makes the Popes glory ſo extravagant and tranſcendent, that Kings give their glory and power to him, and kiſs his feet. Now ſo did Chriſt lower his glory to Gods, when he was equal in ſubſtantial glory to him. All the glory of the Creatures is but accidental, put upon them as garments are, they ſhine alienis radiis as Stars with anothers beams. Thus in Kings, all their glory is accidental to their Perſons, therefore Chriſt ſayes, the glory of the Lillies exceeded that of Solomon, Matth. 6. 29. becauſe it was native and inbred in compariſon of his; but Chriſts is glory ſubſtan-tial, reſiding in his Perſon, as Light in the Body of the Sun. Accidental Glory, ſuch as in Kings, doth not give a worth to all their Actions, they ſleep, eat, drink, &c. as other Men, and theſe Actions are no more Royal in them than in other Men, they do not all they do as Kings, but where ſubſtantial Glory dwells it transfuſeth a value into every thing that is done; and therefore Chriſts Glory being his Eſſence (as he is God) it diffuſeth a Royalty on all his Actions, and ſo the leaſt debaſement of him to give Glory to God, how infinite a value muſt it put upon it! He having (as I ſhewed out of the Text) an equal Glory to his Father, and ſo his condeſcention makes at leaſt the Scales even.

But then there are even in this reſpect ſome Conſiderations, that make the reflection of Diſhonour on Chriſts ſubſtantial Glory, greater than that by Sin on Gods, and ſo to outweigh it.

1. Becauſe the Creatures Act is but a tendency, or at moſt, an attempt to eclipſe this Glory of God, and therein falls ſhort in compariſon; for it is but as if a Moat ſhould go about to eclipſe the Son, when the Sun ſhines round about it ſtill; But theſe debaſements of the Sun of God, equal with God, are Real, and they being Arbitrary and done by himſelf, and from himſelf, are therefore greater and deeper than what the Creature could any way effect, for he himſelf that is God, debaſeth himſelf.

Yea, And Secondly, There is a Perſonal Glory proper to the Second Perſon as ſuch which was leſſened and reflected on, beſides his Eſſential Glory, as I may ſo diſtinguiſh it. For there is an Eſſential Glory common to all Three Perſons, the Glory of the God-head, which is properly the Object of Sin; and few or no Sins are peculiarly againſt that proper Perſonal Glory of any of the Perſons apart. When we ſin, we ſin no more againſt the Father, than againſt the Son, and Holy Ghoſt; and even that Sin againſt the Holy Ghoſt is rather againſt the Effects of the Holy Ghoſt, than againſt his Perſon diſtinctly conſidered of by the Sinner. Now then in this debaſement of Chriſt, there was not only a Reflection on his God-head, as it is common to him with the other Two Perſons, but that Perſonal Glory proper to him, as he was the Second Perſon, was in a further peculiar manner reflected on, and this in every debaſement of his Yea, That Perſonal Glory was in ſome reſpect leſſened; For beſides that his Father was greater than he in a true ſenſe, upon the aſſuming of Mans Nature; He was alſo made leſs than other Men, and the Terminus or Subject of this leſſening or diminution was truely the Son of God. For although it cannot be ſaid that the God-head ſuffered, yet of the Second Perſon it may now truely be ſaid, he ſuffered as well in, as that he was made Fleſh. Now the Perſonal Glory of the other Perſons is not debaſed or leſſened by Sin, becauſe they do not Perſonally manifeſt themſelves; but the Second Perſon did Perſonally manifeſt himſelf, and preſent himſelf to Men, and his Perſon was made the ſole Butt, Mark, Subject, Terminus of all the Diſhonour done the Godhead in him, his Perſon was ſingled out to bear it, and be the ſole Receptacle thereof; ſo as he being thus debaſed, this Diſhonour reflected on his Perſon and the Glory thereof, beſides what in common fell upon his Eſſential Glory, his God-head, and ſo he came to have a further, and more ſpecial debaſement than the God-head had by Sin.

But then in the Second place let us make the compariſon between the obſcuring the manifeſted Glory of God detracted from by Sin, and the Diſhonour done to Chriſts manifeſted Glory, which is the Second thing, and you will find his loſſes in that manifeſtative Glory that was due to him to exceed Gods loſſes in the diſhonour done to his. For as was ſaid, the manifeſtative Glory due to Chriſt at his appearing in the Fleſh perſonally, muſt needs be more than what the God-head any other wayes could have ever manifeſted in Effects, be they never ſo tranſcendent. As more Honour is due unto a King if he appears in Perſon, than if his Arms only be ſet up, or Proclamation be made in his Name, or than unto his Picture or Coyn; ſo by the like reaſon unto God manifeſted in the fleſh (as it is ſaid of Chriſt, 1 Tim. 3. 16.) a greater manifeſtation of Glory is due then unto God, but manifeſt in his works, as Rom. 1. 19, 20. and ſo more was to have ſhone in Chriſt the expreſs Image of the Inviſible God, (as Coloſ. 1. 15. and Heb. 1. 3.) than in Gods Works, which are but the foot-ſteps of the inviſible things of God, or in his Law, which is but the ſhadow of his Glory, Heb. 10. 1. For the law having a ſhadow of good things to come, and not the very image of the things, can never with thoſe ſacrifices which they offered year by year continually, make the comers thereunto perfect. Now that manifeſted Glory of Gods (of which alone properly and really Sin is the Obſcurer and the Detracter from) is but that which ſhineth in in his Law, which we ſin againſt, or as he is manifeſted to us in his Works; and this Glory due to ſhine in Chriſts Perſon manifeſted in the Humane Nature, muſt needs infinitely tranſcend the Glory of all thoſe, yea, and in his Perſon doth now ſhine more of the God-head dwelling in him, than in all his own Works of Redemption wrought by himſelf, which yet exceed thoſe of Creation wrought by God. And therefore that he ſhould empty himſelf of all that Glory due to him the firſt Hour he aſſumed our Nature, he muſt needs loſe more than God either did, or ever can come to loſe by Sinners, and ſo the ſatisfaction in that reſpect doth ſuper-abound. Yea, and this manifeſtative Glory was as truely his due, as his Fathers Glory was due to him, or ought to have been given the Father by us his Creatures, either upon the manifeſtation of his Glory in his Works or Holy Law, in which the God-head ſhined; for becauſe ſuch a Glory was his right, therefore all that great Name or Dignity he hath above the Angels he is ſaid to have by Inheritance, Heb. 1. 4.

Chap. 11.

CHAP. XI.

That upon the whole it is evident, That there is all in the ſatisfaction made by Chriſt, which Juſtice can require. An Enumeration of the ſeveral Pleas which may be fram'd againſt the Sinner, and how they are all anſwer'd by what our Redeemer hath perform'd.

NOW theſe general grounds of ſatisfaction for Sin being laid, if Juſtice will yet contend, or Satan, or the Sinners Conſcience dare to avouch or produce any of thoſe particulars which were found in Sin ſo tranſcendently ſinful as exceeded all the Creatures ſatisfaction; I make Proclamation here in open Court, and do challenge Heaven and Earth, things viſible and inviſible, to bring in their Bills and Aggravations of a Sinners ſinfulneſs; and they ſhall ſee a juſt and full, and particular diſcharge unto higheſt ſatisfaction: And for a Tryal we will go over all thoſe particular Damages in Honour, which afore were mentioned and require ſatisfaction for them, and you ſhall ſee that what Chriſt hath done, will in all things punctually and particularly make amends for them.

Firſt, If we reckon Honour due to God left behind unpayd, which all the Creatures are never able to reſtore, becauſe all they can do is due for themſelves, and therefore they cannot afford an over-plus of Glory to repay what is loſt: Yet Chriſt is able to make amends. For he who was thus glorious to the higheſt degree, (and it was his due by Inheritance) he layd aſide his Honour, made himſelf of no Reputation, ſo the Text ſaies, yea, emptied himſelf of all, became vain, left himſelf diſrobed and deſpoyled of all, I am a worm and no man, ſaies the Pſalmiſt Pſal. 22. 6. of him, he made himſelf nothing, became nothing, not in Being or Subſtance, but in Account and Reputation. It is ſaid of Herod and his Men, they did ſet him at nought, made no body of him, and when we ſaw him we eſteemed him not, ſaies the Prophet, ſpeaking concerning the Jews uſage of him, Iſa. 53. 3. Yea, they call'd it Blaſphemy in him when he but meekly challenged his own, and told them for their good he was the Son of God. If God ſhould reckon what manifeſtation of Glory all thoſe that have, or ſhall ſin againſt him had been able, or ought to have brought in to him, and which thorough their Negligence and Omiſſion is now for ever loſt, it will be found to hold no proportion unto what was to have been manifeſted in Chriſt God-Man the firſt hour of his Aſſumption. For when he had aſſumed our Nature Perſonally, there muſt needs be a greater brightneſs (as the Author to the Hebrews ſtiles it, Heb. 1. 3.) a more glorious gleam or iſſuing forth of ſplendor was to accompany and ſhine forth in that Nature ſo united, than could poſſibly reſult to God out of all other wayes of revealing himſelf whatever. Becauſe they all are of a lower kind, and inferiour unto this, this is a manifeſtation of the God-head altioris ordinis of a Superiour Kind and Order to all other. If himſelf perſonally appears, his Glory muſt alſo appear as the Glory of the only begotten Son of God. But he ſuffered all this utterly to be vail'd and clouded, though ſometime perchance as it were a beam broke forth thorough a cranney, that as John ſayes, We ſaw his glory as the only begotten Son of God, John 1. 14. Which yet was rather to make them believe what he was, than any way to glorifie himſelf; but otherwiſe he ſtole into the World as a Prince diſguiſed, and lived as an Exile, debarred and kept from wearing that Crown of Glory which ſhould have been ſet upon his Head the firſt hour. He ſtood out of his Glory for Three and Thirty years which was due to him aſſoon as he was conceived, therefore it comes in, Jeſus was not yet glorified, John 7. 39. What not yet, not after Thirty Three years dwelling in fleſh and debaſement? Why to ſtay for his Crown one hour, in that one hour he ſhould loſe more than ever God could loſe, in all that the Creatures could afford him in all thoſe wayes he had manifeſted himſelf to them by, unto Eternity, or in any other way than by the Aſſumption of a Creature he could ever ſhew. And yet I ſay this Glory was his due the firſt minute, for when he came into the World, when he firſt landed, it is proclaimed, Let all the angels of God worſhip him, Heb. 1. 6. and even as much was due then, as he now wears in Heaven, or as he put forth on the Holy Mount. He hath not increaſed his Perſonal Glory by his own Merits, nil meruit ſibi, in that reſpect he deſerved as great and high a Name for Perſonal Glory as he hath now in Heaven, for the great Name he hath by Inheritance, Heb. 1. 4. I ſay Perſonal Glory as much was his due the firſt day: For I confeſs there is a glory ſhines out of his works of Mediation and a Glory of his Offices which is additional to his Perſonal Glory due unto his Perſon. If a meer Creature that had done never ſo much Service to God, had been content to have ſtood out of that Glory, which as a reward God had promiſed unto him, this would not have ſatisfied for Gods loſs of Honour by Sin as this of Chriſt doth; For beſides that, the loſs of the Creature had not been equal to what God loſt, as his was (as hath been ſhewn) even more than God could otherwiſe expect in his manifeſtation in his Works; the Glory due to that Creature as a reward of its Service, being but by promiſe, out of favour, could never have come up to ſatisfaction: But the Glory due to Chriſt was by Inheritance deſcended to him, when once united to God by Natural Right, ſo as though he was Man, yet that Man being one in Perſon with the Son of God, is not to be reckoned the Adopted Son of God, but the Natural Son of God, and ſo his Glory was anſwerable, not borrowed, but Natural to him and by Right, not as one who holds it by promiſe only, but as inheriting it. We ſaw his glory as of the only begotten Son of God, John 1. 14. a Glory that was proper to him, ſuch as he who was the Son of God muſt neceſſarily have, and that by Inheritance, as his Right. Thus much for the firſt part of the Bill, Honour loſt to God.

Well

Chap. 11.

Well, but Juſtice will plead yet further dammage, not only of Honour omitted and neglected to be given, but of Honour robbed, ſtolen from God and given away to Creatures, and ſo debaſed; changing the glory of the incorruptible God, into an image made like to corruptible man and fowls, &c. Rom. 1. 23. Now behold, Chriſt did that which well may make amends, for he not only emptyed himſelf, and ſtood out of Honour, but humbled himſelf to the death of the Croſs; which beſides the pain had alſo the higheſt ſhame accompanying it, put upon his Perſon in it; therefore we find both joyned, Heb. 12. 2. He endured the croſs, and deſpiſed the ſhame. And now bring in all the Objections and Aggravations of Diſhonour done to God, and ſee them all equall'd and exceeded in his debaſement.

Firſt, Doth the evil of Sin lye in a diſhonour done by ſuch baſe Creatures as we are, to a God ſo glorious; and is it indeed the infinite diſproportion between him and us makes the guilt thereof ſo hainous? Why if this Perſon ſo great as Chriſt was, and whoſe eſſential glory is equal with his Father, if he will ſubject himſelf to the loweſt debaſement that is poſſible, ſo as between that his glory, the glory of his Perſon, and this his debaſement, ſhall be as great a diſtance every way found as between the Creatures and the glory they are able to give to God, or God to receive from them; this muſt needs anſwer to, and fill up the diſproportion. But there was a greater diſtance; for he that is equal with God, takes upon him the form of a Servant, and will ſubject himſelf to God, and if that be not low enough, he ſubjects himſelf to the baſeſt of Creatures, yea and will fall lower yet, to the baſeſt condition of Creatures, yea as low as Hell it ſelf, and for ſubſtance endure the ſame anguiſh which the damned there do, and ſhall not this make amends? If Sin hath offended Gods glory as far as he can be offended, quantum offendibilis eſt, he ſubjects himſelf quantum ſubjicibilis eſt, as far as he can be ſubject. If Sin exalts a Creature above God, in lieu of it, God will debaſe himſelf below all Creatures, and of all conditions take the baſeſt, will not this his falling ſo low riſe up in all apprehenſion to higheſt ſatisfaction?

Again Secondly, If you ſay Gods Prerogative and Soveraignty is affronted by every Sin; Chriſt though he can ſtand upon his Prerogative as much as God, being equal with him, yet he lets it fall, layes it down, yea ſtands and holds up his hand at a bar as a Malefactour. Yea it is that very Prerogative of his, and his being a King, that was the greateſt exception which they had againſt him, gloria fit crimen, his glory is turned into his ſhame; he is condemned to death for an Uſurper and an Impoſtour, for ſaying he was the Meſſiah, and King of the Jews. It was written as the Title on his Croſs, of what he ſuffered for; and though he tells them that he was a King, and above a King, which was that good Confeſſion which Paul puts Timothy in mind of, which he made afore Pilate, yet Pilate thinks himſelf a better Man than he, Have I not power to condemn thee? And will not Chriſts thus diveſting himſelf of all his Royalty in like manner make amends?

Thirdly, Is not only Gods Prerogative, which he backs his Law with, contemned, but all his glorious Perfections ſlighted and denyed, as his Wiſdom, Holineſs, &c.? So were all the Excellencies in Chriſt debaſed.

1. His Perſon was debaſed, He ſaid he was the Son of God; let God ſave him if he will have him, ſay they of him when he hung on the Croſs. Matth. 27. 43.

2. All his Offices are blaſphemed.

(1.) Prophetical; Propheſie to us, ſay they in a jeer when they buffeted him, Matth. 26. 68. and tell us who it was that ſmote thee: He will one day tell him that did it, at the day of Judgment.

(2.) Alſo his Kingly Office, Matth. 27. 42. If he be the King of Iſrael let him come down; and they mocking him.

And (3.) His Prieſtly Office alſo; He ſaved others, himſelf he cannot ſave, ſay they in deſpite. Matth. 27. 42. They ſay this when he was doing that very thing they mockt him for, namely ſaving others, it was his buſineſs he hung upon the Croſs to finiſh.

Book III.

As thus his Person and Offices, so all his Attributes suffered contempt. Though he was the Wisdom of his Father, and discovered more than appears in all the Works of Creation and the Law, yet how is he slighted as unlearned? He knowes not letters, (say they, John 7. 15.) And who are his followers? None but the People that know not the Law. Joh. 7. 49. And how is Moses preferred before him; John 9. 29. As for this fellow, we know not whence he is: So how do they scoff at his Omniscience, Tell us who it is that smote thee? Matth. 26. 68. As if when they had blinded him, and covered his Eyes, they thought they had hood-winked his All-seeing Eye also. He that is Truth it self is counted a deceiver of the people; yea he that is Holiness it self is reckoned amongst transgressours, Isa. 53. 12. yea the greatest of Sinners; and this not by Men only but by God himself, by whom he was made sin that knew no sin, 2 Cor. 5. ult. so that by imputation, he was the greatest Sinner that ever yet the World had, as Luther used to speak. He was made as it were, a sink into which the guilt of all Sin was drained; The iniquities of us all did meet in him. Isa. 53. 6. His Body on the Tree was made the Centre of all Sins, as so many Lines coming in upon him from the circumference of all Ages. Yea, and he was not only to be accounted a Sinner by others, but he was himself to do such Actions whereby he ipso facto acknowledged himself such, as to fulfil the Ceremonial Law, to be Circumcised, &c. which was our Bond, whereby we acknowledged our selves Debtors to the Law, and he set his hand to it, as acknowledging the Debt. And now methinks he that was Holiness it self should least of all have brooked this dishonour, what made SIN! Why? 'Tis that which he only hates, which his pure Eyes abhor to look upon, and yet he must quietly bear the name of it, and take upon him the guilt of it, as if it were his own; a greater indignity than for the chastest Woman to be called a Whore. I will say no more but this; He that was the great God was called Devil, and content to put it up.

Lastly, The Being and Life of God makes Sin most odious, as being that which Sin in the nature of the Act tends to take away from God: For (as was said) as he that hateth his Brother is a murtherer, 1 John 3. 15. so he that hateth God is a murtherer of him, (though it doth him no hurt) in the attempt or rather tendency of the Act, though not in the attempt or intention of the Sinner, and therefore the life of all meer Creatures will never make amends, no more than the life of a Traytor ever can for murthering his Prince, only it is all the satisfaction that can be had: And so in Hell God takes their lives for it, because it is all that can be gotten. But now come we to Christ, he of whom it is said, that he hath life in himself, John 5. 26. and is the living God, is content really to be murthered, and put to death: Murtherers (sayes Peter to the Jews, Acts 3. 15.) ye have killed the Prince of life; and Paul sayes, They crucified the Lord of glory. And though it was but in the Flesh that he was Crucified, as Peter elsewhere distinguisheth, yet the Life he laid down was the Life of his Person; and as it is called the Blood of God which was shed, so this was the Life of God which was taken away; therefore John 10. 17, 18. Christ there calls it his Life, I have power to lay down my life, and take it up again. None could say so much, but he who was God, but he who is the Lord of Life; and it is more plainly expressed, 1 Joh. 3. 16. Hereby we perceived the love of God, because he laid down his life for us: It was the Life of God, and that in so true and real a sense, as therein the utmost of his Love appeared. Yea further, he not only dyed, but Death held him a while under it, as a Conquerour of him; therefore Romans 6. 9. Death is said to have once had dominion over him. Now this true and real laying down of his Life must needs be more satisfactory unto God, than the attempt or rather tendency that is in the Act of Sin to take Gods Life away, can be reputed heinous.

You may remember when we did set forth (in that First Part of this Discourse) Sins sinfulness, and the evil of it against God, wherein it was that it exceeded all the goodness of the Creature (which yet was for God, as well as Sin is ſaid to be againſt God) we pitcht it upon this, The unduneſs of the act of diſhonour done to God by the Creatures; whereas all the honour their Graces bring in to him, is due from them towards him: Now therefore let us ſee if even in this particular, the evil of Sin be not exceeded by Chriſts Satisfaction alſo, that nothing may be omitted that may ſatisfie a Sinners reaſon about the allſufficiency of this Satisfaction. This undueneſs of the act of diſhonour was the higheſt and utmoſt aggravation of Mans ſinfulneſs, and did caſt the ballance, and was found to weigh heavier than all the Creatures goodneſs. Now let us put Chriſts debaſement of himſelf into the ballance with it, and we ſhall ſee it far over-ballanced even by this, that all this debaſement of his to glorifie God was infinitely more undue, which naturally riſeth thus to all Mens apprehenſions. Chap. 11.

Sin

1*ſt*. In that it was ſuch a way of giving Honour to God by him, as God himſelf could no way challenge as his due from the Second Perſon towards him, for he was equal with him. He did owe indeed (as all the Perſons do one to another, a mutual Honour) an Honour unto God, even as Kings mutually Honour one another, yet ſtill but as equals uſe to do. And if as Man, being made inferiour to God, he owed Subjection, yet ſtill not in this way of debaſing himſelf. He honoured his Father, and his Father the Son from all Eternity; for as they Love one another, ſo they give Honour one to another: But that God ſhould have Honour this way by having his Son, a Perſon his equal, become inferiour to him, and obedient, and that ſo far as to Death, and to profeſs that he did it freely at his Command, this was in it ſelf more than could be challenged as due from him by God, and therefore muſt needs be a full amends for any diſhonour thrown on him by Sin. It is as if the King of Spain ſhould come out of his own Kingdom, and admit himſelf into this of ours, and ſubject himſelf to our King and his Lawes, thereby to make our King ſeem greater; what an Honour were it to him? More than all his Subjects can do to him all ſorts of wayes, in which they can be ſubject.

And 2*dly*, As Chriſts debaſement was thus undue in reſpect that God could not exact it from him but by his own voluntary compact; ſo moſt of all undue it was, if we conſider that which ſo often hath been inculcated; viz. the glory that himſelf could challenge as his due, and that by right of Inheritance, and how great that was, and how due it was, hath been declared; and for him to be ſo debaſed, how infinitely undue was it in this reſpect alſo? Of Sins undueneſs it may be ſaid, Hear oh heavens and hearken O earth; that men ſhould ſin and rebel againſt the great God, ſo undue an act it is and unworthy of the Creature: But when we think or ſpeak of this debaſement of the Son of God, equal with God, to whom ſo much glory is due: Oh ſtand aſtoniſht at it all you Angels, and Men; and with meer amazement fall and ſhrink into your firſt nothing, to think that ever it ſhould be ſaid, and be a truth, that the great God, the Lord of Glory ſhould be crucified, the Lord of Life killed. I appeal to you all, if this be not an act infinitely more unworthy and as much out of courſe, more horrid to the thoughts of Men and Angels than Sin can be ſuppoſed to be. That a baſe Creature ſhould ſin againſt God, it is a thing to be wondred at indeed as a ſtrange indignity; but yet the Creatures, if they know themſelves, may well know, yea and fear, that they being but Creatures, they may do it too ſoon, as the beſt of them did, and it was a wonder rather that any ſtood: But that the Lord of Glory ſhould be thus debaſed and killed, no Creature durſt have thought it, if they had conceived it poſſible; but it is ſo abhorrent as it could never have entred into their thoughts had not God done it, and it is marvellous in our eyes.

And Laſtly, That Sin may have nothing left to boaſt of, and that we may omit nothing that may, or hath been any way pleaded about Sins ſinfulneſs, but ſee it out-pleaded, and caſt, and exceeded by this Satisfaction of Chriſts: Let us put into the ballance likewiſe thoſe evil effects mentioned alſo in that firſt part of this Diſcourſe, whereby the heinouſneſs of Sin was demonſtrated to tranſcend the goodneſs of the Creatures Graces in any effects of their goodneſs:

goodneſs: You ſhall find the effects of Chriſts Righteouſneſs to abound far above them.

For Firſt, His Actions, by reaſon of the Dignity of his Perſon, do pleaſe God more than Sin can diſpleaſe him. For if our Works, although full of Sin, are yet by reaſon of our union with Chriſt as our Head, made ſo acceptable as to pleaſe God more than the Sin in them doth diſpleaſe him; how muſt his own Works be accepted wrought in himſelf in our Nature hypoſtatically united to him.

Secondly, And therefore if Sin hath that inſeparable evil (as was ſaid) in the Nature of it, that where it is found it condemns all, though the Creature had been in former times never ſo Righteous, nor never ſo long ſuch: So hath Chriſts Righteouſneſs that inſeparable Royalty to ſave and juſtifie, though Sins be never ſo great and many; ſo Rom. 5. 17. he compares both the one and the other; If condemnation came by one mans diſobedience; how much more ſhall by an abundance of his righteouſneſs juſtification be unto life; ſo as if he will impute this Righteouſneſs, and account it to the uglieſt Sinner in the World, then by vertue of the imputation he cannot but juſtifie him, and pronounce him as worthy of Eternal Life as the greateſt and the holieſt Angel in Heaven; for this Righteouſneſs claims it by the Merit of it, when once the Sinner can call it his. And although one Sin ſpoils and makes void all the good in any Creature, though it hath been of never ſo long continuance; yet his Righteouſneſs on the contrary is Sin-proof for time to come, and hath the worth of his Perſon, who is the great God, to give power to it to prevail againſt all Sins paſt, preſent and to come; it is an everlaſting righteouſneſs, Dan. 9. 24. ſuch as which Sinners can never ſpend or evacuate: And if Sin take away the juſtifying power from Grace, his Righteouſneſs takes away the condemning power from Sin: There is no condemnation to them that are in Chriſt; for it condemneth ſin it ſelf. Rom. 8. 1, 3. There is therefore now no condemnation to them which are in Chriſt Jeſus, who walk not after the fleſh, but after the Spirit. Ver. 3. For what the law could not do, in that it was weak through the fleſh, God ſending his own Son, in the likeneſs of ſinful fleſh, and for ſin condemned ſin in the fleſh.

CHAP. XII.

That all the Pleas which the Law can make againſt a Sinner are by this Satisfaction of Chriſt alſo fully Anſwered.

AND now we have ſhown ſuch abundant Satisfaction given to God in point of his Honour, the Law methinks may well ſet down and never ſo much as mention the Debt that is its due; yet if the Law will needs bring in her Bill alſo, there will be found Satisfaction full enough for its claim alſo.

And Firſt in general, What is the Law? The Will, Word and Command of the great God: Well but Chriſt is the Word of his Father in an higher and more glorious ſenſe; the Original of this Word and Law. This is but the Copy of what is ſubſtantial in him, he is therefore called ὁ λόγος, the Word. John 1. 1. Yea, and is not Chriſt the maker and the giver of that Law, Gal. 3. 19.? And if he that made the Law will be made under the Law, as Gal. 4. 4. he was, and enter into bond to the Law, and give the Law power over him, as a Servant and an Apprentice to it; make himſelf a Debtor to it and fulfil it, will not this make amends? We might make very ſhort work with the Laws Suit but by calling for her Bond which once ſhe had to ſhew againſt thoſe Chriſt dyed for; Therefore let the Law ſhew and bring in that Bond into open Court; She returns Anſwer, That ſhe hath it not; we find then that it is taken out of the way, Coloſ. 2. 14. But how, and by whom, not ſurreptitiouſly and by ſtealth, or by force and violence, but openly in the face of the Court of Juſtice, and by whom? Chriſt blotting it out, nailing it to his Croſs, and triumphing openly, ſaies the 15. verſe, and before the Judges Face. The Moral Law that was the Creditor, and the Bond which God appointed the Jews to give in, whereby to acknowledge the Debt was the Ceremonial Law, therefore ſayes the Apoſtle, he that is circumciſed (upon which the Bond was Entred into, and Sealed) is a Debtor to the whole law. Now in token that the Debt is paid, we find the Bond cancelled, and now ſhe hath nothing to ſhew againſt Believers ſo as to condemn us, and this is Evidence ſufficient. But yet if the Law, or any Legal Conſcience would notwithſtanding have further ſatisfaction, and put us to prove and ſhew how the particular Debts due thereunto were payd and diſcharged, both that of Service to be done, and fulfilling all the Law, by Active Obedience, and then by Paſſive Obedience alſo, and know how the Puniſhment and Curſe threatned was undergone: The particular diſcharge is yet upon Record; Chriſt hath done both fully; and what he hath done and ſuffered hath that in it which the Obedience and Sufferings of no pure Creature could have had, nor could have ſatisfied as his hath done. It is a point I ſhall ſpeak of after, when I ſhall ſhew the fulneſs of parts that is in his Obedience, yet I ſhall ſay a little now, and enough to ſtop the Laws Mouth, for this is but a ruder draught of what more particularly we will fill up.

Firſt, He fulfilled the Law in Service and Obedience performed unto it for the ſpace of Thirty Three years, John 8. 29. I do alwaies the things that pleaſe him. The Text too ſayes, He was a Servant, and obedient uſque ad mortem, until Death, Phil. 2. 8. and therefore all his Life. He there mentions that Obedience in lieu of Service due by us; and although Creatures could fulfil the Law, yet they could not perform it for us, and for themſelves too, becauſe the Law requires all they can do for themſelves, and what they do, is not their own, but what Chriſt doeth ſhall ſtand for both. To go no further now than the Text for clearing this.

Firſt, Though as Chriſt was Man, the Law required Obedience of him for himſelf, when once he is become a Man, and had once aſſumed our Nature, yet being before his Aſſumption equal with God (which the Text on purpoſe mentions to ſhew the worth of his Obedience) and at his choice to have continued free for ever from all ſubjection; that he ſhould take upon him voluntarily this condition of a Servant (as the Phraſe he became obedient importeth, and he was Servus factus, non natus, ſo Gal. 4. 4. made under the law.) This Act of ſuch a Perſon and thus free, doth make all the Obedience he upon this performed to ſtand both for himſelf and for others alſo; For the Righteouſneſs the Manhood performed, his Perſon had no need of. And then again the Aſſumption of this Nature was agreed on by Covenant, and this by a more Ancient Law and Decree made in Heaven ere there were any Creatures extant to give the Moral Law unto; whereby it was agreed that the Service he did in that Nature ſhould juſtifie others; ſo Iſa. 53, My ſervant ſhall juſtifie many, though a Servant, yet his Service was not for himſelf, but others. And again, though as a Man he is ſubject, yet that Man is perſonally united to the Godhead, and ſo partakes of all his Royalties, whereof one is to be Lord of the Law, Matth. 12. 18. and therefore his fulfilling the Law is truely the Obedience of God the Lord thereof as well as his Blood is the Blood of God. The Creatures have no Relation or Priviledge whereby they can plead Exemption from the Law, but ſo can he, but all that the Creatures have is neceſſarily and wholly ſubject, and therefore all which they can do is only for themſelves: But his Perſon is equal Book III. with God, and in that Relation (which over-ballanceth all other) is free and ſubject not neceſſarily but voluntarily, and that by a Covenant made on purpoſe, the Condition whereof was to aſſume the Nature and the Form of a Servant in it, meerly to juſtifie others, and therefore will ſtand good for us againſt the Law Jehovah that hath no need of acquiſite Righteouſneſs, is our Righteouſneſs Jer. 23. 6. And,

Secondly, Though Creatures could not by their Active Obedience ſatisfie for another, becauſe what they did was not their own, nay, it was but borrowed; yet he could ſay his Soul was his own (as we uſe to ſpeak) and that his Life was his own, which no Creature could ſay, they cannot ſay their Service is their own, and Grace their own. And this propriety in what he had, did, or ſuffered, the Scripture often puts an Emphaſis upon, as that which conduceth to ſatisfaction, as when it is ſaid he waſht us with his own Blood, Rev. 1. 4. And I will lay down my Life and take it up again, and John 16. 14. He ſhall receive of mine. And though as ſome of the Schoolmen object, Chriſts Humane Nature and all his Actions were ſub dominio Dei under the Dominion of God, as Creatures, and God, had an Intereſt in them, yet this Humane Nature and all that it could perform was in another Relation ſo peculiarly the Second Perſons own, as it was not the other Perſons, namely his own by Perſonal Union, which propriety was incommunicable to the other Perſons. Habitual Grace, though it was the work of the Holy Ghoſt, Luke 1. 35. yet due unto the Humane Nature when united as its own; and as the Humane Nature was to be called not the Adopted Son of God but the Natural, ſo the Grace in that Humane Nature might be called now it is united to the God-head connatural to him. And though the firſt Grace of Union was meer Grace, yet that Grace was Aouchſafed to the Humane Nature, not the Divine, ſubſiſting in the Second Perſon, who as ſuch is the Perſon who owneth all both Graces and Actions in the Humane, and is the Proprietor of them, and he it was who was leſſened by that Aſſumption. Yea and beſides, When once that Humane Nature is aſſumed, then all the Dues and Rights of that Perſon, as to be full of Grace, and Lord of Glory, &c. was due and proper to him as the only begotten Son of God, John 1. 14. And the Word was made fleſh, and dwelt among us (and we beheld his glory, the glory as of the only begotten of the Father) full of grace and truth. And Grace was not given to him as a meer Servant to give Account of, but he entred upon it as a Lord, for if he be the Lord of glory, as 1 Cor. 2. 8. then the Lord of Grace too, and he is not as Moſes, as a Servant, but as a Son in his own Houſe, Heb. 3. 5, 6. and ſo there are theſe great and juſt reſpects upon his Obedience that it was free, and his Perſon not ſubject to that Law which he fulfilled.

And whereas the Creatures muſt have gone over their Works again and again to Eternity, done nothing but written the blurr'd Copy of their Obedience, Copy after Copy in their Lives, and ſo have made nothing perfect; there is in Chriſt a fulfilling of it but once by him which will ſerve for that Eternal Debt of Active Obedience: And as by once offering of himſelf, Heb. 10. 14. ſo by one Righteouſneſs and Obedience, Rom. 5. 18. that is, once gone over, he is able to juſtifie us for ever. And therefore he tells his Apoſtles a little afore his Death, that he had now but one thing to do, and that was to drink of the laſt Cup, and how do I long ſayes he, till it be accompliſht! And at his Death he tells his Father, John 17. 4. I have finiſhed the work which thou gaveſt me to do. And ſo he having diſpatcht the Active part, he had ſpace enough left to undergo the Paſſive, which as I ſhewed in the firſt part of this Diſcourſe, no Creature was capable of. Nay further, he can do both at once, in obeying, ſuffer; and in ſuffering, obey; and each ſucceſſively, ſo as God ſhall be no loſer by the one or the other; and in the end can ſay of both, it is finiſhed. Thus much for the Debt of Active Obedience.

Now if we come to Paſſive Obedience, we ſhall find that he was able ſo to undergo it, as ſhall put that worth into it, as it ſhall ſoon be finiſht, and be yet ſatisfactory.

Firſt,

Chap. 12.

Firſt, Whereas no Creature could have ſo much as borne the imputation of Sin (which yet was neceſſary to ſatisfaction) for it would have withered and ſhrivel'd up all their Grace, becauſe their Grace is all but waſhy ſtuff, and but as a gilding by Gold ſlightly overlaid; now Chriſts Grace is ſubſtantial, it was as Gold it ſelf, therefore it was Sin-proof. He can be made ſin, and yet his Grace continue, as ours doth not, when Adams Sin is imputed. Grace maintains it ſelf in him not by a Covenant of Works, but by the Perſonal Union and the Rights thereof, and ſo can bear the guilt of all our ſins, and his Grace never a whit the worſe for it; his Perſon is unpeccable, and ſo uncapable of hurt by the imputation of Sin.

Secondly, The Life and the Comforts thereof which he layes down, and ſacrificeth, is his own. His Life is not due to God, as is the Creatures, for it is given him to have life in himſelf, John 5. 26. And I have power over my life to take it up and lay it down, ſaies he. God that hath power over Life and Death, hath not power over his, John 10. 17, 18. Therefore doth my Father love me, becauſe I lay down my life, that I might take it again. ver. 18. No man taketh it from me, but I lay it down of my ſelf: I have power to lay it down, and I have power to take it again. This commandment have I received of my Father. So as whatever he loſeth in ſuffering for us ſhall be his own, he will not borrow any thing to ſuffer with, but all he offers is his own, as it muſt be, if it be a mediating Death. He was able to offer up himſelf, and ſo be his own Sacrifice, Altar and Prieſt; he borrowed nothing, and this all at once, and this no Creature could do.

1. He being God, was able to be his own Prieſt, and in dying offered up himſelf to God, and needed no other Prieſt; ſo Heb. 9. 14. thorough his Eternal Spirit he offered up himſelf. Yea, And

2. He finds a Sacrifice alſo, which was in a true reſpect his own, a reſpect wherein it was not Gods, himſelf offering up his Body, Heb. 10. 10. and pouring forth his Soul an Offering for Sin, Iſa. 53. 10 And,

3. He is the Altar himſelf, Heb. 13. 10. We have an altar whereof they have no right to eat, which ſerve the tabernacle. And ſo he offers all upon his own coſt, and borrows nothing.

Now in the laſt place, Let us take a brief ſurvey of all thoſe inſeparable inconveniencies (mentioned in the firſt part of this Diſcourſe) which we found to attend upon, and clog the Paſſive Obedience of all meer Creatures, if they ſhould preſume to undertake it, and you ſhall ſee them all to melt away, and come to nothing before his fulneſs. As,

Firſt, The Creatures would very hardly have ſo much as dared to die and undergo it for us, Rom. 5. 7. For a good man peradventure one would dare die, Jer. 10. 31. Who hath ingaged his heart, ſaies God, to draw nigh unto me? No Creature durſt do it, but only this one that ſhall come out of the midſt of you; (as there) he ſhall draw near to me; He durſt encounter with his Fathers wrath; He hath the hardineſs to encounter with it, and to bear it and not be broken. The wrath of God it broke the backs of Angels, but Iſa. 42. 14. My Servant, ſays he, whom I uphold, ſhall not be broken. Again,

Secondly, Will he be overcome with it, or alwayes ſatisfying? No, whereas if any of the Creatures had had the boldneſs to undertake it, yet they muſt have been alwayes ſatisfying, and ſo we ſhould never have come to have our Bond out; But Chriſt will bear it, ſo as to come at laſt to ſay, It is finiſhed, as he did ſay at his Death. He that was to be our Mediator, was to riſe again as a Conqueror over Death, to overcome Hell, Gods Wrath, and not lye wreſtling under them to Eternity; for if he had layn by it, and had been kept in Priſon, ſo long the Debt had not been paid. If ever therefore he will juſtifie us by his Death, he muſt overcome and riſe again, elſe we ſhould ſtill be in our ſins, as 1 Cor, 15. 17. And if Chriſt be not raiſed, your faith is vain; you are yet in your ſins. And this no Creature could ever do, Gods Wrath would have held him tugging work to Eternity, and they never have riſen again from under it. He that overcomes that, muſt be as ſtrong as God himſelf; Yea, and he mnſt do this himſelf, by his own Power too. 'Twas not enough to be raiſed up as Lazarus was by the Power of another, that will not ſerve to ſatisfie for a Sinner: For that Power that raiſed him, muſt firſt ſatisfie and overcome Gods Wrath, eluctate, and break open the Priſon Doors. Now if another Power than his own had done it, that Party that helpt him had been in part the Mediator, and ſo not he. But Chriſt being God, he is able to do all this, and to do it by his own Power: For,

1. Being God, he was backt with that Power that was able to raiſe him up and to looſe the pains of Death; yea and it was impoſſible he ſhould be held thereof, ſayes Peter, Acts 2. 14. Thoſe pains of Death there mentioned were from the Wrath of God, which would have ſtaid all the Creatures in the World for ever riſing; and the place implyes that thoſe pains would not have let him go till they were looſned and overcome; for if poſſible, they would have held him, but being he was God, it was not poſſible; but he takes Hell-Gates like another Samſon, and throws them off their Hinges, carries them away, and ſwallows up Death in Victory.

2. He could raiſe himſelf up, Deſtroy this Temple, ſays he, John 2. 19. and I have power to raiſe it up, I my ſelf; The Body could not raiſe it ſelf, nor the Soul have joyned it ſelf to that Body; therefore if he had been but meer Man, he could never have done it, but that Spirit the Eternal God-head could, 1 Pet. 3. 18. He was put to death in the fleſh, that is, his Humane Nature, but quickned in and by the ſpirit, that is, his God-head united thereunto: And he will thus overcome, not by meer Power, by Force, but in a way of Juſtice, ſo as Juſtice it ſelf ſhall willingly let him go free, as being it ſelf firſt ſatisfied. Yea, he will overcome upon ſuch terms that it ſhall be unjuſt to hold him any longer, unjuſt and ſo impoſſible in that ſenſe alſo; for he will in a few hours pay the whole Debt, undergo the whole Wrath due; that which the Creatures ſtrength could endure but by drops (and therefore endures it ever) he will be able to bear at once, ſo as Juſtice it ſelf ſhall ſay it is finiſhed, and I am ſatisfied.

And further, When he hath diſpatcht it, there will be time enough left, even an Eternity of time to reward him in, and to be glorified with the Glory he had before the World was. This was another inconvenience attended the Creatures ſatisfaction, that it muſt alwayes be a ſatisfying, and ſo ſhould never have been rewarded; which God would never put any Creature to, for then he ſhould require and accept the higheſt Obedience from a Creature whom he ſhould never have time to reward for it. But Chriſt can ſo ſatisfie as there will be time enough to reward him in: Yea, and he needs but a little time to ſatisfie in, and then he will ſurvive and live again to call for his reward, He ſhall prolong his days, and ſee his ſeed, and be ſatisfied, Iſa. 53. 11, And therefore in this Text we read of a great Name above every Name, which as a reward God gave him for his being Obedient unto Death, Phil. 2. 9. And, Thirdly, Will his ſatisfaction ſerve but for one Sinner? (as alſo I ſhewed would be the caſe if Creatures had performed it; yea, God muſt have ſacrificed as many Innocent Creatures as he meant to ſave Sinners:) No, Chriſts ſatisfaction will ſerve for Worlds, Rom. 5. 17, 18. He is able to bring in ſuch abundance of Righteouſneſs as abounds to many.

And in the laſt place, To Crown the Concluſion of this Diſcourſe with an Additional weight of Glory, that is more than all that hath been ſpoken. What will there be but juſt enough in this his Obedience to make ſatisfaction for Sin, and procure peace for Sinners? The Creatures they could not have done ſo much; No! But his will not only ſatisfie and make Peace, but alſo reconcile, make Friends, Coloſ. 1. 20. And (having made peace through the blood of his croſs) by him to reconcile all things unto himſelf, by him, I ſay, whether they be things in earth, or things in heaven. His Righteouſneſs will not only pacifie vengeance, but there is enough in it to bring us into favour with God. The Worth and Grace of his Perſon is ſuch, and he ſo beloved, as it makes makes us though Sinners graciouſly accepted in his Beloved, Eph. 1. 6. brings us into a degree of favour infinitely greater than ever, and more laſting. He is the Natural Son of God, the Beloved in whom Gods Soul is well pleaſed, and his Love being conveyed to us through him, it falls upon us with more ſtrength and fervour than ever: And alſo this offering up himſelf was ſo ſweet a ſmelling Sacrifice to God, as Eph. 5. 2. That although God expreſſed never ſo much anger againſt Chriſt, as when he hung upon the Croſs, yet he was never ſo well pleaſed by him as then; nay, he was more pleaſed than he had been diſpleaſed with all the Sins the Creatures have or can commit. The Damned Spirits their puniſhment ſatisfies not, Vengeance can never ſuck out Blood enough; and yet if what they did could ſatisfie, it would never riſe ſo high as to pleaſe God, never be of worth enough to bring them into favour again. But here when firſt Vengeance had ſuckt its fill, and falls off ſatisfyed, then the favour of his Perſon, the willingneſs of his Obedience, purchaſeth an over-plus, a redundancy of Merit, a ſurpluſage of Riches, unſearchable riches, Eph. 3. 8. not only able to pay our Debts the firſt day (and that is the leaſt part of the benefit by it) but enough beſides to purchaſe Heaven it ſelf as a Portion for us, the favour of God; Yea, as much there is of it as we can ſpend or take out in Glory to Eternity. God had large thoughts of great and glorious Bleſſings to be beſtowed upon his People, and the Righteouſneſs of Chriſt is as large in Merit, as Gods Heart in Purpoſes, adequate thereto; therefore the Apoſtle makes Gods Grace and Chriſts Righteouſneſs of equal extent, ſo that what God intended to be beſtowed, his Righteouſneſs hath purchaſed, Rom. 5. 17, 18, 19, 20. For if by one mans offence, death reigned by one; much more they which receive abundance of grace, and of the gift of righteouſneſs, ſhall reign in life by one Jeſus Chriſt. ver. 18. Therefore as by the offence of one judgment came upon all men to condemnation: even ſo by the righteouſneſs of one, the free gift came upon all men unto juſtification of life. ver. 19. For as by one mans diſobedience many were made ſinners: ſo by the obedience of one ſhall many be made righteous. ver. 20. Moreover, the law entred, that the offence might abound: But where ſin abounded, grace did much more abound. Yea, the merit of this his Obedience is ſo great as it ſhall never be rewarded to the full, the Saints ſhall not have to Eternity the full worth of it out in Glory.

OF

OF CHRIST THE MEDIATOR.

BOOK IV.

Chriſts Willingneſs to the Work of Redemption, from Everlaſting, till he accompliſhed it.

HEB. x. 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10.

But in thoſe ſacrifices there is a remembrance again made of ſins every year.

For it is not poſſible that the blood of bulls and of goats, ſhould take away ſins.

Wherefore when he cometh into the world, he ſaith, Sacrifice and offering thou wouldeſt not, but a body haſt thou prepared me.

In burnt-offerings and ſacrifices for ſin thou haſt had no pleaſure:

Then ſaid I, Lo, I come (in the volume of the book it is written of me) to do thy will, O God.

Above, when he ſaid, Sacrifice, and offering, and burnt-offerings, and offering for ſin thou wouldeſt not, neither hadſt pleaſure therein (which are offered by the law,)

Then ſaid he, Lo, I come to do thy will, O God. He taketh away the firſt, that he may eſtabliſh the ſecond.

By the which will we are ſanctified, through the offering of the body of Jeſus Chriſt once for all.

CHAP. I.

That there are two things to be conſidered in the Obedience which Chriſt performed, The Will, and the Deed. That from all Eternity he expreſſed his willingneſs in his conſent to undertake the Work.

AS in all our Obedience there are two Principal Ingredients to the true and right Conſtitution of it, The Matter of the Obedience it ſelf, and the Principle and Fountain of it in us; Whereof the one, the Apoſtle calls the Deed, the other the Will; which latter God accepts in us often times without, always more than the Deed or Matter of Obedience it ſelf: Even ſo in Chriſts Obedience, which is the Pattern and Meaſure of ours, there are theſe two eminent parts which compleat it.

I. The

Book IV.

I. The Obedience it ſelf, and the worth and value of it, in that it is his, ſo great a Perſons.

II. The Willingneſs, the readineſs to undertake, and the heartineſs to perform it. The Dignity of the Perſon gave the value, the Merit to the Obedience performed by him: But the Will, the Zeal in his performance gains the Acceptance, and hath beſides a neceſſary influence into the worth of it, and the vertue and efficacy of it to ſanctifie us. All which you have in the Text. The Offering up the Body of Jeſus, there's the Matter. The Obedience of him to Death, then there's the Will by which he offered it up: [By which Will] As calling not only for a diſtinct, but a more eminent Conſideration; and both neceſſarily concurring to our Sanctification and Salvation. By which will we are ſanctified. Now the Story of his willingneſs to redeem and ſave, or the Will by which we are ſanctified, is a ſtory of four parts.

1. Of his Actual Conſent and Undertaking the Work made and given to his Father from Everlaſting.

2. The continuance of that his Will to ſtand to it from Everlaſting, unto the time of his Incarnation and Conception.

3. The renewal of this Conſent when he came into the World.

4. The ſtedfaſt continuance of that Will all along in the performance, from the Cradle to the Croſs.

And 1. As to his voluntary undertaking it afore the World was. In the handling and diſcovery of thoſe Tranſactions of God the Father with him about the Work of Redemption, I have ſpoken ſomething of Chriſts Willingneſs and Conſent, as it was there neceſſary; for elſe I could not have ſet forth the iſſue and concluſion of that Treaty made by the Perſons ſhewing themſelves; yet ſo as I reſerved enough to make it a diſtinct Head, when I ſhould come to Chriſts part: And ſo I here begin with it; for it was then, as was ſaid, left by God the Father with him, and did wholly lye upon him.

It was neceſſary that Chriſts Conſent ſhould be then given, even from Everlaſting; and that as God made a Promiſe to him for us; ſo that he ſhould give Conſent again unto God. Yea and indeed it was one reaſon why it was neceſſary he that was our Mediator ſhould be God, and exiſtent from Eternity; not only to the end he might be privy to the firſt Deſign and Contrivement of our Salvation, and know the bottom and the firſt of Gods mind and heart in it, and receive all the Promiſes of God from God for us: But alſo in this reſpect, that his very Conſent ſhould go to it from the firſt, even as ſoon as his Father ſhould deſign it: And it was right meet it ſhould be ſo; for the performance and all the working operating part was to be his, and to lay all upon his Shoulders to execute, and it was an hard task, and therefore reaſon he ſhould both know it with the firſt, ſeeing he was extant together with his Father; and ſhould alſo from the firſt contrivement by his Father give his Conſent to it. It was fit that both his Heart and Head ſhould be in with the firſt: And you have all in one Scripture, Iſa. 9. 6. where when Chriſt is promiſed, Unto us a Child is born, unto us a Son is given: Obſerve under what Titles he is ſet forth unto us; Counſellour, The Mighty God, The Everlaſting Father: Where Everlaſtingneſs which is affixed to One, is yet common to thoſe other Two. The Everlaſting Counſellour as well as Everlaſting Father: For he was both Counſellour and Father, in that he was the Mighty God, and all alike from Everlaſting: For being God, and with his Father as a Son from Everlaſting, he muſt needs be a Counſellour with him, and ſo privy unto all God meant to do, eſpecially in that very buſineſs; for the performance of which he is there ſaid to be given as a Son, and born as a Child; and the effecting of which is alſo ſaid to be laid wholly on his ſhoulders. Certainly in this caſe, if God could hide nothing from Abraham he was to do; much leſs God from Chriſt, who was God with him from Everlaſting. And as he was for this cauſe to be privy to it for the cognizance of the matter; ſo to have given given his Actual Consent likewise thereunto: For he was to be the Father and Founder of all that was to be done in it. And in that very respect, and in relation to that Act of Will then passed, whereby he became a Father of that business for us, it is he is stiled, the Everlasting Father, and that from Everlasting a parte post. For it is in respect of that Everlastingness he is God, and so Father from Everlasting as well as God from Everlasting; a Counsellour for us with God, a Father of us, and our Salvation. Gods Counsellour because his Wisdom was jointly in that plot and the contrivement of it; and Father both of us and this design, because of his Will in it, and undertaking to effect it. In that his Heart and Will were in it as well as the Fathers, he was therefore the Father of it as well as God, and brought it to perfection. Chap. 1.

I acknowledge the Scripture is more sparing in recording that Hand and Will that the Son of God had in it as from Everlasting. And I have long apprehended this to be the reason of it; because his Will is so necessarily and naturally resolved into his Fathers Will, they having but one Will between them, (as I have elsewhere alledged it upon this very Argument): But chiefly, because what was done as in the point of our Salvation from Everlasting, it is and was the proper Honour of God the Father; and so the concurrence of the Son is swallowed up in the Fathers contrivements about it; and the rather also, because the Son hath manifested his willingness so abundantly in the very performing it; which necessarily imported and required this everlasting Consent of his, and argues it. Hence so little is explicitely said of it: But as the Work of Redemption performed in time is attributed to the Son; so these Works from everlasting to the Father. And therefore all the speech is of what he then did; how he made promise to Christ, and blest us in him with all Spiritual Blessings, and sware he should be Priest upon the very day he begat him, in Heb. 5. which refers both to his Eternal Generation and Call to the Office of Priesthood, from the same everlasting as well as to that in time.

Yet there are two things said elsewhere, that imply Christs full Consent given from everlasting, in answer unto that Oath of God. For it is not barely said as in that place, that he was made a Priest passively, as dedicated only by his Father to the Priesthood, that might have been supposed to have been without his own actual Consent given. Like as Parents, from the Births of their Children, have dedicated them to the Ministry, or the like Calling; as Hannah did Samuel without his knowledge: And thus also Sampson was a Nazarite: But it was not so here; that his being made a Priest then by his Father, is elsewhere interpreted by his being made a Surety of a Covenant. So Heb. 7. by comparing the 21th and 22th Verses together. In the 21th Verse, that Oath is mentioned, The Lord sware and will not repent, Thou art a Priest, And this is interpreted by an inference from it, Ver. 22. By so much was Jesus made surety of a better testament. Now this Oath, though it was recorded and uttered by David, Psal. 110. after Moses Law supposed given, as the last Verse of that Chapter insinuates; yet we elsewhere find this Covenant to be called an everlasting Covenant, and the everlasting Gospel, as Rev. 15. as that which had been made and lain hid in God from everlasting, a parte post: As the Apostle speaking of the Gospel, plainly insinuates, Rom. 16. 25, 26. The mystery kept secret, since the world began; but now is made manifest according to the commandment of the everlasting God: Which special Attribute of Eternity is there given God, to signifie that though he had kept it secret since the world began, and but [now] revealed it; yet he had framed and contrived it from everlasting, and afore the world. And it is certain, that as all Promises in the Word are but the Copies of Gods Promises made to Christ for us from everlasting, so these Oaths and Covenants recorded in the Word are but the Copy of that Oath and Covenant struck betwixt God and Christ from everlasting: These the Extracts, those the Original.

Now then if the intent of Gods Oath was to make a Covenant of it, and not only a Promise but a Covenant, then Christs Consent is manifestly imported: If it had only been called a Promise from God, that would not necessarily have implyed Christs Consent, though it would have implyed his Book IV. Existence or Being then, as I have used to argue from that place, Titus 1. 2. In hope of eternal life, which God that cannot lye promised before the world began. But it being called further a Covenant, it doth import two; for as a Mediator is not of one but two; so a Covenant is alwayes the Consent of two, and not of one only; it cannot be a Covenant else. You use to say, to every bargain two words must go; the meaning is, the Consent of two Parties: So to every Covenant; it had not been a compleat Covenant else. If God had sworn to it; yea if Christ himself had been secretly willing; yet if by his Consent expressed it had not been struck up, it had not been a Covenant. A Purpose also it might have been called, but not a Covenant.

Yea, and let me further improve it. If Christ had not fully and perfectly Consented, it had not been a perfect Covenant. Yea, and if he had not at first propounding of it (which was from everlasting) come off to it, without taking any time to deliberate, it had not been an everlasting Covenant; that is, from everlasting.

But (which is more) the Second Person did so fully engage himself, that God calls him not only his Covenanter, but his Covenant. 'Tis in that place, Isa. 49. 8. out of which I have elsewhere shewed, how the Covenant was struck Dialogue-wise. You may see there how it was driven; and after he had shown upon what Considerations Christ came off to it, he thereupon in the 8th Verse calls him his Covenant.

And if it be Objected, that a Covenant may be made without the Consent of both Parties: For God sayes, This is my Covenant, when he promiseth to give to us (who had not then consented) a new heart, &c.

Yet for Answer: Consider that this Promise alledged was necessarily made first to Christ for us, and was driven Covenant-wise with him; and in that respect it is that it becometh to be called a Covenant; as thus, it respects us, because indeed made with him for us first, and so made known unto us: The meaning is, that therefore it is that God promiseth on his part to give us a new Heart, because Christ promised afore to him, for his part, to work Redemption for us, otherwise it could not have been called a Covenant till we had consented.

Then 2. The Word, He was made a surety, doth argue it also; for that evidently imports an undertaking on Christs part: And so as the Oath was Gods; so the Suretyship was Christs. And a Surety Ἐγγυᾶ is a plighter of his Troth, by striking hands, as the Phrase in the Original. Prov. 22. 26.

Now 2. For the Second Interval of the continuance of that his Willingness from Everlasting unto the time of his coming to perform it, that is as evident also out of Prov. 8. 30. which shews how his delights were in it all the while; and therefore his Heart was more especially set upon it than all works else. But this I have also spoken unto elsewhere.

CHAP.

Chap. 2.

CHAP. II.

That Chriſt renewed his Conſent as ſoon as he came into the World. That his Humane Nature from his firſt Conception agreed to it. That this is apparent from the Scope and Intent of the Twenty Second Pſalm.

HEB. x. 3. 4, 5.

But in thoſe ſacrifices there is a remembrance again made of ſins every year.

For it is not poſſible that the blood of bulls and of goats, ſhould take away ſins.

Wherefore when he cometh into the world, he ſaith, Sacrifice and offering thou wouldſt not, but a body haſt thou prepared me.

THE other two parts of his Willingneſs come now to be handled.

I. His Willingneſs and Conſent renewed, when he came into the World, to perform what he had undertaken and Covenanted for from Everlaſting.

II. The conſtent and fixed poſture of his Will and heartineſs in the Work all along, during his Life time, and in his Death, till he had finiſhed it. John 13. 4. I ſhall not need to purſue this any further than unto his Death, for the reſt of his Work in Heaven was pleaſant Work, and but as the reaping the joyful harveſt of his Seed ſown in tears.

The Firſt I call the Will of Dedication or Conſecration of himſelf by a Vow to this great Work, then ſolemnly made and given when he came into the World. The latter the Will of Execution or Performance. The firſt is like the Dedication of the Temple, which was his Type, and was a moſt glorious Action and Fundamental to all that followed; and calls for an anſwerable regard and obſervation from us. The Dedications of the outward Temple, the Type of his Body, the Tabernacle made without hands, were the moſt ſolemn Actions recorded in the Old Teſtament. And the firſt Dedication had to accompany it the greateſt Hecatombs and Sacrifices that ever were afore or after, joyned with a large, ſet and powerful Prayer, compoſed by Solomon and upon record. The other by Zerubbabel had a Yearly Feaſt, called the Feaſt of the Dedication, to celebrate the Memorial of it: But a greater than Solomon is here, and a more glorious Dedication of that Temple, which was the glory of that ſecond, as Haggai had foretold, Haggai 2. 9. What Sacrifices of Prayers ſhould we then offer up to God upon the news thereof?

For the Firſt, Chriſts Willingneſs, and renewed Conſent when he came into the World. Theſe words hold forth eminently two things concerning it.

1. The time of Chriſts dedicating himſelf.
2. The Dedication it ſelf.

1. The time you ſee is at the very inſtant of his coming into the World to undergo this great Work and Service. When he comes into the world, he ſayes, &c. This muſt needs be obſerved (as it is) a great and mighty ſecret, That the very words that God the Son then uſed to God the Father, at the moment of his Incarnation, (when he was to take our Nature, to become Fleſh and appear in this World as a part thereof,) ſhould be recorded, which words were before known alone to the Three Perſons; which yet the Holy Ghoſt, the great Secretary of Heaven, hath vouchſafed to reveal unto us; for the great concernment of them as to our Salvation, ſo to our Knowledge thereof. The words were firſt uttered by David Prophetically of Chriſt, Pſal. 40. 6, 7. and the Apoſtle not only interprets them of Chriſt, but adds that which David mentioned not. David ſpeaks not a word of the time that the date of this Speech ſhould be at, viz. when he ſhould come into the World. No, This is one of Pauls ſecrets revealed to him by the Holy Ghoſt, and could have been known from no other hand. You have the like Speech recorded of the Fathers to Chriſt, when he came firſt to Heaven, by the ſame David, though the time thereof is more clearly hinted there, in the words themſelves. Pſal. 110. 1. The Lord ſaid to my Lord, ſit thou on my right hand till I make thine enemies thy footſtool.

The great inquiry next will be, who this [I] was, in Heb. 10. 7. that ſhould then utter it? Whether the Second Perſon only, as now being to take up our Nature, or withal, the Humane Nature concurring with him in that Conſent.

1. That it was the Speech of the Second Perſon, then exiſting, is evident: For it was ſpoken when the Holy Ghoſt was framing the Body, or Humane Nature, in the Womb. A Body haſt thou fitted me; Lo I come. For he is the Perſon, the [ME] and the [I], that took up that Body into One Perſon with himſelf. He was more concerned than that Humane Nature, and gave more away by his Incarnation and the Sufferings that followed; and therefore his Willingneſs was the more requiſite and eminent, and to that end recorded for our comfort; thus at the inſtant when the Humane Nature was a making, and ſo was not capable as yet to give Conſent; yet had the great and total ſumme of Glory due to it upon its union with that Perſon, given away for thirty three years to come; by him that was indeed the Perſon that aſſumes it: Then did the Second Perſon (that is the Perſon to whom all Actions are attributed) expreſs his readineſs and willingneſs, Lo I come. And to ſhew he did it the moſt deliberately, and conſultò, as we ſay; it is prefaced how he had taken aforehand conſideration of all wayes elſe; and now that his Father had took a ſummary of all other means, that might be in pretence to redeem Mankind, and how all would prove invalid; giving one inſtance for all the reſt, as of which the experiment fully has been made; namely, Sacrifices and Burnt-Offerings: And ſo by that one inſtance, for all other, at once declaring that all Creature-Sacrifices would be too light, and of no value; Sacrifices and burnt-offerings thou wouldeſt not. And he ſpeaks withal, as one who had conſulted his Fathers Decrees, the volume of that Book written in Heaven, wherein all our Names are written, Heb. 12. 23. and had there ſeen all the whole Work ſet down, and every tittle of Gods Will he was to perform or ſuffer. And now when it was come to the very moment of time ſet down, the fullneſs of time, Chriſt the Son offers himſelf to perform every jot of it; and doth not ſo much as ſtay expecting his Fathers anſwer in return, or that he ſhould ſpeak anew to him about it, or move him in it, but prevents him: He ſayes, Lo I come; as carrying all this in his Heart written there, and preciſely remembring the time, the moment; for you ſee himſelf is only here to ſpeak to his Father.

So then you have the Speech which at that inſtant not only the Angel ſpake to his Mother on Earth, Luke 1. 28, to 38. but here alſo that which the Son ſpake in Heaven: And it ſpeaks all Willingneſs, yea Heart and Zeal not to fail a moment, Lo I come to do thy will O God. And 'tis with an Ecce, Lo and behold how ready I am to do it.

2. It is worth our next Enquiry, what Conſent and when it was that the Humane Nature, that Body which he aſſumed actually did firſt give.

1. It was neceſſary that this Humane Nature ſhould likewiſe conſent and be willing; for as it was a diſtinct Nature from the Divine, ſo it had a diſtinct Will, and alſo it was concerned, being to be made the ſubject of all the Sufferings, Sufferings, the Sacrifice to be given away and offered up, as the 10th Verſe hath it. It is neceſſary that it conſent too, when it is able to put forth an Act of Conſent, and of a deliberate Will. The Fundamental Conſent was the Divine Perſons, and the Act of aſſuming our Nature, and coming into the World, and writing his Name among Creatures, was ſolely and ſingly the Act of the Divine Perſon: But yet there is to be an acceſſary Conſent of the Humane Nature, now marryed into One Perſon with the Divine, concerning this. Chap. 2.

2. The Queſtion will be about the time; whether at his firſt coming into the World this Conſent was actually given: Or, that the Conſent of the Humane Nature was included as of one under Age in the Conſent of the Divine Perſon, the Son of God.

For Anſwer how ſoon, and when firſt the Humane Nature gave his Conſent, is hard to ſay.

1. This may ſafely be affirmed, That as ſoon as, or when firſt he began to put forth any Acts of Reaſon, that then his Will was guided to direct its aim and intentions to God as his Father, from himſelf as the Mediator. And look as in Infants Hearts, if they had been born in Innocency, there would have been ſown the Notion of God, whom they ſhould firſt have known in and by whatever they knew elſe: And the Moral Law being written in their Hearts, they ſhould have directed their Actions to God and his Glory, through a Natural Inſtinct and Tendency of Spirit; the principal Law written in their Hearts then, and wherein Holineſs conſiſts, being to direct all to God and his Glory. Thus it was in Chriſt when an Infant, and ſuch Holy Principles guided him to that, which was that Will of God as to him, and to be performed by him; and which was to ſway and direct all his Actions and Thoughts that were to be the matter of our Salvation and Juſtification, which were to be exerted according to the capacity of Reaſon, as it ſhould grow up more and more. Hence therefore this Law, from the very firſt of his acting intelligently, muſt move and predominantly carry all along with the motion of it, as the Primum Mobile doth all the reſt of the Sphears. And look, as it would have been neceſſary that the Law of Love to God, and aiming at his Glory, ſhould have acted all thoughts and imaginations rational in Infants in Innocency, or they had not acted holily, as parts and pieces of Mankind ought to do, when they acted; ſo Chriſt being not only a Man that had the Law of Holineſs in him, but alſo the Meſſiah or Mediator by ſpecial Office and Calling; and accordingly had that ſpecial Law of his Office written in his Heart: It was as neceſſary to the performance of that Office, that all thoughts and acts of underſtanding, &c. ſhould be directed to God by him from the firſt, as works and parts of his Mediation, as it was for him, as a Man, to addreſs them all unto Gods Glory, as parts of Holineſs or Righteouſneſs; for elſe he had not diſcharged his Office and Calling from the firſt, nor had thoſe firſt dawnings and actings of his Will, Thoughts and Affections, been involved and included as parts and pieces of his Mediation, as the other parts of his Obedience afterwards were. But now what Chriſt did when a Child, hath a Meritoriouſneſs in it as well as what he did when he was a Man grown; and alſo what he ſuffered, his very Circumciſion is made Influential into our Sanctification, through the Merits and Vertue of it, as well as his after being Baptized when thirty years old. And therefore for certain his Actions, which proceeded from Will and Underſtanding from the firſt, had in their proportion the ſame Meritorious Influence.

The Twenty Second Pſalm, which was peculiarly made for, and in the Name of Chriſt, doth expreſly and directly tell us not only that God took him out of the womb, and that he was caſt upon God from the womb, ver. 9, 10. The latter of which may be paſſively underſtood of Gods Care of him; But further, Thou didſt make me hope when I was upon my mothers breaſts, ver. 9. And thou art my God from my mothers belly: Or, As Ainſworth reads the words, The Maker of me to truſt at my Mothers Breaſts. Which words cannot be underſtood only in a Paſſive Senſe, but do import Acts of Faith miraculouſly drawn forth from him to God as his God: As alſo thoſe words:

words [Thou art my God:] may well be taken to import how he had owned and relyed upon him as his God from his Mothers Womb; ſhewing how that then he had owned him as his God, with an Act of Faith as truly, as in ver. 1. When he cryed out, My God, My God, &c. when on the Croſs.

But that I inſiſt on is to obſerve to this purpoſe the Coherence of his words all along afore, as alſo in this paſſage. Chriſt had pleaded their Fathers truſted in thee, and were delivered, ver. 4, 5, and ver. 8. He alledged how that that his Faith upon God as his God, and as a Father to him, as his only begotten Son, and the Meſſiah and Saviour of the World was the thing he was reproached and upbraided with now when on the Croſs, ver. 7, and 8. All they that ſee me laugh me to ſcorn: they ſhoot out the lip, they ſhake the head, ſaying, He truſted on the Lord that he would deliver him: Let him deliver him, ſeeing he delighted in him: I ſay, this was the reproach caſt on him in particular, viz. How that he had with Confidence given out and taken upon him, as being the Son of God and Meſſiah; And for his truſting on God under that ſpecial Relation to him was the thing they jeered. Thus it is expreſly in the citing of that place by Matthew, Matth. 27. 43. He truſted in God, let him deliver him now if he will have him: for he ſaid, I am the Son of God. Now then, in the next verſes of the Pſalm, he alledgeth in Anſwer to his Reproach Thou didſt make me hope at my mothers breaſts. Which in its Coherence is as if he had ſaid, Did the Fathers truſt thee with that Faith, as Men thine Elect uſe to truſt thee withal? Why, Loe Lord, I began to truſt thee ſooner than ordinarily any of them do, or ever did, even at the Breaſt when an Infant; And Lord, Thou heareſt them mock me, that I truſted I was thy only begotten Son, and now Lord this was the very thing thou cauſedſt me to truſt and to have aſſurance of, when at my Mothers Breaſt. Yea, and I did it then in that Senſe, and with that Faith I now on the Croſs do call thee my God withal, as being that beloved Son of thine, my Father and my God in whom thou delighteſt: And with this Faith it hath been that I have owned thee as my God all along even from the very Womb.

Now then if Chriſt had an Actual Faith then on God as his God, anſwerable to his Perſonal Intereſt in and relation unto God, as his God, and ſo in his proportion ſuch as Holy Men have in their meaſure, and from their Intereſt in God as Adopted Sons ſuitably to their Condition and Eſtate when they come firſt to believe: Then that Faith in him muſt needs in time riſe up to Faith and apprehenſion of him, as a Father to him, as the only begotten the Meſſiah. For elſe his Faith, had faln ſhort of that Object of it which was proper and peculiar to him, and his State and Condition. And if this be at all wondred at, that Chriſts Humane Nature ſhould do it ſo ſoon: Chriſt himſelf tells it here as a wonderful work of God towards him in that Humane Soul of his, in that he celebrates God as the Maker of him to truſt, or thou cauſedſt me to truſt then, and thou that dreweſt me out of the Womb, and didſt miraculouſly form me there, didſt draw my Soul then to believe in thee as my Father.

Neither are theſe mine Apprehenſions alone upon this place, but the ſame I have found to be in one late Learned Commentator on the words, who ſays, Nos hunc verſum de Chriſto interpretamur, in quo cum ab inſtanti Conceptionis fuerunt omnes theſauri ſapientiæ & Scientiæ abſconditi, Potuit ab inſtanti Conceptionis omnem ſuam curam & ſpem ut homo in uno Deo figere & locare. Chriſt having in him from the inſtant of his Conception all the Treaſures of his Wiſdom and Knowledge hidden in him, it might be ſo, that from the inſtant of his Conception, he as a Man might fix and place all his care and hope in God alone: And to that end he quoteth alſo this place, Heb. 10. 7. my Text; When he came into the world, he ſayes, &c.

Muis in Pſal. 22. 9.

Now there are two Speeches in the 40*th Pſalm*, more proper to apply to the Soul of that Humane Nature aſſumed.

1. My Ear haſt thou boared through, is applyable more properly to the Humane Nature, than to the Divine; and ſo to be underſtood to be the Voice of the Humane Nature, rather than of the Divine.

Now

Now what is it to have an ear board through? It is to be made willing and obedient to do Gods Will as a Servant is to do his Maſters. You know how that one that was purely a Servant, and for ever ſuch; He had his Ear boared, Exod. 21. 6. This was Typical. He that had his Ear boared through, gave his conſent firſt, which is implyed in thoſe words: And if the Servant ſhall plainly ſay, I love my Maſter, my Wife, and my Children, I will not go out free. If he would be free, he was to forſake his Wife and Children, which were a Motive to many to live as a Servant with them. The Humane Nature now united might have ſtood upon it, not to enter into any Service, that is, as in reſpect of his own Prerogative, being taken up into an equality with God. But ſaies Chriſt, I love my Father, and therefore I will ſerve him in the work of Redemption, John 14. 31. That the World may know that I love the Father, and as the Father gave me Commandment, even ſo I do. He alſo loved his Wife, his Spouſe, his Church, &c. He will have her live with him, he muſt ſerve for her Company, and he loves his Children particularly (as that Speech imports, Lo here am I, and the Children thou haſt given me) This moved Chriſt to ſerve as Jacob did Laban, Eph. 5. 26. Husbands love your Wives, even as Chriſt loved the Church, and gave himſelf for it. He ſhould not have her Society elſe, as himſelf ſpeaks, John 12. 23, 24. Except the Son of Man die, he muſt abide alone; or be in Heaven alone without his Churches Company. Neither is it the Phraſe only that complies with this Senſe, but you have another Scripture doth manifeſtly apply this Phraſe to Chriſt in this Senſe of willing Obedience, Iſa. 50. 5. The Lord God hath opened mine ear, and I was not rebellious, neither turned away back. Do you know his Voice that ſpeaks it, and about what? 'Tis your Saviours, I will give you a comfortable token you ſhall know it by, ver. 4. The Lord God hath given me the tongue of the learned, that I ſhould know how to ſpeak a word in ſeaſon to him that is weary. He wakeneth morning by morning, he wakeneth mine ear to hear as the learned. You know who afterwards ſaid of himſelf, Come to me all ye that are weary, and I will eaſe you, Matth. 11. 28. as you have it in the Margent. And will you know what the Work was, for which God had opened his Ear, And I was not rebellious, ſaies he? It was the hardeſt piece of it; to which of all other, if to any he ſhould have been unwilling. It follows, ver. 6. I gave my back to the ſmiters, and my cheeks to them that plucked off the hair, I hid not my face from ſhame and ſpitting. Read Matthew the 26, and 27. Chapters. But is that all, that he was not rebellious or refractary to it, his Ear was boared, he drew not his back away? No, I gave my back to the ſmiters, &c. 'Twas his own free Act, as elſewhere it is ſaid, Gal. 2. 2[illegible]. He gave himſelf. And whereas the Servant in the Type had but one Ear boared through: Of Chriſt the Pſalmiſt ſayes in the Plural, My Ears, (ſo it is in the Original,) haſt thou boared through, to note an Abundance, an Over-plus of willingneſs; as when we ſay, a Man hears of a thing with both Ears, it notes he hears of it, and hears of it again. Chriſt was all Ear to ſhevv he vvas all Obedience. His Ear boared is put for the vvhole, as the Apoſtle interprets it, A Body.

Chap. 2.

2. There is another Speech argues this conſent to have been the Humane Natures alſo, vvhen he ſaies, ſpeaking of his vvillingneſs, Thy law is in my bowels, vvritten there habitually from the Womb, vvhich cannot be meant of the Divine Nature. And yet even vvhen he aſſumed this Humane Nature, the Lavv of God, and this ſpecial Lavv of the Mediatorſhip vvas vvritten there. That Phraſe ſhevvs (as I ſaid at firſt) that it vvas by inſtinct, ſuch as Naturally it vvould have been in Infants in Innocency. Novv this is more than ſimply to have an Ear boared, to give conſent; it is to have his Lavv made Natural to him. And it is in the midſt of the Bovvels, in the Will, the Affections that are the Center of the Soul, and the middle of it. But the Apoſtle ſpeaks this of him vvhen coming into the World. And theſe Speeches being manifeſtly proper to the Humane Soul and Will, And being compared with theſe paſſages of the 22. Pſalm, they all together do ſtrongly argue, that in a Miraculous way the Humane Soul of Chriſt did then give up it ſelf to this whole Work.

And

Book IV.

And ſo to conclude this, look as his Mother conſented to the Angels Meſſage before ſhe conceived of him, Luke 1. 31. ſaies the Angel, Thou ſhalt conceive, and ſhalt call his Name Jeſus. And in the middle of his Delivery of it, ſhe had not as yet conceived him, for ver. 35. he ſaies ſtill in the future, The Holy Ghoſt ſhall come on thee, and ſhall overſhadow thee, &c. And when the Angel had done his Meſſage, ver. 38. Mary ſaid, Behold the handmaid of the Lord, (I give my ſelf up to him) be it unto me according to thy word. And ſo thereupon ſhe conceived of him; for Luke 2. 21. 'tis ſaid, his Name was called Jeſus, Which was ſo named of the Angel before he was conceived in the womb. And therefore till the Angel had done his Meſſage ſhe conceived not of him, and ſo not till her own conſent was given. And as God had hers that ſhe might be freely the Mother of him, ſo in like manner, God it would ſeem, had the conſent of that reaſonable Soul of Jeſus preſently after his coming, and being made the Son of God. And ſo was fulfilled that which in the Propheſie was foretold he ſhould utter, Iſa. 49. 1. God hath called me from the womb, as well as made mention of his Name (Jeſus) from his Conception as it follows there, From the bowels of my mother he hath made mention of my Name. Which though ſpoken of others (as of Cyrus) it imports but Gods ordaining him from that time to that Work; yet we may apply it to Chriſt, conſidering all that is ſaid afore; as alſo that this is not paſſively ſpoken of him as that of Cyrus and others, but is recorded as to be utter'd by himſelf, The Lord hath called me from the womb, &c. It may import more, even how Chriſt did then anſwer his Call, and gave up himſelf to this Work, but of this more anon.

And thus again as his Conception was at Nazareth, Luke 1. 26. So he was every way Ναζαρῆιος, A Nazarite given up to God from the Womb, given up by the Second Perſon that aſſumed that Nature, given up by the Humane Nature, the Soul of it aſſumed, by a miraculous work of God, as was his Conception it ſelf, given up by his Mother alſo, who aſſents to all that the Angel ſaid of him, to have ſuch a Child to be conceived in her, Be it according to thy word, ſaid ſhe, Laſtly. A Nazarite by Gods own Dedication and Separation of him then to it in the Meſſage of the Angel which was ſent by him.

CHAP.

Chap. 3.

CHAP. III.

Shewing the Myſtery of that Appellation given him, Jeſus the Nazarite, to have been, that he was thus dedicated from his very Conception to this great Work.

MATTH. ii. 23.

And he came and dwelt in a City called Nazareth, that it might be fulfilled which was ſpoken by the Prophets, He ſhall be called a Nazarene.

THERE was no Name more ordinarily and familiarly given to Chriſt, and that by all ſorts of Perſons, than this Jeſus of Nazareth, and Jeſus the Nazarite. It was given him by the Jewes: John 18. 5, 7. Matth. 26. 71. By Angels; 1. the bad, Mark 1. 24. 2. the good, Mark 16. 6. Yea, this Appellation obtained ſo among all, that it was put by Pilate, the Roman Governour, into the Superſcription upon the Croſs, in all three Languages, Jeſus the Nazarite, John 19. 19. And was further uſed by his Apoſtles, as glorying to own him under that Title after his Aſcenſion; ſo Acts 2. 22. and Chap. 6. 4, 8, 10. Yea, and himſelf after his Aſcenſion, doth from Heaven decipher himſelf thereby, Acts 22. 8. I am Jeſus ὁ Ναζωραῖος the Nazarite.

Now ſo it fell out, in the Providence of God guiding the Idiom or manner of Speech in that Language, that a Nazarene or Nazarite, ſignified both an Inhabitant of the City Nazareth, as alſo one that by Profeſſion and Vow was peculiarly ſeparated and dedicated to God.

The Jewes, as they gave this Name unto Jeſus, intended no other thing thereby, than that he was an Inhabitant of, and Dweller in the City of Nazareth; as you ſay a Londoner, noting out an Inhabitant of the City of London. And ſo it is given to Chriſt, Ναζαρηνὸς Luke 4. 34. compared with John 1. 45. where it is ἀπὸ Ναζαρὲθ, that is, one of the Inhabitants of Nazareth.

But Matthew tells us that God had a further deſign in guiding thoſe Jewes to this Appellation, to hold forth an higher Myſtery; namely, that this was the great Nazarite, vowed and ſeparated unto him, of whom all the Votaries or Nazarites of the Old Teſtament were Types. And therefore he is termed by Matthew and others, ὁ Ναζωραῖος, the great Nazarite; thoſe having been his Shadows, even as he is called the laſt Adam, 1 Cor. 15. 43. the true David, Acts 13. 34.

The words of Matthew to this purpoſe are theſe, Matth. 2. 23. And he came and dwelt in a City called Nazareth; which was the only occaſion why the Jewes tearmed him Jeſus the Nazarite or Nazarene; but it had this Myſtery further in it, That it might be fulfilled which was ſpoken by the Prophets, of him that was to be the Meſſiah, that he ſhall be called, that is, be a Nazarite.

Now under the Old Teſtament, the Writers of which are generally called the Prophets, all that were Dedicated or Conſecrated unto God by Vow of their Parents from their Birth, or that ſeparated themſelves unto God in a ſpecial Vow of Holineſs and Obedience above others of their Brethren; theſe were tearmed Nazarites; as Joſeph, Gen. 49. 26. The bleſſings of thy Father have prevailed above the bleſſings of my Progenitors, and to the utmoſt bounds of the everlaſting hills they ſhall be on the head of Joſeph, and on the crown of the head of him that was ſeparate from his brethren: And Sampſon alſo; Judg. 13. 5.

Book IV.

And ſo to conclude this, look as his Mother conſented to the Angels Meſſage before ſhe conceived of him, Luke 1. 31. ſaies the Angel, Thou ſhalt conceive, and ſhalt call his Name Jeſus. And in the middle of his Delivery of it, ihe had not as yet conceived him, for ver. 35. he ſaies ſtill in the future, The Holy Ghoſt ſhall come on thee, and ſhall overſhadow thee, &c. And when the Angel had done his Meſſage, ver. 38. Mary ſaid, Behold the handmaid of the Lord, (I give my ſelf up to him) be it unto me according to thy word. And ſo thereupon ſhe conceived of him; for Luke 2. 21. 'tis ſaid, his Name was called Jeſus, Which was ſo named of the Angel before he was conceived in the womb. And therefore till the Angel had done his Meſſage ſhe conceived not of him, and ſo not till her own conſent was given. And as God had hers that ſhe might be freely the Mother of him, ſo in like manner, God it would ſeem, had the conſent of that reaſonable Soul of Jeſus preſently after his coming, and being made the Son of God. And ſo was fulfilled that which in the Propheſie was foretold he ſhould utter, Iſa. 49. 1. God hath called me from the womb, as well as made mention of his Name (Jeſus) from his Conception as it follows there, From the bowels of my mother he hath made mention of my Name. Which though ſpoken of others (as of Cyrus) it imports but Gods ordaining him from that time to that Work; yet we may apply it to Chriſt, conſidering all that is ſaid afore; as alſo that this is not paſſively ſpoken of him as that of Cyrus and others, but is recorded as to be utter'd by himſelf, The Lord hath called me from the womb, &c. It may import more, even how Chriſt did then anſwer his Call, and gave up himſelf to this Work, but of this more anon.

And thus again as his Conception was at Nazareth, Luke 1. 26. So he was every way Ναζαρῆνος, A Nazarite given up to God from the Womb, given up by the Second Perſon that aſſumed that Nature, given up by the Humane Nature, the Soul of it aſſumed, by a miraculous work of God, as was his Conception it ſelf, given up by his Mother alſo, who aſſents to all that the Angel ſaid of him, to have ſuch a Child to be conceived in her, Be it according to thy word, ſaid ſhe, Laſtly. A Nazarite by Gods own Dedication and Separation of him then to it in the Meſſage of the Angel which was ſent by him.

CHAP. III.

Shewing the Myſtery of that Appellation given him, Jeſus the Nazarite, to have been, that he was thus dedicated from his very Conception to this great Work.

MATTH. ii. 23.

And he came and dwelt in a City called Nazareth, that it might be fulfilled which was ſpoken by the Prophets, He ſhall be called a Nazarene.

THERE was no Name more ordinarily and familiarly given to Chriſt, and that by all ſorts of Perſons, than this Jeſus of Nazareth, and Jeſus the Nazarite. It was given him by the Jewes: John 18. 5, 7. Matth. 26. 71. By Angels; 1. the bad, Mark 1. 24. 2. the good, Mark 16. 6. Yea, this Appellation obtained ſo among all, that it was put by Pilate, the Roman Governour, into the Superſcription upon the Croſs, in all three Languages, Jeſus the Nazarite, John 19. 19. And was further uſed by his Apoſtles, as glorying to own him under that Title after his Aſcenſion; ſo Acts 2. 22. and Chap. 6. 4, 8, 10. Yea, and himſelf after his Aſcenſion, doth from Heaven decipher himſelf thereby, Acts 22. 8. I am Jeſus ὁ Ναζωραῖος the Nazarite.

Now ſo it fell out, in the Providence of God guiding the Idiom or manner of Speech in that Language, that a Nazarene or Nazarite, ſignified both an Inhabitant of the City Nazareth, as alſo one that by Profeſſion and Vow was peculiarly ſeparated and dedicated to God.

The Jewes, as they gave this Name unto Jeſus, intended no other thing thereby, than that he was an Inhabitant of, and Dweller in the City of Nazareth; as you ſay a Londoner, noting out an Inhabitant of the City of London. And ſo it is given to Chriſt, Ναζαρηνὸς Luke 4. 34. compared with John 1. 45. where it is ὁ ἀπὸ Ναζαρὲθ, that is, one of the Inhabitants of Nazareth.

But Matthew tells us that God had a further deſign in guiding thoſe Jewes to this Appellation, to hold forth an higher Myſtery; namely, that this was the great Nazarite, vowed and ſeparated unto him, of whom all the Votaries or Nazarites of the Old Teſtament were Types. And therefore he is termed by Matthew and others, ὁ Ναζωραῖος, the great Nazarite; thoſe having been his Shadows, even as he is called the laſt Adam, 1 Cor. 15. 43. the true David, Acts 13. 34.

The words of Matthew to this purpoſe are theſe, Matth. 2. 23. And he came and dwelt in a City called Nazareth; which was the only occaſion why the Jewes tearmed him Jeſus the Nazarite or Nazarene; but it had this Myſtery further in it, That it might be fulfilled which was ſpoken by the Prophets, of him that was to be the Meſſiah, that he ſhall be called, that is, be a Nazarite.

Now under the Old Teſtament, the Writers of which are generally called the Prophets, all that were Dedicated or Conſecrated unto God by Vow of their Parents from their Birth, or that ſeparated themſelves unto God in a ſpecial Vow of Holineſs and Obedience above others of their Brethren; theſe were tearmed Nazarites; as Joſeph, Gen. 49. 26. The bleſſings of thy Father have prevailed above the bleſſings of my Progenitors, and to the utmoſt bounds of the everlaſting hills they ſhall be on the head of Joſeph, and on the crown of the head of him that was ſeparate from his brethren: And Sampſon alſo; Judg. 13. 5.

Book IV. For lo, thou ſhalt conceive and bear a ſon, and no raſour ſhall come on his head: for the child ſhall be a Nazarite unto God from the womb : And whoever he was that Vowed his Perſon to God, and not his Goods only, was by the Law called a Nazarite; Numb. 6. 2. Speak unto the children of Iſrael, and ſay unto them, When either man or woman ſhall ſeparate themſelves to vow a vow of a Nazarite, to ſeparate themſelves to the Lord. All which were acted as Types and Shadows of the Dedication of himſelf, to be after this made by this great Votary, who was the ſubſtance of them in this particular, as in all things elſe he was, of all his other fore-running Types, in what was attributed to them.

There may other Royal Qualifications and Characters of Chriſt the Meſſiah fall into this, that he was called a Nazarite (as will in the current of this Diſcourſe appear) but this of his being Vowed to God was the great and main thing intended thereby, as Joſeph and Sampſon, and others were.

The main difficulty herein is, how the Examples and the Law of thoſe Nazarites ſhould be eſteemed Propheſies of him, as Matthew here ſayes, That it might be fulfilled which was ſpoken by the Prophets?

It is a known, and a taken-for-granted truth, that thoſe names and things ſpoken of the eminent Types of Chriſt, are by the Evangeliſts and Apoſtles given unto Chriſt whom they Prophetically ſignified, as more truly, and in a more tranſcendent manner belonging to him than unto the Perſons themſelves to whom they were firſt given unto; as eminently fulfilled in him, yea and as more really intended of him than of them, as appears by many inſtances of the like kind.

Thus when Paul to the Hebrews would prove Chriſt to be the Son of God in that peculiar manner, as never Man, yea nor Angel, ever was. Heb. 1. 4, 5. Being made ſo much better than the Angels, as he hath by inheritance obtained a more excellent name than they. For unto which of the Angels ſaid he at any time, Thou art my Son, this day have I begotten thee? And again, I will be to him a Father, and he ſhall be to me a Son? He would here prove that Chriſts Name given him in the Old Teſtament, was the Son of God, and ſo the Son as no Angel. He cites a Speech ſpoken of, and to Solomon, And again I will be to him a Father, and he ſhall be to me a Son. Now where are theſe words to be found, or how come they to be meant of Chriſt? The words are only found 2 Sam. 7. 14, 2 Chron. 22. 10. No way can be deviſed but this, that what God ſpeaketh of Solomon is more properly intended of Chriſt. De Solomone vero, more than de Solomone mero. Davids Son was but his Shadow. Yea and which is ſtranger, he quotes it to prove, that Chriſt the Meſſiah was the Son of God in ſuch a tranſcendent manner as Solomon was not, even that he was the only begotten Son, whereof Solomons Sonſhip was but a Shadow: This and many the like, muſt be reſolved into this general Rule, That what is attributed to the Type his Shadow, muſt needs be in a more divine and ſupereminent manner, aſcribed to him the Subſtance: For if ſo excellent Perſons in their higheſt Excellency were but his Types, then what are thoſe Excellencies in him a Perſon ſo Divine? I might exemplifie all this more clearly in the Apoſtles quoting, and that as a proof too, what was ſaid of the firſt Adam, That he was an Earthly Man, a living Soul, to fore-propheſie Chriſts ſuper-excelling Dignity of his being the Lord of Heaven, a quickening Spirit, a ſecond Adam; 1 Cor. 15. 44, 45. It is ſown a natural body, it is raiſed a ſpiritual body. There is a natural body and there is a ſpiritual body. And ſo it is written, The firſt man Adam was made a living ſoul, the laſt Adam was made a quickning Spirit. And multitudes of other inſtances might be given; as that in Hoſea 11. 1. Out of Egypt have I called my Son; quoted by Matthew in this Chapter 2. Verſe 15. Now then parallel this of Matthew, concerning Chriſt his being a Nazarite, with that of his being a Son under the Type of Solomon, and a ſecond Adam, &c. and you will readily ſay as Matthew here, This name of Nazarite was commonly given him, that it might be fulfilled which was ſpoken by the Prophets, He ſhall be called a Nazarite. So as although there were no other Scriptures in the Prophets to fore-ſignifie this thing than these which were his Types, yet that alone is sufficient to call for Matthews πληρωθῇ, that it might be fulfilled: Yea, and the name and thing more eminently fulfilled in him than it was in them: And he a more transcendent Votary, made more holy and more sanctified than they all. Chap. 4.

CHAP. IV.

That Sampson, and other Nazarites of the Law, were Types of Christ the great Nazarite, who Dedicated him to the Holy Work of Redemption. By what Rules and Reasons we may judge that Christ was in this respect typified by those Nazarites.

TWO things here are to be further enquired into.

I. By what it doth appear that Sampson and Joseph, and those by the Law of Vowes that were Nazarites under the Old Law, were therein Types of our Jesus tearmed the Nazarite.

II. How he being a Nazarite, or a devoted Person from his very Conception and Education, in his younger years was fore-signified, and how fitly and correspondently his being tearmed a Nazarite from the City Nazareth (which Matthew affirms) falls in herewith: As also by what a wonderful Providence it came to pass that this great and important title of the Christ Nazarite, should commonly and ordinarily be given him by the Jewes themselves, they intending it only to signifie, that he was an Inhabitant of the City Nazareth, and but to vilifie him; but God intending it further to signifie his Dedication and Consecration to the Work of Redemption from his Conception, and all along in his Education, Nazareth being the place of both.

To clear the First; viz. How Sampson and other Vowed Nazarites, appear to be Types of Christ.

1. In general; even by the same rule that we know Adam and Solomon to have been Types of him, and that what was said of them is to be applyed to him, who yet are no where in the Old Testament call'd his Types. And as we receive the testimony of Paul that so applies it from them; so we may here do this of Matthew by the same warrant; though we had no other special application of these types unto Christ in the Old Testament.

The general rule which the Apostles went by, and which the Jewes themselves assented unto, and their teachers taught them, was, that whatever eminent and extraordinary Excellency was found in any of their Ancestours renowned in the Old Testament, or in the Ceremonial Law; that all such fore-signified the Messiah to come as the perfection and centre of them. This themselves acknowledge of David, who yet was not stiled a Saviour or Deliverer, as Sampson and Joseph are expresly tearmed, which was also the eminent Character and Work of our Jesus; this I say they acknowledge of Melchisedeck, David, Solomon, the High Priest among the Jewes, their Kings, &c. then if it be so, that special institution of the Nazarite must mean the like. And the Reason is undeniable; for what Excellency was it that a Nazarite, a Votary under the Old Law, took upon him the profession of? Why a peculiar liar and more ſingular Holineſs, Separation, Conſecration of their Perſon unto God, in ſome ſpecial ſervice which they were by Vow or Dedication obliged unto above their Brethren, which they expreſſed by a peculiar ſtrictneſs in abſtaining from Wine, and the like, which others did not: Thus Numb. 6. 2, 3, 4, 5. Speak unto the children of Iſrael, and ſay unto them, When either man or woman ſhall ſeparate themſelves to vow a vow of a Nazarite, to ſeparate themſelves unto the Lord. He ſhall ſeparate himſelf from wine, and ſtrong drink, and ſhall drink no vinegar of wine, or vinegar of ſtrong drink, neither ſhall he drink any liquor of grapes, nor eat moiſt grapes or dryed. All the dayes of his ſeparation ſhall he eat nothing that is made of the vine-tree, from the kernels unto the husk. All the dayes of the vow of his ſeparation, there ſhall no raſour come upon his head: until the dayes be fulfilled in the which he ſeparateth himſelf unto the Lord, he ſhall be holy, and ſhall let the locks of the hair of his head grow. He ſhall be holy; that is, peculiarly, ſingularly holy. Now then if Civil Excellencies in publick Perſons were types of him, as Kings, &c. then Sacred much more, and that of ſpecial Holineſs and Conſecration to God above any other.

Peculiar Holineſs, whether Real or Ceremonial, did make a Nazarite; therefore in Numb. 6. 8. He is called holy to the Lord. And a Nazarite is tranſlated by the Septuagint ἅγιος an holy man, eſpecially they were tearmed ſuch when theſe were joyned with their being Saviours and Deliverers of the People of God. All ſuch were eminently, and muſt be acknowledged types of him that was to be the great Saviour and Deliverer whom the Jewes expected.

2. Particularly, to give the Reaſons for it.

[1.] Joſeph, both for his excelling in Holineſs above his Brethren, as alſo his eminent advancement over them, was an apparent type of Chriſt.

1. For Holineſs. It might ſeem by the Story he was devoted thereto from his younger years, when his Brethren were vain and wicked, which is diſcovered in the Story by this, that when he was ſeventeen years old, he deteſting their ſinful wayes, brought the report thereof unto his Father, being a Reprover of his Brethren, for which his Brethren hated him. That other of his Dignity is more apparent. For theſe Reaſons he is twice call'd a Nazarite.

(1.) By Jacob his Father in his Propheſie, for ſo that his laſt ſpeech concerning his Son was, Gen. 49. 26. The bleſſings of thy Father have prevailed above the bleſſings of my progenitours, unto the utmoſt bound of the everlaſting hills; they ſhall be on the head of Joſeph, and on the crown of the head of him that was ſeparate from his brethren. In the Original it is, That was a Nazarite among his brethren.

(2.) And then by Moſes it is again repeated, as of myſtical importance: Deut. 33. 16. And in this laſt place, the Septuagint hath it δεδοξασται επ' αδελφοις, He was glorious above his brethren. And added unto this was (as you all know) Joſeph his being a Saviour, and ſo acknowledged by Jacob: And he was ſo upon record in the bringing the firſt fruits acknowledged by all his Poſterity: My Father was a Syrian ready to periſh, and who ſaved them? Joſeph. And the Gentile Egyptians they alſo acknowledged it, Gen. 42. 2. Thou haſt ſaved our lives. And he was one ſeparated, ſingled out by God, and ſent afore to ſave them. Joſeph was beloved of his Father, ſo Chriſt is the beloved. Joſeph was bleſſed above all, and his houſe in him, Gen. 49. 26. Deut. 33. 16. ſo we are bleſſed in Chriſt. Eph. 1. 3. Bleſſed be the God and Father of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, who hath bleſſed us with all ſpiritual bleſſings in heavenly places in Chriſt. Joſeph was carried into Egypt, ſo Chriſt too: Matth. 2. 15. Out of Egypt have I called my Son. Joſeph ſold to the Gentiles, was a Saviour to the Jewes and Gentiles, ſo Chriſt too. Joſeph was ſuddenly advanced out of Priſon, Chriſt in Priſon, Iſa. 53. 8. taken out of Priſon, and then aſcended. Joſeph in his advancement forgives, ſo Chriſt on the Croſs; and when he came firſt to Heaven, as a teſtimony thereof, he converted three thouſand of the Jewes that had Crucified him. Joſephs Brethren bow to him, and of Chriſt it is ſaid, All knees ſhall bow to him.

And

Chap. 4.

And becauſe that this title Nazarite was, in Joſephs example, uſed to deſign and note out one that excelled his Brethren, and was a Ruler over them, as Joſeph was; hence further, the word Nezer and Nazer was after uſed to expreſs the Oyl and Mitre that Conſecrated the Prieſt; alſo the Crown that was ſet upon their Kings: So as their Kings, Prophets and Prieſts, were Nazarites all of them in the Type. Thus the Mitre on the High Prieſts head, in which Holineſs to the Lord was written, Exod. 29. 6. is called Nizri; and Chap. 39. 30. the Oyl that anointed his head, Levit. 21. 12. is called the holy oyl; and the word for holy there is Nezer: And the Diadem of the King is tearmed by the ſame name Nezer, 2 Sam. 1. 10. Pſal. 89. 4. and Pſal. 132. 18. as being a ſign of his ſeparation from his brethren: So then this name ſeems to ſet the Mitre and Crown upon Chriſts head. In plain words they were all Nazarites, Kings, Prieſts and Prophets. Now take in all theſe, and I am ſure you muſt have Prophets enough that came in to call him Nazarite in recording the ſtories of theſe his Types. Thoſe that call him Holy, holy, holy, as Angels do, Iſa 6. or ſeeing his Glory, as Dan. 9. call him moſt holy. Thoſe who call him ſeparated; Heb. 7. 26. Anointed (as Joſeph) with oyl above his Brethren. Heb. 1. 9. A Perſon ſanctified to his Work, as he ſpeaks of himſelf, when to dye. John 17. 19. What need I quote any more? All theſe expreſs his being a Nazarite.

[2.] Of Sampſon, it is yet more expreſly ſaid, Judg. 13. 5 that he ſhould be called a Nazarite to God from the womb. And to what end was that ſeparation of his from the Womb made, and he markt out thereby? It follows; He ſhall begin to ſave or deliver Iſrael out of the hands of the Philiſtims their enemies: And he killed theſe Enemies, and delivered that People without weapons, by the Jaw-bone of an Aſs, a contemptible Inſtrument for ſuch a ſlaughter; and at laſt dyed out of an Heroickneſs of Spirit by an extraordinary warrant, for it was effected by an extraordinary ſtrength renewed upon him; and ſo as he was a greater Conquerour in his Death, than in all his Life. You know how eaſie and natural it is to find all theſe in our Jeſus: But how his being Conſecrated from the Womb was a Type of Chriſt, (that is the main intended by me) I ſhall explain in the Second Head.

In the mean time the reſult of theſe two Types is to repreſent Chriſt as a Nazarite, eminently for theſe three things.

1. Excelling Holineſs and ſtrictneſs of Life, which was the Law of Nazarites.

2. Dominion or Rule over their Brethren, as their Kings and Prieſts were, and Joſeph and Sampſon Judge of Iſrael.

3. Being a Saviour and Deliverer from Death and Enemies. Sampſon begun to deliver, &c. Judg. 3. 15.

Now all theſe are found to have met in our Chriſt, as is the import of that ordinary Appellation given him, Ἰησοῦς Ναζαρηνός, Jeſus of Nazareth, or the Nazarite, which are uſually coupled together.

1. Jeſus is the Name of Saviour given him at his Conception, Mat. 1. 21. Thou ſhalt call his name Jeſus: For he ſhall ſave his people from their ſins. And then Nazarite imports his being ſeparated to that work, namely to ſave; as in that ſpeech of the Angel he was declared to be, whilſt his Conception at Nazareth was effecting in the Virgins Womb.

2. For Holineſs. The firſt time that we read of, wherein he was called Jeſus the Nazarite, was by Satan, Mark 1. 24. and Luke 4. 34. And there, by the Providence of God this is added and confeſſed by that evil Spirit: I know who thou art, the holy one of God, that eminent holy one, of whom all other eminent holy ones were Types; which was the import of the Name Nazarite. Now compare this with what is ſaid of Sampſon his Type, Judg. 13. 5. He ſhall be a Nazarite unto God, or of God. And the Septuagint tranſlates Nazarite ſometimes ἅγιος, one holy; and ſo to be an holy one of God, and a Nazarite to God is all one. But of Sampſon his being his Type in his Conception, more hereafter.

3. His being King. Go to the Croſs, you find it written there, Jeſus of Nazareth, or, the Nazarite King of the Jewes.

CHAP.

CHAP. V.

How Christ was presignified as a Nazarite by these Types. The Parallel between him, and Sampson. How God having thus in the Type foretold, That Christ should be a Nazarite, so wisely order'd it, that both his Conception and Education should be there, that so that Name Nazarite, as an Inhabitant of that City, might belong to him.

NOW follows the Second Head, which hath two things in it.

1. How his being a Nazarite, or Devoted Person from his very Conception and Education in his younger years was foresignified in any of these Types.

2. How it came to pass that though he was called a Nazarite by the Jews as in their Common Language, noting forth only an Inhabitant of Nazareth, as Matthew tells us, this should yet withal fall in and serve to fulfil Gods intention of his being called a Nazarite, as was by these Prophetical Types foresignified, And by what a wonderful Providence this was brought about so to fulfil the Prophesie.

For the first, Take the Type of Sampson, and see how exactly parallel it falls out, to foresignifie Christs being a Nazarite from his Conception. Let us but seriously compare the History of both.

Of Sampson, Judg. 13. 2, 3, 5. And there was a certain man of Zorah of the family of the Danites, whose name was Manoah, and his wife was barren and bare not. And the Angel of the Lord appeared unto the woman, and said unto her, Behold now thou art barren and beares not, but thou shalt conceive and bear a Son. For lo, thou shalt conceive and bear a Son, and no Rasour shall come on his head, for the child shall be a Nazarite unto God from the womb, and he shall begin to deliver Israel out of the hand of the Philistines.

Of Christ, Luke 1. 26, 27, 28, 30, 31. And in the sixth moneth the Angel Gabriel was sent from God, unto a City of Galilee, named Nazareth, To a Virgin espoused to a man, whose name was Joseph of the house of David, and the Virgins Name was Mary. And the Angel came in unto her, and said, Hail, thou that art highly favoured, the Lord is with thee: Blessed art thou among women. And the Angel said unto her, fear not Mary, for thou hast found favour with God. And behold, thou shalt conceive in thy womb, and bring forth a Son, and shalt call his Name Jesus.

1. Observe Sampsons wonderful Separation from his Conception. An Angel is sent to foretel it, The Prophesie of an Angel is recorded: So it is in Christ.

2. Both *A*ppearances of the Angels are afore the Conception of either.

3. As the Angel is sent to a Woman utterly barren to shew Sampsons Conception should be extraordinary, as to an extraordinary end, So Gabriel is sent to a Virgin, who without Mans Copulation with her had a Womb far more barren and uncapable to conceive a Child than Sampsons Mothers was. And therefore to strengthen her Faith the Angel tells her, ver. 36, 37. Behold thy Cousin Elizabeth, she hath also conceived a Son in her old age; and this is the sixth moneth with her who was called barren. For with God nothing shall be unpossible.

4. The Messages sent at and before their Conception, to both concerning these their Sons are parallel.

1. That

Chap. 5.

1. That he be a Nazarite of God, that is Holy and Conſecrate to God from the Womb (yea, from his Conception, and therefore his Mother was warned not to drink Wine nor ſtrong drink from this time afore his Conception, nor whilſt ſhe bore him) unto the very day of his Death. Now of Chriſt, It is at and from his Conception, Luke 1. 35. The Holy Ghoſt ſhall come upon thee, and the power of the higheſt ſhall overſhadow thee; Therefore alſo that holy thing which ſhall be born of thee, ſhall be called the Son of God. Now a Nazarite of God; and one Holy unto God were all one as hath been ſaid.

2. In that the Work which each of theſe were ſeparated unto is declared alike at their Conception, as to be Saviours of the People; of Sampſon it is ſaid, he ſhall begin (as being Chriſts Type) to ſave Iſrael out of the hands of the Philiſtines, And as expreſly of Chriſt it is ſaid by the Angel, Matth. 1. 21. She ſhall bring forth a Son, and thou ſhalt call his Name Jeſus; for he ſhall ſave his people from their ſins. Not to inſiſt on this Addition which ſome make, That Herod a Philiſtine was then King, and the Jews ſubject to Chriſt, when this Meſſage was delivered of Chriſt, as in Sampſons time they alſo were.

And laſtly, How Chriſt was a Nazarite until the day of his Death from the Womb, as of Sampſon it is ſaid, I need not ſhew, That one Text ſpeaks it, Obediens uſque ad mortem, Obedient until Death all his life long, Phil. 2. 8. Only take this, That at his Conception at firſt, thoſe three fore-mentioned Characters or Deſignments of a Nazarite were declared by the Angel. 1. Jeſus a Saviour. 2. The Holy one of God. 3. His Dignity and pre-eminence over all, Luke 1. 31, 32. Thou ſhalt conceive in thy womb, and bring forth a Son, and ſhalt call his Name Jeſus: And he ſhall be great, and ſhall be called the Son of the higheſt, and the Lord God ſhall give unto him the throne of his Father David. To which the Types both of Sampſon the Judge, and Joſeph the Ruler do fully anſwer. Thus alſo again at his Death, thoſe all meet in the Inſcription on the Croſs, Jeſus the Saviour of Nazareth or Nazarene, the Holy one, King of the Jews.

For the Second particular, viz. how it was ordered by God, that the Jews ſhould call Jeſus a Nazarite, Three things are worthy our Notice in it.

1. That God in his All-wiſe Council ſo ordered it, That the Name or Title Nazarite which in the Greek is Ναζωραῖος ſhould be uſed in the Common Language of the Jews to expreſs an Inhabitant of the City Nazareth, which word alſo had been ſingled forth by God to expreſs a Nazarite to himſelf, one holy and conſecrated to himſelf It was as many other words are, vox æquivoca, that had two Senſes equally and vulgarly in uſe. Fuit tum nomen Gentilitium, tum Religioſum, As Latinus, or Λατῖνος ſignified both an Inhabitant, or one born in Italy, an Italian, ſo denoting a Mans Countrey; and was anciently uſed to ſignifie one that adhered to, and was one of the Popiſh Religion as diſtinguiſht from that profeſſed by the Greek Churches, or now by the Proteſtant. And this was foretold by Ireneus as the Title of Antichriſt his Followers long before that Diviſion was made; he thus interpreting the Myſtery of the Number 666, Rev. 13. 18. So now Romanus a Roman may and doth import one either dwelling, or born at Rome, or one of the Romiſh Religion. Or as if a Child of an Engliſhman that had been of the Separation at Amſterdam, and educated or born there, ſhould be termed an Amſterdamian, it would import at once both the place whence he came and where he dwelt; as alſo (as commonly it doth) that he was of that Profeſſion which the Engliſh Separatiſts did hold forth there. Multitudes of ſuch Inſtances are producible, and thus it fellout here.

Now that this word Ναζωραῖος was then uſed to expreſs both, I judge more evident.

1. In that we are ſure that Ναζωραῖος imported an Inhabitant of Nazareth; for Matthew, who gives him that ſtile, directly pointeth us unto that ſenſe and ſignification of the word: For he ſayes, He came and dwelt in Nazareth, that it might be fulfilled. He was called a Nazarite, as being vulgarly ſo ſtiled from that City; yea and therefore it was that the Jews in ſcorn ſo called him, to defame him from that City, which was ſo vile and mean, as no good good was thence expected, and therefore much less he that was to be the Messiah should come forth from thence. Also this appears in that in another Evangelist, speaking at a time afore that Name was given, he is called ὁ ἀπὸ τῆς Ναζαρὲθ, One of the City of Nazareth.

Then 2. The Scripture or Prophets no where speaking of Christs dwelling in the City Nazareth, the fulfilling of the Prophesies must be found in this, that this word Ναζαρῆος hath some other Mysterious signification, which should be proper and eminent in him that was the true Christ. Now this title ὁ Ναζαρῆος is in the same Letters and Syllables thereof a Nazarite, or one holy and separate to God : For the Septuagint translating the Hebrew word for Nazir or Nazarite into the Greek, do still use this word with the same Syllables and Letters, only they sometimes use (α) (ζα) Ναζαρῆος, sometimes (η) or (ζη) Ναζηρῆος, whereas Matthew (ω) Ναζωρῆος, and that is all the difference.

And this those of an opposite Opinion object, That because Matthew useth the Letter (ω) whereas the Septuagint useth (α), that therefore it is not the same word which they use to signifie a Nazarite by : To which the Answer is ready.

For 1. In that the Septuagint themselves do vary it ; sometimes writing it with (α), sometimes with (η), yet in each they alike intended to signifie a Religious Nazarite : I say, if they alter (α) into (η), in either intending the same word and the same signification ; it may bear as well this other alteration of (ω), it being but a matter of divers pronunciation, as Grotius observes, and not a diversity of the word it self, which in differing Dialects when the word is the same, is ordinary in Languages, as we see in the Scotish and English Tongue, (which I mention for vulgar illustration) : Yea the Ancient Fathers make another alteration, writing it with (ι) : So Eusebius, Epiphanius and Nazianzeen, terming them Nazireans or Nazirites.

But 2. We all know, that nothing is more usual, than in Translating a word out of one Language into another, to change a letter ; as Miriam in the Hebrew, the Greeks into Maria, Schemuel, Samuel, and the like. And the Syriack, which was the Language Christ and the Jewes did then speak, did ordinarily in pronouncing the Hebrew, turn α into ω : So as Nazareth after the Hebrew pronunciation, was Nazoreth in the Syriack. Now Matthew in the Greek did incline and conform the termination or sound of the word to the Syriack rather than to the Hebrew, the Syriack being then in use. And so Nazorean or Nazorite, is all one with Nazarite.

3. I omit to retort, that those of the other Opinion that would have Christ here called by Matthew Ναζωρῆος, from Netzer, the title in Hebrew which Isaiah gives to Christ, Isa. 11. 1. Of the branch, is far remoter in sound and letters by far. And besides, that that is a Substantive word, this of Ναζωρῆος is an Adjective. But of this afterwards.

It is Objected 2. That Christ is also called Jesus Ναζαρηνὸς, the Nazarene, as well as Ναζαρῆος, the Nazarain. But Nazaren was not used (say they) to signifie a Nazarite.

And it is Answered again, That if Nazarene and Na-araian (that I may in the English variation express it) signified both one where his Cities name is intended, as 'tis evident they did : Then why not both these words also be as promiscuously used for a Religious Nazarite, when 'tis evident that one of them was used to express it ; viz. his being a Nazarite. There is nothing more usual in all Languages than to make such variations in names of Religion as well as other ; and yet so as they are still but one word in signification. As we say sometimes a Grecian, sometimes a Greek, and both signifying either his Religion, or his Country. A Roman, a Romanist, a Calvinian or Calvinist ; so if you will, a Nazarite a Nazarean is all one.

And 2. Matthew that holds out to us this Mystery, he calls him Nazarain, or Nazarite, not Nazarene ; so in this place, and so constantly else-where. And thus the Inscription on the Cross (as in John also) and not the other word Nazarene at all. So as Matthew intended to hold forth his being a Nazarite, as well as of the City Nazareth.

The

Chap. 5.

The Second thing to be noted is, That as Chriſt was to be a Nazarite from his Conception (as in his Type of Sampſon it was fore-ſignified) and alſo in his younger years of Education, as well as when he dyed, ſo God in his Providence ordered it, that the City Nazareth, from whence he ſhould by the Jews be called a Nazarite, was not only the very place of his Education, but alſo of his very Conception, and this is ſedulouſly noted (to complete this Myſtery) unto us in the Story of his Conception, Luke 1. 26, 27. In the ſixth moneth the Angel Gabriel was ſent from God unto a City of Galilee, named Nazareth, To a Virgin eſpouſed to a man whoſe name was Joſeph of the houſe of David, and the Virgins name was Mary. So then though Bethlehem was the place of his Birth, yet this Nazareth, from whence he had his Name of Nazarite was the Place of his Conception, to ſhew he was a Nazarite from his very Conception, which hath been the point I have purſued. And as it was the place of his Conception, ſo of his Abode and Education, until he put himſelf forth into the world, and appeared as the Meſſiah. This you have, Matth. 2. 22.

Now yet further to add unto Matthews πληρωθῇ, and to make up his fulfilling of Propheſies yet more full, It was foretold by the Prophet Jeremy, that his Conception ſhould be in one of the Cities of the Ten Tribes, which the ſtory here in Matthew tells us was Nazareth. The Prophet Micah had before Jeremiahs time foretold that the City of his Birth ſhould be Bethlehem, which the Tribes of Judah and Benjamin gloried in, and therefore deſpiſed the other Ten. The Phariſees underſtood this as you read in the Evangeliſts, when Herod puts the Queſtion to them: But that any of the Cities of the Twelve Tribes ſhould have any Honour of his Reſidence, much leſs the greateſt Honour of the laying the Foundation of this Tabernacle, which God, not Man rear'd, viz. his very Conception, they never ſo much as dreamt of this, eſpecially not of that Region, or part of the Ten Tribes Galilee; and above all the Cities in Galilee not out of that barren deſert place of all other, viz. Shall Chriſt come out of Galilee, ſay they, John 7. 41. And again, ver. 42. Hath not the Scripture ſaid that Chriſt cometh of the ſeed of David, and out of the Town of Bethlehem where David was? And again, ver. 52. Search and look, for out of Galilee ariſeth no Prophet. Not ſo much as a Prophet, much leſs the Meſſiah, the great Prophet. And yet it was apparent, That one of their Prophets, Jonah was a Galilean, 2 Kings, 14. 25. Gath-hepher was a City of the Tribe of Zabulon, compared with Joſhua 19. 13. which Zabulon was a part of Galilee, Iſa. 9. 1.

But as for that City of Nazareth they are yet more confident, that Chriſt ſhould not come thence, John 1. 46. Can any good come out of Nazareth? And out of this Confidence it was that they ſtiled him ſo ordinarily Jeſus of Nazareth in ſcorn, as imagining, that alone did carry a Confutation and Evidence in it, that this Man of all elſe could not be the Meſſiah. So confident are Men often of ſome one unanſwerable Argument againſt a great truth, when on the contrary it proves to be the greateſt Evidence of that truth, as in this caſe it fell out. But loe how Jeremy had foretold, how though Bethlehem was to be the place of his Birth; yet one of the Cities of the Ten Tribes, and that in Galilee ſhould be the place of his Conception (which is the thing in hand) as Iſaiah had alſo that Galilee ſhould be of his Preaching. Read Jeremiah 31. 21, 22. Set thee up way-marks; make thee high heaps: ſet thine heart towards the high-way, even the way which thou wenteſt: Turn again, O Virgin of Iſrael, turn again to theſe thy Cities. How long wilt thou go about, O thou back-ſliding daughter? for the Lord hath created a new thing in the earth, A woman ſhall compaſs a man. Jeremiah as you know lived till the Babyloniſh Captivity: And had foretold how the Captive Jews ſhould again have Liberty by Cyrus his Proclamation to inhabit their own Land, when Cyrus ſhould give them liberty, as Iſaiah had foretold, and as he promiſeth Judah, ver. 23, 24. Thus ſaith the Lord of Hoſts, the God of Iſrael, as yet they ſhall uſe this Speech in the Land of Judah, and in the Cities thereof, when I ſhall bring again this captivity, The Lord bleſs thee, O habitation of Juſtice, and mountains of Holyneſs. And there ſhall dwell in Judah it ſelf, and in all the Cities thereof, together husbandmen, and they that go forth with flocks. Alſo God courteth

Book IV.

Ephraim or the Ten Tribes, who had been long afore diſperſed, to return with the Tribes of Judah into their Cities alſo, which they ſhould then have free liberty to do. And to invite and allure them to it, they had the Propheſies of their Meſſiah to them both, the Delight and Joy of each, Mal. 3. 1. and Glory the People of Iſrael: And how each ſhould come to have a ſhare in him, the one in his Birth, the other in his Conception.

1. Of his Birth, That it ſhould be in thoſe parts the Two Tribes inhabit he propheſies, Jer. 31. ver. 15, 16, 17. Thus ſaith the Lord, a voice was heard in Ramah, lamentation and bitter weeping: Rachel weeping for her children, refuſed to be comforted for her Children, becauſe they were not. Thus ſaith the Lord, Refrain thy voice from weeping, and thine eyes from tears: for thy work ſhall be rewarded, ſaith the Lord, and they ſhall come again from the land of the enemy: And there is hope in thine end, ſaith the Lord, that thy children ſhall come again to their own border. Now this properly and exactly relates to the ſtory of his Birth, for being born in Bethlehem, which was on the Confines of Judea, near Ramah, his Birth there was the occaſion of the Slaughter of many of Rachels, the Mother of Benjamin, her Great Grand-Children there in Ramah, and alſo of Judah in Bethlehem. You all know how Matthew applyeth this to his Birth, Matth. 2. 16, 17, 18. Herod ſent forth and ſlew all the children that were in Bethlehem, and in all the coaſts thereof, from two years old and under, according to the time which he had diligently inquired of the wiſe men. Then was fulfilled that which was ſpoken by Jeremy the Prophet, ſaying, In Rama was there a voice heard, Lamentation, and weeping, and great mourning, Rachel weeping for her children, and would not be comforted, becauſe they are not. And to comfort her, he tells her, that together with theſe Lamentations and Throws of hers, the Meſſiahs Birth (who was the hope of Iſrael,) ſhould be attended into the World, which would ſweeten theſe Sorrows in the end or iſſue, to the hearts of the reſt of the Elect, which were to come out of their Loins in thoſe times, and then to dwell in thoſe Cities. And ſo this Birth of the Meſſiah to be in their Quarters was worth this Sorrow, and abundantly recompenſed it, and was a ſufficient invitation for Benjamin and Judah to return to their Cities.

Then Secondly, He applies himſelf to Ephraim, or the other Ten Tribes, as it is expreſſed, ver. 18, 19, 20. And invites them by this Argument to turn again with Judah into their Cities, That the Conception of the Meſſiah ſhould be in their Quarters, and in one of their Cities, as his Birth was to be in the other, ver. 21, 22. Turn again oh Virgin of Iſrael, turn again to theſe thy Cities. How long wilt thou go about, O thou backſliding daughter? for the Lord hath created a new thing in the earth, a woman ſhall compaſs a man. His meaning is, that this ſhare and intereſt they and their Regions ſhould have in the Meſſiah, that in one of their Cities, this ſtrange and unheard of thing in the Earth, and which the firſt Creation knew not, ſhould be a Woman, and a Woman alone without a Man ſhould encompaſs a Man in her Womb, and conceive that Gebar, that ſtrong Man, that Son of Man, the Chriſt. Now this he alleadging as an Argument to return unto their Cities, his Scope muſt be, that in one of their Cities this great thing ſhould be done. Now then turn we again to Luke 1. 26. And the Region, Province or Shire in which this fell out was Galilee, and the City in that Countrey this of Nazareth. In the ſixth moneth the Angel Gabriel was ſent from God unto a City of Galilee, named Nazareth. So then in a manifeſt contradiction to the Jews, here is ſome good thing, yea, our chiefeſt good comes out of Galilee, and Nazareth, it was the place of his Conception.

Yea, and to view how all things meet yet more fully; as Sampſon was from his Conception proclaimed a Nazarite, and the Eminent Type of Chriſt in this of his: So as in alluſion thereunto, the word which Jeremy there uſeth of Chriſts Conception hath an eye unto Sampſon his Type herein. It is not ſimply, that a Woman ſhall conceive a Man, but Geber, a Strong Man, that Strong Man of whom the ſtrongeſt Man that ever the World had, Sampſon was but the Shadow, a Man filled with ſtrength to overcome all our Enemies, and to lift Hell-Gates off their Hinges, and to carry them up the Mountains as Sampſon did. Thus much for the ſecond thing.

CHAP.

CHAP. VI.

How God wiſely ordered it, that the Jews ſhould call Chriſt a Nazarite, though he was not really born in that City.

THE next thing to be noticed, is, that God having in theſe Types foretold, he ſhould be a Nazarite; and alſo in his wiſe diſpoſement forelaid it, that an Inhabitant of Nazareth, and a Nazarite devoted to be more eminently holy and a Saviour, ſhould by one and the ſame word be ſignified in vulgar uſe: Yet further ſtand and admire that wonderful Providence of his, whereby he brought it about; that the Jewes themſelves ſhould upon occaſion of this City come unawares to give him this Name; ſo to fulfil the Propheſies which themſelves read, and underſtood not.

Let it be 1. conſidered, That our Chriſt was not to take up the outward Legal and Ceremonial Profeſſion of a Nazarite among the Jews, which his fore-runner John Baptiſt, and Sampſon did. No, as he profeſſed not himſelf to be Legally a Prieſt, that is, after the Order of Aaron; ſo nor to be a Nazarite, having a Vow upon him according to the tenour of their Law; but came ſecretly and unknown to fulfil the ſubſtance and reality of both. Now how ſhould this Name then come vulgarly to be given him? No other way but by his having had his known and conſtant abode from his Infancy in that City Nazareth. Then,

2. Conſider how contingent a thing that was to fall on't. The ſeat of the Seed, and progeny of David by Inheritance, and according to their Genealogy, was Bethlehem by Jeruſalem, far removed from Nazareth in Galilee: But Herod then Reigning, who was jealous of all that might pretend to be Heirs of that Crown he then wore, theſe the true Heirs, Joſeph and Mary, were forced to skulk and retire themſelves to theſe remoter parts of Galilee, as the ſeat of their dwelling; and hence it fell out that this his Conception fell out to be in Nazareth. Well but

3. That his Conception (ſo ſecret a matter) was at Nazareth, the Jewes ordinarily would not have known or conſidered; nor was it (as it is not) the manner of Men to give the name of ones Country to the place he was Conceived: Yea God ordered that ſo (as had not Matthew related it) the Jewes nor we would never have heeded it; for as ſoon as ſhe had Conceived, the Angel having told her, to the end to confirm her Faith, that her Couſin Elizabeth, who had been ſo long barren, had alſo Conceived a Son. Luke 1. 36. And behold, thy couſin Elizabeth, ſhe hath alſo conceived a Son in her old age: and this is the ſixth month with her, who was called barren. It is ſaid at Ver. 39. 40. That Mary aroſe in thoſe dayes, and went into the hill-country with haſte, into a City of Juda, and entred into the houſe of Zacharias, and ſaluted Elizabeth. And this they did to rejoyce and congratulate each the other. But this performed, Mary returned to Nazareth as intending to lye in there, but was juſt againſt the time of her delivery hurried to Bethlehem, by reaſon of a Decree that came forth from Auguſtus the Emperour, That all the world ſhould be taxed. Luke 2. 1. And the Law of that Nation was as Ver. 3. All went to be taxed, every one into his own City. Hence therefore it came to paſs, as Ver. 4. 5. That Joſeph alſo went up from Galilee, out of the City of Nazareth, into Judea, unto the City of David, which is called Bethlehem, (becauſe he was of the houſe and lineage of David) to be taxed with Mary his eſpouſed wife, being great with child. And this Providence was to fulfil the Propheſie of the place of his Birth at Bethlehem; which yet not being their conſtant place of abode, and his coming thither but tranſient, it ſtill caſt a blind amongſt the Jewes, that though he was ſo born at Bethlehem, they accounted him as a conſtant Inha-

Book IV. bitant of the other place Nazareth: For we read, Ver. 39. That when they had performed all things according to the law of the Lord, they returned into Galilee to their own City Nazareth.

Well but 4 There is yet a far greater contingency falls out, utterly to prevent his being called a Nazarite from this City, though hitherto the City of his Parents abode: For unleſs they had abode there, and he with them the greater part of his Life, the Jewes had never came to have given him this Name. Herod being diſappointed by the Wiſe Men to bring him word of the Town where he was born, meant to make the moſt exact enquiry after this Child, that the power and ſagacity of ſo ſubtle a King could make to find him out to deſtroy him. And lo, no ſooner was Joſeph returned to his City Nazareth, Matth. 2. 13. But an Angel appeared to Joſeph in a dream, ſaying, Ariſe, and take the young child and his mother, and flee into Egypt, and be thou there until I bring thee word: for Herod will ſeek the young child to deſtroy him. Which indeed further ſtrengthens the point in hand, and ſhewes him to have been that true Nazarite, of whom Joſeph was the Type, in this reſpect, that when young he was driven into Egypt as Chriſt alſo was. And then again in his return, to fulfil another Propheſie ſpoken of by Hoſeah, Out of Egypt have I called my Son. Luke 1. 15. But when in Egypt Joſephs heart was weaned from Nazareth, which was a place of his abode but out of neceſſity and fear of Herod: And the Angel having told him, that they were dead which ſought the childs life; he came as is evident by ver. 22. with a purpoſe to go into Judea; but hearing that Archilaus, and not his Brother Herodes, had obtained the rule thereof, and knowing him to be bloody as his Father, 'tis ſaid Ver. 22. But when he heard that Archelaus did reign in Judea, in the room of his Father Herod, he was afraid to go thither. And then alſo being over and above this fourth time warned (as it follows) by God in a dream, he turned aſide into the parts of Galilee, clean beyond his intention and inclination. And upon this occaſion, and this alone, it was that, as it follows, He came and dwelt in a City called Nazareth, and ſo from that time made his conſtant abode there; that by this means this might be fulfilled (we have all this while been treating of) which was ſpoken by the Prophets, He ſhall be called a Nazarite.

For Laſtly, Upon this occaſion, this City being now his continued ſeat of his Education and Life till he was thirty years old, the Jewes who enquired, and were curious and diligent enough, and did know from whence he came, they out of ſcorn and malice did give him this Title, Jeſus, Jeſus the Nazarite, or of Nazareth: And this they gave him in contempt, as being in their account, a baſe and unworthy place, ſo barren, as it was a Proverb among them, Can any good come out of Nazareth? And the Devil he ſtirred them up to it; himſelf (ſay ſome) firſt giving him that title, Mark 1. 24. howſoever he with the firſt ſeconds it; and he did it on purpoſe to divert the thoughts of the Jewes from enquiring after his Birth at Bethlehem, they all crying it up to have been at Nazareth. Then it was generally given out thus by the People; Mark 10. 47. Luke 18. 37. and as his Fame grew, this Name ſpread alſo. And that it was out of ſcorn appears alſo by this, That as Tertullian ſaith, unto his time they called the Chriſtians Nazarites, as alſo Galileans. But lo, what Satan and the Jewes deſigned out of the greateſt Malice; God made uſe of the Malice of Man to attribute to him one of the greateſt Characters of his being the Meſſiah, which was to be a Nazarite, and holy unto God, by a Vow from his Conception, which had been wrought alſo in that City. Thus alſo he ordered Caiphas, out of Malice, to ſay, One man muſt dye for the people, to hold forth a juſt acknowledgment, that Chriſt by his Death ſhould be the Saviour of that People, and of all the Elect of God in the World. He ordered Pilate to ſay and not recall it, That he was King of the Jewes; which he did in ſcorn, but God thereby proclaimed him his King to all the World in theſe three general Languages, Greek, Latin and Hebrew.

Some Object againſt this Interpretation given, That it is no where written he ſhould be called a Nazarite; nay, nor were Joſeph and Sampſon ſo called.

The

Chap. 6.

The Anſwer is, That theſe two phraſes in Scripture are all one to be, and to be called. So when 'tis ſaid, He ſhall be called the Son of the moſt high; that is, He ſhall be the Son of the moſt high. He ſhall be called the Lord our righteouſneſs. And ſo it was true both of Sampſon and Joſeph, that they were Nazarites; and are expreſly ſaid to be ſeparated; and it is more true of Chriſt, that he was ſuch.

Again 'tis Objected, that Matthew ſayes by the Prophets: Whereas Moſes that wrote Joſephs Story and the Law, is diſtinguiſhed from the Prophets: Nor was he that wrote the Story of Sampſon in Judges a Prophet: And therefore this alluſion cannot be to theſe.

The Anſwer is eaſie.

1. That although in ſtricter ſenſe only they are termed Prophets that wrote thoſe Books of Propheſie, as Iſaiah, Jeremiah, and the ſmall Prophets; hence you read of Moſes, the Law, and the Prophets, as diſtinguiſhed; yet again in other Scriptures, the title of Prophet is given to all the Sacred Writers of the Old Teſtament. 2 Pet. 1. 19. The whole is termed a word of Propheſie. And ver. 20. 21. 'tis ſtiled propheſie of the Scripture, as inſpired by the Holy Ghoſt: So as all Scripture inſpired immediately by the Holy Ghoſt is termed Propheſie. So Heb. 1. 1. God ſpake in old time by the Prophets: And then cites the Books of Samuel and Chronicles, ver. 5. I will be to him a Father, &c. Acts 3. 24. Samuel who wrote a Story is termed a Prophet; and all the Writers of Scripture from his time are termed Prophets; and ver. 21. all are called holy Prophets, which have been ſince the World began.

2. And as to this particular, the thing in hand, it is evident, that both Jacob and Moſes, whilſt they ſpake this of Joſeph the Type of Chriſt, were then a Propheſying as truly as any of the Prophets: Jacob profeſſeth ſo to do in the beginning of his Speech, Gen. 49. 1. That I may tell you what ſhall befall you in the laſt dayes. And as evident it is, that Moſes in that his repetition of Joſephs being ſeparated from his Brethren, Deut. 33. 16. did then alſo by the Spirit of Propheſie, bleſs and foretel what ſhould befal him. And then for that other of Sampſon, it is delivered as a plain Propheſie, even before his Conception, how he ſhould be a Nazarite, who was therein a Type of Chriſt. And this though uttered by an Angel is recorded by a Sacred Writer that records it as a Propheſie afore-hand given. And thus much of Chriſts being Vowed and Conſecrated from his Conception.

CHAP. VII.

That another Propheſie of Chriſt Iſa. 11. 1. Jer. 23. 5. and Zach. 3. 8. is fulfilled in Chriſt a Nazarite, or Inhabitant of that City.

I Muſt not conceal to Ingratiate this, another known fair and pregnant Interpretation or Alluſion held forth by many Interpreters to another Propheſie of him: And I would there were a Thouſand of them more, if poſſible, to fall in into every thing about him. For the more ſuch Lines of Propheſie about our Jeſus meet in any one Center, the more aſcertained we are that he is that Meſſiah that was then to come, and the Scriptures are thereby diſcovered to be the more Myſtical and himſelf Illuſtrious. It is evident that Matthew whilſt he ſaies that he was ſpoken of by Prophets, not Prophet had more in his eye than one, yea, and Propheſies perhaps more than of one ſort; and ſo there will be a πληρωθη, as Brugenſis obſerves.

Lucas Brugenſ. in locum.

Now this other Interpretation affirms this Name Nazaraian to be an alluſion to that Miſtical and Metaphorical Name of Netzer; that is the Plant or Branch given him by Iſaiah. Chap. 11. 1. And there ſhall come forth a rod out of the ſtem of Jeſſe, and a branch ſhall grow out of his roots. Seconded by Jeremiah, Chap. 23. 5. Behold, the dayes come, ſaith the Lord, that I will raiſe up David a righteous branch, and a King ſhall reign and proſper, and ſhall execute judgment and juſtice in the earth. And Chap. 35. 15. And thirded by Zachary in two places, Chap. 3. 8. Behold I will bring forth my Servant the B R A N C H. And eſpecially Chap 6. 12. Thus ſpeaketh the Lord of hoſts, ſaying, Behold the man whoſe name is the B R A N C H: He ſhall grow up out of his place, and he ſhall build the temple of the Lord. And the name ſay they of the City Nazareth in Hebrew was Netzer, or Natſoreth, a City of Plants, (that abounded there ſay they) as Jeritho was called a City of Palms. So this of Griffs. And an Inhabitant of it in the Syriack Language then in uſe was Noſeraio: So then let us make an Apoſtrephe unto the Jewes. You might Oh Jewes come to ken and know your Meſſiah, among other accompliſhments of Propheſies, by this one, That he whom your Prophet calls the Plant, the Branch; it comes to paſs to fulfil that Propheſie, that he dwelt at Nazareth, which hath its name from Plants; ſo on purpoſe afore-deſigned by God, becauſe it was to be the renowned Habitation, and place of Education and Conception of him whom your Prophets had proclaimed the top Branch of all your Iſrael: And the ſame Providence ſo diſpoſing it, that whilſt you call him Nazarene, and Jeſus of Nazareth, you thereby fulfil this Propheſie, (though not aware of it) owning him, that thereby he ſhould be the Branch; The Plant Gods own right hand had planted: By which name the Prophets had foretold he ſhould be made famous by your ſelves, whilſt you ſtiled him, A man of Nazareth. Yea, and the Prophet Zachary ſeems, under that his Name the B R A N C H, to point us withal to this place where this Branch ſhould grow; The man whoſe name is the B R A N C H, ſhall grow out of his place, meaning this City Nazareth, where he had his Conception, and growing up; referring to his Education, which was there alſo until he went forth to Preach: And that foretold too in theſe following words, And he ſhall build the Temple of the Lord; (ſpeaking to Zerubbabel his Type, who built the ſecond Temple) fulfilled in our Chriſt, who ſayes, I will build my Church of the new teſtament: Which when he went firſt to lay the foundation of by Preaching the Goſpel, Providence diſpoſed ſo of it, that he went out from Nazareth, his place and City, as the 4th of Matthew hath it. So then what Matthew here ſayes, He dwelt in Nazareth, that it might might be fulfilled. He ſhall be called a Nazarite, a Dweller in a Branch Town, anſwers to what Zachary ſaies, Chap. 6. 12. Thus ſaith the Lord of hoſts, Behold the man whoſe name is the branch, and he ſhall grow up out of his place, and he ſhall build the Temple of the Lord. Chap. 7.

To name Towns from what more eminently groweth and aboundeth therein is uſual to this day in thoſe Eaſtern Countryes, as Herbert in his Deſcriptions of Perſia notes: As Shyras a Town of Milk, Whormoote a Town of Dates, Deagardow, a Town of Wallnuts, &c. In his Firſt Edition, p. 60.

But this Interpretation hath its Lameneſs, ſo as though it may be taken in as an alluſion, yet not ſo literally, as the former, much leſs only or adequately fitted to Matthews quotation here. For,

1. It cannot undoubtedly be proved, that the City Nazareth had its Name from Netzer Plants, For that Town was ſo obſcure as the Name of it is not recorded in the Old Teſtament, which ſhould decide it. Nor doth Zachary here uſe the word Netzer for Branch, as Iſaiah doth, and that but once, as prophecying of the Meſſiah. He uſeth the word [Semah] as alſo thoſe other Prophets mentioned do. So as if we ſhould entertain that to be Matthews whole or main Scope we put our ſelves upon but one Scripture or Propheſie, namely, that of Iſaiah, who in the Letters doth only uſe that word Netzer, all the reſt a far differing word. Now when Matthew here ſaies, That by being called a Nazarean from the City Nazareth, the Prophecies were fulfilled: It is a matter of ſameneſs of Names or Words th t muſt be intended to be found in thoſe Scriptures which are thus ſaid to be fulfilled. Now the Name or Word Netzer is no where elſe given him but in Iſaiah.

Again, That word is uſed by the Prophet of him is a Noun Subſtantive (as we ſay) A Plant or Branch, But the Title here mentioned by Matthew to be found in the Scripture anſwering to it is a Nown Adjective, ſignifying an Attribute or Qualification belonging to him.

But my Brethren, is it not pity, That theſe two Interpretations ſhould ſtrive in the Womb of this Text, the one againſt the other, if it were poſſible to reconcile and take in both. For then you will be ſure to have Prophets enough wait and attend upon the accompliſhment of it.

There have been of thoſe of old, and of late have endeavoured to take in both and reconcile them, whilſt others argue wholly for the one to exclude the other. So A Lapide, Cartwright, and Jackſon and Hierom of old, as appears by comparing his Comment on Matthew 2. laſt, and Iſa. 11. 1. So as that if we reſpect the Name Nazoraios, as Matthew gives it in the Letters and Syllables thereof, That of Chriſt being a Nazarite doth carry it clear: Yet ſo as withal there may be an alluſion to make it the more full unto Iſaiahs Net, for or Chriſts being the Branch; eſpecially conſidering the Name of the City was obſcure, and not mentioned in the Old Teſtament, and ſo uncertain, whether written by Tſ, or Z, by Tſade, or Zayn, Notſereth, or Nazareth primitively in the Hebrew. And if written by Tſ, yet that Letter Tſ being often turned in Pronunciation and Writing into Z, whereof Druſius and Grotius and others give many inſtances; and ſo in that reſpect well ſerving, or complying with either Interpretation. And it being the Holy Ghoſts manner in things of this Nature to have a vaſt and comprehenſive aim, and by way of alluſion in fulfilling Propheſies to take more wayes than one, I confeſs, I am therefore eaſily induced to eye and give an ear to both.

Only I muſt withal put in this Profeſſion or Caution as to my Judgment, That if theſe two cannot be found to ſtand together, (which I ſee not but they may) that if I muſt lean to one Interpretation rather than the other, I ſhould unto the firſt, as I have preſented it of Chriſt his being a Nazarite, the Holy one of God, or Conſecrated unto God. And I do prefer upon all accounts that unto the other for theſe Reaſons, beſides what hath been afore argued and ſaid.

1. He is called a Nazarite from the City, which is evident by Matthew and other Evangeliſts teſtimony. If the Queſtion came, whether of the two, that Cities name was Notzeroth of Nazareth, ſo whether taken from Netzer, ſignifying the Branch or Griffe, or from Nazari, ſignifying a Perſon vowed to God, It is clear that the latter carries it both in that firſt of Matthew, and the other Evangeliſts who write the Name of that City in the Greek with z, not s, Nazareth, and not Naſareth, or Notſeroth. And Secondly, That it is as evident, that if according to the Analogie of each of thoſe Tongues you would would tranſlate that word from Hebrew into Greek, if in the Hebrew that Cities Name had been Netſereth or Netſeroth (from Griffs and Plants) the in Greek it muſt have been written Naſoreth with ſ, or double ſſ, σῖγμα; for [צ] in the Hebrew is in the Greek rendred by S, not Z, that is by σῖγμα S or SS, not by ζῆτα as Melchitſedec in Hebrew is rendred Melchiſedech, By Paul to the Hebrews, Tſion is tranſlated in the Greek, Sion; ſo Tſabbooth is Sabboth, &c. whereas all the Evangeliſts do conſtantly write the name of that City [Nazareth] with z, but not one Naſareth. And again on the other ſide, when the Hebrew word is with Zayn, then the Greek writes ζῆτα or z, as in the words Zabulon, Zacharias, and Beelzebub.

And again, That this City ſhould have its Name from Plants or Trees growing there, and to be eminently renowned for ſuch is more improbable, becauſe Zabulon in which it was ſeated, was a deſerted place in Darkneſs (as the Prophecy and Evangeliſts tell us.) And on the contrary renowned for ſuch by the Jews, as that uſual Proverb of theirs ſhews, Can any good come out of Nazareth, a place ſo barren and vile above all other places, as that no good, no not of any kind was growing there, or expected thence. For which cauſe perhaps, this flouriſhing Plant, the Meſſiah is ſaid by Iſaiah to grow out of a dry ground, Iſa. 53. 2. even with an eye to the unfruitfulneſs of this Place and City.

2. If the Importance of theſe two Myſteries pleaded for on each ſide be weighed, this of his being a Nazarite in the ſenſe given to have been intended, Dignius eſt, (As A lapide ſayes) is of the more worth in the importance of it, that only referring to a Metaphorical Expreſſion of his being a Branch, and at the higheſt notes out our ingrafting into him as Branches into a Graffe: But this other denotes his Perſonal Holyneſs as God-Man, his being Dedicated and Conſecrated to God, Separated, and Sealed by God to the work of Redemption, which is the Foundation of all, and many other Miſteries, as his Kingly and Prieſtly Offices, all far more Glorious than the other, as in the ſequel will appear. This will be found moſt comprehenſive, and to take in all the Prophets.

3. If we regard the Propheſie it ſelf, this Name of his, Nazarite is not in Metaphorical words but in clear and expreſs Types, vvho as being his Types, and for that very end vvere called Ναζαραῖοι, Nazarites, as Men in a ſpecial manner above the reſt Holy, Separate, Dedicated, and Conſecrated to God; or Men crowned with a peculiar Excellency above others. And ſo the Septuagint ſometimes tranſlate it ἅγιοι, ſometimes ἀφωρισμένοι ſeparated, ἐστεφανωμένοι, Crowned. Now if they which were his Types were called ſo in all theſe Senſes Nazarites, then he in them was much more ſtyled ſo, and ſignified thereby to be the Reality, the Subſtance, of what they were ſhadows.

But ſtill I conclude, as I ſaid before, That I wiſh and hope that both may ſtand, and I would there were a Thouſand more ſuch of ſo great a Variety and Comprehenſiveneſs.

Chap. 8.

CHAP. VIII.

That as Chriſt expreſſed his Will and Conſent in the Dedication of himſelf to the Work, ſo he ſhewed his chearful Willingneſs in all the parts of the performance.

YOU have had the former part of this great Story, His Dedication of himſelf at his Conception : The laſt part followes, to ſee how he made good his Vow from the firſt to the laſt Act thereof, Obedience to the Death. I need take no Text for it, the New Teſtament gives every where teſtimony thereof. It were infinite to give you all the paſſages that argue this his Willingneſs and Zeal throughout the whole of his Life and at his Death. I ſhall lay afore you but ſome more eminent and obvious.

It is obſervable that the very firſt words you have recorded as uttered by himſelf, and that when a Child, at twelve years old, yea and that but one ſpeech neither ; and this that I am now a ſpeaking, was the ſumme and eminent import of it. Luke 2. 48. His Mother ſeems to chide him, that without their privity he had ſtayed behind, and put them to that ſorrow and trouble in ſeeking him, and not knowing what was become of him. What is Chriſts Anſwer ? Ver. 49. Wiſt ye not that I muſt be about my Fathers buſineſs ? As if he had ſaid, 'Tis true ye are my Parents, and I have been ſubject to you hitherto in your particular affairs, but do not you know I have another Father higher than you ? Who hath commanded me by vertue of my Office of Mediatorſhip, other manner of buſineſs to be done by me, than to attend on you, and wherein I am not to take Counſel or Direction from you, or ask leave of you ; for I am not an ordinary Son. Wiſt ye not I was about my Fathers buſineſs ? ἐν τοῖς τοῦ πατρός in the things or affairs of my Father, who is my Father after another manner then you are, and therefore my buſineſs is an other manner of buſineſs than of other Children. I am the Chriſt the Meſſiah, and at theſe years do underſtand my ſelf well enough to be ſo ; and I have a Spiritual Work to do, enjoyned me by my Father, which all other obligations, though at theſe years, muſt give way to : And as elſewhere it is, As the Father commands me, ſo do I ; as John 14. 31. His Will and Law is written in my Heart from a Child ; I am engaged to do his Will, to perform the Office of a Mediator, the Meſſiah, whereof one part is the Prophetick Office, to teach and to inſtruct. And to give a Specimen or an Evidence of it, I have now by his Command (this being my firſt coming up to the Temple, my Fathers Houſe where I am to Preach hereafter many a Sermon) been among the Doctors arguing with them ; ver. 46. It would ſeem the firſt time he came, according to the Law, to the Feaſt ; the manner being at twelve years to put a difference between a Child and a Youth, that the Males at that Age ſhould go up to the Temple. Malachi had told he ſhould, as a Meſſenger of the Covenant or Prophet, ſuddenly come to his Temple. Mal. 3. 1. Behold, I will ſend my meſſenger, and he ſhall prepare the way before me : and the Lord whom ye ſeek, ſhall ſuddenly come to his temple : even the meſſenger of the covenant, whom ye delight in : behold, he ſhall come, ſaith the Lord of hoſts. And when he comes firſt, he will come as a Meſſenger or Declarer of the Covenant, though but at twelve years of Age. As God ſhewed Moſes that he himſelf was that Deliverer to his People (long afore he delivered them) by one Act of Vengeance upon an Egyptian : So God gave demonſtration that this was the Angel of the Covenant in the Temple, almoſt twenty years afore he came to exerciſe that Function ordinarily. But that which I obſerve out of it is to the point in hand, that at twelve years old, and long afore, the Humane Nature underſtood full well his Office, and his being the Mediator, and did direct his Actions to that aim and level. He acted as the Meſſiah unto his Father, as his Father in another manner, than he is the Father of Men or Angels, and had the Law written in his Heart at his Conception in his Eye. To do his Will he was careful of, yea delighted to do that Will, I was about my Fathers buſineſs; yea, I ought to be, (ſayes he). This is the original obligation and undertaking my Ear was long ſince bored through to do, viz. this his Will. I am not mine own, nor yours, but his Servant; I muſt be in his buſineſs. And though now you have a more eminent inſtance of it at twelve years, you might have perceived it long ago, if you had obſerved my carriage, and how I have directed my aims; therefore you ſee he blames them: Wiſt you not I was in my Fathers buſineſs; and the word εἶναι ἐν τοῖς, to be in the things of his Father, imports his being wholly in them. And though his Father did not ordinarily, or perhaps had not afore this his appearing at the Temple, ſet him about buſineſs extraordinary, or other than ſuch as a Child ſubject to Parents uſeth to be, (as ver. 51. it is after this ſaid of him, that he was ſubject to them) yet he had been in all his courſe in the things of his Father, and had carried himſelf as one that walkt by an higher principle of Obedience to God, than other Men were bound to. And this they might have obſerved, elſe he would not have blamed them for not conſidering it. And the word εἶναι is to be wholly and continually given up to it, as Men in an Office ought to be. As Rom. 12. 7, 8. Or miniſtry, let us wait on our miniſtring; or he that teacheth, on teaching; or he that exhorteth, on exhortation: he that giveth, let him do it with ſimplicity; he that ruleth, with diligence; he that ſheweth mercy, with cheerfulneſs. 1 Tim. 4. 15. Meditate upon theſe things, give thy ſelf wholly to them; that thy profiting may appear to all. That which we tranſlate, and rightly too, Give thy ſelf wholly to them, is the like phraſe, ἐν τούτοις ἴσθι, Be in theſe things. So then Chriſt, as now, ſo from his Infancy had been wholly in the things of his Father; and as Mediator, directing all Obedience as ſuch to him; and not only acting holily as a Child ſanctified from the Womb, but Mediator-like, and he delighted to do it, and ſhewed ſo much at his firſt undertaking. This is the firſt ſpeech, and it is an early one you have of him, and it imports it. In a word, (Chriſt ſayes) He that ſent me is with me, namely alwayes. And I do alwayes thoſe things that pleaſe him. John 8. 29. And he had done ſo alwayes from his Infancy, and directed all to him as a Father that had ſent him on that Spiritual Work. And the Father hath not left me alone, but guided me from the firſt thus to do, (ſayes he) for of his guiding him to do his Will he there ſpeaks.

Why ſhould I be large in rehearſing to you all his other ſpeeches, which might argue this, how that it was his Meat and Drink to do the Will of God? John 4. 34. Jeſus ſaith unto them, My meat is to do the will of him that ſent me, and to finiſh his work. He was hungry, and yet zeal and deſire to do Gods Will in ſaving of Souls, ſwallowed up the ſenſe of that hunger and faintneſs. He delighted to do Gods Will more than ever hungry Man did to eat his Meat; and not only at this time, and for this fit, but to do all the reſt of the Work to the laſt, to perfect and to compleat every part of it. So it followes, [And to finiſh or perfect his work]. So then, all his time afore, he had made it his Meat and Drink, as much as now, and for all years to come the ſame Zeal was in him, even to the whole from firſt to laſt, as the word perfecting implyes. And in all this he ſtill directed his Obedience as Mediator, looking at all he did, not only as Obedience due in common as from other Men, but as it was the Work deſigned by him that had ſent him, and ſealed him to this Work. See John 6. 38. For I came down from Heaven, not to do mine own will, but the will of him that ſent me. Still you ſee he fulfills that primitive obligation of his; I delight to do thy will, Oh God. Yea, it is not only ſaid, as here, that it was more to him than meat meat to do his will; but further to expreſs his Zeal in it, in another place at another time, this his Zeal is ſaid to have eaten him up, his Strength, and Spirits and all. He was eaten up, and devoured thereby: It ſwallowed up all his intentions; as the wrath of God is ſaid to have drunk up Jobs Spirits, Job 2. 17. The zeal of thy houſe (and of thy Glory concerned in it) hath eaten me up; ſayes Chriſt. Chap. 9.

CHAP. IX.

That he did not ſhrink at the approach of his greateſt Sufferings, his Death, but ſhewed a chearful reſolution to the very laſt moment.

LET us inſtance further, in that which was the hardeſt piece of his Work and the finiſhing of all, his Sufferings at his Death.

1. Afore he came to undergoe it a good while, ſee the frame of his Spirit; Luke 12. 50. I have a baptiſm to be baptized with, and how am I ſtraitned, till it be accompliſhed. He knew the bitterneſs of that Baptiſm to be ſuch as no Creature was able to be Baptized with it: Matth. 20. 22. But Jeſus anſwered and ſaid, Ye know not what ye ask. Are ye able to drink of the cup that I ſhall drink of, and to be baptized with the baptiſm that I am baptized with? They ſay unto him, We are able. Yet ſayes he, How am I ſtraitned till it be accompliſhed? How much I cannot expreſs; and I am ſtraitened that my deſire and longings are delayed, and they ſtraiten and contract the Heart. Never Woman deſired more to be delivered, than he to have finiſht that Work; to have gone over that Brook, that Sea of Wrath, he was to be ſunk over head and ears into.

Upon a time when Chriſt began firſt to declare the greatneſs of his Sufferings; Matth. 16. 21. From that time forth began Jeſus to ſhew unto his diſciples how that he muſt go unto Jeruſalem, and ſuffer many things of the Elders and chief Prieſts and Scribes, and be killed, and be raiſed again the third day. Peter took him, (that is aſide, as a friend out of love) and began to rebuke him, that he would ſpare himſelf, and not provoke the Phariſees by Zeal; and be it far from thee Lord! (ſayes he) that never deſervedſt it, that art the Saviour of Men, goeſt up and down doing good, this ſhall not be to thee. But how did Jeſus take this? One would have thought he ſhould have taken it lovingly. Abſolutely, we never did ſee Chriſt ſo angry, and take a thing ſo ill. It is ſaid, Ver. 23. But he turned, and ſaid unto Peter, get thee behind me, Satan, thou art an offence unto me; for thou ſavoureſt not the things that be of God, but thoſe that be of men. The word ϛραφεὶς, tranſlated he turned, it imports not ſo much the turning of his Body to him, as the turning and change of his Countenance unto a paleneſs or redneſs, as when a Mans blood is up, or when he is moved with Anger and Indignation. And what ſaid he? Get thee behind, Satan. There was never ſuch a word came forth of thoſe Lips afore or after, given to a Saint as Peter was. All was becauſe he toucht him in what his Spirit was moſt eager for; as Anger ſwells and riſeth againſt what comes in the way and current of Mens deſires, even as a ſtrong ſtreams againſt what would ſtop it. And Chriſt adds, Thou art an Offence unto me! An Offence is properly an occaſion of ſtumbling: Now Chriſts Holy Nature was not capable of ſuch an occaſion of ſtumbling or being drawn to Sin, as ours is, Yet Peters Speech had that tendency in it to divert him from that great work his heart was intent upon. Then at another time Peter would be medling to reſcue him by the Sword, John 18. 11. And though he then received a milder Anſwer from Chriſt, Put up thy Sword into its ſheath; yet ſtill you may thereby ſee, how ſtrongly his heart continued ſet upon the work of Redemption that was undertaken by him, and deſigned to him. The Cup which my Father hath given me, ſhall I not drink? Every word ſpeaks the eagerneſs and ſtrength of his Will and Reſolution therein. Interrogations in that caſe argue the greateſt vehemency: But this belongs to the next particular: Namely,

When he came to perform that laſt part of his Obedience, his ſufferings to Death.

1. As the time drew nearer and nearer for him to take his laſt Journey to Jeruſalem, not having many Moneths or Dayes to live, and knew alſo all that would befal him there, as he had told Peter and his Diſciples. The Evangeliſt Luke ſaies of him, chap. 9. 51. When the time was come, he ſhould be received up (namely by means of that cruel Death) unto glory, he ſtedfaſtly ſet his face to go up to Jeruſalem. I will not Diſpute, whether it was his laſt Journey (which I rather think with Grotius) or that it was half a year afore as others, but two Journeys to Jeruſalem are afterwards mentioned by Luke, (which yet argue not that this Diſpoſition here recorded occaſionally ſhould not be intended of his laſt Journey:) For Luke tells things not ſtrictly in order of time, but of occaſions (as Grotius hath obſerved;) However this all do, and muſt acknowledge, That the Scope of this paſſage was to ſhew that Chriſt now toward his end hardned himſelf, and in all his Deportment (which is expreſſed by Face there) ſet himſelf to manifeſt ſo much, that nothing did or ſhould divert him. Yea, and this was obſervable in him more than at former times: For ver. 53. It was obſerved by a whole City of the Samaritanes, who therefore received him not. And they did not receive him, becauſe his face was as though he would go to Jeruſalem.

Hence the Exhortation from Chriſts Example ſuffering reſolutely for us, Epheſ. 4. 1. is this, Foraſmuch as Chriſt hath ſuffered for us in the Fleſh, Arm your ſelves likewiſe with the ſame mind: A ſtrong Reſolution, cauſing a Mans Mind as boldly and ventrouſly to encounter difficulties, as ſtrong Armour doth embolden a Mans Mind to ruſh into Battel. So then Chriſt Armed himſelf, ſteeled his Heart, as we uſe to ſpeak.

And then when he was to eat his laſt Supper, to eat his laſt (as we uſe to ſpeak,) ſo it is called Luke 22. 16. See what vehemency of deſires he utters, ver. 15. With deſire have I deſired to eat this Paſſover with you before I ſuffer: That is, How have I longed with the moſt paſſionate deſire for the arrival of this laſt Night and Meal that I muſt make, that it would come and haſten, as all Men are apt aforehand to do for that which their Hearts are ſet upon. And that to have been his Reaſon is evident by what follows, ver. 16. For I ſay unto you, I will not drink of the fruit of the Vine until the kingdom of God ſhall come: The thing ſignified by the Paſſeover, the Redemption of the World by my Death. This is to be my laſt Drink I ſhall drink with you; and now my Death comes on by which you and the World ſhall be ſaved and redemed.

And again, when he knew Judas was to go out to betray him, he ſaid, Do what thou doſt do quickly, John 13. 27, 30. As ſoon as thou wilt, for I am ready, and reſolved: He dares him, and haſtens him to it to ſhew his own reſolvedneſs. And when he was gone out, he claps his hands (as it were) for joy, and utters his Joy and Triumph in it, ver. 31.

Therefore

Chap. 9.

Therefore when he was gone out, Jeſus ſaid, Now is the Son of Man glorified, and God is glorified in him. For he reckoned the ſtroak now as good as ſtruck, the thing now as good as done, that he ſhould be Crucified. For the Inſtrument that was to ſet all awork was gone out about it, and he calls it his Death, his being glorified, becauſe it was the Foundation of all that Glory himſelf and his Elect were to have. How bitter ſoever it proved afterwards, his Heart at preſent was filled with Joy for the thoughts of the approach of it, he looks upon it as his Wedding Day, his Coronation Day, (as in more reſpects than one it proved,) As Solomons Heart is ſaid to be fill'd with joy in the Day wherein his Mother Crowned him: And that ſo he eſteemed it, you have another place to the ſame purpoſe, John 12. 23, 24, 28. Now the hour is come that the Son of Man ſhould be glorified: Which is ſpoken out of the ſame Paſſion of Spirit as the former; as if he had ſaid, Now, even Now is the time, the longed for hour, ſo long longed for, come wherein I ſhall be glorified; and do that moſt glorious work for which I came into the World. (For this Hour I came into the World, as ver. 27.) And this he ſpeaks in relation to his Death, ſo in the 24th. verſe, as alſo ver. 27, 28, and 32. evidently ſhew. 'Tis true, he was ſtruck with Terrour and Trouble at his entrance into it, (for here the firſt Thunder-clap that ſtruck him did begin,) ſo ver. 27. Now is my Soul troubled, and ſo troubled, as he adds, What ſhall I ſay, Father ſave me from this hour? But withal he renews and recovers that which had been his conſtant reſolution and purſuance. But for this Cauſe came I to this Hour. It was a Conſideration he took in to hearten himſelf unto it. That he had gone ſo far, and was now come to it; and ſhould I now recoil? And what was it did glad him, even in the midſt of this his Trouble? 1. That his Father ſhould be glorified. Father glorifie thy Name: Then came there a voice from Heaven, ſaying, I have both glorified it, and will glorifie it again. 2. That thereby Souls ſhould be ſaved, which in ver. 24. he gives this account of, Except a corn of wheat (to which he compares himſelf who was to be the Root of Multitudes to ſpring up out of him) dye, it abides alone; as he otherwiſe muſt have done in Heaven. But if it dye, it bringeth forth much fruit: Which further, ver. 32, 33. he expreſſeth, I, if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men to me. This he ſaid, ſignifying what death he ſhould die.

After this he maketh a long Sermon to his Diſciples, when Judas was gone forth to Act his fatal Deſign, and Chriſt to loſe no time in the mean while enters into a long and large Sermon to hearten his Diſciples recorded in the enſuing Thirteenth and Fourteenth Chapters of John. And it is greatly obſervable, how that in the midſt of his Sermon in the Tenour of his Diſcourſe coming to that which moſt of all did move him to that work, namely, his Fathers Love, you have the paſſage, John 14. laſt. But that the world may know that I love the Father, and as the Fathir gave me commandment, even ſo I do; Ariſe, Let us go hence. He would needs in all the haſt be gone, as if he had overſlipt his time of Judas his meeting him with his Trained Bands, and ſo they would miſs of him. He ſits upon thornes (as we uſe to ſay of one that thinks the time long) for he breaks off in the midſt of a Diſcourſe which he aſſumes again (as if he had forgotten himſelf) though two Chapters afterwards, the Fifteenth and Sixteenth. Of all works elſe Preaching, and Preaching his laſt too, his heart was moſt in; and yet he makes a ſtart in the midſt of a Sermon to be gone. To be taken and Crucified; Ariſe, let us go hence. He lookt on the Glaſs, and ſaw it was not yet run out, and he ſits down again, and Preacheth another Sermon of the Vine and of the Branches occaſioned by what he had been Adminiſtring, the Sacrament of his Supper, his Blood, ſo ſignified by the Blood of the Vine. Well, when that Sermon and his latter Prayer, Chapter 17. was done, it came to the very point of his bitter Execution, he ſtaies not till their Purſevants and Judas with his Trained Bands ſhould find him out; but

Book IV. as the Eighteenth Chapter tells us, he offers himſelf as a Sacrifice into their hands (for ſo all Sacrifices were to be brought to the Door of the Temple by the Perſon that ſacrificed) and ſo to be offered up. And all this he did willingly and knowingly afore-hand of what ſhould come to paſs, Chap. 18. 4. And theſe things the Eighteenth Chapter of John doth punctually and ſetly relate from the firſt verſe to the ninth. When Jeſus had ſpoken theſe words, he went forth with his Diſciples over the brook Cedron, where was a garden, into the which he entred, and his Diſciples.

And Judas alſo which betrayed him, knew the place: for Jeſus oft-times reſorted thither with his Diſciples.

Judas then having received a band of men, and officers from the chief prieſts and Phariſees, cometh thither with lanterns, and torches, and weapons.

Jeſus therefore knowing all things that ſhould come upon him, went forth, and ſaid unto them, Whom ſeek ye?

They anſwered him, Jeſus of Nazareth. Jeſus ſaith unto them, I am he. And Judas alſo which betrayed him, ſtood with them.

Aſſoon then as he had ſaid unto them, I am he, they went backward, and fell to the ground.

Then asked he them again, Whom ſeek ye? and they ſaid, Jeſus of Nazareth.

Jeſus anſwered, I have told you that I am he. If therefore ye ſeek me, let theſe go their way.

That the ſaying might be fulfilled which he ſpake, Of them which thou gaveſt me, have I loſt none.

We had ſinned againſt knowledge, and he ſuffers with a full Cognizance, and an afore-hand Deliberation of all that was to befall him. And further, (to make us apprehenſive of this his Will in it) he tells Peter when he would needs vainly and weakly attempt to reſcue him, Matth. 26. 53. Thinkeſt thou that I cannot now pray to my Father, and he ſhall preſently give me more than twelve legions of Angels. Alas! He needed not ſo great a Party, his own word (I am he) John 18. 8, ſtruck them all backward, and might have done dead, and ver. 11. The cup which my Father hath given me, ſhall I not drink it?

He never ſhewed any ſign of Reluctancy, till in the Garden he ſaw what was indeed in that Cup his Father did preſent him with, even his Wrath, and being made a Curſe. And to ſhew what the Nature of a Man in it ſelf might in ſuch a Caſe do; namely, ſhew his abhorrency of ſo high an endurance, and meerly to let us underſtand ſo much, to the end we might ſee his Love: For it was meet we ſhould by ſomething underſtand how much he was put to it, he thereupon cries out, Father if it be poſſible, let this cup paſs. But as he had John 12. 27. So here his Fathers will quiets all again. And the whole mind of this paſſage is but to ſhew,

1. His averſeneſs as to the thing in it ſelf ſimply conſidered, becauſe of the bitterneſs of it. And,

2. That the whole ground of his ſubmitting notwithſtanding thereunto was his Fathers Will. And,

3. How that notwithſtanding his Will ſtood to it as high as ever, yet only upon that ground, Not my will, but thy will be done.

When they had him in the High Prieſts Hall ſcorning and buffeting of him: As he had ſet his face as you heard afore his Sufferings to go to Jeruſalem; So now the Prophets uttering it in his Perſon, tells us how he ſteel'd his heart thereagainſt alſo. I gave my back to the ſmiters, and my cheeks to them that plucked off the hair: I hid not my face from ſhame and ſpitting.

For the Lord God will help me, therefore ſhall I not be confounded: Therefore have I ſet my face like a flint, and I know that I ſhall not be aſhamed.

Laſtly, When he hung upon the Tree, and had enough to have provoked ſo great a Spirit, ſo empowred as he was with the Soveraignty of Heaven and Earth to have relieved himſelf, and to have commanded thoſe Nails to have have given way: He could have taught them better Obedience than to detaign their Lord in ſo great ſufferings a moment, and that which did and might have provoked him farther to have ſhown his Power to reſcue himſelf, was their cruel Mockings of him added to all his ſufferings, Come down (ſay they) thou that ſaveſt others, and we will believe thee. Well he ſtill hangs quietly there. He endured the croſs (Paul ſaies) and deſpiſed the ſhame, Heb. 12. 1. When in the Grave all the Povver of Death could not keep him there, for he had done his vvork. But love kept him on the Croſs, and nailed him there vvith ſtronger Nails than Men or Devils could have driven in. Chap. 9.

Alas! He could as Sampſon, vvhilſt they mockt him, have broke dovvn the Pillars of Heaven about their Ears, and himſelf have ſtood Erect from out the ruines of it. In the Sixteenth Pſalm (made of him) he bleſſeth God for having given him that Counſel to perſiſt in his Reſolution to dye, and keeping the purpoſe of it fixt in his heart during all thoſe Nights in vvhich he had to do vvith his Father afore his ſufferings. If he, I am ſure vve much more have cauſe to bleſs God for giving it, and him for followving it. Even ſo Jeſus bleſſed, Amen.

OF CHRIST THE MEDIATOR.

BOOK V.

Chriſts Actual Performance of our Redemption. In the General, He Gave himſelf for us. The particular Parts of our Redemption are, That he was made Sin, and a Curſe; and by his Death obtain'd a Victory over Satan, whereby he delivers us from his Slavery: And hath perform'd all Righteouſneſs which might anſwer the Law for us. And that Chriſt as our Great Shepherd takes care to preſerve and ſecure us ſafe thus Redeem'd, and freed by Him.

1 TIM. 2. 6.

Who gave himſelf a ranſome for all, to be teſtified in due time.

CHAP. I.

That God preſently on Mans Fall making the Diſcovery to him of a Redeemer, Adam tranſmitted the Knowledge of him to his Poſterity, and he was accordingly propoſed to the Faith of the Patriarchs.

THough Believers before the Coming of Chriſt had in their Faith but ſome obſcure Glimmerings of Chriſt the Redeemer, yet they had real Apprehenſions of ſuch a Perſon to come. And there were certainly ſome outward Glimmerings and Rayes, in the things appointed to repreſent Chriſt ſhining through that Vail: For the difference that the Apoſtle puts, when he handles and compares the point of both and each of thoſe Diſpenſations; Ours and Theirs; ſeems to import ſo much in ſaying, that we behold with open face the glory of the Lord; 2 Cor. 3. 18. Implying that they had ſome darker, obſcure, confuſed gleams and apprehenſions darted into their

their minds thereof. 'Tis true, the perſon was then veyled indeed; and hid in cloudy, and dark Expreſſions, and Repreſentations; that were but ſhadows; Even as we read of Moſes that his Face was covered with a Veyl; to ſignify thus much. And Moſes being as their Mediator then; and Face being put in Scripture for Perſon; we may ſay that Chriſts Perſon was then obſcured; and yet with ſuch a Veil as did not utterly darken all perceivance of his Glory. 'Tis true indeed, that they knew not the Individual perſon, who He was to be; as now we do; and is neceſſary for us to do; as Chriſt told the Phariſees, (who lived under the light of his Goſpel and Miracles) unleſs you believe that I am He, you ſhall die in your ſins. But that there was one of the ſons of men that was to come who ſhould be a deliverer, this the Saints that were ſaved, generally then knew: Although the Vulgar Jew ſtuck in the Letter, as at this day, the vail being on their hearts; as 2 Cor. 3. 15. It is not now on Chriſts Face, Chap. 4. 4, 5. but upon mens Hearts.

I ſhall begin my proof with the firſt Promiſe in Paradiſe; which apparently was, that a Son of Eve, the ſeed of the woman was to come, that ſhould have power to break the Serpents Head: That is in plainer Language now ſaid, who ſhould deſtroy the works of the Devil, 1 John 3. 8. or as it is in the Epiſtle to the Hebrews, Chap. 2. 14. Who ſhould deſtroy him that had the power of Death; and ſave and deliver from him that had juſt that very day brought ſin and death into the World, and thereupon had the power of death. And therefore alſo That Perſon promiſed was to be more than a meer Man, or meer Creature: For how otherwiſe could he have power to overcome and deſtroy and break the power of thoſe fallen Angels: Yea and which was more of Gods Law that threatened death; Now are we to be ſaved by the knowledge, and Faith of this Perſon, as Eve (to be ſure) firſt was by the faith on Him, and then we. And the neceſſity to Salvation of that knowledge appears, in the Caſe of our firſt Parents. For why elſe did God thus haſtily in the cool of the Evening of that very day wherein they had ſinned, diſcover this; but that the knowledge of it was neceſſary to their ſalvation. And the ſame neceſſity muſt be ſuppoſed to hold for the ſalvation of others, that were to be ſaved after them; And therefore the knowledge of a Redeemer was delivered unto them to be tranſmitted down to their poſterity. Adam alſo living Nine Hundred and Thirty Years and upwards into that firſt World; and a Godly Seed and Race being reckoned from him unto the Flood, and thoſe our firſt Parents being Godly, and having been the Cauſes of tranſmitting ſin to all their Poſterity; were the more engaged and obliged, and accordingly zealouſly moved to derive down the knowledge of that means, whereby themſelves had been recovered, by the which their Poſterity might be ſaved alſo; and it were ſtrange to think that they ſhould not. And that de facto they did ſo deliver it beſides what the Story in Geneſis doth relate of the Religion propagated in thoſe times; There were ſome footprints remaining among the Heathen of Eves Fall by name; of the Serpents Venome and Infection; For which they made a Colliſion and bruiſing of Serpents; and of a Seed, Jovis Incrementum as Virgil calls him, who ſhould be a Reſtorer, and Confounder of the Devil. Such Memorials were left and found among the Heathens, tho' ſo defaced, as they could not be ſaved by them, they wanting a ſpiritual Light to accompany that Knowledge. It would be therefore (I ſay) unreaſonable to think that thoſe who after were to be ſaved, ſhould be utterly kept by God from the Inkling and Knowledge of that firſt promiſe; For there was no other promiſe (which we read of extant,) whereby thoſe might be ſaved that were ſaved.

See an unregenerate Mans guiltineſs, &c. Book 9. chap. 4.

Now that which I would have obſerved upon that original promiſe, is, that there are but two eminent things that promiſe conſiſts of. Firſt, The deliverance and ſalvation from the Serpents power: which is the breaking the Serpents head. And the ſecond is, That a perſon, one of the Sons of Men, ſhould effect this; and break his head: Concerning which my preſent Argument proceedeth.

The All-wiſe and Gracious Lord firſt ſaw, and conceived the knowledge of ſuch a perſon neceſſary for the bringing the Sons of Men in to him; as well as of his Grace to ſave them; And therefore contented not himſelf to make barely a promiſe of deliverance. And the neceſſity lies in this; that the Guilty Guilty Conſcience of the Sinner, rightly apprehenſive of what the heinouſneſs of ſinning againſt God is; and of Gods Wrath for ſin is; even a Conſuming Fire; hath not the boldneſs to approach to God in its own perſon, in its own ſin; but hides himſelf, as Adam did: Nor would man dare to approach to him, without a Mediatour promiſed to him. As is evident from the people of Iſrael's deſire, that Moſes ſhould approach to God for them; and upon which Moſes received the promiſe of Prophet to come after him, like unto Him. This alſo cauſed Job to wiſh a days-man betwixt God and him; Job 9. 33. And how natural Conſcience awaken'd dictates to men the neceſſity of a Mediatour, We have an Inſtance in that Highlander, who hearing Mr. Robert Bruce inveighing againſt thoſe ſins, of which he knew himſelf Guilty, his Conſcience being deeply touched, ſaid; Iſe give him twenty Cows to Gree God and me. Poor Man he felt the power of Gods Word on his Soul from that Mans Miniſtery; And he thought him to have acquaintance with God; and thought that he might be able to reconcile God to him again. Thus the firſt Grand Charter granted to Adam held out the Perſon of Chriſt, as a potent Victor over Satan; and Mediator for Man. Chap. I.

Now this was alſo ſucceeded with Sacrifices offered to God: Witneſs Abel, of whom you read, Heb. 11. Which way of Worſhip to God ſin alone brought in, and which the ſtate of Innocency knew not of. And theſe pointed unto an Atonement: And by the ſaving faith upon the Meſſiah, to come; who had been held forth in the afore-ſaid promiſe; was Abel accepted: which Cain wanted, Heb. 11.

CHAP. II.

That Chriſt gave himſelf for us, to redeem us. What is imply-ed in that Expreſſion. We ſhould duly conſider the Great-neſs and Value of ſuch a Gift. Chriſt giving himſelf is a High Teſtimony of his own peculiar Love to us.

I HAVE at large ſhewn the Free Willingneſs that was in Chriſt to per-form the work of a Redeemer for us, which alſo theſe words ſufficiently import, He gave himſelf. He was not paſſively given up by his Father; but it was a free Act of his own, and ſo gifts are.

We have likewiſe diſcourſed the fulneſs of his Abilities and Capacities to make ſatisfaction, and purchaſe Redemption which no meer Creature was capable of, but that his power being God-Man was as great, as his heart was free. Let us now come to the performance, the price, the Ranſome it ſelf; as it is here declared to be, a giving Himſelf. Towards the general opening of this, we may obſerve.

I. How Paul delights in this expreſſion he gave or offered himſelf up both in the frequency of uſing it, Eph. 5. 2, 25. Titus 2. 14. Heb. 9. 14. offered him-ſelf, and Heb. 1. 3. purged away our ſins by himſelf. Phil. 2. 7. emptyed him-ſelf: As alſo in that, when that Holy Apoſtle with Application ſpeaks of Chriſts love unto himſelf, and would ſet it out to the higheſt Elevation to affect his heart moſt deeply, he then uſeth this Expreſſion, Who loved me and gave him-ſelf for me, Gal. 2. 20.

II. That what other Scriptures do parcel forth in particulars of what Chriſt gave, this one ſumms up in this total, as comprehenſive of all elſe. The Scrip-ture elſewhere, yea the Lords Supper doth ſet it forth by piece-meals, his Blood in the Wine, his precious Blood shed to redeem us, 1 Pet. 1. 18. His Body in the bread, this is my Body which is given for you, Luke 22. 19. his Flesh or whole man, I give my Flesh for the life of the World, John 6. 51. His Life : I give my Life for my sheep, John 10. 15. His Soul poured out as an offering for sin, Isai. 53. 10. His giving up all his estate and riches, and becoming poor, 2 Cor. 8. 9. His leaving Father and Mother, Eph. 5. 31, 32. compared. Whatever, I say, other Scriptures on the Lords Supper do by parcels inventory forth to us ; All and each of these, this one word, he gave himself, doth at once, by the great, summarily comprehend : For to say Himself, to be sure was his All.

III. [He Gave :] he gave away ; For what is given as a Price, or Ransome (as this in the Text) as also to give himself as a Sacrifice, as Eph. 5. 2. This is purely a giving away, whereby the Giver suffers so much real loss and damage to purchase that Redemption. And so the Sacrifice was burnt and consumed to Ashes, there was perfectly so much loss to him that offered it, as what is given comes to, and so in giving away his riches, he is said to have become poor thereby, 2 Cor. 8. 9. and to have nothing left to himself, Dan. 9. 26. and that he emptied himself, Phil. 2. 7, 8. There was nothing that was gain to him but he suffered for the present loss of it, as to his present use and advantage.

IV. [Himself :] was that which was given away. Not [his] only, or what was his ; but himself, not sua but se (as Paul said, I seek not yours but you) so here Christ gave away not only τὰ ἴδια what were his own, (as proper Goods and Chattels are said to be a man's own) extrinsecal to him (and thus the whole creation is said to be to Christ, John 1. 11.) but it is himself, his very person, or what was personally his, whatsoever was most intrinsecally his own, Intimum suum, and what was as himself unto himself most dear and precious, and innate. This is therefore an extensive word, and draws in all of himself (as we shall see anon) the whole of himself, all that could be made of himself, all that he could rap or rend, as we say, that could possibly any way be made away from himself, this in the general. As for particulars, I shall confine my self to such things onely, as are in Scripture or common speech termed ones self ; and which according to the dialect of the Scriptures about Christs Person, are in a more special manner deemed himself : Now what is it that may be, and usually is called a mans self.

1. A Persons Doings, Works, Operations, and Actings, which are the fruits that proceed from, and grow upon ones self ; these are reckoned a Mans self. Thus when a Servant gives up all his actions and service, all his time, and what he can do, that all this should be to his Masters use, though suppose that Master hath not power over his life, or Goods, yet in that case he is said to let himself ; to sell himself ; to give himself up to that mans use and service, to be managed all by his Masters Appointment and Command. Or if (suppose) out of Love and Friendship to another, one imploys his whole Time and Labours, and suffers all his Actions to be ordered for the other, though not in way of Service but as a Friend ; yet in this Case he may be said to give up himself, when he is all that while of no use to himself, or to his own private and personal Advantages ; Whereas otherwise it is the nature of Self to work for it Self. In this case a Man is rightly said to give over himself, when his operations are thus to be disposed of by another ; the Philosopher says that, that Day a Man is made a Servant or Slave to another, he loseth half of himself, half of his Reason and Thoughts ; (such was the condition of Servants then, especially Slaves) they being ordered, disposed of, and subjected to anothers Will. When Ahab is said to have sold himself to work Wickedness ; It was by giving up his Works and Actions, and Ways to the Dominion and power of sin, as a Lord and Master over him: And on the contrary, the obedience we owe to God in keeping his Commandments is called, the whole of Man, Eccl. 12 13. because it exacts and takes up the strength and might, and the whole in Man, as given up in it, if rightly performed as it ought. Now in this sense, the Whole of Christ might be justly said to be given away, and he to have given himself : for all his Actions, and whatsoever he did were wholly at the direction of another for, and on our behalf, and not his own: and accordingly were wholly directed by him to that end; to ſerve us according to his appointment: I came not (ſays he) to do mine own Will: but the Will of him that ſent me, John 6. 38. The Father gave him every jot of his Works; And I have finiſht it (ſays he:) it is his ſpeech at the laſt of what he had done in this World from firſt to laſt, in John 17. 4. And ſo in doing onely ſuch Works as the Father gave Him, He gave away himſelf to his Father firſt; And therein to us alſo: For that Work being all in the earnings of it, wholly for our behoofe and advantage, he is withal as truly ſaid to have given Himſelf for us. He was hereby a perfect Servant to his Father for us; yea and ours alſo: And this alſo doth Chriſt in that one ſingle paſſage, Mat. 20. 28. give us the ſenſe, and Interpretation of: The ſon of man came not to be miniſtred unto (as Lord of all) but to miniſter; and to give his life (as in and by dying, ſo through the whole Courſe of his Life by ſerving) a ranſom for many; that is, for us: He profeſſeth every where that he was not at his own diſpoſe, and ſo not his own: I came not to do my own will, how often do you meet with it from him; He was not his own, or himſelf (as we uſe to ſpeak in that caſe) in any thing he did here; who yet was himſelf (by his Native Right) moſt free; and had the Prerogative to act all for himſelf, and of glorifying himſelf another way, then this: but this priviledge he laid down wholly at his Fathers Feet, and took up all by a New Commiſſion from him, to act All according to his Will, and not his own in order to our Salvation: And therefore when he came to die, he ſays, As the Father giveth me Commandment, ſo do I; ariſe let us go hence, John 14. 31.

2. A Perſon may be ſaid to give himſelf, when he gives up the Comforts of his Life; and therefore denying a Mans ſelf is interpreted by Chriſt, a forſaking Lands, Houſes, Father, Mother. And Life is put for the Comforts of Life, as when it is ſaid, that Life lies not in abundance, the meaning is the Comfort of Life doth not. Now all the Comforts of this and the other Life did Chriſt part withal firſt or laſt, even unto the Light of the Sun it ſelf, the common Priviledge of Mankind, which was darkened when he was a Crucifying. And then all the Joys, and Comforts of the other World Chriſt parted with for a time. When it was his due to have been in Heaven Glorious, he left Heaven and all its Glories. And then Death, which is, as we know, a privation of all Worldly things, put a period to all his Enjoyments of this Life.

3. His Manhood or Humane Nature conſiſting of Soul and Body, is called himſelf; and is meant by giving his Fleſh for the life of the World, Joh. 6. 51. that is, the whole Humane Nature in diſtinction from his Godhead, and ſecond Perſon as God, as is noticed in thoſe very Words, my Fleſh, which I will give; and the giving of the Life thereof, as Joh. 10. is juſtly termed the giving himſelf: And ſo Heb. 9. 14. the ſacrificing thereof (which was a whole Burnt-offering) is termed the offering up himſelf. He offered up himſelf by the eternal Spirit, that is, by his Godhead, who is that Spirit which quickneth that Humane Nature: This Spirit was the Offerer, and the Manhood the Sacrificer, and yet that Sacrifice is called himſelf: Even as the body of a man is called the Man, ſo in vulgar ſpeech: and Mary, Joh. 20. 2. calls the body of Chriſt which ſhe thought dead, the Lord. But then the Soul is much oftner ſtiled the Perſon; but take body and ſoul both as united into one Man, and the offering of both as ſo united, that to be ſure is the offering of ones ſelf. And in this ſence the Scripture, eſpecially that Epiſtle to the Hebrews, oppoſeth [that himſelf] that is, his humane Nature, to all other Sacrifices wherein Prieſts offered up things that were not themſelves, but things extrinſecal to their Perſons; as the blood of Bulls and Goats; and as when the idolatrous and ſuperſtitious Jews offered up their Children to Moloch, the fruit of their Bodies; the offering up of ſuch things was not in any ſence a ſacrifice of themſelves. But God being made fleſh, that is, the ſecond Perſon, the Son, taking an humane Nature unto one perſon with himſelf; hence, though he offered but that humane Nature, yet in oppoſition to ſuch Forreign Offerings, he is ſaid to have offered up himſelf, though the Godhead were not offered up; even as the Soul or the Perſon of a Man might be ſaid to do, that offers up but his body a ſacrifice, and ſo but his bodily Life, though his Soul he doth not, and cannot:

cannot offer, and in this oppoſition to things Forreign to a Perſon, it is ſaid Heb. 9. 14. compared with verſes 11, 12, 13. But Chriſt being come an high prieſt of good things to come, by a greater and more perfect tabernacle not made with hands, that is to ſay, not of this building; neither by the blood of goats and calves, but by his own blood he entered in once into the holy place, having obtained eternal Redemption for us, for if the blood of bulls and of goats, and the aſhes of an heifer ſprinkling the unclean, ſanctifieth to the purifying of the Fleſh. How much more ſhall the blood of Chriſt, who through the eternal Spirit offered [himſelf] without ſpot to God, &c. Wherein he doth compare Chriſt, who was Gods High Prieſt with their High Prieſts, ſaying that they offered but the blood of Bulls and Goats; things that could in no ſence be called themſelves, but he offered up himſelf; and more clearly, ver. 25. where his offering himſelf is oppoſed to the High-Prieſts offering other Creatures and not Themſelves, in theſe words, nor yet that he ſhould offer [himſelf] often, as the high prieſt entereth into the holy place every year [with blood of others, αἷμα ἀλλότριον, others blood.] So that the blood of Bulls and Goats, or by the ſame reaſon, the blood of other men (if there had been ſuch Sacrifices) as ſuppoſe of Children, offered up by Father and Mother (which God required not, though the Idolatrous Jews practiſed it) yet all ſtill had been but the blood of ſome other thing than himſelf, αἷμα ἀλλότριον; but this offering of Chriſt in oppoſition was of himſelf, as that Text hath it αἷμα ἰδιον, as alſo Rev. 1. 5.

Now then if you ask what that was which was the ſacrifice, and yet is reckoned himſelf; 10 chap. to the Hebrews v. 5. reſolves us that it was that body or humane Nature both ſoul and body prepared to be that ſacrifice; Wherefore when he cometh into the World, he ſaith, Sacrifice and Offering thou wouldſt not, but a body haſt thou prepared me. So then this is a third ſence wherein he offered himſelf.

Uſe. Let us ſet a Value upon this Giſt and Ranſome according to the Dignity of it. It was the greatneſs of the price is ſet forth hereby, (that he gave himſelf, which is the expreſs ſcope of this Text in Tim. and Mat. 20. 28.) to ſhew the ineſtimable Value of the Gift. It was once ſaid of a great Bargain, or Sale, and Purchaſe made by the Great, and in the Lump, between two great Perſonages, that the one bought, and the other ſold, they knew not what: And truely although God knew, and Chriſt knows, what the Price comes to, yet we for whom it was given can never know nor eſtimate it to all eternity; Oh never! nor can we comprehend what this reacheth to, Chriſt gave himſelf: It is an unknown Giſt and Ranſome this. What is his Name, or his Sons Name, ſays Agur, Prov. 30. 4. Canſt thou tell? And as little canſt thou tell, what this [Giving himſelf] amounts to; thou maieſt as well bind the Waters in thy Garment, and aſcend to Heaven, &c. as Agur there ſpeaks, as fathom to the bottom this depth and ſound what an infinite Treaſure lies ſunk therein. It is himſelf; None but himſelf that disburſed and parted with it knows what of himſelf went from him, when he gave himſelf. None knows the worth of himſelf, but himſelf, Rev. 19. 12. His Name is ſuch, as 'tis ſaid, none knows but himſelf; None but himſelf that disburſeth it can tell what of himſelf he parted with, and went from him to make up this payment, none I ſay but he and his Father unto whom it was he gave himſelf, and who ſet and took the Price and made the Bargain for our Redemption, know the value. We uſe to ſet out things of the greateſt worth and the vaſteſt ſums amongſt Men, by a Kings Ranſome. It is worth a Kings Ranſome; ſo you uſe to ſay, in ſaying which you ſuppoſe to your ſelves ſome great King taken Captive and Priſoner by a potent Enemy able to retain and keep him; and how that then his whole Kingdom (as the Law and manner is) contributes and gives a Ranſom worthy to reſtore him to his Throne again: And that is eſtimated alſo according to what proportion his Kingdom may be judged to be in Riches, or their Prince in Glory and Dignity. Oh! what a value then would be ſet upon a Kings becoming a Ranſome himſelf, yea, of the great God made one Perſon with our Nature, and of his giving himſelf a Ranſome, who is the King of Kings. If God ſets a value upon each Hair of his Childrens head; (which to expreſs with eſteem, they are ſaid to be numbred by him) then of what eſteem with him (think we) muſt needs every thing of Chriſts, every hair of his head be, who is the head worth all the Saints themſelves, all the Saints together, who are but the Body to Him.

There is yet a more ſpecial Reflection in this ſpeech he gave himſelf, as it is in a ſpecial manner a ſetting forth the proper and peculiar love of Jeſus Chriſt himſelf in this matter, proper I ſay to himſelf, as diſtinguiſhed from the Father, and his love in giving him alſo. Nothing is or could be more expreſſive of a love and the greatneſs of it, then to ſay, he gave himſelf. You may therefore obſerve that they are often joyned together, and where this of giving himſelf is mentioned, there the other his love alſo is ſpoken of; Yea and this is purpoſely mentioned as the greateſt thing by which his love could be ſet out. This Conjunction we find again and again, Eph. 5. 25. As Chriſt loved his Church, and gave himſelf for it. And a ſecond time by Paul, Gal. 2. 20. Who loved me and gave himſelf for me. The higheſt Signification and Evidence of Love that is found amongſt Men, is that in an Husband towards a Wife, that he gives himſelf to her, and ſo giving himſelf he gives all things with himſelf, that there needs no more be ſaid or added to ſignify love. But lo! here is more, not onely Chriſt giving himſelf, his whole ſelf to his Church, as an Husband doth: But a giving himſelf for his Church, as a Saviour, as Eph. 5. 23, 25. And that is it the Apoſtle would make impreſſion of upon us, as the greateſt Demonſtration of his love to his Church; That when ſhe was captived to ſin and everlaſting Miſery, then he gives himſelf for her [to ſave her] as it follows there. We adore and admire his love; His love in giving himſelf to us, when by the Application of Redemption he is made ours by Grace. And how great a Favour is this to the Saints that live in Communion with Chriſt dayly, which they feel in the ſweets of a real Enjoyment of ſuch a Perſon, ſo great, ſo lovely, which they accordingly take in by the moſt exquiſite ſpiritual ſenſe, that the preſence and Gift of ſuch a Perſon requires of them. Oh but how great muſt his love be in giving himſelf for them ſo long ago, before they were; although the Application of him to them was the end of it. And whereas this tranſaction of giving himſelf, they know but by hear-ſay, and relation of the Scriptures; It was what he did for them in himſelf, (as the Phraſe is, Col. 2. 15.) And ſo they take it in but by faith; yet when Chriſt himſelf is applied to thy Soul, then put but both together and let the diſtinct apprehenſion of each meet in any ones heart, that hath a principle of love to Chriſt in him; And what an infinite of love to us will the joynt ſtream of them ariſe to? Himſelf given, his whole ſelf, yea and doubly given; Given to us in Application, and that not enough, but given for us; firſt, in Redemption; And ſo given over and over: Each of which Givings is enough to overcome and confound (with a loves confuſion) the ſtouteſt, hardeſt heart of any, yea of all Believers, when they come to comprehend theſe things. And it was Paul's Prayer for the Epheſians, chap. 3. 17, 18, 19. That Chriſt may dwell in your hearts by Faith; That ye being rooted and grounded in love may be able to comprehend with all Saints what is the breadth, and length, and depth, and height: And know the love of Chriſt which paſſeth knowledge. Some Interpreters would have it, that the Apoſtle ſhould ſpeak all that of the height and depth, &c. of the love of Chriſt to us, becauſe that doth follow ſo immediately; (I diſpute not that now) but this I will ſay, that although the Fathers love in other reſpects exceeds, and is therefore to be extolled for the height and depth, &c. of it; and is in other Scriptures ſet forth accordingly; In that it was the Original of all: (for it was he that made choice of the Perſons that ſhall be ſaved, contrived and deſigned all the grace and glory which each perſon ſo choſen ſhall have; yea and his love is alſo commended to us, in that he gave his onely begotten Son, &c. Rom. 5. 8. John 3. 16.) Yet ſtill let me ſay it, that Chriſts love hath this whereby it excels; and which is peculiar to him in this matter, that it was he alone that gave himſelf, the Father gave not himſelf: He gave but a Son indeed, yet as a Perſon diſtinct from himſelf: And for a Father to give a Son who is dear to him, is love; but for him that is given to give himſelf, this in that reſpect ſpeaks higher: That ſpeaks a ſtrain of more intimacy of love, then the Fathers is in that reſpect; although his ſon were never ſo dear and near to him, and inward with him. But on Chriſts part it was himſelf, and what was proper to himſelf in diſtinction from the Father, that that was given by himself. It was he that bare the brunt, that paid the price out of what was not his only as Appurtenances of him, but even out of himself. As therefore when God would swear, because he could swear by no greater, he swore [by himself;] So Christ when he would give a Gift to express and shew his love; because he could give nothing greater, he gives away himself, and that over and over. We are to render to each of those Persons, that Love and Honour which is due to them, (as the Apostle speaks of Men, in another case, Rom. 13. 7.) And look in what particular thing or respect the love of each of them is proper to each, our Affections of Love and Honour should accordingly uprise and apply themselves to render a suitable Return, that is, to give to the Son, what is the Sons: And to the Father, what is the Fathers. Let us therefore bring all of what Christ hath done home to our Hearts under that very Respect and Consideration, That it was he that gave himself, &c. And then withal, let all that can be said to commend the Fathers Love; let it all come in upon our hearts; as his giving a Son, an only begotten So, one in Essence and Eternal Fellowship with himself, as he is God with him; (my Father and I are one;) and then let us meditate on Gods giving his Son, consider'd as he is God-Man, in that God chose and designed him as such chiefly and principally, and in the first place for his own peculiar delight, as he saies of him, Isa. 43. 10. Mine Elect in whom my Soul delights. Even that Glory which was to be in him, as God-Man, was an object in its self more lovely and dearer unto God for him to please himself with, and to take delight in, than Millions of Worlds, yea than all that which he could have made. And therefore for God the Father to part with such a Son, to give such a Son and all the glory of his, in which he so much delighted, was infinite Love. But yet still even all this will serve the more to commend the Love of Christ the son to us, that himself was given by himself; I say in that respect it will be the more heightned on his part also, that he should part with such a Father that so loved him; and his own Glory at once. In and from the Old Testament we find the love of the Father is greatened to us by giving Men or Nations; when yet they were most wicked, and so most hateful to God of themselves: To give them for a Ransome for his People: And it is used by God himself as an Argument of infinite Love, Isaiah 43. 4. So as still his Love is greatened to us by all; and it is he, and none other, even this Christ (who is God) of whom Isaiah speaks these very things, both in the one place and the other which I have cited: It is he of whom he sayes, that All the Nations are but as the drop of a Bucket to him; Compare for this but verse 3, 9, 10, 11. of that 40 Chapter, with the 12, 15, 17. Verses: And you will see all these Words are spoken of him. Oh what a gift was this then! How much more cause have we to say, then the Apostle of the Corinthians Collection for the Saints; Oh! Blessed be God for this unspeakable Gift.

Chap. 3.

CHAP. III.

It is proved in the General, that Christ was made Sin, and a Curse for us, because he redeeming us who were under the Law, must become that, which we were in the Account, and Judgement of the Law. That how Christ was made Sin for us, demonstrated and explained in what respect he was so. Uses drawn from the Doctrines.

IT is said Gal. 4. 4, 5. That God sent his Son made under the Law to redeem them that are unaer the Law; Now whatever Christ redeemed us from, he was himself made for us; redeeming us from it by being made it. He that made the Law was made under it for us. Both he and we were under the Law; but with this difference; we were born under it, but he was made under it, by a voluntary Covenant freely undergoing it. To be under the Law is to be subject to all that the Law is able to say or do. So we use to express the condition of a Subject, saying he lives under the Laws. And so the Apostle expresseth it, Ron. 3. 19. What the Law says, it says unto them that are under the Law. So that whosoever is under the Law, whatever the Law is able to say and exact, to him it says, and of him it requires it. And if Christ will be made under the Law for Sinners, the Law will have full as much to say to him, as unto Sinners themselves: that is, as he is their Undertaker.

And the Law hath more to say to Sinners then to any other Creatures.

1. It can accuse them, and call them Sinners to their Faces: It can arraign them and lay all their Sins to their charge, and will not leave out one tittle in that Inditement. It can say, thou art a Blasphemer, thou an Adulterer, thou a Drunkard, &c. It does not, it will not spare at any time to speak this.

2. It can call them cursed for all these Sins, Gal. 3. 10. Cursed is every one, &c.

There is the accusing power of the Law, and there is the condemning power, as appears by the Law in our own Consciences, Rom. 2. 15. it accuseth, and Verse 1. it condemneth: And so you have both a Witness to accuse, and a Judge to condemn, in your own Breasts, which (as the Apostle saith) shews but the effect of the Law, which in it self it will do, much more to them that know it in the rigour of it: If therefore he who is our Redeemer, will come under the Law for Sinners, the Law will say as much to him, as it had to say to us; give him as ill Language, exact as hard measure from him as from us. The Law is backt with Gods Justice, and so will not respect or spare the greatness of Christs Person, if he once come under it. As we are Creatures, and he our Surety, it will as boldly command him to keep the Commandments on our behalf, as it would us. Look what it would have said to us as we were Sinners, it will as boldly and as freely speak, and speak out against him, onely with this differing respect of Reverence to him, as by himself voluntarily made under it, whereas we were born Slaves under it.

That therefore this clamour of the Law might be fully stopt, and we redeemed and freed from what ever the Law had to say against us, Christ was made all that we had made our selves.

As 1. were we Sinners? Christ that was made under the Law, was made Sin for us, 2 Cor. 5. 21. That sin might not be imputed to us, ver. 19 Again, were we accursed? Christ is made a Curse for us, to redeem us from the curse of the Law, Gal. 3. 13. That so, by his being made Sin, we may say, Who shall lay any thing to our charge? Rom. 8. 33. and by his being made a curse, we may as triumphantly say, Who shall condemn? Christ hath dyed, Rom. 8. 34. So as, though but the one is here mentioned, yet we will handle both. We will both shew how he was made Sin for us, and how he was made a Curse for us. Indeed neither of these Places do mention both distinctly; but yet either place includes and supposeth both. He had not been made a Curse, if he had not first been made Sin: He could not be made sin, but he must likewise be made a Curse, the consequent of Sin. They are two strange Words to be spoken of Gods Son, and such, as it had been blasphemy for us to speak, if God himself had not spake them first. And now that he hath spoken them, we had need take them in a right sense, or else they will be blasphemy in our thoughts still.

1. Christ was made Sin for us, 2 Cor. 5. 21. By sin some have understood onely an Offering for sin; and then to be made sin there, and a curse here, comes all to one. I confess it is sometimes so taken; as the Offerings in the Levitical Law are called Sin: but it is not so here; but truly and more plainly, for the guilt of Sin. And the reasons why it must be so meant here, are, first, Because that which sin is here opposed unto is Righteousness: He was made Sin, that we might be made the Righteousness of God in him. Now by the Righteousness of his made ours, is here meant, not onely the benefits which his Righteousness deserved and purchased, but his very fulfilling the Law: So Rom. 8. 4. That the Righteousness of the Law might be fulfilled in us, who walk not after the flesh, but after the Spirit. Therefore (as the Law of Opposition carries it) his being made Sin is not onely his being made the Punishment, the Curse that sin had deserved, but even the very guilt and breach of the Law it self was made his; even as his Righteousness was made ours. And how this came about, we shall shew presently.

2. He was made Sin which he knew not: that is, not experimentally, he was not conscious and guilty of it in his own Person. He was made Sin, who knew no sin. Now if onely Punishment for Sin were here meant, this were not true: For he experimentally knew what punishment for sin was, as fully as we do, Heb. 4. 15. We have an High-Priest that was [toucht] with the feeling of our Infirmities, and toucht to the Quick too. His Soul knew full well what it was to suffer for Sin; but he knew not what Sin the breach of the Law was: He knew not what it was to act Sin; and yet this which he knew not he was some way or other made, even made the guilt of Sin.

'Tis time to explain how, least any of your thoughts run to far. The Text helps us in it: As we are made his Righteousness, so he was made our Sin. Now we are made his Righteousness meerly by imputation; That is, all his Obedience to the Law is accounted ours, is reckoned ours, even as if we had fulfilled it; Though we knew none of it. It was fulfilled, not by us, but in us, Rom. 8. 4. He fulfilled it, not we: So that there was an exchange made, and all our breaches of the Law were made his; Our Debts put over to him, that is, reckoned to him, put upon his Score. That is all, Let your Thoughts therefore go no further. It was we that like Sheep went astray, and not he, and yet the Lord laid on him the Iniquities of us all, Isa. 53. 6. And to be made Sin in this sense, is but to be charged and accused as a Sinner, and not made really so by committing it. As we use to say, when we would accuse and prove one to be a Thief, we say, I will will make a Thief of you: that is, not make you steal, but prove you to be such. So this making here is but Gods reckoning him as a Transgressor. That Phrase is used ver. 12. of Isaiah 53. He was numbred amongst the Transgressors: Reckoned such by God and Men. By Imputation then he was counted as one that hath broken the Law. And yet (to free your Thoughts from the least mistake) though by Imputation, yet not such as whereby we were made Sinners in Adam, which was by Imputation but Originally. Now Christ was not so made our Sin. That which is imputed may be said to be imputed, either by Derivation, or else by voluntary Assumption, or willing taking it upon one: Now Adam's Sin though it was but imputed to us, yet it was by Derivation, and by a natural and necessary Covenant. But our Sin though to Christ it is imputed, yet not by Derivation, but by a willing, free Undertaking or taking them off from us, and by a voluntary Covenant. So that although he was made Sin, yet in that he was freely made so, therefore that Imputation stained not him, nor his Nature, but he remained holy, undefiled, and separate from Sinners; Whereas the Imputation of Adam's Sin ſtained and depraved us his Poſterity. For though that Sin of his was but Imputedly made ours, yet ſo, as we being one in him, are truly ſaid to have ſinned in him; and therefore his Sin is ours, becauſe we committed it, and ſinned in him, Rom. 5. 12. But of Chriſt we muſt abhor to think ſo; Nay, in this doth the Imputation of his Righteouſneſs to us differ from the Imputation of our Sins to him, that his Righteouſneſs is ſo imputed to us, as we by reaſon of that Covenant between God and him, may be ſaid to have fulfilled the Law in him, and the Law is ſaid to be fulfilled in us, becauſe we were in him, but not ſo are our ſins imputed to him. It cannot be ſaid in any ſenſe, he was made Sin in us, but for us onely: or the ſin which was committed firſt in us, and by us, conſidered in our ſelves, was made his; for though we were in him, yet not he in us: for the Root bears the Branches, and not the Branches the Root.

Having thus ſhewn how it was, and in what ſenſe; we will now ſhew,
I. By Scripture.
II. By Reaſon.

I. By Scripture. And here take the Inſtance of the Scape-Goat, over whoſe head the Sins of the People were confeſt (Levit. 16. 21.) by Aarons putting his hand upon it; therein acting the part of God the Father, laying the Iniquities of us all upon Chriſt, and tranſlating them from the People. To which thoſe Phraſes in Iſaiah 53. do refer. And this was in reſpect of leaving the guilt of their ſins, not the puniſhment of them upon him. For to expreſs and hold forth Chriſt as made an Offering for ſin, that other Goat was ſacrificed: but the Scape-Goat was ordained to hold forth Chriſts bearing the Guilt of our ſins; for that Goat was carried away into a Land of Separation, or a place inacceſſible. And ſo Chriſt (whom John ſaw as the Lamb of God bearing the ſins of the World) carries away our ſins, to an utter aboliſhing of them from before the Face of God: ſo that (as it is in Jer. 50. 20.) They ſhall be ſought for, but not found, they being taken away, (as the Phraſe of the New Teſtament is.) Chriſt had them upon him, when he was Baptized [ἀιρῶν, ſuſcipiens, portans, auferens] and principally, when he was upon the Croſs, as 1 Pet. 2. 24. Who his own ſelf bare our ſins on his Body (that is his Humane Nature) on the Tree. So Heb. 9. 28. Chriſt was once offered to bear the Sins of many; and he ſhall appear the ſecond time without ſin. Therefore now this time he appeared (to John) carrying the ſins of the World: but being riſen, juſtified from all thoſe ſins, he ſhall appear without the guilt of them lying upon him. And accordingly when we was in this life, he demeaned himſelf as one that had been a Sinner, as in appearnce ſuch: The fleſh he took had the likeneſs of ſinful fleſh, Rom, 8. 4. The Fore-skin of his fleſh was circumciſed, as if he had been born in ſin. So his Mother was purified, Luke 2. 23, 24. and offered an Offering, as if ſhe had conceived him in ſin; And Levit. 12. 2, 6. this was a Sin-Offering, namely, for that ſin which their Seed was brought forth in. And as in thoſe Rites at his birth, ſo in his whole life he ſubmitted to the Ceremonial Law; the intent of which was to be Publica Confeſſio, and like to Penance, whereby they were to profeſs themſelves Sinners, and to ſtand in need of a Mediatour, and ſo thrice a year he came unto the Temple, &c. All which, if he had not ſome way been made a Sinner, he ought not to have done; for he ſhould thereby have profeſſed that which was not. Yea, in thoſe Confeſſions, thoſe paſſionate Pſalms made for him, we find him acknowledging of ſin as his own. This will appear by ſome paſſages in thoſe Pſalms, which are Prophetically made of Chriſt, and utter the inward addreſſes of his Soul unto his Father. And of all the Pſalms, or other Propheſies of this Nature, there is no one except the Twenty ſecond, which can challenge more paſſages in ſo ſmall a ſpace, applyed expreſly unto Chriſt in the New Teſtament, then the Sixty Nine Pſalm. In verſe 4. we have it, They hated me without a cauſe. This we find applied by Chriſt himſelf, as Propheſied of himſelf, John 15. 25. Again we have it verſe 9. of that Pſalm, The Zeal of thine houſe hath eaten me up. This you have in like manner, John 2. 19. applied unto Chriſt: Moreover the next words of that 9th ver. The Reproaches of them that reproached thee are fallen upon me. Lo you have them applyed by Paul as expreſly unto Chriſt, Rom. 15. 3.

Book V.

Again, that Paſſage, verſe 21. They gave me Gall for my Meat, and in my thirſt they gave me Vinegar to drink. You know both the ſtory and the application of it, by the Evangeliſts Matthew, Mark, and John, Then that other paſſage that follows, Let their Table be made a ſnare, you have it applyed accordingly unto the Jews that crucified him for their crucifying of him, Rom. 11. 9.

Now then ſo many of theſe being ſo applied, why ſhould not thoſe other alſo be ſo applied? as when it is ſaid, ver. 4, 5. Then I reſtored that which I took not away, Oh God thou knoweſt my fooliſhneſs, and my Guiltineſs is not hid from thee. How fitly do theſe words expreſs the imputation of ſin to him. It was a proverbial ſpeech, when a Man ſuffer'd innocently as to his own perſon, to ſay that, He reſtored that which he took not; and ſo Chriſt on the Croſs is brought in here ſpeaking. For as Iſaiah tells us, He bore our ſins: with Oh in the next verſe of the Pſalm he confeſſeth as his own, having taken them upon him. Oh God thou knoweſt my fooliſhneſs, (that is my ſin, as fooliſhneſs it is uſually taken) and my ſins are not hidden from thee. Which is plainly in other words that which the Apoſtle ſays of him, 2 Cor. 5. He that knew no ſin, was made ſin. The like you have in the 40th Pſalm, Sacrifice and Burnt-offering thou wouldſt not; Lo I come, &c. ver, 6. 7. which how it is applied to Chriſt you may read in Heb. 10. neither can it well be applyed to any other. Yet ver. 12. he ſaies, My Iniquities take hold of me: He calls them his, not by perpetration, but by a voluntary aſſumption, and by imputation reckoning them as his. So Iſaiah 53. 6. [He laid on him the Iniquities of us all] In the Hebrew 'tis, He cauſed to meet in him the Iniquities of us all: He was made the great Ocean, into which the guilt of all our ſins did run.

Now ſecond for the reaſon of it.

I. He was not only an Inter-nuncius, (as Socinus would have him) or one that came as an extraordinary Meſſenger between God and us; but he was Sponſor, a Surety. So Heb. 7. 22. Such as Judah undertook to be for Benjamin, Gen. 43. 9. I will be Surety for him and bring him to thee, or let me bear the blame for ever. Or ſuch as Paul was to Oneſimus, Philemon 18, 19. If he hath wronged thee, or owes ought, (ſays he) put it on my account; I will repay it. Juſt ſo doth Chriſt engage himſelf unto his Father for us: If they have wronged thee in any thing, put it on my account, reckon it to me, and I will repay and ſatisfie for it. A Surety whoſe Name is put into a Bond, is not onely bound to pay the Debt, but he makes it his own debt alſo, even as well as 'tis the Principals; and he may be ſued and charged for the debt as well as he. And ſo Chriſt when he once made himſelf a Surety, he thereby made himſelf under the Law, and ſo put himſelf in the room of ſinners, that what the Law could lay to their charge, it might lay to his.

And, Secondly, There was a neceſſity, that if he would take our puniſhment upon him, and ſo ſatisfie Juſtice, he ſhould firſt take on him the guilt of our ſins, For the Judgment of God is according to truth. The Party whom God puniſheth for ſin, muſt be ſome way found guilty of that ſin, or elſe Judgment proceeds not according to right rules: Guilty, not by inherency, yet by imputation and account. For as we can have no Intereſt in any benefit merited by Chriſt, but we muſt firſt be partakers of the Righteouſneſs that purchaſed it; that muſt firſt be made ours, and then his benefits; ſo if Chriſt will be made a Curſe for us (which is the demerit of ſin) he muſt firſt be made ſin. And therefore Iſaiah in the 53 Chap. of his Propheſy, when at the 4. and 5. Verſes he had ſaid that Chriſt our Surety was not puniſhed for himſelf, but bore our griefs, &c. That is, thoſe that we ſhould have borne; and was wounded for our Tranſgreſſions, &c. He then goes on to clear it, how it was done: we (ſays he) as ſheep had gone aſtray, but God laid upon him the iniquity of us all: That is, he having firſt charged upon Chriſt our ſins, which we in our Perſons committed, when once they were thus laid upon him, Gods Juſtice then wounded him for them. Unjuſt it is not, that a Perſon righteous ſhould ſuffer for an unrighteous Man; (Peter affirms it, 1. Pet. 3. 18.) but then the unrighteouſneſs of that Man muſt be laid upon him and made his.

Thus in General.

Chap. 3.

But when we ſay, Chriſt was made ſin; what ſin is it that he was made, and that was thus imputed to him! was it ſin in the General onely, and in the abſtract evil of it? Surely more; for how that ſhould be imputed in the univerſal notion of it, is hard to conceive, though 'tis true, that he apprehended the evil thereof more fully then all Man-kind ever did, or ſhall do. The Scripture ſeems to ſpeak more; and as if he bore particular ſins; ſo all theſe fore-mentioned Places have it. As 1 Pet. 2. 24. He bare our [ſins] in his own Body on the Tree, that we being dead to ſin, &c. So over the Scape-Goat were the particular ſins of the Congregation confeſt. And ſo in thoſe fore-mentioned Pſalms he ſpeaks as of multitudes of Iniquities, and innumerable evils that compaſſed him about and came over his head. And as Chriſt bare ſins (in the Plural;) and innumerable ſins; ſo he bare the ſins of all, and every particular Man he died for: So Iſaiah 53. 6. God cauſed to meet in him the Iniquities of us [all:] He being made as the common drain and ſink into which all the ſins of every particular man do run, and the Center in whom they all meet: and that meeting implies an aſſembly of particular ſins.

Again, if he bare the particular ſin of every man he dyed for; what were they groſs ſins onely, and thoſe which were more eminent for guilt? why, not all and every one, both ſmall and great! for where ſhall we ſet the limits? why may it not be thought, that as there was a Bill of all the Perſons he died for given him, (for Chriſt died not for Propoſitions onely, to make them true, but for Perſons, and therefore is ſaid to know his ſheep by Name, John 10. 3.) ſo alſo that he had a Bill of their particular ſins, ſo as not one ſin was left out unreckoned to him. Adam had not a Bill of our Perſons; for his ſin is naturally derived to as many as ſhall come of him: but Chriſt dyed out of love to Perſons, and that out of a voluntary Covenant; and ſo it was neceſſary, that all their Names ſhould be enrolled and given him, as himſelf ſays, John 17. 6. Thine they were, and thou gaveſt them me: And as their Perſons, ſo all the ſins of all thoſe Perſons they were all to meet in him, and to be laid to his charge. And there are theſe reaſons for it:

1. God was to deal in Juſtice with him (as was ſaid) and as a Surety he was to ſatisfie to the uttermoſt farthing: And if ſo, it was meet he ſhould have an Account, and know the ſeveral Items of what he paid for.

2. Therein it was, that he ſhewed more love in dying for one then for another: As for Mary more than another, becauſe he bare much for her, and more then for another; which cauſed her to love him more. And how is it that a great ſinner is more beholden to Chriſt for his dying for him, then a ſmall ſinner is, but by his bearing more ſins for the one then for the other, and ſo ſuffering more for him? which if it had been carried in a confuſed and general manner, and as it were in a Summa Totalis without the diſtinct reckoning of particulars, is hard to conceive how it ſhould be.

3. It was needful, that ſo a ſinner might ſay with boldneſs, as Rom. 8. 33. Who ſhall lay anything to my charge: Ne aliquid, not the leaſt, becauſe that Quicquid what ever it was, it was laid to Chriſts charge.

And if it now be askt, how this could be, that ſo many Millions of ſins ſhould be diſtinctly conſidered by him in his ſufferings. I Anſwer.

1. He that is פֶּלְמוֹנִי (as Daniel calls him, Dan. 8. 13.) Is qui habet omnia in numerato, He who hath all things before him at his fingers ends, and as it were in ready Coin ready told over; could eaſily keep a diſtinct account of all our Sins.

2. He who now is in Heaven, knows all that is done here below as a Man, and hath all the buſineſſes of the World in his head and guides them, and hath all the Accounts of the World by heart, ſo as he is able (as at the latter day he will) as Man exactly to give unto every Man his Accounts, both Receits and Expences, and that to the utmoſt farthing! for every work ſhall come into Judgment before the Man Chriſt Jeſus, be it good or evil. And Peter tells us, he is ready to judge both quick and dead, all that are alive, and all that are dead. He who can do all this, is able to keep a particular account of all the ſins which he expiated; and if he did not as Man know all things here below (which in themthemſelves are but finite, though to us innumerable) how as Man were he experimentally able to compaſſionate all his Saints upon all occaſions, and in all their ſufferings, (as he is ſaid to do, Heb. 2. ult. and 4. ult.) If now in Heaven his Underſtanding as Man be thus enlarged and vaſt, why, when he deſcended into Hell (as when our ſins were reckoned to him he did) ſhould he not be able as well to take in all and every particular ſin of his Elect for whom he dyed? Yea, this ſtretching of his Underſtanding then, thus to take in all mens ſins, did prepare it for that vaſtneſs which it now hath in Heaven, even as our Humiliation makes way for comfort and conſolation. Laſtly, if Satan could ſhew him all the glory of the World in the twinkling of an eye as it were; why might not God ſhew him all our ſins in as full a manner, and ſet them in order before him?

Uſe. 1. See the immenſe Love of Chriſt unto his Elect, in that he would not onely be made a Curſe, but ſin too for them; which he being Holineſs it ſelf, muſt needs be moſt abhorrent of ſuch an Imputation, that which we moſt hate, how do we abhor the imputation and name of! That excellency which we moſt affect, what an inſufferable injury do we count it to be blemiſht in! For a chaſt and undefiled Maid to be counted an Whore, how nearly would it touch her, how deeply affect her! But for Holineſs it ſelf to be numbred among Tranſgreſſors, for God to be called Devil, yea, Prince of Devils, how beyond all expreſſion inſupportable muſt it needs be!

2. Learn we to confeſs and take upon us our ſins in particular. Mens ſorrow for ſin is uſually General and confuſed: They acknowledge they are Sinners, &c. but Jeſus Chriſts Soul could not eſcape with a General Charge: (as that he ſtood in the room of ſinners) but the particulars are charged on him. As he ſays of our Perſons to his Father. Thine they are, and thou gaveſt them me: So maieſt thou ſay to him as concerning thy ſins, Mine they are, and thou tookſt them on thee. And if Chriſt took them on him to ſatisfie for them, thou muſt at leaſt take them on thee, to humble thee.

3. If thou canſt not confeſs all thou art guilty of; (as thou canſt not) yet comfort thy ſelf with this, that Jeſus Chriſt knew all particulars to ſatisfie for them; and ſo entreat the Lord to cleanſe thee from thy ſecret ſins, which were not hid from him. What the Apoſtle ſpeaks to terrify Hipocrites, That God is greater then their Hearts, and knows more by them then they can do by themſelves; that may we conſider to our comforts, that Chriſt is greater then our Hearts, and knows more of our ſins by us then all we do, yea, and knew them, to take them off from us.

4. Make uſe of Chriſts Blood and ſatisfaction, not for thy ſins in the lump, but for particular ſins, becauſe he ſatisfied for Particulars. Not onely ſpread the Plaiſter over all, but lay particular Plaiſters of his Blood, to particular ſins. And as in croſſing a Writing which you would not have read, you not onely draw lines but alſo race and ſcratch out every word in particular, that it might not be read: ſo apply Chriſts ſatisfaction, and his being made ſin to every tittle and circumſtance in ſins more hainous, and go over them again and again with croſs lines of Chriſts Blood, eſpecially in two Caſes.

1. When anew ſin is afreſh committed. Chriſt is a Fountain to waſh us every day (Zach. 13. 2.) from thoſe daily pollutions that befall us. This was Typified out in the old Law, when they brought Sacrifices upon every particular occaſion. Even ſo ſhould we (not offer up as the Papiſts in the Maſſes) but put God in mind of Chriſts Sacrifice for particular ſins committed. So 1 John 2. 1, 2, 3. If any man ſin, we have an Advocate with the Father, and he was the Propitiation for thoſe Sins. Or,

2. When a ſin ſtares a Man in the Face much, as Davids Murder did in his, when it ſaid it was ever before him. In this caſe have recourſe to this, That Chriſt did bear it, and apply Chriſts bearing of it, unto the Guilt ſtill as it riſeth: And as you lay Aqua fortis upon letters of Ink to eat them out; ſo ſtill be a dipping the hands of thy Faith in Chriſts blood, and through Faith applying of that blood to the ſin. This do in every Prayer and in every Sacrament; and thou ſhalt ſecretly find the horrour of it diminiſh, and thoſe

Letters of guilt wherewith it was written in thy Conſcience, grow paler and dimmer till they vaniſh. Chap. 3.

5. It may ſerve to ſtrengthen thy Faith againſt particular ſins, by this, that Chriſt bore them. Say and plead to Chriſt when thou beggeſt pardon, Was not this ſin in the number? And as we make it a great up-holding to Faith, to conſider that God knew afore what we would be, and that we would ſin, and yet choſe us; and that therefore no ſins will put him off; ſo we may as well make uſe of this like conſideration, That Jeſus Chriſt alſo when he dyed for us, knew what we would be, and what our ſins would be, and yet refuſed not our Bill of ſins, nor our Names given in to him, but bare all thoſe ſins of ours in his Body on the Tree. And if he had meant to have refuſed thee for thy ſins, he would have done it then. When a new ſin is committed, we are apt to be amazed and to call all in queſtion: If indeed thou couldſt commit a ſin which God and Chriſt had not known; If any ſin were or could be now new unto Chriſt, then it might trouble thee; but there is none that is ſo; but even this ſin that troubles thy Conſcience ſo, was amongſt the reſt.

6. See the fulneſs and compleatneſs of Juſtification, together with the way of diſpenſing it.

1. The way of diſpenſing it. We think with our ſelves, How ſhall the Righteouſneſs of Chriſt come to be made mine: ſhall I a ſinner ever become Righteous? O what a Wonder were this! Yet behold, a greater Wonder is here; Chriſt who is Righteouſneſs it ſelf, was made ſin, that ſo we might be made the Righteouſneſs of God in him.

2. See here the compleatneſs of Juſtification: All ſins are laid to Chriſt, that we might ſay, Ne aliquid, not the leaſt thing ſhall be exacted of us (Who ſhall lay any thing, &c. Rom. 8. 33.) and that we might with boldneſs come to a particular reckoning with God, nothing fearing that any exception can be made, or that the leaſt ſin was left out of the Catalogue which Chriſt had of them, that ſhould yet remain unpaid for. We may ſee here the abſoluteneſs of Gods Pardon, in that to make ſure work Chriſt was made ſin, and took upon him the guilt of all our Tranſgreſſions to anſwer for them: ſo that God gave us an abſolute diſcharge: Thus ver. 21. [not imputing their Treſpaſſes to them] but looking for payment at Chriſts hands, who was made ſin for them. In Law both the Principal and the Surety uſe to ſtand bound; but God here did from everlaſting ſecretly (as it were) cancel our Bond, and keeps Chriſts onely; and therefore it ſtands Chriſt in hand to ſee our ſins anſwered for: And in that he ſhall appear without ſin, it ſhould comfort us that we ſhall do ſo in like manner.

7. It may teach us how to Mourn and be Troubled; not for puniſhment onely, but for ſin as ſin alſo. Chriſt in ſatisfying for them, not onely bare our puniſhment, but our ſins alſo; which are things diſtinct from our Sorrows: And therefore we in ſorrowing for ſin ſhould as diſtinctly mourn for ſin as for miſery the effect of it.

8. Thoſe that are the greateſt ſinenrs ſhould mourn moſt for ſin, and love Chriſt moſt; and this, becauſe he hath borne their ſins, and more of their ſins then of others. They are to love much, not ſimply becauſe to them much is forgiven, or that Chriſt pardons them much, and ſo paſſeth a greater Act of Grace in pardoning them then he does to others; but becauſe Chriſt paid more for them, he underwent and ſuffered more that their ſins might be forgiven then for other Men. Mary loved much becauſe much was forgiven her, Luke 7. 47. But Paul goes farther, thereby exalting the Grace of Chriſt, that he came into the World to ſave ſinners, whereof I am chief (ſays he, 1 Tim. 1. 15.) As a natural Son is more bound to a Mother then an adopted Son can be, becauſe he beſides his Education and Inheritance was moreover born in her Womb, and ſhe underwent many painful throws for him (and the harder her Labour is with any, the more they ſhould love her;) So we are bound to love Chriſt, not ſimply for forgiveneſs, but alſo for that he bore us in his ſoul, and our ſins; and had a harder labour of it with ſome of us (who were greater ſinners) then he had with many others.

CHAP. IV.

How Christ was made a Curse for us. That it was the curse of the moral Law, and the whole substance of what it threatned. Arguments to prove that Christ suffered it.

WE have seen how Christ was made sin; let us now see how he was made a Curse: The other was but by Imputation, but this by Infliction: He was made sin who knew not what it was to sin; but in being made a Curse, he knew it to his cost; it entered into his Soul and Bowels. To explain this a little;

1. This Curse was not meerly the Curse of the Judicial Law, or of a Malefactor, hanging upon a Tree: For the Curse which he was to Redeem us from, was the Curse of the Moral Law, not of the Judicial. It was not the Curse of such a Malefactors death before Men, but before God; for from that Curse we were to be redeemed; and therefore that Curse was he made. And Gal. 3. 10, 13. we have it expresly thus; The Law says, Cursed is every one, &c. It's true, that this hanging on a Tree (on which Judicial Punishment a Curse was pronounced) was made the figure of Christs being Cursed with the Curse of the Moral Law; but that was the Curse which Christ was made; and therefore Deut. 21. 22. God afore-hand Typically accursing that Death (as aiming at his Son) says of him that hangs on a Tree, that he is accursed before him. So that, his Son whom this aimed at, was not onely cursed before Men, in that he was put to such an accursed death; but was also cursed before God, with the Curse of the Moral Law; whereof the Apostle brings this as the sign and proof, that that death which in the Judicial Law onely was accursed, was executed upon him.

2. The Curse of the Moral Law spoken of, ver. 10. is opposed to Blessing: And as the Blessings of God are the matter of his promises, so Curses are the matter of his Threatenings. Blessings are conveyed by Promises, Curses by Threatenings; the Threatenings of the Law are the Cannons, and the Curses in them are the Bullets. And as whom God blesseth, he blesseth with all Blessings; so whom he curseth, he curseth with all Cursings. As there is a fulness of Blessings in the Gospel, (as Rom. 15. 29.) so the Moral Law is full of all Curses; which notwithstanding Christ underwent.

3. The Curse contains in it the avenging Wrath of God; and is more then a bare punishment from God: As Gods Favour is the Life of all Blessings; so Gods avenging Wrath gives weight to all Curses. The Saints are punished in Anger, but not cursed in their Chastisements, because they are inflicted on them out of love. But here we must warily distinguish between loving the person punished, and punishing that beloved Person out of love. God though he loved the Person of Christ when he punished him, yet he punished him, not out of love, but wrath. When he punisheth the Saints, he both punisheth Persons beloved, and also out of love, which stirs up anger. But he punisheth Christ out of wrath; and therefore he was made a Curse. His Person was beloved; but he being made sin to that end to bear the full punishment due to sin; God therefore out of wrath punisheth sin imputed to him. Not Gods wrath, but an anger arising from love, is it that chastiseth us: but it is not so with Christ; the wrath of God was poured forth on him. Which yet differs from his punishing of wicked Men, whose Persons he hates; and whom he punisheth out of wrath also. But though he loves Christs Person, yet he punisheth sin in him, out of pure wrath, and lets Justice fly upon him to have its full Penniworths out of him, he lets wrath suck the blood of his Soul, till it falls off, as the Leech when it is filled, and breaks.

So

So that put all theſe three conſiderations together, that Chriſt was made the Curſe of the Law Moral, not Judicial onely : that the Curſe thereof contains in it all Curſes ; and that thoſe Curſesare laid and ſet on with Gods Wrath ; and this will be the Doctrine.

That the whole Curſe that our Perſons were Subject unto from the Law Chriſt underwent to redeem us from it. For,

1. That Curſe which we were redeemed from he was made ; but we were redeemed from the whole Curſe ; therefore he was made, or underwent the whole Curſe.

2. That Curſe which contains all Curſes in it Chriſt was to be made for us ; Now ſuch is the Curſe of the Moral Law. For as the leaſt breach of the Law is Copulative, and he that offends in one, is guilty of all ; ſo are the Curſes of the Law ; he that is curſed with any one, is curſed with them all. As there is a fulneſs of Bleſſings, ſo of Curſes ; As therefore a bleſſed Man is called Vir Beatudinum, a Man of Bleſſedneſſes, Pſal. 1. 1. as being bleſſed with all Bleſſings, Eph. 1. 3. Being Heir of all the Promiſes. So he that is Curſed is expoſed to all Curſes ; and ſo was Chriſt ; and therefore he is called Vir Dolorum, a Man of Sorrows, as being the Center of them, (Iſa. 53. 3.) And as all our ſins met in him, ſo all our ſorrows ; and from his Birth all the great Ordnance of Gods Curſes were ready charged with wrath and bent againſt him, and were all in their order diſcharged, and lett off upon him. And therefore, not his ſuffering, but his ſufferings are mentioned by Peter, 1 Pet. 4. 13. Being tempted (not in one, but) in all things wherein we were, Sin onely excepted, Heb. 2. 18. In univerſali Hominum miſeria, immerſus, ſays Bernard : τῶν ὁλῶν τὰς πάντας κατάρας διὰδεχεται, ſays Juſtin Martyr : He wholly took upon him all the Curſes of all ; he was wholly and fully Curſed. Juſtin Martyr contra Tryphonem.

Now to give ſome Reaſons of it ;

1. The firſt ſhall be, becauſe he was become a Debter to the whole Law by voluntary ſuretiſhip (as was ſaid) for us. And therefore was circumciſed, and ſo made under the Law ; and therefore that whole Curſe and puniſhment which the Law required, he was to undergo, ere the Law would free him. And for this reaſon, when he was to ſuffer any thing, as well as to do any thing, you ſhall find him ſpeaking in the Language of a Debtour that could not now evade it. So John 3. 14. The Son of Man muſt be lift up : thus likewiſe Mark 8. 31. Luke 24. 26. and Mat. 26. 54. Theſe things (ſays he) the Son of Man ought to have ſuffered : He was now entered into Bond, and it was his duty to pay even the utmoſt farthing. It is not the cuſtom or manner of the Law to abate any thing ; and therefore he undergoes the whole Curſe, or we are not freed.

2. God dealt with him in Juſtice, and Juſtice was that which he was to ſatisfie ; which could not be till he had borne the whole Puniſhment due to ſin, Rom. 3. 25. 26. Whom God hath ſet forth to be a propitiation, through faith in his blood, to declare his righteouſneſs for the remiſſion of ſins that are paſt through the forbearance of God. ver. 26. To declare, I ſay, at this time his righteouſneſs : that he might be juſt, and the juſtifier of him which believeth in Jeſus. Compared with Rom. 8. 33. Who ſhall lay any thing to the Charge of Gods elect ? It is God that Juſtifieth. This Juſtice is ſhewn in our Redemption : for Chriſt redeemed us not Vi, ſed Juſtitia : ſo in that Rom. 3. 25. and not Poteſtativè, out of his Prerogative and Greatneſs, bearing us out by meer favour, without ſatisfying Juſtice ; but rationabiliter, by a way of Equity, Salvis Juſtitiæ regulis ; by paying ἀντίλυτρον, a Correſpondent Ranſome even in Proportion ; a Tooth for a Tooth as the Law required, 1 Tim. 2. 6. He was not onely to make Interceſſion, but Satisfaction. As he is called an Advocate ; 1 John 2. 2. ſo alſo a Propitiation : he has paid for the favour which he now intercedes for. And as he is called an Interceſſor, ſo (Rev. 5. 6.) a Lamb ſlain : and by bearing our whole puniſhment, he made his Interceſſion more prevalent. Yea, I will lay down this for a Concluſion, ere I go any further : That Chriſt was diſpenſed with in nothing. Juſtice abated him nothing of that puniſhment which was due to us : It regarded not the Greatneſs or Dignity of his Perſon, to ſpare him in the leaſt. So that if there had been any thing neceſſarily to have been undergone for ſatisfaction, which was not compatible with his Perſon, he muſt not have undertook it. For Juſtice (if God go that way) will have its full due, or nothing: And the reaſon is evident; for if Chriſt had been abated in any thing, he might have been abated in one thing as well as in an other, and ſo in all: but he ſays, it was neceſſary for him to ſuffer; and the ſame neceſſity lay on him to ſuffer all that was due, as well as any thing at all.

But you will ſay; did not the Dignity of his Perſon avail to ſome abatement, ſo as one Drop of his Blood might have ſerved? The Anſwer is, That indeed the Dignity of his Perſon did add an infinite Merit to every thing he ſuffered; but not ſo, that any particular ſhould be abated. Again, This his Dignity conduced to the acceptation of his Sufferings for many Perſons; that what that one Perſon did ſhould be for many; (as Paul ſays) but it ſtruck off no part of the Debt, or of the things to be paid. It cauſed that that one Payment ſhould ſtand for Many; but not that a farthing of that Payment ſhould be wanting. But ere we go over any of the Particulars, we muſt anſwer an Objection, which is this, That there were many particular evils of Puniſhments which were Ingredients in many of our Cups, which yet he never taſted of, as Sickneſs, and Diſtempers of Body; for his Body ſaw no Corruption, neither before Death nor after. And many like particular branches of the Curſe which befal Men for Sin, he met not with; Not a Bone of him was broken. How then did he ſatisfie for the whole Curſe? Yea, Hell it ſelf, and the Eternity of its Puniſhments, the Worm of Conſcience, Deſpair, &c. he endured not; how then underwent he the whole Curſe following upon ſin? I Anſwer,

1. (In General) Know, that the Wrath of God is the whole Curſe; it is the Total Summ of all Curſes, it is the Curſe in Solido, in Groſſe: And as a payment conſiſting of many Farthings, may be made in one piece of Gold; ſo all particular Curſes may be undergone in bearing that one great Curſe, the Original of Curſes, for otherwiſe the Angels now in Hell ſhould not undergo the whole Curſe; ſeeing many miſeries that befal Men here they are not capable of. The wrath of God is either expreſt Mediately, in Particular Puniſhments, or Immediately upon the Soul. Now this Immediate wrath eminently contains all Mediate Croſſes in it. The Cup of the Lords wrath which Chriſt drank up, is ſaid to be full of Mixture; for all evils were ſtrained into it. If therefore it can be proved, that Chriſt underwent the whole wrath of God, it may be ſaid, That he underwent all Curſes, although he had endured none of the miſeries of this Life. Which (among other Interpretations I have elſewhere given) may perhaps be the intendment of thoſe Words, Mat. 8. 17. where the Evangeliſt quotes out of Iſaiah, That Chriſt bare our Sickneſſes; and ſo by vertue of that his bearing them, he healed them. The meaning whereof is not, That he bare the Sickneſſes of the Body; but that he ſuſtaining the Wrath of God, which was more then the Gout, Stone, or what ever elſe, might be ſaid virtually to bear them all, and by vertue of that heal them. And ſo in that place, Iſa. 53. 10. The Phraſe tranſlated [bruiſing him] is by ſome read, [He or his Soul was made ſick.]

2. It is in his Paſſive Obedience as it is in his Active, when it is ſaid he fulfilled every Jota of the Law; the meaning is not, that he performed every Duty; for he performed not the Duty of a Husband to a Wife, or of a Magiſtrate, &c. in this World; but in fulfilling the Law of Love (which was the ſumme of the Law) he fulfilled all. So in his Paſſive Obedience, by undergoing the Wrath of God he underwent the ſumme of the Curſe, the Curſe in Solido.

3. It is in Temporal Curſes as in Temporal Bleſſings. Many particular good things may be with-held, when yet God with-holds no good thing from his Children, in that he vouchſafes them his Favour which is better then all; and ſo makes up all Temporal Promiſes an hundred-fold. Thus is it in Temporal Curſes; it was not neceſſary that Chriſt ſhould endure each particular, if he endured Gods Wrath; he fulfilled the whole in undergoing that.

CHAP. V.

An Enumeration of the Particulars of the Curse which Christ Endured. That assuming our Nature, he took also those Infirmities which sin hath brought upon us. That a painful wretched Life being the Curse of our first Fathers Sins, the Life of Christ answerably was filled with Miseries and Sorrows.

NOW for the particulars of this Curse, it were endless to go over all those that he endured. We will therefore have recourse to, and instance onely in that first Curse which was laid on that first Adam, and in his Name, upon all his Posterity, as we find it recorded, Gen. 3. 17, 18, 19. And unto Adam he said, Because thou hast hearkened unto the voice of thy Wife, and hast eaten of the Tree of which I commanded thee, saying, Thou shalt not eat of it: cursed is the Ground for thy sake; in sorrow shalt thou eat of it all the days of thy Life. ver. 18. Thorns also and thistles shall it bring forth to thee: and thou shalt eat the herb of the field. ver. 19. In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread, till thou return unto the ground; for out of it wast thou taken: for dust thou art, and unto dust thou shalt return. Compared with Chap. 2. 17. But of the tree of the Knowledge of good and evil, thou shalt not eat of it: for in the day that thou eatest thereof, thou shalt surely dye. And to shew how all the particulars of the Curse there mentioned were by him undergone, will suffice; that Curse being indeed the Summe and Epitome of Curses, as the Lords-Prayer is of Prayers.

It consists of Three Parts;

1. The Frailties Mans Nature became subject to, tending in themselves to Death and Dissolution; [Dust thou art, &c.] The Curse then seising on him wasted his Body and Spirit, and made both subject unto frailties, and to be of a mouldering Nature; Thou art dust (says God) and to dust thou shalt return.

2. The Miseries and Sorrows which Mans Nature meets with, untill he returns unto dust; which are either,

1. The Labour and Travail he must take to get his Living; expressed by eating his bread in the sweat of his brows; sweat being put (by a Synechdoche) for all the Labour and Travail that Man is born unto, as the sparkes fly upwards, Job 5. 7. Or,

2. The sad and cross Events and Accidents which befal Men from the Creature in the Course of Occurences and various Passages of Gods Providence; in that all Creatures are at Enmity: The Earth brings forth Thorns, the Forrest Wild-Beasts, &c.

The third part of this Curse is Death; both Bodily, [to dust thou shalt return] and of the Soul, [dying thou shalt dye.]

Now to go over all these, and shew how they were undergone by Christ, and how from the Cradle to the Cross the Curse followed him.

It seised on him in the first Assumption of the Humane Nature: which was Dust as well as our Nature is, and subject to the same frailties. The simple Assumption of the Humane Nature was no part of the Curse, and therefore is no where represented to us as such in the Scripture. It was a condescending indeed to take it, though at first it had been as glorious as now it is in Heaven; but it was no part of the Curse. And therefore when the Scripture speaks of his abasement in assuming our Nature, it speaks of it under the investment of frailnot compatible with his Perſon, he muſt not have undertook it. For Juſtice (if God go that way) will have its full due, or nothing: And the reaſon is evident; for if Chriſt had been abated in any thing, he might have been abated in one thing as well as in an other, and ſo in all: but he ſays, it was neceſſary for him to ſuffer; and the ſame neceſſity lay on him to ſuffer all that was due, as well as any thing at all.

NOW for the particulars of this Curse, it were endless to go over all those that he endured. We will therefore have recourse to, and instance onely in that first Curse which was laid on that first Adam, and in his Name, upon all his Posterity, as we find it recorded, Gen. 3. 17, 18, 19. And unto Adam he said, Because thou hast hearkened unto the voice of thy Wife, and hast eaten of the Tree of which I commanded thee, saying, Thou shalt not eat of it: cursed is the Ground for thy sake; in sorrow shalt thou eat of it all the days of thy Life. ver. 18. Thorns also and thistles shall it bring forth to thee: and thou shalt eat the herb of the field. ver. 19. In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread, till thou return unto the ground; for out of it wast thou taken: for dust thou art, and unto dust thou shalt return. Compared with Chap. 2. 17. But of the tree of the Knowledge of good and evil, thou shalt not eat of it: for in the day that thou eatest thereof, thou shalt surely dye. And to shew how all the particulars of the Curse there mentioned were by him undergone, will suffice; that Curse being indeed the Summe and Epitome of Curses, as the Lords-Prayer is of Prayers.

It consists of Three Parts;

1. The Frailties Mans Nature became subject to, tending in themselves to Death and Dissolution; [Dust thou art, &c.] The Curse then seising on him wasted his Body and Spirit, and made both subject unto frailties, and to be of a mouldering Nature; Thou art dust (says God) and to dust thou shalt return.

2. The Miseries and Sorrows which Mans Nature meets with, untill he returns unto dust; which are either,

1. The Labour and Travail he must take to get his Living; expressed by eating his bread in the sweat of his brows; sweat being put (by a Synechdoche) for all the Labour and Travail that Man is born unto, as the sparkes fly upwards, Job 5. 7. Or,

2. The sad and cross Events and Accidents which befal Men from the Creature in the Course of Occurences and various Passages of Gods Providence; in that all Creatures are at Enmity: The Earth brings forth Thorns, the Forrest Wild-Beasts, &c.

The third part of this Curse is Death; both Bodily, [to dust thou shalt return] and of the Soul, [dying thou shalt dye.]

Now to go over all these, and shew how they were undergone by Christ, and how from the Cradle to the Cross the Curse followed him.

It seised on him in the first Assumption of the Humane Nature: which was Dust as well as our Nature is, and subject to the same frailties. The simple Assumption of the Humane Nature was no part of the Curse, and therefore is no where represented to us as such in the Scripture. It was a condescending indeed to take it, though at first it had been as glorious as now it is in Heaven; but it was no part of the Curse. And therefore when the Scripture speaks of his abasement in assuming our Nature, it speaks of it under the investment of frailties; as in Philip. 2. 7, 8. where it is said he humbled himself, &c. in taking the form of a Servant, that is, the Nature of Man as now made servile, and debased; which is therefore expounded in the next Words [and was found [as a Man,] in the likeness of Man. And so being found, he humbled himself, &c. and therein, in that he was not only a Man, but such a Man as we, his Body of the same Metal, Mouldrie and weak as ours is; herein became his Humiliation. So likewise Rom. 8. 3, 4. in that God sent his Son in the likeness of sinful flesh; it is indeed made part of his satisfaction, so to condemn sin in the flesh. But otherwise simply to assume our Nature, though it was the foundation of all his satisfaction, yet it was not reckoned as a part of it; and though it was that which formerly gave the value to it, yet was it not part of the Discharge. I confess it to have been a Minoration or Lessening of him in some respects: for let him take our Nature how he will, never so glorious, yet then it will be said of him my Father is greater then I, which cannot be said of the Holy Ghost: yet this is not satisfaction; the assuming our Nature simply considered is not part of the Curse. Again, that it was an Action meerly of the second Person: but satisfactory Acts are of Christ God-Man, and so he must be supposed to be God-Man first: That the second Person would undertake to lower himself so that he might be capable of making satisfaction, (which without assumption had not been) is the foundation of the merit of it; but materially is no part thereof. But in that this flesh assumed was frail, that makes the Assumption of it to be satisfactory; in that he was found hungry, weary, sleepy, sad and heavy, ignorant of many things, &c. in that he was tempted in all, and after that manner that we are; Heb. 4. 15. these frailties were to be accounted as part of satisfaction. And though he bare not all our frailties personally, as not sickness: for his body saw no Corruption neither after, nor before death; for it would have interrupted and hindred him in the work of our Salvation: yet in simpathy and pitty he bare them all; and in that sence fore-mentioned, that place (He bare our sicknesses) may be understood, he having a heart soft, and framed to compassion, therefore when any of his Elect were sick, and brought unto him, he by a feeling pitty took their Griefs on him, and so freed them. Diseases also being rather Personal than Common Infirmities, it was not absolutely necessary that he should bear them: But he bare our Sorrows, Isaiah 53. 4. even ours in common.

Secondly, For the Miseries incident to Mans life; and herein,

1. For his eating his bread in the sweat of his brows; (besides that it was in so eminent a manner fulfilled at Christs Death, as it never was in any Man; for in drinking that Cup he sweat clodders of Blood) how eminently was it fulfilled in doing his Fathers Will, when he lived a publick life; travailing over, and Preaching in all Towns and Villages; his Zeal for Gods House eating him up, and wasting his Spirits, together with his watching whole Nights, and many Nights together, to pray, &c. and when he lived a private life, in following a Calling of a Handi-crafts-man, and living upon it alone? (for his Parents were poor, as appears by their Offering a Poor mans Offering, a Pair of Turtles) So that by his daily labour he got his food from hand to mouth (as we say) he never working any Miracles to supply his own necessities; but, as when in his publick life, he depended upon what was ministred unto him: So when in his private life, he lived by his labour. Those who knew his Education, and for whom haply he might have wrought, those of his own Country, who ver. 3. are said to have known his Brethren and Sisters, and himself particularly; those did not onely call him the Carpenters Son, but more expressly, the Carpenter: So Mark 6. 1, 2, 3. And it is noted that as at Twelve Years old he disputed with the Doctors; which was God his Fathers business; so, that afterwards he was obedient to his Parents, Luke 2. 51. that is, doing Their business, and helping them in their Trade of Carpentring; this 51. ver. relating to what the Evangelist before had said, ver. 49. thereby intimating, that as in that other work of Disputing he had been about his Heavenly Fathers business; (which ver. 49. shews) so, that now he was answerably employed in his Earthly Fathers work; (which the 51. ver. declares, saying, he was obedient to his Parents.)

2. For sad Occurences and Events befalling him from the dispensation of Providence, and the Enmity of the Creatures; there were more befel him

then ever befell any Man. He was Vir Dolorum, a Man of Sorrows; which did all wear and waſt him, as griefs uſe to do us; ſo that in the judgment of thoſe that ſaw him, he lookt nearer Fifty Years old than Thirty, as that known ſpeech may ſeem to import. Furthermore, we never read that he once laught in his life-time. And, Chap. 3.

1. For the Enmity of the Creatures; (beſides that in a Litteral ſenſe the Earth might be ſaid to bring forth Thorns and Briars to him, to ſuch a purpoſe as ſcarce ever befel any Man, namely, to crown his Temples with them) At his Birth, he is denyed a lodging in a common Inn; then, the Wilderneſs denies him bread for Fourty Days, the Fig-tree affords him no fruit, and the Sun withdraws its light from him. The Fathers have many pretty Interpretations of that great Eclipſe, but more witty then ſolid. The truth is; it was an Evidence of Gods anger, and of the enmity of all the Creatures. Is it in the Sun-beams to afford ſome glimmering comfort to a Man in Miſery? they are denied him; can Darkneſs add to ones diſtreſs, and render it more horrid? Why he is enveloped with a Cimmerian darkneſs, and that, in the very Meridian and Mid-day. Yea, (that which was never denyed to any but to a Man in Hell) a drop of Water to quench his thirſt may by no means be granted him; but in ſtead thereof ſharp Vineger, which their Cruelty and ſcorn do hand unto him.

The Sea and Winds were once ariſing up in Arms againſt him; but that he made uſe of his Prerogative and extraordinary Power to quell their fierceneſs. And then at the laſt he was by all left, and by one of his Diſciples betrayed: which how it grieved him the Pſalmiſt foretold. Then,

2. For ſad and croſs Events from the diſpenſation of Gods Providence; he met with thoſe which great Spirits account the moſt ſad and heavy. He was croſſed ere he was crucified; even through his whole life; As,

1. By a mean and poor Birth and Breeding, which was often caſt in his Teeth [is not this the Carpenters Son?]

2. By a poor outward condition. He was not a Beggar indeed; for then he had not fulfilled the Judicial Law, That there ſhould be no Beggar in Iſrael: but poor he was; for our ſakes he became poor. It appears his Parents were poor; for at the Purification of Mary they offered onely a Pair of Turtles; which (according to the Law) were to be the Offering of the poorer ſort. Again, he wrought dayly; ſurely therefore it was for his Living. And further, he had nothing at his Death to leave his Mother, and therefore it was that he bequeathed the care of her unto John. Now how heavy a Clog is Poverty to a great Spirit, and how does it keep him under; it puts a contempt upon the greateſt vertue, and prejudices the moſt ſolid Wiſdom againſt eſteem; [no man regarded that poor Wiſe Man.]

Nil habet infelix paupertas durius in ſe. Quam quod Ridiculos Hominet facit, Juvenal Sat. 3. v. 152.

3. By a mean Calling. Thirty Years lived he in a Mechanick Trade; and that no better then of a Carpenter. Now for him to be hid under Chips who was born to ſit upon the Royal Throne of Iſrael; for thoſe Hands to make Doors and hew Logs, that were made to weld the Scepter of Heaven and Earth; and that he who is the mighty Counſellour ſhould give his advice onely about ſquaring of Timber; what an Indignity, what a Croſs is this? Do but think with your ſelves what an affliction it would be to a Profeſſour of Divinity in an Univerſity, to a Privy Counſellour, or (much more) to a Prince for thirty years together to be put to Cart and Plough.

4. By Company unſuitable to him; which to a great and noble Spirit is as great a burden as any thing elſe whatſoever. For him who from Everlaſting enjoyed the ſweet ſociety of his Father in Heaven, and might there have for ever had it; for him to leave ſuch company, and come down to Earth and here converſe with Sinners; how harſh and unpleaſing muſt it needs be to him. And therefore the Apoſtle might well ſay, Chriſt pleaſed not himſelf, Rom. 15. 3. meaning it of his company. To a Man Wiſe and Holy there is nothing more burthenſome then the company of Men ignorant and ſinful; and the beſt company he had were his Apoſtles, who, how ignorant were they? even ſo far, that they lay as a burthen upon his Spirits, inſomuch that once he cries out, how long ſhall I ſuffer you, Men of little faith or wiſdom? Mat. 17. 17. They being ſo uncapable of what he ſaid or taught, that moſt would have been loſt, had not not his Spirit afterwards brought all unto their remembrance. And beſides their ignorance, they were Men cloathed with Infirmities and Sins, and more groſs corruptions of fooliſh ambition and contention: What a burden therefore muſt they needs have been to him who was Holineſs it ſelf? yea, (to conclude) every Man was a Briar and a Thorn unto him, (as the Prophet ſpeaks) and he went through the World againſt the ſtream of a perverſe and crooked Generation, and was a contention to the whole Land where he came; which therefore contradicted, oppoſed, and reviled him, &c. And therefore it is reckoned among his Sufferings, that he endured the Contradictions of Sinners, Heb. 12. 3. which was ſo heavy unto Jeremy that it made him weary of his Life: Wo is me (ſays he) my Mother hath borne me a Man of Contention to the whole Earth, Jer. 15. 10. So Elias complained that he was left alone, &c. and thus was it with Chriſt in his Times; yea, all the Sins he ſaw or heard became Croſſes to him, and went to his heart; ſo Rom. 15. 3. where thoſe words are applied to Chriſt [the reproaches of them that reproached thee (ſpeaking of God) are fallen upon me] All the blows that Blaſphemers at any time give his Father, he takes upon his Spirit. And what a Life then muſt he needs live whoſe Soul was ſo righteous? If Lot's Soul were vexed, how muſt his needs be, whoſe Spirit was ſo tender of his Fathers Glory?

CHAP. VI.

What were the Sufferings of Chriſt, as bearing the Curſe of our Sins, more immediately foregoing his Crucifixion, Deſcribed in an Expoſition of the firſt One and Twenty Verſes of the Eighteenth Chapter of Johns Goſpel. A Garden was the Place where he had his firſt Agonies, and was Apprehended. The Reaſons why ſuch a Place was Appointed and choſen by him. The firſt Nine Verſes explained and Obſervations raiſed from them.

THE Eighteenth Chapter of Johns Goſpel, and that which follows, do continue the Story of the Sufferings of our Lord and Saviour Chriſt, as they are recorded by that Apoſtle, who writing after all the other Evangeliſts were dead, or at leaſt the laſt of them all, he inſerteth divers things which they had omitted, as by comparing the one with the other will eaſily appear.

Chriſt you know had three Offices, he is the Prophet, he is the Prieſt, he is the King of his Church. His Prophetical Office he exerciſed in his Doctrine while he was here below, in thoſe Sermons and Prayers which John and the other Evangeliſts record. Which when he had finiſhed he goes forth to his ſufferings, to exerciſe his Prieſtly Office alſo, to Offer himſelf up a ſacrifice for his People. And now being aſcended into Heaven, he there exerciſeth his Kingly Office, in ruling his Church, and in ruling the Nations in order to his Church, and ſo he will do to the end of the World.

John 18. Verſe 1. When Jeſus had ſpoken theſe Words, he went forth with his Diſciples over the brooke Cedron, where was a Garden, into the which he entred, and his Diſciples.

When

When Jesus had spoken these words 5] which hath a more special relation to that last Prayer of his, and that last Sermon which he made, recorded by John. When he had fortified his own heart by Prayer, and prepared himself to dye. When he had instructed his Disciples, and spoken all those Truths that he came into the World to speak, and laid a foundation of comfort for them, and had put up Prayers for them, and confirmed and strengthened their hearts. When he had fully done his duty. When he had spoken these Words, he chearfully goes forth to the Place his Father had appointed him to be taken in, and giveth himself up to be sacrificed and to lay down his life for them. Chap. 6.

He went forth.] And he went forth with his Disciples. What was the reason that Christ went forth to be taken abroad? Why would he not be taken in the City, in Hierusalem, in the Chamber where he ate the Passover, where he might have stayed if he would?

He went forth, First, That he might give his Enemies the more free scope to take him, for they feared the People (which was always the great objection against their laying hold on him) therefore that that impediment might be removed, he chose to go out of the City to a place in the fields, in a Garden, where they might have full opportunity to apprehend him and to carry him away in the Night without the knowledge of any. And Secondly, He did it that his Disciples might the better escape, for had he been in the City, there might have been a hurly-burly, and so his Disciples might have been in danger.

And he went forth also with his Disciples, First. To teach them this Lesson, that they are likewise to leave this World and to give themselves up as Men that are to suffer with him and for him; that as he himself suffered without the Gate (for the beginning of his sufferings, those sufferings that were the sufferings of his Soul, his inward sufferings, when he first encountred with his Fathers Wrath, they were in the Garden, which was without the Gate, as well as those upon Mount-Calvary which were eminently the sufferings of his body) so they also were to go forth with him, Heb. 13. 12, 13. Jesus that he might sanctify the People with his own blood, suffered without the gate; let us go forth therefore unto him without the Camp, bearing his reproach, for here have we no continuing City, &c. And likewise he carried his Disciples with him, that they might be Witnesses of his Passion and Sufferings more or less, as well as of his Resurrection. And he would have his Disciples with him too, that he might shew his power the more in preserving them, for as it follows afterwards, he doth but speak the Word, let these go saith he (which was a Word of Command from Christ as he was a King) and there was none that so much as offered to lay hands on them. He carried them out with him also that they might see their own weakness and unability to suffer, (for they all forsook him and fled) that so they might depend the more upon his strength; for so oftentimes God doth; he brings us into danger on purpose, as to shew his power in delivering us, so to teach us to depend upon him for ability to suffer. And lastly, He went forth with his Disciples, that he might shew them an example that one day they must suffer with him and for him, as they did all afterwards more or less; onely John indeed escaped Martyrdome, yet he suffered much, for you know he was banished into the Isle Patmos.

Over the brook Cedron] This brook divided Hierusalem and Mount-Olivet, as Josephus saith. It was on the East part of the City as Mount-Calvary was on the West, the two Places of sufferings, his taking was in the one, and his crucifying was in the other. He suffered in the East and in the West, and so indeed the Gospel hath reigned as the Sun doth from East to West. It is called the Field of Cedron, 2 Kin.. 23. 4. and the valley of Cedron, because it was an obscure darksome shady Place, and not because that Cedars did grow there as Olives did upon Mount-Olivet (which is a mistake of some) but it had its Name from the darksomeness of the Place.

Why did God in his Providence order it that Christ should go over this brook Cedron? It is a Circumstance which onely John records, for all the other Evangelists omit it, and as Interpreters observe, John doth seldom mention any particular circumstance, upon which any Emphasis is put, but there is a Mistery in it,

We

Book V.

We read in 2 Sam. 15. 23. That David and his Men went over this brook Cedron, mourning and lamenting when Achitophel his familiar friend had betrayed him and Absolom his Son sought his Life.

Now our Lord and Saviour Christ whose Type David was, this very thing is fulfilled in him: for Achitophel typified out Judas; that you have in Psa. 41. The Man (saith he) that did eatwith me, that was mine equal, we took sweet counsel together, &c. David spake this of Achitophel in this very journey of his, and it is applied unto Judas in John 13. 18. Now as Davids life was then sought after, so was Christs now, and as David went over with his Companions, so did Christ with his Disciples, as Achitophel betrayed him, so did Judas betray Christ, and as David went over with a sad heart, so Christ tells his Disciples, that his Soul was heavy unto the death.

And that you may see the allusion to be yet more full, in Psalm 110. ult. (which is plainly and clearly a Psalm of Christ) it is said, he shall drink of the brook in the way, therefore shall his head be lifted up. He was to sit at Gods Right-hand till his Enemies were made his footstool, as you have it ver. 1. but before he cometh to be thus exalted, he must drink of the brook in the way, he must go over this Cedron with a sad Soul, for the truth is, all the while he was a going his heart was heavy, and it increast in his going much more. He shall drink of the brook in the way, not that he drank of the water of this brook Cedron, but it typified out those sufferings which lay in his way to Heaven.

Where was a Garden] This was the Place where he had that sad encounter with his Fathers wrath, which made him sweat drops of blood. The Soul-sufferings of Christ we eminently read of to have been in this Place. Now the Fields that adjoyned to this Cedron, and that which did border upon this Place of the Garden (which Matthew calls Gethsemane) was that Place which the Jews called Gehenna, or Gehinnom, or Hell, because that Josiah had cursed that place, 2 Kings 23. 4. and because that there the great slaughter was done upon the Babilonians, and afterwards upon the Jews. And it was the Place which they afterwards called Tophet, and it is the onely word they had for Hell after the Babylonian Captivity. It was an execrable Place, and into this Place did Christ come, for indeed our Lord and Saviour Christ he did in his Soul in respect of the sufferings of it, descend into Hell. Now there was a Mistery also in this. Adam he was the most eminent Type of Christ, so he is called, Rom. 5. 13. and in 1 Cor. 15. And the Type holds in this, (for when we have a ground that such a thing is a Type we may apply it to such particulars as we find suitable) Adams fall you know was in a Garden, Satan there encountred him, and overcame him, led him and all Mankind into Captivity to sin and death. God now singleth out the place where the Great Redeemer of the World, the second Adam, should first encounter with his Fathers wrath, to be in a garden, and that there he should be bound and led away Captive as Adam was. He fighteth with Satan upon his own ground (it became him so to do) and here he gives the first great overthrow to his Kingdom and to the Kingdom of sin and death. God did suit it so, as indeed he did suit many things in that particular of the first and second Adam. Because (says he, 1 Cor. 15. 21.) by Man came death by Man came also the Resurrection. Because by a Temptation let in at the Ear Man was condemned, therefore by hearing of the Word Men shall be saved. Thou shalt eat thy bread in the sweat of thy Brows, that was part of Adams curse; Christ he sweat drops of blood for this, it was the force of that Curse that caused it. The Ground shall bring forth Thorns to thee; Christ he was crucified with a Crown of Thorns. Adam his disobedience was acted in a Garden, and Christ both his active and passive Obedience also, much of it was in a Garden, and at the last as the first beginning of his Humiliation was in a Garden, so the last step was too, he was buried, though not in this, yet in another Garden. Thus the Type and the thing Typified answer one another

Into the which he entred and his Disciples] Still there is an emphasis put upon this, that his Disciples were with him. It is not onely said, that he went forth with with his Diſciples; but that he entred into the Garden with his Diſciples, who were to be witneſſes of what he ſuffered, and for the Reaſons mentioned afore, as alſo to ſhew that he had no other guard but them. So much for the firſt Verſe. Chap. 6.

Verſe 2. And Judas alſo which betrayed him, knew the place; for Jeſus oft-times reſorted thither with his Diſciples.

Our Lord and Saviour Chriſt, he knew he ſhould be taken, and taken by Judas a Diſciple, and that that was the place appointed by his Father wherein he ſhould be taken; for the 4th Verſe tells us, Jeſus knew all things that ſhould befall him. He knew that Judas would be there that night, and therefore like a valiant Champion, he cometh into the field firſt afore his enemy: He goes thither to chooſe, and ſingles out this place on purpoſe.

In this place Chriſt uſed to pray moſt, eſpecially a little before his Sufferings; for in Luke 21. 37. it is ſaid, That in the day time he was teaching in the temple, and at night he went out and abode in the mount, that is called the mount of Olives; and all the people came early in the morning to him in the temple for to hear him. This was but a matter of ſeven dayes before he was Crucified; for Chriſt when he ſaw that he muſt dye, and that now his time was come, he wore his Body out, he cared not as it were what became of him, he wholly ſpent himſelf in Praying and Preaching; he was Preaching in the day time, and that early in the morning, in the Temple, and at night he abode in the mount of Olives; and there ſometimes he ſpent the whole night in Prayer privately, and ſometimes he took his Diſciples with him, as now he did.

In this place, which had been a place where Chriſt received a great deal of Heavenly refreſhment from his Father in Prayer, where he had immediate converſe with him, in that place of all others muſt Chriſt be firſt attached, and there muſt be the beginning of his Sufferings: For ſo indeed God did deal with Chriſt; he would have all things that were moſt comfortable to him, imbittered to him. This was the place of his Repoſe, where he had ſweet refreſhings from God, and this muſt be the place where he muſt incounter with his Fathers Wrath: He ſweat his Bloody ſweat in this place, where he had ſo often Prayed.

And he likewiſe knowing that this was the place in which he ſhould be taken, made it the place where he Prayed moſt, that every thing might put him in mind, and ſtrengthen him when he came to ſuffer, to comfort him, and to help him, as indeed circumſtances of time and place do. If a Chriſtian would chooſe where he would be taken, and haled to puniſhment for Chriſt, it ſhould certainly be in his Cloſet, or in a place where he had Prayed moſt.

Chriſt had oftentimes afore evaded Suffering; he would ſhift places on purpoſe; as in John 4. 1. When the Lord knew how the Phariſees had heard that Jeſus made and baptized more diſciples than John; He left Judea, and departed again into Galilee: He flew from them: And ſo in Luke 4. 29. when they led him unto the brow of the Hill whereon the City was built, that they might caſt him down headlong, he paſſed thorough the midſt of them, and eſcaped away. But now when his laſt hour is come, and he knew it was the hour appointed him by his Father, now he goes to the very place where he knew Judas, that ſhould betray him, would come.

You ſhall find this eminent obſervation in the ſtory as John relates it, differing from all the other Evangeliſts; he endeavours to hold forth in a ſpecial manner the willingneſs of Chriſt to ſuffer. Other Evangeliſts hold forth other circumſtances of his Sufferings; but you ſhall find all along, that John is eſpecially diligent in holding forth the willingneſs of Chriſt to offer up himſelf, which he doth by all ſort of circumſtances, as in the ſequel will appear. Here it appears by this that (as I ſaid before) he goes firſt into the field; he goes to the place which he uſed to go to, and which Judas knew to be the place, and he knew too that Judas would be there. It was a matter of the greateſt moment to hold forth this willingneſs of Chriſt to offer up himſelf, of any other. For there are two neceſſary things that were to be concurrent in the Sufferings of Chriſt to make it ſatisfactory for us: The one is the eminency and worth of his Perſon; had he not been God as well as Man, his Obedience would never have ſatisfied God: But the ſecond is a free-willingneſs to undergo what he did; for we ſinned willingly, therefore Chriſt when he comes to ſuffer, he muſt ſuffer as willingly. It is as great and as eſſential an ingredient to give force and efficacy to his Sufferings as the worth of his Perſon. Therefore in Heb. 10. 7, 8. you ſhall find a great deal of Emphaſis put upon this; Lo I come to do thy will O God; by which will (ſaith he) we are ſanctified. Both the Will of God the Father, and the willingneſs of Jeſus Chriſt thus to ſacrifice himſelf, was that great circumſtance, or more than a circumſtance, upon which our Salvation depends, and the acceptation of that offering of his. Chriſt therefore to ſhew his willingneſs, he goes to the place where he knew Judas would come; he went thither on purpoſe, put himſelf on this temptation, on purpoſe that he might put himſelf into their hands. It was indeed by the commandment of his Father; for ſo you ſhall find, John 14. 31. As the Father gave me commandment, even ſo I do: Ariſe, (ſaith he) let us go hence; let us go to the place where I muſt be taken.

That which we find of circumſtance in the Sufferings of Chriſt, may oftentimes help us in circumſtances of our ſinning. Doeſt thou tempt thy ſelf to ſin? Put thy ſelf upon occaſions of ſinning? And is that an aggravation of thy ſinning? Thou haſt this to help and relieve thee in the Sufferings of Chriſt, that he put himſelf upon the occaſion of being taken, put himſelf upon that temptation.

And it may move thee to ſhun and avoid the occaſions of ſin, for Jeſus Chriſt, that he might ſuffer for thee, avoided not the occaſion of ſuffering; he goes to the very place in which he knew he ſhould be taken.

Alſo thoſe things which had been comforts unto Chriſt are (through the merit of our Sins, which do turn Bleſſings into Curſe) turned unto Chriſt into a bitterneſs. The place where he had prayed, and been refreſhed, there is his Agony and encounter. A Garden turned into Hell. His ſweet communion with God there, is now turned into wreſtling with Gods Anger falling on him here; and now through it, on the contrary, we may expect Curſes turned into Bleſſings; and the worſt of dealings from God to us to be ſanctified to our greateſt Spiritual Advantage and Comfort.

It is ſaid that Judas alſo knew the place. Take notice here of the hard-heartedneſs of the heart of Judas. He had all that time ſince he received the Sop; yea all the way he went, (which was a pretty way from the City) to think upon what he was about to do, that he was going to betray his Maſter, the Saviour of the World, in whom he had for a time believed. Yea, he had that place to ſtrike his Conſcience; it being the place where he himſelf had been often with Chriſt, and preſent at many a good Prayer, and many an excellent Sermon, which he had heard from no leſs than the Meſſiah; whoſe Conſcience almoſt but would have ſmote him? yet ſo hard, ſo obdurate is the Heart of Judas, that he dares out-face all thoſe Prayers and Sermons, and to come to that very place to lay hold of his Maſter, and to betray him with a kiſs.

An obdurate Heart will break through all ſort of circumſtances and conſiderations that may keep him from ſinning; ſo Judas doth here.

And we may learn to aggravate our Sins by ſuch circumſtances, whereof we ſhall find many in our lives if we ſtudy our own ſinful wayes, that God doth ſuffer to fall out to keep us from ſinning, that notwithſtanding ſuch circumſtances and conſiderations, yet we ſhould break through all ſuch difficulties and ſin againſt God; this ſhould make our Sin out of meaſure ſinful to us. It was a circumſtance that much increaſed the ſin of Judas, that he knew the place where Chriſt uſed to reſort with his Diſciples (going thither often for freedoms ſake of Prayer) that yet he would go thither and there betray him.

Verſe

Verſe 3. Judas then having received a band of men and officers, from the chief Prieſts and Phariſees, cometh thither with lanthorns, and torches, and weapons.

Chap. 6.

Judas then having received a band of men, &c.] Judas did not deſire this band of Men, he did but offer to betray him: It was the Chief Prieſts and Phariſees that deſired them; they went to Pilate (who was the Roman Governour) and told him they had a Seditious Perſon to take, and implored his help and aſſiſtance, and ſo he let them have a band of Men; and yet it is ſaid that Judas received them; it is all layed upon him, becauſe in Acts 1. 16. he is called their guide; he was the leader of this curſed band that took our Lord and Saviour Chriſt; he was the fore-man in it; therefore all is laid upon him more than upon them; he is ſtill branded in a peculiar manner, Judas the Traytor, Judas which betrayed him. All I ſay, is chiefly laid upon him; for the truth is, Chriſt took this act of his more hainouſly at his hands, that had been his Diſciple and a Profeſſour of him, than he did either of the Phariſees or of the Roman Souldiers, and his end was accordingly. And therefore Paul, in 2 Cor. 11. 26. when he makes a Catalogue of his Sufferings, he mentioneth thoſe which he had from falſe Brethren, as the worſt and chiefeſt.

The eminent obſervation that I make out of theſe words is this, That here is both a Band of Men and Officers from the Chief Prieſts and Phariſees. The Band of Men was the Roman Band; for the Romans having conquered that City, the Civil Power was in their hands, and Pilate the Governour under them kept a Band of Men about him, which he lends at their requeſt unto the Phariſees and Chief Prieſts, to go with their own Officers to help to take Chriſt All along this Story you ſhall find that there were two ſorts of Men that God would have in his Providence, to have their hands imbrued in the Blood of Chriſt from firſt to laſt. Here is a Roman Band, and the Officers of the Chief Prieſts and Phariſees; here is the Civil Magiſtracy, and here is the Eccleſiaſtical State; (for as the Civil Power was in the Romans, ſo the Eccleſiaſtical Power was in the hands of the Chief Prieſts, the Romans notwithſtanding their Conqueſt, leaving them to the Rites of their Religion ſtill) they would not truſt the Roman Band alone to do it; for they knew they were not ſuch enemies to Chriſt, but they ſent their own Miniſters and Servants (and ſome Evangeliſts tell us that ſome of the Phariſees themſelves were there) to attend them, and ſee the thing done. The Souldiers, poor Men! they went about they knew not what; they went to take him as a Seditious Perſon, and an enemy to Cæſar; little thought they that the Meſſiah of the World was there This I ſay you ſhall find in the Story all along that two ſort of Powers were ſtirred up againſt Chriſt: Here was both Jewes and Gentiles: Why do the heathen rage, and the people imagine a vain thing? Pſal. 2. 1. Both concurred here: Here is a Band of Romans and Officers of the Chief Prieſts; the Heathen and the People of the Jewes. Chriſt, as he did dye both for Jewes and Gentiles, ſo likewiſe he would have both Jewes and Gentiles to have a hand in his Death. And therefore let us not ſay only that the Jewes ſhall look upon him whom they have pierced, but the Gentiles alſo ſhall look upon him whom they have pierced; God would have the Gentiles have a hand in it as well as the Jewes: And not only ſo, but he would have both the Civil and Eccleſiaſtical State to joyn in the Sufferings of Chriſt; for the Phariſees and Chief Prieſts they were the Eccleſiaſtical State, they make uſe of the Magiſtrate for his aſſiſtance to lay hold of our Lord and Saviour Chriſt.

They come thither with lanthorns, and torches, and with weapons.] Although it was full Moon then, and therefore the Moon did certainly ſhine, yet to make ſure work, they come not only with Torches that uſe to give great lights, but with Lanthorns, that their lights might not be blown out with the Wind, and all to ſeek him, that they might be ſure if he did not hide himſelf to find him, or if he did hide himſelf, to ſeek him out with their lights. And they came with Weapons too, though they knew he was but a poor Man to see to; but they came with Weapons because they were afraid of the People, and because that Judas had told them, how his Master had often escaped from them before; as when he was brought to the brow of the Hill, &c. therefore now to make sure work, both to find him and to carry him away, they come forth with all these.

Our Lord and Saviour Christ, he had dealt with them at other Weapons; he had often disputed with the Scribes and Pharisees, and the truth is, he had alwayes been too hard for them. But now they come and deal with him at a Weapon they thought he should not be too hard for them at; they come upon him with Torches and with Weapons, and by force they set upon him. And that indeed is the manner of those that oppose the Church in all Ages. As they dealt with Christ, so they do with his People, and will do to the end of the World.

Verse 4. Jesus therefore knowing all things that should come upon him, went forth, and said unto them, Whom seek ye?

Still you see the Evangelist John holds forth, in an eminent manner, the willingness of Christ to suffer, for that's the thred he spins throughout this whole Story, because indeed so much depends upon it. He tells us that Christ knew all things that should come upon him. He did not come to this place unawares; no, he knew that Judas knew that he usually resorted thither, and he knew that Judas would come thither, as well as he knew that he should betray him, and therefore he comes thither on purpose; and he comes thither first. and being there, assoon as the Band and the Officers came, he went forth of his own accord, and said unto them, Whom seek ye? He knowing all things, he might have hid himself, and evaded his being taken, as he had often done before. No.

There is a Case which Interpreters here put, whether this example of Christs be for our imitation, whether we should thus expose our selves to suffering, choose thus to suffer, or rather decline and avoid suffering in a lawful way, by lawful means?

The Answer is clear. We have divers examples of Christs avoiding suffering; as that in John 4. 1. when he did but hear that they knew of him, and knowing their malice, he went and removed to another place. So likewise when he was young, and Herod sought his Life, he was carryed into Egypt. And then again, when they brought him to the brow of the Hill, he escaped. All which examples strongly hold forth, that we may use all lawful means of escaping suffering. But when he knew that his hour was come in which he must be taken aside, and it being by Compact between his Father and him, for so it was, he Covenanted with God to suffer; it became him to shew the fullest and most ready Obedience to his Father that could be, to go to the place where he must be attached, to offer himself to them as a prey, to provoke them, Whom seek ye? Now herein Christs case and ours in suffering doth certainly differ; we do not know what shall befal us, as Christ did, for if we did, we ought not to evade our sufferings as Christ did not; but because we are ignorant of what shall come upon us, we are to serve the wayes of a Providence, wayes of escaping that are lawful.

Observe from hence First this. Christ you see did not only suffer willingly but knowingly; and as his putting himself willingly upon suffering, and into the opportunity of being taken, may help us against our having tempted our selves, (which is a great aggravation of our sinning): So likewise our Saviour Christs suffering thus with knowledge, deliberately, knowing all circumstances, is a consideration may help us against our sinning knowingly. Hast thou sinned presumptuously, against knowledge? Our Lord and Saviour Christ he suffered as deliberately, he suffered with the greatest knowledge that could be. There was not only the greatest Will in his sufferings, but to make up that Will more eminent and conspicuous, there was also the greatest greateſt knowledge, he knew all that ſhould befal him, yet he went forth and offered himſelf. Chap. 6.

Secondly, Did Chriſt know all that he was to ſuffer? Certainly then he knows all that we are to ſuffer. Did he know his own ſufferings on Earth? Certainly he knows ours now he is in Heaven. The things we are to ſuffer, they are called in Coloſ. 1. 24. the after-ſufferings of Chriſt, certainly then he knows them. Therefore though thou knoweſt not what ſhall befal thee in ſuch or ſuch a courſe as thou takeſt in profeſſing his Name, yet comfort thy ſelf in this, that Chriſt knows it. And as he, knowing all things ventured himſelf, ſo do thou, upon the confidence that he knows all things that ſhall befal thee, venture thy ſelf too. And truſt him and his knowledge for the ordering of all things for thy good as well as he truſted his Father to do with him what he vvould. It is our comfort I ſay, that Jeſus Chriſt knevv all his ovvn ſufferings, he certainly therefore knovvs all ours; I know thy labour and thy patience, ſaith he, Rev. 2. 2. He takes notice of it, therefore fear not the things you ſhall ſuffer, give your ſelves up unto his Providence, truſt his knovvledge, for he knovvs vvhat ſhall befal you.

It would be miſerable for us to know what we ſhall undergo in this World, for the thoughts of it afore-hand, would hurt us, the Anxiety of it would trouble us, it is better for us to be ignorant of it. But Chriſt he had ſtrength in him, he could know what he ſhould ſuffer and foreſee it, and yet keep his mind quiet and compoſed; as you ſee he did till it came to the very inſtant: And it was neceſſary too that he ſhould know all he was to ſuffer, becauſe he ſuffered by compact with his Father, which makes a great difference between the Sufferings of Chriſt and ours.

Now he knowing all that he ſhould ſuffer, He went forth, and ſaid to them, Whom ſeek ye?

Once they would have made him a King, and then he hid himſelf, but when he comes to be a King crowned with Thorns, and knew he ſhould be ſo to ſave us, then he hides not himſelf, but he goes forth to them. Adam (as I ſaid) was his Type in his ſinning in a Garden; but in this they are unlike. Adam hides himſelf, and God was fain to ſeek him out; but here our Lord and Saviour Chriſt to ſhew his willingneſs to be found, ſtept forth, and ſaith unto them, Whom ſeek ye? He provokes them rather to lay hands upon him than otherwiſe. And ſo much for the Fourth Verſe.

Verſe 5. They anſwered him, Jeſus of Nazareth. Jeſus ſaith unto them, I am he. And Judas alſo which betrayed him ſtood with them.

From hence Interpreters do obſerve, and I think rightly, that both theſe Roman Souldiers, and alſo theſe Officers of the High Prieſts, at their firſt approach to him, did not know him by ſight, no, nor Judas neither; for it is ſaid Judas ſtood with them when he asked them, Whom ſeek ye? Afterwards indeed he was the firſt that went to him, and kiſt him, and ſaid, this is he. He asked them twice the ſame queſtion, and they anſwer both times Jeſus of Nazareth, which clearly argues, that they did not know him to be the Man. Therefore ſome think there was a piece of a Miracle in this, that he ſtruck them with blindneſs, as the Sodomites were that beſet Lots Houſe, or as the Servants of the King of Syria were that came to take Eliſha. Others think that their Eyes were with-led by a Miracle, as the Eyes of thoſe two Diſciples that went to Emaus were, ſo that though they had often ſeen him before, and heard him Preach, yet now they could not know him. But however, it is exceeding likely that theſe Soldiers did not know him, for the Romans regarded not the Goſpel, nor did they regard the Jewiſh Religion; ſo far were they from knowing of him, and the Officers it is likely they were ſuch as had not heard him Therefore you may obſerve this by the way, That the rage of Men againſt the People of God, it is of thoſe that are ignorant of them; as theſe here were ignorant of Chriſt, and theſe the Chief Prieſts and Phariſees ſet to take him.

They anſwered Jeſus of Nazareth.] They do not ſay they ſought Chriſt, for they did not own him as ſuch, but they call him by the Name of the place

place of his Birth, and by the Name of his Countrey. And Christ owns it, I am he, saith he And he owned that Name from Heaven when he spake to Paul, Act. 9. 5. I am Jesus of Nazareth whom thou persecutest. Why did he not say, I am Christ? He speaks to Paul's apprehension, I am he whom thou knowest and hast heard of by the Name of Jesus of Nazareth. He shewed himself to be Christ indeed in his appearing, but to shew who he was that Paul persecuted, he said, I am Jesus of Nazareth; for had Paul persecuted him as Christ, he had sinned against the Holy Ghost, but he persecuted him only as Jesus of Nazareth; so did these poor Men, they did not know him to be Christ, only they came to take one Jesus of Nazareth.

Jesus saith unto them, I am he.] We should boldly hold forth our Profession, when we are asked, Are you a Christian? Yes. Eusebius reports of one that being asked divers questions, as what Countrey he was of, and the like, he alwaies answered, I am a Christian, to shew his boldness in his profession, so Christ here, I am he.

And Judas also which betrayed him stood with them

This is noted first to shew that Judas was struck backward as well as the rest, for all that Company that was together fell to the ground (as you shall see in the next verse) Christ had struck an Arrow through his Conscience, dasht him, and certainly aimed at him in the confounding of these more than all the rest; therefore it is added, and Judas also stood with them. For special confusion shall befal them that profess Christ, and afterward fall away.

This Miserable Man (Secondly) was wont to stand amongst the Disciples, but now he stands where he shall stand at the latter day, amongst those that are Reprobates, and the Crucifiers of the Lord of Life; that as it is said in Psal. 125. 1. The righteous shall be like Mount Zion, but those that work iniquity, God shall lead them forth with the workers of iniquity. In the end the Lord doth discover them, he will bring them into that Drove, they shall fall to that side their Hearts are with; they shall stand amongst them in the issue and end, (for so God in his Providence orders it,) with whom they shall stand for ever. And this God doth usually fulfil upon Wicked Men, though they have a Temporary Work upon them, and though for the present they profess the Name of Christ never so much, yet at last they stand, and it is a fatal standing, to sever themselves from the People of God, and betake themselves to that side that are Persecutors, or otherwise corrupt. So Judas doth here, he stands among Gentiles and Officers of the Pharisees and Chief Priests, an Epitome of Reprobates, and so he shall stand at the latter day. God will lead forth all Men that do work Iniquity with the workers of Iniquity. To go on.

Verse 6. Assoon as he had said unto them, I am he, they went backward, and fell to the ground.

Here you see the confusion that did befal them from the power of Christ afore such time as they did lay hands upon him. It is Propheſied by David in Psal. 35. 4. as a Curse upon his Enemies, and the Septuagint there use the same word that is here; Let them, saith he, be turned backward. It is a Phrase that noteth out confusion; And Christ fulfilleth it here upon these Jews in the very Letter, They went backward, and fell to the ground.

And he doth not simply say they fell backward, but it is evident he puts it upon the power of Christ that did cause them to fall backward; for it is said, Assoon as he said, I am he, (or as others read it, He therefore said, I am he) they fell backward.

My Brethren there was never such a thing done in the World; Tell me in any Story that ever any King, Alexander the Great, or the greatest Monarch that ever was in the World, with a word of his Mouth did against Mens Wills, make them fall backward to the ground. Had they fallen forward, it might have been thought other force behind them had thrown them down; or it might have been thought they had worshipped him in a counterfeit terfeit way, as afterward they did at his Arraignment. But to fall backward at the ſpeaking of a word; In the word of this King what Power was there! And therefore ſome of the Ancient Fathers that are Interpreters, they ſay that of all the Miracles that ever Chriſt did, this was one of the greateſt. Some indeed have pitched upon that Miracle of his when he whipped the Buyers and Sellers out of the Temple, and ſaid, you make my Fathers houſe a den of thieves: But aſſuredly this was a greater than that, for there Chriſt had ſome kind of Weapon, here he had none: He was then when he did that, ſurrounded with People that applauded him, for they had newly brought him into the City with Triumph, the Children crying Hoſannah to him, but here he had none to take his part when theſe Bands came out againſt him, but Eleven poor Diſciples: There he had to do but with poor Men that ſold Turtles and Doves; here with Soldiers Armed that came out on purpoſe to take him; yet at one word he throws them down. He doth but ſay, I am the Man, wherein he offers himſelf to them, which makes the Miracle the ſtranger, That that voice which did invite them to take him, that very voice ſhould throw them backward to the ground. Chap. 6.

Now the Reaſons why our Lord and Saviour Chriſt deals thus with them before he would be taken are theſe:

Firſt, Becauſe he vvould ſhevv them that he vvas God, gives them this ſign of his Divinity. And the truth is, if you obſerve it, he did all along in the courſe of his Life, with his weakneſs mingle ſome Specimens of his Power and God-head. Thus when he was a Child in the Cradle, as an evidence of his God-head, there came Kings, Three Wiſe Men out of the Eaſt to vvorſhip him. When he vvas tempted in the Wilderneſs by Satan, he is ſuccoured by Angels; And here vvhen he comes to be bound, and to be carryed avvay to be crucified, he firſt ſtrikes them that vvere to do it, backvvard vvith a vvord of his Mouth. It is made the property of God alone to conſume Men vvith his breath, Job 4. 9. and Dan. 10. 17. Novv Chriſt ſhevvs himſelf to be God by this, he doth but ſay, I am he, and they are confounded.

Oh my Brethren, If there vvas this povver in the vvords of Chriſt in anſvvering but a queſtion vvhen he vvas in the form of a Servant, vvhat power will there be in his words when he ſhall come to Judgment? What power is there in that word by which the vvhole vvorld is upheld, as the Apoſtle ſaith, Heb. 1. 2.

He did do it Secondly that they might have ſome ſpace to repent, that they might have ſomething to ſtrike them, to occaſion their Repentance. And you ſee no outward means, no not Miracles will work upon the hearts of Men if God do not ſtrike them with his Spirit. And you ſee likewiſe that Men, though their Conſciences ſtrike them in the very Act of Sin, and ſtrike them deeply, (as this muſt needs do their Conſciences here, eſpecially Judas his) yet they will go on. As Balaam, he went on even againſt the hair as we ſay, and ſo did theſe.

But the chief reaſon why Chriſt thus confounded them, and ſtruck them backward firſt before he would be taken, is that which John (as I ſaid afore) eminently and viſibly holds forth, namely to ſhew that he was willing to ſuffer, no Man had power to take his Life away, they had not power ſo much as to lay hands on him, they fall down firſt. All the World might think, and ſo might they think too, that if with his breath he thus ſtruck them to the ground, with the ſame breath he might have ſtruck them into the ground, nay, ſtruck them to Hell, never have ſuffered them to riſe more, he needed never to have been taken by them. But when once he had ſhewed that it was in his Power not to be taken, when he had ſtruck their Conſciences, then he doth willingly give himſelf up into their hands, but he would do this firſt.

And what words are they by which he doth confound them thus? They were mild words, no more but this, I am he. Yea, you ſhall find elſewhere that by theſe very words he comforted his Diſciples at other times; As when he walked upon the Sea, be not afraid, ſaith he, it is I, or, I am he.

he. And after his Reſurrection, when he comes into the Room where his Diſciples were, he ſaith, I am he; and here now he uſeth the very ſame words to his Enemies to the greateſt Terror in the World. The very ſame words which Chriſt ſpeaks, and which we his Miniſters ſpeak being his words, that are unto ſome a ſavour of Life, they are unto others a ſavour of Death. He ſtrikes them dead here as it were with the very ſame words that he put Life and Comfort into his Diſciples by. At the latter day, when Chriſt ſhall appear, the very ſame Look, the very ſame Preſence of his that will be nothing but Grace and Sweetneſs to his Children, and fill all their hearts with Joy, will be horrour and amazement and confuſion to his Enemies, and fill all their hearts with Terrour.

And then another Obſervation I may make from hence is this, that as in this apprehenſion of Chriſt before they prevailed over him, he ſtrikes them with Terrour, ſo wicked Men do ſeldom meddle with the People of God, to perſecute them, or apprehend them, to condemn them or the like, but Chriſt ſtrikes terrour in their Conſciences for ſo doing. As it is in Pſal. 14. 4. They eat up my people like bread, they eat them up ſo heartily, and ſeem to be ſo greedy and ſo mightily hungry after their blood, and after their hurt, that one would think they have no knowledge, Have the workers of iniquity no knowledge, ſaith he, that eat up my people as they eat bread? That they fall great ſo faſt to them as they do? But what ſaith the next verſe? Then were they in fear, for God is in the generation of the righteous. And in Phil. 1. 28. the Apoſtle bids them when they ſuffer to carry it with a confidence, and to be in nothing terrified by their Adverſaries, which ſaith he is an evident token unto them of perdition, but to you of Salvation, and that of God. His meaning is, that when Men do carry things confidently, being in a right way, uſually Gods Spirit doth bleſs that confidence to a double end: Firſt, He Seals up Salvation to them that ſuffer for him, even while they ſuffer, h breaks in upon their Spirits, and fills their hearts with aſſurance. And Secondly, he breaks in alſo upon the hearts of the Perſecutors, and ſtrikes them with Terrour. It is a ſign ſaith he, that is, a preſent ſign, there is from God as to you that ſuffer inward Joy and Comfort; ſo there is oftentimes Terrour in the hearts of Wicked Men that perſecute you, which is as it were the firſt fruits of Hell, and of Perdition; And ſo here Chriſt to ſhew that he will one day throw them to Hell, he flings them to the ground now. Eccleſiaſtical Stories tell us that the very Heathens themſelves though they knew not what they did when they perſecuted the Chriſtians, they had oftentimes terrours in themſelves while they were executing their Cruelty upon the People of God.

And then again out of this Verſe, obſerve this, That the Church may prevail againſt the Enemies thereof, and make them fall, and yet thoſe Enemies may recover and fall upon the Church again. Men that ſhall fall upon the Church, and prevail againſt it, they may for a time fall before it. Theſe very Men that God had deſigned to take Chriſt, they fall backward firſt, and they fall backward terrifyed and amazed, yet they riſe up again, and take him. So is it oftentimes with the Body of Chriſt here on Earth, the Enemies ſometimes are greatly prevailed againſt, confounded, that one would think they ſhould never riſe more; yet as Jeremiah ſaith, Theſe wounded men, ſhall riſe up every man in his tent and take the City. Theſe Men you ſee that thus fell backvvard and vvere confounded, they vvere the Men that took Chriſt, for vvhen Chriſt had done, and ſhevved them that he vvas the Meſſiah, he gave himſelf up to them. So it is and vvill be to the end of the World.

Yet you may take it as a certain ſign that they ſhall fall one day, as this was here, it was a ſign that they ſhould fall into ruine and deſtruction, but they muſt do their work firſt. If God come down and help his Church, and appear in his Power, as here Chriſt doth, I am ſure his enemies will fall backward; though theſe enemies, I ſay, may riſe again and take the City; yet it is a help to our Faith, that that God that came down as a Lyon thus, and they were ſcattered, ſhall ruine them in the end, that's certain. It is the Prophets expreſſion, when they are all preying like a company of Wolves upon upon the Sheep, He ſhall come down like a Lyon; and they will all run away preſently. Thus you ſee at this day, Chriſt came but down amongſt them, and ſaid, I am he, and you know how they all croucht preſently. Chap. 6.

We ſee likewiſe the way that Jeſus Chriſt uſeth to confound his enemies; it is with his Breath; it is with his Word. Aſſoon as he had ſaid, I am he; or, therefore when he had ſaid I am he, they fell backward. Still Chriſt is ſaid to do all his great buſineſſes with a Word of his Mouth: There is a Sword in his Mouth that kills them: And in Iſa. 11. 4. He ſtrikes them with the Rod of his Mouth; and Antichriſt is to be deſtroyed with the Spirit of his Mouth, and the brightneſs of his coming. As it was the Word of Chriſt that confounded his enemies here, ſo it is that Word ſhall confound them to the end of the World. And if they have any other enemies about their ears beſides the Word, it is becauſe the Word ſtirs them up. It is the Word that works in the Hearts of Men, and makes them enemies to the enemies of God, and brings them upon them. It is the vengeance of the Word which the People of God execute upon wicked Men.

You ſee likewiſe, when Chriſt will appear, what a little thing daunts his enemies. It is but a meer word I am he, and they fall backward to the ground. But to go on.

Verſe 7. Then asked he them again, Whom ſeek ye? And they ſaid, Jeſus of Nazareth.

When they were thus fallen down and riſen again, perhaps they went up and down like amazed and confounded Men to ſeek him, therefore he comes to them, and asketh them, Whom ſeek ye?

This ſecond Queſtion carries a mighty conviction, a mighty triumph with it over their Conſciences; as if he had ſaid, I have told you who I am, and I have told it you to purpoſe, have I not? Have you not learned by this time who I am, when your hearts are ſo terrified, that you all fell down before me a poor Man? They had been taught by woful experience who he was, when he blew them over, flung them down with his Breath, and it might have turned to a bleſſed experience had God ſtruck their Hearts as he did their outward Man. But ſtill they will not call him Chriſt for all this, they call him but Jeſus of Nazareth.

You ſee the deſperate hardneſs of the hearts of wicked Men, and it is in experience true, no means, no convictions, no miracles will work upon them. One would have thought that this ſhould have ſtruck the Spirits of any Men in the World, that a poor Man with his Breath ſhould cauſe them to fall down backward, they ſhould be afraid, and not have dared to have lain hold on him. They were afraid indeed afore, that's the truth on't, they had a ſuſpicion that there was more than a Man in him, why elſe had they the Roman Souldiers and all theſe Officers armed with Weapons? And you ſee how he falls upon them, but with his Word, yet ſtill they are hardened. A Man would wonder when there are ſuch evidences of Gods taking part with his Truth; ſuch Providences of God, puniſhing thoſe that go againſt his People, yet that Men ſhould go on ſtill. Nothing will ſoften the hearts of thoſe that are reſolved in wickedneſs. There is one inſtance, and it is to me a mighty one, of the deſperate hardneſs of Mens hearts; and that is, of the Men that did watch at the grave of Chriſt; Chriſt had foretold that he would riſe again the third day, and the Phariſees (after he was buried) they come to Pilate the Governour, and ſay they, this Impoſtor ſaid he would riſe again the third day, therefore let us make ſure work with him, and let us have a Stone rolled upon his grave, and ſet men to guard it, and ſo a watch was ſet: Now while they were ſitting to watch him, there comes a great Earthquake, and an Angel deſcends from Heaven, and rolls away the grave-ſtone, and was ſo dreadful to theſe keepers that they fell down, and became as dead Men, (whereby it is evident that from Heaven there was a teſtimony of his Reſurrection.) They go and tell their Maſters, the Chief Prieſts, all theſe things that were done; they bid them hold their Tongues; ſay you (ſay they to them) That his Diſciples came by night and ſtole him away while we ſlept, and we will ſatisfie the Governour, and ſecure you. Though Chriſt, even by the teſtimony of their own Men, had fulfilled what he himſelf propheſied, and it was plainly evident to them, yet they hired the Souldiers to tell this lye, though the lye contradicted it ſelf; (as ſome have obſerved) for how could they tell his Diſciples had ſtolen him away, when they were aſleep? To this deſperate hardneſs do the hearts of Men come; therefore never think that Truth or Reaſon, or any thing, will prevail upon wicked Men, all the means and miracles in the World will not do it, unleſs God perſwade Japhet to dwell in the Tents of Sem. In Rev. 16. when the fourth Vial was poured out upon the Sun (which is thought to be that execution that is now in the World upon the Houſe of Auſtria, or whatever it is) it is ſaid, That though men were ſcorched with great heat, yet they blaſphemed the name of God, and repented not to give him glory. And when the fifth Vial comes to be poured out (which is the Vial upon the City of Rome, the ſeat of the Beaſt, and it may be ſome of it is begun to be fulfilled, the little ſeats of the Beaſt are begun to be removed) it is ſaid, The Kingdom was full of darkneſs, yet they gnawed their tongues for pain, and blaſphemed God, and repented not of their deeds. Men that are reſolved in their wickedneſs come to ſuch deſperate hardneſs, that they never repent, let what will fall out. Thoſe that harden themſelves againſt Chriſt ſhall be hardened. So much for the ſeventh Verſe.

Verſe 8. Jeſus anſwered, I have told you that I am he, if therefore ye ſeek me, let theſe go their way.

Jeſus anſwered, I have told you that I am he.] There is a great deal of Majeſty in this Speech, a great deal of Exprobration, I have told you, ſaith he, and I think that I have told you with a witneſs, that I am he. As was ſaid of the River Jordan, What aileſt thou that thou fledſt back? So it might be ſaid of theſe men; what do you ail that you fall backward at a mean Mans only ſaying, I am he, a mean Man in appearance. It is as if Chriſt had ſaid, you ſay you ſeek for Jeſus of Nazareth, I have told you that I am he; why did you not then lay hold upon me? Was it a Divine Power that ſtruck you dead firſt? Then be warned by it; I am the ſame Man, upon your peril be it if you lay hold upon me. Yea, Chriſt did intimate thereby, that they could not know him, unleſs he himſelf had helped them to himſelf. He ſaid again, I am he; they knew not who was he.

Which ſtill alſo argues his willingneſs to ſuffer, that he ſhould twice put himſelf upon them, twice ſay, that he was the Man. They being as blinded Men, (for ſo indeed they were) he might have eſcaped if he would, but he is ſo far from that, that he provokes them by a double queſtion to know him. He would not be taken by Judas his ſign at firſt, but by his ovvn voluntary reſigning of himſelf up, for that is the thing (Chriſts vvillingneſs to ſuffer) which John doth eminently endeavour to hold forth in this Story.

My Brethren, Theſe men took pains to ſeek Jeſus Chriſt to damn themſelves; had they beſtowed the ſame diligence to ſeek him as a Saviour, they might have been ſaved; had they took the ſame pains to ſeek his favour that here they took to ſeek him to Crucifie him, he would have manifeſted himſelf unto them. There is no Man that ſeeks Chriſt, but in the end he ſaith unto him, I am he: And if they have loſt their knowledge of him (as many oftentimes do) he ſaith it the ſecond time, I am he, and provokes their hearts to know him. To all ſeekers of him he doth ſo, whether they be thoſe of the left hand, ſuch as theſe that ſought him to crucifie him, or thoſe of the right hand that ſeek him to be ſaved by him.

There is one general Obſervation that I ſhall give you here, upon the occaſion both of this Miracle, and that of healing Malchus his Ear; for he did both theſe Miracles afore they apprehended him, as the Context evidently argues; and although Matthew and Mark relate the Story of Peters cutting off Malchus his Ear after his being apprehended, which indeed they do by way of narration, yet it is clear by Luke and John, that it was before; for when when his hands were bound it was not a time for him to put forth his hand to heal him. Our Saviour Chriſt did not put forth any more Miracles, or gave any more ſigns of his Divinity now, but after they had taken him he is as calm as a Lamb. Before, indeed, he doth two things, he terrifies their Conſciences by caſting them backward, and he healeth him, who like an enemy and a wretch came to attach him, and it ſeems was the firſt that laid hands on him. Chap. 6.

Obſerv. The Obſervation I make from hence is this: You ſhall find this to be true in experience, that when you are entring into a Sin, then will God uſe that means that he meaneth to apply to keep you from it; he doth uſually do it then: But after you are entred into it, then your hearts are let go on. So indeed it was here with theſe Men; Chriſt uſeth two means, and notable ones too, two great Miracles before they took him to ſtrike their Conſciences, in a way of Judgment the one, in a way of Mercy the other. But when once they had laid hold of him and got their prey, he leaves them to their own hearts luſts. So he deals with wicked Men, and in experience you will find it true. Therefore, let this be the uſe of it, obſerve what God ſaith to your Hearts, what means he uſeth to your Spirits when you are entring into any great Sin: If you neglect cleaving to God then, and making uſe of thoſe means, you are in danger never to be recovered, but to be left to that Sin. And ſo much for that general Obſervation upon theſe Miracles of Chriſt.

——If therefore ye ſeek me, let theſe go their way.

Whilſt Jeſus Chriſt was ready to be taken, he takes upon him like a King. If you will have me, ſaith he, here I am, but I charge you do not meddle with one of theſe, touch not mine Anointed, let them go.

The words are to be conſidered, firſt as they are a Command from Chriſt, they are not a matter of Compact or Agreement only with them, or of humble Suit, Let theſe go their way; but he ſpeaks as a King, as one that had conquered them before; he had thrown them backward before, they had felt of his Power, Let theſe go their way, ſaith he. And that it was a Command doth ſeem to be manifeſt by this, by the words that follow, That the ſaying might be fulfilled which he ſpake [in his Prayer], of them that thou haſt given me I have loſt none. As he had prayed and had aſſurance from God of it, ſo now he gives forth a Command about it: For aſſuredly, otherwiſe thoſe which did command theſe Officers to take Chriſt, did command them to take his Diſciples alſo; their hatred was extream great againſt the Diſciples as vvell as againſt the Maſter. And therefore vvhen all the Diſciples forſook him and fled, although there vvas time enough to ſhevv that Chriſts Povver kept them from taking them, yet when there was a certain young Man that roſe up, and came out in his ſhirt in the night, and did but follow him when he was taken and led away, they laid hold upon him thinking him to be a Diſciple, and he was fain to leave his Linnen Cloth that was about him, and to fly from them naked. Therefore certainly they had as full a purpoſe to have taken any that countenanced him, any Diſciple as Chriſt himſelf, but only here he ſpeaks to them as you ſee, Let theſe go their way.

And by vertue of this Command it was, that though Peter did provoke them after theſe words the moſt that could be, by drawing his Sword, and falling upon a Servant of the High-Prieſts, and ſtrikes off his Ear, which could not but mightily enrage them; yet the Command of Chriſt muſt ſtand, he had hold of their hearts, he charged them that they ſhould not meddle with them, and they durſt not lay hands on them. Peter indangered himſelf and all his Brethren, that after Chriſt had ſaid this, he ſhould fall upon them, and ſtrike them with his Sword; ſo that though they had no malice againſt the Diſciples before, yet this drawing of Swords and ſtriking off an Ear, could not but extreamly provoke them, yet I ſay, Chriſts Command muſt ſtand. And Peter after this, he comes into the High-Prieſts Hall, and there was challenged again and again, yet this Word of Chriſt, Let theſe go, ſtood. And John afterward he comes and ſtands about the Crols, ſees him Crucified, they had no power to meddle with him, Chriſts word ſtood ſtill, Let theſe go, it is as if Chriſt ſhould have ſaid, Well, I will ſuffer you to take me, but as I have ſhewn you by throwing you to the ground that you cannot take me except I pleaſe, ſo ſtill, here I am, if you ſeek me, let theſe go.

Obſerv. 1. Obſerve from hence firſt, It is a Command from Heaven, from Chriſt, that doth deliver his People in all dangers whatſoever. Men could not be in a greater danger than theſe Diſciples were in, nor were there ever any Men more malicious than theſe were, yet we ſee they are preſerved by vertue of this word of Chriſts, let theſe go. In Pſal. 105. 14, 15. Though they were Strangers, ſaith he, and though the other were Kings, and had power enough to hurt them, yet he ſuffered no Man to do them wrong. God from Heaven ſpake to their hearts, Touch not mine anointed, do my Prophets no harm, ſo doth Chriſt here ſpeak with the ſame Authority, Let theſe go.

Obſerv. 2. Obſerve from hence, as the power of Chriſt to deliver us in all dangers, ſo his willingneſs to preſerve us. He voluntarily reſigns himſelf up to be taken, but as for his Diſciples, let theſe go, ſaith he. Was he thus willing to put himſelf in our ſtead when he was here on Earth? Do you think that now he hath ſuffered and is gone to Heaven where he is to intercede, to reap the fruit of his ſufferings, that he doth not ſay to his Father upon all occaſions, Let theſe poor ſouls go, I have ſuffered for them? If when he was crucified in weakneſs, he put forth ſuch a Power to deliver his People in ſo great a danger as theſe were in? Certainly you may truſt him upon all occaſions to deliver you now he is glorified much more; unleſs there be ſome peculiar reaſon, ſome peculiar Decree of Gods (as there was for Chriſt himſelf) that the Father hath appointed us a Cup for to drink; and that neither ſhall not be till the time come. Theſe Apoſtles they were afterwards to ſuffer, yet Chriſt, becauſe their time was not yet come, gives this charge to thoſe that took him, Let theſe go.

This being ſaid concerning the Command it ſelf, we will conſider the reaſons why Chriſt did preſerve his Diſciples at this time. The Reaſons are clearly theſe.

1. To ſhew that he could have ſaved himſelf if he pleaſed; For he that ſaved others could have ſaved himſelf: He that ſo with Authority did command them to let theſe go, could have commanded them to have let himſelf go.

2. He would ſhew that he alone was to ſuffer. In this work (ſaith he) I will have none to be my Companions. I ſtand now in their ſtead, and their ſins are laid upon me, therefore meddle not with theſe, Let theſe go. As David ſaid, Let thy hand be upon me and my fathers houſe, ſo doth Chriſt ſay, Let your hands be upon me, let the ſword of God awake againſt the Shepherd, but not againſt the Sheep. You know it was the Prophecy of Caiaphas, it is meet that one man ſhould dye for the people, therefore if you ſeek me, ſaith Chriſt, I am that one man, let theſe go.

3. Chriſt meant to imploy them in other Services, they were to preach the Goſpel to all the world, and when they had done they were to ſuffer. He had other work for them to do, and until that were done, Let theſe go.

4. They were not yet fit to ſuffer. Chriſt he knew the weakneſs of their Spirits; it is true he could have given them power, but according to an ordinary courſe had they been called to ſuffer now in that ſtate they were in, they would have all done as Peter did, denyed him, for you ſee they all fled away from him preſently, aſſoon as he was taken, they would never have held out, the buſineſs was too ſtrong for them to undergo at the preſent. And that this is the reaſon is clear by the next words, That the ſaying might be fulfilled which he ſpake of them which thou haſt given me, I have loſt none, implying that if they had been put upon ſuffering novv, they had been loſt, their Souls vvould have been undone, they vvould have denyed him: This Chriſt foreſavv, and therefore prevents their ſufferings, and ſo the occaſion of their falling ſo groſly. Therefore to preſerve them every vvay, both their Bodies and their Souls, ſaith he, Let theſe go.

The Obſervations from hence are theſe. Chap. 6.

Obſerv. 1. You may ſee the great care of Chriſt; when he was to ſuffer, one would think his thoughts ſhould have been wholly taken up about himſelf; no, you ſee he doth not mind himſelf, his care was to preſerve his Diſciples, Here am I, ſaith he, let theſe go. Was Chriſt ſo careful of his Diſciples when he was to undergo ſo great an incounter? How much more doth he take care of his Saints now he is in Heaven.

Obſerv. 2. Chriſt is careful to bring us but then to ſuffer when he means to fit us for ſuffering, and when we ſhall be able to ſuffer, and if need be, and ſo much only as ſhall need be. That place in 1 Pet. 1. 6. contains a promiſe in it, ſpeaking of ſufferings, Wherein, ſaith he, you greatly rejoyce, though now for a ſeaſon [if need be] you are in heavineſs, &c. He will not unleſs there be need bring Temptations upon you. If Chriſt had laid Sufferings upon them now, they had not been able to have ſuffered; you ſee Peter forſwore him upon the aſſault of a Maid, how much more would he have done ſo, if attached and brought before the High-Prieſt. It is Chriſts manner not to call us to ſuffering till we can ſuffer, nor to lay more upon us than we are able to bear, you know the promiſe in 1 Cor. 10. 13.

Obſerv. 2. They that are of publick uſe, for whom God hath work to do, till the time appointed in which God will have them ſuffer, they ſhall eſcape abundance of dangers of ſufferings. The truth is, had theſe Jewes ſeized upon Chriſt and all his Diſciples at once, they had made ſure for the Goſpel ever to have been propagated, according to what God had appointed, for he had choſen theſe Men to be Witneſſes and Preachers of it, there had been none but Paul left to Preach. They might have cruſhed the Goſpel in the very ſhell, had they taken Chriſt and all the Apoſtles at once: No, ſaith he, Let theſe go. So long as God hath work for Men to do, he will preſerve them from being taken and ſeized upon, and ruined by their enemies. Let no man therefore that is in any work and ſervice for God, fear, he ſhall never be cut off till ſuch time as his work be done, and then to be cut off it is no matter; he ſhall not be ſent for out of the Harveſt till he hath reaped that God hath appointed to reap by him. Go tell that fox, Herod, (ſaith Chriſt, Luke 13. 31.) Behold, I caſt out Devils, and I do cures to day and to morrow; and I will do it in ſpight of him, he ſhall not be able, for all he is a crafty wily Fox, with all his cunning to take me; I will work to day and to morrow, and the third day I ſhall be perfected: Till I have accompliſhed all my work, till the time come that my Father hath appointed me to ſuffer in, I will go up and down freely let him do his worſt, and when I have done I will ſuffer, for I have vowed to do it. So here, Let theſe go, ſaith he, I have work for them to do, I muſt ſend them abroad into all the World, do not touch a hair of them, no more they did. So much for the 8th Verſe. The Reaſon of this is given in the next words.

Verſe 9. That the ſaying might be fulfilled which he ſpake, of them which thou gaveſt me, have I loſt none.

You muſt not take theſe words as ſpoken by Chriſt, but it is the Comment that John who wrote this Goſpel, putteth upon Chriſts ſpeech immediately foregoing, and he openeth through the revelation of the Spirit of God the true Reaſon why that that Command of Chriſt did take place, that the Diſciples were let go, becauſe ſaith he, that Chriſt had prayed even juſt before, in the 17th Chapter; for if you read that Chapter, you ſhall find that Chriſt in that ſolemn Prayer which he puts up to his Father, ſaith, Thoſe that thou gaveſt me, I have kept, and none of them is loſt, but the ſon of perdition. This Prayer he had put up juſt afore, and you ſee what preſent need there was of having it anſwered.

I ſhall give you two general Obſervations from this.

Obſerv. 1. We had need to lay up Prayers every day before we go abroad and do our buſineſs: For indeed we do not know what dangers may befal us afore we come in again. Chriſt here if he had not prayed juſt afore that all

all his Apoſtles might be kept, they might have been in danger, for a great danger they came into, but the efficacy of that Prayer kept them.

Obſerv. 2. How ſoon are Prayers anſwered. Chriſt had put up this Prayer but even juſt before, and as ſome think, he did pray as he came along out of the Chamber where they did eat the Paſſeover, and that he uttered this Prayer to his Father walking from thence: For in the laſt Verſe of the 14th Chapter, ſaith he, Ariſe, let us go hence; therefore they conceive that his Sermon mentioned in the 15th and 16th Chapters, and his Prayer mentioned in the 17th, were all uttered as he went along from the Chamber to the Brook Cedron. However certainly it was not long before, perhaps not above half an hour, and here you ſee it anſwered, the thing he prayed for is fulfilled, Let theſe go, ſaith he, and it was done accordingly; they did not touch one of them, That the ſaying might be fulfilled which he ſpake, of them which thou gaveſt me, have I loſt none. In Dan. 9. 3, 21. you ſhall find that Daniel ſet himſelf to pray when as the Evening-Sacrifice began, and there was a Commiſſion preſently given to the Angel to come and give him an anſwer. Prayers my Brethren, are preſently heard; ſo was Chriſts here, he had an anſwer preſently. So much for the general Obſervations out of theſe words.

Now the only Queſtion for the opening the words lyes in this. Thoſe words of Chriſts in the 17th Chapter [Thoſe that thou gaveſt me, I have kept, and none of them is loſt] ſeem to have been put up for the keeping them, in reſpect of the Salvation of their Souls, whereas this here (which it is applyed unto) is ſpoken only in reſpect of the preſervation of their Bodies, in appearance; Let theſe go, ſaith he, let them eſcape for this time. It is moſt certain that what our Saviour Chriſt ſpake in that place, referreth principally to the Salvation of their Souls; what is the reaſon then that here it ſhould be applyed to this deliverance of their Bodies, to a Temporal deliverance?

My Brethren, all the Promiſes in the Scripture are to be taken in the largeſt ſenſe that may be. As we ſay of Priviledges and Favours, they are to be interpreted in the largeſt ſenſe, ſo are all Promiſes. That Promiſe made to Joſhua, I will not leave thee, nor forſake thee; it referred only to the carrying of him on in that War; yet all the Elect may apply it to all ſort of diſtreſſes, not only that God will never leave them nor forſake them, in reſpect of Bodily deliverances, but in reſpect of their Souls alſo. So here on the other ſide, that which Chriſt ſpeaks of their Souls, is extended to their Bodies too, and they reap the fruit of it in that reſpect.

And it argues this too, that that God that ſaves thy Soul, out of the ſame Love ſaves thy Body too, therefore interpret it ſo, for ſo John doth here; what was ſpoken in the 17th Chapter of their Souls, he applyes it here to their Bodies. Will God ſave thy Soul? Certainly he will deliver thy Body. When we ſeek Spiritual things much in the height of our Spirits, then doth God anſwer us alſo in Temporal things. And as by the vertue of Chriſts Reſurrection we ſhall be raiſed up at the latter day and ſaved, ſo by vertue of the ſame Reſurrection we ſhall be preſerved here in the World; the ſame Power that ſhall raiſe us up then, works for us leſſer deliverances now. Paul in 2 Cor. 4. 10. ſpeaking of the many deliverances he had from Temporal dangers, he attributes it all to the Reſurrection of Chriſt: We are (ſaith he) troubled on every ſide, yet not diſtreſſed; caſt down, but not deſtroyed, &c. that the life of Jeſus might be made manifeſt in our body. So here, though Chriſt did not in his Prayer intend ſo much the preſervation of their Bodies as their Eternal Salvation, yet their deliverance from this ſo great a danger was a fruit of that Prayer. The ſame Prayer that ſaved their Souls ſaved their Bodies too: and it was a pawn and pledge to them that their Souls ſhould be ſaved, becauſe the vertue of that Prayer wrought a deliverance for their Bodies out of ſo eminent a danger; for who would not have thought but that they ſhould all have been taken, ſeeing they laid about them ſo as they did? And it was in anſwer to Chriſts Prayer; one would have thought it had been but an ordinary Providence, that they were ſo greedy of Chriſt that they let the Diſciples ſlip away. No, it was an anſwer to Prayer made but a while afore.

Obſerv. 1.

Obſerv. 1. Obſerve from hence, that of all things elſe in the World, the greateſt care that Jeſus Chriſt hath, it is to preſerve all his Saints, not to loſe one. For he comforts himſelf in the Seventeenth Chapter, that of thoſe God had given him, he had loſt none, but he that was deſigned to perdition by God himſelf; and here it is repeated again, and you ſee what care he takes for their preſervation. My Brethren, it would trouble Jeſus Chriſt to Eternity (I may ſay it with boldneſs) if he ſhould loſe one Soul that he dyed for. Are the Hairs of your Head numbred? Certainly your Perſons are numbred, and Chriſt will not loſe one of his Tale, nor a Finger of his Body; nay, though thou beeſt but as a little tip of his Finger, or as his little Toe, he will have a care to ſave thee. When he makes up his Jewels, he will not loſe any, not the leaſt of them. Lo here am I, ſaith he, and the children thou haſt given me, Heb. 2. 13. And this is my Fathers will, that of all thoſe he hath given me I ſhould loſe none, but raiſe them up at the latter day, John 6. 39.

Obſerv. 2. And obſerve this too from hence, That Jeſus Chriſt he can keep us in the very midſt of his Enemies. He gives his Diſciples here a Paſs (as I may call it) when there was a Band of Roman Souldiers, divers of the Chief Prieſts, and Elders, and Officers from them, all about him and his Diſciples, Let theſe go, ſaith he. And all to fulfil this, Of thoſe thou haſt given me, have I loſt none. It is becauſe he rules in the midſt of his Enemies. Jeſus Chriſt ſhewed his power before in confounding theſe Jews and the reſt, by throwing them backward, and now he ſhews his Power as much in preſerving his Diſciples in the midſt of them, and ſo he will do to the end of the World. He knoweth how to deliver the godly out of temptation, 2 Pet. 2. 9. He hath the Art and Skill of it, and the Power of it too, for he awed their hearts here when he ſaid, Let theſe go.

Obſerv. 3. Laſtly, Miniſters likewiſe ſhould have the like care, that none of thoſe that are committed to them, periſh, for ſo Chriſt, as a good Shepherd had. And ſo much for the Ninth Verſe.

CHAP.

CHAP. VII.

The Tenth and Eleventh Verſes Explained with ſuitable Obſervations raiſed from them. The willingneſs which Chriſt expreſſed to come to dye, and be made a Sacrifice, and would have nothing to hinder it.

YOU ſhall find this (that I may give you a general Preface to the opening of the words of this Tenth verſe, and thoſe that follow) that the Evangeliſts in ſetting down the Story of Chriſts Sufferings, they do diligently inſert the behaviour of his Apoſtles, how they carried themſelves. It was an ill time (Brethren) for Diſciples to ſin, when their Maſter was to be taken, and yet I know not how many Sins of theirs are mentioned. They were faſt aſleep at that time when he was in his greateſt Agony: One would think that at that time above all other they ſhould have watched with him when he was entring into his ſufferings for their ſins. And now when he was to be taken, you ſee into what a miſcarriage Peter runneth, what a furious raſh act he performs. If Chriſt had pleaſed, he might have kept them from all theſe Sins, he had power enough to have done it; but he would not. What is the Obſervation from hence.

Obſerv. 1. That Jeſus Chriſt may be preſent with a Mans Spirit, and pray for him too (for he had prayed for theſe that they ſhould be kept from the Evil of the World) and yet that Man run into Sin. If Chriſt when he was here upon Earth did not keep his People from falling into manifold Sins and Errors; do not think much if ſometimes thou art left to ſin againſt him. He made good uſe of it, he did bring Glory out of it; this ſame raſh Act of Peters here, it was an occaſion of two things, firſt of illuſtrating the Power of Chriſt the more in keeping of them according to the command he gave, Let theſe go, for who would not have thought but that they ſhould all have fallen upon Peter and the reſt and have killed them preſently, a Company of rude Souldiers and Officers Armed; yet they medled not with them. And it was an occaſion of Chriſts ſhewing his goodneſs in healing the Mans Ear, and of ſhewing a Miracle. And this be aſſured of that Chriſt will work good out of all thy Sins, as he did here glory to himſelf out of this Sin of Peters.

2. Obſerve, That God may leave his People to ſinning even at that time when he is doing the greateſt things for them. But I ſhall paſs that now, becauſe we ſhall have occaſion to ſpeak of it in the following Diſcourſe. To ſpeak therefore a little more particularly of this Act of Peters.

Ver. 10. Then Simon Peter having a ſword, drew it, and ſmote the high prieſts ſervant, and cut off his right ear, the ſervants name was Malchus.

You read in Mar. 14. 31. That the Diſciples, they did all vow that they would live and dye with him as we ſay; they all promiſed him that if he were taken that Night, they vvould loſe their Lives in his Defence, that they vvould; and Peter above the reſt he vvas the forvvardeſt, vvhoever leaves thee, ſaith he, I'le not leave thee. Novv theſe Diſciples having thus engaged themſelves, vvhen they ſavv that their Maſter vvould be taken, they asked him, Lord, ſhall we ſmite with the ſword? So Luke tells us, chap. 23. 39. And yet poor Men they had but tvvo Svvords amongſt them all: And Simon Peter, as he had been the forvvardeſt Man in promiſing to aſſiſt Chriſt, ſo he is the forwardeſt in ſtriking, for before Chriſt gave them an Anſwer whether they ſhould ſmite or no, he out with his Sword and ſtrikes. Chap. 7.

Peter having a ſword.] There were two Swords in the company, as Luke hath it. Chriſt indeed had ſaid a few hours before, He that hath a ſword let him take it; but he intended it in another ſenſe, and therefore they miſtook him: However, probable it is that they knowing Chriſt was to be betrayed that night, they carried out their Swords to fight, having promiſed to do ſo before, which may be one occaſion of Peters having a Sword; but Joſephus and others ſay, (and it is as likely too) that thoſe that came up to the Feaſt, (as theſe did) they travelled through Woods and Wilderneſſes, and ſo were in danger of wild Beaſts, or Thieves, or the like, and therefore they carried Swords with them; and beſides it was the manner and cuſtom of the Galileans eſpecially, to wear Swords, as hath been obſerved by ſome. Some Interpreters hence obſerve that it is lawful to wear defenſive Weapons, which the Anabaptiſts of Germany did uſe to deny. There is the cleareſt evidence for it here, for they did not only wear Swords, but Chriſt bids them if they had no Swords to ſell their Garments and buy Swords; ſo ſayes Luke, chap. 22. 36. And when Peter had done this miſchievous act, in drawing his Sword and ſtriking the High-Prieſts Servant, Chriſt did not bid him fling it away, but only to put it up again into his place.

In this action of Peters, there was ſomething good and ſomething bad.

Something good. Its evident firſt that there was a great deal of Zeal and Love to his Maſter. He was incouraged to it likewiſe, becauſe he had ſeen his Maſter to throw them all upon the ground afore him; thought he, though we be but eleven, and have but two Swords, we may venture, for our Maſter will aſſiſt us: There was a confidence, a Faith in the Power of Chriſt. And it would ſeem alſo that what he did was upon warrant, as he thought, for at the Paſſeover Chriſt had ſaid, If any man have a ſword let him take it. He ſpake it indeed to another purpoſe (as I ſaid even now) but Peter might take his ground from thence, miſunderſtanding his Maſters words.

There was ſomething bad and ſinful likewiſe in this action; viz.

1. That Peter did raſhly fall upon this act; for the Diſciples having asked Chriſt whether they ſhould draw; before ever Chriſt anſwered, he out with his Sword and falls upon the Man. Peter had a bold, and a raſh and ſudden Spirit, as appeared, as by a world of carriages of his toward Chriſt, ſo by this, which was as raſh an act as could be; and it was a folly for him to do it; for what was he and ten more, that had but two Swords amongſt them, to encounter with all that band of Men that came with Weapons to take Chriſt.

2. That he went about to hinder our Saviour Chriſt from dying. That's clear to be a Sin by Chriſts reproof of him; for ſaith he, Shall I not drink of the cup that my Father hath commanded me to drink of? Wilt thou hinder me? Wilt thou go contrary to Gods Will? Thou didſt tempt me once before, Maſter, ſpare thy ſelf; and now thou wouldſt keep me from dying for thee, and all thy Brethren.

3. That whereas a Lawful Power had ſiezed upon Chriſt, (a Lawful Power, I ſay, though they did it not Lawfully) he would lift up his Sword againſt the Magiſtrate, who had ſent theſe Men to take him.

4. That he did indanger all the reſt of the Diſciples to have been preſently hewen a pieces, but that the force of thoſe words [Let theſe go] hindered it.

5. The truth is, there was an injuſtice in it, Chriſt having as it were made a bargain with them, Here am I, ſayes he, let theſe go; it was injuſtice in Peter to fall upon them.

Obſerv. 1. Comfort to thoſe that have bold, and raſh, and ſudden Spirits. Haſt thou a raſh, a ſudden Spirit? That raſhneſs is ſinful, for Chriſt reproves it in Peter; yet comfort thy ſelf, Peter that great Apoſtle, was a Man ſubject to the ſame infirmity. Yet take heed of walking raſhly. Lev. 26. 40. If you walk contrary to me; ſo we tranſlate it; but I remember Junius tranſlates it, If you walk raſhly with me, I will walk raſhly with you. If we walk raſhly with God, though he love us and will pardon us, yet he may walk raſhly with us again; give us a blow afore we are aware; come with ſome caſual kind of croſs or other upon us. God is pleaſed to ſpare Peter, for he doth not animadvert for every fault, yet in that place of Leviticus, he expreſſeth what he will do upon Mens raſh walking.

Obſerv. 2. See here the Spirit of Peter, how valiant and bold he is, runs into the midſt of a band of Men, and ſtrikes amongſt them; but alas, he did it out of a Humane Courage and Valour, becauſe he had ſaid he would dye with Chriſt. This poor Man afterwards denies Chriſt upon the charge of a Damſel; he was afraid of a Maid, and yet here he encounters a company of armed Men; he ſhewed his Courage with his Sword, when he would not do it with his Tongue, as Calvin ſaith. Let us have never ſo much greatneſs of Spirit Naturally, if we come to any Spiritual Suffering and have not Grace to aſſiſt us, our Natural Spirit will not help us in it. Certainly this act of Peters proceeded from his Natural Spirit and Humane Valour that he had, but when he comes to be put to it to ſuffer in a Spiritual way, Peter ſhrinks back.

Obſerv. 3. Good Men may carry on a good cauſe extream indiſcreetly. In appearance this was as good a cauſe to venture ones Life in as poſſibly could be, yet how indiſcreetly doth Peter manage it! He managed it worſe than they did that came to take Chriſt, for you ſee they did not fall upon the Diſciples at all, which a thouſand to one but they had, whereas Peter contrary to Chriſts agreement with them, falls upon them: As Abimelech ſaid unto Abraham, I am more righteous than thou, in that act; ſo the truth is, theſe Men were in this reſpect more righteous than Peter. In managing a good cauſe, Godly People commit ſuch errours as this was, and then all the World takes notice of it. They might have blamed Chriſt and his Diſciples, and ſaid, they were a company of rebellious froward fellows, and the reſt of them are like theſe: This might have been laid to Chriſts charge through Peters indiſcretion.

Obſerv. 4. Our Saviour Chriſt would not have Peter venture his Life this way. He knew he was better at Preaching than at Fighting, therefore he would have him reſerve himſelf for that, and therefore he bids him put up his Sword. It had been well for this Kingdom if ſome had ventured themſelves in a way of Counſel rather than Fighting. Chriſt I ſay had other work for Peter. It is good for a Man to lay out his Life in that, which he is beſt in. Peter, who was deſigned for an Apoſtle, that had ſo many precious Notions committed to him; for him to venture his Life in ſuch a rude manner, it was a great fault.

Obſerv. 5. Although Chriſt was an eminent Perſon, the Saviour of the World, yet Chriſt would not have Peter fight for him againſt the Magiſtrate; as in this Peter did, becauſe it was againſt the Authority of the Magiſtrate. The Sword is committed peculiarly to the Magiſtrate: As Rom. 13. He bears not the ſword in vain: He bears the Sword not thee; thou mayeſt defend thy ſelf in a private Quarrel if ſet upon, but here came out the Authority of the Magiſtrate to attach Chriſt; and in ſuch a caſe thou art not to lift up thy Sword. Put up thy ſword again into his place, ſaith Chriſt.

And yet it was the beſt cauſe one would think that ever was to fight in. If a Man might fight meerly for Religion, I ſay meerly for Religion, here had been the greateſt colour for it in the World; why? It was to ſave the Life of Chriſt, the Lord of the World; and to fight for the Life of Chriſt is more than to fight for the Truth of Chriſt; yet, no, ſaith Chriſt, Put up thy ſword again, truſt me to manage my own cauſe. Religion may be fought for as it is become a Civil Right and Liberty of a State, for ſo it becometh when it is Enacted by the Power of that State, but meerly and ſimply to fight for Religion, Religion, there is no warrant in the Word of God for it. To fight for Chriſts Life was not warrantable for Peter. Chap. 7.

Chriſt tells him withal (as in other Evangeliſts) He that kills with the ſword ſhall be killed with the ſword : He that will fight in a Quarrel that is not warrantable, he himſelf ſhall be found out one day. But I rather think the meaning is, thou needeſt not trouble thy ſelf to avenge my Quarrel upon theſe Men, for the Sword ſhall find out this Nation for putting me to Death ; for ſo you know it did, the Romans came and took away their City and Nation.

Obſerv. 6. Laſtly, When God hath made a Promiſe and given forth his Word, though there may many things fall out to overturn it, yet it ſhall ſtand. Chriſt had ſaid, Let theſe go ; Peter you ſee had like to have ſpoiled all, he goes and runs into a Riot, which might have endangered them ; yet notwithſtanding the Word of Chriſt doth ſtand. When God hath made a Promiſe of deliverance, there ſhall thoſe things fall out that one would think would hazard the performance, and that through Mens own default, yet God will bring about the deliverance. So much in the general for this act of Peters.

And he ſmote the High-Prieſts ſervant, and cut off his right ear, the ſervants name was Malchus.

This Servant of the High-Prieſts it ſeems was the firſt Man that ſtepped forth to lay hold upon Chriſt, and therefore Peter encounters him firſt, for as yet they had not taken Chriſt; for the Text ſaith afterward, Then the Captains and the band took Jeſus. It ſeems therefore I ſay, that this Man was the forwardeſt of the company, which he did either to pleaſe his Maſter, or perhaps he was the Officer to ſerve the Arreſt upon him in a formal way, as we do. Peter now falls upon him firſt, and cuts off his Ear, ſome think it was but the tip of his Ear (for ſo the word ſignifies ſometimes) but there is no ground for that, for Luke, he calls it the whole Ear.

He ſaith the Servants name was Malchus ; which ſome fetch from the Hebrew root, which ſignifies one bought ; becauſe as he was a Servant, ſo perhaps his Maſter had bought him with his Money, or otherwiſe obtained him to be his Servant. And as Caiaphas his Maſter was (as appears by all the Story) the greateſt enemy of Chriſt, ſo this Malchus was the forwardeſt of all the reſt to attach Chriſt. The Obedience of the Servant to the Maſter in Scripture, is expreſt by lending the Ear, and by boring the Ear, and therefore for his doing this out of Obedience and Zeal to his Maſter, this Puniſhment befalls him. But I paſs over that.

Peter cut off his ear.] It is certain that Peter aimed at his Head, to have cleft that dovvn, but God in his Providence directs the blow ſo, that no more hurt was done but the cutting off the Ear. It's ſtrange it ſhould not hit his Shoulder, yet you ſee God guided it ſo that it did not.

Obſerv. The Obſervation I have from this is only this, That God in his Providence guides and directs blows, and all ſuch caſual things as theſe are. Such paſſages of Providence there are, in guiding the motions of Mens hands, and the motions of the Creatures, oftentimes for the preſervation of us in dangers, and how manifold experiences have we had of them ! Who almoſt is there but in their lives have been either near being killed, and God hath come in by his Providence, guiding and directing ſuch accidents and occurrences, that they have been preſerved ! Eſpecially thoſe that are Souldiers, they have found ſtrange kind of ſhots that have been made, and how near they have come to kill them, and yet they have miſt. Or elſe they have been near killing others in a caſual way, and God in his Providence hath prevented it. I ſay it is every Mans caſe almoſt, we may ſee many examples of the Providence of God in this kind. We ſee it here toward Peter, and it was a mighty Providence ; for had Peter killed this Man, had there been a Murther committed upon him, there had been ſuch a ground of quarrel that they would have fallen upon all the Diſciples and certainly have cut them to pieces, but Chriſt had prayed that they ſhould go away free, therefore God in his Providence guides Peters blow, ſo that he ſtrikes off nothing but the Ear, though he aimed at his head, and Chriſt heals that Ear too, that ſo his Diſciples might be all ſaved and delivered. So much for the Tenth Verſe.

Verſe 11. Then ſaid Jeſus unto Peter, put up thy ſword into the ſheath: The Cup which my father hath given me, ſhall I not drink it?

I have obſerved ſomething before upon Chriſts bidding him put up his Sword; therefore I ſhall ſay little of it now. Jeſus ſaid unto Peter. Why unto Peter? For in Luke he ſpeaks to them all not to draw their Swords, Suffer you thus far ſaith he; But as he ſpake to them all becauſe they all asked him whether they ſhould draw; ſo more particularly and perſonally to Peter, becauſe he had ſinned and did actually draw his Sword, for that is the manner of Chriſt, to reprove thoſe, and to have thoſe reproved in a peculiar manner that Sin more peculiarly. He bids him put it up, he doth not bid him not to wear it, or not to uſe it, but put to it up only: But of that before.

——The Cup which my Father hath given me, ſhall I not drink it?

In Matth. 26. 51, 52, 53, 54. you ſhall find that Chriſt uſeth other Arguments to his Diſciples to be quiet and to put up their Swords. How ſhall the Scriptures be fulfilled, (ſaith he) that thus it muſt be; that's one Reaſon. What need I care for your help, cannot I pray to my Father, and he ſhall preſently give me more than twelve Legions of Angels: And, all they that take the ſword, ſhall periſh with the Sword. All theſe doth Chriſt give as reaſons to them to be quiet. But the Apoſtle John writing after all the other Evangeliſts, inſerts what they omitted, and he mentioneth here another reaſon, and indeed the higheſt reaſon of all the reſt, Shall I not drink, &c.

From whence take this general Obſervation, that there may be many Motives and Reaſons in one Action, many conſiderations that may keep a Man from ſinning in one Action, though there be one more principal than all the reſt, as this was the principal in Chriſt.

But why doth he uſe this Argument to Peter more than to all the reſt? Upon a double ground.

1. Becauſe it had been Peters ſin to hinder him from ſuffering. And you ſhall ſee how his heart ſtill roſe againſt Peter for it. He had once before ſaid, Maſter ſpare thy ſelf; Chriſt calls him Satan for it, and he never called any of them Satan but Judas, Get thee behind me Satan (ſaies he to Peter, Matth. 16. 23.) He ſaw Satan in it. And now again, when he was to enter into his ſufferings, Peters Zeal was ſo high that he would have reſcued him out of their hands if he could, and have kept him from ſuffering, therefore Chriſt in a ſpecial manner ſpeaks to him.

Obſerv. 1. To hinder one in any good, to hinder one in ſuffering when God calls him to it (though out of a fooliſh pity;) how great an Evil is it? With what a ſlight Eye did Peter look upon this thing of Chriſt, he thought it was only a carrying of him to Priſon, and that the Life of a Man ſhould be taken away. He ſaw not into the bottom of it, he was ignorant of the Scope of all this, viz. that it was the ſaving of the World. Peter though otherwiſe a good Man, and a Believer the underſtood it not.

2. Chriſt ſpeaks this to Peter, not only to lay open his Sin in hindring him, but to lay open his own Spirit. The cup which my Father hath given me, ſhall I not drink? He doth not ſay, a neceſſity is laid upon me to drink this Cup; He doth not ſay ſimply, My Father hath commanded me to drink it, But ſhall I not drink it? It is a Speech that implies that his Spirit knew not how to do otherwiſe than obey his Father; as if there were ſuch a Natural Principle in him, ſuch an Inſtinct that he could not chooſe but do it. Even juſt as Joſeph ſaid, Gen. 39. 9. How ſhall I do this great wickedneſs and ſin againſt God? So Chriſt here, The Cup which my Father hath given me, how ſhall I but drink it? It implies the higheſt willingneſs that can be: For ſtill you ſhall find this to be Johns deſign to hold forth the willingneſs of Chriſt to ſuffer, that's his project, therefore he ſingles out a Speech that the other Evangeliſts omit, which moſt of all holds it forth, he mentions not the neceſſity, becauſe of the Law, and becauſe of his Duty, or becauſe the Scriptures muſt be fulfilled, others had done that, but ſhall my Father give me a Cup, and ſhall not I drink it? He doth here ſhew that he doth fulfil the Commandment more out of Love than any other principle; that he was led by the greateſt ſpirit of Ingenuity that could be; For I know not a Speech of greater Ingenuity than this is, The cup that my Father hath given me, ſhall I not drink it? Chap. 6.

Natural

My Brethren, to fulfil the Law of God out of a principle of Love and Ingenuity, it is a higher way of fulfilling it, than meerly to aim at the Letter. Chriſt indeed had an eye to the command, yet that was not it that principally moved him; It's true, ſaith he, there is a neceſſity laid upon me, and the Scriptures cannot elſe be fulfilled, yet above all this I have a principle in me that moves me, It is my Father, he hath commanded this Cup to me, how ſhall I not but drink of it? There is a further principle than meerly Obedience to the Law, that leads on a godly Man, and lead on Jeſus Chriſt to Obedience. For Love it is the fulfilling of the Law, ſo it was in Chriſt and ſo in his Apoſtles, and in all his Saints.

You read in other Evangeliſts, That when Chriſt was in the Garden but a matter of half an hour before, he had earneſtly prayed to his Father that this Cup might paſs. But when once God had ſet it on upon his Spirit that it was his will that he ſhould drink it, and that it was impoſſible in reſpect of his Decree that it ſhould paſs from him, when God I ſay had intimated this to him in Prayer, and he had ſubmitted to it, then he ſaies, Not my will, but thy will be done; Now you ſee how firm and ſtrong his Reſolution was, He that had prayed againſt it before, when once he knew Gods Will, and ſubmitted to it; now he longs to drink of it, Shall I not drink (ſaith he) of the cup that my Father hath given me? Will you have me go and overthrow the Anſwer I have had of my Prayers? Shall I break that reſolution I have taken up and expreſt in my Prayer, ſhall I not drink of the Cup when I have yielded and ſubmitted to my Father?

When thou ſeeſt Gods Will determined, or when God hath caſt thy heart in Prayer one way; and he calls thee to ſuffer, and hath brought thy heart to yield; O learn then to keep thy heart in that frame, to continue thy reſolution, have no more riſings againſt it. Chriſt you ſee had not but the higheſt Ingenuity that ever was to it.

Therefore now you that ſeek to God at any time by Prayer for any thing, and you have an Anſwer, you have a Reſolution drawn forth in Prayer, you have a bent, a byas of Spirit clapt upon you in ſeeking God in ſome particular buſineſs, keep to it, hold to it. It is a mighty ingagement to have had a Mans Spirit ſo and ſo framed in Prayer, when a Man can ſay I have been afore God in Prayer, and my Spirit hath ſubmitted, and I have been brought to ſuch a Reſolution: O take heed of breaking ſuch Reſolutions, you have the higheſt ingagement in the world to continue in them. Therefore when you pray, mind thoſe ingagements that are in your hearts to God in Prayer, and keep to them. Chriſt he came new from Prayer now, he had prayed that the Cup might be removed, when God had once ſet it upon his Spirit that it was his will he ſhould drink of it, and he had ſubmitted to it, and reſolved upon it, you hear of no more complaints, yea, you hear complaints on the contrary, that he ſhould be hindred in doing it. How often my Brethren do we come before God, and expreſs our ſelves againſt ſuch and ſuch a Sin, we ſubmit our ſelves to ſuch and ſuch a way of Self-denyal; but when we are come from before God, how do our minds alter! You ſee Chriſts did not in the greateſt point that ever ever was, when he once had ſubmitted, ſaith he, I have ſubmitted, and ſhall I not drink it? He had not the leaſt riſing thought againſt it afterward. We come and ingage our ſelves againſt ſuch a Sin to God in Prayer, and go away with our Eyes ſcarce drie, and are tempted to it again: Oh how ſhould we think with our ſelves, ſhall I do that which I have prayed againſt? which I have ingaged my ſelf againſt? This was Chriſts caſe here, Shall I not drink it, ſaith he? Nay, it is more emphatical, The cup that my Father hath given me, ſhall I not drink it? He turns the words, the Phraſe is ſet in ſuch a poſture as hath the moſt Emphaſis that can be.

The Cup which my Father hath given me. His Paſſion is called a Cup, ſo he himſelf calleth it, Matth. 20. 22. and Mar. 10. 38. Are ye able to drink of the Cup that I ſhall drink of: Speaking of his Paſſion: And it is called a Cup, not only becauſe it was his demenſum, the Portion that was allotted him by his Father, for the manner of the Antients in Feaſts was to ſet every Man his Cup or Portion of Drink that was allotted him by his Trencher as it were, as we now ſet Bread, ſo they had every one his Cup, every one his Quantum or Portion. And ſo indeed in Scripture any Portion of Affliction or Suffering that God doth ſet out to Men it is called a Cup; as in Jer. 25. 17. I took the cup and I did give it from the Lord into the hands of all the Nations, and made them all to drink of it. So in Ezek. 21. 31, 32, 33. and in Habak. 2. 16. And in many other places you have the Cup put for the Portion or Meaſure of an Affliction. But I ſay he calls it a Cup, not only becauſe it was his Portion, but I rather think that which is in this place aimed at, is, that it was his Meat and Drink to do the Will of his Father. For you ſee Chriſt is hearty in ſubmitting to his Father, It is the cup ſaith he, which my Father hath given me, which Speech (as I ſaid afore) expreſſeth the higheſt willingneſs. Now in John 4. 34. He ſaith, My meat and drink is to do the will of my Father, and to finiſh his work; and he looks upon this Cup when once he had prayed over it, as that which his Father had given him to drink, and therefore as it was Meat for him to do his Will, ſo it was Drink to him, it was pleaſant to him (in ſome reſpect ſweetned by an Angel) to take this Cup and drink it off.

Stuckius Antiq. convival. Lib. 3. c. 13.

Obſerv. 1. Firſt you ſee the Soveraignty of God to diſpoſe of what Cup he is pleaſed you ſhall have in your life time; which you ſee Jeſus Chriſt here ſubmitteth unto. For a Cup it is not only taken for a Portion of evil things, but for a Portion of good things, and God diſpoſeth unto ſeveral Men, ſeveral Cups, and of ſeveral ſizes as he pleaſeth. It is certain that the bittereſt Cup that ever was, was diſpoſed of unto Jeſus Chriſt, therefore no Man needs complain.

Obſerv. 2. Secondly, Chriſt did not look to what the Jews did, or the Roman Band that was with them, that were now round about him, he eyes not them, but ſtill he looks to God, eyes him, It is the cup which my Father hath given me. Peter you ſee, he looked only at the Jews as his Adverſaries, no Peter (ſaith he) it is my Fathers Cup, there is an higher hand in it. So ſhould we do in all our Actions; as Job did when he ſaid Job 1. 21. It is God that hath given, and God that hath taken away; God hath bid him curſe, ſaith David of Shimei, 2 Sam. 16. 10. Therefore what have I to do with you, ye ſons of Zerviah? So here Chriſt carries himſelf, This is from my Father (ſaies he) I will not have to do with theſe Jews; It's true, I fall into theſe mens hands, but it is the council of my father, as Act. 2. 23. This Chriſt looks to, and ſo I ſay ſhould we do in all our Sufferings.

Obſerv. 3. Thirdly, It is the Cup which my Father hath given me. Chriſt in his Sufferings doth not look upon God as a Judge. Nor do not you my Brethren in any of your Afflictions; ſuppoſe you ſee the Affliction anſwering your Sin, yet look not upon God as a Judge in it, but as a Father; it is the cup which my Father hath given me, ſaith he, and we are to be comformable to him in Afflictions. The greateſt and bittereſt Sufferings he ſweetned to us, looked upon as coming from a Father; it was ſo with Chriſt, when he looks upon this as a Cup given him by his Father, he looks upon it as his drink, and it is a pleaſure to him to drink it off. Chap. 7.

Obſerv. 4. Fourthly, Every Man hath a ſet Portion of Affliction, every Man hath his Cup; It is the cup my Father hath given me to drink: Chriſt himſelf had his Cup, his ſet quantity; He had a Cup that was anſwerable and proportionable to the Sins of thoſe he ſuffered for, God put in a quantity for every Mans Sin, and Chriſt drunk it off to the bottom, the Sins and the Wrath due for them was all wrung into this Cup which Chriſt drunk off, and drunk off heartily. If thou hadſt drunk off that Cup, there had been Eternity in the bottom, and thou couldſt never have wrung out the dregs of it, but he drinks it off heartily, and he thinks much of Peter that went about to hinder him of it; Shall I not drink of the cup which my Father hath given me?

How is his Father ſaid to have given it him?

By decreeing it afore-hand: For he had not yet taken it, he had entred into it indeed, he had taſted of it in the Garden; but he was going on to taſt more of it, and that Cup which his Father by his Decree allotted to him, he willingly takes and ſubmits to it.

And let me add this, Whatſoever Cup it be that God in thy Life affords thee, take it, and go drink it off heartily, for whether thou wilt or no, if it be a Cup he hath given thee, thou ſhalt drink it. In Jer. 25. 15. Go, ſaith God to all the Nations, and ſay unto them all, Drink ye of this cup, and if any of the Nations ſhall refuſe to drink it, tell them, that my people have drank it, therefore they ſhall drink it. Do not therefore only make a neceſſity of it, and becauſe of a neceſſity ſubmit; but do it out of that ingenuity that Chriſt did here, he did not ſubmit meerly out of neceſſity, but with all the willingneſs in the World, The Cup which my Father hath given me, ſhall I not drink it?

CHAP.

CHAP. VIII.

How Chriſt was taken and bound by thoſe who came to Apprehend Him, and was thus led away by them as the Victims, or Sacrifices uſed to be to the Altar. That even this his binding hath an Influence on our being looſened from thoſe Chains, wherein Sin hath fetter'd us.

NOW beginneth the firſt of Chriſt his outward Sufferings, his Sufferings from Men; he had ſuffered from his Father before, in the Garden, where now he was, when he ſweat drops of Blood.

Verſe 12. Then the Band, and the Captain, and Officers of the Jews took Jeſus, and bound him.

In theſe words there are two things conſiderable:

1. The Perſons taking.
2. The Perſon taken.

The Perſons taking, is the Band and the Captain, and the Officers of the Jews.

The Perſon taken, is Chriſt himſelf.

And then here is what they did with him, they took him, and they bound him. Then the Officers and the Captain, and the Band took Jeſus and bound him.

It is ſaid that all of them took him. Certainly all of them at that inſtant could not lay hold upon him; but his being taken is aſcribed unto them all, becauſe they all ruſhed upon him at once with a violence. His throwing of them down backward afore had made them afraid, therefore they break forth with violence, and they did all inviron him and compaſs him about, and in that reſpect it is ſaid they all took him.

You ſhall find in Pſal. 22. (which Pſalm we may indeed call a Crucifix, it being as clear a Story of the Crucifying of Chriſt, as Matth. 26. is.) In that Pſalm the firſt thing in the Story of his Sufferings mentioned there (for the reſt are Prayers) is, Many bulls have compaſſed me, ſtrong bulls of Baſhan have beſet me round, ſo verſe 12. And again, ver. 16. Dogs have compaſſed me, the Aſſembly of the wicked have encloſed me. The Title of that Pſalm (as ſome out of the Hebrew read it) it is the hind of the morning, ſo he calls himſelf, and they like ſo many Hounds here came round about him in a ring to apprehend him, Dogs ſaith he have compaſſed me, which hath an alluſion to the Title of the Pſalm.

Here is likewiſe you ſee a particular mention of the Perſons, here is the Band, and the Captain and the Officers of the Jews; both Jews and Gentiles, which I ſhall give you Obſervations upon anon.

There is one particle which is a very ſmall one, but there is much in it [Then] Then the Captain and the Band and the Officers of the Jews took Jeſus: Some read it (and rightly too) Therefore the Captain, &c. Why therefore? Becauſe that he had afore offered himſelf willingly to them, they could not elſe have taken him. There is a great deal of Emphaſis in that little Particle, as there is in every Tittle of the Scripture. (No man ſaith he, John 10. 18.)

is

is able to take my life from me except I lay it down. Theſe Men whom he had thrown down to the ground had never been able to have laid hands on him, had he not expreſt himſelf willing. Have I not told you, ſaith he, that I am the man? And he ſhewed his willingneſs too in his expreſſion to Peter, Shall I not drink of the cup which my Father hath given me to drink? And [therefore] the Band, and the Captain, and the Officers of the Jewes took Jeſus and bound him. Chap. 8.

All the other Evangeliſts do not tell us that they bound him when they firſt took him. Matthew tells us indeed, chap. 27. 2. that they ſent him bound from Caiaphas the High-Prieſts Hall, to the Common Hall to Pilate. But that he was bound at the firſt taking, and that by them that took him, we are beholden to John for this circumſtance. Now the reaſon of their binding him (I ſpeak now by way of Hiſtorical interpretation of the words) are theſe.

1. Becauſe Judas had bid them (as Matthew tells us) to hold him faſt, Whomſoever I ſhall kiſs ſaith he, that ſame is he, hold him faſt. Matth. 26. 48. For Judas he knew the power of Chriſt, he was privy to his going through the midſt of a whole preſs of men when they would have thrown him down from off the brow of a Hill; therefore ſaith he, when you take him, hold him faſt; and therefore they bind him, and they took him and bound him with that cruelty that the Diſciples all ran away.

2. They bound him likewiſe as one that was worthy of Death, and ſo thereby to prejudge his Sentence. Such the Jewes did uſe to bind, as Jerome ſayes. And it was that which is mentioned, ver. 24. as one great ingredient that had influence into Peters denyal of him, and perſiſting in it the ſecond time that he was ſent bound from Annas, and continued ſtill bound afore Caiaphas, and ſo thereby ſaw there was no hope for him of life; and ſo the more eaſily drawn and tempted to deny him.

3. They bound him likewiſe that they might caſt ſhame upon him, that they might lead him bound, which was proper to Malefactors. And 2 Sam. 3. 33, 34. Davids ſpeech of Abner implyes it; Dyed Abner as a fool, as a malefactour? Thy hands were not bound, nor thy feet put into fetters. Now our dear and bleſſed Lord and Redeemer, he dyed like a vile Perſon in outward appearance: His Hands and his Feet were bound, at leaſt his Hands were bound. And that which might further move them to deal in this manner the more violently with him, was the fetters that he had caſt upon them. And therefore in Pſal. 2. 1, 2, 3. (which Peter quoteth in Acts 4. 25. and applyes to the Crucifying of Chriſt) he mentioneth that as the reaſon; Why do the heathen rage, and the people imagine a vain thing? They are mightily provoked; why? Come let us break their bands aſunder. Chriſt and his Diſciples had extreamly bound them and their Conſciences; now they are even with him, they clap fetters and bands upon him.

4. They did it likewiſe in a way of trophy; and therefore you ſhall find in Matth. 27. 2. when they had bound him, they led him away from the High-Prieſts houſe, in a kind of triumph, to Pilate the Governour.

So you have the Hiſtorical opening of the words, They took Jeſus and bound him. And in all this, and ſo likewiſe in whatſoever befel Chriſt in his Sufferings, there was a further Myſtical meaning, which I term ſo in reſpect of thoſe hidden ends in it. Therefore in the next place we will conſider what was the Myſtery of all this: There was nothing befel Chriſt in his Paſſion, but it was both to fulfil Propheſies, and it was for ſomething anſwering thereunto in us as the cauſe thereof; and in the merit of it, and the benefit by it redounding to us, it hath a ſuitable influence into ſomething about our ſelves.

Firſt, All that befel Chriſt was to fulfil the Types and Propheſies that went of him. The great and moſt eminent Type of Chriſt in his Sufferings, was Iſaac; who was the Son of the Promiſe, as Chriſt was the promiſed Seed. And in Heb 11. the Apoſtle makes him a figure of Chriſts Reſurrection; and as in his Reſurrection ſo in his offering to Death. Now the firſt thing that Abraham did to Iſaac when he was to offer him up as a Sacrifice, was, he took him and bound him, ſo ſaith Gen. 22. 9. And Chriſt here, whom Iſaac typified in his Death as well as in his delivery from Death, was bound.

The Sacrifices of the Old Law, they were firſt led bound to the Prieſt, and then bound to the Horns of the Altar, and there ſlain. So was Chriſt here.

And ſo for Chriſt his taking; for I here put both together: The Ark was a Type of Chriſt, and that you know was taken by the Philiſtines; ſo is Chriſt now.

Adam, he likewiſe was his Type. There was an alluſion in the Sufferings of Chriſt in the Garden unto the firſt Temptation in a Garden. Adam you know ſinned in a Garden, Chriſt he ſuffered in a Garden; there doth the Agony meet him, and there he was taken. And what was the firſt outward act of Sin? How was it put forth? Gen. 3. 6. The woman took of the fruit of the tree (having firſt plucked it off with her hands) and gave it to her husband, and he took it and did eat thereof. In anſwering to this, Chriſt the ſecond Adam, his hands are bound while he was here in the Garden. And as his being bound, ſo alſo this his being taken by them was foreſignified. Thus in Matth. 26. 56. when it is ſaid they took him, it is added, That the ſcriptures of the Prophets might be fulfilled. Now do but look in the Margent of your Bibles, what Scripture is quoted there? What is the place of Scripture that the Tranſlators of the Bible refer to in that Verſe? You ſhall find it to be Lam. 4. 20. and there it is ſaid, The breath of our noſtrils, the anointed of the Lord, (the Meſſiah, the Chriſt, for ſo Anointed ſignifies in the Hebrew, the Chriſt of the Lord) he was taken in their pit, of whom we ſaid, under his ſhadow we ſhall live among the Heathen. This Book of the Lamentation, tho' it was made upon occaſion of the Captivity, yet becauſe the foundation of the Captivity was laid in the taking away of that good King, Joſiah; for after his Death that People had never a good day, they never thrived; ſo that Book relates to him: And it is clear that the Lamentations were made in relation to Joſiah, as well as to the Captivity, by that in 2 Chron. 35. 25. And Jeremiah lamented for Joſiah, (and theſe Lamentations in this Book, you know are the Lamentations of Jeremiah) and all the ſinging men and the ſinging women, ſpake of Joſiah in their Lamentations to this day, and made them an ordinance in Iſrael, and behold, they are written in the Lamentations; that is, in the Book of the Lamentations. Now of Joſiah it is ſaid, He was taken in their pit, ſo we tranſlate it; but others, and the Septuagint agrees with it too, He was taken in their ſins: The Sins of that People were the cauſe of his Death, which is ſaid to be in the Valley of Megiddo. 2 Chron. 35. 32.

But whether is Joſiah a Type of Chriſt or no, that our Tranſlators ſhould refer the taking of Chriſt to the fulfilling of this Propheſie in the Lamentations?

For that, you have Zech. 12. 10, 11. He ſaith there, That he will pour upon the houſe of David, and the inhabitants of Jeruſalem, the ſpirit of prayer and ſupplication, (ſpeaking of the time when they ſhould acknowledge Jeſus Chriſt to be the Meſſiah) and (ſaith he) they ſhall look upon me whom they have pierced, (meaning the Meſſiah) and they ſhall mourn for him, &c. And ver. 11. In that day ſhall there be a great mourning in Jeruſalem as the mourning of Hadadrimmon, in the valley of Megiddon. Now that mourning there was for Joſiah, for there he was taken and arreſted with a deadly wound, whereof he dyed, and was taken and ſlain in the Sins of that Nation, and to that do our Tranſlators refer us; and you ſee he was a Type of Chriſt too, he had kept a Paſſeover, as Chriſt had done, a little afore this; they promiſed themſelves to live ſafely under his ſhadow, even as the Diſciples promiſed themſelves that Chriſt would preſently reſtore the Kingdom unto Iſrael: But he was taken in our Sins, and our Sins were the bands that fettered him.

Secondly, As all this was done to fulfil the Types and Propheſies of him, ſo we ſhall ſee, that our deſerts were the cauſe of it, and that his being bound hath an influence to looſe us from ſomething with which we were bound. For there was nothing betel Chriſt in theſe his Sufferings, nothing was done to him, but what anſwers to ſomething which we had done, and which was to be done toward us. Chap. 8.

1. Our Sins were the cauſe of his binding: Therefore in Pſal. 40. (which alſo is a Pſalm of Chriſt; for it is, part of it, quoted by the Apoſtle in Heb. 10. and applied unto Chriſt, Sacrifices and offerings thou wouldſt not have.) ſaith he at ver. 12. Innumerable evils have taken hold upon me, mine iniquities have compaſſed me about. It is plain my Brethren, that Chriſt ſpeaks this Pſalm of himſelf; he reckoned all our Sins as his own, and by vertue of our Sins encompaſſing us about, and taking hold of us (which in the Garden they did) it is, that theſe Men take hold of Chriſt, and bind him, he ſtanding now in our ſtead: For the truth is, Chriſt he could like Sampſon, have broken all theſe cords aſunder; what weakened him? It was becauſe he was fettered with our Sins. Mine iniquities ſaith he (confeſſing ours to be his) have taken hold upon me; and therefore theſe came all about him like Bees, like Dogs, and ſieze upon him: We were Satans Captives, therefore was he theirs. In ſinning againſt God we break all bands, as the expreſſion is, Jer. 5. 5. therefore is he bound. Our Sins took hold of him firſt, and then the Band and the Officers had power to take him and bind him.

2. Conſider the anſwerable fruit and benefit of it ariſing to us. Hereby we were all bondſlaves to Sin and Satan; 2 Pet. 2. 19. Of whom a man is overcome, of the ſame is he brought in bondage. We were led captive by Satan at his will; ſo ſaith the Apoſtle, 2 Tim. 2. 26. Rom. 7. 23. Sin it inſnareth a Man, Prov. 5. 22. His own iniquities ſhall take the wicked himſelf, and he ſhall be holden with the cords of his ſins. And we were not only in the bands of iniquity, (as the expreſſion is Acts 8. 23.) but we ſhould have been reſerved as the Devil and his Angels are, in Chains of Darkneſs: (Such an expreſſion the Scripture hath in the Epiſtle of Jude, ver. 6. He ſaith the Angels which kept not their firſt eſtate, He hath reſerved in everlaſting chains under darkneſs unto the judgment of the great day; and Peter Ep. 1. chap. 3. ver. 19. ſpeaks of Spirits in Priſon which were once diſobedient in the dayes of Noe.) Chains of the everlaſting Wrath of God and of Guilt, ſhould have bound us over to the great day; bound and bound hand and foot, as you have it in Matth. 22. 13. Take him and bind him hand and foot, and caſt him into everlaſting darkneſs. This was our condition; and now becauſe we were bound with theſe Chains, to the end that we might be ſet free and looſed from them, is Chriſt bound: For it is a certain rule, what ſhould have been done to us, ſomething correſpondent was done to Chriſt; and the vertue and excellency of his Perſon was ſuch, though it was done to his Body, it bringeth us freedom from the like due to our Souls; and by his being thus bound and led, he himſelf afterward when he aſcended, led Captivity captive. You have a place expreſs to this purpoſe, and it is a place that plainly ſpeaks of Chriſt, for it is applyed unto him by the Apoſtle in 1 Cor. 15. 55. the place is Hoſea 13. 14. I will ranſome them from the power of the grave, I will redeem them from death; O Death I will be thy death; O grave I will be thy deſtruction. But what goes before this? See ver. 12. The iniquity of Ephraim is bound up. God had bound up Ephraim and his iniquity together for Hell; ſaith he, I will ranſom them: And how doth he ranſom them? The truth is, by being bound himſelf, he ſtandeth bound before God his Father, (for he deals with his Father in all this, he doth not deal with the Jewes here) and in Gods intentions thoſe fetters that were to be laid upon us were laid upon him, and ſo he cometh to free us by vertue of himſelf being bound; and thus as we ſhould have been arraigned before the Judgment-ſeat of God, ſo was he before Pilate, the Analogy holds all along in his Sufferings.

Therefore you ſhall find the Scripture follows this Metaphor. In Zech. 9. 10. he tells us, by the Blood of the Covenant we are delivered, being priſoners of hope. And in Iſa. 61. 1. and Luke 4. 18. He is ſaid to be anointed to preach liberty to the captives, and the opening of the priſon to them that are bound. And the like you have in Iſa. 42. 7. I have given thee for a covenant of the people, &c. to bring out the priſoners from the priſon, and them that ſet in darkneſs out of the priſon houſe. Hence is it that when he comes to convert a Man to God, he is ſaid to bind the ſtrong Man: Matth. 12. 28. Whence is it that Chriſt hath this ſtrength in him? (I mean meritoriouſly) Becauſe he himſelf was bound, it is by vertue of that that the ſtrong Man is bound.

Laſtly, Will you conſider the Heart of Chriſt all this while? For under his Sufferings it is good to conſider that. Certainly Chriſts Heart was ſenſible of his Sufferings in every particular, none was ever ſo ſenſible as he. Why you ſhall find how his Heart took it, by that ſpeech of his whilſt they were a binding of him. Matthew tells us, Chap. 26. 55. that he ſaid to the multitude at that time, Are ye come out as againſt a thief, with ſwords and ſtaves for to take me? I ſate dayly with you teaching in the temple, and you laid no hold on me: And now they did. And Luke he tells us further, chap. 22. 52. Jeſus ſaid unto the chief prieſts and the captains of the temple, and the elders which were come to him, are ye come out as againſt a thief with ſwords and ſtaves? What to bind me as a thief? To deal ſo diſhonourably with me? This is mentioned as a thing that grieved him, and ſoked into his very Soul. The diſhonour of it did. So to be bound and led was moſt diſhonourable. Thus 2 Sam. 3. 33, 34. David when he lamented over Abner expreſſeth it, Dyed Abner as a fool dyes? That is, as a bold Perſon, a Malefactour, by Juſtice and Law convicted: Thy hands were not bound, nor thy feet put into fetters; as of Malefactors it was uſed to be; yet this was done to Chriſt, his hands were bound in, as of a bold Perſon, and ſo he was led to death. So in Judas his betraying of him, What thou, ſaith he, my familiar friend, that didſt eat bread with me, doſt thou lift up thy heel againſt me? that was it that did ſink into his Spirit. And in that Pſal. 40. 13. you ſhall ſee how this act of theirs pierced his Soul, Mine iniquities have taken hold upon me, innumerable evils have compaſſed me about, ſo that I am not able to look up: His iniquities took hold of his very Soul, while they were incompaſſing him about like Dogs. And Pſal. 22. 12. Be not far from me, for trouble is near: He ſaw them coming. All this affected the Heart of Chriſt; for the Pſalms lay open his Heart as the Evangeliſts do the outward ſtory. So much now both for the Hiſtorical opening of the words, and alſo for that which is the Myſtery of it. I will now come to an Obſervation or two from all this, that was done to our Lord and Saviour Chriſt, and from the Perſons that did it.

Obſerv. 1. Firſt, From the Perſons that did it, they are you ſee all here enumerated; The band, and the Captain, and the Officers of the Jewes. And Luke ſaith, there were ſome of the Chief Prieſts there, (and by Chief Prieſts were meant the heads of the Levites, of which there were twenty four) and the Captains of the Temple as well as the Captain of the Roman Band, and ſome of the Elders of the People. And it is ſaid of them all that they took him, (though all could not lay hold on him) becauſe they all conſented to it, becauſe they all gathered round in a ring about him, that he might not eſcape. Obſerve, that God takes notice particularly of every one that have any hand (yea, he doth aſcribe the act to them if their conſent be but to it) in perſecuting his People, as he did here of theſe that perſecuted Chriſt, for there is the ſame reaſon of both; they are all named, all the ſorts of them are enumerated. He takes notice of any one that doth but cry Aha, at any thing that is done againſt a Child of God. As Edom that cryed Aha; and poor Tyrus in Ezek. 26. 2. becauſe ſhe cryed Aha, and ſaid ſhe ſhould be repleniſhed, ſhe ſhould have the trade now Iſrael was deſtroyed; God takes notice of it, and threatens ruine to her for it.

Obſerv. 2. But Secondly, God did ſo order it, that in all the Sufferings of Chriſt, both Jew and Gentile had a hand in them, in every particular action that did befal him. Here was the Captain of the Roman Band, and the Officers of the Jewes, and here were the High Prieſts and Elders of the People, at the taking of him; both the Eccleſiaſtical and Civil State. So likewiſe when he was condemned (for the Evangeliſts carry it along through all the Story) there was Pilate the Governour, he muſt have a hand in it, and there was Herod that was the King of Galilee, he was ſent to him alſo; and there was the Roman Souldiers, and there were the High Prieſt and the reſt of that Sanhedrim.

Sanhedrim. Eccleſiaſtical State, Civil State, Jews, Gentiles, all have a hand in every particular of the Sufferings of Chriſt.

Obſerv. 3. Thirdly, From the conſideration of Chriſts being bound take this Meditation; let no Affliction, (for all Afflictions are called Bands by the Apoſtle; Remember thoſe that are in bonds, as if ye were bound with them. Heb. 13. 3.) let no Band I ſay, be thought too much by you. Be willing to be bound for Chriſt if he call you to ſuffer; you ſee he was willing to be bound for us. And never let the vileneſs of the Perſons trouble you, which indeed would even make ones Stomach riſe, that ſuch ſhould have to do with a Man, conſider the Lord of Life was apprehended and bound by the baſeſt and vileſt ſort of Men; for commonly ſuch are thoſe that are imployed in ſuch Offices; he was taken by the rude Souldiers, that certainly handled him rudely and with violence; for it is ſaid in Zachary, Zach. 13. 7. I will ſmite the ſhepherd, and the ſheep ſhall be ſcattered: Now they all ran away when he was bound, therefore they ſmote him.

Obſerv. 4. And then again conſider, while Chriſt was bound, all that whole City, the Phariſees and the Jewes, they are free. Whilſt wicked Men do enjoy all liberty and freedom, the Church is bound; ſo Chriſt himſelf was.

Obſerv. 5. And then further, We ſhould therefore prize all the liberty and freedom that the Goſpel affords us, becauſe they are all fruits of Chriſts being bound; Chriſts being bound was it that purchaſed all our liberties.

Obſerv. 6. Laſtly, Let the bands of his Love draw our Hearts; for as I ſaid afore, he could have broken all theſe cords, as Sampſon did thoſe with which he was bound, but the cords of Love bound him as well as the cords of our Sins: It was theſe Cords faſtened him to the Croſs more than the Nails; yea, and bound him there more than our Sins did, or elſe he would never have ſuffered himſelf to be bound. As Paul went up bound in the Spirit to Jeruſalem, bound up in the bands of Love, which made him willing to be bound outwardly, therefore he calls himſelf the Priſoner of Chriſt, and to have the bands of Chriſt upon him, to be the bondman, the Vinctus of Chriſt; ſo doth Chriſt, he is bound with the Cords of Love, ſo they are called, Hoſea 11. 4. I drew them with the cords of a man, with the bands of love. Oh let the Love of Chriſt bind us and conſtrain us, (as the phraſe is 2 Cor. 5. 14.) to bring every high thought into ſubjection, into captivity unto him; ſo he was for us. And ſo much for this firſt circumſtance, or this firſt beginning of the outward Sufferings of our Lord and Saviour Chriſt, his being bound: And they bound him.

Verſe 13. And they led him away to Annas firſt, (for he was Father in law to Caiaphas) which was the High-Prieſt that ſame year.

The Scripture doth put much, as upon his being bound, ſo upon his being led away. And my Brethren, as we go along in opening of theſe Sufferings of Chriſt, carry in your thoughts ſtill the Perſon to whom all this was done; it was our Lord and Saviour Jeſus Chriſt: Every thing he did in a way of Suffering, how great muſt it be think you, when nothing befel him but what was appointed him by his Father, and that in relation to the taking away of our Sins?

They led him away.] The truth is, his being led up and down is noted in the ſtory as one eminent thing in his Suffering, and therefore is not to be paſt by. Thoſe that have made the Topography of Jeruſalem and thoſe places, do account it to be ſeven miles that he was led up and down from firſt to laſt afore he was Crucified, which was an exceeding great indignity to him: They hurried him firſt from the Garden to Annas his Houſe; from thence (as another Evangeliſt tells us) he was led to Caiaphas; Matthew tells us he was led from thence to Pilate to the Common Hall; from Pilate he was led to Herod; from Herod he was led back to Pilate again; from Pilate when he had ſentenced him, he was led to the Croſs. Thus was our Lord and Saviour Chriſt toſſed up and down, and there is particular mention made of them all, which could not chooſe but put him to a great deal of pain and trouble.

And

Book V.

And my Brethren, do but conſider, do but think of any Perſon that is a Perſon of worth, that ſhould be hurryed thus up and down from place to place, with his hands mannicled, all the People following him, uſing all manner of Indignities to him, think of one that you praiſe and value either for the Goſpels ſake or otherwiſe; I ſay, do but think of ſuch a one, and then behold our Lord and our Saviour Chriſt in all his toſſings, and le dings up and down. I remember there is this Expreſſion in one of the Pſalms, I am as a graſhopper, ſaith he, becauſe he was thus hurried and turmoiled from place to place; his heart was ſenſible of this.

But what is the Miſtery of this? For ſtill let us look to the inward part of it as well as to the Hiſtory it ſelf.

Firſt, There was a Type in it, for every Sacrifice was firſt led to the High Prieſt, and then offered, Levit. 17. 5. So Chriſt, being to be made a Sacrifice for Sin, he is carryed to the High Prieſt, in the way he goes to Annas indeed, but afterwards from him he was led to Caiaphas who was High Prieſt that year. And to make up the Type more full, which is a thing exceeding obſervable, It is ſaid in Iſa. 53. 7. that after our ſins were laid upon him, and that the iniquities of us all did take hold on him, He was [led] as a ſheep to the ſlaughter. Now you muſt know that the Garden from whence he was led ſtood at the bottom of the Mount of Olives beyond the Brook Cedron, and the Gate which was next to that place thorough which he was to go into the City, vvas called the Sheep-gate, for it vvas nigh the Temple, vvhich ſtood on that ſide of Hieruſalem, and the Sheep and Oxen (but eſpecially the Sheep, for they ſacrificed moſt of them) that vvere to be ſacrificed vvere fed in the Meadovvs and Fields of Cedron, and from thence they vvere led through that Gate to the Temple to be ſacrificed, vvhich therefore vvas called the Sheep-gate. To make up the Type therefore more full, and that you may ſee how the Scripture opens it ſelf in theſe things, he is led as a Sheep to the Slaughter to be a Sacrifice for Sin (for ſo the Prophet ſaith he was) even through the Sheep-gate.

My Brethren, all we like Sheep have gone aſtray, (ſo the ſame Prophet ſaith) and becauſe we had taken our wills in Sin, and went whether we would, therefore Chriſt is bound and led away. It was all becauſe of our wanderings. He was led away as a Sheep to the Slaughter, therefore in Heb. 13. it is ſaid he was brought back again, he having been firſt led away as here to Death, as he was brought back again through the Reſurrection, it is a Phraſe that hath relation to his being led away.

How are we toſſed to and fro, hurried up and down with divers luſts, with every wind of our inordinate Affections! Our Lord and Saviour Chriſt was therefore led from place to place, poſted up and down.

And in all theſe leadings of his, God ſtill would have both the Civil and Eccleſiaſtical State to have a hand and ſome Intereſt in every ſort of his Sufferings. He was led to Annas that had been High Prieſt, and then to Caiaphas that was the preſent High Prieſt, they were the Chief of the Church as it may be called; and then to Pilate the Roman Governour, and then to Herod the King of Galilee. All the powers that were then in Hieruſalem and over Hieruſalem, and in thoſe Countreys he was brought afore them all, that they might all have a hand and a concurrence in his ruine, that God might make his Sufferings every way compleat; that all theſe might caſt diſhonour and diſgrace upon him. For as Honour depends upon the Honourer (That's truly Honour when a Perſon of worth honoureth one) ſo God would have the diſgrace and contempt that was caſt upon Chriſt to depend upon the worth of the Perſons that diſhonoured him. Therefore whatever was excellent in that State, either of Kingly Power, or Eccleſiaſtical, whatſoever pretended to Wiſdom or Juſtice, or Learning or Religion; God order'd it that all theſe ſhould have a hand in the condemnation of Chriſt, and ſo they had. The Eminency of Learning and Religion was amongſt the Chief Prieſts, they profeſt it and pretended to it. Of Juſtice in Pilate. Of Excellency and Kingly-Power in Herod. All theſe concurred. Therefore if the Saints in after Ages find that they are condemned by all ſorts, let them not wonder at it. Chap. 8.

And Laſtly, He was led out of the Garden whither he uſed to go for the enjoyment of Communion with his Father (for the Evangeliſts ſay that to that place he did often reſort to pray) and indeed it was his Paradiſe where he had infinite ſweet Fellowſhip and Communion with God. Now as Adam was driven out of the Garden, out of Paradiſe, where he had Communion with God, as a puniſhment for his Sin, ſo is our Lord and Saviour Chriſt led out of this Garden, which I ſay was to him a Paradiſe, and carryed to dye and to offer up himſelf a Sacrifice for Sin. And ſo much now for his leading; They led him.

To Annas firſt, for he was Father in Law to Caiaphas which was the High Prieſt that ſame year.

For the opening of the Hiſtorical meaning of theſe words, I ſhall do Two things.

1. Shew who this Annas was, as the Text here holds him forth.
2. Open the reaſons why he was led firſt to him.

1. Who he was. Joſephus who writes the Story of theſe times calls him Annanas. Certainly he was the greateſt Man amongſt the Jews (of a Jew) and of the moſt illuſtrious Family: Which will appear thus; He himſelf had been High Prieſt formerly, ſo you have it, Luke 3. 1. In the fifteenth year of Tiberius, Annas and Caiaphas being High Prieſts, the word of the Lord came unto John, &c. And the High Prieſt was the Supreameſt Officer, and in higheſt place among the Jews, though the Romans had the Civil Power in their hands. Here you ſee his Son in Law Caiaphas, who marryed his Daughter or otherwiſe his Son in Law, was High Prieſt after him, himſelf ſtill living; and after Caiaphas, Joſephus tells us, that Eleazar a Son of his own was High Prieſt alſo. So that his Family was ths greateſt Family among the Jews that lived at Hieruſalem, being thus greatned by having the High Prieſthood ſucceſſively amongſt them, for ſo they had, therefore in Act. 4. 2. you read of Annas and Caiaphas and John and Alexander, and as many as were of the kindred of the High Prieſt were gathered together againſt the Apoſtles at Hieruſalem, they followed their old Trade ſtill, and as they had their hands imbrued in the Blood of Chriſt, ſo in the Apoſtles too. Now to this Man is our Lord and Saviour Chriſt firſt brought.

2. Why brought to Annas firſt? Some ſay becauſe he being ſo great a Man and his Houſe lying in the way to Caiaphas (as indeed it did if we may believe the new Deſcription of Hieruſalem, and the Relation of thoſe that have viſited it, for they ſay we have firſt ſhown you the Houſe of Annas, and then the houſe of Caiaphas) he was therefore led thither firſt. But ſurely that is not all the reaſon. It is a Circumſtance not mentioned by any of the Evangeliſts, but by John, and therefore here muſt be ſome other ground for their leading of him firſt to the Houſe of Annas. For we read in Matth. 26. 57. and in Mar. 14. 53. That all the Chief Prieſts, and the Elders, and the Scribes were aſſembled at Caiaphas his Houſe attending the Iſſue of Judas his Plot, and waiting when Chriſt ſhould be brought thither. For them therefore to interrupt their going directly to Caiaphas his Houſe, where all the Council was ſet, and to carry him firſt to the Houſe of Annas, it muſt needs be for ſome ſpecial reaſon. To me therefore there are theſe two reaſons of it.

The firſt is that which is expreſly mentioned by John himſelf here in the Text; for (ſaith he) he was Father in law to Caiaphas, which implies that Caiaphas either becauſe he honoured his Father in Law who was the Head of that great Family, had given ſome ſecret order to the Officers to lead him firſt thither; or rather indeed, becauſe they would gratifie that great Man who was the Chief of them that had been High Prieſts, and withal becauſe they would gratifie Caiaphas too, whom they knew they ſhould pleaſe by doing this Honour to his Father in Law. They carryed him to him as a ſight, as a ſpectacle, Lo here we have him that is the great Enemy to the High

Prieſts

Book V.

Prieſts Office, that would ſubvert the Law, and pull down the Temple, this is the prey we have looked long for. And as in a way of gratification Pilate afterward ſent him to Herod, ſo in a way of like gratification he is here carried to Annas firſt, ſent to him as a gift to chear and glad his heart. As in Rev. 11. 10. in alluſion to the Death of Chriſt (for that Chapter carries on that alluſion) ſpeaking of the Witneſſes being kill'd in that place where our Lord was crucified, he ſaith, they ſhall rejoyce over them, and make merry, and ſhall ſend gifts one to another, becauſe theſe two prophets tormented them; ſo here when they had gotten Chriſt that had tormented them ſo; they were ſo glad they had got him that in merriment Caiaphas gives order to have him carried to Annas as a gift and gratification to him, and ſo Pilate ſent him to Herod. Thus to ſhew their Joy and Triumph, they ſend our Lord and Saviour Chriſt thus bound from one to another, Loe here is the Man that would deſtroy the Law, and then all our Honour muſt down, we have him now faſt enough, for indeed there is nothing that more pleaſeth the revenge of People malicious againſt Chriſt or againſt his Saints, then to ſee them in their hands, and to ſee them under, and to ſee them down. Come, ſay they in Pſal. 2. 3. let us break their bonds, and caſt away their cords from us. And certainly this circumſtance is on purpoſe mentioned by John as an aggravation of the Sufferings of Chriſt, that they not only carryed him to the High Prieſt, but to gratifie this wretched Man, that was his deſperate and moſt deadly Enemy, whom they knew not only hated him, but that of all other Men this ſight of Chriſt being taken and bound would be moſt acceptable to him, they carry him to his Houſe firſt of all; this I ſay aggravateth the Sufferings of Chriſt the more.

But Secondly, He was carryed thither alſo, that there might be an approbation viſible before all the People of Annas his approving of the Fact, he being the greateſt Family of all the reſt amongſt the Jews. Therefore the 24. verſe of this Chapter tells us, that Annas ſent him bound to Caiaphas the High Prieſt, that was all he did, he did not command them to unlooſe him, but approved what they had done in taking and binding him, and in a way of approbation ſent him bound to the High Prieſts Hall, which was a Matter of great prejudice unto Chriſt, and ſerved a little alſo to take the envy off from Caiaphas.

My Brethren, What a great deal of do is here about a poor Man, in view a Carpenters Son! And how glad were the great ones of the World when they had got him down! And ſo it hath been in all Ages, the getting down of a poor Saint, it hath been the greateſt Glory to Men carnal; as if they had done ſo great a Matter. When they have gotten the Witneſſes down, as one day they will, they make merry and ſend gifts one to another. The poor Diſciples all this while were a weeping, while they were making merry; ſo Chriſt himſelf ſaid it ſhould be, John 16. 20. The world ſhall make merry, but you ſhall weep.

If therefore at any time we ſhould be made Spectacles unto Men for Chriſt's ſake, and ſhould be thus ſerved as Chriſt was, than which there is nothing more grievous to a great Spirit, for Miſery and Shame is more than Death to King, and Saul would not fall into the hands of the Philiſtines, leaſt they mock me, ſaith he, 1 Sam. 31. 4. If I ſay any of us ſhould be ſo ſerved, made a Spectacle to Angels and Men, as the Apoſtle ſaith, 1 Cor. 4. 7. Do but remember how they led our Lord and Saviour Chriſt up and down as a Trophy, as a ſight to chear and gratifie thoſe that were his Enemies. So much for this that he was ſent to Annas firſt that was Father in Law to Caiaphas. Of Caiaphas it is ſaid, ——He was High Prieſt that ſame year.

There are ſome that would make both Annas and Caiaphas to have been High Prieſts together, becauſe in that place Luke 3. 2. it is ſaid, That John did baptize in the time when Annas and Caiaphas were High Prieſts. But the meaning of that is this, that they were High Prieſts in their Order; in the beginning beginning of Johns Preaching Annas was High Prieſt, and after him ſucceeded Caiaphas. Chap. 8.

But why is it ſaid he was High Prieſt that ſame year?

It is a thing which John obſerveth and none elſe. He uſeth that phraſe by way of Emphaſis, you have it twice repeated in the 11th Chapter, ver. 49. Caiaphas being High Prieſt that ſame year; and ver. 51. He being High Prieſt that year: And you ſee it is noted here, and noted with an Emphaſis; now that it ſhould be twice noted in one Chapter within the compaſs of two or three Verſes, and here again, there muſt be ſome ſpecial reaſon for it. It is not that the High Prieſts Office did go year by year, as Mayors in Incorporate Towns do with us, a new one choſe every year. It is clear by the Story in Joſephus, that Caiaphas was ſeven years (ſome ſay more) High Prieſt: It is therefore added, He was High Prieſt [that ſame year], though he was more years beſides, yet it fell out that he ſhould be High Prieſt that year, when under his Authority and by his Power in a more eſpecial manner, and by his Counſel, the Lord of Life ſhould be Crucifyed.

And yet withal 2. It is to note and to hold up this before our eyes, the great corruption that was about the Prieſts Office when Chriſt was Crucified: For in Numb. 35. 25. and ſo in Joſh. 20. 6. you ſhall find that according to Gods inſtitution the High Prieſts were not to be removed, but he was to continue in that Office during his Life. And likewiſe he was to be the eldeſt Son of the Family of Aaron. Now to ſhew that this was out of courſe; for the truth is, the Jews being oppreſt by the Syrian Kings, and afterward by the Romans, they ſold the High Prieſthood as themſelves pleaſed, and put in new ones as often as they would, contrary to the inſtitution of God at firſt. To ſhew I ſay the corruption that was then amongſt them, this is particularly noted with an emphaſis, Caiaphas was High Prieſt that ſame year, though Annas that had been High Prieſt was yet alive.

To give you an Obſervation or two from this. He was High Prieſt that ſame year: And if you read John 11. 51. By reaſon that he was High Prieſt that year, he propheſied that Jeſus ſhould dye for that nation.

The Obſervation I make from thence is this: That if a Man be in a place that is an Office inſtituted by God, though he came into it corruptly, and is not ſuch a one as ought to be in it; yet whilſt he is in it, God doth more or leſs accompany him according to his own inſtitution. This inſtance here is clear for this, for it is certain that the High Prieſts then were not lawfully called to that Office; for there were three circumſtances which made their calling unlawful (I do not ſay unlawful in it ſelf, for the ſubſtance, but unlawful for the act of calling:) 1. They were not of the Tribe of Levi, and of the eldeſt Sons of Aaron, for ſo the Inſtitution was, it ſhould have gone by Birth, as in Exod. 40. 15. 2. They had not the place for their Lives, but were changed and altered at pleaſure. 3. They were choſen by the Roman Prætors, and by Pilate the Roman Governour, and ſo it was ordinarily bought and ſold for Money. Yet notwithſtanding Chriſt, he comes to that worſhip which this High Prieſt performed, though he came into the place corruptly; and the acts which he performed (he being in the room of the High Prieſt) were valid. I ſay, the acts he performed as High Prieſt (tho' unlawfully called) when he went into the Holy of Holies every year, they were acts of Worſhip, and they were valid, why? becauſe the Office it ſelf was a place of Gods inſtitution. For otherwiſe Chriſt had not had opportunity to have fulfilled the whole Ceremonial Law, if that the going in of this High Prieſt into the Holy of Holies had not continued and been in uſe; but it is clear it continued; for it is ſaid, Paul went up to the Feaſt, that is, the great Feaſt when the Prieſt went in to the Holy of Holies. Chriſt you know he was to fulfil the whole Ceremonial Law, which he could not have done, if he had not come to that Feaſt which was once a year, for there was a Curſe upon him that did not, his Soul ſhould be cut off from the Congregation, and upon that day the High Prieſt went into the Holy of Holies, and performed thoſe great acts of Worſhip that was to be done. If Chriſt had not been preſent at this Feaſt, and at theſe performances, he had not fulfilled the Law; ſurely therefore when the High Prieſt was doing his Office, Chriſt was preſent and did communicate in this caſe with this Prieſt, and with theſe Jews, and yet this Man had not a Lawful Calling to the High Prieſthood for the manner of it, but becauſe for the ſubſtance of his Calling it was Lawful, and he was in that Office, the acts he did were valid. Even as it is in the Laws of this Kingdom; although Richard the Third came into the place of being King Unlawfully, yet becauſe when he was in it, it was that Lawful place ſettled by this State; therefore the Earls that he made, or the Barons, or the Acts of Parliament that he confirmed, they were all valid; for whilſt he was in that place, the place was it (being that which was ſettled by the Law) that gave a validity to all ſuch Acts of his. So it is here. And therefore let it never be ſaid, that becauſe Miniſters are not oftentimes ſo called to their places as they ought to be, come not in ſo rightly as they ſhould by the choice of thoſe whom it depends upon, that therefore they are not Lawful Miniſters. Lawful in this ſenſe, that the Acts they do are valid, and are Miniſterial Acts. And indeed it were a hard caſe if the lawfulneſs of all Mens being Baptized, or receiving the Sacrament, or the like, ſhould depend upon the lawfulneſs of the Mans being called to his place. It depends upon the Office that Jeſus Chriſt hath inſtituted in his Church, and ſo far forth as there is any thing of his inſtitution, he will follow it with his Bleſſing. The Ordinances of Chriſt, the validity of them doth not depend upon the Lawful Call of the Miniſter, and therefore it is no Argument to ſay, ſuch a Man had an Unlawful Calling to the Miniſtry in that place where I was Baptized, therefore my Baptiſm is invalid: For the act and manner of his Call may be Unlawful, yet he being in that place, he is for thoſe acts a Lawful Miniſter of Chriſt, and his acts are ſo accounted by God. So it was here; Caiaphas being in the room of the High Prieſt, the acts he did were acts of the High Prieſt, and were valid: And yet further, to ſhew that God himſelf reſpected him as High Prieſt, God put into his mouth that Propheſie; therefore it is ſaid in John 11. 51. This ſpake he, not of himſelf, but being High Prieſt that year, he propheſied. So that God himſelf was with him as High Prieſt, tho' for the manner of his calling to this place, he was not lawfully and truly the High Prieſt.

Obſerv. 2. Then again another Obſervation that I may make from hence is this. This Annas it is ſaid, was Father in Law to Caiaphas. You ſee novv by this, hovv dangerous it is oftentimes to the Souls of others to be linked in affinity vvith Men that are carnal and vvicked. Hovv many a Mans Soul is undone by his Father in Lavv, or perhaps the Father in Lavv by the Son; or the Husband by the Wife, and the Wife by the Husband. In all likelyhood theſe tvvo here, Annas the Father in Lavv, and Caiaphas the Son in Lavv, are both mentioned, as having drawn one another into this great conſpiracy againſt our Lord and Saviour Chriſt, and joyning the more heartily in it, the one engaging the other in this vvicked deſign. And therefore Men ſhould very much conſider into vvhat Families they marry, for if into a vvicked Family, it may be an occaſion of much evil to them. Men are dravvn to much vvickedneſs, or ſtrengthened in much vvickedneſs by their Relations, as Annas and Caiaphas vvere here for the Crucifying of Chriſt, having this Relation of Father in Lavv and Son in Lavv.

Obſerv. 3. Laſtly, Theſe two Annas and Caiaphas, they are here noted out in a peculiar manner, above all the reſt of the Phariſees, as the moſt eminent enemies, and thoſe that did moſt malign our Lord and Saviour Chriſt. Obſerve that God takes ſpecial and particular notice of thoſe that are the moſt eminent enemies of Chriſt and his Saints. Still you ſee Annas and Caiaphas are mentioned, certainly it is according to their hatred, theſe two had a deeper malignity againſt Chriſt than other of the Phariſees had; and therefore you read of them again in Acts 4. 6. Annas the High Prieſt, and Caiaphas, and John, and Alexander, they are all reckoned up, they had their hands imbrued in the blood of Chriſt, and they go on, and that's the curſe of it, that the ſame Men ſhould finiſh up their iniquity, by laying hold of the Apoſtles too. And in a more ſpecial manner you ſee there is an Emphaſis put put upon Caiaphas, for it is ſaid, He was High Prieſt that ſame Year: It is noted out as the greateſt Curſe that could befal that wretched Man, he having ſo much malignity in his heart againſt Chriſt that it ſhould be his lot to be then High Prieſt, when he had opportunity enough to vent it. So that Men of much malice againſt the People of God, to them doth God give oftentimes moſt power, and dignity, and ability to do moſt miſchief; Caiaphas he is put into the High Prieſthood, and the Providence of God ordereth it ſo that this Man had a more ſpecial enmity againſt Chriſt, as the next words imply; It was he that gave the counſel that one Man ſhould dye for the People, and that Man muſt be Jeſus Chriſt. And ſo I come to handle that. Chap. 8.

Verſe 14. Now Caiaphas was he that gave Counſel to the Jews, that it was expedient that one man ſhould dye for the People.

It implies, that Caiaphas was the firſt Man that made the motion to have Chriſt put to death, and that with the ſtrongeſt and moſt taking plauſible reaſon that could be ſuppoſed.

In handling this Verſe, I ſhall do Two things.

1. Open the words.
2. Give the Reaſons why they are brought in here.

And Firſt, To open the words. Now Caiaphas was he, that gave counſel to the Jews that it was expedient for one man to dye for the people. The words you ſee refer to an act formerly done by him. You are therefore to have recourſe to John 11. 49, 50. where you ſhall find the ſame thing recorded; only there it comes in as a Propheſie, here as Counſel given by himſelf. You know nothing, (ſaith he there; he ſpeaks it like a carnal proud High Prieſt, as if he only had knowledge, taking the Glory of this Counſel to himſelf,) nor conſider that it is expedient for us that one man ſhould dye for the people, and that the whole nation periſh not. And this (ſaith John) ſpake he not of himſelf, but being High Prieſt that year, he propheſied that Jeſus ſhould dye for that nation. And yet that he did ſpeak this of himſelf too, is clear by theſe words in the Text, for it is brought in here as his great Sin, and a brand is put upon him for it; This is he, ſaith the Text, even as a brand was put upon Ahaz; 2 Chron. 28. 22. This is that King Ahaz; ſo, this is that wicked Caiaphas, this is he that was the firſt contriver, the firſt Man that made the motion, that gave the counſel to have Chriſt put to death.

It's ſtrange that one and the ſame act ſhould be from the Spirit of God, and called Propheſie, and ſaid not to be ſpoken of himſelf; and the ſame act to be of himſelf, and called counſel, and one of the greateſt Sins that hath been committed. But the meaning is this, that howſoever he had a moſt wicked end in this ſpeech, yet notwithſtanding, the Holy Ghoſt (before he was aware) guided his Tongue to ſpeak (though he knew it not) that which was a Truth, and indeed a Propheſie. He ſpake this not of himſelf, ſaith John, that is, not knowing or intending to Propheſie, for as it came from him it was ſpoken out of ſpleen, and malice, and hatred unto Chriſt: And yet he took upon him to ſpeak like an High Prieſt; you know nothing at all ſaith he, I am now the High Prieſt, and I deliver this to you as an Oracle, that it is expedient for one man to dye for the people; and the Holy Ghoſt intended his words ſhould be ſpoken as the High Prieſt. This he ſpake not of himſelf, but being High Prieſt that year he Propheſied; not that the High Prieſts uſed to Propheſie, or that he himſelf uſed to Propheſie, but being High Prieſt that year, an Emphaſis lies in that, wherein Chriſt was to be Crucified, God raiſed up that Ordinance of High Prieſthood above the ordinary uſe of it: He being the higheſt Perſon in that State. And you ſee he delivers it as a State Axiome, and yet with extream cunning; It is fit, ſaith he, that one man ſhould dye for the People. He doth not ſay that it is fit that Jeſus ſhould dye, (he doth not expreſs it ſo at firſt) or that this Man ſhould dye who is a Rebel or a Blaſphemer; but it is fit one Man (let it be him or any one elſe) ſhould dye for the Nation, and what is one Mans Life to the Nation; and ſo conſequently he implies, that ſeeing it is this Mans lot to diſturb the State, and to indanger it by bringing in the Romans amongſt us, it is fitteſt that he ſhould dye rather than the People ſhould periſh. And yet if you mark it, (to ſhew the wickedneſs of his ſpeech yet further) though he puts a publick face upon it, and pretends the preſervation of the Nation, yet the thing he aimed at was the preſervation of the Clergy only, and that moved him ſo much: Saith he, You conſider nothing at all that it is expedient for us that one man ſhould dye. It is expedient for us, that's his expreſſion; for us that are or ſhall be High Prieſts, our Calling will down unleſs this Man be taken out of the way.

So much for the opening of the words.

Now Secondly, To give you the Reaſons, why he (having ſaid it before in Chap. 11. 50.) brings it again here in this place.

1. It was to ſet a brand of maliciouſneſs more eminently upon this Caiaphas then upon any Man elſe; and to ſhew alſo what an accurſed Man he was in this, that the motive or the reaſon that ſhould ſtick with them all, why they ſhould ſo fixedly reſolve to kill Chriſt (for you muſt know, this ſpeech was firſt ſpoken at a conſultation they had about taking of him) ſhould come firſt from him. To ſet, I ſay, a note and a brand upon Caiaphas in a more eminent manner, is this circumſtance here by the Holy Ghoſt inſerted, he being the moſt deſperate and malicious enemy of Chriſt amongſt all the Phariſees; for certainly God choſe out the wickedeſt Man among all the Jews to be in the place of the High Prieſt that year, that he and his Father in Law Annas ſhould eminently have their hands in his Crucifying.

2. It likewiſe comes in here, to ſhew upon how ſlight grounds our Lord and Saviour Chriſt was Crucified, it was meerly but upon politick conſiderations (as to them) and that upon but imaginary ſuppoſitions neither, that the Nation muſt periſh elſe; (for ſo as it came from Caiaphas it was meant, though God guided it to be a Propheſie.) And ſo it clears the innocency of Chriſt ſo much the more, that the High Prieſt himſelf in his Council about putting him to death ſhould only go upon this politick reaſon, that it was fit one Man ſhould dye for the Nation. They only did it as a State-buſineſs, and that I ſay but upon a meer imagination that the Romans would elſe come and take away their place and Nation.

3. It is premiſed unto all the other Sufferings of Chriſt that follow, and it is inſerted here in that paſſage of the Story of his leading to Caiaphas, to ſhew, that there was no equity to be expected in all their proceedings againſt him. Why? Becauſe they had reſolved before ever they took him to put him to death, and that upon a State conſideration, and therefore they would be ſure to keep to their own reſolutions, whether he were innocent or not innocent, whether they could convict him or not convict him. And Caiaphas having ſpoken ſo peremptorily, (ye know nothing at all, neither conſider that it is expedient for one Man to dye for the Nation;) he being the great Oracle in this buſineſs, he would certainly proſecute Chriſt according to his own words, therefore there was no favour to be expected. And to this end alſo doth the Holy Ghoſt record it here.

4. But to me the chiefeſt reaſon is this. You know it was foretold of Chriſt that he ſhould not dye for himſelf; ſo you have it in Iſa. 53. 4. Surely he hath born our griefs and carried our ſorrows, yet we did eſteem him ſtricken of God and afflicted; ſo did the Apoſtles and thoſe that beheld him. It was not for himſelf that he was ſtricken or afflicted; no, there was ſomething elſe in it, it was for others; He hath born our griefs and carried our ſorrows, and he was wounded for our tranſgreſſions, &c. Now to the end that you ſhould not onely have a word of Scripture for this, but a Teſtimony alſo even from the mouths of the Jews, and from the mouth of the High Prieſt himſelf for it, hence therefore is the Holy Ghoſt ſo diligent to record this paſſage, that it is expedient that one man ſhould dye for the people; which though Caiaphas meant meant one way, God meant another way, and therefore it is added, and not for that Nation only, but that he ſhould gather together in one the children of God that were ſcattered abroad. And therefore as it was Council in Caiaphas, it was a Propheſie in God. And ſo you have the reaſons why this paſſage comes in here. Now to give you ſome Obſervations out of it.

Obſerv. 1. You ſee here what Miſchiefs and Sins-State policie oft-times put great Men upon; How much State-Intereſts prevail to move Men againſt the Saints and the purity of Religion. State-policie here was the cauſe of the Death of Chriſt. And yet this very Act of theirs in crucifying the Lord of Life brought Miſchief upon the State. Here is Caiaphas he brings the moſt Authentick State-Axiome that was ever brought, It's but a ſmall matter, ſaith he, 'tis but one Mans Life, and 'tis better for one Man to dye than the State ſhould periſh: He did it I ſay out of the greateſt Worldly Wiſdom that ever Man did, and yet you know what followed. By this we may come to underſtand that place in 1 Cor. 2. 8. where ſpeaking of the crucifying of Chriſt, ſaith he, We ſpeak the Wiſdom of God in a miſtery, which none of the Princes of this World knew, for had they known it, they would not have crucified the Lord of Life; but ſaith he, as for the Wiſdom of this World, and of the Princes of the World it comes to nought, for (as it is chap. 3. 19.) The Wiſdom of this World is fooliſhneſs with God, for it is written, he taketh the wiſe in their own craftineſs. By the Princes of this World it is evident that he means the Jews, the Phariſees and the Rulers, Pilate and Herod and the reſt that put Chriſt to Death; this great Synedrim here, Annas and Caiaphas and their Fellows, and Pilate; for he went upon the ſame worldly Principle too, for when as the Jews told him that if he did not put Chriſt to Death he was not Cæſars Friend, the Text ſaith, Therefore when Pilate heard that ſaying, Go crucifie him, ſaith he, 'twas ſtate-policie did it. They all thought they were ſo wiſe in putting Chriſt to Death upon this State Axiome (and it was a fair one.) This Wiſdom, ſaith the Apoſtle, came to nought, God made the Wiſdom of the World fooliſhneſs, for alas, were ever Men befooled as theſe Men were? For this very crucifying of Chriſt was their ruine, that brought the Romans upon them. Yea, if you read Joſephus and others, you ſhall find that that which ſtrengthened them to rebel againſt the Romans was their very looking for the Meſſiah and the Propheſies they had, that about that time the Meſſiah ſhould come.

Obſerv. 2. A Second Obſervation that I ſhall make upon this is this, That a State is not to put a Man to Death meerly and ſimply for the Publick good, unleſs he is an Offender. For here this State Maxime the Phariſees and Pilate took up and uſed as the great plauſible Argument to the People, yet it being againſt a Mans Life ſuppoſed innocent, (whether they knew him to be the Chriſt or not) it is noted as an high and mighty injury, and as an Act of the greateſt injuſtice in them. It is the greateſt inſtance this that can be, that no evil is to be done that good may come by it. An innocent Man is not to be put to Death, nor innocent Men to be injured or wronged (if they be innocent) for a publick good. A Mans Life is not to be taken away meerly to ſave a State. Indeed if a caſe of neceſſity lie ſo as that a Man offer himſelf freely up for the ſaving of a State, as ſome Noble Romans have done, that's another matter; but to condemn a Man to Death ſimply to ſave a State, ought not to be.

Obſerv. 3. You may obſerve, That Carnal Men when they would prevail with others to do any thing, they will ſpeak to their very luſts. All their hearts here were on fire againſt Jeſus Chriſt; Caiaphas now ſpeaks the higheſt reaſon to the luſts of the Jews that could be, invents a reaſon upon which they ſhould put him to Death, a moſt plauſible one, colours it over ſo cunningly as might take with all the people. It is better, ſaith he, that one Man be put to Death than that the whole Nation ſhould periſh; he knew this would move them all, and all that is in them. I ſay he gave Counſel to their Luſts, and ſo you ſhall have Carnal Men to do, ſpeak to Mens Luſts, and vent their own Luſts too, vent their own Malice; for ſo Caiaphas did. It is expedient for us ſaith he, for us that are the Prieſts, but puts it upon the People, that one Man ſhould dye for the People.

Obſerv. 4. Obſerve hence likewiſe, what a dangerous thing it is to be the firſt mover in any great wickedneſs. Here you ſee Caiaphas, becauſe he was the firſt that gave Counſel againſt Chriſt, he is noted out in a way of Eminency with this brand upon him, This is he that gave counſel that it was expedient for one man to dye for the nation. He did it cunningly and plauſibly, but God for all that took notice of it, and lays this great load upon him, This is the Man. Therefore I ſay to be the firſt mover and leader in a wicked buſineſs as Annas and Caiaphas was in the great buſineſs of Crucifying of Chriſt, is a dangerous thing. And you ſee one wicked cunning Man will carry the whole: Caiaphas here ſpake ſuch great reaſons that he carryed them all; but ſuch Men of all others that are the Counſellors in Evil, and that are the firſt Counſellors in Evil, though they glory and pride themſelves in it (as certainly this Man did, You know nothing at all ſaith he) ſuch Men will God brand, as he branded him here, and their Damnation ſhall be great at laſt. Poor Caiaphas, there was another that gave Council that Jeſus Chriſt ſhould be put to death afore thou didſt, and that was God the Father, for in Acts 4. 28. Both Herod and Pontius Pilate with the Gentiles and the People of Iſrael, were gathered together, for to do whatſoever thy hand and thy counſel determined before to be done. There was not only his Wiſdom, his Counſel, but his Hand, his Power in it, though it was the greateſt ſin in the World. Yea God the Father had given Counſel to Chriſt himſelf to do it before ever Caiaphas had ſpoken, Pſal. 16. 7. I will bleſs the Lord who hath given me counſel; And what was the Counſel he gave him? He bad him dye for his People, and he would raiſe him up, and therefore My reins inſtruct me in the night ſeaſon, ſaith he; that Night when he was in the Garden, and when he was before Pilate; Gods Counſel was to him to do it, before-hand, and he bleſſed God that gave him that Counſel. This Pſalm is a Pſalm in relation to Chriſt, and it is ſpoken of his Death and Reſurrection.

Obſerv. 5. Laſtly, Obſerve this, That oftentimes the Speeches of great Perſons (as of Fathers concerning their Children, &c.) which they do not ſpeak prophetically, as in their intentions, yet they are ſo in the event. As Homer brings in the dream of Agamemnon: So Pharaoh dreamed, and Nebuchadnezzar dreamed. Yea oftentimes Princes and others do utter Speeches that have a Prophetical meaning in them in the concluſion. It is dangerous therefore for a Man to curſe himſelf, to wiſh this or that upon himſelf, for whilſt thou doeſt it in a corrupt paſſion, out of a corrupt heart, God may turn it to a Propheſie; therefore take heed of ſuch Speeches upon all occaſions. And ſo much for this Fourteenth Verſe.

CHAP.

CHAP. IX.

Peter's Denyal of Chriſt. That this was an Addition to his Sufferings.

THERE is a great Queſtion among Interpreters (which I will handle very briefly, becauſe I will not trouble you much with difficulties) whether all this that follows, concerning Peters Denyal, and the High Prieſts asking Chriſt of his Diſciples and of his Doctrine, was done in Annas his Houſe, or in Caiaphas his? All yield that there were ſome things done in Caiaphas his Houſe, and that he was led to Caiaphas, and that from Caiaphas he was led to Pilate, and from Pilate to Herod; but ſome would have what is brought in here of Peter and the Examination of Chriſt concerning his Diſciples and Doctrine, to have been in Annas his Houſe and by him. But the caſe is clear in other Evangeliſts that it was not. For we read in all the other Evangeliſts, eſpecially in Matthew that Peters denyal was in Caiaphas his Houſe. And John here ſaith expreſly that Caiaphas was High Prieſt that ſame year, and that Peters Denyal was when he got into the Palace of the High Prieſt, and that the High Prieſt asked Jeſus of his Diſciples and of his Doctrine. Now though Annas was Father in law to the High Prieſt, yet it was Caiaphas that was the High Prieſt, therefore all this muſt needs be done in Caiaphas his Houſe and not in Annas his. The plain meaning then is this, that whereas Annas was Father in Law to Caiaphas the High Prieſt, they led him therefore firſt to his Houſe, but when Annas had ſeen him, they (without Annas doing any thing to him at all that we read of) led him away to Caiaphas and though his leading to Caiaphas be not mentioned here, yet it is mentioned at the 24th verſe, where it is ſaid, Annas had ſent him bound unto Caiaphas the high prieſt. So that I ſay all theſe things were done in Caiaphas his Houſe, and not in Annas his; and therefore there is none of the Evangeliſts but John that mention any thing of Annas, becauſe indeed there was nothing done in his Houſe; only they brought him unto him becauſe he was Caiaphas his Father in law for to ſee him, and when he had ſeen him, he ſent him directly to Caiaphas; the very words [to Annas firſt] implies this. And the truth is that Cyril, an Ancient Greek Father he brings in even here afore he comes to the 15th verſe [Annas he ſent him bound to Caiaphas] and in the Copies that he had and had ſeen thoſe words were found. And Beza inclines to that too, and thinks it was an omiſſion in the Writer, and that it ought to be here inſerted. So much now for the ſalving of that Queſtion, and ſo I come to the words of this 15th Verſe.

Verſe 15. And Simon Peter followed Jeſus, and ſo did another diſciple, that diſciple was known unto the high prieſt, and ſpake unto her that kept the door, and brought in Peter.

It is the beginning of the Story of Peters Denyal of Chriſt; which Denyal of Peters is intermingled by all the Evangeliſts with the Sufferings of our Lord and Saviour Chriſt; and I think it is done on purpoſe firſt to illuſtrate the Sufferings of Chriſt, for certainly this Denyal of Peters did ſomething add to Chriſts Sufferings; that at that very time when he was asked of his Doctrine, and of his Diſciples, one of his greateſt and moſt eminent Diſciples ſhould be denying of him (for ſo you ſee the context runs) which Chriſt knew, for in the end he looked back upon Peter, and ſhewed his grief for him, and that he took notice of him, and of what he had done. And 2. The Evangeliſts do it alſo for this purpoſe, to ſhew the great love of Chriſt,

Book V.

Chriſt, that though Peter and the other Diſciples were a ſinning, eſpecially Peter for he ſinned moſt grievouſly, Jeſus Chriſt went on in his work, went on to ſuffer even for thoſe ſins that they were then committing. And as Chriſt knew what Peter was a doing then, and yet went on to ſuffer, ſo he knew what thou wouldeſt do againſt him, and yet ſuffered for thee. But to come to the Story.

There are in all the Evangeliſts recorded three ſeveral Denyals of Chriſt, and that by Peter; and as I go along I muſt compare the one with the other, and ſhew that there is no contradiction in what the Evangeliſts record.

In the words here from the 15th verſe to the 19th you have two eminent things to be conſidered.

1. The Introduction, or the Story, that delivers how it came to paſs that Peter did get into the High Prieſts Hall, which was the occaſion of his Denyal.

2. The Denyal it ſelf.

Firſt, For the Story, how Peter got in. John waiting after the other Evangeliſts ſtill labours to inſert ſome Circumſtances which they had omitted; now none of the other Evangeliſts tell us how Peter got into the High Prieſts Hall; they tell us indeed that Peter followed his Maſter afar off, but this great circumſtance which was a preparation to his Denyal how he got in, and with what difficulty, it is only recorded by John: And there is a great deal to be obſerved in it. But firſt I ſhall open it Hiſtorically, and then give you the Obſervations as I go along.

[Simon Peter followed Jeſus.] The other Evangeliſts tell us that he followed Jeſus afar off. But I ſhall not ſpeak of that circumſtance, intending to keep principally to what John here ſaith. It was certainly a mixt Action in Peter, that is an Action mixt of Love and of Fear, of Grace and Corruption. For that he followed him argues that he had a Love in his Heart to Chriſt; yet there was fear mixt with it, for he walketh after him afar off.

The Queſtion is here, whether Peter ſinned in this, in his going to the High Prieſts Hall?

Aſſuredly he did; For 1. Chriſt had expreſly told him (Matth. 26. 2.) that he ſhould ſuffer at that Paſſeover, therefore it was unbelief in him to follow him after he was apprehended to ſee the event of it; as Matthew tells us he went for that reaſon. And,

2. Chriſt had taken order when he was firſt taken that his Diſciples ſhould be kept ſafe and let free, Let theſe go, ſaith he, which was intimation enough that they were unable to ſuffer, for it follows, That the word which he had ſpoken might be fulfilled, of thoſe thou haſt given me have I loſt none; implying that if they had then been put to ſuffer they had been loſt, for they were weak and unfit for ſuffering, and it was not the mind of God to ſtrengthen them to ſuffering at that time: And therefore in John 13. 36. ſaith Chriſt, Whether I go thou canſt not follow me now, but thou ſhalt follow me afterwards; Thou canſt not follow me now: for thou art not able to follow me, neither will my Father ſtrengthen thee to follow me; but afterwards he followed Chriſt, even to the Croſs; for as Eccleſiaſtical Stories tell us, he was crucified as his Maſter was, but yet the meaning of that place is, that as Chriſt went to Heaven in a way of Suffering, ſo he told him that he ſhould follow him thither, but he ſhould not follow him preſently in the like way of ſuffering. And beſides,

3. Chriſt had plainly and fully told him that he would denie him. Now for him having been thus warned by Chriſt, and having had Experience of his own fearfulneſs, for having ſtruck off the High Prieſts Servants Ear, he fled away amongſt the reſt, and it was not likely that he ſhould be more valiant and couragious in the High Prieſts Hall amongſt Souldiers and Officers then he had been in the Garden, for him I ſay notwithſtanding all this to be venturing, and to put himſelf upon that temptation, it was certainly a Sin. But ſtill I ſay Grace will work with corruption, his love unto Chriſt wrought with with his fear, and then the words that he had ſpoken himſelf, thoſe courageous ſtout words, I will dye with thee rather than deny thee, thoſe riſe in his mind, and put him upon going after Chriſt to ſee the iſſue of the buſineſs; and perhaps he hoped that he might happily get in with the Croud, and ſo not be ſeen. Chap. 9.

Obſerv. 1. The Obſervation that I make from hence by the way, is this, That we ſhould not put our ſelves upon occaſions of ſuffering or danger till ſuch time as God calls us. It is unwarrantable and it is ſinful ſo to do. It was ſo in Peter.

Obſerv. 2. As it is unwarrantable to put our ſelves upon occaſions of ſufferings, ſo it is dangerous for us to tempt God by putting our ſelves upon occaſions of ſinning; to go to the Door as it were where a Man ſhall be drawn in to ſin, as Peter here, he follows, and he goes to the Door and ſtands without hankering to ſee what would be the end of it. I ſay it is a dangerous thing for us to put our ſelves upon occaſions of ſinning, to tempt God, for then you ſee by this of Peter what the iſſue is; when Peter tempteth God, then doth God ſuffer Peter to be tempted, he leads him indeed into temptation.

But Peter had not got in for all this, had it not been for an unhappy Providence to him (for ſo I may call it in reſpect of his Sin, though God intended good by it) For the Story tells us that another Diſciple went along with him, and that Diſciple being known unto the High Prieſt went in with Jeſus into the Palace of the High Prieſt. This is brought in here on purpoſe to ſhew how Peter got in, for otherwiſe there is no reaſon of mentioning this going in of the other Diſciple. The Providence of God would that here ſhould be Two Diſciples Eye-Witneſſes of Chriſts ſufferings in the High Prieſts Hall, from whom the reſt might have the relation of it: There was Peter and another Diſciple. He is called a Diſciple, for that was the Name that was given to Chriſtians in Chriſts time, and ſo in the Acts of the Apoſtles till they came to Antioch, for then they were firſt called Chriſtians.

There is a Queſtion amongſt Interpreters who this other Diſciple was? Some ſay (and many good Interpreters) that it was John, and the reaſon they give is this, becauſe John in this Epiſtle when he ſpeaks of himſelf, he ſtiles himſelf that other Diſciple, and never mentions his Name, as in John 20. 30. But you ſhall find that where John ſpeaks of himſelf, though he concealeth his own Name, and ſaith that other Diſciple, yet he adds withal, whom Jeſus loved; ſo you have it in the ſame 20th of John, ver. 2. But now that addition is not put to this Diſciple, but it is another Diſciple which was known to the High Prieſt. And beſides to me there is this great reaſon that this other Diſciple was not John, becauſe there is no likelyhood, (but the contrary ſeems much more probable) that John ſhould have ſo much knowledge and familiarity as this Diſciple apparently had, both with the High Prieſt himſelf, and ſo by vertue of that acquaintance and greatneſs with him, an Intereſt in his Family alſo; ſo that he could command or order to have Peter let in. Now John was a poor Fiſher-man that lived in Galilee, a Countrey remote from Hieruſalem, and came but up with Chriſt at the Feaſt, for Chriſt did not live ordinarily at Hieruſalem, but alwaies after the Feaſt went down again into Galilee the place of his uſual Reſidence, unleſs he preached ſometimes up and down in the Countrey, and when he went, his Diſciples went with him, therefore it is not likely that he ſhould have ſuch Intereſt in the High Prieſts Houſe. And then again, if it had been John, he would certainly have been queſtioned as well as Peter, neither would he himſelf have ventured in being ſo well known as 'tis ſaid this other Diſciple was. And the Syriack Tranſlation favours this Opinion, that it was none of John, for it reads it thus, unus ex aliis, one of the other Diſciples, not being one of the Twelve. And it was a Diſciple though known to the High Prieſt, yet certainly he was not known to be a Diſciple; for had he been known to be a Diſciple, doubtleſs they had fallen upon him as well as upon Peter for all his favour with the High Prieſt. And it had been brought in as an Argument to Peter that he was a Diſciple, becauſe he was helpt into the Hall by another Diſciple, but you ſee it is not, only they alledge that Peter was one of them that was in the Garden, &c. But the Truth is, when the Holy Ghoſt hath concealed who this Diſciple was, why ſhould we go and ſay, who it is?

Obſerv. From hence I will give you this Obſervation, That Chriſt he had other Diſciples beſides his Apoſtles; many hidden ones. You ſhall find in John 12. 42. that among the Chief Rulers there were many that believed on him, but becauſe of the Phariſees they did not confeſs him. And in Act. 1. 15. there were an Hundred and Twenty that met together. So that there were more Diſciples than the Twelve, yet there were many that appeared not, as Nicodemus, that came to Jeſus by night; and they did not appear till after his Death. Chriſt hath many hidden ones that are a long time putting themſelves forth in profeſſion. We ſee it in experience, it hath been known that Men have been long converted and lived privately in the Family before they made any open profeſſion. And ſo now, many are Favourers of the Cauſe of Chriſt that do not ſhew themſelves; but ſhew themſelves they will in the end. This Man here though he would not profeſs himſelf openly, yet when he ſaw a Diſciple, he would do him a good turn as he thought he did Peter in having of him into the High-Prieſts Houſe.

The Text ſaith, this other Diſciple was known to the High Prieſt. The reaſon why this expreſſion is uſed, is, to ſhew that it was a hard thing to get in unleſs a Man had acquaintance, and it was likewiſe a great favour to come into this Synodrim, yea this very Acquaintance of the High-Prieſt himſelf as 'tis thought was not admitted into the inner Room where Chriſt was, for their proceedings againſt Chriſt were ſecret and hidden, they would not have this Court kept openly for the People to ſee their jugling dealing. Peter you ſee could not get in but by favour of this Diſciple who was known to the High Prieſt, though unknown to us.

Obſerv. From thence we may obſerve that we ſhould not preſently cenſure a Man that he is not holy or the like, becauſe he holds correſpondency, or it may be ſome intimacy or acquaintance with Men that are carnal: For there may be reaſon why he doth ſo, and yet he may be a Holy Man, as this Diſciple certainly was, and yet kept his correſpondency with the High Prieſt. I will not juſtifie in all things the Act it ſelf, but we ſhould not eſteem Men, or think that therefore they are ungodly, for even that judgment may deceive us.

Now this Diſciple he went in with Jeſus, that is, he went in with the croud of the Officers, and the Band of Men that went in with Jeſus.

He went into the Palace of the High Prieſt; into the outward Court, ſo it is in the Original. The queſtion is, whether Peter and the Souldiers that were about the fire and the like, were in one Room and Chriſt in another? That which breeds the ſcruple is that in Matth. 26. 69. it is ſaid that Peter ſate without in the Palace; which ſeems to argue that Chriſt was in one Room and he in another.

The Anſwer is clear that they were both in one Room, that's evident, becauſe the other Evangeliſts tell us that Chriſt looked back upon Peter, now it is not to be thought that Chriſt came out to look upon him when he denyed him. Therefore that which is the Reconciliation of it is this, whereas it is ſaid he was in the lower part of the Hall, the meaning is plainly this, that the High Prieſt and his Fellows, they ſate in a place more high advanced by ſteps or ſo, all within the ſame Walls, and in the lower part of it there was a Fire where Peter and the reſt ſtood, and ſo Chriſt being called afore them there, he might eminently look over all the Room.

Verſe 16. But Peter ſtood at the door without. Then went out that other Diſciple which was known unto the high prieſt, and ſpake unto her that kept the door, and brought in Peter.

That other Diſciple perceiving that Peter ſtood without, and knowing him to be a Diſciple, and bearing Love and good Will to him, befriends him, goes

goes to her that kept the Door, and as ſome think, betruſts her with this ſecret that Peter was one of Chriſt's Diſciples, which made her ſo confidently afterward charge him as you kow ſhe did; and ſo upon his Speech he gets in. Chap. 9.

[Peter ſtood at the door without.] As I ſaid before, it was an unwarrantable Action for Peter to follow Chriſt; he had had warning about his denying of him before, yet you ſee he would not avvay, but though he found the door ſhut upon him, yet there he ſtands, and as he followved Chriſt in confidence of his ovvn ſtrength, ſo here in the ſame confidence he ſtands at the door vvaiting for an opportunity to get in. My Brethren it is a certain Rule and Truth, that though another man may ſuffer for Chriſt out of an Heroick Spirit, out of ſome carnal grounds and ends, yet God will not permit thoſe that are his own Children to ſuffer for him upon ſuch grounds, he will rather give them up to denying of him, till ſuch time as they are fitted for a true and real ſuffering, and ſo he did Peter here. Above all things therefore we ſhould by this Example learn to take heed of venturing in wayes of ſuffering out of our own ſtrength, for ſo Peter did, he went forth in his own ſtrength, and you ſee what the Iſſue of it is.

Well, Peter you ſee by the help of his Friend gets in. The Obſervations that I make upon all this Story of letting in Peter, are theſe.

Obſerv. 1. Obſerve the workings of Gods Providence about this Sin and Denyal of Peters. The Providences of God they were many, I ſhall mention them here.

1. He could not get in, Peter ſtood at the door without. Here now God in his Providence at firſt did put an impediment, a Bar to Peters attempt, ſtopt him in going on to that which ſhould be the occaſion of his Sin. Peter he ſhould have taken this for a warning, he ſhould have obſerved the Providence of God in hindring him, but he would not. In any way or courſe wherein we find that God in his Providence doth put impediments, it ſhould ſtrike our hearts: and we ſhould look upon it as a Call and Warning from God to examin our grounds in going on in that way. If indeed we find our wayes ſuch as are warranted by the word, or that our Conſciences are clear in it that it is a Duty and that we are called to it, then let there be never ſo many impediments, we are to go on in it. But otherwiſe, in a doubtful way, if a Man find impediments, let him obſerve that Providence. If Peter had done thus when he found the door ſhut, he had not ſinned thus againſt Chriſt as he did; but he ſtill ſtands at the door, tempting of God, and therefore doth God in the end ſuffer him to be tempted.

2. But yet though Peter was thus ſtopped for a while, there comes (after he had tempted Providence) the faireſt and cleareſt Providence to bring him in to the High Prieſts Hall that could be. Peter ſpake not to this Diſciple to let him in, but he ſpying of him, goes out and brings him in. So that on the other ſide, we are not in buſineſſes to go meerly by Providences, for you ſhall find that oftentimes Providences do lye fair for occaſions of ſinning. Here was as fair and as clear a Providence to bring Peter into the High Prieſts Hall where he ſhould deny Chriſt as could be: Nay, the Providence was ſo fair, that one would think that God called Peter into the Hall. We are apt oft times to meaſure our wayes by Providences much; but never believe the works of God unleſs thou haſt a word of God firſt for thy way; for God doth lay ſnares, eſpecially when Men tempt him. When Jonah was to go to Nineve, and inſtead of going thither, run away from God to go to Tarſhiſh, he had the faireſt Providence that could be, for he found a Ship that was fitted and all ready to go to Tarſhiſh, he might now think here is a Providence ſerves me as fit as can be, Ay, but he went againſt the Word of God; And the Truth is ſo doth Peter here, and therefore I ſay never be ruled by the Providences of God unleſs thou haſt the word of God; for the Providence of God doth as equally and indifferently lay temptations for Men as it doth facilitate their way in what he would have them do. In things which are not Gods way, you ſhall have Providences fall exceedingly fair, and in things that are Gods vvay, you ſhall have many impediments to the contrary, to try your Faith.

When Peter novv did thus get in, he thought it certainly a very great favour and courteſie, and a ſpecial priviledge, that he ſhould according to his deſire ſee the Iſſue of things, for he vvent for that end as Matthew ſaith. And his Friend certainly intended to do him the greateſt kindneſs and favour that could be. There are ſnares that lie oftentimes in the courteſies and kindneſſes of Friends: For ſo there is in this; he did it as a kindneſs, and the other thought it a favour; but the Truth is, it vvas a great ſnare, and in the end it proved a fatal buſineſs to Peter, as being the occaſion of that great and famous Denyal of his Maſter.

It is ſtrange likevviſe that Chriſt vvho could tell him he ſhould deny him, vvould not bid him take heed of the High Prieſts Hall. He could have done the one as vvell as the other; He that knevv all things that ſhould befal himſelf knevv vvhat ſhould befal Peter, hovv it vvas he ſhould deny him. But yet Jeſus Chriſt he being God as vvell as Man, he vvas not obliged to give Peter that Caveat, but though he knevv it and ſuffered it for his ovvn Glory, yet it is no Warrant for us to do ſo. God may permit ſin, he knovvs hovv to puniſh it and hovv to get Glory out of it, and he himſelf is not defiled by it; but vve are not to permit others to ſin. And ſo much for the 16th verſe; and for the introduction into Peters Denial. I come novv to the Denial it ſelf.

Verſe 17. Then ſaith the damoſel that kept the door unto Peter, Art not thou alſo one of this mans diſciples? He ſaith, I am not.

That a Damoſel ſhould be the Door-keeper to the High Prieſt, ſome ſay (and indeed many of the beſt Interpreters) it vvas ex more gentis, from the cuſtom of the Countrey. Thus in Act. 12. 13. you read that when Peter knockt at the door, that a Damoſel went and opened the door, for it was her place ſo to do. And in 2 Sam. 4. 6. in the Septuagint it is in the Feminine Gender, it is not in the Hebrew indeed, but the Septuagint that Ancient Tranſlation (which ſhews it was the cuſtom of the Countrey) inſerts theſe words, and the Woman that was the Door-keeper was winnowing of Corn. I ſpeak it only for this, to ſhew the reaſon why a Damoſel kept the door of the High Prieſt. But others ſay (and probably too) that the reaſon why this Damoſel kept the door, was becauſe that all the Servants were now buſie and taken up in attending one way or other, the keeping of the door therefore for the preſent was committed to this Maid. But I take it that the firſt is the Truth, that it was the manner of the Countrey; it being ſtrengthned by thoſe two inſtances. However it fell out, certainly God ordered it in the greateſt Providence that could be. For of all Men you know how confident Peter was, and how he had ſaid, Though all men forſake thee, I will not forſake thee. He goes forth in his own ſtrength; he had out of his valour cut off the Ear of the High Prieſts Servant, falling upon a whole multitude of Men, he alone and one other (for there was but two ſwords amongſt them.) God therefore ordered it in his Providence, that he would confute the Pride of Peter this way, that his weakneſs might be ſeen to all Poſterity, and made the more famous, at the ſpeaking of a poor ſilly Maid, he denies his Lord and Saviour Jeſus Chriſt.

Then ſaid the Damoſel unto Peter, Art not thou alſo one of this Mans Diſciples.

The Evangeliſts they do all reckon up Three ſeveral ſorts of Denyals that Peter had, yet if you compare the firſt in Matthew, and the firſt in Mark, and the firſt in Luke with this firſt in John, (which all muſt be accounted to be but one) the Story ſeems to be exceeding different, if you either conſider what the Evangeliſts record her Speeches to have been unto Peter and of Peter, or what his his Speeches were unto her. In Matthew, cap. 26. 69. the Speech ſhe there uſeth to him is, Thou alſo wert with Jeſus of Galilee, that is, thou as well as others. In Mark it is thus, Thou alſo waſt with Jeſus of Nazareth, now Nazareth you know was a City in Galilee. And in Luke cap. 22. 56. Her Speech is not to Peter, but to them that ſtood by, and it was thus, This man alſo was with him. Now here in John it is a differing Speech from all theſe, Art not thou alſo (ſaith ſhe) one of this mans Diſciples? And as her Speeches recorded by the Evangeliſts do vary, ſo you ſhall find that his Speeches to her vary as much: For in Matthew, chap. 26. ver. 70. it is ſaid, He denyed afore them all, ſaying, I know not what thou ſayeſt; It's the higheſt kind of negation that can be, the meaning of it is, I am ſo far from belonging to him, that the truth is, it's ſtrange to me that you ſhould ask me any ſuch queſtion, I do not know the leaſt of him; as if he had never heard of the Man before. And ſo in Mark 14. 68. I know not, neither underſtand I what thou ſayeſt. And in Luke 22, 57. Woman I know him not. Now here in John, being asked, Whether he was his Diſciple? He ſaith, I am not. How ſhall we reconcile this? Chap. 9.

The Reconciliation is very eaſie, for they are ſeveral Speeches of hers, and ſeveral Speeches of his, whereof ſome Evangeliſts record ſome, and others, others: And it ſeemeth to have been thus (that I may hang and pin them altogether.) This Maid ſhe firſt ſaies to the Standers by, This man alſo was with him, as Luke hath it, And then ſhe turns to Peter, and ſaies, Art not thou one of this mans Diſciples? As John here hath it. And then ſhe peremptorily affirms it, that ſhe upon her own knowledge had ſeen him with him, Thou alſo waſt with Jeſus of Galilee, as Matthew and Mark have it. Now ſhe uſing ſeveral forms of Speeches, ſome to the ſtanders by, and ſome to himſelf; at the firſt asking him the quaſtion only, afterward peremptorily affirming it; this is it which draws out thoſe ſeveral Anſwers from Peter according to the ſeveral occaſions, which all the Evangeliſts ſeverally record, and all theſe make but this firſt Denyal of Peters.

Others caſt it thus (which comes all to one) That ſhe did firſt ask Peter the queſtion as John hath it here, Art not thou one of this Mans Diſciples? as he came in at the door. He anſwered, I am not. Afterwards going to the fire where Peter ſate, and as Luke hath it, ſeeing him by the light thereof (for ſo it is in the Original) and as the Text there ſaith, viewing of him wiſtly, with fixed Eyes; thought ſhe I have ſeen you afore now, and ſeen you with him: And now ſhe doth not go and ask him, Art one thou not of this mans Diſciples? But ſhe plainly ſaith, Thou art one, and ſhe tells the ſtanders by ſo too, This man (ſaith ſhe to them) alſo was with him: And therefore Matthew tells us, that he denyed before them all, ſpake as loud as he could, that they might all take notice of it, I know not ſaith he what thou ſayeſt.

You may likewiſe ſee the working of the Providence of God even in this too: As namely, that ſuch a Woman as had ſeen him ſome time or other with Chriſt, ſhould now keep the High Prieſts door: For indeed that ſeems to be plain, that ſhe ſpeaks of her own knowledge, Thou alſo ſaith ſhe waſt with him, that is, thou didſt converſe with him, ſo Matthew and Mark have it. And the truth is that the coherence here in John evidently carries it ſo, for here at the 17th verſe, we tranſlate it, Then ſaith the Damoſel, but in the Original it is, Therefore ſaith the Damoſel, the coherence whereof is plainly this, that ſhe having obſerved him to be ſpoken for to be let in by a Diſciple being at the door, minds him not ſo much at firſt, but afterwards eying him more wiſtly by the light of the fire, having formerly ſeen him, ſhe peremptorily challengeth him, She therefore ſaith unto him, &c. Now I ſay here was a Providence of God, that that Woman (it may be none of all the Family elſe had obſerved him, that ſhe ſhould be at the door and take notice of all theſe things, that ſhe ſhould come to challenge him, and did challenge him, or elſe he had not been challenged. Others of them bring other Arguments, that his Speech bewrayed him, and that they ſaw him with Jeſus in the Garden, but the Providence of God ſo ordered it, that of all the Family ſhe ſhould be the Woman that kept the door who had ſeen him and knew him to be with Chriſt. At firſt indeed ſhe did not know him ſo perfectly, therefore ſhe only puts the queſtion to him, Art not thou one of this Mans Diſciples? But afterward viewing him more ſtrictly, and that by the light of the Fire, ſhe comes to know him and challengeth him in a perremptory manner. So that Gods Providence did ſtill ſtrongly work in this great buſineſs, to diſcover Peter. To get him in, it wrought much, and now it works as ſtrongly even for a diſcovery. And you ſhall ſee other paſſages of Providence afterward in the ſtory, and how ſtrongly they wrought too. And ſo much now for the Hiſtorical opening of the words of this verſe.

I will give you but an Obſervation or two, and ſo paſs on.

Obſerv. 1. You ſee that as God would have it manifeſted that all ſorts of People, Jew and Gentile; Civil State and Eccleſiaſtical all theſe ſorts were againſt our Lord and Saviour Chriſt, ſo all Sexes too. There is this Damoſel here, and another Damoſel afterward, as Matthew and Mark have it, that fall upon Peter, and challenge him for being his Diſciple.

Obſerv. 2. You ſee likewiſe the weakneſs of Peter, he was but asked by a Damoſel, and at the firſt but in a ſecret way, for I take it this Speech here in John, which occaſioned his firſt Denyal, was when he came in at the Door, 'twas then that ſhe asked him, Art not thou one of this Mans Diſciples? A Damoſel you ſee foyl'd him: He that was not long before ſo extream eager, that he promiſed he would dye with Chriſt, that he would never leave him, that he would not, promiſed it three times; He that in the Garden was ſo valiant as to cut off Malchus his Ear, in defence of his Maſter; this Man being left to himſelf, at a private queſtion that a Damoſel makes him, falleth into this great lye, which afterwards he ſeconded with further and greater proteſtations as we ſhall ſee in the Story. If that God doth leave us, vvhat poor Creatures are we! That that Peter vvho had naturally ſo bold a Spirit, ſo great a Natural Courage, one that was a raſh and a venturous, a bold and a daring Man, as appears by all his Actions, eſpecially by that in the Garden, vvhen he cut off the High Prieſts Servants ear. He that vvas ſo bold aftervvard from the Spirit of God, vvhen the Holy Ghoſt comes upon him; This Peter vvhen he is left to himſelf, neither Natural Courage doth aſſiſt him, but at the vvhiſpering of a Maid you ſee vvhat a lye he tells; neither doth the Holy Ghoſt help him vvho yet did dvvell in his heart. What poor Creatures are the moſt couragious of Men if God leave them; they vvill fall ſhort not only of the Grace that is in them, and of the Povver of the Holy Ghoſt that is in them, but of that Natural boldneſs vvhich they have, for ſo Peter did.

Obſerv. 3. When was it that Peter thus fouly and groſly denies his Maſter? It was then when our Lord and Saviour Chriſt was entred into his ſufferings; when he was arraigned, and arraigned for him, for his Sins, before the High Prieſt. Then when our Lord and Saviour Chriſt was about to do the greateſt favour and mercy that ever was done for Creatures, and for Peter amongſt the reſt, then God order'd it that Peter ſhould ſin and ſin thus fouly and groſly. It was a very great aggravation of his Sin, even this, for ſo the circumſtance of time is to any ſin. If that at the ſame time that a Friend is contriving, or taking pains for me, or doing any thing for me of the greateſt moment, ſaving my life, begging my pardon, if I ſhould at that time wrong my Friend moſt, how would that heighten my unkindneſs! This was Peters caſe. Yet you ſee Chriſt goes on with his work for all that. He knew Peter was a denying of him, yet that did not make him withdraw his neck from ſuffering for Peter. Great Sins againſt God when he is doing us very great Mercies, ſhould exceedingly break our hearts, as it did Peters here, he went out afterwards, and wept bitterly. When ever we do ſin, Jeſus Chriſt is interceding in Heaven for us. Our Sins do not hinder hinder him from going on to intercede, as Peters ſinning here did not hinder him from going on to ſuffer for him. Chap. 9.

Obſerv. 4. And then again Peter being asked whether he was one of his Diſciples, anſwers, I am not. He doth not deny Chriſt to be the Meſſiah of the World; only he ſaith, I am not one of his diſciples: Yet Chriſt had ſaid, Thou ſhalt deny me: He denyed indeed that he belonged to him; For any Man to ſlink out of the profeſſion of Chriſt when he is called to it, or out of any Truth of his, though he deny not that Chriſt is the Meſſiah, and that Chriſt is come in the Fleſh, or the great points of Salvation, yet it is a Denyal of Chriſt. And ſo much now for the 17th Verſe.

Verſe 18. And the Servants and Officers ſtood there, who had made a fire of coals (for it was cold) and they warmed themſelves; and Peter ſtood with them and warmed himſelf.

The Scope of this Relation is only this, to ſhew the occaſion of Peters Second and Third Denyal which John afterward tells us of. For though his Second Denyal comes not in till the 25th verſe, yet this Story here is related as a preparation thereunto: That the Weather being cold, the Servants and Officers were not ſcattered up and down, but were all gathered together in a ring and cluſter in the middeſt of the Hall about the Fire, and Peter he was in the midſt of them, and therefore if there were Notice taken of Peter, all muſt take notice of him, one as well as another, and hence it came to paſs that Peter was ſo mightily afraid, that he went on to deny his Maſter with Oaths and Curſes as afterward you read in the Story. It was to ſhew the publickneſs of his Sin, for Matthew ſaith he denyed before them all, for they were all gathered together in a heap, and Peter in the midſt. But to open it a little.

They had a Fire of Coals; of Wood already burnt or kindled, to avoid the Smoak becauſe the Fire was in the midſt of the Hall, as Luke hath it.

For it was cold, which might ſeem ſtrange, becauſe thoſe Countreys are hot, and it was in the Spring-time (for it was in March:) But this is eaſily reſolved, for you muſt know that in thoſe Countreys as there is an extremity of heat in the day, ſo there are oftentimes in the Spring as well as in the Winter exceeding cold Nights, eſpecially after Rain. And it was that Night eſpecially a cold Night, and that was the reaſon of the Fire.

The Obſervations I make out of theſe words are only theſe two.

Obſerv. 1. It is ſaid that it was a cold Night. Now this Night which thus occaſionally fell out to be more cold than ordinary, it was that Night in which Chriſt ſweat drops of Blood in the Agony of his Spirit when he was in the Garden. For that Agony of his was not many hours afore this befel him; for after he had ſupt he made a long Sermon and a long Prayer, and then went into the Garden, and from thence they fetcht him out, (all this was within Night) and afore the firſt crowing of the Cock this Denyal of Peters fell out: It is noted therefore by Interpreters as a circumſtance to greaten the Agony of Chriſt, and to ſet forth the extremity of his Sufferings, that in a cold Night he ſhould ſweat drops of Blood vvhich vvas contrary to Nature, and muſt proceed therefore from that great anxiety and perplexity his Soul vvas in. It's brought, I ſay, by Divines as an aggravation and evidence of thoſe great Soul-Sufferings of Chriſt more than from the fear of Death, that in a cold Night he ſhould thus ſvveat drops of Blood. It's noted upon that, though it comes in here upon another occaſion, viz. that it being cold, there vvas a Fire, and Peter ſtood there to vvarm himſelf, as he might lavvfully do but that he ſtood in the midſt of temptations, and in the midſt of Tempters.

Obſerv. 2. Peter ſtood in the midſt of them, ſo Luke hath it, for novv he vvas in, and having once denyed him to the Damoſel, to the end he might not not further be known, he goes and ſhrinks in amongſt the crowd thinking to hide himſelf, and there he ſtands amongſt the Enemies of Chriſt, who being all full of Malice did certainly ſpeak evil of him, and talked their pleaſures of him, but he ſtanding by was forced to be ſilent, ſaid not a word, ſuffered all to paſs in ſilence, which was a kind of a denying Chriſt. And ſo Peter having ſinned thus far, God gives him up ſtill to more ſin. It is a dangerous thing my Brethren, without a ſpecial Call of God to be in ill Company, eſpecially in evil times. Peter being amongſt theſe Enemies of Chriſt it was the occaſion of his being challenged, and that was the occaſion of this great ſin he fell into. In evil times, if a Man be in ſuch Company either he muſt be ſilent, or if he ſpeak, they will be ready to pervert his Speech, to put him upon a temptation. We ſhould therefore avoid all needleſs Societies with carnal People. Take heed of coming into High Prieſts Halls; you ſee into what inconvenience it drew Peter to. And ſo much for this firſt Denyal of Peters, which I have hiſtorically laid open. I come next to the Examination of Chriſt in the Nineteenth, Twentieth, and Twenty Firſt Verſes.

CHAP. X.

The Account of Chriſts Examination before Caiaphas, in the Nineteenth, Twentieth, and One and Twentieth Verſes of this Eighteenth Chapter of John. We now come to the other part of Chriſt's Sufferings recorded in this Chapter, and that is a ſtrict Examination of him.

JOHN xviii. 19, 20, 21.

The High Prieſt then asked Jeſus of his Diſciples, and of his Doctrine.

Jeſus anſwered him, I ſpake openly to the world; I ever taught in the Synagogue, and in the Temple, whither the Jews always reſort, and in ſecret have I ſaid nothing.

Why askeſt thou me? ask them which heard me, what I have ſaid unto them: behold, they know what I ſaid.

HERE begins a Third part of Chriſts Sufferings recorded in this Text. You have firſt his having been taken, and ſo bound, and then led to Annas his Houſe in a Triumph of Glory; now here is the Third, his coming to Caiaphas his Houſe, (for Annas had ſent him bound to Caiaphas) who is called the High Prieſt, becauſe he was that year the High Prieſt, though others had the Name alſo, for they ſtill retained the Title though they were out of the Office. And being here, they fall to examining of him about his Diſciples, and his Doctrine. Other Evangeliſts tell us of their examining of him, and bringing in Witneſſes againſt him concerning ſome Speeches he ſpake about the Temple and about his own Office, and his being the Meſſiah; but this Examination here which certainly was the firſt they began with, and was as the Prodromus to all the reſt, no Evangeliſt hath it but only John.

The

The time was (ſome twenty one years before) when Chriſt being but twelve years old, had asked them, and poſed the Doctors in the Temple, and he was then (as he ſaith) about his Fathers buſineſs, putting forth then ſome beams of the Godhead dwelling in him. And now he is before them in a ſtate of ignominy, and he is asked and examined as a Delinquent, as a Malefactor, as an Heretick and Seditious Perſon, and he is about his Fathers buſineſs in this as well as in the former. Chap. 10.

And by the way here, afore we come to the particular opening of theſe Verſes, let us conſider who it was that was thus examined. It was he that was the great Prophet propheſied of by Moſes, that ſhould come into the World, of whom it was ſaid, that whoſoever would not hearken to the words of that Prophet which he ſhould ſpeak, he ſhould ſurely be put to death. Clean contrary now, he being come into the World, he is examined as a falſe Prophet that they might find cauſe of putting him to death. He that was the Truth it ſelf is examined and charged with falſe Doctrine: He that was the Prince of Peace, and came and preached Peace, (as it is Eph. 2. 17.) he is charged with Rebellion, and accuſed to have preached Sedition. But to come to the words.

The High Prieſt then asked Jeſus.] Then, or therefore. Some tranſlate it, therefore, and ſo it hath relation to what is ſaid in the 13th and 14th Verſes, where John ſpeaks of the High Prieſt, and brandeth him to be the Man that gave the firſt Counſel that Chriſt ſhould dye for the People. And now they having reſolved to put him to death, therefore the High Prieſt asked him of his Doctrine and of his Diſciples, ſeeking by Queſtions to enſnare him, that ſo they might have ſome plauſible ground for his condemnation. Others they tranſlate it, then, and ſo the meaning is this, That whilſt our Lord and Saviour Chriſt was examining concerning his Diſciples, then was one of his Diſciples a denying of him; whilſt he was called in queſtion for them, and it was made an occaſion of his Suffering, then was Peter committing that foul Sin. You ſee the love of our Lord and Saviour Chriſt.

The High Prieſt asked him.] As being the mouth of that great Aſſembly, the Sanhedrim, of all the Elders and the Prieſts who were met together at his Houſe. For you muſt know it did belong to the High Prieſt and to that Aſſembly of Elders, to decide all Controverſies of Doctrine that did ariſe, and to make enquiry into Hereſies and falſe Doctrines, as appears by that place in Deut. 17. 11, 12, 13. therefore now for to deal with Chriſt about his Doctrine, had it been in any thing falſe or untrue it had not been unlawful for the High Prieſt to have done it. But ſee the iniquity of his and their proceedings. They proceed altogether againſt and without Law, for they do not lay any falſe Doctrine to his charge, they bring no Witneſſes that this and this he had ſaid, but meerly after the manner of the Inquiſition, ask him Queſtions to enſnare him; whereas there ſhould have been a Complaint made firſt unto him, and he ſhould have brought forth the Evidences, and not go and wire-draw (as I may expreſs it) and examine him upon Interrogatories, and ſo to get ſomething from himſelf, this was altogether beyond his Commiſſion.

He asked him (it is ſaid) of his doctrine and of his Diſciples.

The ſcope of the High Prieſt in this queſtion, muſt be a little conſidered, for that will give us light into it; what end it was that the High Prieſt had in it; and what end likewiſe it was that God had in it.

The end and ſcope of the High Prieſt was twofold.

It was Firſt, (as I hinted before) to fiſh out of Chriſt, whether or no he had taught ſuch Doctrine as ſhould come within the compaſs of that Law in Deut. 13. 5. for as I ſaid, this great Sanhedrim, the Council of the High Prieſt and the reſt of his fellows had eſpecially to do in the caſe of a falſe Prophet. Now there in Deuteronomy the Law is this, If a Prophet ariſe that ſhall revolt from the Lord your God, (as it is in the Margent) teach Men to apoſtatize from God, who brought you out of the land of Egypt, and ſet up any other God, that Prophet ſhall be put to death. Now becauſe that Chriſt had ſet himſelf up to be a Prophet, yea and more than a Prophet, to be the Son of God, they would have enſnared him by asking him queſtions of what he had taught, that ſo according to the Law they might put him to death as a falſe Prophet: And becauſe that in that Law (as appeareth ver. 6) not only a falſe Prophet was thus to be put to death, but if any one did ſecretly intice another, ſaying, Let us go and ſerve other Gods: Even as now ſecretly to perſwade any to Popery is death by the Law of this Land, ſo it was to turn from the true God, or to turn to any other God; this the High Prieſt had an eye upon, and would have gathered it out of Chriſt himſelf, as appears by Chriſts anſwer, in which he quits himſelf from any ſuch practice of inticing any ſecretly, In ſecret, ſaith he, have I ſaid nothing.

And Secondly, Another end the High Prieſt had was this; They were reſolved he ſhould be put to death, and they would therefore fain have gotten ſomething out of him that ſhould be matter or cauſe of death, and that by the judgment of Pilate. For you muſt know that all matters of Controverſie in their own Law, Pilate would not meddle withal, but if it touched upon any thing that concerned the Roman State, either raiſing of Sedition, or that did touch upon Cæſar, denying of him to be King, &c. of that Pilate was exceeding jealous (and that they knew) and about that he medled, as being within his cognizance, as the Roman Governour. You ſhall read in Luke 13. that Pilate had mingled the blood of the Galileans with their Sacrifices; he killed a great many of them while they were Sacrificing; what was the reaſon? Pilate did not regard Sacrifices nor Sacrificing, and all the Schiſms that were in that Church Pilate took no notice of them, but he let all the Sects amongſt them enjoy their liberty, why doth he kill theſe Galileans? Look in Acts 5. 37. and you ſhall find that there was one Judas of Galilee, that in the dayes of the Taxing, went and drew away much People after him, raiſed Sedition, and taught that it was not Lawful to pay Tribute and Taxes to Cæſar. This was it that made Pilate to fall upon a remnant of theſe Galileans that came up to Hieruſalem to worſhip, and to do it even while they were a Sacrificing. Now therefore that which this Caiaphas did fiſh for was this, to have matter to accuſe Chriſt unto Pilate, for having done as that Judas did, drawn much People after him in a way of Sedition: Therefore he tryes now if he could get any thing that might drop from his own mouth, out of which he might frame an Accuſation; and therefore the Doctrine which he eſpecially aimed in this Queſtion, was, whether he were the Son of God or no? And hence is it that we find in Luke 23. 2. when they came to accuſe Chriſt before Pilate, the thing they urge upon Pilate againſt him is this, He forbiddeth to pay tribute unto Cæſar, ſaying, that he himſelf is a King; and (ver. 5.) He ſtirreth up the people teaching throughout all Jury, beginning from Galilee to this place. They would inſinuate to Pilate that he had gone up and down teaching this Doctrine, and gathering Diſciples after him to make a head againſt the Romans, as being King of the Jews. They put all upon this interpretation, and this was it that Caiaphas in his queſtioning Chriſt fiſhed for; and thus doth Gerrard interpret the words. And that's the reaſon that Pilate ſtill ſaith, he found no cauſe in the Man to put him to death; for Pilate did not meddle with their Controverſies concerning matters of their Religion, not he; but if it were a matter of right or wrong, as Gallio ſaid, a matter of Sedition, then he medled with it. This I ſay was the ſecond thing that Caiaphas aimed at in his asking Chriſt about his Diſciples and his Doctrine; namely, to find out if he could that he had taught a Doctrine of Rebellion, and did go about to draw Diſciples in a ſeditious way after him; which you ſee is inſinuated to be his ſcope in Chriſts anſwer; you have gone into corners (ſaith Caiaphas) and into woods, and ſpread your Doctrine in ſecret, and have taken cunning wayes to draw Diſciples after you. No ſaith Chriſt, whatſoever I have ſaid I have ſaid publickly, ask them that heard me what I have delivered, for I will not accuſe my ſelf.

The end that God had in this, why he ſhould be examined about his Diſciples and his Doctrine, it was.

1. To ſhew that he ſhould ſuffer for having Diſciples; that thoſe whom he dyed for the owning of them, ſhould be part of his crime for which they put him to death. Which is a circumſtance mightily ſetting out the love of Chriſt unto us. Chap. 10.

2. To ſhew what it was that they chiefly maliced him for, 'twas for having Diſciples, which was the work of his Miniſtry: And yet they themſelves had Diſciples, for there was nothing more common (as all men know) than for the ſeveral Sects which were among them (and there were multitudes of them) to have their ſeveral Diſciples, and liberty was given to them ſo to do, yet his Diſciples of all the reſt they maliced; and though they themſelves had all the power, yet that vext them that he ſhould have any Diſciples at all.

And they asked him of his Doctrine alſo, as one that had taught new matters, and had not followed the Tradition of the Elders in all things, but had corrected them in a great many of their falſe gloſſes by which they miſinterpreted the Law.

Neither do they ask him at all of his Miracles, not a word of them. Whatſoever made for him that they medled not with, but whatſoever might any way make againſt him, that they might fiſh any thing out of, of that they make enquiry; for his Miracles were they that confirmed him to be the Meſſiah, and confirmed his Doctrine. They asked him of his Doctrine, as that which was contrary to the Law of Moſes, and as one that brought in Innovations; and they asked him of his Diſciples as one that brought in Sedition, but that which confirmed the truth of both they ſpeak not a word of. For that is the Nature of corrupt Men, that which makes for the truth in any cauſe or buſineſs, they let that paſs in ſilence, not a whit of mention of that. Believe me, ſaith he, for my works ſake. He ſtill confirmed his Doctrine by Miracles; they would not ſo much as conſider of them, but only barely ask him of his Diſciples and of his Doctrine. They asked him of his Diſciples and of his doctrine.

What is the Anſwer now that Chriſt makes? It is not to the matter of what Caiaphas ſaid or asked him. He declareth neither what his Doctrine was, nor what Diſciples he had. Only he deals with him warily as with a cunning adverſary, one that was skilful to deſtroy. He would not go and accuſe himſelf, but refers what he had taught to their proof, for it was matter of fact. If I have taught any thing (ſaith he) ask them that heard me. And he anſwers nothing about his Diſciples at all, for if whatſoever he had taught had been ſound and good Doctrine, there had been no guilt in drawing Diſciples after him. And whereas Caiaphas in his examination did inſinuate that he had gone about in a cunning way to draw Diſciples after him; he clearly wipeth off that challenge, he never went about deceitfully to ſow Tares whilſt others ſlept; he never enticed any one ſecretly to any Doctrine which he had not publickly taught, but tells them that he did alwayes affect publickneſs, and he expreſſeth his affectation of publickneſs in his Doctrine, by all ſorts of expreſſions. This in the general.

I ſpake openly to the world, I ever taught in the Synagogues, and in the Temple, whither the Jews alwayes reſort, and in ſecret have I ſaid nothing.

I ſhall firſt open the words, and then ſhew you Chriſts ſcope in this Anſwer of his as I ſhewed you their ſcope in their Examination.

Firſt, To open the words. You ſee our Lord and Saviour Chriſt anſwers them fully, and he anſwers them ſharply: I ſpake openly. The word is παῤῥησια, and it hath a twofold meaning.

1. That for the place where he ſpake or preached it was open; ſo the word is taken, John 11. 54. where it is ſaid that Jeſus walked no more openly, that is, in publick view. I ſpake openly, that is, I did not ſeek corners to preach in, or to deliver my Doctrine.

Book V.

2. It ſignifies that he did ſpeak plainly his mind; he ſpake out; he did not go about the buſh as we ſay. So the word is uſed, John 10. 24. If thou be the Chriſt tell us plainly; (it's the ſame word that is uſed here) tell us plainly with a Pareſia, with a freedom and plainneſs, whether thou be the Chriſt. And they themſelves once gave that teſtimony of him, that he was regardleſs of any, and cared not who knew his mind; ſo Matth. 22. 16. We know thou regardeſt no mans perſon, but wilt ſpeak the truth plainly. So he had ever done. I ſpake openly, that is, what was in my heart about the truth, I ſpake it plainly.

And then as he had ſpoken openly and plainly, ſo to the World; I ſpake openly to the world, ſaith he, that is, to all ſorts of Men, for ſo World is taken: He did not reſtrain what he taught to a few Diſciples only, but he told it to the People alſo, as the Syriack Tranſlation hath it. As when a Man publiſheth a Book, he publiſheth it to the World; ſo ſaith Chriſt, I ſpake openly to the world.

And this ſaith he, I have ever done. It hath been my cuſtom from the beginning as oft as I had any occaſion to ſpeak publickly. It was ſo at the firſt; for in Mark 1. 21. when he began firſt to preach, He entred into the ſynagogue, and taught.

I ever taught in the Synagogue and in the Temple, whether the Jews alwayes reſort.

There were thoſe two places of publick preaching, which he took occaſion to preach in, and he inſtanceth in both. I have taught my Doctrine in all the ſeveral ſorts of publick Audiences that are amongſt the Jewes. Firſt, He inſtanceth in the Temple, that is, in Solomons Porch, for that was the great place where they uſed to ſpeak to the People; and therefore when Chriſt is ſaid by one Evangeliſt to walk in the Temple, another ſaith, he walked in Solomons Porch, whether all the Jews did reſort (for ſo ſome read this, whether the Jews alwayes reſort) or as others, whether the Jews out of all quarters did reſort. Which by the way may be an anſwer to that which is ſaid, that there were ſuch multitude of Believers in Hieruſalem that they could not meet all in one place. Certainly there were mighty Audiences amongſt the Jews, conſiſting of many thouſands, when they came up to the Feaſt, unto whom Chriſt preached; therefore at one time in the Feaſt it is ſaid that Chriſt (to the end they might all hear) lift up his voice and cryed, He that is athirſt, let him come unto me and drink. There they all met, and in that reſpect he had opportunity to preach to many thouſands at once, for all the Jewes, it is ſaid, came thither; and ſo that was fulfilled which was ſpoken of him, Pſal. 9. 22. I have not concealed thy word from the great Congregation.

The Synagogues (which he inſtanceth in likewiſe) did differ from the Temple thus, that the Synagogues they had only Moral and Natural Worſhip in them, not Ceremonial. The Temple had Ceremonial Worſhip, it was made principally and eſpecially for that, yet ſo as that Prayer and Preaching, &c. was exerciſed in it too; but in the Synagogues there was only Prayer and Preaching, and the Moral and Natural Worſhip of God, which is to be for ever, and they were for that uſe only. Now under the Goſpel, that which God hath made to be the ſeat of all Worſhip, it is not ſo much the imitation of the Temple or repreſentative Worſhip, but it is the imitation of the Synagogues, (for ſo particular Congregations and Churches are) and therefore in James 2. 2. If any man come into your Congregations, (the word is, into your Synagogues) with a gold ring, &c. And in Heb. 10. 25. Forſake not the aſſembling of your ſelves together; it is, aſſembling together in a Synagogue. Yet though for the matter of it the Congregations now be as the Synagogues then, which therefore have only Moral Worſhip, yet for the Priviledges and for the Promiſes, they are called Temples too, the meetings of the Saints in the New Teſtament are. Every Synagogue now, that is, every Aſſembly of the Saints, have the Promiſes of the Temple made to it.

You

You are a Temple built up to God (ſaith the Apoſtle) acceptable to him by Jeſus Chriſt. I ever taught in the Synagogue and in the Temple. The Doctrine which he had to deliver, he had choſen all ſort of wayes to make it publick. And he addeth a Negation beſides. Chap. 10.

In ſecret have I ſaid nothing.

Theſe words you have ſpoken of the great God in Iſa. 45. 19. which he that is God applyes here unto himſelf.

But how is it ſaid that he taught nothing in ſecret; for in Mark 4. 10. when he was alone he preached to his Diſciples. And he made a long Sermon here (which John recordeth) at the Paſſover, and he did it when no body was by but his Diſciples. And in Mat. 16. 21 he charged them that they ſhould tell no Man that he was the Meſſiah. And many Inſtances might be given of his often preaching privately; how then doth he ſay, In ſecret have I ſaid nothing?

Certainly our Saviour doth not contradict himſelf or the truth. But this ſpeech of his doth not refer to the act of Preaching only, as if it had been unlawful for him to teach in private: But refers to the matter, I have ſaid nothing in ſecret; that is, I know nothing that ever I have ſpoken unto any in private, but I have ſpoken it publickly; I was never ſhy or chary of my Doctrine; I never feared the face of any Man; neither cared I if all the World heard me, but I have ever declared the mind of God to the full, and done it with all the freedom of mind that could be. And then likewiſe the ſcope of that ſpeech is this, that he had not two ſorts of Doctrine, which they would have charged him with; that he held forth his beſt Doctrine in publick to the World, that ſo he might gain applauſe from the People; and another private Doctrine which he reſerved to himſelf, and taught it only to his Diſciples. No, Chriſt was ſo far from it, that if you read that place in Mark 4. and compare the 10th and 21th Verſes together, you ſhall find, that though when he was alone he did indeed explain a Parable privately to his Diſciples, and ſo made a Sermon of it; yet what ſaith he at the 21th Verſe? Is a candle brought to be put under a buſhel or under a bed? There is nothing hid which ſhall not be made manifeſt. And look in Matth. 10. 26. you ſhall ſee his meaning to be this; Though I have opened this Parable to you in private, and ſo preached a Sermon privately, yet what I have ſaid in your ear, do you go and preach it on the houſe top. So that Chriſt profeſſeth the higheſt plainneſs and openneſs that could be of whatſoever he held, and he had that Spirit, that ſcorned to reſerve himſelf, to deliver one thing in private and another in publick. And then he had this third ſcope alſo, that he was ready to defend what he had taught, if there were any Man that could lay any thing to his charge. I know nothing ſaith he, that ever I ſpake in private, but I ſpake it openly; therefore if any Man can accuſe me, I am here ready to defend it. This is the ſcope of his ſpeech.

Our Lord and Saviour Chriſt you ſee, he doth not anſwer a word concerning his Diſciples: What was the Reaſon?

1. Becauſe it was lawful for him, according to the cuſtom that was amongſt the Jewes, to have Diſciples. The Phariſees they had ſo uncontrolled; and the Sadducees had ſo, and you know what great contention there was between thoſe two Sects; ſo the Eſſeens, ſo the Nazarites, ſo the Herodians, and ſo others. And Chriſt he might as well juſtifie the one as they the other.

2. It needed not, for if he could juſtifie his Doctrine, he might juſtifie his having Diſciples. If his Doctrine were ſound and true there was no guilt in this that he had Diſciples.

3. He would ſay nothing concerning them, becauſe he vvould take all upon himſelf, he alone vvould ſuffer. Others give this Reaſon, becauſe his Diſciples had forſaken him, or becauſe he vvould not betray them, therefore he vvould not tell vvho they vvere: And they obſerve this from it, that Men ſhould not betray others vvhen they are asked of them, as here Chriſt did did not his Diſciples. But I take the ſecond to be the truer Reaſon, namely, that he ſtanding to the juſtification of his *Do*ctrine, his gathering *Di*ſciples, that makes no crime.

There is only this Queſtion a little more largely to be inſiſted upon, whether that all private Preaching that is not in publick Aſſemblies, be unlawful?

It is the Objection that the Papiſts urged againſt the Churches of Chriſt in their firſt Reformation, (as Beza hath it in his Sermons upon the Paſſion) They ſay, ſaith he, that we preach in Chimney-corners. But what ſaith Calvin? It is, ſaith he, a Childiſh Argument to go about to prove by this Anſwer of Chriſts to Caiaphas, that in ſome caſes Men ſhould not preach the Word of God in private; for Chriſts ſcope in this ſpeech is not to juſtifie the lawfulneſs or unlawfulneſs either of the one or the other, but only to ſhew what courſe he had held, and to rebuke the impudent malice of his adverſaries, for otherwiſe Chriſt had preached not only in the Synagogues, but in a Ship, and in Mountains; and when as the Jews went about to ſuppreſs him, you ſhall find that he withdrew himſelf with his Diſciples into a deſart place, and he did ſo a long time. And the Diſciples themſelves did the like for fear of the Jews, as in Acts 1. 14. and Acts 12. 12.

But Secondly, There is this may be gathered out of it too, as the ſcope of Chriſt, and that juſtly; That no Man ſhould go and ſpread a Doctrine privately, which he will not own and preach publickly, or own before all the World, for ſo our Saviour Chriſt did. It was not but that he taught privately, and ſo his Apoſtles did too; but as they taught privately, ſo they did teach alſo in the Temple, and never ſcrupled to do it. It is the property of Wiſdom (as it is Prov. 1. 20, 21.) to utter her voice in the ſtreets, and to cry in the chief places of concourſe, and in the City to utter her words, It is the Devils practice to ſow tares in the night whilſt Men ſlept. And the Apoſtle in 2 Tim. 3. 6. ſpeaks of a ſort of Men that creep into houſes, and pervert ſilly Women. And it is certainly a ſign of falſhood, and argues a lye, to conceal Mens minds, or to ſpeak that in private which they will not do in publick. Errour and falſhood alwayes ſhun the light. Our Saviour Chriſt you ſee ſcorned to ſpeak any thing in private which he had not publickly vented, and he was ready to give an account of it, and ſo did the Apoſtles too; and although they held their meetings in times of Perſecution privately, yet ſo as what they preached privately, they did not fear to profeſs publickly. And it is the genius of the Truth, and of them that do profeſs it, ſo to do. The Goſpel is light, and it ſeeks no corners, and it ought to ſeek no corners, but ought to be ſpoken publickly; Acts 5. 20. Go, ſtand and ſpeak in the Temple all the words of this life. 'Twas Chriſts charge to the Apoſtles.

Therefore in the third place I remember Beza gives this anſwer; The Papiſts, ſaith he, need not object to us, that we ſeek corners to preach in; for ſaith he, we deſire nothing more than all that ever we preach or hold, to preach it to all the World. And ſo much now for Anſwer to that Queſtion.

Now the ſcope of Chriſt in this 20th Verſe (to touch that a little) is this. You ſee he doth not anſwer directly to what Caiaphas asketh him; for Caiaphas would have had ſomething that he had taught out of him, that ſo he might enſnare him, which was againſt the Law; for by the Law he was not thus to ſift him, but to have produced Witneſſes. Chriſt therefore tells them that he had taught what he held in publick, and ſo puts them upon the proof, refers them to what he had delivered, which they were (if they counted it Hereſie) to bring proof of. And Secondly, If I have Diſciples, ſaith he, I have not gathered them by any ſecret whiſpering or creeping into houſes, but it hath been by preaching publickly, and if I have preached any thing publickly, and gathered *Di*ſciples by it, you your ſelves may convince me of what I have taught, and here I am to anſwer it. So that I ſay, Chriſt he doth not go to anſwer punctually to what the High Prieſt asked him, for he would not give that advantage to ſo cruel an adverſary; but here I am, ſaith he.

he. They ought to have produced Witneſſes in a matter of fact as this was. And ſo much for the 20th Verſe, the opening of it. I ſhall open likewiſe the 21th, and then give you Obſervations out of them altogether. Chap. 10.

Why askeſt thou me? Ask them which heard me what I have ſaid unto them, behold they know what I ſaid.

Our Lord and Saviour Chriſt, as he had cleared himſelf in the former words, ſo here he gives the ſharpeſt reproof, which the High Prieſt to the uttermoſt deſerved, for his unjuſt proceedings againſt him, for they were according to their Law to prove every thing by Witneſſes. Chriſt though he ſtood at the bar, yet he would ſhew the greatneſs of his Spirit, he ſpeaks home you ſee and ſharply. It became him ſo to do; he ſpeaks not railingly or revilingly, but that which ſhewed both the injuſtice of Caiaphas, and that he himſelf, though he ſtood there before them as a Malefactor, was not a whit dejected. Do you ask me, ſaith he? I never ſpake any thing privately but in publick, and if there be a fault in gathering Diſciples, the fault muſt lye upon my Doctrine; and if there be any thing in my Doctrine, you have the World to witneſs againſt me, for I have taught openly in the Synagogue and in the Temple, and do you ask me? And do you begin now to ask me? Have you not excommunicated my Diſciples, and made a Law that whoſoever confeſſeth me ſhall be caſt out of the Synagogues, and have caſt them out becauſe they followed my Doctrine? As you never yet refuted my Doctrine, and now you bring no Witneſſes about it. Do you ask me, that have dealt ſo injuriouſly with me and my Diſciples? And not only ſo, but you have bound me, and brought me hither to your Bar, and have nothing to lay to my charge, but what I am accuſed of you would get out of my own words. Do you ask me in a matter of fact what I have preached, that ſo you may enſnare me out of my own ſayings? Do you ask me? Will you have me to accuſe my ſelf? The Law allowes me this liberty not to accuſe my ſelf; no Man by the Law is to be judged without Witneſſes, produce them; Why ask you me? Ask them that heard me.

Obſerv. It is not irreverence to Magiſtrates to defend our ſelves in ſuch caſes as theſe are. Chriſt doth not ſtand upon his points as the Meſſiah, but as a Subject to that State. And Men ought to ſhew great boldneſs of Spirit in ſuch caſes. So the Apoſtles, Acts 5. whether is it better to obey God than Man judge you. And Paul ſaith, Phil 1. that ſuch boldneſs is a token of Perdition to the Adverſaries, and of Salvation to the People of God.

Ask them that heard me.] This ſhews his innocency. I do not deſire you ſaith he, to ask my Friends only, ask my Enemies, the worſt I have, any one that hath heard me, that can teſtifie any thing, here I am ready to defend it, if they will frame up any accuſation, I will anſwer it.

Behold, they know what I have ſaid.] That ſame Behold, hath an Emphaſis with it. Some Interpreters very probably conjecture, that he did point to their own Officers, who had formerly when they were ſent by their Maſters to intrap him, given this teſtimony of him in John 7. 45. that never Man ſpake like him: And that therefore he did inſinuate this in his ſpeech, and perhaps did more largely explain it, for the Holy Ghoſt records but the ſum of things; and ſo now he gives the greateſt juſtification of himſelf that can be; ſaith he, your own Officers (pointing at them) that ſtand here at the Bar holding of me, many of thoſe can tell what I have delivered; I have thoſe to juſtifie me, for they ſaid never Man ſpake as I did, therefore ask them, and never ſtand asking of me: (It is a mighty reproof) I am ſo free in my ſelf, and ſtand ſo innocent and ſo reſolved in that Truth that I have ſpoken, that let your own Servants and Miniſters be called, and let them ſpeak. And ſo you have the anſwer of Chriſt in this 20th and 21th Verſes. I ſhall now give you ſome Obſervations and ſo conclude this Story of Chriſts Sufferings, which were antecedent to his being Scourg'd, Crown'd with Thorns, and Crucified.

Obſerv. 1.

Book V.

Obſerv. 1. You may obſerve, that the High Prieſt doth not find fault with Chriſt nor with his Diſciples, for that they had taught without Authority. In another caſe, when he whipt the Buyers and Sellers out of the Temple, they asked him, by what Authority doeſt thou theſe things ? But here they do not lay that to his charge. Certainly they would have ſilenced him long afore for his preaching, if it had not been allowable by the cuſtom of that Country. The truth is, that though none but the Prieſts and Levites that were skilful in the Law were to preach, yet divers others did, and were permitted ſo to do in that State; if they were gifted. The Phariſees did ſo, and ſo did Paul, who was a Phariſee, and ſate at the feet of Gamaliel, and yet he was not of the Tribe of Levi, but of the Tribe of Benjamin. And Chriſt himſelf did not take upon him to preach ſimply as he was the Meſſiah, as holding that forth for his Warrant, though that was Warrant abundantly for him. And when they come to condemn him, they do not quarrel with him for that, but for the matter of his *D*octrine, whether yea or no he did teach theſe and theſe Points, which they would have known from himſelf, and therefore they asked him of his *D*octrine.

Obſerv. 2. You ſee they object no Vice againſt Chriſt, only his *D*octrine to him, (for otherwiſe Chriſt was innocent) and his having *D*iſciples. Obſerve then that his profeſſing Chriſtians ſhould herein imitate their Maſter, that when they come to ſuffer, they may no way ſuffer as evil doers ; that they may ſuffer for nothing but the *D*octrine they have held forth, the Diſciples they have kept company with, the Profeſſion they have made, that it may be barely and meerly the truth of their Religion they ſuffer for.

Obſerv. 3. Still the great charge in all Ages that they go about to lay, as to Chriſt, ſo to his People, it is Hereſie, and it is Sedition. This they would have faſtened upon Chriſt, charging him with Hereſie in his Doctrine ; with Sedition in gathering Diſciples to diſturb the State, as Theudas and others that you read of in Acts 5. and therefore they ask him of his Doctrine, and of his Diſciples, and they would have fetched out that from himſelf, that when he had gathered Diſciples enow he would preſently have rebelled. This they would have made Pilate believe. Both theſe, Hereſie and Sedition, in terminis, were laid to Chriſts charge.

Obſerv. 4. In that Chriſt anſwers nothing about his Diſciples we may gather this, (which indeed I hinted afore) That if the Doctrine be good, as to the having Diſciples that do imbrace it, there is no guilt in that. If Chriſt had done it Seditiouſly indeed, which was it they endeavoured to lay to his charge, therein there had been a guilt. Look of what kind the Doctrine is, of that kind the Diſciples muſt be. If the Doctrine be right there is no danger that Diſciples embrace it. Therefore Chriſt in Matthew ult. bids them make Diſciples, not to themſelves, but to the Truth, to their *D*octrine.

Obſerv. 5. Obſerve, that even theſe Men here accuſed themſelves in accuſing Chriſt. There were ſeveral of them had ſeveral ſorts of *D*iſciples, but what themſelves went on in and agreed in amongſt themſelves, that they fall upon Chriſt for : For this is manifeſt by all the Stories of the Scripture, and by their own Rabbins, that in thoſe times it was free to gather *D*iſciples. There were three eminent Sects among themſelves that ſtill agreed in Temple-worſhip ; there were the Sadducees that denied the Reſurrection againſt the Phariſees, and the Phariſees againſt the Sadducees ; there were the Herodians likewiſe, there were the Eſſeni, there were the Nazarites. All theſe were amongſt the Jews, and it is evident that after the time of the Machabees, yea after the Captivity of Babylon, there was a permiſſion of great differences in point of *D*octrine amongſt them. Yet when the true Meſſiah cometh to teach his *D*octrine, and to make *D*iſciples, they fall upon him for that which they themſelves practiſed. Here were many Phariſees here preſent that were Sectaries, (that's the truth on't) but what was a commendation, and tollerable in them one to another, that muſt not be ſuffered in Chriſt : For Men will bear any thing but the truth. They themſelves (ſaith the Apoſtle in the Galatians) would conſtrain you to be Circumciſed and to keep the Law, yet they themſelves do not keep the Law. It is conſtantly ſo in experience, they that are Oppoſors of the Truth alwayes do ſo. The Papiſts they ſuffer a world of differences amongſt themſelves, they ſuffer even Jews that are oppoſite to Chriſt, and who blaſpheme him: But any that do profeſs but the leaſt of Proteſtant Doctrine or Worſhip, how do they oppoſe them! The Phariſees you ſee did the like, though there was a world of Diviſion amongſt themſelves, and they had a liberty to differ in matters of Doctrine, and in matters of an High Nature too, yet when it comes to the Truth, there they would not permit Chriſt either to teach any Doctrine differing from them, or to have Diſciples which yet they themſelves allowed both in themſelves and others. Chap. 10.

Obſerv. 6. Thoſe that were the greateſt Corrupters of Doctrine (for theſe Phariſees and the High Prieſts were thoſe that had corrupted the Doctrine of Religion by their Traditions as Chriſt intimateth often in his Speeches) they are they that are here moſt Zealous in the matter of Doctrine, who themſelves I ſay had been the greateſt Corruptors of it, and had drawn in their ſeveral wayes ſeveral Diſciples after them as the manner of thoſe times was.

Obſerv. 7. This very Speech of Chriſt may teach us this, to take heed of perverting the Speeches of Men. For this Speech of Chriſt if you do not take the Scope he aimed at is ſubject to perverſion. He ſaith that in ſecret he had taught nothing, now all the Stories of the Evangeliſts ſhew that he had taught much in private, but (as I have ſhewed you) his meaning is this, I have not one kind of Doctrine that I teach privately, and another that I teach publickly. He doth not ſo much refer to the Act as to the matter.

Obſerv. 8. Though they had Authority to examine Mens Doctrines, yet here lay the evil of their examining Chriſt, that they ſhould have done it upon complaints firſt brought before them. It is ſtill as Controverſies do ariſe. It was not that the Synedrim went and made ſo many *D*octrines unto which they would tye Men, and they muſt preach no other; that Power even thoſe amongſt the Jews had not. It was lawful for Men to interpret the Scripture, and that not only by the Rule the Synedrim ſet out. But indeed if any Controverſie did ariſe upon the ſpreading of a *D*octrine, then it belonged to their Cognizance, as appeareth by Deut. 17. if a falſe Prophet ariſe, and if there were any Controverſie between Blood and Blood, Caſe and Caſe, or interpreting Scripture, the thing was to be referred unto them, and it was examinable by that Counſel; But that men ſhould be limited in their *D*octrine to what all the Councils in the world ſhould ſay, this is not the Rule; It was not the Rule amongſt the Jews themſelves, although that Synedrim had that Authority which no Council ever had ſince the World began, for it was by *D*ivine Inſtitution. Therefore I ſay they do not find fault with him becauſe he had not come to know what *D*octrine he ſhould teach as from them, but that he taught a *D*octrine contrary to Gods Law. They indeed acted beyond their Authority to proceed by way of examination, they ſhould have done it by way of charge.

Obſerv. 9. You ſee the freeneſs of Truth and Innocency, it is able to appeal even unto Enemies, unto any to defend it ſelf. And therefore as we ſhould ſo preach, ſo we ſhould ſo walk, as we may freely and boldly appeal unto any; for ſo Chriſt doth here. Ask them that heard me, ſaith he.

Obſerv. 10. Oftentimes *D*octrines and Opinions are condemned by Prejudice, and upon hearſay only. This Caiaphas and many of thoſe Rulers, they had not heard Chriſt, no, the greatneſs of their places kept them from that, as oftentimes great places keep Men from the Means, from that which ſhould ſave them, but their Officers heard him, and by the report of malicious and malignant Spirits Caiaphas and the reſt were thus informed.

Obſerv. 11. Laſtly, It is the Law of God, and indeed the Law of Nature and Equity that there ſhould not be an Oath ex Officio; that is, that Men ſhould not be proceeded againſt either in Church, or otherwiſe by a bare examination of themſelves, till ſuch time as Witneſſes have brought an Accuſation againſt them. As in Act. 25. 27. It ſeems to me unreaſonable ('twas the Speech of an Heathen] to send a Prisoner and not withal to signifie the crimes laid against him. That Rule which is given concerning an Elder is true concerning every Brother also, though the Instance is only in an Elder, as one whose credit should be more than anothers, 1 Tim. 5. 19. Against an Elder receive not an Accusation but before Two or Three Witnesses. I do observe this difference (my Brethren) and it is very notable; when afterward the High Priest doth examine Christ of this Truth, whether he was the Messiah? And when he was punctually asked whether he was the Son of God or no? He answers plainly, I am; But when he would examine him about matter of Fact, not about the matter so much what he taught, as that he had taught thus and thus, which might be proved by Witnesses, then Christ referreth it to Witnesses, and would not answer himself. And the reason of the difference to me holds forth this great Truth, that no Man is to refuse if he be positively asked whether he hold this or that Opinion or no? Or if he be asked an account of his Faith, or demanded what his Judgment is in such or such a thing, he is freely to tell it, especially if they that ask him have Authority. It is a thing in vvhich Christs Example is held forth to Timothy by the Apostle Paul, that he vvitnessed a good Confession before Pilate and the High Priest, 1 Tim. 6. 13. A Man is to give an account of his Faith to any that will ask him (let him look to it though, whether it be to ensnare him or no.) But if any shall come and say I preached such a thing, which is matter of fact (for as it is preached it is matter of fact) and there are Witnesses that can clear whether I did or no, in that case the way is not to proceed by Examination of me, but to produce the Witnesses, and so to proceed, for no Man is bound in matter of fact to accuse himself. This I take to be the difference of Christs answer in this, when the High Priest examined him about his Doctrine, that is, asked him whether he had not preached thus or thus? Saith Christ, If I have preached thus or thus, prove it, there are Witnesses enough I refer my self to them, I will never tell you what I have preached, go to them that heard me, and bring them hither, and then examine me, and I shall give you an Answer. But when he came positively to ask him whether he held this or no, whether he was the Messiah, he answered clearly and plainly, for no Man is to refuse to give an account of his Faith though it indanger his Life if he be called to it. But for matter of fact, when as it may be proved by Witnesses (and all such things may be proved by Witnesses, though it be matter of Doctrine) a Man is not to accuse himself. It was the proceeding in that great Oath that you are now freed from, which as it was a great oppression, so it is a great Mercy to this Kingdom that it is taken away. And whereas they used to alledge that Christ accused himself, the case is different, it was not what he had preacht in matter of Fact, but in matter of Opinion and Judgment. But as to matter of Fact, Askest thou me (saith he?) Ask them that heard me. And this is the Law of Nature, and this was the Law of the Jews, and this was Christs dealing with a cunning and wary Adversary that sought his Life, and this you see he stands to. I have taught saith he where all the Jews come, I have taught in the Temple, taught in the Synagogues, taught before all the World, and now have you brought me hither, having bound me, and cast me and my Disciples out of the Synagogues, and ask me what I have preached? Here was the most unjust and unequal proceeding in the World, yet thus they did with Christ, and the Disciple is not above his Master.

CHAP.

CHAP. XI.

The laſt Sufferings of Chriſt coming to his Death. Both the ſhame and torments are to be conſidered in them.

WE have ſeen our Lord Chriſt a Man of Sorrows and Sufferings through the whole courſe of his Life. We have ſeen him betray'd, apprehended, ſiez'd, on as a Criminal, and brought to Examination, and Judgment, and all theſe were the fruits of his being made Sin and a Curſe. Now the next Part and Concluſion of the Curſe unto which all the other tend as ſo many ſmall Rivulets into the Ocean; is Death; and that,

1. Natural of the Body; [To duſt thou ſhalt return, Gen. 3. 19. which Phraſe notes out the ſeparation of Soul and Body. So Eccl. 12. 7. it is expounded, [Duſt returns to the earth, and the ſoul to God that gave it.]

2. Death Spiritual of the Soul;] [Thou ſhalt die the death, Gen. 2. 17.] which words intimate a double Death, even another Death beſides that of the Body, and beyond it. Now,

1. I ſhall ſhew how Chriſt was made a Curſe in his enduring a Bodily Death; the Circumſtances whereof do all of them yet add unto the Curſe thereof. You ſee that Death in it ſelf (whether Natural or Violent) is by Gods firſt Sentence on Adam made a Curſe for Sin. And thus is the Death of every Man who dies not in the Lord. But yet further; whereas there was but one particular, kind of Death that was in a more eminent manner of all Deaths elſe the moſt accurſed, and that was hanging upon a tree; even that did Chriſt undergo, ſo that to be ſure he might bear the extremity of the Curſe herein. And that kind of Death was not accurſed by Gods Law and Doom only, but was alſo eſteemed to be a Curſe among the Gentiles. Thus it was among the Romans, who when they would curſe any Man unto whom they owed ill will, they expreſt it by this, Abi in malam crucem. That is, I would thou wert crucified, or maieſt thou die the Death of the Tree: Equivalent to which is that way of Curſing taken up by ill Tongues among us, when they ſay, Go and be hang'd, &c.

2. In that his laſt ſuffering the Death of the Croſs (which was the Epitome of all) two things are eminently to be conſidered by us;

1. The Shame of that Death, and of the Circumſtances of it.
2. The Pains of thoſe Sufferings, and the Death it ſelf, which is the Separation of Soul and Body; and the Concluſion of all. And unto theſe may the chief of thoſe his Sufferings either preparatory unto; or at his Death be reduced. The Apoſtle in Heb. 12. 2. draws them to theſe two Heads:

1. Enduring the croſs: which includes both the Pains of his Suffering, and Death it ſelf.
2. The Shame that accompanied it, (in thoſe words) [deſpiſing the ſhame.] And Chriſt himſelf particularly ſumming up all that was to be done to him, and that was foretold of him by the Prophets, (as he ſaies, Luke 18. 31. [Behold we go to Jeruſalem, and [all things] that are written by the Prophets concerning the Son of Man ſhall be accompliſht:] The main particulars of which [all] he after mentions, ver. 32. 33. he expreſſeth it in theſe words. The Son of Man ſhall be delivered unto the Gentiles, and ſhall be mocked, and ſpightfully entreated, and ſpit on; and they ſhall ſcourge him and put him to death, which particulars if you will reduce them to Heads, do fall into theſe Two.

Book V.

1. The Shame expreſſed in Three Particulars,
   1. Mocked.
   2. Spightfully entreated
   3. Spitted on
2. The Pains laid down in Two things.
   1. Their Scourging him.
   2. Their Killing him.

And accordingly we find Two eſpecial Epithets of Excellency mentioned of Chriſt when his Sufferings are mentioned by the Apoſtles, on purpoſe to aggravate thoſe his Sufferings from the Worth of the Perſon that underwent them. The firſt, that they killed the Prince of Life: So ſaies Peter, Acts. 3. 15. The other, that they crucified the Lord of glory; ſo Paul, 1 Cor. 2. 18. The firſt ſerving to illuſtrate his dying; that they ſhould kill the Prince of Life; the Second, the Shame of his Death, that they ſhould crucifie the Lord of glory; the Apoſtle mentioning his Glory together with his Crucifying, ſo to ſet out the ſhame of that Death above all other, and alſo as an evil to be conſidered in his Death, as great as Death it ſelf, and greater. And accordingly in reſpect of Death he is called the Lamb ſlain, Rev. 13. 8. and in reſpect of ſhame he is called a Worm and no Man, Pſal. 22. 6. being trodden on by all Men, and his Life of ſo poor a value with them, th t they made no more of it to kill him, than to tread a Worm to Death; which to doe, no Man hath the leaſt regret. And accordingly alſo, Heb. 6. 6. the Sin of Apoſtates from Chriſt is ſet out by their doing (ſo far as in them lies) that unto Chriſt which the Jews that put him to Death did to him at his Crucifying. It is ſet out by theſe two things, 1. That they crucifie to themſelves the Son of God afreſh; Secondly, That they put him to an open ſhame. And ſo I reckon this of ſhame with the Curſe of his Death, becauſe they are thus linkt together by the Apoſtles; and alſo becauſe indeed, in all Deaths ſhame is a part of the Curſe; (and therefore it is ſaid, the body is ſown in diſhonour, 1 Cor. 15. 43.) but eſpecially in Chriſts Death; for it was more than dying, the kind of Death being the ſhamefulleſt. And though ſhame be not mentioned in the words of the Curſe of our firſt Parents, yet the Firſt Fruit, and ſo the firſt appearance of the Curſe (that we read of) even in them, was ſhame and fear; it is ſaid they were aſhamed, &c. And ſo I come,

1. To the ſhame of this death. It is a great queſtion, whether Shame or Death be the greater evil: There have been thoſe who have rather choſen Death, and have wiped off a diſhonour with their Blood. So Saul ſlew himſelf rather than he would fall into the hands of the Philiſtines who would have inſulted over him, and mockt him as they did Sampſon. So that King, Jerem. 38. 19. rather choſe to loſe his Countrey, Life, and all, than to be given to the Jews his Subjects to be mocked by them. And we ſee that many Malefactors that are to be condemned to dye, and though dying as Malefactors any ſort of Death hath ſhame in it, yet to avoid a degree of ſhame in Death, they out of the greatneſs of their ſpirits chooſe a Death that is much more painful, as to be preſt to Death rather than this ſame hanging on a Tree, which unto this day is in Mens eſteem of all Deaths elſe the moſt ignoble and ignominious. Yea, Confuſion of Face is one of the greateſt Miſeries that Hell it ſelf is ſet forth unto us by. There is nothing that a Noble Nature more abhors than ſhame; for Honour is a ſpark of Gods Image; and the more of Gods Image there is in any one, the more is ſhame abhorred by him, which is the debaſing of it; and ſo the greater and more noble any ones Spirit, the more he avoids it. To a baſe low Spirit indeed ſhame is nothing; but to a great Spirit (as to David) to have his glory turned into ſhame, as Pſal. 4. 2. is nothing more grievous. And the greater Glory any one loſeth, the greater is his ſhame: What muſt it be then to Chriſt, who becauſe he was to ſatisfie God in point of Honour debaſed by Mans Sin, therefore of all Puniſhments elſe he ſuffered moſt of ſhame, it being alſo (as was ſaid) one of the greateſt greateſt puniſhments in Hell. And Chriſt as he aſſumed other infirmities of our Nature that made him paſſible in other things; as to be ſenſible of Hunger, want of Sleep, Bodily Torments, of Unkindneſſes, Contempt; ſo likewiſe of Diſgrace and Shame. He took that Infirmity as well as Fear; and though he had a ſtrength to bear and deſpiſe it, (as the Author to the Hebrews ſpeaks) yet none was ever more ſenſible of it. As the delicacy of the Temper of his Body made him more ſenſible of Pains than ever any Man was; ſo the greatneſs of his Spirit made him more apprehenſive of the Evil of Shame than ever any was. So likewiſe the Infinite Love and Candour of his Spirit towards Mankind made him take in with anſwerable grief the unkindneſſes and injuries which they heaped upon him. And if to be abhorrent of ſhame be a ſpark of Gods Image, ſo as where more of that Image or of Glory is in any one, the more abhorrent he is of ſhame; yea, if even thoſe in Hell are confounded with it, (they there ſtill retaining ſo much of Gods Image in them) then what muſt ſo much ſhame and contempt be unto Chriſt, who was, and is the brightneſs of his Fathers glory, and the expreſs Image of his Perſon, Heb. 1. 3. Such an Image of him as no meer Creature is capable to be, all which, he conſidered and took in, well knowing what and who he was, and this, before his Sufferings: So John 13. 3. and alſo when he was both at Pilates, and at the High-Prieſts Bar. As therefore the higheſt Lights have the deepeſt ſhadows, ſo all his glory being turned into ſhame, it made his ſhame the deeper and greater. Chap. 11.

Now if we go over all the particulars of this his ſhame, never was any ſhame like unto it. There was nothing but ſhame, and that, the utmoſt that could be in all the paſſages of his Sufferings.

This ſhame I ſhall ſet forth to you by theſe Two Generals (which will contain ſeveral particulars under them;)

1. Their Mocking and ſpightful entreating of him.

2. Other Circumſtances that through Gods Providence were ordered to accompany his Miſ-uſage and Death, that ſerved to heighten the ſhamefulneſs of them.

1. For their cruel mocking, and ſhameful uſage of him; the very words that Chriſt in Luke 18. 32. expreſſeth it in the General by, are very emphatical. The one ἐμπαιχθήσεται, which we tranſlate, He ſhall be mocked, in the Derivation of it, ſignifies to make a child of one. They made a Child or Fool of him by their Actions and Dealings with him. Like unto which is the word that is uſed of Herods mocking of him, Luke 23. 11. ἐξουθενήσας, he made no body, or nothing of him. The other word ὑβρισθήσεται principally reſpecteth Contumelious Speeches, and injurious deſpiteful railing at; ὕβεις, noting out the higheſt kind of Injurie, and that, done out of a deſpite. It is the ſame word whereby the Sin againſt the Holy Ghoſt is expreſſed; Heb. 10. 29. and is there tranſlated doing deſpite. Now for him whoſe Name is [I am] to whom all Beings are but ſhadows, for him to be made nothing of; for him who is the Everlaſting Father and the Wiſdom of God, for him (I ſay) to be made a Child of; what an intolerable ſhame is this! Dyed Abner as a fool dies! (ſaid David of him,) truly through their uſage of him Chriſt died no otherwiſe.

But I rather come to thoſe ſeveral particular waies wherein they expreſt their extream contempt and deſpiteful mockage of him; As,

1. Their putting ſeveral Apparels upon him in deriſion; one while arraying of him in Purple, another while in White, then ſhifting him into his own cloaths again, thus making him ridiculous to all that ſaw him. Unmeetneſs and unſuitableneſs of Apparel is matter of ſhame. Jehoſhua the High Prieſt appeared in filthy Apparel, Zach. 3. 3. and ſo Chriſt our High Prieſt being cloathed with all our Sins. For one to be led about in a Fools Coat, what a ſhame is it! Yet thus was he ſerved.

2. Their uſing jeering and mocking geſtures: Becauſe he had ſaid he was a King, they therefore make a May-game King of him; And,

1. They Crown him with a Crown of Thorns.

2. They put a Reed in his hand for a Scepter, (though his Scepter was a

Scepter

Book V.

Scepter of Righteouſneſs, Heb. 1. 8.) to ſhew how powerleſs and weak a King he was, who had a Kingdom and Scepter as eaſily broken as a Reed. And therefore to demonſtrate his weakneſs the more in reſpect of any ſuch Kingdom as he aſſumed a Title unto, they ſtrike him with his own Scepter; which is to a King the ſame diſgrace and much more ignominious, as for an able Scholar to have his own Argument retorted on him to his own confuting and confuſion; as for a Valiant Man to have his Weapon taken from him, and with it to be beaten.

3. They hood-wink and blindfold him, and hide his Face. Now covering the Face is a geſture of ſhame, Jer. 14. 3. it is ſaid, They were aſhamed and covered their heads. Then they ſmite him, and when they have done it, they in ſcorn ask him, Who ſmote him; becauſe he took on him to be a Prophet.

4. They ſmite him both with their hands, and with their Rods: Both are mentioned. And Majus dedecus eſt manu feriri quam gladio; no Noble Spirit can brook a Box on the Ear, or Buffet; but takes it in more diſgrace than a wound honourably given. And therefore Micaiah (you know) was ſmitten on the Cheek by the lying Prophet, as a token of diſdain; for to ſmite with the hand or fiſt argues ſubjection in the Party ſmitten.

5. They in mockery kneel to him, and ſalute him as they did their Cæſars, Hail King of the Jews. To him whom all the Angels (when a Child) did worſhip (let all the Angels of God worſhip him, Heb. 1. 6.) to whom every knee ſhall bow, both that is in heaven, and in earth, and under the earth; to him do they in ſcorn bow the knee, and then as floutingly ſalute him with an All haile King, &c. The greater reverence is given in a diſgraceful way, the greater the diſgrace is; for ſhame is Glory turned into inglory or ſhame.

6. They ſpit on him: And it was not one, or two of them that did this; but many, (as it is ſaid.) Now this is the greateſt indignity that may be. If a Father ſpit in his Daughters Face, (who yet is an Inferiour to him) ſhall ſhe not be ſhut up (ſaies God, Numb. 12. 14.) in that he hath diſgraced her. And Iſa. 50. 6. Chriſt is brought in, ſaying, I hid not my face from ſhame and ſpitting upon; they are both linked together. The Face is the nobleſt of the Exteriour Parts of Man, as in which Gods Image doth ſhine forth, and is therefore called the glory of God, 1 Cor. 11. 7. Now therefore for it to have an Excrement with which Men will not defile a clean room they tread on, caſt upon it; what a diſgrace is it? And if ſo, how much more then, for that face to be ſpitted upon, in which the Light of the Glory of God ſhines far more immediately and more plentifully; 2 Cor. 4. 6. And how Diſgraces of this Nature muſt needs work upon a Spirit ſo high and ſo full of Glory as his was, we may ſee (and yet but a glimpſe of it neither) by the heart of that King, (one of our own) who being Depoſed, and by Night removed, was in his Journey ſhaved, to the end he might not be known, and ſet upon a Mole-Hill inſtead of a Chair of State, and waſhed with puddle-water. In the midſt of which, he burſt out into this pathetical Speech, I will yet have clean water to be waſht with: And forthwith he ſhed many tears which in rivulets diſtilled down his Princely Cheeks, and cleanſed them from that filth wherewith the Puddle-water had ſullied and beſmeared them. What heart would it not affect to read this Story of a King? And how much more did it affect his own heart? And yet, what was he to Chriſt, who in the midſt of all their miſuſage of him knew well what a Kingdom he was born unto! as himſelf told Pilate.

7. They unbare him and make him naked, and then whip him; and both theſe to his ſhame. Nakedneſs (you know) is ſhameful, and therefore our Firſt Parents when they were naked were aſhamed. And then for whipping, it was a puniſhment inflicted upon none but Slaves and Villains, never upon a free-born Roman: Therefore how afraid were the whippers of Paul when they heard that he was a Roman? And Maſtigia (or one that is ſubject to whipping,) and a baſe Villain are all one. Now the reaſon why they might whip Chriſt was, that he had taken upon him the form of a Servant; and ſo they whipt him as we uſe to do Run-awayes, which Peter alludes to ſpeaking king to Servants, and ſetting before them Chriſts Example: We like Sheep had gone aſtray, and by his ſtripes were we healed, 1 Pet. 2. 24, 25. Chap. 11.

8. hey mock him and abuſe him by giving him Gall before, and Vinegar after he was upon the Croſs to quench his thirſt with. Which therefore Chriſt is brought in mentioning, as being ſenſible of the ſcorn of it; Pſal. 69. 21. (which Pſalm is a Pſalm of Chriſt.)

9. They wagg their heads at him when on the Croſs, and gape with their mouths; which is firſt, a Geſture of Deſpiſing: So Iſa. 37. 22. it is ſaid of Zenacharib, that Zion had deſpiſed him and ſhaken her head at him: Secondly, It is a geſture of deteſtation. So Jer. 18. 16. it is ſaid of Iſrael that every one that paſſeth by her ſhall be aſtoniſhed and wag his head at her. Thirdly, It is a geſture of Scorn. So Lament. 2. 15. it is ſaid they hiſs and wag their heads (at Jeruſalem) and ſay, Is this the City that men call the perfection of beauty, and joy of the whole earth?

10. They mock and jeer him by the moſt contumelious words that could be, ὑβριςθήσεται, He ſhall be opprobriouſly reviled, Luke 18. 32. Yea, they blaſphemed him. 1. In all his Offices; As, 1. Prophetical, They blindfold him and ſmite him, and then bid him prophecy who it was that ſmote him. Chriſt will one day tell him that did it, who it was.) 2. Prieſtly, He ſaved others (ſay they) let him ſave himſelf. Why, he was even then a ſaving others by bearing their miſ-uſage; he was then a doing that for which they mockt him. 3. Kingly, If (ſay they) thou be the King of Iſrael, then come down, &c. Thus as they mock all his Offices, So,

2. His Perſon, and his being the Son of God: He truſted in God (ſay they) and ſaid he was the Son of God; let God now ſave him if he will have him. And (which is ſtrange) in theſe and the like Speeches they uſe the very ſame words that in Pſalm 22. were foretold ſhould be uſed by them when he ſhould be crucified: For theſe words of theirs you have there recorded, ver. 8. So that as Paul afterward told them, they fulfilled the Prophecies whilſt they ridiculed him. Yea,

3. (Which is an inhumanity unheard of before, or ſince) they mock at his very Prayers which he makes out of the deepeſt bitterneſs of Spirit that ever Creature ſpake out of, and which were full of the ſaddeſt complaints that could be uttered, when he cryed out moſt bitterly, Eli, Eli, My God, my God, why haſt thou forſaken me; they put it off and turn it into a ſcoffe, as if they underſtood it not, He calls for Elias (ſay they in ſcorn) as if he had prayed unto a Creature unto Elias, inſtead of the Living God: And let us ſee (ſay they) if Elias will come and help him. In Heb. 11. among other Perſecutions of the Martyrs, cruel Mockings are mentioned as none of the leaſt; Reproaches being to the Soul (as the Pſalmiſt expreſſeth it, Pſal. 64. 14.) as the pricking of a Sword. Now was there ever ſuch cruel Mockings as theſe heard of? Chriſt complains in Pſal. 69. 26. (for it is a Pſalm of him,) They perſecute him whom thou haſt ſmitten. When God had ſmitten him, and he in bitterneſs cryed, Eli, Eli, my God, my God, they turn it to Elias. Take the moſt hateful Malefactor that ever was, one that hath been the moſt flagitious Traitor to his Prince and Countrey that ever peſtered the Earth, and ſo had rendred himſelf moſt abominable and odious to all Mankind; yet let him come to dye for it, and though the rage and fury of Men make them not to compaſſionate his tortures, as being far leſs than his deſert; yet ſtill for his Soul, as it ſtands in relation to God, they wiih well to it, and that it may be ſaved; their Malice rageth not to jeer at the Prayers he makes for the Salvation thereof: Nay Men are even ready to afford comfort and help unto, and to further ſuch a Mans Faith, and to joyn in Prayers with, and for him. But theſe Jews ſcoffe at Chriſts very Prayers: They ſpeak what they are able to make him deſpair. If ever the Devil was abroad, and the Malice of Hell in the hearts of Men, it was at that day.

In the Second place: Add unto all theſe miſ-uſages thoſe Circumſtances that accompanied both his Death and Mockings to heighten his ſhame the more. God contrived all things ſo to fall out as to make his ſhame above meaſure ſhameful, as our Sin had been above meaſure ſinful; he heapt ſhame upon ſhame upon him.

The

Book V.

The First Circumstance here observable is that of Time : All this was done to him at the most Publick time that could be chosen out ; even at the Passover, when all the Males came up to Hierusalem and many Strangers with them to celebrate that Feast : A Concourse like our Commencement at our Universities, or like the most general Assembly you can imagine.

2. The Circumstance of Place : Which,

1. For the Publickness of it was at Hierusalem, the head City of Jury, a Stage the most eminent upon which to be made a Spectacle to Men and Angels. Art thou only a stranger in Hierusalem (said two of his Disciples unto himself) and hast not known these things ? Luke 24. 18. These things were not done in a corner (as his Disciples said.) And when God would shame David, he cast in this Circumstance to aggravate it ; Thou (saies God) didst it secretly, but I will punish it before this Sun.

2. (More specially and restrictly) for the Infamousness of the Place ; He was crucified at Golgotha a Place of Sculls, as ignominious as our Tyburn. The Place had a reproach in it : Therefore Heb. 13. 13. Jesus suffered without the gate (saies the Apostle) let us therefore go forth to him without the camp, [bearing his reproach] namely, of suffering in such a Place. It shewed he was an out-cast, rejected of Men, and as Dung cast out.

3. For the Persons that mockt him ; they were Persons of all sorts ; Kings and Rulers, Herod and the Elders, the Priests, and Soldiers, together with the Multitude of Common People that followed him, and that passed by occasionally ; yea, the very Thieves themselves that were crucified with him. Now the baseness of the Persons that contemn one doth add to the contempt. Therefore you shall find Job complaining, Job 30. from the first to the tenth. That those that were younger than he, and whose Fathers he would have disdained to set with the dogs of his flock, did mock him : They are (saies he, ver. 8, 9.) the children of Villains, more vile than the earth they tread on, and now I am their song. —yea, their by-word, &c. Reproach (saies Christ in one of the Psalms made of him) hath broken my heart, Psal. 69. 20.

4. The Death it self was also the most shameful ; even the death of the cross ; which for his Disciples to preach and profess, had in the Eyes of all the World a shame in it. Therefore Paul, Galat. 5. 11. calls it the offence or scandal of the cross. And if that were a shame to profess a crucified God, what a shame was it then for God himself to suffer such a Death. The Cross was so shameful, that therefore none of all the meanest and basest of the People could be procured so much as to carry it ; so that they were fain to compel Simon of Cyrene unto it. And it was the custom ever after to call such as carried a Malefactors Cross Crucigeri, as a brand of disgrace. And for himself to carry it (as he did) was such an addition of ignominie unto his Death, as for a Malefactor to go all the way to the Gallows with a Rope about his Neck.

5. All this was aggravated also by the Persons that suffered with him, and their saving one of their Lives before his. A comparative contempt is more than a simple one : As,

1. That he should be crucified between two Thieves ; as if he were the Prince of them. It is made an heightning Circumstance of his shameful Death (in Isa. 53. last,) that he was numbred amongst the transgressours. Then,

2. (Yet further,) That Barrabas the most infamous Thief, Seditious Person, and Murderer that was in that Nation, (and so, a Proclaimed Enemy unto that State,) should be voted to live by the common voice of all the People, and this when with the same breath they crye, Let Jesus be crucified, let him be crucified. Pilate put them upon choosing one of these two, and set Jesus in the comparison with Barrabas, on purpose to get Jesus saved, not thinking they would be so shameless as to prefer him to Christ who was a Murderer as well as a Thief, and one that had made himself odious unto them all, and whom by their Law they were not to pardon or suffer to live : Yet they are content to bring both the Blood he had shed (by sparing him and Christs) also upon their heads, by crucifying him rather than to deliver him that was Innocent. Thus much for the shame of his Death and Sufferings.

CHAP.

CHAP. XII.

The Extremity of pain which Christ our Redeemer indured in his Body. His being harrassed day and night without a moments rest. His being Crowned with Thorns, torn with Rods, and at last Crucified.

THE second thing to be considered is the Pains and dolours thereof, which are all sorts of ways set forth to us in his Story.

1. Immediately afore his death, want of sleep, not that whole Night onely, which preceded his Crucifying, on which he was kept waking in the High Priests Hall, but three or four Nights afore (as Brugensis computeth them.) He in preparation to his Passion, and being now to leave the World, spent those Nights in prayer on Mount-Olivet, and on the days did teach the People in the Temple after his coming into Jerusalem: So towards his end pouring forth his Spirit as a Sacrifice to God and his People ere he was offered up as the Sacrifice. He knew his Tabernacle was now to be dissolved, and he spared not himself whom God afterwards spared not, Daies and Nights wearing out himself in private prayer or preaching. Lukes Words are these, Luke 21. 37. And in the Days (it is in the plural) he was teaching in the Temple, and in the Nights he went out and abode in the Mount (that is the whole Nights, as abiding implies) that was called the Mount of Olives. This was his wonted custom for the time after he came into Hierusalem, confirming by his example what in the words afore he had taught his Disciples, Verse 36. Watch ye therefore and pray always, &c. And then Ver. 38. It follows, And all the People came early to him in the Morning (that is every Morning of those Nights, as knowing his manner and wont) for to hear him. These unceassant Prayers without rest, must needs bring a strong Body low in Spirits and weary it out. The fourth Night which was Thursday-night he was apprehended after those long Sermons made to his Disciples; which John hath recorded, and that solemn Prayer put up, John 17.

2. That Night and Next Day they hurried him up and down seven Journies from one place to another, (the Messiah had no rest, that those that were weary might have rest in him) according to the compute of six Miles and an half, or seven Miles.

3. Whilst he was that last Night in the High Priests Hall, they smote him with the Palms of their Hands (which are Bones as our Translators render that of Matthew, chap. 26. (67.) saith Matthew, and with their Fists saith Mark, and both often, others add with Rods, as the Word ῥαπίζειν signifies, derived from ῥαπὶς a Rod, and these on his Mouth or Face.

4. He had a Crown of thorns platted on his head, where the Nerves tendrest of sense do meet; to harrow Men with Thorns is made an high and grievous torture and punishment, Judges 8. 16. Gideon, when by sense he would teach the Men of Succoth, by sense and sore experience to do no more so wickedly, it is said, That he took the Elders of the City, and Thorns of the Wilderness, and Briars, and with them he taught the Men of Succoth. This Crown of Thorns was kept upon his head all the time, both in his way to the Cross, and whilst on the Cross, which pierced those Veins and Sinews on the Temples and Forehead, and caused his Face besmeared also with dust in his Travail to the Cross, to be (as the Prophet speaks) more marred then any Mans, Isa. 52. 14.

5. Add to this weariness and faintness of Spirits, which appeared in the carrying of his Cross. There was that one thing onely, wherein they seemed to pitty him, in calling to another to help him, Symon of Cyrene. But the truth of the thing was, That he having watcht and ſpent himſelf ſo many Days and Nights together, he failed ſo much, that they feared he would have fainted and ſo expired ere he came to the place of Execution, and ſo they ſhould have miſſed of their deſigned Malice in Crucifying of him. We have wearyed him with our ſins, and this made him weary and ready to faint. Oh come to him all ye that are weary and heavy laden.

6. He was whipt and ſcourged, which was twice, once by Pilate's command, and that to the end to move Compaſſion in the Jews, that ſo he having ſuffered ſo cruel a puniſhment, as was ſufficient to aſſwage their Malice, and to ſatisfy for any Crime they could in their own Imagination think him guilty of, who in Pilate's had deſerved nothing of death, they might relent and ceaſe to deſire his being crucified. And when he had ſcourged him, he brings him forth to publick view, and cries, Behold the Man. And after that he was again ſcourged (as John relates it) as of Cuſtome, the Romans uſe to do thoſe whom they Crucified. And theſe ſtroakes were laid on not by the Jews, who by their Law were limited not to exceed fourty ſtripes, but by the Roman Soldiers who had no bounds ſet them, but gave as many, and as cruel ones as their barbarous Nature pleaſed, unto an abject Man deſigned and condemned to the higheſt Tortures.

7. He after all was Crucified. The Evangeliſts aggravate not that in the circumſtances of it, only ſay, he was Crucified (but much is ſhut up in that one word.) The cruelty of that death being known in thoſe days, and by the relation of it in ſtories, and by thoſe who have made a Collection of it of the manner of it, in theſe days. The Apoſtle Paul put this emphaſis upon his death, To death even the death of the Croſs, Phil. 2. 8. Cruciatus, or the pains of the Croſs, being commonly uſed by the Romans (among whom this death was frequent) to expreſs the ſharpeſt pains and tortures. The manner of which was.

1 The Croſs, the Perſon to be Crucified was to be affixed unto being laid upon the ground, his hands and feet were ſtretcht out as far as they could extend, and then nailed in the hands and in the feet unto the Croſs; which the Pſalmiſt Foderunt Pſalm. 22. expreſſeth by digging holes in his hands and feet, ver. 16. (as the vulgar Tranſlation reads it) In the hands and feet the nerves again meet and Center, and ſo they are of the moſt exquiſite ſenſe. Then,

2. The rearing up the Croſs with the Man nailed on it, (whilſt on the ground) and fixing the Croſs in the hole which was digged for it, with a violent Jog to fix it in the Earth (as was their manner) this exceeded all the Torments of our Racks. In the 22. Pſalm, ver. 14, 15. himſelf tells us that it looſened all his bones, or my bones diſpart themſelves. And it is not onely ſaid, as ver. 17. I may tell all my bones; he hanging naked, but further, ver. 14. All my bones are out of joynt.

3. And thereon they hung till death, their arms and hands bearing the weight of their whole bodies, ſo as they dyed of meer pains (And thus Chriſt hung on the Tree, Acts 5. 30.) Exhauſting their Spirits. For a Man to hold his hands but ſtretcht out, what a trouble is it? Moſes could not for a day do it, but was fain to be ſupported.

4. And this put them into an exquiſite Feavour as ſuch Pains do, as appeared by his thirſt, as Pſalm. 22. 15. My ſtrength is dried as a Potſherd, and my Tongue cleaveth to my Jaws.

The laſt (of bodily ſufferings) is death it ſelf, which is the ſeparation of Soul and Body; unto this the Curſe reacht, and it was not his pains or ſhame or hanging on a Croſs that would ſatisfy, unleſs he alſo breathe out his Soul. This was neceſſary, unleſs the corn fall into the ground and die ('tis Chriſts own ſimilitude, John 12. 24.) it abideth alone. So he unleſs he had dyed, had been (of mankind) in Heaven alone. He was alſo to be the Founder of a Will and Teſtament, and that is not of force until the death of the Teſtator, He muſt therefore dye, Heb. 9. 16, 17. For where a Teſtament is, there muſt alſo of Neceſſity be the death of the Teſtator: For a Teſtament is of force after Men are dead; otherwiſe it is of no ſtrength at all whilſt the Teſtator liveth. And he was to be the Death of Death, Hoſea 13. 14. And 'tis a general rule, what he procured vertue for in Mans behalf half he did it by undergoing the same. Yea, he thereby made death a dead and ineffectual thing καταργήσαντα θάνατον, destroying Death, 2 Tim. 1. 10. This was held forth in the Type, Num. 35. 28. in that the Murderer or Manslayer was then set free from his Prison the City of Refuge, (which was a confinement to them) when the High Priest dyed, but not till then. Nor should we have been set free, unless our High Priest had dyed. Now for his Soul and Body thus to part, and for the Son of God united to both personally to continue that Union unto that dead Carcase of his Body laid in the Grave, what a Debasement was it, besides all considerations else that belong to this head. Chap. 13.

CHAP. XIII.

The greatest of all Christs Sufferings were those of his Soul. What were the Causes of those Sorrows. The Greatness of those Sufferings. Wherein they did consist. How it could consist with his being the Son of God, to be forsaken of God, and to bear such extreamity of his Fathers Wrath.

BUT yet though we have seen the Wo and Curse in this life due to us by sin, passed over and sustained by Christ; and secondly, the Curse of bodily death undergone too; (yet as the Revelation to another purpose speaks, there is a third Wo,) which a guilty Conscience fears more then all the other, and which is the Curse of Curses [Thou shalt dye the Death.] Two Woes are passed: behold a third Wo is yet to come, which is the great and main Curse of the Law that is to be undergone (as the Text saies) before the Law be fulfilled. For as the life promised [Do this and live] is more then to live bodily, or as a Beast doth, or Rationally, as Men do; it being to live in communion with God, as Angels do: So [Dying thou shalt dye] is more then the bodily death and returning unto dust. And as that life promised is the Favour of God; (thy Favour is better then Life, Psalm. 36. 3. with thee is the Fountain of Life, Psal. 63. 9. says David) so this death here threatened is from the Wrath of God; which therefore is put for Hell and Death; as when it is said, We are saved from Wrath to come, 1 Thess. 1. 10. This is the second Death, as it is called, Rev. 20. 6. And it is the Original Curse, the Fountain of Curses; whereas the death of the body, and all miseries of this Life are but the streams. This is the pure Curse, without mixture, (as it is called in the Revelation) the other is the Curse in the Dregs mingled and conveyed by Creatures. All other Curses light upon the outward Man first, and upon the Soul but at the rebound, and at the second hand, onely by way of simpathy and Compassion; but the immediate and proper subject of this Curse is the Soul and Spirit: Indignation and Wrath, Tribulation and Anguish upon every Soul that doth evil, Rom. 2. 9. And this is the summe of all Curses, and in stead of all the rest. And therefore Paul, when he would express his willingness not onely to dye bodily, but to endure Hell also, for his Brethren, as Christ had done for him; he expresseth it by this, I could wish my self to be accursed from Christ; (Rom. 9. 3.) that is, to be separated from all the Comfort I shall have by him, and endure that wrath that is due unto me, though undergone by him for me. Which wish of his may help us to understand how far Christ was made a Curse for us; for it was the love of Christ which constrained Pauls heart unto this wish; and his meaning was to undergo that for his Brethren in Christ, which Christ underwent for him, and so far as Christ underwent it, without sin. And so far as Paul wisht it without sinning (for he spake it in Christ, and in the Holy Ghost, as v. 1.) so far might, and did Christ undergo it without sin also. His meaning therefore was not that he was content to be cut off from being a Member of Christ, and so, to have no influence of Grace from Christ derived to him; No, that had been a sinful wish, and not from the Holy Ghost: But his meaning is, that he could be content to lose that portion of comfort which was to be had in the enjoying of Christ, and so undergo that displeasure from him which was due unto his sins, by feeling the effects of it in anguish and pain, &c. Thus when it is said, that Christ was made a Curse, not onely in bodily miseries, but in his Soul also; the meaning is not that the Hypostatical Union was dissolved, or the influence of Divine Grace restrained, but onely, that in regard of comfort he was forsaken of God, and felt the fearful effects of his Anger due to our sins, without sin and despair.

In like manner, when it is said, Christ underwent this Curse also, Dying thou shalt dye; the meaning is not that Christs Soul did dye the second Death; the Scripture speaks it not, neither are we to speak it; but thus the Scripture expresseth it, that his soul was heavy unto death, Mat. 26. 37, 38. It is spoken of this Curse of his Soul; which did not work death in it, but a heavines unto death, not extensivé so as to dye, but intensivé, that if he had died it could not have suffered more. As Jonas is said to be angry unto death, Jon. 4. 10. that is, he thought that Misery and Cross for which he was angry, to be even as great an affliction as death it self, and so he could out of his Anger wish for death: So Christs heavines was as great as theirs that undergo that death; yet dye he did not; it was but unto death; as Onesepherus was said to be sick unto death; or as a Woman in Travail is said to be at the point of Death; because if she were a dying, she could not have more pain. There is such an other Phrase, Acts 2. 24 where it is said, That Christ was raised up, God having loosed the Sorrows of Death; ὠδῖνας, the throws of Death, of which it was impossible he should be held. It is evident, that it is spoken of his Soul; for if it were spoken of Bodily death, there were no sorrows that remained on his body in the Grave, to with-hold it from rising again: No, these sorrows dyed when he dyed, and were then ended; and so could not be said to be upon his body, to hinder it from rising. Again, it is not absolutely called death, but the sorrows of death: that is, the same pain and throws that dying Mens Souls have, he felt. And it is observed, that the same Phrase that is used to express the Sorrows of Hell, 1 Thess. 5. 3. the Travail of a Woman, (so Psal. 18. 4, 5. the Pangs of Hell, or Birth-throws, as the Word signifies) the same Phrase [ὠδῖνας] is here used, signifying the Throws of a Woman in Travaile; and having reference to that Phrase in Isaiah 53. 11. He shall see of the travail of his Soul. His Soul and not his Person is there properly meant, for it is spoke as of a part of himself, He shall see of the travail of his Soul. Those pains were indeed Birth-throws to us, they tending to our life; but in him they were the Sorrows of Death. And so in this he bare the Womans Curse in his Soul, as well as Adams Curse in his Body; as he did eat in sweat, so he brought forth in pain, and in sorrows unto death; but yet such as did not kill his Soul; it dyed not; for he was to live to see his Seed, and have Joy in his soul for them for whom he had had most pain; so it is in Isai. 53. 10. For thirdly, these Sorrows did not hold him, had they held him, then indeed he had dyed. And the reason why he dyed not, was not, that he had not the same throws and stabs that use to kill others: for they are therefore called the Sorrows of Death, because they were the same which kill all Mens Souls in Hell: But he was too strong for them; Nature was too potent in him, and Life too vigorous: otherwise that which he underwent was enough to have kill'd out of hand all Men and Angels: but him they could not hold; it was impossible. Yet, Fourthly, they were loosened, not so, as never to have hold of him; or as if he never came in to them, (as Bellarmine trifles) No, he was in them; but (as Ps. 124. 7.) His Soul escaped as a Bird out of the snare, the snare was broken, and he was delivered. The Devils they are reserved in Chains too strong for them, Jude 5. but he like another Sampson brake these ropes, these cords:

Cords: So Pſal. 18. 5, 6. where the ſorrows of Hell are called Cords; for the ſame word, חֶבְלֵי, ſignifies both; and ſo the Chaldee Paraphraſt reads it. And yet Fifthly, becauſe theſe were truly the Pains of Death; therefore this delivery of his Soul from them is called a Reſurrection; and the greateſt wonder of his Reſurrection is aſcribed to this; for the main power of the Reſurrection was ſeen in raiſing his Soul, becauſe it conflicted with ſuch ſorrows: For his Soul had a Reſurrection, as well as his body; which Peter alſo, to ſhew he means it here, does diſtinctly mention, Acts 2. ver. 27. God's Promiſe was, that He would not leave Chriſts Soul in Hell (that is, under the preſſures of theſe ſorrows, there is the Reſurrection of his Soul from the ſorrows of death expreſt) nor ſuffer the holy one to ſee Corruption, there is the Reſurrection of his body from the power of the Grave; both which make up that great Reſurrection of his, there ſpoken of. For to raiſe a Soul from the Terrours of Gods wrath, does as much deſerve the Name of a Reſurrection, and more, as to raiſe a dead body: Therefore ſaies Heman (ſuffering theſe terrours in his Soul) I am like the Slain that lie in the Grave, and wilt thou ſhew wonders to the dead; ſhall the dead ariſe and praiſe thee, Pſ. 88. 15. And this Reſurrection Chriſts Soul had before it went out of his Body; for after it went out, it went to Paradiſe, and encountred not with the Pains of Death; but before it left his body, it did, and was reſcued: And therefore after that long conflict for three hours ſpace, whilſt the Curtains of the World were cloſe drawn, and all was huſht up in darkneſs; during which time he had ſtruggled with theſe ſorrows, and with Gods wrath, (which towards the concluſion he manifeſts by that bitter expreſſion, My God, my God, why haſt thou forſaken me? After that conflict (I ſay) he crys out, It's finiſht. Which ſome Divines think not to have reference to the work of Redemption, that, that work was finiſht; No, for that was not as yet finiſht, his bodily death being a part of it, as alſo the piercing of his Side, and laying of him in the Grave: but the meaning is, that now the great brunt was over; that Cup which he ſo feared was drunk off; his Soul was come out of its Eclipſe, as the Sun did then alſo out of its darkneſs, which was a ſhadow or ſign of this in his Spirit; unto this it is, that thoſe words refer: And that which ſeems to confirm it is, that when firſt theſe kind of Sorrows fell on him in the Garden, the Evangeliſt notes it ſaying, that then his Soul began to be heavy; and now when they went off him, he ſhews, that then it was finiſht. Chap. 13.

As therefore we, who are his Members, have a double Reſurrection in our Souls whilſt they are in our bodies, John 5. 25. the time now is, &c. and in our Bodies, at the latter day, ver. 29. in the ſame Chapter. So had Chriſt; one of his Soul from the Terrours following the guilt of ſin, the Sorrows of Death upon the Croſs; the other of his Body from the Grave the third day; which was a manifeſtation of the firſt. And anſwerably thoſe ſorrows may be called a kind of Death, at leaſt the Sorrows of Death; in the ſame ſenſe that Bodily dangers and diſtreſſes are called Dying; as Paul being in jeopardy every hour is ſaid to dye daily, 1 Cor. 15. 31. And ſo in that ſenſe, and no other, may he be ſaid to have undergone this Curſe of Dying the Death. Therefore, Iſa. 53. 9. we have his deaths in the plural mentioned, not his death onely; He made his Grave with the wicked in his Deaths. So in the original. And in his bearing theſe ſorrows of Death, was the Curſe abundantly fulfilled: (although he did not dye the ſecond death) For that wrath which is the Cauſe of the ſecond death in others, he underwent; and thoſe ſorrows of death which that Cauſe produceth, he bore: Though the ſame event followed not; his Soul dyed not, as theirs through weakneſs doth.

Having thus explained, and fitted theſe Phraſes to our hand; we will now come to the Particulars of the Sufferings of his Soul, which are meerly and properly ſuch, and which as that Curſe ſeizeth on wicked Men by degrees, ſo did ſeiſe on him by degrees, towards his end. The firſt mention we have of them is in John 12. 27. four days before his paſſion, when on the ſudden he breaks forth, Now is my Soul troubled, and what ſhall I ſay? He then ſaw the Storm a coming, and a black Cloud riſing, which troubled him; and in the expectation of it, he ſaw ſo much to be troubled at, as he knew not how to expreſs it, but cries out, What ſhall I ſay?

The

Book V.

The ſecond degree was in the Garden, as both Mat. Chap. 26. from ver. 36. to the end, Mar. 14 from ver: 32. to 51. Luke 22. 40. and John 18. 1, 2. do ſet it down. There it was where the ſtorm overtook him ere ever he fell into the hands of Judas or the High Prieſt: and he began to feel ſome drops of it; and indeed the ſorrows that there ſeiſed on him were ſuch, as fetcht blood from him ere theſe his Enemies approached him. Whereby was ſhewn, that he had other and greater miſeries to encounter with then from Men. And whereas for all his bodily ſorrows, we hear not one groan from him, as neither for his wounding with the Crown of Thorns, with Nails, &c. But as a ſheep that openeth not his mouth, ſo was he led to the ſlaughter, Iſa. 53. 7. Yet herein the very entrance into theſe ſorrows we hear him lamenting, Mat. 26. 38. My Soul is heavy unto death: He names, and as it were laies his finger on the part affected, which was not his Body, but his Soul; it was there where his grief lay. And we have many words and expreſſions which may help us to ſee into his grief, what it was: Amongſt which, the firſt and loweſt expreſſion is [ἀνωεῖδαι] Mat. 26. 37. He had ſaid before, that he was troubled; and we read not ſo much as of the leaſt trouble of his for outward pains; but now it is ſaid, He became ſorrowful. It was no pain of his body could make his great Spirit ſorrowful. Sorrow is more then pain, as Joy is more then Delight. Beaſts are never ſorrowful properly; and yet they have all ſorts of pains of the body, which touch not their Souls with a Reflection and ſo cau ſe ſorrow. The cauſe of Chriſts ſorrow reacht his reaſonable Soul, which is the proper ſubject of ſorrow, and not the inferior, but the ſuperior part alſo. Yea Tully reſtrains the Word Triſtis to ſorrow for the puniſhment of ſin and wickedneſs; Poena ſceleris triſtis eſt. And yet this is but the loweſt degree; but the beginning of ſorrows; which notwithſtanding reached as deep as any kind of worldly ſorrow could do; for even Davids ſorrow or affliction for his Son Abſalom is expreſſed by the ſame Word.

Now there were two things which made his Soul to be thus ſorrowful.

1. The ſins of the World imputed to him and charged on him.
2. The Curſe or Wrath of God upon him for thoſe ſins.

Firſt, The ſins of the World came in upon him; and therefore ver. 38. he is not ſimply ſaid to be ſorrowful, but περίλυπος; which word ſignifies an encompaſſing about with ſorrows, as David often expreſſeth it, The ſorrows of Hell encompaſſed me about, Pſal. 18. 5. His ſoul was plunged into them over head and ears, ſo that he had not ſo much as a breathing hole. For Intenſion this ſorrow was unto Death; and for Extenſion, all the Powers and Faculties of his Soul were begirt, beſieged, and impriſoned, and this expreſſion is eſpecially uſed in reſpect to our ſins taking hold of him. So Pſal. 40. 12. Innumerable evils encompaſs me about, mine Iniquities take hold of me. It is ſpoken by Chriſt as in his ſufferings; for of him is that Pſalm Prophetically made. So that, I take it, this Phraſe περίλυπος hath a more proper reſpect to the charging of our particular ſins upon him, which began to encompaſs him, or (as Iſaiah's Phraſe is, Iſa. 53.) to meet in him, to come about him from every Quarter. His Soul was ſo invironed and ſhut up in ſorrows, (or in Priſons, as Iſaiah's Phraſe, Iſa. 53. 8. is) that he had not a cranny left for comfort to come in at. Galat. 3. 23. The Law is compared to a Priſon, in which Men under the Guilt of ſin are ſhut up; and ſo was Chriſt. Now no Temporal Miſeries do ſo environ an ordinary Mans Spirit, but that there is ſome hole left to take breath at: But ſin can do it; and much more, all the ſins of the World, which now at once did meet at, and beſet Chriſts Soul. As Heb. 12. 1. Sin is ſaid to be that which eaſily beſets us; and ſo do both the power and the guilt of it.

Secondly, There is yet a further expreſſion uſed by an other Evangeliſt, that reſpects the Terrours of Gods Wrath ſeconding and following upon this his apprehenſion of our ſins; and it is in Mark 14. 33. He began to be ſore amazed, ἐκθαμβεῖσθαι, which is a third expreſſion uſed concerning his Trouble. Our Tranſlation rightly renders it, ſore amazed; for θαμβεῖν ſignifies to be amazed; but ἐκ added ſignifies the extreamity of that amazement, ſuch as when Men fall into it, their hair ſtands an end, and their fleſh trembles: It ſignifies to be in horrour. No ſooner had theſe our ſins preſented themſelves to him as being our Surety, but that withal, Thunder and Lightning from God do preſently ſtrike him, and his Wrath and Curſe for them ſuddenly arreſts him; this was it that put him into ſuch an amazement as contains in it both fear and horrour. His Father is preſented unto him as an angry Judge brandiſhing his Sword of Juſtice. And as the delivering of the Law made Moſes tremble, ſo the Curſe of the Law made Chriſt: I quake and tremble, ſays Moſes; or (as David expreſſeth it) My fleſh trembleth becauſe of thy Judgments, Pſal. 119. 120. Chap. 13.

Now in the Third Place follows the effect of both theſe two, (namely the Imputation of our ſins, and the Inflicting of Gods Wrath) which was an ἀδημονία, an exceeding heavineſs upon him. Which Word both Mat. chap. 26. 37. uſeth, ſaying, ἤρξατο ἀδημονεῖν, which is tranſlated, He began to be very heavy; and the ſame in Mark chap. 14. 33. where it in like manner follows that former expreſſion of his being amazed. Now this Word imports firſt the deep intention of his Mind, ſo as to be wholly taken and ſwallowed up with ſorrow and amazement, and even to be abſtracted from his own Thoughts, and to forget all comfort whatſoever, being wholly intent and thinking upon nothing elſe but Gods Wrath, with which he was to encounter: So full, ſo adequate an Object is ſin and the wrath due unto it; even broad enough for Chriſts Underſtanding to be wholly taken up with it. And therefore he hath the Thoughts of our Salvation as it were ſtruck out of his Mind for a time, all his powers being ſo occupied about, and poſſeſſed with theſe doleful ſights preſented, that they forgate their own Functions. Some have put a farther Emphaſis upon the Word, as noting out, not onely an abſtraction of the Mind, but a Diſtraction alſo upon the ſuddenneſs of the blow; ſuch as might befal him through ſimple Infirmity; deriving it from a Privative, [ἀ] and [δήμος Populus] becauſe Men in Diſtractions are ſeparated from the reſt of the People; which in the ſenſe before given may be ſafely attributed to him; namely, that the Powers and Faculties of Nature did for a while forget their Functions. Now all this might be without ſin; as the Wheels of a Clock may be ſtopt in their ordinary courſe, and yet not put out of frame, or diſordered. And this ſtrong intention of his upon Wrath, was then, that which God did call for; for Chriſts buſineſs was, to ſuffer Gods Wrath for ſin; and as taking pleaſure in any thing, ſo ſuffering too depends upon the Intention. Inſomuch, that ſome do therefore judge, that even the Damn'd in Hell cannot ſin, becauſe their Thoughts are ſo intently taken up with wrath, that there is no room for a thought of ſin.

Secondly the Word notes out a failing, deficiency, and ſinking of Spirit; it is penè exanimari, as happens to Men in Sickneſſes and Swoundings. So Epaphroditus his Sickneſs whereby he was brought near unto death, Phil 2. 26, 27. is called ἀδημονία. So that we ſee, Chriſts Soul was ſick and fainted. Thus Pſal. 40. 12, 13. (which Pſalm is all of Chriſt; for it is that Pſalm quoted Heb. 10. 5, 6.) where Chriſt is brought in ſaying, when he came to offer himſelf, that innumerable Evils incompaſs'd him about, and his iniquities took hold of him; therefore his heart failed him. Iniquities are there promiſcuouſly put for Sins and Puniſhments: If ſin be meant, Chriſt our Surety now calls our ſins his; and being laid to his charge, they take hold of him. If he had ſtood in his own Righteouſneſs, he would not have feared, but being inveſted with, and appearing in our ſins, he was afraid as Adam was, and his heart forſook him; not ſinfully, out of diſtruſt, but out of ſimple infirmiy of Nature; ſuch a failing, as a Creature though never ſo holy muſt needs have at the greatneſs of Gods Wrath; the Creature being unto Gods Wrath and before him who is everlaſting Burnings (as Iſaiah ſpeaks Iſa. 33. 14.) and a conſuming Fire, (as Moſes calls him, Deut. 4. 24.) but as the Wax is to the Fire, before which it melts. Which is alſo Chriſts own expreſſion concerning himſelf, Pſal. 22. 14. (a Pſalm throughout ſpeaking of his Crucifying) My heart (ſays he) was melted like Wax; noting out that natural Infirmity and Deficiency which was in his Humane Nature as ſuch, now when God approached to him as a conſuming Fire: So as it was meerly a Natural failing, not a Moral. And this we muſt know, that in theſe his ſufferings Chriſt's Humane Nature was left to its Infirmities, that he might fully ſuffer. The Godhead though ſuſtaining him in Union with himſelf, and in Faith towards God as his Father; yet left him to the Natural weakneſſes of a Creature, not ſhewing his power in ſtrengthening him ſo againſt his Wrath as that he ſhould not be ſenſible of it but in ſupporting him under it. Therefore 2 Cor. 13. 4. it is ſaid, he was Crucified through weakneſs, but raiſed in Power. For in this work of ſuffering the Godhead ſlept, (as the Fathers expreſs it) and left him to Natural Infirmities, (but not to ſinful;) otherwiſe he had not been Crucified. In reſpect of which Infirmity unto which he was left, it is ſaid, Luke 22. 43. that an Angel came to ſtrengthen him. And it argued a great inanition or emptying himſelf, that the Creator of the ends of the Earth, who faints not, and who is the God of Comfort, ſhould borrow comfort of an Angel.

A third and further Degree of this his ſuffering was that which Luke adds, Luke 22. 44. that he was ἐν ἀγωνίᾳ at ſtrife, or engaged in a Combat, as the Word implies, it coming from ἀγὼν, certamen. And yet there was no Man by to encounter with; and the good Angel who comforted him, did not wraſtle with him. Chriſt had before wraſtled with Principalities and Powers in the Wilderneſs: But thoſe encounters with Satan feteht no blood from him, as theſe here do; this Agony, this wraſtling was therefore with his Fathers wrath which now had taken hold on him, and under which he now lay ſtruggling. And this I make a further Degree of his Souls ſuffering then the former; for the former expreſſions ſet forth the trouble of his Spirit, as but at the firſt onſet and encounter, when firſt he entred into the Liſts, and the warning onely was given to this bloody Combat. Therefore when all the former are mentioned, it is ſtill ſaid in every Evangeliſt, He began to be heavy, and began to be ſore amazed, &c. as noting out thoſe to have been the troubles of his Spirit upon the firſt view, and in the very entrance, and beginning of them: But now he is in an Agony, in a ſet Battle; it came now to blows, to wounds, to blood: He ſweats drops of blood at this Agony, ſo hot and grievous was it. Neither could fervency of Prayer cauſe this ſweat, for it was this Agony that was the cauſe of that fervency in prayer: So in Luke it follows, being in an Agony he prayed more earneſtly. What was it then that he encountred with? Even that which Job ſtruggled with, Job 6. 4. The Terrours of God (ſays he) ſet themſelves in array againſt me. And for the effect of this encounter and Agony, it was anſwerably greater then the former; it made him ſweat drops of Blood. All ſweat is from weakneſs, and an over-preſſing of Nature; and ſo in him it argues that failing, ſinking, and wounding of Spirit before-mentioned. Dying Men do uſe through faintneſs to ſweat a cold ſweat; but never a bloody ſweat; but Chriſts Soul being now heavy unto death and ſcorcht with Gods Wrath, does ſweat B*lood*. Theſe Dolours fetch not onely watery Tears from his Eyes, but he weeps Blood all over, and not by Drops onely, but clodders, and that in a cold Night: Yea it came through his Garments, and that in ſuch abundance, as it fell upon the Ground, and left the marks of it thereon behind. Adam in Innocency ſhould not have ſweat, nor eaten his Meat with labour and pain; but Chriſt now taſts of the Cup which he deſired ſhould paſs from him, and it caſts him into a ſweat of Blood.

Well, but yet all this was but the firſt onſet of this great Battle; it was but a skirmiſh to begin it; in which and after which God gave him a time to breathe, and to go to his Diſciples, and then come again to the ſame Place. Theſe Blows came but at times; not ſo thick, but that they ſuffered him to take breath: He had lucida intervalla, ſome flaſhes of comfort in this Agony, ſome Intermiſſions, ſome reſpite for a time; but the main and great Battle is yet to be fought, even upon Mount-Calvary; (and thither let us follow him) where after they had hung his Body up upon a Tree, and divided his Garments before his Face, and had a while ſaid and done their Pleaſures, Chriſt having made his Will, and given Heaven to the believing Thief, and bequeathed the care of his Mother unto John; after all this, on the ſudden are the Curtains of the World drawn, and the Sun for three Hours loſeth its light. A bloody Battle was now towards, and therefore it was a black day: Chriſt was to encounter with the utmoſt power of Darkneſs, and therefore the Field he fights it out in, is Darkneſs.

Two

Two things were due unto us for our ſins ;

1. Pœna Damni ; the loſs of Gods Favour, and a ſeparation from God and all good, even to a Drop of Water. Chap. 13.

2. Pœna Senſus ; the Curſe and Wrath of God. Other things are but either Circumſtances or Conſequents of ſuffering theſe in thoſe who are ſinners. We have them both mentioned, Job 13. 24. Wherefore hideſt thou thy Face, (ſays he to God ; There is the Puniſhment of Loſs or Privation) and holdeſt me for an Enemy ? There is the puniſhment of Senſe.

Theſe two are the Subſtance of the Pains in Hell, and do now both fully meet in Chriſt.

1. Pœna Damni ; for all comforts fail him : If he deſires but a drop of Water, it is denied him ; if a beam of light, the Sun affords none ; his Diſciples had all forſaken him ; and whereas heretofore an Angel came to him and comforted him, now not an Angel dares look out of Heaven : His heart had before this melted out of fear, and failed him ; ay but (ſays David) though my fleſh fails, yet God fails me not, Pſal. 73. 26. But behold God himſelf forſakes Chriſt : So at the end of this Conflict he complains, or rather vehemently affirms it, (as the Hebrew Phraſe bears it.) He is ſaid to be forſaken, not onely in regard of his being kept in the Hands of his Enemies (as ſome would have it onely meant.) For,

1. This then would have been uttered by him at the firſt, when he fell into their hands, and not now at laſt onely. And,

2. Though Enemies perſecute us and have their Wills of us, yet we are ſaid not to be forſaken, as 2 Cor. 4. 9. Perſecuted, but not forſaken, that is, though left in the Hands of Men, yet not forſaken by God ; ſo that forſaken is put in oppoſition to being left to the Perſecutions and power of our Enemies. But Chriſt is not only ſaid to be left to the power of enemies, but to be forſaken by God himſelf; which how it could be, I ſhall afterwards explain. And this was the Extremity of his emptying, emptying to nothing, as Dan. 9. 26. Meſſiah ſhall have nothing ; that is, nothing left to comfort him ; ſo his cutting off is expreſt.

2. Pœna Senſus ; He was made a Curſe, and encountred his Fathers Wrath ; which firſt the Darkneſs that was then about him may inform us of ; if ever the face of Hell were upon the Earth, it was at that day. All which while we read not of any word that Chriſt ſpake, till at laſt. So that as Darkneſs covered, ſo ſilence huſht all about him ; that ſo he might without interruption or intermiſſion encounter with his Fathers wrath. And the Place was the Air, the very Kingdom of the Prince of Darkneſs. Secondly, the Tree he hangs on declares it, which God before had curſed ; and therefore now eſpecially it is, that Chriſt is made a Curſe, as the Apoſtle intimates, Gal. 3. 13. Where he ſpeaks as if Chriſt had never been a Curſe until now ; and therefore it is that Chriſt is ſaid to bear our ſins in his body (that is, his Humane Nature) on the Tree. And he had no Type of his being Crucified, but the Braſen Serpent, which of all Worms elſe God had onely Curſed. And therefore now it is, that the Treaſures of Wrath are broke up, the Cataracts of Curſes ſet open, and the Sluces pull'd up, ſo to let in all our ſins upon him, God now afflicting him with all his Waves. And when this Eclipſe by reaſon of Gods wrath went off his Spirit, and it received light again, then he cryed out, (as was ſaid) it is finiſht ; which was ſpoken juſt before his giving up the ghoſt, as declaring that the great brunt was over, as was before explained.

There is one thing which yet remains to be done, for the finiſhing of this Point, viz.

By way of Explication, to ſhew how it might ſtand with his being the Son of God to be thus forſaken, and made a Curſe.

1. For the Explication ; (which I put firſt becauſe it will facilitate and make way for the Proofs themſelves, both by laying foundations for them, and alſo by removing prejudices that might hinder the entertainment of them.) There are two things which I mentioned as the Integral Parts of that Puniſhment due to us for ſin, but undergone by Chriſt.

1. His being forſaken by God.

2. His enduring God's Wrath : Both which make up this Curſe.

Book V.

I will ſpeak diſtinctly and apart to the Explication of either, and firſt, how to underſtand his being forſaken of God; which is not to be underſtood

1. As if the Union of the Godhead with the Humane Nature had been diſſolved; but ſo, as it might ſtill be compatible, and rightly ſtand with it. For it was not a forſaking in reſpect of the Eſſence of the Godhead, but of his Preſence, and ſo in a way of Sence. The Godhead was not ſeparated, though the operation of comfort from the Godhead were ſequeſtred. The Union Hypoſtatical continued ſtill with his Soul now filled with the Sorrows of Death, as well as it did with his Body when he lay in the Grave. And ſo, as although his Body was united to the Fountain of Life, yet it might dye in reſpect of a Natural Life: So his Soul, although the Hypoſtatical Union continued, might yet want comfort, which is Life.

2. Nor yet is it to be underſtood, as if all communion had been cut off, in regard of ſupport and the Influence of Grace; but onely in reſpect of Joy and comfort in, and from Gods Face; even as the Sun hath influence into the Generation of Mettals buried under the Earth, whither its Light comes not. Though Grace Naturally followed from that Union, yet Comfort proceeded voluntarily from it, and therefore might be and was now ſuſpended. Deus ſe communicat (ſays Scotus) vel qua beatus eſt, vel qua ſanctus: God communicates himſelf to the Creature, either as he is bleſſed by comforting it and making it partaker of his Happineſs; or as he is holy, by making it Partaker of his Purity. Now theſe two may be ſevered; God ceaſed not now to communicate himſelf to Chriſt in Holineſs, but onely in Comfort and ſenſe of Happineſs.

3. This his deprivation of Comfort was poſſible; for he was not yet Glorified, (as John ſays,) Wherefore as his Deity might and did with-hold from his Body that Glory which was due unto it, whilſt on Earth, and which ſhone ſo in his Transfiguration; by the like reaſon might the Deity with-hold all ſenſe of comfort from his Soul, during that Hour. Subtraxit Deus Viſionem, non Unionem, (as Leo Magnus ſpeaks) Yea,

4. It was neceſſary that there ſhould be ſuch a ſuſpenſion of communion of beatifical comfort, and ſo a ſenſible want of it: For had God then communicated himſelf in that fulneſs of Comfort and Joy that was Chriſts, due by vertue of that Union Hypoſtatical, Chriſt had not felt any Sufferings from Man at all; even as many Martyrs have not, through a Joy unſpeakable and glorious. He was therefore to be left to his Infirmity, that he might be ſenſible; and therefore, to be forſaken in reſpect of comfort; and if in reſpect of ſome degrees of comfort, then why not in reſpect of all; So that,

5. This ſupport was onely in reſpect of upholding his Faith: That as one who walketh in darkneſs, and hath no light, yet truſts in the Name of God, Iſa. 50. 10. So Chriſt forſakes him not, but cries, My God, my God, and to the laſt cleaves faſt unto him. And therefore Gods forſaking him was not ſuch an one as befel Saul, when he alſo forſook God, No, Chriſt though he kills him does ſtill truſt in him.

Now in the ſecond place to explain how he might endure Gods Wrath, and be made a Curſe: Which is the Pœna Senſus and the ſecond thing mentioned. There are many Difficulties in view which ſeem to argue it impoſſible; and it is therefore the more hardly to be received; both becauſe there is no other inſtance of one innocent and beloved, that was made a Curſe for another, or that endured Gods wrath: As alſo becauſe no meer Creature can be made ſin by Imputation, but that it muſt be defiled by it; neither can it bear the wrath of God, but muſt certainly deſpair and ſink under it. Now all thoſe Objections and Difficulties which Divines bring in againſt it, I ſhall take away by theſe following Concluſions; which alſo explain the Point.

1. The Soul of a Creature, and ſo, of Chriſt as ſuch, may in it ſelf properly and immediately ſuffer Gods wrath, and not onely mediately by compaſſion or fellow-feeling from the Body. This is evident; for beſides that many have in their Spirits ſuffered the Wrath of God in this Life, when environed with outward comforts; (as David did) and therefore Solomon calls it the wounding of the Spirit, and ſo differenceth it from other Infirmities: It is farther evident by by this, that in Hell the Soul ſuffers immediately, without the Body, until the Day of Judgment. And the reaſon of this is as plain; for God is the Father of Spirits: And as the Fathers of our Bodies can chaſtiſe them; ſo can God the Spirit, Heb. 12. 9. Chap. 13.

2. That the wrath of God ſhould be thus endured, it is not of abſolute neceſſity that Men ſhould be in the Place of Hell ere they undergo it; it may be endured here. For the Devils being out of that place and in the air, do ſtill endure it, or at leaſt may; as the Angels when out of Heaven, about their Miniſtration here below, are ſaid to ſee Gods Face, Mat. 18. 10. Their Angels (ſays Chriſt ſpeaking of little Children) do always behold the face of my Father which is in Heaven. They are ſaid to be their Angels, in reſpect of their being ſent for them, and their waiting on them; and whilſt they wait on them here below, ſtill their beholding Gods face is not interrupted for they always ſee Gods Face. If Paul were rapt up into the Third Heaven when alive; then why might not Chriſt in his Spirit deſcend into the nethermoſt Hell; and this, whilſt in the Body, and here upon Earth? And if he himſelf was as in Heaven, when Transfigured; why then not in Hell, when Crucified? For it is Gods Wrath that is Hell, as it is his Favour that is Heaven. Many wicked Men have a kind of Hell here, the earneſt of Hell hereafter, (even as the Godly have a taſt and earneſt of Heaven in this Life) ſo had Cain, Judas, &c. but they cannot undergo the full Torments of Hell here; and the reaſon is, becauſe their Souls would then dye, and their Bodies be conſumed. The People hearing but the Law given by God, thought they ſhould dye; of which their weakneſs was the Cauſe. As Corruption cannot inherit Incorruption, nor bear alive in this Mortal fleſh the Joys of Heaven; Who hath ſeen him and lived? ſo nor could this Corruption fully endure the Pains of Hell. But Jeſus Chriſts Soul could ſubſiſt in his Body, it being backt with the Godhead, even when filled with Gods Wrath, as well as when filled with Glory, as at the Transfiguration. The Creatures like an Altar of ſtraw would have been burnt up by that fire, if their Souls had been to ſerve for the Sacrifice; whereas this Altar of Chriſts Body was covered with Braſs (as in the Levitical Law) to conſerve it from being conſumed to Aſhes.

3. It is not a thing impoſſible, or unjuſt, for an innocent Soul to have the ſins of others imputed to it; no more then it is impoſſible for a ſinful Soul to have the Righteouſneſs of another made over to it. Now 2 Cor. 5. 21. it is ſaid, that Chriſt was made ſin, that we might be made Righteouſneſs, and not having my own Righteouſneſs, ſays Paul, Phil. 3. 9. I ſay, it is not unjuſt, and therefore not impoſſible, in caſe the Party innocent be content to become a Surety; as Judah was, Gen. 43. 9. who was content if Joſeph ſhould detain his Brother Benjamin, to take that ſin and evil upon him: Let me then (ſays he to his Father) be always as a ſinner unto thee. And the ground is, becauſe though his own Acts make him not a Sinner, yet his own Covenant and conſent do make him a Surety, and ſo oblige him to the others guiltineſs and puniſhment, and wholly to bear the blame. Thus Prov. 6. 1, 2, 3. it is ſaid of a Surety, that he may be ſnared with the Words of his Mouth; and ſo was Chriſt: It was by his own compact and agreement.

4. A Soul having thus taken the guilt of ſin upon it, God may juſtly vent his Anger upon ſuch a Soul for ſin, and expreſs that Anger againſt that Soul, as againſt the ſinner, though otherwiſe God loves him. For it is juſt with God to inflict his wrath and Curſe for ſin on whomſoever he finds that ſin, whether by perſonal Guilt, or by Imputation. And therefore it is no wonder if he be accurſed by God, who hath the guilt of that upon him which God hates, and therefore curſeth. If God Curſed the Earth becauſe of Mans ſin, which was but his Houſe he dwelt in; then much more muſt Mans Surety expect wrath and a Curſe, who will be ſo hardy as to take his ſin upon him.

5. And further, That Soul though innocent in it ſelf, may be made ſenſible of the Impreſſions of that Anger for ſin thus imputed. Thoſe of a contrary Judgment think, that therefore he could not have been made ſenſible of Gods Wrath for ſin, becauſe he had not the Worm of Conſcience. But though it be true, that Chriſt had not an evil Conſcience (which to affirm were Blaſphemy) that is, not ſuch a Conſcience as that ſin could ever trouble him by way of ac-

cuſing him, (as Sinners Conſciences do) ſo as to make him ſay, What a Wretch am I, that I ſhould do thus and thus; (which is one of the greateſt Torments in Hell;) though this troubled not Chriſt, yet his Conſcience might

1. Apprehend the evil of ſin as fully, nay more, then any of ours. And to ſee ſin as ſin is Hell, ſays Luther. And ſo,

2. He might be made conſcious of ſin, not directly, or immediately, as ſinners are; but by being conſcious of his own Covenant to take ſin upon him as his own. An accuſing could not ariſe from within; but it might from without as ſin was imputed. His Conſcience might tell him, that he by compact did undertake the guilt of theſe ſins which he ſees to be thus evil; and ſo he might come to look on them as his by Covenant; and this with a grief and horrour ſuitable to the evil of them. So Pſalm 40. 12. Mine Iniquities have taken hold on me, ſo that I am not able to look up; they are more then the hairs of my head, therefore my heart faileth me. That Pſalm is made of Chriſt. Now if he confeſſed ſins as his own, he might have Grief and Dolour for them; and ſo though not an accuſing Conſcience from within himſelf, yet a Conſcience loaded and charged with them by God from without.

3. His Conſcience looking at ſin as thus evil, and deſerving Gods Wrath, and as made his own by Covenant; he might in fear look upon God as a Judge. And thus afraid and amazed was Chriſt in the Garden, for then he appeared with our ſins on him; and thereupon was afraid, as Adam was; onely Adam out of a guilt that he had done the fact himſelf; but Chriſt that knowing what Gods wrath was, he had expoſed himſelf unto it by aſſuming Adam's ſin. And that this may be, appears by this; for if we have Peace of Conſcience from Chriſts Righteouſneſs imputed to us by Faith apprehending it to be thus imputed by a Covenant, and ſo rejoice in God as ours; then why (in a contrary way) might not Chriſt have Fears and Terrours, and Impreſſions of Wrath from the guilt of ſin, which he apprehended as made his onely by a Covenant between God and him, yet really and juſtly charged on him?

6. Neither did the Perſonal Union of his Soul unto the Godhead put in ſuch a Bar or hindrance to all this, or make ſuch an exception, that though the Soul of a meer Creature might be capable of all this, yet not his, by reaſon of this Union: For he might be forſaken, and the Union not diſſolved, as was before ſhewn; and he might as well be left to endure Gods Wrath, and anguiſh in his Spirit from it, that Union continuing; as if he had not been ſo united. For if the Godhead might and did leave his Body to bodily pains for ſin, (which were fruits of the Curſe) which yet was thus united to the Godhead as well as his Soul; why might not his Soul be alſo left to ſuffer ſuch Torments as the Souls of Men are capable of? If it be ſaid, that of all things elſe, the ſtate and relation he ſtood in towards God by reaſon of this Union, would not admit this, that Chriſt ſhould be accurſed of God, and dealt withal in wrath by him, ſeeing he was his beloved Son: And that neither could the Father be thus diſpleaſed with him, nor could the Son really apprehend God to be ſo indeed and in truth, ſeeing he muſt needs know himſelf to be Gods Son, and ſo beloved of him all the while;

The Reſolution is;

1. That God for his part might have both theſe affections towards him at once, altho' he was his Natural Son; and the reaſon is evident; for if Chriſt might bear and ſuſtain two ſuch Relations or Perſons, the one as the Son of God and beloved of him, the other as our Surety made ſin for us; then might God ſuitably bear towards him two ſuch contrary affections of Love and Wrath, and accordingly expreſs them. Or thus; As Chriſt ſtands with two reſpects upon him, as a Son, and as a Surety; ſo did God alſo in anſwer to theſe two, ſuſtain two Relations towards him; of a Father towards him as a Son, and of a Judge towards him as a Surety. And theſe two might well ſtand together; as in a Father that is a juſt Judge, before whom his Son is brought as a Surety for anothers Debt; though he entirely loves him as a Son, yet he muſt and ought to condemn him in the Suit, and exact the payment of the Debt, or inflict ſome other puniſhment on him, (as the matter he is Surety for requires) as he is a Judge; and he is to act both theſe parts, as the ſeveral reſpects in the things themſelves require: Juſtice in this caſe as well requiring that he ſhould puniſh him, as well as Nature that he ſhould love him. We may ſee this exemplified in an Inſtance fetcht from God himſelf and his carriage towards us his adopted Sons and Children, whom he loves with the ſame love, though not in the ſame degree that he loves his Natural Son, John 17. 23. God is upon ſeveral reſpects both an Enemy and a Friend unto us at once; we are at once both hated and beloved; even whilſt we are in the ſtate of Nature. Gods Elect if conſidered as inveſted with ſin, and in the ſtate of Unregeneracy, upon which God hath pronounced a Curſe, they are under wrath, and Children of Wrath, and ſo pronounced accurſed: And yet at that time their Perſons as they are his choſen ones from everlaſting, are beloved, and therefore called his People, and his Sheep: So were the Jews, Rom. 11. 28. As concerning the Goſpel, they are Enemies for your ſakes; but as touching Election, they are beloved for their Fathers ſake. They are at once Children of Wrath as well as others, Eph. 2. 3. and Sons of Peace, Luke 10. 6. and this when uncalled. Now thus it may be towards his Natural Son, if he over and above takes ſuch a relation on him, of being a Surety for ſinners; onely with this difference, that Gods Love to him is natural, becauſe he is his Natural Son, and the relation Natural; and his Anger but accidental and adventitious, and taken up by him, (yet juſtly) becauſe this Relation of Chriſt his being a Surety is anſwerably, but aſſumed and taken up by him: Yet they are real both on the one ſide and on the other: And therefore, Zach. 13. 7. where God is ſaid to ſmite the Shepherd, (namely Chriſt) it is made to be a forced Act as it were, and ſuch as he is fain to ſtir up himſelf to do by reſpects of Juſtice, and therefore he calls upon his Sword, Awake O Sword againſt the Man that is my Fellow. God conſiders he is his Son, and Natural Son, (his Fellow,) and ſo he naturally loves him, and cannot find in his heart to ſtrike him; yet Juſtice muſt be done, ſeeing he ſtands as a Surety for ſinners; and ſo he draws his Sword; notwithſtanding as being put upon it by Arguments, Reaſons, and Conſiderations moving him to it; and therefore he is ſaid to awaken it. Chap. 13.

In a word; it is one thing to be an Enemy, and an other to carry ones ſelf as an Enemy: So Job 19. 20. ſaies Job to God, Why counteſt thou me thine Enemy; that is, why dealeſt thou with me as if I were ſo, when as I am thy Child. Thus did God with Chriſt.

And in the ſecond Place. Chriſt for his part might have anſwerable Apprehenſions and Impreſſions on his Soul: notwithſtanding he knew himſelf beloved: For he might apprehend (according as the Truth was) that himſelf ſtood at the preſent under an adventitious Relation of a Surety to bear Gods Wrath for ſin, notwithſtanding that withal he knew he was Gods Natural Son, and ſo beloved. He might look upon himſelf as a Son, and a Son performing an Obedience to his Father even in ſuffering his Wrath, and never pleaſing him more then now, and in that reſpect moſt beloved of him; and yet withal, as a Surety for Sinners, and ſo puniſht; and in that reſpect he might apprehend God for the preſent angry, and full of Wrath againſt him, as being made ſin and ſo a Curſe for us; yet ſo, as to the end that he might be well pleaſed with ſinners in him. And both theſe differing Apprehenſions of his did Chriſt accordingly expreſs in that one Sentence, My God, my God, why haſt thou forſaken me? He ſpeaks it as apprehending himſelf a Son ſtill, and United to God, and beloved of him; and yet forſaken by him, and as a Surety accurſed. And to this end, there were two Principles in him that let in theſe ſo differing Apprehenſions or Impreſſions; Faith, and preſent Sence. By Faith he knew himſelf a Son; therefore Pſalm 22. when on the Croſs, his truſting upon God is mentioned. And Heb. 12. 2. it is ſaid, that he endured the Croſs for the Joy that was ſet before him; namely by Faith; and therefore we from his Example are there exhorted unto Faith; (which is the Apoſtles Scope and Argument) ſeeing he thus believed and truſted, (who as it follows there) is the Author and finiſher of our Faith.

But there was another Principle in him, and that was preſent Sence of the impreſſions of Gods anger; his Mind by Sight or Viſion ſeeing nothing elſe, and his Will by the impreſſions on it feeling nothing elſe. Both which Principles, as they are in us, ſo they might be, and were in him, we being in Faith and Sufferings to be conformed to him, and he being in all things tempted like as we are.

as

And therefore Eightly. All this Curſe and Wrath did not, nor could make him miſerable, although uncomfortable; both becauſe he undertook it and underwent it voluntarily; (and as the greateſt good cannot make a Man happy againſt his Will, ſo nor the greateſt evil with ones Will can make a Man miſerable, there being an end obtained to ſweeten that Eſtate) and alſo becauſe he knew he ſhould eluctate out of it, and overcome it in a few hours, (as he did, when he cryed, It is finiſht.)

And ſo Ninthly. This Curſe was endured by him, without ſinning or deſpair: For the Godhead both helpt and preſerved him; as his Body from Corruption in the Grave, ſo his Soul from ſinning whilſt under Wrath. And though God left him to the Infirmities of a paſſible Nature, to be ſenſible of all Impreſſions to the full; yet he left him not to any Infirmities of ſinning, or weakneſs of Unbelief, the ordinary conſequents of ſuch ſufferings in others. Again, Deſpair ariſeth not from the preſent extremity, but the apprehenſion of the Eternity of thoſe ſufferings, and a certain fore-knowledge that they ſhall never have end: Whereas Chriſt knew he ſhould overcome, and that it was impoſſible that he ſhould be held of them.

Tenthly and Laſtly. This therefore was for the ſubſtance of the ſuffering it ſelf, the ſame that we in Hell ſhould have undergone: Onely ſuch Circumſtances were wanting and cut off in his undergoing it, as were either not neceſſary Ingredients to the diſcharge of our Debt, or but accidental Conſequents; As,

1. He deſcended not, or went not down to the Place of the Damned, to endure Gods Wrath there. For ſeeing that the Place of Payment is no ingredient into the diſcharge of the Debt, and but a meer Circumſtance; and that he could endure it on Earth as fully as in Hell it ſelf, and that (through the ſupportment of the Godhead) without dying; (which no Creature could) therefore though this Circumſtance were wanting, it detracts not any thing from the fulneſs of the ſubſtance of that Payment which was due from us; and therefore this may be accounted the ſame with that.

2. He endured it without Dying the ſecond Death, otherwiſe then in the Senſe fore-mentioned: But this hinders it not from being the ſame in ſubſtance that we ſhould have endured; and ſo it may ſtand for it. For Dying, or quite ſinking under this Curſe is but the Conſequence of undergoing the Wrath of God, in thoſe that are meer Creatures, who cannot bear it, and live; and ſo is not any part of the Subſtance of the puniſhment it ſelf ſimply in it ſelf conſidered. This ariſeth onely from the Creatures weakneſs; and no more indeed does Deſpair; it being no part of the Puniſhment, but the Conſequent of it, through the Creatures Infirmity and ſinfulneſs. As now ſuppoſe two Men in a like and equal Diſtemper and heat of a Burning-Feavor; the one through the weakneſs of his Brain is light-headed, and raveth, and in the end dieth; but the other having more Natural ſtrength of Body overcomes the Diſtemper and ſurvives, having through the ſtrength and cool temper of his Brain not once loſt the right uſe of his Senſes all that while: Yet ſtill it may be ſaid, that their Diſtempers were the ſame, and a like intenſe for degrees of heat, though the Conſequents of each were contrary, according to the differing Capacities and Diſpoſitions of the Subjects. Or take two Guns charged with the like meaſure of Powder and Shot; the one breaks and flies in pieces when fire is given to it, when the other holds, as being of more firm and ſolid Mettal, or better tempered, or having all its parts more compactly caſt according to Art: When yet the charge of each is for quantity and force the ſame. Thus the charging of ſin, and of the Wrath of God upon Men in Hell cauſeth their Souls to deſpair, and dye the ſecond Death, through their unablity to bear them; when as the ſame ſins, and the ſame wrath, though charged home on Chriſt, yet prevail not to kill his Soul; but through his ſtrength and ſupport from the Godhead his Spirit remains whole under them. Deſpair and Dying is but from being overcome, which which his Soul was not: but as a great Fire overcomes a ſmaller quantity of Water caſt upon it; ſo did the worth of his Perſon and ſufferings in the end overcome the guilt of our ſins, which falls ſhort of the merit of his ſatisfaction; and therefore this conſequent of Deſpair and Death followed not upon it: Which therefore being an effect of ſuffering the pains of Hell, is not a part of of the ſubſtance of them. Chap. 13.

3. In like manner, for the ſame reaſon, though he ſuffered them not eternally, yet his ſuffering was the ſame, and equivalent to what we ſhould have undergone;

For firſt, Eternity is but a Circumſtance of Time, as Hell is of Place: And not ſimply Eternity, but extremity of ſufferings was the puniſhment due. The lying ever in Priſon is no part of the Debtors puniſhment ſimply conſidered; for he is to lye there but till he hath paid the utmoſt farthing (as Chriſt ſpeaks;) which becauſe he can never do, therefore he is never releaſt. But Chriſt could undergo in a few hours all the Wrath due unto ſin, and ſo ſwallow up Death and Hell in Victory, 1 Cor. 15. 24. That Potion or Meaſure of Wrath which we by reaſon of our narrowneſs could have received in but by drops, and ſo it would ever have been raining down; that his Soul might be and was ſo enlarged, as to receive in at once, even the whole Vials and Cataracts of it. That Cup which is ſo full of Mixture, that we are a drinking of it down, unto Eternity, that can he take off unto the bottom, in a few hours. Yea and by reaſon of the incapacity of the Damned in Hell to take in the full Meaſure of Gods Wrath due to them for their ſins, therefore their Puniſhment though it be eternal, yet never ſatisfies, becauſe they can never take in all; as Chriſt could and did; and ſo theirs is truly leſs then what Chriſt underwent. And therefore Chriſts Puniſhment ought not in Juſtice to be eternal, as theirs is, becauſe he could take it all in a ſmall ſpace, and more fully ſatisfie Gods Wrath in a few hours, then they could unto all Eternity. And this may well be one meaning of thoſe Words. Acts 2. 24. that it was impoſſible he ſhould be held by the pains of Death; not onely in reſpect of his Power, able to prevail againſt the power of Gods Wrath and Anger; But impoſſible in reſpect of Juſtice, that God ſhould any longer continue angry: Seeing that as Gods Love had ſuch a full vent and ſway in Chriſt, ſo alſo had revenging Juſtice its full proceſs againſt ſin in him, and wreakt its utmoſt, ſucking from him ſo much blood both of his Body and Soul, as being full, it fell off of it ſelf, as fully ſatisfied.

Book V.

CHAP. XIV.

Uſes of Chriſts being made Sin, and a Curſe for us. We ſee herein God the Fathers Love, and his own. We ſhould not regret to ſuffer any thing for Chriſt. Let us obey and worſhip Chriſt in Soul and Spirit. The troubled in Soul ſhould be comforted. We ſee the hainouſneſs of Sin by the greatneſs of Chriſts Sufferings, and the Miſery of being without an Intereſt in Chriſt. We ſhould charge our Sins upon our ſelves for Humiliation. We ſhould mourn for them, and hate them.

Uſe I. SEE the Love of Chriſt, who laid not his Bodily Life down onely, but his Soul. The Redemption of the Soul is precious, ſays the Pſalmiſt, Pſalm 43. 8. Precious indeed when it coſt not his precious Blood only, but his precious Soul alſo. Not with corruptible things, Gold and Silver, but with the precious Blood of Chriſt were we redeem'd. As the Body is more worth then Rayment or Eſtate, ſo the Soul then the Body. Chriſt gave not his Eſtate only,nor his Body only,but his Soul.

Uſe II. See the love of God who gave not his Son up onely to the hands of Men to be Executioners of his body, but himſelf laid on upon his Soul; and that becauſe Juſtice called for the ſoul,the very ſoul,ere it would be ſatisfied. Which no Creature being able to reach,rather then we ſhould not be redeemed, he will be the Executioner himſelf; ties him to the Croſs and with his own hands whips him,becauſe no Creature could ſtrike ſtroaks hard enough. A tender Mother hath not the heart to whip her Child for its own fault; God bruiſeth Chriſts ſoul himſelf for others; Zech. 13. 7. Awake my Sword againſt the Man Gods Fellow; Yea Iſa. 53. 10. It delighted the Lord to bruiſe him. So much was his heart in our ſalvation, that this (otherwiſe the moſt abhorred Act that ever was done) was ſweetened to him by its end, our ſalvation, and made a matter of delight, not ſimply, but in relation to the end.

Uſe III. Let us not think much to ſuffer any thing in our body for Chriſt, he hath done more for us, he hath ſuffered in his Soul. All that Men can do is but to kill the Body, they cannot reach the ſoul, Mat. 10. 28. And therefore all that we can fear from them is but outward in compariſon of what Chriſt endured, it is but whipping through the Cloths all that is done to the body. Mat. 20. 22. Can ye drink of the Cup he drank of, and be baptized with the Baptiſm he was baptized with? Rom. 8. 29. He exhorts us to chearful ſuffering, becauſe therein we are conformed to Chriſts image, who yet was in ſuffering the firſt born among many brethren,and ſo had a larger portion in them than ever any had.

Uſe IV. Did the chief of Chriſts ſufferings lie,in his ſoul? Let the chief of our obedience be placed in our ſouls and in ſoul-worſhip. God ſaid to Chriſt, My Son give me thy Soul, and Chriſt ſays to us, My Sons give me your Hearts. Obedience in the inward Man is the ſoul of Obedience. Sanctify the Lord in your Hearts, 1 Pet. 3. 15. there eſpecially is God enobled. God ſeeks for ſuch to worſhip him as worſhip him in ſpirit. Bodily Exerciſe profiteth little, but Godlineſs, &c. 1 Tim. 4. 8. There Godlineſs is oppoſed to Bodily Exerciſe, and therefore Godlineſs is put for the ſervice of the inner Man, which is onely godlineſs, in which Rom. 7. the Apoſtle ſays he ſerved the Lord, which he calls ſerving him (ver. 4. of that Chapter) in the newneſs of the Spirit. The Papiſts whoſe worſhip is all bodily, they are all for Chriſts bodily ſufferings, and deny this of his Soul. But let us place the main of his Obedience in the ſuffering of his Soul, and ſo ſeeing his Love, give up our ſouls to him chiefly to obey him with. Chap. 14.

Uſe V. Comfort to thoſe that are diſtreſſed in ſoul.

1. You are herein conformed ſo much the more to Chriſt.

2. He knows the heart of a ſinner diſtreſſed, and ſo is moved to pity more feelingly. He became a merciful High Prieſt in that he was tempted in all things as we, ſin onely excepted. Pity is more kindly when it is from experience of the like extremity.

3. In that he ſuffered in his ſoul he thereby purchaſed comfort for thy ſoul. As in other things we make uſe of Chriſts ſufferings to relieve us againſt the particulars we are diſtreſſed in, ſo alſo let usin this. When we are poor we may conſider Chriſt was poor that we might be made rich; when we ſuffer from Men, we may have recourſe to this that by his ſtripes we are healed: So when in ſoul, that he was buffeted in Spirit to free us; his ſoul was heavy unto death that we might be comforted; God ſpake to him in wrath that he might ſpeak peace to us. Speaking comfort in Scripture Phraſe is called ſpeaking to the Heart.

Uſe VI. When we think of Chriſt curcified, let us eſpecially think of the ſufferings of his ſoul, ſo much forgotten and denied. To this end he ordained the Cup in the Sacrament; as the Bread to repreſent to our Faith the body of Chriſt, ſo the Wine the pouring forth of his Soul, which is called the blood of the New Teſtament. That as the blood of the Old was the blood of Bulls and Goats, in which blood lies the life as the Scripture ſpeaks, the Souls of Beaſts being but the Spirits of the four Elements which run in the blood, ſo that thing which that Type ſignified, was the ſoul poured out, there being nothing nearer to repreſent the ſoul more lively than the blood, with which therefore all was ſprinkled.

Uſe VII. See the heinouſneſs of ſin by this that Chriſt was made a Curſe; as he ſaid if thou wouldſt ſee what ſin is, go to Mount-Calvary. 'Tis true that the utmoſt real evil of the thing it ſelf which we call ſin, conſiſts in this, that it is the tranſgreſſion of the Command of the great God: But the utmoſt repreſentation, to make that evil known to us, is the Croſs and the Curſe of the Son of God bleſſed for ever. We ſeldome conceive of the greatneſs of injuries as they are in themſelves committed, ſo we are apt to ſlight them, but we do meaſure them beſt by the anger and the wrath they beget in the Party wronged, (if he be not partial in his own Cauſe) and by the furious expreſſions of his wrath returned back again upon the Offence: So whilſt we view ſin in its direct and proper notion, and that it is an injury againſt the great God, ſo we ſhould never have ſeen the full vileneſs of it; for as God is in himſelf inviſible ſo is the evil of ſin; and as Chriſt is the livelieſt Image of the Inviſible God, ſo are his debaſement and his ſufferings the trueſt glaſs to behold the uglineſs of ſin in, and the utmoſt repreſentation to make us ſenſible of it. The throwing down the Angels out of Heaven, the curſing the Earth and all Adams Poſterity for Adams ſin, the drowning the old World, and overturning Sodom, and the Fire unquenchable which burns to the botom of Hell; theſe were ſuch Conſiderations as may make us ſtand amazed, and cry out. Oh what is ſin that thou doſt ſo remember it, or the ſinfulneſs of it that thou doſt puniſh it in the deſtruction of the beſt Creatures thy hands have made? But all theſe Tragedies are but as lighter skirmiſhes and but ſhews of Juſtice and wrath in compariſon of the Death and ſufferings of his Son: For how greatly incenſed muſt that anger be by ſin, which ſo infinite, ſo ancient love, to ſuch a Son could not quench nor yet alay! How deep in guilt muſt that fault be, for which Juſtice is bold to exact no leſs ſatisfaction, then the blood of God! For what crimes are Kings at any time put to death? Here God bleſſed for ever is made a Curſe, the light and life of the World and fountain of life is killed, the Lord of glory debaſed, the fulneſs of the Godhead emptied, emptied to nothing; He who is one with God in Eſſence, in title to glory, is ſeparated and accurſed from him and by him, and laid as low as Hell; and all this becauſe he was made ſin.

Uſe VIII. Think what a miſerable and fearful condition it muſt needs be to be found out of Chriſt and in your ſins. And be aſſured of this that either Chriſt or you muſt bear the full weight both of your ſins and the Curſe due to them. That Chriſt was made a Curſe may be both an evidence of the certainty of the Curſe and Wrath to come, and of the fearfulneſs of it. Of the certainty, for if from former examples of Gods Vengeance upon other ſinners like themſelves, Peter argueth the aſſured inevitable deſtruction of ungodly Men, that if he ſpared not the Angels nor the old World,&c. 2 Pet.2.5, 6. he would therefore certainly not ſpare them. If further, from the chaſtiſements brought upon his own dear Children, God himſelf bids Jeremy tell the Nations that they ſhould certainly drink, Jer. 25. 28. For Lo, I bring evil upon the City that is called by my Name, and ſhould ye be unpuniſhed? Much more is it argued from this, that he brought all this evil and theſe Curſes on his Son, if God ſpared not the natural Branch, nay the Root of Branches, which bears all his Olive Branches, how will he ſpare thoſe that ſhall be found Wild-Olives, growing on their own ſtock, bearing all their Wild-Olives and ſins themſelves? If he not onely upon whom Gods Name is called, but whoſe Name is in him, did and muſt drink of the Cup, ſhall not the wicked of the Earth drink the dregs of it? And as it may argue the certainty of it, ſo the fearfulneſs alſo. It was an uſe Chriſt made of it then when he was a leading to be Crucified,if they do this to the green Tree,what will they do to the dry? If he who was a green Tree and was by reaſon of his Sap and fulneſs of Grace, no fit Fuel for the Fire, had no matter in himſelf for God to be angry with, yet it burnt ſo fiercely on him, ſtanding but in the ſhade and within the imputation of our ſins, if the Curſe withered him that he looked like a Tree growing on the dry ground, Oh how will it rage upon dry Trees, fitted for Hell, upon Fir-trees, that are full of and bring forth Gum and Roſin, fit fuel for that Fire! And if the whole Curſe did light on him and the reſpect to and dignity of his Perſon abated nothing of it, God ſpared him not; ſurely a ſinner out of Chriſt, ſhall be abated nothing neither, but pay the utmoſt farthing. See in Gods dealing with his Son the moſt vive Type and Reſemblance of the Curſe to be executed upon all ſinful Unbelievers out of him. Curſed he is throughout his whole life, as Chriſt alſo was made a Curſe in his. The Curſe ſeized on him when he was made fleſh, and began to break out upon him in the ſpots of humane Infirmities, making him all over like ſinful fleſh; which Curſe ſecretly followed him and increaſed upon him in the fruits of it, and left him not till it had brought him to the accurſed death, when it appeared to all the World, that he was made a Curſe indeed when he hanged upon a Tree. Why and curſed wert thou in thy Conception, and curſed was the Womb that bare thee; and a thread of Curſes are drawn thorough the Web of thy frail life. And though a ſinner may bleſs himſelf in Honours, Riches, Pleaſures, yet all theſe have a Curſe in them unto him: Curſed is he when he eats, curſed when he lies down and reſts, and curſed when he awakes again; and this Curſe leaves him not till it brings him to his end, and after that to Judgment, when it appears he is curſed indeed how ever accounted happy in his life. And learn to ſee and tremble, and to avoid it, how the Curſe will then ſeize on thee by what was done to Chriſt, if it prove not then that he was made a curſe for thee. Then was his day of Judgment and ours in him, Iſa. 53. 8. And therefore in that days paſſages with him, we may raiſe our hearts up to ſee what ſhall be then; what was done to the Green-tree then ſhall be accompliſhed in a more tranſcendent manner upon the dry. When they come to lie upon their Death-beds, then do their ſins and Gods wrath come in upon them, as upon him in the garden; they ſee them written in the Curtains, and find their ſouls invironed about with with Curſes, beſieged and ſee no way out; and then happily their Friends ſtand ſleeping or weeping by, but alas they cannot help them, or ſave them from that Hour, as his Diſciples could not; miſerable Comforters thou wilt find them all. And if a Miniſter, yea an Angel from Heaven ſhould come to comfort them oft times he cannot. And then comes thy Judas, thy boſom ſin, with whom thou haſt eaten ſo many ſweet bits, and communed together; and that comes into thy Conſcience with a troop of Curſes, and threatenings, and Devils after it. And when thy Soul ſits upon thy lips and is departing, an armed Band of Hell ſeizeth upon it, binds thee hand and foot to be caſt into utter darkneſs; leads thee before the Throne of Gods more private and particular Judgment, as Chriſt was over night before the High Prieſt; where when thou comeſt thou wilt be examined of all thy ways and works, and, as that Man in the Goſpel that wanted the wedding garment, wilt remain ſpeechleſs, not able to anſwer one of a thouſand, not have a word to ſay; Even Chriſt ſtood ſpeechleſs, the guilt of our ſins ſtopping then his mouth. And after ſentence then pronounced, that thou art worthy of death, thou wilt be kept in thoſe chambers of death, and reſerved in chains of darkneſs, as Chriſt was bound in the High Prieſts Hall all night and there mockt, and whipt, and beaten with many ſtripes, as the Goſpel hath it. And in the morning of the Reſurrection, when the dawning of the day of Judgment ſhall appear, then they ſhall be more publickly brought forth before the throne of Chriſt appointed to judge both the quick and dead, a time when all the World great and ſmall ſhall be aſſembled to thy arraignment and execution, as all the Jews were then at the feaſt; when God will ſhame thee before this Sun, and rip up all the hidden things of darkneſs: As Chriſt was put to open ſhame ſo ſhalt thou, and confuſion of face ſhall cover thee, and thou ſhalt become a loathing and an hiſſing to all fleſh; And though thou haſt thy ſoul filled full of evils, yet God and the Saints ſhall but mock when this thy fear cometh, and laugh at thy deſtruction, Pro. 1. as they did Chriſt, Thou that deſtroyeſt the Temple, &c. and ſaveſt others; ſo will God ſay, I have called and ye refuſed, ye ſet at nought all my counſel, Prov. 1. 24, 25, 26. and now let your Gods deliver you if they would have you. And this confuſion will moſt befall thoſe, who profeſs themſelves the Sons of God and were not, that ſaved others and now are damned themſelves; with which they mocked Chriſt, he ſaid he was the Son of God, and that he truſted in him, and he ſaved others, now let him ſave himſelf. And then after ſentence is pronounced, Go ye Curſed, hurried ſhall they be, ere Chriſt riſeth off the Bench, by Angels, Mat. 25. to Hell, the place of execution, where in utter darkneſs (as Chriſt alſo was crucified in a great darkneſs that was over the Land) ſeparated and accurſed from God for ever, they ſhall be puniſhed from his preſence, 2 Theſſ. 1. 9. with everlaſting deſtruction; where a drop of Water ſhall be denyed them, as it was to Chriſt, left naked and deſtitute of all comforts, ſtript as Chriſt alſo was, and with the Scrowl of their Rebellions pinned over their heads for Men and Angels to read, as Chriſts was in all Languages.

A ſecond ſort of Uſes are to Men humbled for ſin and ſeeking after Faith, to guide and direct poor ſouls to the right way of obtaining and ſeeking juſtification by Faith.

Uſe IX. If Jeſus Chriſt was thus made ſin and a Curſe, the one charged upon him, the other inflicted, then ſurely all thoſe Chriſt will ſave, he will have them alſo know and apprehend what their ſins are and the curſe due to them, though not by way of ſatisfaction to God, yet by way of Humiliation to them. If your ſins were charged upon Chriſt who knew no ſin, there is reaſon they ſhould be charged upon your Conſciences. If your ſins brought Chriſt upon his knees (as they did in the Garden) before God as an angry Judge; they may well bring you upon your knees alſo. They were yours before they were his, and therefore ere you by Faith can come to lay your ſins upon Chriſt and diſcharge your ſelves of them; you muſt know the burthen of them your ſelves: His was but an aſſumed guilt, yours is proper and inherent. If your ſins made Chriſts Soul heavy unto death, they muſt make your ſoul heavy alſo ere ever Chriſt will eaſe you. Chriſt did ſo ordain to ſave you as that you ſhould be conformable to him, and dye with him if ever you riſe again with him. Now as Chriſt dyed and roſe again ſo muſt you; and as we are ſaid to riſe again with him through faith, Coll. 2. 12. ſo to dye with him through Humiliation.

Uſe X. To this end lay all your ſins to your own charge; they were laid to his charge to ſatisfie Gods Juſtice, and thou muſt lay them to thine own charge to humble thy ſoul and to make thee the more thankful. Chriſts death keeps many off from troubling themſelves with their ſins at all; they put off thinking of their ſins with this, that God is merciful and Chriſt hath dyed; but that they were laid to his charge hinders not that thou art to charge thy ſelf with them; onely thou art to do it to a differing end. Jeſus Chriſt had them laid to his charge to ſatisfie for them, take heed of taking them ſo upon thy ſelf, they will break thy back: But take them on thee to humble thee; which thou art therefore to do, becauſe they were all thine ere his; as Chriſt ſaid to his Father, of his Elect, Father, thine they were and thou gaveſt them me, John 17. So on the contrary mayeſt thou ſay to Chriſt of thy ſins, Lord, mine they were and thou didſt take them on me. Thus Iſaiah teacheth us to do, Iſa. 53. 6. We like ſheep have gone aſtray, and God laid on him the Iniquities of us all: And therefore as David humbled himſelf, Lord, it is I and my Fathers Houſe, what have theſe ſheep done? ſo ſay, Lord, it is I that have ſinned againſt thee, theſe ſins are all done by me, what hath this Lamb, holy, innocent, without ſpot, done? And withal think what an infinite miſery it will be, to be found in thy ſins, if all theſe ſins ſhould be thine own and not to be taken off by Chriſt for thee, if it ſhould fall out that thou muſt dye in thy ſins, (as Chriſt threatened the Phariſees) that thou ſhouldſt not be eaſed of the burthen of one ſin by the death of Jeſus Chriſt. If they made his ſoul ſo heavy when they were made his but by imputation, what will they do to thee, whoſe they are by inherent, by proper and immediate guilt? If the ſhadow of them withered him ſo, what will the true guilt of them in thee? Thou haſt guilt of Conſcience in thee of them, a Conſcience of ſins, which he had not, and yet they made his ſoul heavy, what will they do thine? Thou wilt have Deſpair in Hell to make thy torment greater, becauſe of that eternity of thy torment, whereas he had faith to uphold him to endure the Croſs by reaſon of the Joy ſet before him, which he knew he ſhould receive when the brunt was over. If Chriſts ſoul was ſo perplexed that he ſaid, What ſhall I ſay, John 12. how perplexed will thy ſoul be not knowing what to do, but wiſhing the Rocks to fall upon thee to cover thee?

Uſe XI. If God charged all our particular ſins upon Chriſt, then go and humble thy ſelf for thy particular ſins. If God gave Chriſt a bill of them, do thou make bills and Catalogues of them. As Chriſt knew what he paid for, ſo he will have thee know what he pardoneth and what was paid for. This will make thee love Chriſt the more, as Mary did, who loved much becauſe much was forgiven her, and it will make thee ſee thy ſelf more beholden to Chriſt for ſuffering more for thee then another. Thus the through knowledge of Paul's ſin wrought the more love and thankfulneſs in him unto Jeſus Chriſt, 1 Tim. 1. that though Chriſt came into the World to ſave ſinners, yet for me the chief of ſinners. And though there are many ſins which thou daily diſcovereſt, which thou ſaweſt not at firſt, ye be not diſcouraged, for ſecret ſins though not confeſt may be pardoned, for Jeſus Chriſt bare all ſins, and thoſe that are not known to thee to humble thee, were yet known to Chriſt to pardon them to thee. And the confeſſing particular ſins over Chriſt thus, will in the end bring aſſurance of the pardon of particulars, and be a means to ſtrike off the guilt of particulars, for often when we think ſuch and ſuch ſins are pardoned, we yet ſtick at ſome one, or ſuch or ſuch, and cannot think them pardoned: Therefore confeſs particulars, and bring them to God and ſay concerning ſuch a ſin, was not this ſin, Lord, reckoned amongſt the reſt unto Chriſt? This foul ſin that ſtares me in the face, was not this amongſt the reſt? Then, Lord, through his bearing of it take it off from me. And as you are to apply Chriſt crucified for the crucifying fying particular luſts,ſo for the waſhing off of your Conſciences the guilt of particular ſins. Do therefore as Men that would be ſure to have a Writing croſſe dan blotted that the Debt-book may not be read, they not onely give general croſs lines over all the whole leafe at one ſtroake, but they will (to make all ſure) go over every line with their Pens, and croſs every one in particular out; and ſo do thou, not apply Chriſts death in general, but apply it to every particular ſin. And eſpecially againſt a Sacrament, then make Catalogues of your ſins, for then Chriſt is crucified afreſh afore your eyes: And look what was done by God to Chriſt when he was crucified on the Croſs for the ſatisfaction of his Juſtice, that you are to do when you come to view and by faith to receive Chriſt crucified for the ſatisfaction of your Conſciences; for the application of Chriſt crucified is but the acting over by faith what was done by God. Eſpecially ſuch ſins as the guilt whereof doth in a more ſpecial manner trouble you, thoſe bring catalogues of at every Communion; that although the lines of Chriſts blood have been drawn over them with the reſt already, yet get more croſſes of his blood over them, and uſe his blood to croſs out particulars; And as you do with Aqua fortis when you would eat out letters written in a book, if any letters remain more freſh then their fellows, remaining not ſo perfectly eaten out, you go over them anew; ſo do with Chriſts blood in your conſciences to ſuch ſins the guilt whereof is moſt conſpicuous. Chap. 14.

Uſe XII. Take heed of reſting in Duties; Chriſts active obedience would not have ſaved you, if he had not alſo been made a curſe; and therefore do you think your Dunghil performances, as Paul calls it, will ſave you? You thereby diſhonour Chriſt as much as the Jews that crucified him, you bid him come off the croſs, he need not hang there for you, you can pray it out, and you can faſt ſin out your ſelves.

Uſe XIII. Reſt on Chriſt alone eſpecially as crucified. Paul deſired to know Chriſt and him crucified eſpecially: As they preacht ſo are we to believe. It is the Serpent as lifted up that is the object of Faith, ſo Chriſt preſented in the Sacrament, not ſimply the perſon of Chriſt, but Chriſt as crucified and as broken for our ſins: Otherwiſe, Chriſt conſidered in the excellency of his Perſon ſo he might be an object for the Faith of Angels, who would have been glad of ſuch an Husband; but Chriſt as crucified ſo he is fitted for ſinners, and he becomes not an object of Love for the excellency of his Perſon, but of Faith and confidence as a means and ordinance for the ſalvation of ſinners; and though we are to look on him as glorified yet withal as once crucified: So that Faith is to look at once with one eye to Heaven, to Chriſt there as riſen, aſcended, interceding, ſo to look down with another eye to that Chriſt as once crucified and hanging on the croſs, as made ſin and a curſe.

Uſe XIV. Labour for aſſurance, ſo ſee by Faith your ſelves one with Chriſt in all this he did for you, to be able to view your ſelves in him when he dyed, that as by Faith you believe you were in Adam when he was in the Garden, and ate the forbidden fruit, ſo that you were in Chriſt when he fulfilled the Law and hung on the croſs: Therefore Rom. 8. 4. the Law is ſaid to be fulfilled in us; though not by us, yet in us, becauſe we were in Chriſt when he fulfilled it, and ſo it is as if we had done it. Endeavour therefore to apprehend that Chriſt had not onely an eye to thee and thy perſon and thy ſins when he hung on the croſs, but that he then ſtood in thy ſtead and as thy Proxie. This is that which will bring in the comfort: Though caſting a Mans ſelf upon Chriſt for ſalvation through his death is that Faith that ſaves, which is called coming to Chriſt, yet more is required; Rom. 6. Reckon your ſelves dead with Chriſt; that is, to have dyed when he dyed. Faith will help a Man to put himſelf into Chriſt hanging on the Croſs, and that is to reckon a Mans ſelf as then dying with him, and then you may ſee all your ſins done away, purged away then, Heb. 1. and your ſelves perfected for ever, Heb. 10. that your ſins ſhall ariſe no more. And to ſee this, all the World cannot help you, it muſt be the Spirit that knew Chriſts Mind then: Onely in the mean time that you ſhould be conformable to him, and dye with him if ever you riſe again with him. Now as Chriſt dyed and roſe again ſo muſt you; and as we are ſaid to riſe again with him through faith, Coll. 2. 12. ſo to dye with him through Humiliation.

Uſe X. To this end lay all your ſins to your own charge; they were laid to his charge to ſatisfie Gods Juſtice, and thou muſt lay them to thine own charge to humble thy ſoul and to make thee the more thankful. time you may go blindfold as it were, and caſt Anchor in the dark, and refer the caſting of thy ſtate to what Chriſt did then for thee, that if he bare not thy ſins then, thou canſt not be ſaved; deſiring God (blindfold) to pardon thee by vertue of what Chriſt did then, ſay, Lord, I refer my ſelf to thy heart from everlaſting, and to Chriſts heart when he hung upon the Croſs, and let that caſt my condition. And be bold to plead Chriſts death blindfold, by way of queſtioning with God (though by abſolute challenging as yet thou canſt not) ſay, Lord, did not Chriſt bear theſe very ſins that affright me ſo, on the Croſs? did not he condemn them there and caſt them in their ſuit? why do they accuſe me now? Say, Lord didſt thou not give my Name to Chriſt in that Bill among the reſt? was not I written in his heart and thine? didſt thou not eye my Perſon and ſins in his ſoul as ſatisfied for them by him? If ſo Lord, pardon them, lift the guilt off from me by vertue of his bearing them. It is lawful to ask ſuch queſtions. 1 Pet. 3. 21. it is called Ἐπερώτημα, the interrogating the Challenge made of Gods Favour by a good conſcience juſtified by Chriſts blood and Reſurrection. So Hab. 2. 4. the Church doth, and God often whilſt a Man is pleading and queſtioning thus, cannot deny it but affirms it to a Mans ſpirit. Carnal phanſy hath a trick to make ſuppoſitions, and to put a man by way of ſuppoſition into ſuch or ſuch a condition, as ſuppoſe I were rich, or were a King, what would I do then? Now let faith make ſometimes ſuch ſuppoſitions, it is good and warrantable to inure our thoughts to ſuch ſuppoſitions till aſſurance comes. Make the ſuppoſition to thy heart that all this that Chriſt did he did for thee, upon ſuch a ſuppoſition ſee how far thy heart would work, and thy affections ſtir. In ſuppoſitions of carnal fanſy, you ſhall find corrupt affections ſtir, and your heart run out far in them; and in theſe ſuppoſitions of Faith you ſhall find holy affections ſtir and diſcover themſelves; and as corrupt deſires are nouriſht and increaſed by the other, ſo a vertue comes with theſe to cauſe a Man to love Chriſt, to hate ſin, to mourn for it; that lifts off ſecretly the guilt of it, eaſeth the burthen, maketh the pinch of it leſs.

A third ſort of Uſes is to them that have got aſſurance, then to make uſe of Chriſts crucifying and his being made a curſe.

Uſe XV. To cauſe you to mourn and bleed for ſin. His heart was melted through heavineſs, and ſo will yours be to ſorrow. His ſorrow was to death, yours will be to life. As there is a ſorrow to God-ward, 2 Cor. 7. ſo to Chriſt-ward; as that God is offended with ſin, ſo that Chriſt was crucified by thy ſin: Not to be ſorry that it was done ſo as to wiſh it undone, but that thy ſin ſhould be againſt him that did ſo much for thee unknown to thee. I do not ſay you are to mourn for the crucifying of Chriſt as your ſin, as ſome in their Rhetorick have endeavoured to perſwade Men that they were as the Jews, ſo indeed the Jews when they are called ſhall mourn; but this ſhould make thee mourn, that God ſhould crucify his Son for theſe ſins of thine, and Chriſt ſhould have ſuch love in him to do it; and ſo view every ſin as dyed with Chriſts blood. You cannot ſay I crucified Chriſt by my ſins, and in that relation mourn, for that was Gods Act and his own; but you may ſay he was crucified for my ſins, and ſo mourn, both as conſidering ſin as an offence againſt one that loved you ſo, and alſo as conſidering your very ſins as that which was as the weapons, as the Inſtrument wherewith God wounded him. And ſo you may go over all your ſins, and ſay they fetcht thoſe groans from him and thoſe bitter crys, and ſhall his heart be made ſorrowful by them; and ſhall not mine be for them? Neither is it that you are to mourn for him with a ſorrow of compaſſion, which is all that popiſh Poſtillers would bring their Hearers unto, onely ſuch ſorrow as a man would have ſtirred up in him at a pitiful ſtory of an innocent man, or a man of an Heroical Spirit thus uſed; this ſorrow Chriſt now regards not, as he did not much then when he went to be crucified, for ſaid he to them that followed him, Weep not for me but for your ſelves, he regarded not ſuch Womaniſh Tears: But to think of thy unkindneſs to him in ſinning who endured ſo much ſo willingly to expiate theſe ſins; this is it that is to make the heart to guſh. Again, we may mourn for our ſins as the crucifiers of Chriſt, but not as if it were an aggravation of our ſins that they crucified Chriſt, but onely ot his Love that would be crucified for them and by them; And ſo as we ſay it is not the Executioner kills the Man, nor the Judge properly that gives the ſentence and delivers him up, but the Fact laid to his charge, that is it may be ſaid to have been his death; and ſo may our ſins in all this be conſidered as the cauſe of all, Peccatum ſolum homicida eſt. So we may ſay the ſwiftneſs of our feet to do evil nayled his feet, the works of our hands drave the Nails into his, for he was delivered up for our ſins; Yea and of the ſorrows of his ſoul, they were the more immediate Inſtruments and executioners, for they were particularly repreſented to him, and ran every one with their bodkins and pierced him through; he was beſet, as being encompaſſed about with them, and pierced through and through by every of them, there is not a ſin of them but had a ſtab, and his ſoul had a ſtab for it; and in that relation thou maieſt mourn over thy ſin and his ſoul and body, and mayſt go forth and view every part upon the croſs, his hands nailed, his ſide pierced, his back whipt, and look through his ſide into his heart and ſee it in agonies and horrour, and all for theſe ſins of mine, yea and cauſed by theſe ſins, which will make thy heart ſweat blood as his body did if thou haſt any love to him. But above all thou art to conſider his love in all, that is it which above all is to work in this mourning upon thy view of his being crucified. His love was ſtronger than death, death could not keep him in the Grave, but his love kept him on the croſs for thee when he was provoked to come down. His pains were great but his love more; thy ſin and his love in all this to endure all this for thy ſin, this is it muſt move thee. I will ſay but this to you, if any of you believers that have love in your hearts to Chriſt had been alive then, and had known from Chriſt afore that all his ſufferings to come had been for your ſins and to ſave you for them, and your heart had followed him to the croſs full of ſuch apprehenſions, and you as John and his Mother had ſtood by and viewed all that really paſt then, and had ſtill had this thought; All this is for me, out of love to me and my ſins, I like a ſheep have gone aſtray and God now laies on him all my ſins; and then had gone over in your thoughts all your ſins, how would your hearts have been broken and melted! Now by Faith you may view him in this Narration, and in the Sacraments as really as if you had been by, ſo Paul ſays, Gal. 3. 1, 2. Therefore get your hearts to melt and break over this Crucifix, and put your ſins and his love into one cup and drink them off, and ſee how this potion will work. To bring the Murderer to a dead Man makes the dead Man bleed afreſh, but bring thy ſins to Chriſt and it will make thy heart to bleed afreſh. Chap. 14.

Uſe XVI. Work your hearts to a hatred of ſin upon theſe Conſiderations alſo. If a Man had killed your Friend or Father or Mother, how would you hate him! you would not endure the ſight of him, but follow the Law upon him (as in the old Law they did if they fled not to the City of Refuge) ſend out the Avenger of blood with an Hue and Cry after thy ſin; bring it afore Gods Judgment Seat, arraign it, accuſe it, ſpit on it, condemn it and thy ſelf for it, have it to the Croſs, nail it there, if it cry I thirſt, give it Vinegar, ſtretch the body of ſins upon his Croſs, ſtretch every Vein of it, make the Heart-ſtrings crack; And then when it hangs there, triumph over the dying of it, ſhew it no pitty, laugh at its deſtruction, ſay, thou haſt been a bloody ſin to me and my Husband, hang there and rot. And when thou art tempted to it and art very thirſty after the pleaſure of it, ſay of that opportunity to enjoy it as David ſaid of the Water of Bethelem, It is the price of Chriſts blood, and pour it upon the ground; Meer Ingenuity ſhould move us; ſay with thy ſelf,

1. If no more but the conformity between Chriſt and me, ſhall I live in that to which I dyed when my Head dyed? thus Paul Rom. 6.

2. Shall I live upon that which was Chriſts death? Shall I pleaſe my ſelf in that which was his pain? Shall I be ſo diſhoneſt, ſo unkind as to enjoy the pleaſure for which he endured the ſmart? Shall I ſpend on his ſcore, the ſcore of his love? Kings Children when others are beaten for them it moves them to be as diligent and as fearful to offend as if themſelves were to be beaten, out of Ingenuity;

Book V.

Ingenuity; and that Christ was whipt for us and our sins, should move us as much against them as if our selves were every day to be Crucified as he was. I onely put this to all your Considerations that love the Lord Jesus, if Christ were yet to suffer at the end of the World, and in suffering to bear all the sins you should commit (as you heard when he suffered he did) if you had any Ingenuity, how wary would you be, how you encreased his load, how sorry that you added any sin knowing it would be his sorrow, and shall he fare the worse because all is done already?

CHAP. XV.

The Victory which Christ gained over Satan by his Death. The Glory of this Victory displayed by the Consideration of the Greatness of that Power which the Devil had over us.

HEB. ii. 14.

That through Death he might destroy him that had the power of Death, that is, the Devil.

THE Victory yea Destruction which Christ hath upon Satan on our behalf is the full scope of this Text, and follows as the next subject unto that of Redemption of us from sin and the curse, and is indeed the consequent of that Redemption.

There is no Text large enough to take in the whole, either of Satans power, or of Christs destroying him in respect of that his power, for this mentions on Satans part his power over death only as the Jayler; and on Christs part his overcoming him by his death is only spoken of, whereas Satan hath power, and that chiefly in matter of sin; also in ruling this World; and Christ also destroys or confounds him by his Ascension, Intercession, and judging both the Devils and the World at last: Yet you well may upon occasion of these take in all, and it may have this warrant from this Text, that it is said to be a Destruction of him, (which is a general word and takes in all) that is, of his Person wholly and totally; and so in all points of his power besides, as well as in that over death.

And again Christs death here meritoriously and vertually reacht to all the power Satan had of any kind, and so then a total rout and destruction of him is in the Apostles scope.

And the Story hereof as gathered from the Scriptures is our present subject, and is divided as the Text is into two parts.

1. Satans power.
2. Christs Victory and destruction of him.

1. Concerning Satans power therein two things are to be considered.

1. What power Satan hath had in the World and over the Elect Sons of Men fallen under sin in common with other Men.

2. By what claim or right he came by it.

2. Concerning the second, Christs Victory, and his destroying him, therein are to be remarked.

1. The true Original Ground of the quarrel, how Christ came to be engaged and involved against him.

2. The

2. The ſeveral Degrees of Chriſts Conqueſts, and they are reduced to two Heads. Chap. 14.

1. The firſt Rout, wherein the foundation was laid of the enſuing Victories; and that was got in open Battel in the plain Field at his Death, in and by which virtually the whole was at once won, and obtained; and therein I ſhall ſhew how juſtly Satan fell from his Power, and loſt it, and this I call Chriſt's Meritorious Victory.

2. Then there is ſecondly the proſecution of this firſt victory, and the management thereof to his own greateſt Glory, and Satans Confuſion. And the parts thereof are

(1.) Chriſt's Triumphing over him after the Victory obtained in his own perſon openly, and that in Satans own dominions afore God and all the Holy Angels, and this ſingly in himſelf, and in his own perſon, although as repreſenting us, Col. 2. 15. and this I tearm his Victorious Triumph, or the ſhew and demonſtration of it.

(2.) Secondly there is his overcoming him in us. Then when Satan is ſtill left in actual poſſeſſion of the whole World, and of the Elect among them, whoſe Liberty and Redemption it was Chriſt aimed at. And this hath two Degrees:

(1.) He overcomes him in us, at our Converſion; and

(2.) He overcomes him by us, and cauſeth every particular Chriſtian to overcome him in the courſe of their Lives, after Converſion. And theſe two I tearm Chriſts Actual prevailing or getting poſſeſſion.

A Third Procedure, is Chriſt his viſible ſetting up a Kingdom in this World, afore the day of Judgment, during which time Satan is ſhut up, and reſtrained from tempting the Elect, and from deceiving and enraging the World againſt the Elect, as now he yet doth, and heretofore hath done: And this is expreſſed in the laſt Chapters of the Revelations; Chap. 19. v. 19, 20, 21. And I ſaw the beaſt, and the kings of the earth, and their armies gathered together to make war againſt him that ſat on the horſe and againſt his army, and the beaſt was taken and with him the falſe prophet that wrought miracles before him, with which he deceived them that had received the mark of the beaſt, and them that worſhipped his image; theſe both were caſt alive into a lake of fire burning with brimſtone. After which follows Chap. 20. 1, 2, 3. And I ſaw an angel come down from heaven having the key of the bottomleſs pit, and a great chain in his hand; ver. 2. And he laid hold of the dragon, that old ſerpent, which is the devil and Satan, and bound him a thouſand years, ver. 3. And caſt him into the bottomleſs pit, and ſhut him up, and ſet a ſeal upon him, that he ſhould deceive the nations no more till the thouſand years ſhould be fulfilled: and after that, he muſt be looſed a little ſeaſon. And then follows the Kingdom of the Saints during thoſe thouſand years, ver. 4, 5. And I ſaw Thrones, and they ſat upon them, and judgment was given unto them; and I ſaw the ſouls of them that were beheaded for the witneſs of Jeſus, and for the word of God, and which had not worſhipped the beaſt, neither his image, neither had received his mark upon their foreheads, or in their hands, and they lived and reigned with Chriſt a thouſand years. Ver. 5. But the reſt of the dead lived not again, until the thouſand years were finiſhed. This is the firſt reſurrection.

Fourthly, Laſtly, There is Chriſt his bringing this great malignant unto open trial, afore all the World; God, Angels and Men; which is at the day of Judgment. After which follows the Execution of him in an Eternal Deſtruction of him in Hell.

There is a Glory Tranſcendant, that will appear in each one of theſe particulars, but more in the whole of them, all laid together; a ſtupendiouſly excelling Glory, in compariſon unto which Victories of Chriſt, all the great Victories you have ſeen are but Trifles and Shadows that have no glory in this reſpect, and therefore let not the rich man glory in his riches, nor the ſtrong man in his Conqueſts, but let him that glorieth, glory in the Lord, and in this eſpecially, that he knows himſelf is one of thoſe poor Captives whom this great Conquerour delivered amongſt the reſt of the Elect, who ſhall ſtand up in his Lot amongſt them.

Book V.

I. To Diſcourſe concerning Satan and his Power, and to ſhew what it is.

1. In general it is a Kingdom maintained and upheld by him and all his Angels conſpiring in one, againſt Chriſt and his Saints. *Mat.*12.26. And if Satan caſt out Satan, he is divided againſt himſelf, how ſhall then his Kingdom ſtand? And whereas every Kingdom hath an intereſt,the intereſt of this is ſin, *Eph.*6.12. they are ſaid to be Rulers of the darkneſs of this world, which is ſpoken in diſtinction from the good Angels, who are Rulers of this world too : for in that the Apoſtle ſays,this world to come is not ſubject to the Angels, *Heb.*2.(he ſpeaks of them that are good.) He Implyes that now they are ſent out for the good of the Elect, Heb. 1. 14.; and it argues that this world is ſubject to them in order to the good of the Elect. But now herein lyes the difference; Satan is the Ruler of the darkneſs of this world, and the riches, glory and Greatneſs of it being for the moſt part obtained and managed by ſin and Corruption, therefore in ruling the darkneſs that is in mens hearts, he alſo comes to rule and diſpoſe of theſe. Even as the Popes power (who is his eldeſt Son) is in pretence only ad ſpiritualia, yet ſo as in ordine ad ſpiritualia he takes on him to meddle in all things temporal, ſo his father Satan having now in Commiſſion only ſpiritual darkneſs and wickedneſs, and obtaining this power over men unregenerate, yet in order thereunto over theſe Children here, until converted.

Theſe of all other things are committed to him.

I. To entice as he did Ahab, 1 Kings 22. 21.
II. To put into the heart as in Judas.
III. To provoke, 1 Chron. 21. 1.
IV. To bewitch, Gal. 3. 1.
V. To fill the heart as he did the heart of Ananias, Acts 5. 3.
VI. To work effectually and ſo as to carry all before him, and cauſe them to do what he enticeth to, Eph. 2. 2.
VII. And Seventhly to do all this at his will, 2 Tim. 2. 26.

This power of Satan is in reſpect of ſin or the darkneſs of this world.He hath a power over them in reſpect of death, ſo in the Text; but this power laſts but till the reſurrection,and but over mens ſouls. For when the day of judgment is ended it is the good Angels that do throw wicked men to hell and not the evil Angels, Mat. 13. 41. 42. But in the mean time look as the good Angels have the Commiſſion for carrying mens Souls to Paradiſe as they did Lazarus his, Luk. 16.22. So the evil Angels have until then the Commiſſion to carry wicked ſouls, when by death ſever'd from their bodys, to hell.

Let us now conſider (to ſet forth Chriſts victory the more) the greatneſs, and the extent of this Kingdom given to the Devil and his Angels.

I. As it is in the hands of the great Devil placed on his Throne; it is a Monarchy over mankind of all formes, higheſt for power in all ranks throughout.

II. For the ſubjects of it they are (as Chriſt's ſubjects alſo are, Col. 1. 16.) both things viſible and inviſible, ſo that he hath of both kinds, eſpecially the kinds of intelligent natures Subject to him.

1. Angels: The Devil and his Angels. 2. Us men, wholly Captiv'd to him. And further (wherein the upholdance of this great Tyrants cauſe is) ſome of theſe are as natural Native ſubjects that rule with him, and have a common intereſt of power with him: And they are his Angels; but we poor ſilly men, are as ſlaves Captived to them and him. Like as Pharaoh (one of his eldeſt Sons under the old Teſtament :) had for his Natural liege Subjects his Egyptians, that Ruled over the Iſraelites with him, and the poor Iſraelites as Captives and ſlaves unto both. And in this lyeth the greatneſs of the Turkiſh dominion in part of Europe, Aſia and in Eaſt-India to this of the Mogol in Eaſt-India, to this day. So then he hath all ſorts of Subjects every way.

As

3. As unto us men his power is universal; not a Soul of us but is by Nature subject to him. We are all born by a Statute Law his slaves, and Christ hath none, but whom he wins over from him by turning them from Satan unto God, yea, and in the issue he holds and retains a far greater Company and number to himself than Christ gets unto himself, Rev. 12. 9. it is one part of Satans Titles, that it is he who deceives the whole World.

4. In us men (the more miserable part of his Subjects) he Rules inwardly, even as Christ doth in those few he gets from him; he sits and fills and rules our Hearts till we are turn'd to God.

5. If we consider the length and continuance of this his Dominion, as he hath sinned from the beginning, 1 Joh. 3. 8. so he hath entred upon his Reign from the very beginning of Mans Fall, and every Man born becomes his Subject; neither have these individual Devils given place to any, but the same Devil that ruled in Cains time, rules now in the Children of Disobedience, Eph. 2. 2.

6. For Success he hath carried it clear, for he works, and works effectually in the Children of Dis-obedience, and takes them Captives at his Will, as him Lists, 2 Tim. 2. 26.

7. He hath been Worshipp'd as a God, and so hath had more Honour and Dignity than any Prince, 2 Cor. 4. 4. He is there called, the God of this world. Some great Conquerors affected to be Worshipp'd as Gods, not being content with the highest Supreme Power, so Alexander and Mahomet, but few obtained it, but the Devil hath had both. So it was from the Flood, till Heathenisme was destroyed, and Popish Idolatry was set up as it is said, Revel. 13. 4. Thus therein they worshipped the Dragon, who gave his Power to the Beast, to the end to have Worship continued to him in another way under the Profession of Christ, even as he had afore. Thus much for the Power it self.

Secondly, The Second part to be discoursed of, is by what Claim, Right or Title he came to have this Power, seeing himself by sinning (afore Man had sinned) deserved to be in the Nethermost Hell.

1. The Legal and Fundamental Claim is, Gods Commission, and that by way of Curse upon Man. Man turning Rebel against God, he justly gave that ingrateful Creature who despised his Mild Government over unto the hard and intolerable Vassallage of this Tyrant. It was a just punishment that Man who would not have God to Rule over him, should be delivered into the Devils Power, and it was as great a punishment as could be Inflicted. Thus we find, that when David by way of Propheſie was to Curse Judas (who himself was placed in the Office of an Apostle, or a Bishop, or Overseer as Peter interprets it, and applyes it to him, Acts 1. 16, 20.) Says he Psal. 109. 6. Set in office over him the wicked one, and let the adversary or Satan stand at his right hand. The wicked one is the Devil, so oft, and usually in the Epistles of John the Phrase is used, and in the Lords Prayer, &c. and accordingly we read, that Satan entered into him, Luke 22. 3. And thus in like manner Man sinning at first, God by way of Curse and Commission set the Wicked One a Ruler over him, and this Curse was but suited to his Iniquity in a just way, as the Law was in Deuteronomy 28. 47, 48. Because thou servedst not the Lord thy God with joyfulness and with gladness of heart for the abundance of all things, therefore shalt thou serve thine Enemies which the Lord shall send against thee in hunger and thirst, &c. and he shall put a yoke of Iron upon thy neck until he have destroyed thee.

Book V.

And beſides this Curſe, there was ſome Appearance of Legality in it; Iſaiah 49. 14. The Title of Satans Power in Scripture riſeth ſo high, as that the Souls of Men are termed his own Houſe, Luke 11. in the 21th. Verſe, Chriſt calls them his Palace; and all the Faculties and Powers of their Souls his Goods; and Verſe 24. the Devil himſelf terms it his Houſe. And the Grounds of it are,

1. Of whom a Man is overcome, of the ſame he is brought in Bondage by the Law of Conqueſt, 2 Peter 2. 19. He ſpeaks it of Sin, but it is true of Satan, whoſe Intereſt is the ſame with that of Sins. Man was overcome by Satan, and caught in his ſnare, the Serpent beguiled our firſt Parents, and ſo they were brought into Bondage, as unto Sin, ſo to him.

2. Satan was the Father of Sin and Sinners, and it is his work, 1 John 3. 8. as Holineſs is the Workmanſhip of God, Epheſians 2. 10. Now the Father of a Family was under the Law of Nature, the Governour and Head of it, and ſo is the Devil of whom (as I may ſay) all the Wicked Families on Earth and Hell is named. And God indeed Curſt the Devil himſelf with this Power for his Ruin; and as Sin was his Work and his Invention firſt, truly he let him have the Monopoly of it, and all Sinners came under his Patent, and be Workers at the Trade under him, as the firſt Inventers of any Craft uſe to have the Priviledge to employ others under them.

CHAP. XVI.

How it was Chriſts Great Concern, and Intereſt, to Deſtroy the Power of Satan. The Conqueſt which he had over him by his Death, and his open, and Glorious Triumph after the Victory, expreſſed in Coloſſians 2. 15.

THE Second Part of this Diſcourſe, is of Chriſts part in deſtroying all the Power of the Devil. And therein we are to regard,

Firſt, The Ground of the Quarrel betwixt Chriſt, and him, and how Chriſt came to be engaged in it. The Ground of this Quarrel was either,

I. Perſonal. Or,
II. On our Behalf.

I. Perſonal, as he was Gods Son, and Natural Heir. What was Satans Sin? It was the ſetting up a Kingdom againſt God, and Chriſt his Son. He left his habitation for it, Jude 6. It is mentioned not as his puniſhment onely, but as his Sin. He and his Angels ſhook off Gods Dominion, and betook themſelves to ſeek their Fortunes, and ſet up for themſelves in this Airy and Viſible World. Thus in Matthew 12. 26. the bottom Reaſon

Chriſt

Chriſt gives why one Devil oppoſeth not another, is, for how then ſhall HIS KINGDOM ſtand? You may obſerve, there is a Kingdom of his mentioned, conſiſting in one Common General Intereſt wherein they all agree. Now if there were no other Reaſon but that it is the quarrel of the Godhead in Father Son and Spirit, Chriſt is ſufficiently in Perſon intereſted in it on his own, yea his Fathers behalf. For if any rebel againſt a Prince, who is ſo fit to ſuppreſs and ſubdue them as the Son in his Fathers behalf, (when himſelf alſo is the Heir) who ſo fit as he to fight his Fathers Battels, and to put him into the Throne again. But, Chap. 16.

II. It's more then whiſpered 'tis talk't out by ſome great and good Divines, that the Spirit and edge of their firſt ſin was pointed againſt the Son of God as he was to be God Man And ſo in our nature declared to be ordained an head to Angels and Men, and if ſo the quarrel was perſonal indeed, for it more particularly toucht Chriſts propriety, and Prerogative. Whether theſe things were ſo or no or that they be ſufficiently proved by theſe intimations in the Scriptures I leave every reader to his own judgment, only if I had not inclined thereto I had not at all propoſed this I add. Zanchy, Willet, Suarez. Catharinus.

III. That it properly and perſonally concern'd Jeſus Chriſt to come and deſtroy the Devil. In that Satans Kingdom (which upon his turning head againſt God he was in actual poſſeſſion of) was that which letted or ſtood in the way to that of Chriſts Kingdom and took up much of the room of it. This Kingdom Chriſt as God Man was appointed unto, Heb. 1. 2. (and it was only as God Man that he was appointed to it, for as meer Son of God, or ſecond perſon he hath it by Nature and not decree) the appointment alſo was, that he muſt win it ere he weares it, as Pſal. 2. and Pſal. 110. 1 Cor. 15. ſhew. He muſt deſtroy therefore this his oppoſite to make way for the poſſeſſion of this his own Kingdom, and therefore, Mat. 12. 28. Chriſt gives this as a manifeſt undeynable evidence, that the Kingdom of God, which the Prophets had foretold, the Meſſiah the Chriſt ſhould (as come from God, and for God) poſſeſs and adminiſter, was beginning to be ſet up upon his coming into the World, and that himſelf was the appointed heir therefore, yea Apparent heir by this probation, that he did by the Spirit of God caſt Devils out; But if I caſt out Devils by the Spirit of God, then the Kingdom of God is come unto you: The evidence lyes in this, that whileſt he did it, he did profeſs himſelf to be that very Meſſiah, to whom that Kingdom did belong, and that the riſing of his Kingdom was the downfal of Satans: And ſo that firſt promiſe and propheſie, Gen. 3. began to be fulfilled in and by his own very perſon, viz. He ſhall break the Serpents head. Which (ſaith Chriſt) you ſee manifeſtly with your eyes: for with the ſame breath at the ſame inſtant he Commands the Devils forth, and ſo proclaims himſelf to be that King to whom Satan muſt give way.

But the ſecond ground of the quarrel was on our behalf, and this for ſureneſs in the Text: The verſe afore the 13*th.* doth bring in Chriſt ſpeaking himſelf as a Father of many Children committed to his truſt and charge by God; Behold I and the Children which God hath given me. Chriſt is and was an everlaſting Father. Iſa. 9. 6. and theſe Children were given to him in and at Gods firſt Election both of Chriſt himſelf, as Mediator, and them as members both at the ſame time, and Election of the one was involved in the Election of the other as relatives mutually each unto other. Eph. 1. 4. They were choſen in him before the foundation of the world, thus long afore the fall of man, or Satans ſinning or Kingdom; ſo as Chriſt was plainly thus long afore entruſted to be their Guardian; and ſuch and ſo great an eſtate of Glory was long afore bequeathed to them; Therefore theſe Children being by that curſe and righteous law (they ſinning) become now Vaſſals and ſlaves of Satan, for as much then as his, Children were partakers of fleſh and blood, he alſo himſelf likewiſe took part of the ſame, that through Death he might deſtroy him that had the power of Death that is the Devil. It is the very account given in the Text, and imports in the coherence of theſe words with the former immediately foregoing, that these his Pupils and Children having been long afore given him, and now fallen into the Devils Power: That moved therewith, He came to rescue and deliver them (as the Next words carry it on, ver. 15.) Thus zealous was Christ for these his Children and to discharge his trust; and thus, Eph. 5.23. Christ being originally and primitively constituted an head to them, this drew him to be a Saviour The words there are, even as Christ is the head of the Church (an head first) and he is the Saviour of the body.

These things as thus relating to Satan, to have been much in Christs heart his speeches up and down the Gospel of John and elsewhere shew. In which you may observe him discoursing, as great Princes use to do of their grand opposites, so he of Satan, and the confusion he was sent to put him into: by all which what his heart was intimately set upon in mans salvation doth eminently appear, as you may read, John 12.27, 28, 29, 30, 31, 32. wherein he mentions this confusion of Satan with somewhat an equal affection he had to that of the Salvation of men, and both as those two eminent grand matters in which both God and Christ aimed most to be glorified. You find him at the 27. ver. struck with the thoughts of his approaching sufferings, now is my soul troubled, and what shall I say Father save me from this hour, and yet then checks himself, but for this cause came I to this hour, as if he had said, this was the business I came into the world for, and I must disanul all, if I now withdraw. But then further he cheers himself up with the great and general end which his death and coming into the world, and all served to, ver. 28. Father glorifie thy Name, unto which, God from Heaven gave answer, I have both glorified it and will glorifie it again. Then he specifyes two things, wherein God was thus to be greatly glorified, by the foresight and prospect of which he further recovers his spirit, Namely.

I. Satans overthrow, now is the judgment of this world; now shall the Prince of this world be cast out, verse 31.

II. Mans Salvation: verse 32. and I, if I be lifted up from the Earth, will draw all Men unto me; and both these at once accompliſh't by the cross, verse 33. this he said signifying what death he should dye. Which falls in with what the Text saith that through death he might destroy him that had the power of death, that is the Devil. And with all which also that of John 1. 14. doth correspond, the Word was made flesh and ἐσκήνωσεν he pitcht a tent amongst us, as a Souldier, for it is a military word. For his end of dwelling in flesh was to destroy the Devil in open and plain field by conquest, and suitably in this Heb. 2.10. you have him called the Captain of our Salvation then when his destroying of Satan is spoken of. Thus much for the grounds of the quarrel.

I pursue next the several proceedings and passages of the Victory, (whereof the most eminent and fundamental to all the rest is that of his death, as all the places already handled do shew.)

I reduced them at first unto two general heads having diverse particulars under them.

I. Christs overcoming Satan in himself, that is in his own person.

In himself, is added, says Strigelius, ad differentiam victoriarum humanarum in quibus partem sibi vendicat Dux, partem milites. Nam filius Dei sine auxilio ullius creaturæ contrivit caput serpentis. Strigelius in locum.

II. His overcoming him in us and by us. Or thus, There is Christs overcoming Satan for us, And there is Christs overcoming him in us and by us. The account of this distinction you will easily perceive by comparing two Texts together, the first, Col. 2.15. Where he is said to have spoiled Satan and triumphed over him ἐν αὐτῷ (cum aspiratione) in himself, and so the Margent varyes it. The second is 1 John 4. 4. Stronger is he that is in you then he that is in the World. He that is in the World is the Devil, who tempts us with the World, and in overcoming the World we overcome him that wicked one, (as expresly it is twice said, 1 Joh. 2.13, 14.) and this is Christs overcoming the Devil in us, as these words stronger is he that is in you, do evidently shew.

What he did in his own person for us are two.

1. The great and total rout Chriſt gave Satan at his death. And,

2. His triumph over him thereupon. Which you have thus diſtinguiſhed, Col. 2. 15. how [firſt] Chriſt having ſpoiled Principalities and Powers, he [then] made a ſhow of them openly, (or made them an open example) triumphing over them in himſelf. The firſt was done at his death or upon the Croſs. For his Croſs, is that which the Apoſtle had mentioned juſt afore; as that publique open place unto which he had affixed the Law as cancelled. And then in coherence with it next follows this, that he did at the ſame time to the executioners of the Law, the Devils in thoſe words having ſpoiled or diſarmed Principalities and Powers, (namely on the Croſs,) he overcame the Devil: Firſt in the plain and open field, which field was the Croſs, and the place whereit ſtood, ſo that the Battle was fought there on the Croſs whereon Chriſt dyed. And the Text ſayes through death he deſtroyed him, which comes to one and to ſay on the Croſs he deſtroyed him, or wrought his deſtruction. The word in Col. 2. 15. tranſlated, having ſpoiled him is ἀπεκδυσάμενος which is properly to diſarm (to put on armour ἐνδυσασθε is oppoſitly uſed Rom. 13. 12.) And is a manifeſt alluſion unto what Conquerours uſe when they have gotten the victory they ſtrip the conquered of their weapons, and therefore it is here put to expreſs the victory it ſelf by. Though the victory it ſelf is ſuppoſed antecedent to this diſarming, and the manner of ſuch victors was to erect Pillars on which to hang thoſe weapons as Trophies, and this ſometimes on the very place, either on trees that grew nigh, or upon pillars fixed on the ground. And ſo he had begun this alluſion in the former words in ſaying, that he nayled the law as cancell'd to the tree of the Croſs, and then purſues it in ſaying that through and upon his death, he hung up all the Devils Armour thereon alſo: Which Luk. 11. 22. are call'd πανοπλία his whole Armour as 'tis tranſlated. And this he did as ſpoiles, (as our tranſlatours here have render'd it.) You have this ſignally expreſſed, Iſa. 53. 12. Piſcator reads the words thus; therefore for his part or portion, I will give him the great ones and he ſhall divide the ſtrong as ſpoiles that is (ſaith he) he ſhall have a victory over thoſe evil Spirits, Principalities, and Powers, ſo as to be in his power as a ſpoil, to carry Captive, and uſe as he pleaſeth; And this, becauſe (as it follows) he poured forth his ſoul unto death. And that other reading of our tranſlatours comes all to one, he ſhall divide the ſpoil with the ſtrong or in the ſtrong: That noting out the perſons that were the object of that his dividing them; and is all one as to ſay he ſhall take their power from them. So then in and by his death meritoriouſly [becauſe he poured forth his Soul unto death] he deſtroyed him wholly, and Satan and all his power was given up as lawful ſpoil. Thus our Lord whileſt himſelf was ſtript naked, and they caſt lots for his garments, then it was he ſtrips and ſpoils Satan, and made him wholly naked without all weapons. And here comes now to be enquired into the juſt ground upon which it came to paſs that through or by Chriſts death Satan ſhould be bereft of that power which he had (upon the terms formerly mentioned) given unto him. And to be ſure he loſt it upon Chriſts death upon a far more fair, and legal right then at firſt or then ever it was given to him, Iſa. 49. 24, 25, it is thus written, ſhall the prey be taken from the mighty, or the lawful captive delivered? But thus ſaith the Lord, even the captives of the mighty ſhall be taken away, and the prey of the terrible ſhall be delivered: for I will contend with him that contendeth with thee, &c. Be it literally ſpoken of Babylons Captivity and redemption, or whatever elſe, yet this is certain, that that and other were ſhadows of this of ours by Chriſt, and therefore applicable in the general thereunto. Now how far we were Lawful Captives unto Satan you heard, and God (though the Devil be his enemy) will overcome him fairly; Non vi ſed juſtitia, not by force only but in juſtice. The Lawful Captives (as it is in Iſay.) ſhall be delivered and that lawfully: It is alſo a rule fetcht from the Law of Arms and concertations in Games or the like, That if a Man ſtrive for maſteries, he is not Crowned (and ſo is not reckoned to overcome) unleſs he ſtrive lawfully, 2 Tim. 2. 5.

Metaph. a bellatoribus victoribus deſumta, qui hoſtium ſpoliatorum armis pro tropheo fixis—— Beza in locum.

1. The

Book V.

1. The truth is first that Satan ran into a premunire or a forfeiture of all his power, by his assaying of Christ (and if there were no other ground it were sufficient for the loss of all) he in assaying of Christ, and plotting and Contriving his death went beyond his Commission, and God on purpose permitted him to do it, to catch him in his snare; Satans power over sinful man was not a Natural but an accidental judicial power and so perfectly limited by Commission, which if he exceeded especially if so transcendently (as it fell out in this) he instantly made a forfeiture of it. Know this then that Satans power was over sinful man only; he was not so much as to touch or come near the man Jesus who was holy and harmless, and separate from sinners. Now he coming into the World in the likeness of sinful Flesh : Rom. 8. This Lyon that seeks whom he may devour boldly ventures on him and persecutes him to death; for it was Satan that contrived Christs death : This is the hour (saith Christ) and the power of darkness : Luk. 22. 53. your hour (speaking to the Pharisees) now you are in the Ruffe of your power having me under; But know, sayes he, you are but the Devils instruments herein, who hath a greater and deeper hand in it then you. This is the power of darkness which is a further addition to shew, that the Rulers of the darkness of this World (as Eph. 6. 12.) were also and chiefly in it, yea the utmost of his power concentred in it to effect what was in Pilates, the people, and the Rulers hearts. The Prince of darkness, and the Ruler of this World acted the Princes of this World, when they Crucified the Lord of glory. But more expressly, John 12. 40, 41. You seek to kill me, you do the deeds of your Father therein who was a murderer from the beginning, ver. 44. And Christ seems to me to give an hint of this very reason, John 14. 13. The Prince of this World comes, and hath nothing in me, as matter for him by vertue of which he should have authority to have any thing to do with mee. The Devil thus foolishly and sillily lost all, and God took the wise in his own craftiness, and Christ suffered him to go on and to have his whole will upon him, but then took him thereby Captive at his will. So God in his Righteous judgment ordered that Satan should lose the power that he had, because he exercised that upon Christ which he had not.

Sic deo judicante, amisit potestatem quā habuit, quia exercuit quam non habuit, saith Aquinas out of Austin. Sum. part. 3. quæst. 49.

2. Consider that it was Mans Sin, which was the Sole and only ground of Gods giving Satan that Power at first; it was done by way of punishment and Curse. Now if Christ pays by his Death (as it was transacted betwixt God and him) a Price and Ransom for Sin, and undergoes all the Punishment due to it, then doth Satans Power fall Instantly, for it was wholly judicial, and but part of the Curse and punishment upon Man.

There was this Concatenation or derivation of Power; the Power of Satan lies in Sin, the Power that Sin hath over us lay in the Law, (the strength of sin is the Law, saith the Apostle) now he by paying a Price or sufficient Ransom unto God for Sin, the power of the Law and Devil all fell at once flat and perished together.

And the Chain of these you have in that Colossians 2. where First, in the 13th. Verse, And you being dead in your sins, and the uncircumcision of your flesh hath he quickned together with him, having forgiven you all your trespasses : There is Sin gone both in the Power and Demerit of it. Secondly, Verse 14. follows, A blotting out the Hand-writing of Ordinances that was against us, which was contrary to us, and took it out of the way, nailing it to his Cross. There is the Law Cancell'd and made void. Thirdly, Verse 15. and having spoiled Principalities and Powers, he made a shew of them openly, triumphing over them. The Devil falls with these, as his power stood by these.

3. Add to these that this Christ, as a Common Person, stood in the room of us all, and therefore Satan justly lost his power over us all, in that he that represented us all did overcome him.

And here ere we go any farther, let us stay a while and stand astonished, at the Glory of Gods Design herein : There was never any Romance ever feigned so strange a Victory joyned with such a Confusion to the Person that that was Conquered, as this repreſents, and it is to be taken notice of here in our Tranſition to that other part, viz. his Triumph as a preparation to the Glory of it, that Chriſt a Lamb, the Lamb of God, ſhould lye ſtill and perdeu, having all our Perſons and Sins under that Lambs skin, and form of a Servant, led as a ſheep by Satan unto the Slaughter, until Satan ſhould have done his worſt, and then as a Lion Couchant, a Lion aſleep (as Gen. 49. and Rev. 5. 5, 6. A Lamb and a Lion both) he ſhould rouſe up himſelf from his ſleep, and take that very Croſs that Satan had brought him unto, and hung him upon, and (as one expreſſeth it) Baculo Crucis, with the ſtaffe, the beam of the Croſs, break all the Devils bones in pieces, when he had not with all his Mallice broke one bone of his, what more glorious? To overcome then, when himſelf is overcome! Chap. 16.

Thus much for Chriſts ſpoiling, yea deſtroying him vertually and meritoriouſly at his Death. His Triumph over him next follows. For into thoſe two parts the particulars in this Col. 2. 15. are reduced; even as Conquerors firſt ſtript the Captives, then led them as Examples, tied to their Chariot Wheels, or elſe they were driven afore them. In the firſt the Devils nakedneſs appears, in this other his ſhame and Ignominy publickly.

So Rollock entring upon that Word, Made a ſhew of them, dividit them, having ſpoken de Victoria in cruce, nunc de Triumpho. So Rollock on the place.

Chriſts Triumph is thus ſet forth. He made them an example and ſhew of them openly, triumphing over them; both theſe expreſſions falling in to ſignifie the ſame thing, the alluſion is manifeſtly unto that Roman Cuſtom mentioned, after Victories obtained, when the chief Leader rode in Triumph, leading the Chieftains of the Conquered Enemy as an open ſpectacle. There hath been a queſtion among Commentators and other Divines, whether or no, Look, As Chriſts affixing the Law to his Croſs, and his overcoming and diſ-arming Satan thereon, was an inviſible Tranſaction not ſeen or obſerved by any but by God and himſelf, (the reality thereof conſiſting only in Vertue and Efficacy); that ſo in like manner this his Triumph over the Devils ſhould have been but Vertual and Inviſible, and ſo this his Triumph as thoſe other, all of them wholly tranſacted on the Croſs alike. Or whether there was not after that Victory mentioned on the Croſs, a publick and open ſhew made, in way of Triumph afore a World of ſpectators applauding of it. For the Deciſion of this.

1. Therein this difference may be conſidered between the Aboliſhing Sin and the Law, at his Croſs, and this other of Triumph over the Devil. That thoſe firſt muſt needs be only ſpiritually and vertually underſtood, for Sin and the Law are not intelligent Perſons, but onely things to be deſtroyed, and ſo were capable but of a vertual Abolition, as Heb. 1. 3.

But the Devils themſelves that were the Founders of Sin, and Heads of this Rebellion, they were Rational and Intelligent Creatures, and ſo were capable of being made a real, and viſible, open ſhame, which was a puniſhment ſuited to ſuch. And the manner of the Triumphs was to lead the Perſons and the Chieftains, as Heads in open view, to give demonſtration of the Perfection and Compleatneſs of the Victory over any Prince or Nation; now ſuch were the Devils.

2. Although neither this over thoſe damned ſpirits, as neither that over ſin, was viſible to the men of this World we live in, yet there is another World (inviſible indeed to us) unto whom the ſhame and ignominy done to theſe Devils might be (as it was) made viſible, namely God and Angels, and the ſpirits of juſt Men which is the greateſt Stage. Chriſt's Birth and Nativity was known and ſeen by the Angels, when but to one or two in our World, as alſo his Aſcenſion. Now both every word here leads unto this ſenſe as alſo the thing conſidered in it ſelf, and the comparing this with the other.

Angeli viderunt traductos Diabolos & triumphantem Chriſtum, Rollock on the place. Manifeſtiſſima erat & illuſtriſſima coram omnibus Cæleſtibus, Muſculus. So alſo Zanchy.

1. The Nature of a Triumph, (to which the alluſion manifeſtly is) was to be a publique ſight, or ſhew, and to have the greater Pomp there was a company of ſpectators to behold it, or it loſt what it pretended to be, and was not that which it is ſaid to be. So Tully ſpeaks of the Romans Triumphs, That Ambaſſadors were preſent on Horſes, the Souldiers crying out, Victory, whilſt the Conquered were led afore or after the Chariots of the Conquerour, and this for the Glory of the Conquerour, and the confuſion of the Conquered. If there were none there that at preſent took notice thereof, it were not a Triumph, but meerly a concealed and ſtolen Victory.

2. It is ſaid he made them a publique Example, and ſo the Word Ἐδειγμάτισεν here, which is all one with παραδειγματίζειν, is uſed by the Septuagint, Numbers 25. 4. when Moſes hung up thoſe Kings before the Sun; and ſo by the New Teſtament, Matth. 1. 19. and Hebr. 6. 6. it ſignifies alſo to make one publiquely Infamous, yea to draw and dragg him through a company of Beholders and Spectators.

Significat aliquando per publicum actum ſpectatorum trahere, vel ducere Zanchius in locum. Druſius, Grocius

All which (if no more were added) argues that ſome publique Ignominy was done unto the Devils, before this ſolemn Aſſembly.

3. The Apoſtle (to fix his meaning) adds; openly, ἐν παῤῥησίᾳ, which word the Jews have taken into their Language, to ſignifie a thing done openly, in oppoſition to what is ſecretly or hiddenly; and ſo it is uſed, John 11. 34. and Chapter 7. 4. and Chapter 7. 13. and Mark 8. 32. Now this is that which I urge, that for (1.) a thing to be done by way of Triumph: 2. On purpoſe to make Infamous, dragging the Perſon made ſuch, through a company of Spectators: And 3. Openly: Yet to ſay, it was ſome inviſible Tranſaction, to be viewed by Faith onely, theſe things are a contradiction.

Thirdly, Compare this Tranſaction ſpecified here with other Scriptures, and it will reſolve, when and how this publique Ignominy was inflicted on Satan and his Angels. And this added to all the former, ſatisfieth me moſt of all.

We read Epheſians 4. 8. (and that Epiſtle is parallel in moſt things to this of the Coloſſians, as many have obſerved) that Chriſt when he Aſcended, led the Devils in Triumph; When he aſcended up on high, he led captivity captive. This David had propheſied of Pſal. 68. 17, 18. and in theſe Scriptures compared, there are two things more particularly expreſſed.

1. That it is an Alluſion to the Triumphs uſed among the Gentiles, eſpecially among the Romans (with whom they were in their greateſt Glory) for in their Triumphs they led at their Chariot Wheels their Captives, ſo it is ſaid here in both places, he led captivity captive. And,

2. The 68. Pſalm ſpeaks of the Thouſand Chariots, who alſo were thoſe Spectators afore-mentioned, Verſe 17. the Chariots of God, which God commanded to wait upon him at his Aſcenſion, Verſe 18. are Twenty Thouſand; The chariots of God are twenty thouſand, even thouſands of angels: the Lord is among them as in Sinai, in the holy place.

You ſee then how expreſly he ſpeaks of the Angels who were his Chariots, which he rode up in and Accompanied him, and he in the midſt of them.

When he came down to Mount Sinai to give the Law, then Thouſands of Angels did Accompany him, for it was the Law given by the Angels. And ſo thoſe were the ſpectators of this Triumph, and what now is wanting to make it a viſible Triumph, not to Faith onely, but the Angels.

And further to carry on the Alluſion to a Triumph, as they had their Miſſilia ſcattered among the People, ſo of Chriſt it is ſaid, when he thus Triumphed, that he gave Gifts unto men.

Thus

Chap. 16.

Thus David being a Prophet, and foreſeeing things as they fell out concerning Chriſt (as Acts 2. 30.) ſpoke afore, as verſe 31. both of the Crucifying of Chriſt which was a death proper to the Romans, or at leaſt to be brought in among the Jews with the Roman Conquerours, and not known afore unto the Jews; and alſo of the Triumph of his Aſcenſion under the ſimilitude of a compleat Roman Triumph, as their Stories have tranſmitted the manner of them down to us.

Now the difference of theſe two Victories, the one at his Death on the Croſs, the other at his Aſcenſion, is, that in the firſt Chriſt dealt as a Redeemer with God as a Judge; cum Deo tanquam cum Judice Redemptor. In the other he dealt, ut Bellator adverſus Satanam, as a Warriour againſt Satan. The firſt Conqueſt was over Satans Works, Weapons, Power, doing that for which God gave them up to him as Spoils. The other was over his Perſon, as an evidence God had given all his weapons, and power into his hands.

Well but when Chriſt had given him this terrible Strappado, haling him up after his Chariot Wheels, and then letting him fall again, a fall as bad as the firſt; Chriſt goes to Heaven, and leaves the Devil ſtill in actual Poſſeſſion of power, ſtill for all he had thus Chaſtiſed him and had uſed him as the vileſt Varlet that ever was, Chriſt lets him go like a wretch (though we may not call him ſo our ſelves, yet in relation to Chriſt, and his uſage of him we may) with poſſeſſion of all his power as god of this World, ruling in Mens Hearts, both Elect and others, becauſe he is to have another Bout with him, and he ſuffers him to hold his poſſeſſion ſtill in the World, reſerving him for a further Victory.

CHAP. XVII.

The Victory which Christ obtains over the Devil, in us, and by us. How he not only Redeems us, but Delivers us from his Dominion, and Power. That not only Christ in his own Person should Conquer the Devil, and break his Power, but that we should bear a part in it with him, is implyed in that first Promise in Gen. 3. That the Seed of the Woman should break the Serpents Head. That in all the several parts of that Power which Satan hath, and Acts in the World, Believers by the Virtue, and Strength of Christ are Conquerors over him. That in the Issue they Conquer him, as to that Power which he hath to Tempt them to Sin. The several Ages of Christians considered from 1 John 2. 13, 14. That by Christ Believers prevail against Satan as to the Accusations of them, which he brings before God. That Christ, and the Saints at last defeat Satans Designs, and Projects, and Enterprizes, as he is Prince of this World.

I Come now to the Second part or Degree of this Victory, namely, Christs destroying and confounding him in us and by us.

1. In us. The Devil had still all the Elect of God then alive, among all the Gentiles, whom the Apostles wrote to, and Converted, and most of them Converted by the Apostles in Judea also fast under Lock and Key, shut up under Sin and Wrath, so as Christ must win every Soul from him, whom he meant to save; therefore at the Conversion of every Soul Converted, (which is expressedly a turning a man from Satan to God, , a delivering out of the power of Darkness, Act. 26. 18. and elswhere) he then comes and begins to bind Satan, and to take his Weapons from him, Luk. 11. 21. He speaks in relation to throwing Satan out of Mens Hearts as well as out of their Bodies. For so he applies it ver. 23, 24. and then it is that Christ begins to execute what virtually he did on the Cross, and what at Triumphing; he gave a Specimen, a publique shew of that he had power to do: Now,

First, I observe from that place, That the Devil, for all the bangs and blows he had at Christs Ascension, that he remains still in Possession in mens Hearts, and is at Peace; and possesseth an Elect Child of God, his heart as his Pallace, and reckons all his Powers and Faculties to be his Goods and Furniture, to use at pleasure.

Well, but Christ having virtually Redeemed him on the Cross, and spoiled Satan for him and in his behalf then, and Triumph't over him in that Persons stead, and as representing him, comes now with a Writ of Execution, for all his Goods detained from him; with an habeas animas, to possess himself of all, and actually to take Satans Power. And when Christ comes, he finds him Armed ſo ver. 21. ſtill, for all he was ſpoiled on the Croſs, and as ſtrong in us as ever. For what was then done was but ſpiritually, and in merito, but he now binds him, Matth. 12. 29. to his good Behaviour; that is, as in Relation to his poſſeſſing of, and working in that man; ſo as Satan is in a Chain. Chriſt claps Irons on him, that whereas Satan acted in him afore, as Lord in his own Houſe, and he was his Goaler. Chap. 17.

Now himſelf is become Chriſts Priſoner, bound Hand and Foot, ſo as he cannot ſtir to do any thing againſt us, but with his leave. Then Chriſt takes poſſeſſion of all his Armory; ſo παυοπλία is to be interpreted, ver. 22. (for ver. 21. he is preſented armed) ſo then all Satans tempting, accuſing power, and the things by which he tempts and works, do all fall now into Chriſts hands, as his ſpoils paid for afore, and now Chriſt becomes actually poſſeſſed of them; and as he is King and Lord (to allude to what Chriſt ſaid from another more general occaſion) takes to himſelf the power and Reigns, Rev. 11. 36. Satan lyes bound; his Power, Rule, his Wit, Cunning, Force, whatever, is at Chriſts Feet, to order as he ſhall give leave and no otherwiſe, and he is to have Commiſſion from Chriſt, ere he act or tempt.

I conceive thus of it, That as at firſt Converſion, Phil. 3. 12. Chriſt is ſaid to Apprehend, or take our perſons actually, to accompliſh in us all that he purchas'd for us (which made Paul deſire to have the whole given him that Chriſt had Apprehended him for, and received then for him of the Father by a renewed act of donation, the Graces, Gifts he ſhall ever beſtow and give forth) ſo doth Chriſt now by a renewed act take poſſeſſion of all Satans power and weapons; ſo as he cannot uſe a threatening, he cannot blow up a luſt, but by Chriſts conſent and permiſſion; not in the ordinary providential way onely, but by ſpecial leave and licence; as the Attachment of Nobles, at leaſt the Execution is by ſpecial Commiſſion from the Prince; but all other perſons are left to the ordinary courſe of the Laws, which are to be put in Execution by inferiour Magiſtrates as they ſee occaſion: And this actual poſſeſſion of all Satans power as a ſpoil is perfect alſo as on Chriſt's part, as a King to have it let forth at his diſpoſe; and is perfect in this ſence that Chriſt takes all, once for all, in our behalf, and to be let out but as ſhall be for our good; and therefore Converſion is called a Tranſlating us out of the power of Darkneſs into the Kingdom of his Son. We come now under Chriſts actual Juriſdiction, who hath taken to himſelf the Government of us. This difference the Apoſtle holds forth 2 Tim. 2. 25, 26. ſpeaking of ſaving Repentance, If peradventure God will give them repentance to the acknowledgment of the truth, that they may recover themſelves out of the ſnare of the devil, who are taken captive by him at his will; whereof the meaning is, that they may not be under Satans Juriſdiction, as afore, at his will; but be ſo freed, as to be able to recover themſelves out of his Snare.

And becauſe even this firſt work is a renewed Triumph of Chriſt's over Satan, therefore Paul ſayes, 2 Cor. 2. 14. that by converting Souls, Chriſt made him Triumph; Now thanks be to God which always cauſeth us to triumph in Chriſt, and maketh manifeſt the ſavour of his knowledge by us in every place; even as Chriſt himſelf had done upon the Croſs, in turning out Satan, in judging and caſting out the Prince of this World, out of mens hearts, by convincing Men of Sin, Righteouſneſs and Judgment, Joh. 16. 11. But now though Chriſt hath taken poſſeſſion of our perſons, and hath thrown out of us Satan and his Power; yet ſo as ſtill Chriſt lets him looſe, and gives Line to his tempting power, when, how long, and ſo far as Chriſt himſelf pleaſeth, or under ſuch and ſuch Laws and Rules, as are in force in that inviſible world between Chriſt and him, and on his Audit dayes, when he comes afore God, he gives an Account; of which you read Job 2 1. Again there was a day, when the ſons of God came to preſent themſelves before the Lord, and Satan came alſo among them to preſent himſelf before the Lord. For both good Angels, as Zech. 1. 10, 11. do at times come and give account of their walking to and fro the Earth, as alſo bad in that of Job. Chriſt gives him a Commiſſion in ſuch and ſuch Caſes, and within the compaſs of ſuch and ſuch Rules, to have power to do ſo and ſo, and ſo to tempt us and put us to it, and he comes to give an Account how he hath behaved himſelf in it. But yet this his binding Satan in Converſion of us to God, is an overcoming him in us, and now therein we are altogether paſſive, even as in the working the habits and principles of Regeneration it ſelf, we are ſaid to be delivered, reſcued, and the Devil caſt out for us (we throw him not out) by an Eternal Hand, by one ſtronger than he, who comes upon him.

There therefore remains a Fourth thing, an overcoming by us as well as in us, both which is coming on through the whole courſe of our Lives. Chriſt thinks it not enough to have overcome him in himſelf, as Col. 2. 15. nor to overcome him in us thus at our firſt Converſion, but he will overcome him by us, he will have our hand actively in it alſo, and cauſe us to be more than Conquerors in the end.

Now then that the Glory of this Victory on our part, through him that loved us, may be made the more glorious; ſuch are the diſpenſations of our God that though Chriſt hath taken into Poſſeſſion all his power, yet he lets forth a great and large portion of power ſtill unto Satan to be exerciſed by Commiſſion from himſelf. Satan is ſtill left to range up and down, (and in view as it were looſe) to tempt, to afflict, and ſorely ſhoot at theſe poor ſouls, thus reſcued out of his hands; and all to greaten the Victory that yet remains, to be accompliſhed by us. Chriſt loves to have us joyned in it, ſo 2 Tim. 2. 26. that they may recover themſelves out of the ſnare of the Devil, ſo 1 Joh. 5. 18. he that is born of God keeps himſelf that the evil one touch him not. And as we are ſaid to mortifie the deeds of the fleſh by the ſpirit, ſo to recover our ſelves, and keep our ſelves from Satan, in a great meaſure.

That we may the more clearly, and diſtinctly take this into our thoughts, we are to conſider that the firſt promiſe to Mankind fallen was made for a Victory over Satan Gen. 3. 15. I will put enmity between thee and the woman, and between thy ſeed and her ſeed, it ſhall break thy head, and thou ſhalt bruiſe his heel. Here is a promiſe conſiſting of two parts; a former part, I will put enmity between her ſeed and thy ſeed; and a latter part, it ſhall break thy head, &c. Now there is a controverſie who ſhould be intended by the ſeed of the woman, and who that ſame [It] that ſhall break, ſhould be? The Papiſts, they take the Woman for the Virgin Mary, and limit it to her; and the ſeed to be Chriſt onely, her Son, and in his own perſon ſingly conſidered and excluſively of us, and the Victory ſpoken of, it ſhall break, to be onely that of his in himſelf over the Devil by himſelf alone. Calvin underſtands by the ſeed of the woman, the whole ſpiritual Race of Believers collectively in all Ages, as more directly intended, and Chriſt onely as the eminenteſt of that Seed, and by whom all the reſt obtain the victory, and ſo principally intended. Pareus halves it; underſtanding by the ſeed in the former part of the Promiſe, all Believers of Mankind: But the [It] or [He] in the latter part prophetically to point out, and terminate on Chriſt alone, the great He or It that on our behalf encountred Satan (as David alone did Goliah) in a ſingle Duel, and brake his head. And it is urged, that the Septuagint reads the [It] by αὐτὸς, HEE, and that ſo it is in all the Copies of that Tranſlation, and ſo the Chaldee Paraphraſt, ſo Hierome, and others of the Antients. And alſo that the Greek σπέρμα ſeed being of the Neuter Gender yet the Septuagint, have rendred the [Hee] αὐτὸς and not [It] ſo making another difference. I altogether wave that firſt of the Papiſts, for the abſurd gloſſes they make upon the words in honour of the Virgin Mary; and propound that both Chriſt in his Perſon, and Believers in their Perſons as conſidered in and with him are directly intended in both ſeed and it, as making up one and the ſame; the one as the Noun, the other as the Pronoun anſwering thereunto.

1. Chriſt is intended as the Captain or Champion in this Warfare and Victory. (So Heb. 2. ver. 10. Chriſt is ſtyled, and that in reference to this very Victory over the Devil, which follows ver. 14.)

2. All Believers, or the Children and his Brethren (as in the ſame place they are called) are alſo here intended and comprehended, ſo making one ſeed. He the Captain, they the Body of the Army, that in their turns overcome Satan alſo through him that loved them!

And

And unto this interpretation, all things ſeem to fall in to make it good and nothing to hinder it. Chap. 17.

1. The Holy Ghoſt hath (as it were purpoſely) choſen in the original Tongue ſuch a conjunction of Words, as might admit both Sences.

1. The word זרע, ſtands indifferent to either, for it is Nomen collectivum, that ſignifies a Race or Generation of many, (as is known;) and ſo is applicable to the whole Company or Family of Beleivers; or it ſignifies a ſole and ſingular Perſon, as Eve her ſelf (the woman in the Text) in the next Chapter, Gen. 4. 25. terming that one Son of hers. Seth, her ſeed, uſeth that Word זרע, and ſo that alſo is applicable to point at Chriſt as a ſingular perſon, ſingularly aimed at.

2. The pronoun alſo in the latter part of the Promiſe, הוא tranſlated in the imperſonal [It] may as well be tranſlated [Hee] the Original Word will comply with either. And ſo as if you take זרע, or ſeed collectively, then [It] in the imperſonal doth fully anſwer thereunto as the pronoun to it; on the other hand, if you underſtand זרע or ſeed perſonally of one ſingular Man, then read [Hee] the Hebrew will bear both Fruits, ſo as you may veiw the words in either of theſe poſtures; I will put enmity between thy ſeed and her ſeed, and It ſhall break thy head, &c. that is, Chriſt collectively taken, or together with the whole body of Believers; He and they together ſhall cruſh thee, and thou ſhalt bruiſe his, or its heel; or again you may read it thus, I will put enmity between thy ſeed, and the womans ſeed, (taking the womans ſeed for that one ſingle Perſon Chriſt as alone conſidered) and he ſhall break thy head, and thou ſhalt bruiſe his heel, and ſo the Septuagint and others alledged have tranſlated it. הוא ipſe vel ipſum.

2. If we take the Materials themſelves in theſe two promiſes, or two parts of the promiſe and the ſcope thereof they will as readily comply with both theſe ſences, and then both words and things will be found to conſpire in the teſtifying hereof.

I. That Chriſt perſonally is directly intended and his own perſonal Victory appears from hence.

1. This was the firſt promiſe of the Meſſiah, who is ſaid to be the Lamb ſlain from the beginning of the World, that is, from the fall, (as alſo Joh. 8. 44. from the beginning is taken) and this ſpoken as in relation to theſe words here, propheſying thou ſhalt bruiſe his heel. And this is alſo the fundamental promiſe upon which the faith of the whole Church lived before the Flood, and after for Two Thouſand Years, till it was in Iſaack and his ſeed renewed to Abraham in other terms, and therefore not to underſtand Chriſt in his own Perſon ſingly as in himſelf, and by himſelf overcoming Satan to be directly intended, were to take away that great head of the Churches faith for ſo many ages. For we read of no other propounded but this, and ſo have no warrant to think that there was any other promiſe extant.

II. And indeed the whole race of the Elect of Mankind could not, nor cannot be ſuppoſed to overcome this ſo potent an Enemy, they being ſo weak and impotent in themſelves, and now alſo become in a great reſpect captive to him, and under his power; it was neceſſary therefore to the believing thereof, that this Meſſiah or Chriſt whom God had deſigned to be one of that ſeed as the head of them, as Satan was the head of his ſeed; and who ſhould be able (for and on their behalf) firſt to overcome him ſingly and perſonally himſelf, and ſo mortally break his head, as that then the reſt of his Brethren might come to ſet their feet thereon, in the ſtrength and vertue of him. It was neceſſary (I ſay) to the ſtrengthening our faith that this our Chriſt ſhould be preſuppoſed in the firſt and chief place, to be here promiſed, and propheſied of; and directly pointed at, and not by conſequence or implication onely, or but as in the croud among the whole ſeed. And can we otherwiſe think that God in this his firſt proclaiming of this great War and Victory to be obtained by Mankind, ſhould mention onely, and ſet out in the field ſo, a company of the Sons of Men utterly diſarmed, and having each a deadly wound, and not propoſe (as the ground and foundation of the faith thereof) Him the Chriſt, the Conquerour, in whom their whole ſtrength lay? Yea could the Devil have feared the breaking of his head by any or all thoſe (put them all together) ſo unable, even ſo much as to reſiſt the leaſt tentation of his, unleſs God ſhould have aimed and ſet forth ſome one extraordinary, one of mankind that ſhould be infinitely ſtronger than he?

III. The ſeed promiſed is in a ſpecial and ſingular manner called the ſeed of the Woman, (Man not mentioned) as a ſeed that ſhould be brought forth not by the ordinary way of generation of both Man and Woman, and ſo doth in the letter of it point more eſpecially at Chriſt.

2. As Chriſt ſingly in himſelf, ſo with all the whole ſeed of Believers as repreſented in him, and ſo repreſentatively in him are to be underſtood in this promiſe, He ſhall break thy head. This aſſertion is made out by parts,

1. That the whole ſeed of Believers are intended in the former part of the promiſe, I will put enmity between her ſeed and thy ſeed.

2. That in the latter part of the promiſe, He ſhall break thy head. Chriſt is ſet forth in his own perſon ſo as including too, and repreſenting the whole ſeed.

It cannot be denyed, but that the Curſe was intended of all the ſerpents ſeed, as whoſe head ſhould be broken as well as the Devils: For they as well as the Devils partake of the guilt that cauſeth this Curſe; namely, they do bruiſe the heel of Chriſt himſelf, or his Saints, as well as Satan doth. And the wicked Jews did it perſonally, and againſt himſelf as Peter chargeth them, whom ye ſlew and hanged on a Tree, Act. 5. 30. as well as the Devil himſelf that ſet them on to crucify him. Nor indeed could the Devil have done it without them; and therefore theſe, and all elſe, are intended as ſpoken unto in the Curſe as well as Satan. And yet we ſee that the Devil is alone here both blamed and curſed, the Devil alone was preſent whilſt this was pronouncing and none of them but he; and ſo it is carried as if none were curſed but he, how then can all his ſeed be included and involved in this Curſe? No way but repreſentatively in him; he alone perſonally ſtood by, but yet as the father of them all, and Repreſenter and Perſonater of them; and he alone is made the Butt or Mark the curſe is directed againſt, but withal it lights upon, and is ſhot againſt the whole generation of them, and was accordingly conſidered by God when he ſent forth this curſe againſt both him and them: As in like manner when God in the 14. Verſe curſed the ſerpent to creep on his belly, &c. he means all the Devils his Angels with him, the whole kind of them, and perhaps as having their heads all in this conſpiracy againſt man as in their own firſt fall: Though the great Devil (who got the name of the old ſerpent by it, Rev. 20.) did put it in execution.

Now then anſwerably on the other ſide, this our great He or (ἀυτὸς) as John delights to ſtile him again and again, 1 John 3. 2, 3, 5, 6. the Devils great Antagoniſt, our Champion, he perſonally and alone was to encounter him, and fulfil this great promiſe of breaking his head; yet conſidered as the repreſentative of us his ſeed involved in him. And look how the curſe reacheth both ſerpent and ſeed, ſo the promiſe as fulfilled by him extendeth to Chriſt and us, to Chriſt as our great David, that overcame this Goliah for us at a ſingle Duel; then to us as wrapt up in him, and perſonated by him therein. Seeing that the fates and facts of theſe two great Antagoniſts, and their ſeveral adherents are within the ſmall compaſs of this one ſentence, He ſhall break thy head, and thou ſhalt bruiſe his heel, ſo interchangeably ſet oppoſite one to the other, in a way (I ſay) of correſpondent oppoſition; this rightly ſuppoſeth the law of parallel oppoſition to hold in each, viz. as to this reſpect which is the main, that as the Devil is curſed with having his head broken and bruiſing Chriſt's heel, and his ſeed included as accurſed therein; alſo in like manner, in promiſing Chriſt that he ſhould break Satans head, and have his heel withal bruiſed by him, it is intended that his ſeed and fellows were repreſented in and with him: And that ſeeing the one holds good on Satans part to this ſence mentioned, that the other ſhould on Chriſt's, as including the ſeed, eſpecially ſeeing the Scriptures elſewhere do confirm this truth, that Chriſt repreſented his ſeed in what was done for them.

For

For the proof of the firſt. As by the Serpents Seed is meant the whole race and generation of wicked Men, (for other Seed the Devil hath none) is evident, and of them it is Chriſt ſpeaking to the Phariſees ſayes, They are of their Father the Devil. John 8. 44. And the Apoſtle John the ſame, 1 John 3. 8. Therefore by the law of oppoſition, (and here is the higheſt and moſt general oppoſition put, I will put enmity between thy ſeed and her ſeed) the whole Seed of the Godly who were to come of that Woman, the Mother (upon that occaſion called) of all living; that is, that live by Faith, muſt be underſtood alſo. And this confirms it, that theſe that are ſaid to be the Serpents ſeed were all to be of Mankind, and ſo to be in the Literal ſenſe and a Carnal reſpect the Seed of the Woman, as well as thoſe other according to Natural Generation. Chap. 17.

The word Seed imports a Race or Generation of Men, which is uſual, and alſo 'tis applyed to ſome one Perſon as well. Thus when Eve had Seth, that one Son, ſhe calls him her Seed, Gen. 4. 25. And accordingly the word זרע Seed being a Maſculine in the Hebrew, the Pronoun הוא may be tranſlated by the Impersonal [It] as referring to Seed, as it refers to Seed, as ſignifying an whole Race; or [He] as perſonally referring to Chriſt, who alſo was in an eſpecial manner the Seed of the Woman, and not of Man; though the other (as Seth) are ſo called, Gen. 4. 25.

Yet 2. This whole Seed is intended as firſt repreſented in that one Perſon Chriſt, who ſhould by his own ſtrength alone break the Serpents head for them all, which is clear to me by this paralel reaſon out of the Text: For in that latter promiſe, He ſhall break thy head, &c. there is no expreſs mention made of the Serpents ſeed, or of their being broken, but it is ſpoken to and of the Serpent only in the Letter, thy head, and thou ſhalt bruiſe his heel; and yet none will deny but that this part of the Curſe was intended unto all the Serpents Seed, of wicked Men, as well as to the Serpent the Devil. Even as 'tis true that they ſhould bruiſe Chriſts heel, (as the wicked Jews did) as well as the Devil himſelf that ſet them on to Crucifie him. Therefore they all muſt be intended as ſpoken unto in this Curſe as well as Satan, though he is alone named, and how ſhould this be? But that he as the Father and Head of them then ſtood by whilſt 'twas pronouncing, and was preſent, and he alone. And though in appearance, he alone was Curſed, and none elſe; to have his Head broken: Yet 'tis evident that all his Seed of wicked Men were Curſed at the ſame time in this Curſe directed againſt him, for they all were to be broken and cruſh'd as well as he, and that for bruiſing Chriſts Heel as well as he did: And he as the Father and Repreſenter of them was made the Butt of this Curſe, and therefore was conſidered by God as the repreſenter of the great Devil who lay hid in that Serpent. He is underſtood to have Curſed with him all the whole company of Angels that fell with him; and as perhaps having had all their hands in this conſpiracy againſt Man, though the great Devil only put it in execution. Anſwerably our great He, (as John delights to call him in this 1 John 3. 2, 3, 5, 6.) the Devils ſpecial Antagoniſt, our Champion, is perſonally deſigned as the Conquerour of him, but we repreſentatively conſidered in him, whilſt himſelf alone did it in thoſe words, He ſhall break it, and look as the Curſe therein reacheth both Serpent and Seed, but the Seed as repreſented now by him as their Head and Father of them: So the Promiſe therein extends likewiſe to both Chriſt and us. To Chriſt, as our David overcoming that great Goliah in a ſingle Duel. To us, as therein repreſented by him.

3. So as withal Thirdly, We in our perſons are to have a victory over him through his ſtrength, and not repreſentatively only in his

[1.] Becauſe the victory belongs perſonally to all thoſe to whom the dammage or conflict doth. Now the hurt, the dammage we have a perſonal ſhare in, as well as Chriſt had. The Devil and his Seed, by reaſon of Natural Enmity put, do bruiſe our Heel, and we find it perſonally to our coſt, therefore to them alſo extends that victory, It ſhall break thy head: the ſame whoſe Heel is bruiſed, are the breakers of his Head. And to be ſure we receive many wounds and bruiſings from him and his, for we feel and groan under them daily, and all the Brotherhood in the World with us.

[2.] The enmity that puts the difference, and is the ground of the quarrel, is not betwixt Chriſt only and the Devils Seed, but the whole Generation of the juſt that came of the Woman, as experience in all Ages hath ſhewn.

But all this hitherto ſhews but what was done againſt Satan in himſelf, and by himſelf, and we are therein conſidered but ſecondarily and remotely by way of repreſentation only.

All which have taken up the foregoing part of this Diſcourſe hitherto at large, therefore

[3.] That this Seed ſhall in their ſucceſſion and turns bear their parts, and have their ſhare in an actual and perſonal way in breaking Satans head, as the intendment alſo in this Prophetick promiſe, comes next to be evinced.

(1.) The ſame of whom it is ſaid, Satan ſhall bruiſe his heel; the ſame it is of whom it is there alſo ſaid, He or It ſhall break thy head. So as look who are concerned and have a ſhare in being bruiſed or wounded in the battel or conflict with Satan, the ſame here have aſcribed to them, a proportionable intereſt in the victory, it being (beſides the import that both are ſo conjoyned here) a declared Maxime by God, and that as to this very point, That if we ſuffer with Chriſt, we ſhall alſo reign with him. Rom. 8. 17. 2 Tim. 2. 12. Now all the whole Seed or Race have their ſhare in their being bruiſed and wounded by Satan, and therefore alſo in that other; the bruiſed are his breakers. We all find to this day, by vertue of this Propheſie, the ſad effects of his bruiſing our Heel, as well as Chriſt did his, and ſo we too in conformity unto Chriſt, and therefore we may as well believe our ſelves included in the promiſe it ſelf made to theſe bruiſings.

(2.) The enmity in the former part, that is the cauſe of thoſe mutual aſſailments of each other in the latter part, and the iſſue whereof is this victory: I ſay, that enmity that is the cauſe both of his bruiſing our Heel, and then of the breaking of his Head, is ſpoken of here as in common to all the Seed as well as unto Chriſt perſonally on our behalf, and therefore the combate, and the iſſue of the war, the victory, are not to be reſtrained to Chriſt only, when the enmity which is the cauſe of it is not, but is commenſurate and extended unto all.

(3.) This agrees with the general ſcope and intent of Gods uttering this, made good and proved by the event, and that preſently began between Abel and Cain, and hath continued ever ſince, which is that God here firſt ſet up his Standard, (whereof Chriſt was to be the Standard-bearer under him) four hundred years before Chriſt yet came in the Fleſh, and proclaims the War that was inſtantly to begin, and to be carried down throughout all Ages, and proclaims it in the language of an Hereditary War, ſuch as was to be between two Houſes or Families of great and long continuance, to be between two Seeds, and ſo from Father unto Son downwards, and the totum genus, the whole kind and generation of each, and therefore it is too narrow to reſtrain it only to Chriſt the Seed, though it is he that is the Chieftain, and of whom the whole Family in Heaven and Earth is named, and to whom the Glory of all is to be aſcribed.

(4.) But that which above all convinceth me is, that both in the New Teſtament we find it affirmed of the Saints, that they in their perſons are the overcomers of Satan, as Chriſt hath overcome him in his own perſon. So 1 John 2. 13. You have overcome the evil one, and 1 John 4. 3, 4. you have overcome the World, and with it the Prince of the World, as the reaſon which follows, evidently argues, For he who is in you (ſayes he) is ſtronger than he that is in the world. So then not Chriſt only in himſelf for us, but he alſo, and he in us, is to overcome Satan and his together, the World and him that is in it, both Serpent and Seed.

This

This victory alſo is ſet out in the New Teſtament, in ſuch expreſſions and phraſes as evidently doth allude to this very promiſe in Geneſis as the accompliſhment of it. Rev. 16. 20. And God ſhall tread down Satan under your feet ſhortly. 'Tis God indeed treads him down, and yet it is their feet he is trodden under. Now as the Curſe of the Devil in Geneſis, It ſhall bruiſe thy head, is an alluſion to the Serpents condition, who going on the ground, and being not able to reach the Head, yet whilſt out of enmity he will be nibling at the Heel, he is lyable to have his Head cruſht by the Foot whoſe Heel he thus aſſaults; ſo to tread down Satan under our feet, holds as great an affinity with that promiſe there. Alſo his being called the Enemy, the Old Serpent, hath an undeniable reference to him that was that Serpent, who perſonated and cloathed himſelf with that Serpent, and therein firſt aſſaulted Eve, between whom and us the enmity is put. Yea and Chriſt himſelf is pleaſed to give forth to his Apoſtles and us in them, our part and ſhare in this victory over Satan under the ſame expreſſions and alluſion to this promiſe, as then bequeathed to us together with himſelf, Luke 10. 19. when ſpeaking of their ſubduing Satan, ver. 17. and by their Miniſtry throwing him down as lightening, ver. 18. he utters it in thoſe words ver. 19. Behold I give unto you power to tread on ſerpents and ſcorpions, and all the power of the enemy. So then this is Chriſts glory, and was the ſcope of that firſt promiſe; that as himſelf ſo alſo we ſhould tread on the Serpents, the enemies head, and ſo he came to have a ſecond victory in us, as well as in himſelf; which as his Sufferings in us are termed ὑστερήματα, The after Sufferings of Chriſt, Col. 1. 24. ſo this overcoming by the Saints is the after Victories of Chriſt. And this ſecond after Victory puts the Devil in ſome reſpects to more ſhame and confuſion than the firſt, when he was dreſſed ſo, by Chriſt (as we uſe to ſpeak) of which you heard, for the weaker the Victor is, the more glorious is the Conqueſt, and the ſtronger the enemy is, and the more unequal to deal with, the more glorious is the conqueſt, and the greater is the ſhame of his defeat. In Rev. 12. you have the Devil deſcribed, and ſet forth with all his Royal Titles heaped up one upon another, as no where elſe together is the like in Scripture; ver. 9. The great Dragon, that Old Serpent, called the Devil and Satan, which deceiveth the whole world; ſuch is his power, ſubtilty and juriſdiction: And upon what occaſion is this great deſcription of him given? 'Tis after a conqueſt of him, a down-fall, he prevailed not, ver. 8. he was caſt out, ver. 9. and his Angels with him, ver. 9. caſt down, ver. 10. overcome, ver. 11. So then look as in ſcorn and as matter of triumph, a King when conquered ſhould be proclaimed with all his Titles, ſo is he; and to make all this the more glorious, he ſets out a Woman, and yet more unequal, a Woman in travail, that cannot help her ſelf, much leſs reſiſt an enemy; ver. 1, 2. and unto her, that is the Church, is the victory aſcribed in the Song of triumph that is made upon it, ver. 12. They overcame him by the blood of the Lamb, and they loved not their lives unto death. This Woman and this Dragon are ſet together, to ſhew the inequality of this match. This confounded the Devil more, that they that Woman ſhould be ſaid to overcome, then that Michael and all his Angels ſhould be ſo. It was Abimelechs confuſion and pride, Judges 9. 54. a Woman caſt a milſtone on Abimelechs head, and all to break his skull; O ſlay me (ſaith he) that men ſay not of me, a woman ſlew me. The Woman began the war, Rev. 12. ſo that ſhe hath the Devil under her feet at the end, caſt down to the earth, as ver. 9 and ſo he hath the Serpents Curſe exquiſitely accompliſht on him, Upon thy belly ſhalt thou go, and duſt ſhalt thou eat all the dayes of thy life; which analogically as applyed to Satan, notes out the moſt abject condition and extremity of Captivation, that as one fully conquered, he ſhould be laid flat on the ground, and trodden on, ſo as to lick the duſt of it; for ſo Captivity, according to the manner of thoſe Countries, is expreſſed, by their belly cleaving to the earth, and licking the duſt; Pſal. 44. 24, 25. and Pſal. 72. 9. And therefore though God had curſt Satan to Hell afore, immediately upon his fall, 2 Pet. 2. 4. He ſpared not the Angels that fell, but caſt them down to Hell; yet this after Curſe, is a ſecond Hell, which therefore is said to torment him all his dayes, even for ever, that he falls also by the hand and under the foot of Man, whom he so much envied and despised. And hereby is not God fully even with him? Doth he not retaliate his Sin upon him to the utmost of the Curses. The Devil, though in the shape of a Serpent, subtilly assaults and sets on the Woman, as thinking he could easily deceive and overcome her as he did, and by her the Man: (These two you know in the Type were Christ and his Church, Eph. 5. 31, 32, 33.) Well, because thou hast done this, (sayes God). He never goes about to convince him of his Sin, (as he did the Man and Woman) but falls a cursing him, The seed of the woman shall break thy head. The seed, i.e. both Christ the Head and Christ the Body; Christ the Man and Christ the Woman; Christ Personal and Christ Mystical, shall do it, as the Scripture calls the Church, the whole Seed, as you have heard. And whereas he began with the Woman, and so prevailed over the Man; on the contrary here, Christ the Man deals with him first, spoils and triumphs over him, and then he turns him over to the Woman to have a second bout with him. Come (sayes he to his whole Church) thou shalt set thy feet, thy tender feet upon him too, and in my strength shalt crush him. Rupertus tells it with a great deal of confidence, as having had it, he sayes, from those that knew it by experience, that if the naked foot of a Woman, chance to tread or touch a Serpents head, it dyes instantly, which a far greater force will not effect. Thus the Devil dyes not, nor is fully and totally subdued till she hath set her foot upon him also; and it will be thought that however Christs so hard tread may break his Head, and his Power more, yet her tread breaks his Heart; and it is no derogation from Christ, for 'tis Christ in both. Nay it is for confusion to that proud Spirit, which is as bad as wrath, and therefore after his being judged to Hell, he hath the Curse of this annexed to it, yea and for this end (among other) did Christ take up Flesh and Blood, that is, the weaknesses of Mans Nature, and not the Nature of Angels in their strength, that he might in destroying the Devil therein add confusion to his Conquest; it is the reason insinuated if not expresly given, Heb. 2. 14. And upon the same reason, that the Apostle would heighten our conflict with Satan to us (thereby to prepare and awaken us) that we fight not against Flesh and Blood, but against Principalities and Powers, by the same is the confusion of Satan rendered the greater, that Flesh and Blood hath a strength given it to tread upon Principalities and Powers. But herein as Paul gives the account of it, the strength of Christ is perfected in weakness, ('tis proper as to conclude the point in hand withal) for the Apostle brings it in upon occasion of Satans being sent to buffet him; A messenger of Satan, as some; or the Angel Satan, (as others) was sent to buffet him, 2 Cor. 7. 8.

Chap. 17.

Book V.

Lib. 3. de trinit. c. 20.

If we would further know the particulars and the glories of these Christs victories over him, atchieved by the Saints, we must estimate them by that threefold power and advantage which Satan hath still left him over the Saints.

I. In ruling the World to bring afflictions on them.
II. In accusing them to God.
III. In tempting them to Sin. And the Saints have an answerable victory over all, and these victories also obtained in a fair and rational way, by and according to equitable rules, and not by extraordinary force. So that in handling these three ensuing particulars, I must carry along three things through each particular.

1. Satans Power.
2. How the Saints, or Christ by the Saints, do defeat him.
3. How each of these defeats is done by rule, in a rational legal way. Which latter renders these victories on our parts more slow and tedious, but more glorious: You have a Maxime, 2 Tim. 2. 3. that no Man is crowned that doth not strive lawfully; Christ himself did not overcome him by meer force, but in an equitable way (as was shewn) so nor do we.

1. Satan

Chap. 17.

1. Satan hath over us a tempting power unto the greateſt Sin; you know he is called the Tempter. I will begin with that, Peter that had been woryed by him, cryes out to all his fellows, 1 Pet. 5. 8. there is a roaring Lyon (look to your ſelves) who alwayes goes up and down ſeeking whom (of us Believers) he may devour; and his outcry is τῇ ἀδελφότητι to the whole Brotherhood of Saints in the World, Be ſober, be vigilant, becauſe your adverſary the Devil, as a roaring lyon, walketh about ſeeking whom he may devour. It it as if one ſhould have given warning to a company of Children (ſuppoſe thoſe in Eliſha's Story) a Bear, a Lyon is broke looſe, hungry and roaring, ſeeking whom he may devour; and who knows whom he may light on, as elſewhere Paul, Gal. 6. 1. Leſt thou or thou be tempted. For Paul knew that after he is caſt out at Converſion, as in the fore-mentioned Luke 11. he attempts to make re-entries. He not knowing who are true Believers, who are not, maketh the ſame aſſaults and ſtormings upon Men ſavingly converted, that he doth on temporaries: Which made Paul ſo jealous of all his Converts, leſt by ſome means the Tempter ſhould have tempted them. 1 Theſſ. 3. 5. In this work of temptation Satan is permitted to exerciſe abundance of Power more than in any of the former, unto aſtoniſhment of themſelves and Angels; and they are ſo put to it, that indeed it may be askt, where is the bleſſedneſs you ſpake of? What is become of thoſe great good tydings of perfect victory over him on the Croſs and Aſcenſion? And the actual poſſeſſion of all his Power by Jeſus Chriſt, and taken from him at our Converſion? The Apoſtle hath a very high expreſſion, Eph. 6. 12. ſhewing how much the Saints are put to it in this particular, And having done all to ſtand: He had ſaid afore, We wreſtle not with fleſh and blood, but with principalities and powers. 'Tis true indeed, God will not ſuffer us to be tempted above what we are able to bear, yet ſuffers to the utmoſt what we are able to bear; that is, he leaves us but to juſt ſo much Grace as ſhall be ſufficient. 2 Cor. 12 9. Many a righteous Man is ſcarcely ſaved in this reſpect, his Temptations are ſo ſtrong, his Jaylors ſo many; yet ſtill I may ſay what was ſaid of Joſeph, Chriſts Type and ours, I may ſay the ſame of every Chriſtian, The archers have ſorely grieved him, and ſhot at him, and hated him. Gen. 49. 23. Theſe Arrow-Maſters, (as Ainſworth reads it) his Brethren, his Miſtriſs, his Maſter, they all put him unto great tryals and temptations, and ſo do theſe Arrow-Maſters, theſe forgers of thoſe fiery darts and arrows, (as in the ſame Eph. 6. 16. they are called) every Chriſtian. But Chriſt hath promiſed as there he did of Joſeph, ver. 25. But his bow abode in ſtrength, and the armes of his hands are made ſtrong by the hands of the mighty God of Jacob. There is no victory but there is a battle, no battle but there muſt be a permiſſion to uſe wiles and utmoſt force: We read of both in Satan, who is called the Lyon, and the Serpent. No Man is crowned, unleſs he ſtrive lawfully; 2 Tim. 2. 3. therefore Chriſt will do ſo, the Devil ſhall have fair play; yea, and ſometimes do his worſt, and this makes the victory the more glorious. Jam. 1. 12. Bleſſed is the man that endureth temptation, for when he is tryed he ſhall receive the crown of life which the Lord hath promiſed to them that love him: That is, one who hath gone through them and overcome them, though with infinite batterings and bruiſings of Spirit. Nor are temptations there to be limited to outward afflictions, but to extend it unto tryals for Sin. For it follows, ver. 13, 14. But let no man ſay when he is tempted, I am tempted of God, for God cannot be tempted with evil, neither tempteth he any man; but every man is tempted when he is drawn away of his own luſt and enticed. Now that the Saints after ſome years experience in Chriſtianity, have uſually ſome experience of their having overcome that evil one, and that ſo as to be a pledge unto them of their full and final overcoming at laſt, (of which that in the Revel. 2. 7, 13. To him that overcometh I will give the crown of life, is to be underſtood) is a certain truth; and I ſhall open but one Scripture that makes good this previous overcoming in hand; 1 John 2. 13, 14. I write unto you, fathers, becauſe ye have known him that is from the beginning. I write unto you, young men, becauſe ye have overcome the wicked one. I write unto you, little little children, because ye have known the Father. ver. 14. I have written unto you, fathers, because ye have known him that is from the beginning. I have written unto you, young men, because ye are strong, and the word of God abideth in you, and ye have overcome the wicked one. It is attributed here (you see) to the middle sort or age of Christians to have overcome that wicked one; by which is meant the Devil up and down this Epistle; and that the overcoming him is spoken in respect of lusts, or temptations unto Sin, is evident, because it is made the ground of an exhortation that follows, not to love the World, nor the things of the World: Ver. 15, 16. Love not the world, nor the things of the world; if any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him: For all that is in the world, the lust of the flesh, the lust of the eyes, and the pride of life, is not of the Father but is of the world. And his Argument unto these young Men (of whom he sayes, they have overcome) lyes thus; you have had already some experience of victory, having been in some battles and conflicts with the enemy, fighting against Sin. Heb. 12. 4. It hath cost you hot work, and will you now give back, and lose all you have fought for, and grow faint when the battle declines, and experience gives you so clear an hope of an assured victory; no, but on the contrary therefore be encouraged still to fight it out. Again you may observe, that this is twice said of them with repetition, and therefore is a matter of eminency to be noticed: This for the coherence of the words of that Text of Scripture; now to explain them let us remark, that he reduceth the state of all Christians to three sorts or degrees; Babes, Young Men, and Fathers; making the ground of his allusion, the proportion that Grace or the New Creature hath with what is found in Nature in the Sons of Men, wherein those three Ages are eminently distinguishable. And look as if a Naturalist were to set out the genius, dispositions and attainments of Childhood, Mans estate, and Old Age, he would take that which is most proper to each of these Ages, so doth the Apostle here in characterizing these three Ages in Christianity.

1. Babes in Christianity know the Father, are taught to run to God as to a Father, and to abound in expressing Filial and Childlike dispositions and instincts towards God as a Father, and are trained up as Children, and are allured with toyes, and held by the arms and taught to go, and are carried in the arm rather than walk.

2. Old Men in Christianity know him that is from the beginning, the property of Old Age in Nature, is to talk of things antient and long ago done; these they are taken up withal: Now the Heathen could say, Who is the most antient? God, whom Daniel calls the antient of dayes. So Christ is too, 1 Joh. 1. 1. that which was from the beginning, who ver. 2: is that eternal life who was with the Father. And for all those great Mysteries of the Gospel in Election, and the transaction of the Father with the Son, a Story antienter than the World; these things grown Christians delight to speak of, and are taken withal, the knowledge of which is that Paul boasts most of, Eph. 3. 2.

3. Of Young Men the proper excellency is their strength, Prov. 20. 29. and they boast of wrestlings and victories, and if they be Military Men they have had experience of overcoming the enemy in the field, and are thereby flesh'd and animated to any encounters Romana Juventus was the Poets stile of the Souldiers; so among the Jews too, Let the young men play afore us. 2 Sam. 2. 14.

Now as all true Christians are born for souldiery, and conflicts with Sin and Satan; so the Apostle points out that time between their being Babes, and whilst they are growing up to a virility and strength, and to a Spiritual Manhood: And during that Age is the proper season, and most eminent field of a Christians Life, in which the bloodiest battles with lusts and temptations of that kind are fought, and in which time (where there is truth of Grace) there have fallen out some comfortable experiments of victories, though still the assaults may be renewed and continued; for John (you see) distinguishes them them from Babes by this very thing : The truth is, that in the firſt Age humiliation for Sin hath ſtounded luſts ; the Spirit by John Baptiſts voice and miniſtry hath blown upon all fleſh ; Hell and the Curſe, and fear of Damnation, &c have withered all excellencies, or things deſireable, and theſe are ſucceeded with ſweetneſſes and ſupports, which add to the deading of their Spirits unto temptation to Sin, and that preſent frame of Spirit reduceth them often to think they ſhall never commit a groſs Sin, as Peter that he ſhould not deny his Maſter, and ſo they are cenſorious of others, and then God ſpares them. Babes are fed with Milk, and not led unto the field unto great or notable encounters, or elſe the exerciſe of their Spirits lyes in point of Juſtification, and ſeeking Chriſts Righteouſneſs, yea and then all the affections upon either the account of ſelf-love, or gracious love, are ſtirred and run in one channel in purſuit after Salvation of a Mans ſelf. But when once the Soul is ſetled, theſe firſt ſtounds of humiliation and frights are over, and luſts have come to themſelves again. And then when the Soul is in ſome meaſure quieted by Faith, and yet not aſſured of Eternal Salvation; (ſo as wonted fears are kept under, but yet the Soul attains not joyes unſpeakable and glorious, which ſhould as much heighten the affections that way, as fears had ſtirred them that other) when alſo thoſe mercenary aſſiſtances and auxiliaries which ſelf-love afforded are recalled and withdrawn, and if any ſweetneſſes were, they are abated or gone, and ſo what is purely Grace (which now is of it ſelf grown up to ſome degree of ſtrength) is left to ſhift for it ſelf, and to fight its own battles alone, then uſually come the bloody conflicts, then is the tryal whether Luſts and Devil, or Soul and Chriſt ſhould overcome, and whether Chriſt hath begotten truth of Grace, and owns it upon ſome aſſaults or other, and in ſome tryal and experience of victories, that it may be ſaid, Ye have overcome that evil one : For one of theſe two caſes have fallen out either Peters caſe, or Pauls, either ſuch Chriſtians have been kept and not foyled, (we read not that Paul ever was) or if they have been foiled, and overcome for ſome acts of ſinnings, yet that hath in a recovery occaſioned (as it were) a new Converſion, which was Peters caſe, who went out and wept bitterly, and brought in a new ſtrength and recruit. And either of theſe are, and muſt be reckoned an overcoming that wicked one. It is no matter (that is as to this point) that thou haſt been overcome ; for if God recovers thee ſtill and renewes thee by Repentance, thou haſt overcome. A Town that hath been often beſieged, and yet never wone or taken (as that Virgin, Maiden City of Venice) and another into which the enemy hath made great entries, and yet hath been beaten out again by them that are within it, theſe are both of them victorious. In theſe caſes God accounts of it as a great matter, that Grace remains and is not excuſſed ; and therefore John adds here, Becauſe ye are ſtrong, and the word of God abides in you. The Word of God abides in you both as the cauſe of theſe victories, and as the ſigns of them, that it ſhould ſtill ſo abide after all, when the battle hath been ſo great and ſore, and it was doubtful by the paſſages that fell out in the Caſtle, who had the worſe or who the better ; yet this is reckoned a ſignal of the Conquerour, that he keeps the field, and is found ſtanding to his ground, and is where ſtill he was, and retains and holds his Standard : That the Seed of God ſtill remains, that the Word of God abides, this is an evidence of victory, and Chriſt ſo expreſſeth it, I have prayed that thy faith fail not; for after ſore, great, and many ſuch temptations, a temporary work is worn out, and abides not ; yea, when a Man is ſtrengthened to continue to maintain the battle, and not fling his weapons down, ſo long Sin hath not the dominion, but Chriſt will bring forth Judgment to victory.

Chap. 17.

Now the reiterated experiments of having thus in part, and at times overcome or continued the fight, is to Men of that Age a pawn and pledge, that they ſhall finally overcome. It is ſo in the thing it ſelf, and is often made ſuch to their Faith. Experience breeds hope, and hope maketh not aſhamed; as Rom. 5. 4, 5. Souldiers that have been in many cruel battels, and are yet alive, and have their limbs whole (though with many ſcars) and have fought

it

it out, and got the victory, though perhaps often rallying and giving ground, they come to have ſtout or ſtrong and reſolute Spirits ; and whereas others hopes (namely of Babes) of perſeverance is built only upon Gods faithfulneſs ; theſe further have the experience of the iſſue of many a combate, to cauſe them the more ſoundly to hope ; and in this ſenſe ſome have underſtood theſe words, namely, you have overcome the wicked one ; that is, you ſhall overcome ; expreſſing that which is future in the time paſt to ſhew the certainty of it for the future : But that cannot be the immediate and direct meaning, becauſe the future overcoming is as common to Believers, as to young Men, that is, that they ſhall overcome ; whereas the Apoſtles ſcope is by way of eminency and diſtinction to the other, to ſet out what is more proper and peculiar to young Men, only this ſenſe comes in in a collateral way, that that experience which that Age attains to, is an evidence unto them that they ſhall finally and in the end prevail : Even as Joſhua, when they had as yet made ſome progreſs of victory over their enemies, he bad the eldeſt of Iſrael come and ſet their feet on the necks of their enemies ; Joſhua 10. 24. and in the aſſured confidence of the promiſe of God at firſt made, whereof they hitherto had had ſuch experience, he ſpeaks thus unto them, ver. 25. Fear not, neither be diſmayed, be ſtrong and of good courage : for thus ſhall the Lord do to all your enemies againſt whom ye fight ; and ſo it is here.

II. The Second thing that belongs to this, is the glory of theſe victories of Chriſt by us, as thus they are carried on to the end of our dayes : which that it may appear, the Terms or Laws ſet between God and us, are to be conſidered. In the entrance of this Diſcourſe I propoſed, that our overcoming Satan was not tranſacted by a ſole meer outward violent force, or reſtraint, a pure arbitrary Prerogative put forth by Chriſt on our behalf, for ſo he could keep him off from tempting us at all : But that Chriſt leaves him at times to encounter with us, and to do his worſt, yet upon certain Laws and Terms ſet between us by Chriſt, upon which it is he puts forth that force, and ſo according to thoſe Laws it is we overcome. That Maxime holdeth here, 2 Tim. 2. 5. And if a man ſtrive for maſteries, yet is he not crowned except he ſtrive lawfully. So then Laws are ſet between theſe Combatants, elſe there were no dealing with the Devil ; and ſuch as wherein his utmoſt skill and cunning to deceive, entice, perſwade, provoke, are diſplayed.

I. The Firſt Law is, that though he ſhould prevail to blow up, and inflame a Mans Luſts, and affections with thoſe corrupt Inſtruments of his he ſets upon the will, yea, and the will it ſelf be much won over and inclined even ready to yield, yet if the major part thereof (which is the executive Power in a Man) keeps fixed and comes not off, ſo long a Man is ſaid to overcome. So as Satan muſt not boaſt that he carryed it ſo, or ſo far, but in that caſe the Victory is decided to be on our part, and not on his. Every Mans Will is his Caſtle, as the Law ſpeaks of a Mans Houſe, and if a Man retains but power over his own will, (as the Apoſtle in another caſe expreſſeth it, 1 Cor. 7. 37.) which is ſeen by a Mans either not moroſe indulgency or actings over a Sin in phanſie again, or not perpetrating it outwardly, in this caſe God pronouncer on our ſides that we have overcome, though in the aſſault we have had our hearts much wounded and pierced through with fiery and inflaming Darts, that at the inſtant did tranſport our Affections. Eph. 6. 13. στῆναι καὶ ἀντιστῆναι, if we be able but to withſtand and ſtand, you may obſerve how that all the Weapons there reckoned up are but defenſive as Helmet, Shield, &c.

We only ſtand and deny, and accordingly ſaies Peter, whom reſiſt ſtedfaſt in the Faith, 1 Pet. 5. 9. That is, by Faith we are to retain the power of the Will : So likewiſe, 1 Cor. 7. 37. Stedfaſt in heart, having power over ones own will. I obſerve alſo, that in Rev. 12. our overcoming Satan is expreſſed by his not prevailing, (ver. 8, 9, and 11. compared) namely in the Iſſue : I enquire not how many times he prevails, that is not the meaſure God goeth by.

by. This may be ſet out by a compariſon of what befel Eve and Adam (whom Auſtin ſtill ſtyles fortiſſimus ille, that Sampſon and moſt ſtrong one in compariſon to us) in Innocency; or rather in the full ſtrength of the Image of God conſiſting in Holyneſs and Righteouſneſs, and that compleat in them. Chap. 17.

I. We have the ſame vertibility of Will which they had (take it meerly as it is a Will) the ſtrongeſt purpoſe whereof is (as I uſe to ſay) as eaſily diverted and turned aſide, as the ſtrongeſt puſh of a Rapier by a Straw.

2. Take Adams will, and it had perfect command over his affections, ſo that not a deſire, no not a velleity could ſtir to move it, until it gave way, yea, gave forth a command unto it. As in a well framed Watch or Clock; an under-Wheel doth not ſtir, until the upper firſt themſelves hath moved it. It muſt be ſo in them that the Underſtanding and Will were to begin to be ſeduced e're an affection waved this way or that. The Serpent deceived Eve the Text ſaies. 'Tis a ſlander upon Gods Image and Workmanſhip as it firſt came out of his hands, and that abſolute perfect Government, God ſet up in Adams Soul, to ſay, That Luſts and Affections (the popular part of Man) had power to move themſelves, which yet the Jeſuits and Arminians have caſt upon it. No, the Will it ſelf was as the Almighty, that had the Winds in its Fiſts. Adam then had nothing inward to tempt him or draw him aſide, but we have a Body of Sin and Death, full of life and activity as to ſin, a weight that preſſeth us down, Sin that beſetteth us round, Luſts that fight againſt the Soul, and not only Luſts to entice the Will, but the Will divided againſt it ſelf, that we cannot do what we would. It was as eaſie for Adam to will good as it is for us to wiſh any thing, to think or move a Toe, the whole Bias of the Bowl led him that way; but now at beſt you have fleſh luſting againſt the Spirit that you cannot do or will what you would. But then nothing without or within ſhould check or foreſlow any good motion in him, and yet the Devil overcame them.

Tanta facilitas in Adamo. Vellendi & agendi benè, quanta nunc cogitandi aut movendi pedem, quanta ſola velleitatis. Nam nihil interius aut exterius fuit quod retardaret motum. Janſenius out of St. Auſtin.

3. Yea, And the Devil had not power to come within him, to repreſent unto and fire his fancy to inflame his affections or ſuggeſt by inward motion and incitations (as he doth us) for why elſe did he take an external ſhape to tempt him in.

4. The Devil overcame them the firſt on-ſet he made, yea and upon a ſighter skirmiſh, yea, and both of them at once, and it was not long a doing; they eaſily, preſently, and ſoon yielded up all. How great then is the Glory of that Grace in us (who are every way ſo diſadvantaged) that our wills ſhould be able to withſtand, and to ſtand. The Apoſtle in his own Example hath celebrated it, 2 Cor. 12. 7. a thorn in the Fleſh, an Angel of Satan, of Satan was ſent, ver. 7. to ſhew that Gods Grace was ſufficient, and that his ſtrength is perfected in weakneſs, and that he hath ordained ſtrength in Babes and Sucklings to ſtill the Enemy and Avenger, Pſal. 8. 2.

2. A Second Law which is ſet by Chriſt between him and us, That if we do thus hold out to reſiſt the Devil, we ſo overcome him as he muſt flie from us. And that is a Victory indeed when the Enemy is forced to fly for it. You have it expreſly, Jam. 4. 7. Reſiſt the Devil, and he will, or ſhall flee from you, for it is not put upon his will there, but what is the Event and Iſſue of ſuch reſiſtances. Souls that are aſſaulted ſtill more fiercely every day than other, are ready to ſay, Where is the promiſe of his fleeing, for I find his temptations doubled? Well, but God hath ſaid it, and underſtand it as he hath meant it, and you ſhall find it true. The Sence that I give of it, is,

1. That for all fierce and ſet temptations there is a time limited to Satan, though we know not the meaſure or limits of it; ſome times, and to ſome ſhorter, ſome times, and to ſome longer. It is termed the hour of temptation, Rev. 3. 10. And ſo Chriſt ſays too, Luke 22. 53, This is your hour and the power of darkneſs. Now during that time, and whilſt it is appointed to laſt, Satan may, yea, doth after many renewed reſiſtances of thine, come upon thee yet more fiercely, but there is a period until which if thou doſt hold out, he muſt flie from thee. Why ſhould there not be a ſet time for his temptation as well as his perſecution? His Commiſſion therein is, for certain dayes, as Revel. 2. 10. Satan ſhall caſt ſome of you into Priſon, And ye ſhall have tribulation ten dayes, but then the keys are remanded and taken from him, and ſo it is here in this caſe too. Now then,

2. The Law of that concertation is, That if the Soul be found reſiſting him at or until ſuch a time, though perhaps with many intervening foyles, that then he muſt be packing and gone. Let him look to himſelf, it ſeems not only to expreſs a promiſe to us, but a Law that concerns him, he will and ſhall flie: Even as that in Gen. 9. 6, contains both a Promiſe and a Law, He that ſheds mans blood, by man ſhall his blood be ſhed.

3. It is expreſſed in the way of a Military ingagement, and an iſſue ſuch as is in War. The words afore are, ſubmit or ſubject your ſelves to God, and then follows, Reſiſt the Devil, and he will flie from you. And he had ſpoken afore of their luſts warring in their members, ver. 1. 2. of which luſts (as all know) the Devil is the Leader. He had ſpoken of God, as the Soveraign Lord, and giver of more Grace, of Grace oppoſite unto our luſts, ver. 5, 6. Now then, ſaies James, if you would in this War prevail againſt your Luſts, my Counſel in the firſt and chief place is to ſubmit or ſubject your ſelves to God, become ſubject to him as the word is, Rom. 13. 1, 5. unto the higheſt powers; that is, as weaker States uſe to do when they are engaged in War againſt an enemy too potent for them, their Wiſdom is to give themſelves up as Subjects to ſome other oppoſite Prince, that may defend and protect them, and ſupply them with aid. So here theſe to God are adviſed to ſubject themſelves, that he may ſeaſonably come in with help in time of need. Now when the Soul hath firſt thus committed it ſelf, and put it ſelf under Gods protection, then and upon that occaſion (if you obſerve it) it is that he utters this, Reſiſt the Devil and he ſhall fly from you. It is as if ſuch a King or Prince, that is engaged for ſuch a Town or City under his protection that is beſieged and beleaguered long, ſhould ſend word unto them, hold but you ſtoutly out your reſiſtance, and I will come with Forces my ſelf that ſhall raiſe the Siege, and cauſe the enemy to depart. And in ſuch engagements there uſe to be the moſt punctual Obſervances and Truſts. Thus doth the Apoſtle as in the Name of God utter this here, ſubject your ſelves to God, and reſiſt the Devil manfully, and he ſhall flie from you, God will enforce him to do it.

4. Give me leave to give in my apprehenſion of this promiſe, he ſhall flie from you, φεύξεται ἀφ ὑμῶν, I know the word is uſed ſimply to expreſs a ſuddain and ſwift removal, for which that Matth. 10. 23. is cited by Beza, when they perſecute you in one City, flee into another; yet uſually it is a flight out of apprehenſion of danger (at leaſt) and even there the word imports danger in the Cities where they are perſecuted, and here it coming after an exhortation to a warlike reſiſtance, it ſeems ſuch a flight as is out of ſuch an apprehenſion. Some ſay it is out of pride, that he goes away, as being aſhamed and as ſcorning to be reſiſted ſo much, or ſo often. But the Devil is not wrought upon by an affection of ſhame, he would by his good will continue the aſſaulting us even to the end, to weary us and tire us. It riſeth then ſo high, as it is ſome way out of a fear of ſome real hurt that he knows is coming upon him if he deſiſt not, yet alas what can he fear of dammage from us who are but Fleſh and Blood? But from God (who as was ſaid is ingaged in it to take our parts) he may. God will come in as an Aſſiſtant with a Force and Power to raiſe his Siege, if he continues his Aſſaults longer than ſuch a time, ſo as when he thus ſees a Stronger then he coming, he is forced to take his heels and run away. It is certain that at times God rebukes and chaſtiſeth Satan, what elſe is the meaning of that Prayer of the Angel Chriſt, Zech. 3. 1, 2. and the Angel Michael, Jude 9. The Lord rebuke thee. The Devils were in fear of a torment when caſt out, or elſe, why ſay they? Why comeſt thou to torment us before the time? Matth. 8. 29. Perhaps when the Commiſſion as at firſt granted is expired, when he is caſt out at Converſion, he is for a while confined to dry places, where he hath little trading for doing Miſchief, which makes him walk Melancholly, and is a vexation to him; as alſo where he hath tempted Men to great Sins, he is confined to the place where the Facts were committed, Matth. 12. 23. And why may it not further be thought in this caſe, that as when wicked Men who are the Devils Inſtruments, do aſſault the Saints, and draw them before their Tribunals, that if they demean themſelves ſo as in nothing to be terrified by their Adverſaries, Phil. 1. 28. That then as there God ſtrikes the hearts of their Adverſaries with terrour, as he did Pilate in the caſe of Chriſt, (for it follows, which is in them an evident token of perdition, as to you of Salvation, and that of God, that is, as God fills your hearts with Seals and Tokens of his Love, ſo others at ſome time with horrour.) Why may not the like be thought to befall the Devil, when we manfully reſiſt him and that of God? Sure I am the promiſe is Rom. 16. 20. that when he ſhould have done his doe (as we ſay) in cauſing Diviſions in the Church of the Romans; and that God had quieted thoſe Diviſions, Satan is not only ſaid to be overcome, but to be trodden under feet. He is a Serpent, and fears his head to be bruiſed, to have a broken Pate after he hath bruiſed our heels, and therefore flees, but this is in caſe we be found ſtanding out to reſiſt him. Chap. 17.

2. But in caſe we be overcome by him, as ſometimes in ſuch Conflicts with him we are; by reaſon of our own Luſts, and he prevail ſo as to lead us Captive, yet two things do make a Glorious Victory even in this caſe.

1. In that this Man that is overcome recovers himſelf again out of the Snare of the Devil through the ſupply of the Spirit of Chriſt that is in him, and ſtronger than Satan who is without him, and this is Glorious in another reſpect, Bis vincit qui victus vincit. He is twice a Conqueror, who is ſo after having been vanquiſhed. It is made a Glory for the People of God to take them Captives, who had made them Captives, Iſa. 14. 2. Even Chriſt himſelf in his Sphere and Capacity (though not overcome by him in Sin, yet in Sufferings, &c.) ſuffered himſelf to be overcome, and to be nailed to the Croſs, ſo as the Devil thought he had him faſt and ſure, and then he removed but his foot, and cruſht him all in pieces. Now then when Satan hath even devoured and ſwallowed up a poor Saint, 1 Pet. 5. 8, ſo as he hath not only a foot in his Snare, but his whole Man in his Belly, as to all outward appearance (as he had done Peter as well as Judas, for he was going (like Jonah) into the Belly of this Leviathan, and had the Weeds about his Neck. Then to have Chriſt with one look, with one caſt of his Eye to break that Mans heart, and to cauſe him to repent, ſo that the Devil muſt give him up again, to have his prey thus taken out of his Teeth, it doth mightily confound the Devil. Yea, and further occaſionally to make uſe of that his ſinning to provoke him (through Zeal and Repentance) to do the Devil more Miſchief, (ſo as Peters Denyal upon his Repentance made him more ſtout and reſolute than ever (as in the Acts you read) as being Converted he was ſtrengthned ſo, as he turned Three Thouſand Souls at once, and Davids Murder provoked him to teach Sinners, and it hindred not but that God Converted many thereby, as Pſal. 51.) and perſonally working in the Party ſorrowing with Godly Sorrow, more Zeal and Revenge and Deſire, &c. 2 Cor. 7. 11. This is perfecting Gods ſtrength in our weakneſs, as 2 Cor. 12. 7, 8. And by the way it is ſtrange that Satan ſent to tempt ſhould be termed a gift, as ver. 7. of that chap. A Thorn in the Fleſh was given me, a Meſſenger of Satan, or the Angel Satan to buffet me, was it ever heard the Devil was a gift? Yes, in reſpect of the Iſſue of his temptations, as well as to ſuffer (and his temptations are tearmed Affliction and Suffering, 1 Pet. 5. 20, 21.) the bruiſing of our heel was a promiſe, as well as the breaking of his head.

2. A Second thing which in this caſe renders it glorious is, That often wher a Soul is overcome in reſpect of its Luſts, yet at the ſame time it is enabled by Faith to ſay, I ſhall yet overcome and be a Conquerour, and in the confidence thereof to give thanks unto God aforehand. Such a Courage as this daunts an Enemy exceedingly (eſpecially when he knows he muſt in the end be worſted,) that when he hath a Man down and under him, that Man yet ſpits in his Face, and ſaies to his Teeth, I ſhall yet riſe and tread thee down. Thus Paul in the Name of Believers, when he was driven to the War, and taken Captain, ſighs forth, Oh miſerable man that I am! Who ſhall deliver me? And in the foreſight of the Victory, cries, I thank my God through Jeſus Chriſt, Rom. 7. 25. Well Satan (ſaies the Soul) thou haſt me now under, but I ſhall up again, and ſay, as the Church in the Prophet, Rejoyce not againſt me oh mine enemy, though I fall, I ſhall riſe again, but thou ſhalt be trodden down as mire in the ſtreet. God ſhall tread down Satan under your feet ſhortly.

Chriſts dealing with Peter is a ſtrange Inſtance wherein you may perceive Chriſts care to ſupport his Faith, though he knew he ſhould be fouly overcome. I have prayed (ſaies he) that thy faith fail not, Luke 22. 32. Chriſt knew the effect of this promiſe would not be to keep him, and preſerve him from falling, and he gives him an aſſurance he ſhould recover, and to that end to ſtrengthen his Faith before the Sin committed, even with the ſame Breath he foretold he ſhould ſo hainouſly tranſgreſs, he aſſures him he ſhould recover from it. There is a talk by Carnal Spirits that deal with God upon the tearms of Self-Love only, and the Covenant of Works that aſſurance of perſevering hurts a Mans Spirit, and expoſeth him the more to ſins. If this were true, then is Chriſt to be blamed in this, he ventures it with Peters Spirit, and the Efficacy of his Interceſſion, he layes in Proviſion for Faith before-hand to feed upon againſt he ſhould be overcome by Sin, and ſets a Cordial by him afore the Diſeaſe, ſo much doth he delight in the Triumph of Faith in falls. You know Pauls Triumph, Rom. 8. 37. We are more than Conquerors through him that loved us. And why, becauſe of the perſwaſion begotten, for I am perſwaded neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, &c. He puts in to ſtrengthen Faith what needed not, what are not real, but only ſuppoſed Enemies, as the good Angels; nor heights nor depths, that is Satan, (as Revel. 2. 24.) that is, the ſtrangeſt temptations that Satan can invent, or throw us into cannot overwhelm us. He had firſt ſaid neither Death nor Life; and I confeſs I have been moſt pleaſed and comforted with the putting in of Life, that that ſhall not ſeparate: I have feared Life and the Snares of it more than Death, or Angels, or Devils. As for Death it diſpatcheth a Mans Sins and dangers in reſpect of them at once; it like Sampſon pulls down an old Houſe that kills all the Philiſtines together with himſelf, but it is Life which a Chriſtian is moſt apt to fear, knowing his own weakneſs: and the ſtrength of Luſts, and varieties of temptations; but here is a Mans Life enſur'd, (as is the Merchants Language) and an aſſurance put in for Life, and ſo againſt all hazards of ſinnings, and therefore we are more than Conquerors, becauſe in and during the Conflicts (which in view and to ſence are dubious, and hazardous which ſhould overcome) Faith perſwades us we ſhall overcome: Yea, vicimus vicimus (as with or after Prayer he cryed out e're he knew the event.) Ye have overcome the wicked one, 1 John 2. 12. It is as good as done; Yea, in ipſo bellandi ingreſſu ſumus victores, All that is born of God overcomes the World, 1 John 5. 4. In all Battels elſe Men fight dubio Marte: Sometimes the one ſide carries it, ſometimes another; ſo as they are doubtful of the event, only relieve themſelves with this disjunction, Aut Mors certa, aut victoria Læta, either certain Death, or an happy Victory. Fight the good fight of Faith with aſſurance of ſucceſs (ſaies the Apoſtle:) It is a good fight indeed wherein there is ground for an aſſurance of Victory, and a Man can afore view ſins and temptations (as that General did a goodly Army of the Enemies) and go aſide and laugh out to God in confidence of the Victory. Thus Chriſt when he was preſently to enter into the Field of Croſs and Wrath, and Devil: Now is the Son of Man glorified, John 13. 31. he ſaies it beforehand.

2. When Satan hath any way prevailed by tempting us, he hath an accuſing Power before God, Revel. 12. 10. There is great joy in Heaven when the Accuſer of the Brethren is caſt down, who accuſed them before our God Day and Night. I take the meaning to be this, That God profeſſing himſelf, though a Father to his Children, yet to judge without reſpect ſpect of Perſons here in this Life, intemporary judgments, his own Children as well as others, and to go by the ſame Rule therein: (Which you have in ſo many words emphatically, 1 Pet. 1.17. And if you call on the Father who without reſpect of Perſons judgeth according to every Mans work.) Hence therefore when they ſin, God hath given power to Satan freely to come and urge his own Temporal Threatnings, and his worſt; profeſſing withal, that unleſs they be wrought about to overcome his Accuſations by their Repentance Evangelical, he muſt and will proceed againſt them. And herein Satan pleads not before God as a meer Slanderer, God would never be moved with that; but as an Accuſer that urgeth what the Word of God ſaith againſt ſuch and ſuch ſins, and inordinate walkings. And Satan hath upon ſuch occaſions leave to come to Heaven (or elſewhere I diſpute not) and to appear with the Sons of God, the good Angels, as you ſee, Job 1. 6. Chriſts Ears are pierced with his Complaints Day and Night, ſo that Text ſpeaks: Yea, and if Satan had not Power with God to do a great deal of Miſchief this way, there had not been ſuch a rejoycing when Satan was overcome, as you read of, Rev. 12. And herein God deals by Rule between us and Satan: God will have Satan fairly laid on his back. He uſeth not meer prerogative. The good Angels are grieved at your Sins, (as they rejoyce when they ſee a Soul turned) but ſhake their heads and ſay nothing, we read not of their Accuſation: Yea, 2 Pet. 2.11. Whereas Angels which are greater in Power and Might, bring not railing Accuſations againſt them before the Lord, (he had ſpoken of the Levellers of that Age, who found fault with their Magiſtrates, and their Miſ-governments and Callings, promiſing Liberty, ver. 19. by Rebelling againſt them,) Saies Peter you do in this that which the good Angels do not do, they when they ſee Magiſtrates miſcarry, they though greater in power (both then thoſe Magiſtrates, and then you poor Earth Worms their Subjects, yet bring not an Accuſation, blaſpheming them, βλασφημίαν, which is Jude 9. interpreted by this, that when Michael ſtrove with Satan, it is ſaid he did not bring a railing Accuſation. The meaning is, he brought none, for he ſaid no more, but this, the Lord rebuke thee. He went not to God with the Story of his Crime, but left it to him ſilently, and as for them they quietly behold the Face of God to have Commiſſion from him to puniſh them if he think meet. So that this of Peter is ſpoken by way of diſtinction of good and evil Angels. Evil Angels go preſently and bring Accuſations againſt Men before the Lord, but the good do not complain, no, not of the Devils themſelves, when they oppoſe them. Chap. 17.

Now Chriſt invalidates all theſe Accuſations of the Devil by his own interceding, and pleas in the force and virtue of his own Blood, and therefore he is tearmed a Righteous Advocate, 1 John 2. 1. We have an Advocate with the Father, Jeſus Chriſt the Righteous. An Advocate is the perfect Oppoſite to the Devil his being an Accuſer. It is one that takes off Accuſations by contrary pleas before ſome Court, and his are Righteous pleas all. Of this tranſaction, you have a repreſentation in that Viſion, Zech. 3. 1. When Joſhua was to be brought anew into the Execution of the High Prieſts Office, the Devil ſtood at his right hand to reſiſt him, and what it was he ſpread before God againſt him you may underſtand by Chriſts Speech, ver. 4. Take away the filthy garments from him, Behold I have cauſed thine iniquities to paſs from thee. They were all his Sins. Is this Man (ſaid Satan to God) a fit Man to be a Prieſt over the Houſe of God that hath ſinned ſo and ſo? Inſtancing in particulars, and ſo he pleads againſt any of you; when to be ordained or called to the Miniſtry or any place of Eminency. Now Chriſt the Angel of the Lord, ver. 2. He on the other hand ſtands up for Joſhua, The Lord ſaid unto Satan, The Lord rebuke thee oh Satan, and obſerves his pleas.

1. He pleads Gods Election. The Lord that hath choſen Jeruſalem as his People, and place of his Worſhip, whereof Joſhua was by Inheritance the Leader and Inſtrument for whoſe ſake he was to be placed in that Office.

2. In

Book V.

2. Is not this a brand pluckt out of the Fire? ver. 2. Hath he not ſuffered ſufficiently for thoſe his ſins already? And wouldſt thou have him confounded. Such things as theſe Chriſt pleads, and take away his Sins, ſaies he, &c. Many ſuch tranſactions as theſe paſs for and againſt us in Heaven when we little think of it. But Chriſt's Glory is not only to overcome him as accuſing us in and by himſelf, but further cauſeth us to overcome him. I had once thought that Chriſt only deals with Satan in his accuſings of us, and alone confounds him, but that Scripture, Rev. 12. 10, 11. verſes compared, the Accuſer of our Brethren is caſt down (ſay the Angels) which accuſed them before our God day and Night, and they overcame him by the Blood of the Lamb, and by the Word of their Teſtimony, &c. This Scripture (I ſay) plainly ſhews, that not Chriſt only, but they overcame him, and that as an Accuſer. He urged their failings, and how? As in Jobs caſe, that if tryed and put to it, they would deny Chriſt, and blaſpheme him to his Face; now they overcome him.

Firſt, As to their Sins by the Blood of the Lamb they pleaded that, and confeſſed their Iniquities. If we confeſs our Sins, and plead Chriſts Blood, God is juſt to forgive us, and the Blood of Chriſt cleanſeth us from all Sin, 1 John 1. 7, 9.

Secondly, They overcame and ſilenc't him many of them in the other Accuſation by continuing conſtant in the teſtimony of the Truth, and by not loving their Lives unto Death, which in the end ſilenc't Satan, and moved God to aſſwage the Perſecutions of the Chriſtians, and turn them into a glorious Liberty.

Thus when a Believer hath fallen into Sin and the Snare of the Devil for it, as again and again Paul to Timothy expreſſeth it, 1 Tim. 3. 7. and 1 Tim. 5. 14. That the Devil hath occaſion to reproach him unto God and unto Men, (although as for his Reproaches of them to Men, it often falls out that his Commiſſion is to uſe his own Trade of lying, and he is reſtrained from what are indeed their Sins) however Chriſt upon this ſends down his Spirit (unknown to them) into their Souls, Rom. 8. 25, 26. and he intercedes as faſt in their hearts, urgeth ſuch and ſuch promiſes and pleas, as Chriſt in Heaven doth on their behalf. He breaks their Hearts, cauſeth them to confeſs their ſins, 1 Cor. 7. 1. to mourn after a Godly ſort, gives them Repentance, Carefulneſs for time to come, Revenge and hatred againſt them, and fear for falling again, and intermingled with Apologies drawn from their own frailty, Chriſt's Blood, Interceſſion, &c. And thus, (as there) they approve themſelves clear in that matter (namely wherein they had ſinned, and for which they repented) clear that is, before God, and according unto Gods Rules, and ſo (as was ſaid) though God judgeth without reſpect of Perſons, yet they having thus judged themſelves, they ſtand recti in Curia, according to the Equity of Gods Rules, not by extraordinary Power, but by Law which you find, 1 Cor. 11. 31. If we would judge our ſelves, we ſhould not be judged: And thus the Devil is baffled, and the Man reſtored.

Thirdly, Satan hath the Power of Ruling and Governing the Carnal Party of Men which the Scriptures tearm the World. He is therefore tearmed the Prince of this World, John 12. 31. And he that deceives the World, Rev. 12. 9. And the chieſeſt Trade and Deſign he drives, and Advantage he makes of this his Government over the World, is ſo to mould and make up the faſhions of this World, as by them to perſecute the Saints, Rev. 12. 17. For perſecute them immediately he cannot by himſelf alone, although thoſe other Powers, as to accuſe them to God, and to ſuggeſt and urge Temptation, he hath of himſelf ſingly and ſeparately aſſigned to him, yet to bring Perſecution on them, herein he muſt ſhroud himſelf under the Power of the World, and make uſe thereof; and work mediately thereby, yet ſo as ſuch proceedings againſt the Saints are more attributed unto him than unto the World. Inſomuch as that whole Roman Empire being acted by him to perſecute ſecute the Saints (ignorant of what themſelves did therein) are tearmed the Dragon and the Old Serpent, Rev. 12. As he that deceived the World, and was anima mundi, the Soul and Form of that World that then was, and ſo unto this day.

Now as the Saints then by their Prayers and Tears, and holding forth the Teſtimony of Jeſus overcame that World that then was, and thereby are ſaid to have overcome the Devil as Prince of that World, ſo they have done it in ſeveral Ages again and again ſince; in overcoming and working all thoſe new and great alterations in the World in relation to Religion that have been made, and the Devil hath ſtill been overcome and laid on his back by them. And therefore John 12. 31. When Chriſt ſaies, Now is the judgment of this world: He adds, Now ſhall the Prince of this world be caſt out. The Judgment or Reformation of the World (as John 16. 8. the word is uſed) is ſtill the caſting forth of the Devil who Rules and Informs it, as the Soul doth the Body. And ſo far as they overcome and make changes in the World, as it is oppoſite to Chriſt and unto them, ſo far do they overcome the Devil alſo.

Take but a view of the courſe and proceedings of matters ſince Chriſts time, downward to this Age, and you that know how the World hath gone, muſt alſo acknowledge that there have been a many new Worlds, and Faces of things, and as the Apoſtle tearms them, 1 Cor. 7. faſhions of this world which paſs away. The world hath been put into a great many new Dreſſes and Shapes, and under all Powers the Devil ſtill hath ſought to shroud himſelf, and carry on his mentioned Intereſt, which hath alwaies been to forme up the multitude of Men and their Spirits ſo, and to mould the Cuſtoms and Laws, and Power, that he may have wherewith to perſecute the Saints more or leſs, which is his Trade.

And he hath wiſely applyed himſelf ſtill to the Times and Spirits of Men to effect this, and ſharked to do it (as I may ſo ſpeak) as the Saints have driven him out of his worldly works, and hath made the beſt of it in his loſſes. For the Saints have unrooſted him, out of his former works often, and put him upon new ſeekings of his Fortune, and altering his play many a time.

For the making forth of which you may obſerve how Chriſt and his Apoſtles ſpeaking of the world which they did live in, with this indigitation or deſignation, This World. So Chriſt in that John 12. 31. And ſo the Apoſtles, and that not in oppoſition to the world to come (as Heb. 2. 5. the Apoſtle ſpeaks) but as in ſpecification of that preſent world which was then in Chriſts and the Apoſtles times, which Gal. 1, 4. Paul calls the preſent evil world. Even as Peter ſtyles the Truths that were paſſing then, the preſent truth, 2 Pet. 1. 12. Paul ſpeaking at once both of the State of the world that then was, and alſo of the Devils Rule in it (as it then ſtood) expreſſeth himſelf thus, The ſpirit that now works (ſaies he) in the children of diſobedience, Eph. 2. 2. There was a preſent world in Chriſts and the Apoſtles time, the Power, the Swinge, Cuſtoms and Laws of which then carried it againſt the Saints, and Satan was in it. There were the received Laws and Cuſtoms of the Jewiſh Religion which had a Toleration throughout the Roman Empire, when the Chriſtian had not, and alſo the Rites of the Old Heatheniſh Religion I need not tell you how prevalent, which the Apoſtle call'd the Rudiments, of the World, Col. 2. 8. and the traditions of Men, that is of that world that then was. Now the Saints they overcame that world that then was both Jewiſh and heatheniſh, not only in their ſingle Perſons ſwimming againſt the ſtream, and in not being entangled with the weeds at the bottom of that ſtream, that is the good or evil things thereof, 1 John 5. 4. For whatſoever is born of God overcometh the world: But they plainly overcame the whole. You all know the Alteration made in Conſtantines time Three Hundred years after Chriſt. You read of a great Shock and Battel, Rev. 12. 3. made by the great Red Dragon with Seven Heads and Ten Horns, (which as I may ſo ſpeak was the Arms of the Roman Heatheniſh Empire, as ſet out by the Holy Ghost) which cast, or Body of Government the Devil inspired, and so is call'd the Dragon, the Devil as fortified herein, hence therefore it is plainly said, that they, the Saints overcame him, ver. 11. And they overcame him, as there was no place found for him and his Angels in Heaven any more, ver. 8. There was not one Man left in some years that were seen to worship one of their Heathenish Gods. And in doing this (which is the Glory of it,) God came not down from Heaven with Thunder-bolts and Miracles to overcome, but kept to his ordinary Laws of Providence in Ruling the Hearts and Spirits of Men. He turns the Emperour Constantine unto the Christian Faith, and he turns about the world upside down, as they spake in the Acts; and now all the Power was for the Saints, which before was against them. Well the Devil was unrooſted, and his Palace or Castle (as Christ calls it,) his Fortifications or Works as then formed to annoy the Saints out thereof, were slighted, dismantled, and himself clean turned out, and turned Naked to shift to the wide World as we say. It is said immediately thereupon, Rev. 13. 1. And he stood upon the sand of the sea. You know it is read so by some who make those words the close of the former Chapter, and applyed to the Devil, who (as Mede saies) being deprived of the Roman Empire, and put out of Course, and play was put to his Trumps; and because he could not Rule and Sway things thereby any more, he stands Melancholly and Naked on the Sand of the Sea, waiting to see what new Form or Face of a New World would arise next out of the Sea. Now the Sea was the Multitudes of Nations and People then altered both to a new Form of Government, as also turned Christian; and thus chap. 17. 1, 15. the many Waters or the Sea the next Beast rose out of and sat upon is interpreted. Well the Devil upon that interim observing which way the Waves tumbled, unto which he is as the VVind or Breath, he soon spyed out a new Advantage, only seeing the VVorld was turned Christian, he applyed his Government of the VVorld unto the Spirits of Men, and he would be a Christian too, that is, carry on his Designs and Affairs under the profession of Christianity. And so that corrupt, ignorant VVorld that then was being brooded upon by this Spirit that breathed upon these VVaters, did in the end bring forth a new form of Government and Religion of Popery; the Power and Laws whereof through Satans Efficacy, the whole VVorld that then was, went again after, and made VVar against the Saints, and overcame them; as ver. 3, 7. And this our fore-Fathers have told us.

Holy

Book V.

See Medes Clav. Apoc.

VVell, but the Saints are born to overcome this Devil, and a Thousand of his VVorlds if you could suppose them. Let him put himself into, and shroud himself under what VVorldly Power soever. Let him draw his Lines of Fortification anew, and build them as high as Heaven, or as firm as the great Mountains, yet they shall conquer him. And how they have overcome him in that Power also, the 14, 15, 16, 17, 18. Chapters, and the Stories of that Reformation of Religion in all these Protestant Countreys tell you, and they are the Saints that have done, and by their Prayers shall do it, Rev. 17. 14. The Lamb shall overcome them, for as he is Lord of Lords, so they that are with him are called, and chosen, and faithful. And in doing this, he did not come down from Heaven with Flashes of Lightning or Egyptian Plagues, but kept to his ordinary Rules of proceeding, by which he hath governed the VVorld in all Ages, making changes in them, sometimes making use of Mens Lusts, as of Henry the Eighth: Otherwhere turning the hearts of Princes to embrace the Gospel, as in Germany and Sweden. Elsewhere inflaming the People unto popular Tumults, and an hatred of Idolatry, as in Scotland. Sometimes in giving up Princes to oppress them in their Civil Liberties as well as in their Consciences, and so to move them to cast off the Yoke as in Holland. Sometimes intwisting in one Interest Civil Rights, and the Interest of Religion as in France. All which however done, and done but by the Laws of Providence ruling Mens Spirits, have been done at the Prayers of the People of God.

VVell

Well, but when Proteſtantiſm was ſet up and the Reformed Religion, ſo as there was again a new dreſs or faſhion of the World, (as the Apoſtle ſpeaks of it, 1 Cor. 7. 31.) yet ſtill he made a ſhift ſo to form even the truth of that Religion up into a mixture of ſuch common Lawes and Conſtitutions that had the Supream Power and People ſo to back them, as he could ſtill, and hath ſtill uſed that preſent World to oppreſs multitudes of the Saints, and how the Power thereof hath been broken, and the Devil again put out of trade, and made a Reformado, as to the perſecuting part of his Power your ſelves have with your own eyes ſeen (if you have eyes) in this our Age; and it hath been the Prayers of the Saints have brought it about. He is half an Atheiſt that will not acknowledge it, and ſay, verily there is a God that judgeth in the earth. Chap. 18.

And in this interim the Devil is upon thoſe great alterations we have ſeen, in his dumps and muſings hovering over this Iſland, and waiting how to form up a Worldly party, and unite them in a common intereſt, ſuch as may ſerve to perſecute again, more than with the laſh of the Tongue, and this preſent World is as fit for it as ever any. And as it was then ſo it is now, thoſe that are after the Fleſh will perſecute them that are after the Spirit, Gal. 4. 29. and the Devil waits but how to draw his line anew, and to raiſe up a fortification to effect it; which whatever it will prove to be in Gods juſt permiſſion, yet in the mean time know that you have overcome the Devil, more than Men, or than that preſent conſtitution of the World forepaſt, and have routed the Devil in ſubduing the power of Men: In overcoming the preſent World you overcame the Devil much more, and this Paul knew and informs us, that we fight more againſt Principalities and Powers, than againſt Fleſh and Blood: And I ſay unto you, rejoyce not that Armies or Nations have been ſubjected to your Prayers, but that the Spirits, the Devils themſelves have been ſo; though above all rejoyce that your Names are written in Heaven.

CHAP. XVIII.

The laſt and compleat Victory which Chriſt and his Saints have over the Devil, both before, and at the Day of Judgment.

THE Third ſort of Chriſts proceedings againſt this common enemy are more open and judicial: For when he hath let him try his skill and power every way (as hath been ſhewed) to annoy us, and that in all ſorts of attempts (as againſt us made) Chriſt hath for thouſands of years ſtill baffled and confounded him by us; which becauſe it is but inviſibly done he is not aſhamed at it, but would perſiſt to eternity in this way, (if the World ſhould laſt ſo long) therefore Chriſt hath reſolved to deal with him more openly and viſibly: And ſo it became him that when he had enabled us to overcome him in a regular way, then to fall upon him in an hoſtile and judiciary way. And this hath two degrees.

I. When the World, the Time and Seat of his Rule ſhall grow towards a concluſion, then a ſtrickt reſtraint ſhall be clapt on him.
II. There will be a bringing him to open Judgment.

Book V.

I. A ſtrickt reſtraint ſhall be clapt on him towards the end : It is time; he had Chains clapt on him from his very fall, 2 Pet. 2. 4. and yet he hath been hitherto as a priſoner at large, that hath had liberty to walk up and down with his Chains, to take the Air, as he is the prince of the power of the air, ſayes the Apoſtle, Eph. 2. 2. Well but when the World draws to an end, he ſhall be bound up in Chains, ſo as (at leaſt) his ruling power over this World (which hath been the faireſt flower in his Crown) ſhall be taken from him, whilſt he yet ſees (to vex him) the World of Men on Earth continue to go on in its ſucceſſion before his face. How far his tempting power will be taken away I will not argue, but that he will towards the end be univerſally reſtrained of his ruling the Nations (as he had wont) to perſecute the Saints, I think there is ground for it ; Rev. 20. 1, 2, 3. And I ſaw an Angel come down from Heaven, having the key of the bottomleſs pit and a great chain in his hand, and he laid hold on the Dragon, that old Serpent, which is the Devil and Satan, and bound him a thouſand years ; and caſt him into the bottomleſs pit, and ſhut him up, and ſet a ſeal upon him, that he ſhould deceive the nations no more, till the thouſand years ſhould be fulfilled. You might without much heſitation to your thoughts think, when this is to be done, if we had no more it is enough ſignified in Rev. 20. that the time is the laſt hour or two before the dawning of the great day, and ſhutting up of the darkneſs of this World. And what is this Revelation, but a Propheſie of the fates of the Church and World? Rev. 1. 1. and chap. 4. 1. The World therefore now that is a drawing on to its laſt ſcene, is not yet ſo to end but there ſhall be a little time for the Devil to play his pranks a little while, ver. 3. but more particularly, whereas it hath been ſhewn how in his ruling power the Devil, the Old Serpent, was beaten out of his holes ; and we have ſeen how this Mountebank (who deceives the whole World) in his ſeveral ſtages he hath ſet up in the World, hath ſtill been beaten down, and been forced to build new. Firſt he had Judaiſm, then Heatheniſm, in the room of which he hath ſet up Popery, Rev. 12. 13. We have ſeen how when all the World turned Chriſtian, an Antichriſtian beaſt roſe up, and all the World went wandering after him, for ver. 4. the Dragon gave him his Power, and his Seal and great Authority, and they worſhiped the Dragon that gave power to the Beaſt, and you read of this new Beaſts rule until the 19th Chapter, ver. 19. 20. And I ſaw the beaſt and the kings of the earth, and their armies, gathered together to make war againſt him that ſat on the horſe, and againſt his army, and the beaſt was taken, and with him the falſe prophet that wrought miracles before him, with which he deceived them that had received the mark of the beaſt, and them that worſhipped his image, theſe both were caſt alive into the lake of fire burning with brimſtone. Now when Chriſt and his Army (which are the Saints) have clean defeated and made an end of this laſt Beaſt, and his Power, ſo as that they have had a fair and open victory in the view of Men over the Devil, and all this World, and this the laſt tryal of skill aſſigned him, for Chriſt reſolves to lay all the powers of the World, oppoſing his Kingdom fairly, and in an Humane way of Conqueſt, on their backs, (according unto that chap. 13. He that killeth with the ſword ſhall be killed with the ſword) ſo as the Devil that had acted all theſe is now left a naked Devil, beaten out of all his fortreſſes, what then immediately follows? Rev. 20. 1, 2, 3. And I ſaw an Angel come down from Heaven, having the key of the bottomleſs pit, &c. Now ſayes Chriſt, your ſelf the great actor in all theſe tragedies, your time is come, your turn is next at laſt, that he who led into captivity ſhould be led into captivity, that your ſelf muſt be bound otherwiſe than you have been, and bound from what? Why from deceiving the Nations; ver. 3. That he ſhould deceive the nations no more, either by tempting or ruling them any more. And he never deceived the Nations more than in the time of Popery, therefore this his binding muſt be after all. And then to make ſure of him, caſts him into the bottomleſs pit, ſhuts him up with a Seal upon him, here is the Devil faſt, and ſo it is as a reſtraint before his laſt fatal Tryal and Judgment.

The 15, 16. Chap. are the Degrees of his comming. The 17. the Explication who and what he ſhould be. The 18. the funeral Song of the great City that is torn up by him ; and Chap. 19. the fatal overthrow.

I will

I will not proſecute this further, you know where elſe to find it argued, to convince you that there is to be a Kingdom of Chriſt, and of the Saints, for a thouſand years, read the following Verſes. During which time it is meet, yea neceſſary, the Devil be in hold, as you ſee he is. Chap. 18.

II. The laſt ſcene, or final proceedings of Chriſt againſt him, is his bringing him and his Angels into perſonal and open Judgment before God, Angels and Men. And herein to make this victory and deſtruction full and compleat, you that are the Saints thus oppoſed by him, ſhall be his Judges. And there cannot be ſuppoſed a fuller victory than this, that after you have overcome him, all ſorts of wayes related, and God hath trodden him under your feet, that then at laſt you ſhould ſit, and be his lawful Judges of all his wickedneſſes, enmities and temptations, acted againſt your ſelves. Now look as Chriſt triumpht over him openly, viſibly, Coll. 2. 15. before Angels and the Spirits of juſt Men made perfect, ſo ſhall you then with Chriſt more viſibly and openly, even before the World. This you have 1 Cor. 6. 2, 3. Do you not know that the Saints ſhall judge the world; know you not that we ſhall judge Angels. This judging of Satan I ſhall explain and prove by theſe ſteps.

1. That the Devil as well as Men ſhall be brought to open Judgment; this is plain both by Jude 6. and 2 Pet. 2. 4. The Angels that kept not their firſt eſtate, he caſt down to hell (ſo Peter) and reſerved them in everlaſting chains under darkneſs to the judgment of the great day, (ſo Jude) or delivered them into chains of darkneſs to be reſerved unto judgment, (ſo Peter). I underſtand the tranſaction of it to have been thus.

(1.) That upon the Angels firſt ſinning, there was a preſent throwing them into Hell, namely that place and ſtate they ſhall for ever be in after the great day, as a taſte of what in a greater fulneſs they after Judgment ſhould be condemned unto; yet ſo as,

(2.) They were preſently let out again into the Air, by reaſon of which they have liberty and freedom of Spirit, and they rule this World, which if in full torments they could not do, Luke 8. 31. they as dreading that place of Hell, beſought him he would not command them into the deep, that is, their former Hell.

(3.) Yet in the mean time whilſt they are at liberty, they are as Priſoners in Chains, ſuffered to walk up and down, and thereby marked out as reſerved to an Aſſize or Judgment of the great day. And under this alluſion, their condition ſeems to me to be different from that of Men, wicked Men, with whom God is yet in treaty, for they go under bail of Chriſts death, that hath purchaſed this forbearance for them, as ſpace to repent. Theſe (I ſay) were never yet actually caſt into Hell (as the Devils upon their firſt Sin were) ſo as theſe are not actually Priſoners as thoſe are that are entred into Priſon, and belong to it, although they have permiſſion to go abroad. And to ſhew they are ſo, they carry Chains of that Priſon about them (which what they are I ſtand not now to determine) which Chains are badges that they are reſerved unto a more open viſible Judgment of the great day. The concluſion of all is this; look as Hell it ſelf is ſaid to have been prepared for the Devil and his Angels, originally for them, ſo they ſinning firſt go into Hell-fire, prepared &c. and ſo the Judgment of the great day was appointed for them firſt. They in both are the menſura and pattern of wicked Men, and therefore both Jude and Peter mention their Judgment firſt in the head and van; and then of wicked Men, the old World, and Sodom, &c.

2. We are Secondly to take notice that during this vacation or time of liberty to them, the account and ſcore of their ſinning runs on, and is dayly added unto, ſo as they heap up thereby matter of Judgment, which ſhall be brought forth, and charged upon them at that great day. Herein is one difference between the caſe and condition of the Spirits of wicked Men de-ceaſed, and of theſe Devils : The Spirits of ſuch Men are ſaid to be in a ſtrickt ſence (in priſon) 1 Pet. 3. 19. and ſo the Spirits of thoſe in Sodom are ſaid by Jude to have been made an example, ſuffering the vengeance of hell-fire; ſo as Mens Souls ſhall anſwer but for the Sins they have done in the body; 2 Cor. 5. 10. Cain ſhall anſwer for no more Sins than what his Soul did in his Body ; his ſcore of ſinning runs not on ſince he was in Hell ; he is not only, truly and actually a Priſoner, but detained in Priſon, and ſuffers a fulneſs of wrath, as there a Mans Soul is ſure to do, and that takes away the demerit of ſinning ; but with the Devils that go abroad as Priſoners in Chains, and as belonging only to that Priſon, it is otherwiſe. What Sins they commit perſonally, or in tempting us, ſhall then be accounted for, which is proved.

(1.) Becauſe the Devil is curſed for having tempted both Eve and Adam; thus it is pronounced, Curſed ſhalt thou be above all the herd or cattel of the field. Gen. 3. 24. So that not his own firſt Sin in falling from Heaven ſhall be reckoned to him only, but alſo all his tempting of us.

(2.) And again he in after times ſhould bruiſe the Heel of Chriſt (which was four thouſand years after) and of the whole Seed of Chriſt, therefore his Head is to be broken ; namely, in vengeance for his bruiſing Chriſts Heel there is a total breaking of his Head. Now if he be curſed for thoſe, and his Head to be broken for thoſe, then he is to be judged and caſt into Hell for thoſe, as reckoned Sins done by him, which are matter of Judgment : For in that he ſayes, Curſed ſhalt thou be above all cattle, &c. He deſigns his puniſhment in Hell, and his meaning is, thy puniſhment ſhall be greater than of all wicked Men, the cattle of the field. And our Saviours words of them are, Go ye curſed into hell-fire, prepared for the devils : He is curſed therefore with Hell-fire for this Sin, and that as the pattern of Sinners, and all other that are curſed and puniſhed in like manner.

(3.) It is expreſly ſaid 1 John 3. 18. that he ſinneth from the beginning, as continuing ſo to do, and what he doth being reckoned and imputed to him, it is not only that he ſinned at the beginning, but he ſinned continuedly from the beginning ; and this ſuits his ſcope, which was to ſhew, that that Man that continued in a courſe of ſinning was of the Devil ; that a worker of iniquity was of the Devil as his Father ; for lo ! ſayes he, in like manner the Devil thus ſins in a perpetual conſtancy.

3. You the Saints are to be his Judges ; ſo 1 Cor. 6. 2, 3. Chriſt had firſt declared this to be the priviledge of the twelve Apoſtles to ſit, and to judge the twelve Tribes of Iſrael ; this Paul enlargeth to all the Saints ; ver. 2, 4. Know you not the Saints ſhall judge the World, all the World, yea the Angels. And he ſpeaks of judging in a time and proper ſenſe, then when the whole World is to be judged at the Judgment-ſeat of Chriſt ; as when Cauſes are heard and judged in Courts, and Perſons are condemned or acquitted, according to the nature of the fact. For he brings it as an Argument why they ſhould not carry or transfer the Civil Controverſies amongſt them, about matters of this Life, to Earthly Judicatures, but rather to end and decide them among themſelves : Ver. 1. Dare any of you, having a matter againſt another, go to law before the unjuſt, and not before the Saints. And in the Chapter afore he had ſhewn how God had given power to them as a Church to judge them that were within, and ſo to caſt out that wicked perſon : His Argument to this had not been proper, if he had not intended the like time and proper way of Judicature, at that great Judgment to be committed to them ; where though Chriſt ſhall be the great Judge, yet they ſhall ſit judging (as Chriſt ſayes) as Coaſſeſſours, diſcerning the guilt, and carrying in the ſentence, Luke 22. 30. Matth. 19. 28. and ἐν ὑμῖν is by you, ver. 2. the World ſhall be judged by you ; ver. 4. His inference is from hence, ſet them, καθίζετε, put them to the Chair, that are leaſt eſteemed in the Church, for at the latter day they ſhall ſit and judge : And that he ſpeaks it of all Saints is plain ; for (he ſaith) we ſhall judge the Angels, and know you not that the Saints

Saints ſhall judge the world; and not the greater Saints only, but ſmall and great; for he infers from it, ſet them to judge who are leaſt eſteemed in the church, having before founded it on this, that if the world ſhall be judged by you, are you not worthy to judge the ſmalleſt matters? And to heighten their Dignity herein, he firſt ſayes, they ſhall judge the world; namely of Men, and then I tell you more, yea the Angels. As Chriſts Glory is, that God made two Worlds for him, viſible and inviſible; Heb. 1. Coll. 1. ſo our Glory is, that we are conſtituted Commiſſioners to judge two Worlds, viſible and inviſible, ſuch two large circuits we have: Thus much for the explanation and proof of it. Chap. 18.

Now then my Brethren, let us lift up our Hearts and raiſe up our Thoughts in the expectation of this great day, as ſtill the New Teſtament ſtileth it: It is termed great in reſpect of thoſe great things which ſhall be done in it. A great and glorious day it will be, not only in reſpect of the ſplendour of the concourſe of all of Mankind unto one aſſembly, all that have been from Adam, all Angels and Saints will be there, 1 Theſſ. 3. 13. but alſo it is great in reſpect of the things and matters to be judged. All the Humane affairs of this World, which the Apoſtle calls, things of this Life, ver. 4. which the great ones of the World are the judges of, he reckons among the ſmalleſt matters, ſo he terms them, ver. 2. in compariſon of the things that then ſhould be tranſacted in a way of Judicature, which will be the exact ſcanning and tryal of all actions as they pertain to Eternity, that is, the Spiritual good or evil that is in them, and as they tended to the honour or diſhonour of the great God. Theſe are the proper ſubjects that belong to the cognizance of that day: And now to have all the affairs of the whole World, of Men, of all their Thoughts, Plots, Counſels, Actions, and that under the conſideration, as good or evil, to have them all under this cognizance, laid open and committed to the cenſure of the Saints with authority; what an infinite Dignity muſt this be to them? Yet ſo he heightens it, if the world ſhall be judged by you, are you unworthy to judge the ſmalleſt matters; ver. 2. by which he means all thoſe things that are brought before Humane Courts of what kinds ſoever, and then thereupon he riſes higher, ver. 3. Know you not that we ſhall judge Angels; as thoſe whoſe Story and Tranſactions afford higher and greater matters by far than the Story of this whole World will do?

Now then how and in what manner the World of Mankind ſhall be judged, in the ſame kind and manner ſhall the Angels alſo be, for he caſts the ſame line over both. Now how ſhall the World of Men be judged? Why every work, whether it be good or evil, ſhall have an exact tryal; Eccleſ. 12. 14. For God ſhall bring every work into judgment, with every ſecret thing, whether it be good or evil. And 1 Cor. 4. 5. Judge nothing before the time, the Lord will come, who both will bring to light the hidden things of darkneſs, and will make manifeſt the counſels of the hearts; importing that at that time all will ſo be diſcovered by the Lord, who is ready to judge the quick and the dead, as every Saint ſhall be able to judge too.

Now then think with your ſelves, if you knew but all the affairs of this preſent Age, all the ſecrets of States, State-ends, Maximes, Rules, Principles, Luſts of all the Monarchs, of all the Nobles in the World, to have (as he told the Aſſyrian King) all that is ſaid in the Kings Chamber revealed, yea that are in his Thoughts, which are unſearchable, by which they rule and reign; and you had all the Story of this Age paſt and preſent, nakedly ſpread before you, what infinite delight would this afford you? To have a Princes Cabinet, a few letters or tranſactions publiſht, how greedy are Men of them? Now know (ſayes the Apoſtle) you ſhall have a greater Story one day, and of infinitely higher worth and elevation, you ſhall judge the Angels: 2 Pet. 2. 10, 11. The Apoſtle comparing Earthly Magiſtrates and Dignities, (and in his time they were the greateſt that ever were, namely thoſe in the Roman Empire) he ſayes of the Angels, that they are greater in power and might, and as the good ſo the bad, for they contend each with other

other upon all occaſions, as appears by the Story of Daniel, Chap. 10. and Chap. 11. and by that paſſage between the Devil and Michael, in Jude. The Devils Monarchy is the greateſt that ever was. The Apoſtles and Chriſt that had a proſpect into that inviſible World, term him the Prince of the World, greater than Cæſar, than the Great Turk or Mogul, &c. they are but as petty Conſtables, as one comparing the power and ſtate of our European Princes with thoſe Eaſtern Monarchs, ſpeaks. The Angels they are the rulers of the World; Eph. 6. 12. So as we fight not againſt fleſh and blood, (in compariſon of them our contentions againſt the World are not conſidered) but againſt principalities and powers. Men are but as the puppets above the ſtage, when theſe act all. And again, the tranſactions between God and Satan are many, as the Story of Ahab and Job ſhews, and alſo thoſe between the good and bad Angels are great and various. Now then as theſe Grandees of this inviſible World excel in power and wiſdom all the petty Rulers of this World; ſo the paſſages and tranſactions amongſt them and by them, their policies, enmities, animoſities, &c. muſt needs excel all other. Satan is renowned for his ſtratagems, his wiles: He outwitted Eve, and ſoon deceived her, yea and the whole World too; Rev. 12. 9. We are not ignorant of his devices, ſayes Paul, 2 Cor. 2. 11. And further, his wickedneſſes are Spiritual, ſublimated wickedneſſes: The worſt of Earthly Tyrants and Monarchies are but carnal wickedneſſes unto them, and all theſe ſhall be laid open, and ſentenced to a ſuitable puniſhment. All the ſecret counſels of his Heart, his over-reaching and going beyond poor Souls, the utmoſt and extremity of that malice and envy he acted all with, ſhall be detected, and thou a poor Believer ſhalt be a judge of all theſe. Then ſhalt thou ſee Beelzebub the great Devil, and all Hell with him (that is his Angels) brought forth in Chains, and Chriſt opening all their Sins, even here in this World, where they did all the miſchief. What a glorious and triumphant ſight (think you) will it be to the Primitive Chriſtians to ſee Nero or Julian ſtand forth, led and haled before the Judgment-ſeat of Chriſt? How much more to ſee this Dragon and his Angels, that inſpired all theſe in all their rage and malice, and to have all the Stories of their actings ript up for ſix thouſand years continuance. In Iſa. 14. 10, 11, 12, 13. when the King of Babel was brought down to the Grave, 'tis ſaid all Hell went forth, all Kings and Nations he had tyrannized over, went out to meet him, ſo great a ſpectacle it was. How art thou fallen, Oh Lucifer, ſon of the morning: And even that is an alluſion (as the Antients have conceived) of Satans fall and ruine.

Particularly for thy comfort, oh thou toſſed, and bruiſed, and weather-beaten Soul, how will it rejoyce thee, if it were but to hear Chriſt, as on thy behalf, openly to rebuke Satan, and to ſay thus to him, Didſt thou Satan ſpight, malign, vex and provoke unto Sin this poor Saint, thoſe thoughts didſt thou dart in, this train didſt thou lay for him, as the fowler doth for a ſilly bird, and no ſooner hadſt thou drawn him into thy net to commit the Sin, but thou didſt run to God, and accuſe him of that which thou ſeducedſt him to do, whilſt he poor Soul went weeping bitterly, as Peter when he had done evil; and now will Chriſt ſay, I will ſave him, and damn thee, and that for all the Sins which he committed through thy inſtigation, of all which thou art the Father more than he. And then how comfortable will it be to hear Chriſt excuſe thee alſo, that the Spirit was willing, but the Fleſh was weak; and then to lay the load on him, and adjudge him to ſo much the greater torment becauſe of what he did to thee, this will be much and great joy. But further will Chriſt ſay, Come thou, even thou weak Soul, up hither, ſit down here by me, thou ſhalt be his Judge, thou ſhalt ſit on my Throne with me, yea more, as I triumph over him ſo do thou now, and not as over one vanquiſht only to thy hand, but as over one inſtantly to be condemned and adjudged to Hell; and thou ſhall ſee it inrolled before thy face ere thou ſtirreſt off this bench, and when thy Sentence hath concurr'd with mine, I have in readineſs here about me to revenge all their their diſobedience, the good Angels, armed with another manner of Power than ever before, who ſhall throw them down to Hell, and take and burn them with Fire and Brimſtone. What can be ſuppoſed a perfect victory, and triumph of Chriſt and his Saints, over the Devils, if this is not? Chap. 19.

CHAP. XIX.

Chriſts Fullneſs for our Juſtification. His fulfilling the Law for us. That Juſtification doth not conſiſt only in Pardon of Sin, and therefore it is not Chriſts Paſſive Obedience alone which is imputed to us. That the whole Righteouſneſs which is in Chriſt is imputed to us for Righteouſneſs.

HAVING largely proved and explained how Chriſt performed that part of our Redemption, which conſiſts in freeing us from the Guilt, and Curſe, and Puniſhment of Sin, which he did by himſelf being made Sin, and a Curſe for us; what remains is to prove that he fulfilled the Law, and performed all Righteouſneſs for our Juſtification; and that he is the Lord our Righteouſneſs, as well as our Sacrifice and Ranſom. I firſt lay down this General Propoſition.

Prop. That the whole Righteouſneſs which is in Chriſt is imputed to us for Righteouſneſs.

The terms or words of the Propoſition ſhould be explained by ſome diſtinctions to avoid all ambiguities, and to prevent miſtakes; but inſtead of multiplying diſtinctions, which often confounds inſtead of clearing the truth, I ſhall premiſe two or three things to ſhew in what limited ſenſe the Propoſition is meant, and to be underſtood

1. When I ſay [the whole Righteouſneſs which is in Chriſt] I do not underſtand that Eſſential Holineſs of the Divine Nature, which is in Chriſt, who is God; for I perfectly reject and abhor the dream of Oſiander: I mean then that acquired Righteouſneſs of Chriſt God-Man, for though Jehovah is called our Righteouſneſs, Jer. 23. 6. yet that Righteouſneſs which is of God, is not ours.

2. We muſt alſo cautiouſly diſcern between the Righteouſneſs of the Mediatorial Office (from which Chriſt is deſervedly called the alone Mediator) and the Merits of the Righteouſneſs of Chriſt the Mediator. For as God will not give his Glory to another, nor indeed can give it, (and therefore I deny the Eſſential Righteouſneſs, by which he is God, to be communicated) ſo neither will Chriſt give away the Glory of his Mediation. That Righteouſneſs of the Office, by which he is Mediator, cannot be imputed. But as in Logick we ſay that the whole Nature of the Genus is communicated to the Species, but not yet Generical Natures by which it is a Genus, for then the Species would be a Genus too: In like manner I aſſert the whole Righteouſneſs of Chriſt the Mediator to be communicated, but not the Mediatorial Righteouſneſs.

3. We

Book V.

3. We muſt alſo make ſome diſtinction concerning this Righteouſneſs of Chriſt, which I aſſert to be imputed to us: For I do not include in it the Righteouſneſs of Chriſt the Mediator, as now Glorified in Heaven, which Righteouſneſs yet is continued; but the alone Righteouſneſs of Chriſt performed by him in his eſtate of Humiliation on Earth is to be underſtood: For though he is ſaid to be raiſed for our Juſtification, Rom. 4. 25. viz. that his Righteouſneſs and the Merit of it might be applyed to us, yet he cryed out on the Croſs, it is finiſhed, John 19. 30. and after his death he ceaſed to merit any thing, as he will alſo ceaſe to make application of his Merits to us after the day of Judgment, when God ſhall be all in all: And when he is ſaid to be a Prieſt for ever, Heb. 7. 17. it is to be underſtood that he is ſo in his Interceſſion, not in meriting for us: As alſo when his Righteouſneſs is called everlaſting Righteouſneſs, Dan. 9. 24. it is meant of the duration of its value and vertue, not of the continuance of its external Acts.

4. Nor do we take in all which he did while he lived here on Earth. All his extraordinary Works as Miracles, and the like are not to be included. They rather tranſcend the predicaments of the Ten Commandments, than are parts of the Righteouſneſs of the Law. They were proofs of his Divinity, and the ſigns and badges, rather than the duties of his Office. He indeed by them ſhewed himſelf to be the only Mediator, but he did not act the Mediator in them. And he did them, that Men might believe in his Righteouſneſs, but they were no ingredients of that Righteouſneſs on which they were to believe.

Now to give the right ſtate of the Controverſie; Proteſtant Divines aſſerted againſt the Papiſts, That all our Righteouſneſs by which we are juſtified, is the imputed Righteouſneſs of Chriſt; but what is in queſtion among Divines of the Reformed Religion, is, whether the whole Righteouſneſs of Chriſt be imputed.

There is a twofold Obedience viſible in Chriſt in his humbled State; one which conſiſts in the conformity of his Life to the Law, the other in undergoing Death, and the Curſe of the Law, of which the firſt is called in the Schools, Active, and the other Paſſive Obedience. To which may, and ought to be added, the Holineſs of his Nature, which is the principle of both the former Obediences.

There are ſome who not only exclude that Sanctity of his Nature, but all the Active Righteouſneſs of his Life, from that Righteouſneſs which is imputed to us. They ſay indeed that both the Holineſs of Chriſts Nature, and the Obedience of his Life are of great advantage to us, and that they concur to the obtaining of our Juſtification, as conditions qualifying the Mediator for that work, and as requiſite to be in the Perſon who is our High-Prieſt. Heb. 7. 26. For ſuch an high prieſt became us, who is holy, harmleſs, undefiled, ſeparate from ſinners, and made higher than the heavens. But yet they deny all this to be together with his Paſſive Obedience imputed to us in the room of our Righteouſneſs: For they affirm that it all was acted by Chriſt for his own ſake, and on his own perſonal account, for Chriſt was bound to it as a Creature, and Son of Adam, born under the Moral Law, and as a Son of Abraham under the Ceremonial Law. And one debt (ſay they) can never be diſcharged by another. But they believe his Paſſive Obedience to be only imputed, both becauſe Chriſt did undertake and perform it, not for himſelf, but purely for our ſakes, and alſo becauſe they eſteem it an adequate and ſufficient matter of our Juſtification.

But we lay down this contrary aſſertion, That both the Holineſs of Chriſts Nature, and all that work of Humiliation (which the Apoſtle includes in the name of Obedience unto death) was both undertaken and accompliſhed for our ſakes, and that it gives its joint mark with his Paſſive Obedience to our Juſtification; in a word, That all this Righteouſneſs of Chriſt whatever, is imputed to us as a proportionate conformity to that Righteouſneſs which the Law requires from us.

Which

Which aſſertion I ſhall both explain and demonſtrate by a few Concluſions (of which the Propoſition which I have laid down is the ſum) mutually link'd together, and which being rightly applyed, will preclude the chiefeſt Objections of the contrary ſide. Chap. 19.

There are two Principles in which both Parties agree, and which therefore remain not now to be prov'd.

The Firſt of which is, That that Righteouſneſs by which a Sinner may appear Righteous ought to conſiſt in a perfect ſatisfaction of the Law: For though it cannot be called the Righteouſneſs of the Law, that is (as the Apoſtle hath interpreted it, Phil. 3. 8.) the proper performance of the Sinner, who as being under the Law owes all Obedience to it; yet as this Righteouſneſs is in the Perſon who is our Surety, and made under the Law for us, it ſtands good in Law, as fully ſatisfactory; for God gives a declaration of his Juſtice in the juſtification of the Sinner, Rom. 3. 24. but Juſtice is not ſatisfied unleſs the Law be ſo too: Whence the Apoſtle concludes in the laſt Verſe of that Chapter, We eſtabliſh the Law. And indeed ſince the Righteouſneſs of the Law is ſaid to be fulfilled in us, Rom. 8. 4. though performed only by our Sponſor, it ſhews that by the Goſpel there is not made any exchange of the Righteouſneſs, but only of the Perſons.

The Second Principle that is mutually agreed on is this, That this ſatisfaction of the Law is the proper Righteouſneſs of Chriſt, and that it is ours only as imputed, ſince he is our Sponſor and Surety, Heb. 7. 22. and made under the Law for us. Gal. 4. 4.

Theſe two Principles, as granted by both, being thus laid down, I ſhall build upon them ſome Concluſions ſubordinate to one another. The Firſt of which will enquire and reſolve, what and how much is that Righteouſneſs in the abſtract notion of it which the Law requires from the Sinner, and how many parts there are of our Juſtification, whereby alſo will be evinc'd wherein a full conformity unto the Law doth conſiſt. The Second Concluſion will ſearch out what, and how much Righteouſneſs and conformity to the Law may, and ought to be found in Chriſt our Sponſor, and to be imputed to us; where it will be demonſtrated, that this muſt be no other than the whole Righteouſneſs of the Law. And both Propoſitions compared together will demonſtrate the cauſe why it muſt be ſo.

1. Concluſ. In the Covenant of Works or the Law, there are two things on our part that occur diſtinctly to be conſidered. 1. The fulfilling of the Precept, which Precept is twofold, Affirmative, Thou ſhalt do this, to which alone the promiſe of Life is by God graciouſly annexed. The other is Negative, Thou ſhalt not do ſo and ſo, leaſt thou tranſgreſs. 2. There is the payment of the penalty if the Man tranſgreſſed, Thou ſhalt ſurely dye.

There is a great and obſervable, and to our purpoſe a material difference between the Precepts, with the annexed Promiſe and the denounced Puniſhment. And the difference is this, that thoſe Precepts are abſolute parts of the Law, which by the right of Creation ſimply and eternally oblige: But the impoſition of the Puniſhment is only added as a conditional appendix, nor are we ſubject to it any otherwiſe, then on certain conditions. To which this other thing may be added for the farther confirmation of it, that the mind of the Law-giver, which is indeed the Law, primarily, abſolutely, and per ſe requires Obedience by the Precepts, but it threatens and exacts Puniſhment as it were ſecondarily, and per accidens.

2. Concluſ. From this follows the ſecond Concluſion, That though in the Primitive ſtate of Innocence we were only obliged to an Obedience purely of the Preceptive part of the Law, yet being fallen into Sin we now are ſubjected abſolutely to the Precept and Puniſhment together, and unable to diſcharge them.

The Reaſon of it is drawn from the former Concluſion which I laid down, becauſe ſince the penal payment is only conditional, and not ſo much required in the Law, as in the appendix of it, it will not, though satisfied, invalidate that absolute and eternal obligation of the Law it self. We are held bound by a double debt, and by a double right. As Creatures we are obliged by the Law of Creation to Obedience, and that not only for the time past, but the future; and withal, as offenders we are obliged by the right of the Judge to undergo the Punishment Hence it is also evident, that the meer suffering of the Punishment is not sufficient to the satisfaction of the Law, because it doth not adequately answer that primary, and absolute design of the Legislator, who would rather have Obedience than the Death of the Sinner. As thrusting the Debtor into Prison doth not vacate the debt, so neither doth the throwing of a Sinner into Hell satisfie what he owes. For one debt can never be discharged by the payment of another. Nor was there ever any Law, even among Men, either promising or declaring a reward due to the Criminal, because he had undergone the Punishment of his Crimes. Now then the obligation of thy Surety, O Sinner, who undertook for all these thy debts, will not be less than thine. His Passive Obedience will not suffice unless joined with his Active, nor his Active do the work, if not followed with his Death, whether that Obedience for the future is to be performed, or was now at present owing? The Active Obedience alone would suffice if thou hadst not sinned, but then thou wouldst not have needed this Surety; but now the Righteousness required by the Law is to be considered as lost by thee for the time past, and now therefore it will not be enough to render the principal debt, when thou hast contracted a new obligation to Punishment, for thou wast unable to pay at thy appointed time. But be it so, that the Death of thy Sponsor, O Sinner, shall be able to discharge all the past Debt, and to cancel thy Bond, yet since the Law is an eternal Covenant, and thou art an immortal Soul, it will for the future require a new Obedience from thee, and that to all eternity. But that penal payment of thy Sponsor for thee, avails to no more than to restore thee to the same state in which Adam stood at the first moment of his Creation; and though he had delivered thee eternally from all thy fore-acted Sins, and past omissions which are in number finite, yet he doth not supply to thee to be imputed that Active Righteousness which the Law exacts from thee for the future. Hence the Angel in Dan. 9. 24. foretold concerning the Messiah, that when he had made an end of sins, and had expiated iniquities, he should also bring in everlasting righteousness; which being put upon thee, and thou being cloathed with the Sun of Righteousness, thou mayst in Heaven be accounted Righteous before God: For the Grace of which thou art partaker, and which inhereth in glorified Souls, though it be most perfect, can never attain to the Righteousness and justification of the Law, since to that, that old Covenant must be antiquated and rendred invalid.

But as the Death of thy Surety will not restore thee to a state of Righteousness, so neither would it ever bring thee to Life: For the promise of Life is made only to the doers, Do this and thou shalt live. And therefore justification of Life, as the Apostle calls it, Rom. 5. 18. is attributed to the abounding of the gift of Righteousness. And hence another Corollary flows which shall be the Third Conclusion.

3. Conclus. All that is required to the Justification of a Sinner, which heretofore was requisite to the Justification of Adam, and of the Blessed Angels. Nay, something more is required to our Justification, because we are held bound by a double Debt. For as it is certain, that more is required to the sanctification of a Sinner, since it is described not only by a meer simple creation out of nothing, but by the Mortification of the Old Man, and the abolition of the Body of Sin, to which it is necessary the New Creature be added, so the like Account is to be stated in the Justification of a Sinner (of which Sanctification is an Image) the whole of it is not accomplished in the taking away of Sins, as the Angel speaks, unless besides this an Active Conformity to the Law be added. Also to Reconciliation (which is the Effect of Justification, and bears the likeness of its cause) all that is required which is requiſite to procure a new, and ſimple Friendſhip, and ſomething more; ſince it is the receiving of an old Enemy into favour. Peace and Pardon is firſt to be acquired, nor this alone, but alſo the Old Favour is to be obtain'd. This is apparent from the Example of Abſolom, who was not ſatisfied with Peace and Pardon obtained, 2 Sam. 13. unleſs he ſaw the Face of his Father and experienced his former favour. The ſame is alſo evident by the Joint Teſtimony of the Angels enumerating Peace on Earth, and good Will towards Men as diſtinct parts of Reconciliation, Luke 2. 14. To whom alſo the Apoſtle doth Accord, Col. 1. 19, 20. It pleaſed the Father that in him ſhould all fulneſs dwell, viz. of Righteouſneſs and Holyneſs, but to what end? That peace being made by his blood, (for the Merit of his Blood extends no farther than Peace) God by him might reconcile all things to himſelf, ver. 20. which declares ſomething farther then meer making of Peace, and that to be obtain'd alſo by that fulneſs, which God to this end would have to dwell in him. Chap. 19.

That all which was requiſite in Adam, ſhould be an ingredient into our Righteouſneſs, is alſo evidently true, unleſs they will aſſert, that we are conſtituted leſs Righteous in the Second Adam than in the Firſt, when the Apoſtle on the contrary affirms, that the gift of Righteouſneſs doth more ſuper-abound in Chriſt, Rom. 5. 15, 17. And indeed it is neceſſary that it ſhould more ſuper-abound, ſince more is required to our Juſtification, than to Adams.

Hence at length ariſeth the Fourth Concluſion, and which ſhall be the laſt in this order.

4. Concluſ. As many things as are required from the Sinner by the Law, it is neceſſary that ſo many concur that he may be reſtored into a ſtate of Juſtification, as parts of his Juſtification; of which there are two the chiefeſt.

1. An Abſolution both from the Puniſhment, and from all Crimes and Guilt of the Fact, which anſwers contradiſtinctly to the Negative part of the Precept, Thou ſhalt not do this; and to the annex'd Appendix of it, the denuntiation of Death. And by this Abſolution the guilty Perſon is ſo acquitted, that he is freed from the Obligation to Puniſhment, and alſo is reputed never to have committed ſuch Sins.

2. There is a pronunciation of the Perſon to be Righteous, by which he is reputed to have done all thoſe things which the Law commands, and is adjudged worthy of Eternal Life, which is conformable to the affirmative part of the Precept, and to the annexed promiſe.

And we may find ſo many parts of Juſtification diſtinly aſſigned in the Scriptures. The firſt of them is aſſerted by the Apoſtle, Rom. 4. 7, 8. Saying, Bleſſed are they whoſe iniquities are forgiven, and whoſe ſins are covered. ver. 8. Bleſſed is the man to whom the Lord will not impute ſin. The Remiſſion of Sin in ver. 7. reſpects Obligation to Puniſhment. The not Imputation of Sin, ver. 8. reſpects the Act of Sin it ſelf, of which the Perſon is ſo Acquitted, ſo as not to be reputed guilty of the Fact. For whereas in Humane Courts of Judicature there are two things take place; The Accuſation of the Fact, which is the work of a Witneſs, and the Condemnation, or adjudging to Puniſhment, which is the work of the Judge: The contrary ſeems to have place in Gods Court, when the buſineſs is there tranſacted concerning the Juſtification of a Sinner. He is judged ſo free from all Puniſhment, as it is ſaid, Who ſhall condemn him, Rom. 8. 34. And he alſo is ſo abſolv'd from the Fact, as it is ſaid, Who ſhall lay any thing to his charge? ver. 33. He ſo imputes not ſins, that neither the Memory, nor mention of them remain, and ſo that none are found, Jer. 50. 20.

And this may be called the State of a Believers Innocence, as the Condition of the firſt Father Adam when new Created, and when he had not acquired any Righteouſneſs to himſelf by doing the Law, is rather called a State of Innocence than of Righteouſneſs; which though to ſuppoſe to be a certain Middle State (by deſcending from a State of Righteouſneſs to a State of Sin) would be a vain and fooliſh phanſie; and ſuch an one imagin'd by the Papiſts, wherein they ſay Man was in his pure Naturals, we deride as an abſurd figment: Yet in the Juſtification of a Sinner which is by Aſcen-ding from a State of Sin to a State of Righteouſneſs, ſuch a Middle State may at leaſt be ſuppoſed. For there is a great diſparity of Reaſon which may be aſſign'd between this Caſe and the other.

1. For firſt, VVhereas Righteouſneſs was what by Nature ought to be in Man, and neceſſary to him in his Primitive State, he muſt therefore of neceſſity, when deprived of this Original Righteouſneſs fall into a State of Sin. But that gift of Juſtifying Righteouſneſs, all of it freely flows from God, and therefore both in pardoning our Sins, and in giving us Chriſts Righteouſneſs, his Grace illuſtriouſly ſhines out, and is to be acknowledged, and therefore ſuch a Middle State is ſuppoſible that we may the better make a diſtinction between thoſe two Gifts, and to give the greater Illuſtration of them; God who beſtows one benefit, not being bound to confer the other, Mat. 20. 15.

2. The Juſtification of a Man in his Primitive State, did flow from his own proper Righteouſneſs, though there was a Juſtifying Act of God concurring with it. And in Man thus conſidered, a mere want of Righteouſneſs though he had committed no Sin, yet could not be called Innocence, becauſe that Righteouſneſs was what ought to be in him. But the Juſtification of a Sinner, as it ſuppoſeth nothing in the Man, ſo neither doth it expect, or wait for ſomething to be in him, but it is a pure Act of God, and imports a reſpect to the mind of God Juſtifying, who as he calls thoſe things which are not, as though they were; ſo he can look on thoſe things as not due, which are due, and by pardoning remit them. Therefore a pardoned Sinner may be ſaid yet to want that Righteouſneſs which ought to be in him; yet ſince Juſtification expects nothing in the Subject, God of his meer Grace may pronounce him to be innocent, And by his Remiſſion he may account that privative want of what ſhould be in the Man, for a meer Negative.

In a word, though pardon and the conſequent imputation of Righteouſneſs are never to be ſeparated (ſo that the State of Innocence, in which, I have but made a ſuppoſition, a pardoned Sinner to be) is never really exiſtent) yet they are not to be confounded, and therefore that we might have diſtinct thoughts both of the one, and the other I made the foregoing ſuppoſition.

The ſame is to be ſaid concerning Acquitment from Death, and Acceptance to Life, between which a Middle State may be ſuppoſed to be, though the Subject not exiſting, viz. A State of annihilation, which if God ſhould vouchſafe to the Sinner, it would be a favour, ſince Chriſt ſaies of Judas, That it would have been better for him, if he had not been born, or if he ſhould be annihilated.

Therefore over and above the Mans abſolution there is ſome other thing to be added, viz. The Imputation of Righteouſneſs, to which is annexed, Acceptance to Life; of which the Apoſtle ſpeaks diſtinctly, Rom. 5. 19. when he affirms the Obedience of one Man to conſtitute many Righteous, which in the preceding verſe he had called Juſtification of Life, or to Eternal Life; which contains in its ſelf two parts of Righteouſneſs, as the Law alſo requires, viz. an habitual Holyneſs of Nature, and active Righteouſneſs of Life. For ſince we are to be conſtituted no leſs Righteous in the Second Adam, then the firſt Adam was to be as we ſaid before: And ſince Adam in Law appeared Righteous, both by habitual Holyneſs in his created Nature; which certainly God approved as conformable to the Law, ſince he approved of all his Works as good, and then at length Active Righteouſneſs, viz. a perfect fulfilling of the Law was to be added to Juſtification of Life, ſince theſe I ſay were requiſite in him, it alſo is neceſſary that we ſhould be conſtituted Righteous before God by both theſe Righteouſneſſes imputed.

And thus we have finiſhed the firſt part of this Diſcourſe, and you have heard an intire Conformity to the Law, both Active and Paſſive to be required to the Juſtification of a Sinner. VVe now haſten to the Second Part, which is to treat concerning the Righteouſneſs which is in Chriſt, and here in like manner I will frame Four Concluſions.

5. Concluſ.

Chap. 19.

5. Concluſ. That ſo many parts of Righteouſneſs, as compleating the whole Righteouſneſs of Chriſt is in like manner to be ſeen in him, as you heard them to be required in the Law, and to be parts of our Juſtification, and which ſeem to be a ſufficient payment, and proportionated anſwerably to our Debts, as alſo exactly to agree to the aſſigned parts of our Juſtification, as Matter adequate, accommodated, and ſquared to it. There is no need of a long and large enumeration of particulars. VVould you have freedom from the Curſe of the Law, Chriſt is made a Curſe, that he might redeem us from the Curſe of the Law, Gal. 3. 13. And he bore our Sorrows, Iſa. 53. 4. VVould you be ſo acquitted, that your Sins may not be imputed: He who knew no ſin was made ſin for us. 1 Cor. 5. 21. Neither in his Death alone was he numbred among Tranſgreſſors, Iſa. 53. 11. Who was ſeparate from Sinners, Heb. 7. But alſo in his Life, in his moſt exact ſubjection to the Ceremonial Law, by which he profeſt himſelf to be the greateſt Sinner, ſince thoſe Rights were a Publick Confeſſion of Sins. And Chriſt was circumciſed (as Auſtin rightly obſerves) as if he had been born in Sins, and the like may be ſaid of his other Obſervances, and ſo both imputatively, and reputatively he was made Sin, that it might not be imputed unto us. Now I place his Obedience to the Ceremonial Law to the Account of his Paſſive Obedience. For what is more grievous than for him, who knew not Sin, but as the greateſt of all evils, to act the part of a Sinner in the likeneſs of ſinful fleſh, not only in ſuffering, but in obſerving thoſe Ceremonies of the Law, which were required of Men as Sinners to obſerve; what thing I ſay, more ſharp and grievous than this, could ſo much as be imagined.

Do you deſire a Righteouſneſs of Nature to be ſuperadded to all this? That holy thing is called the Son of God, Luke 1. 35. that by that Sanctification of our Nature in him, he might condemn Sin in the Fleſh. Rom. 8. 3.

Do you further deſire a Righteouſneſs of Life: As he came not to diſſolve the Law, but to fulfil it, ſo he did perfectly accompliſh it; John 8. 29. and to what end did he this? The Apoſtle gives an anſwer, Rom. 10. 3, 4. For they being ignorant of Gods righteouſneſs, and going about to eſtabliſh their own righteouſneſs, have not ſubmitted themſelves unto the righteouſneſs of God. ver. 4. For Chriſt is the end of the law for righteouſneſs to every one that believeth. Chriſt is the end of the Law not deſtructive of it, but to perfect it, (as Auſtin ſaies) but in what? In Juſtification, of which the Apoſtle there ſpeaks, when he ſaies this in oppoſition to a Mans own Righteouſneſs which the Jews endeavoured to eſtabliſh. It was indeed the part of the Law to juſtifie in Mans Primitive State, and to that it was ordained, but Chriſt only attain'd the Accompliſhment of this Deſign. And for whom? Not for himſelf, to juſtifie himſelf only, but he is the end of the Law for righteouſneſs to every one who believeth. When as the end of the Law was the Righteouſneſs of Man, Chriſt being now made the Lord our Righteouſneſs, is called the end of the Law. But by what Obedience to the Law is he ſo? What! By his Paſſive only; No, for that ſame Righteouſneſs muſt Chriſt bring, which if it were not brought, the Law would be fruſtrated of its end, or he could not be ſaid to be the end of the Law. But that Righteouſneſs is Active? And to put it out of all diſpute, that this Righteouſneſs is meant; the Apoſtle adds, That the Law ſaies, That by doing a Man ſhall live, ver. 5.

6 Concluſ. The Sixth Concluſion follows, That all this complete Righteouſneſs in Chriſt, and which anſwers the Law, ſince it is not wholly due from him, but hath the Nature of merit in it, therefore it may be imputed to the Sinner. Let it be granted, That if ſome part of his Righteouſneſs was due for himſelf, that could not be imputed, yet this alſo muſt be inſinuated, that if the Obedience of Adam as well as his Sin by vertue of the Covenant made with us as in him, ſhould have been imputed not only to him, but to us, though all of it was due from him for himſelf, why is there not the ſame reaſon in ſome reſpect that the Righteouſneſs of the Second Adam ſhould be ſo too? Let Bernard be heard ſpeaking in this Cauſe: What! Is it to be

be fear'd (saies he) least thy righteousness, O Lord, should not be sufficient both for thee and me, when of God thou art made righteousness unto me. (And he speaks of that which is Active.) It is a short Cloak indeed which cannot cover two, It will, O Lord both cover me and thee.

But what though we grant it, that supposing this Righteousness of Christ be due from him for himself, that it would not suffice at least for other Sinners; Yet the contrary is proved by instances of its being Meritorious, which then it is when it is not wholly due from Christ on his own Account.

As to Christs Passive Obedience there is no doubt of its Meriting, and the same will appear to be true of all the rest. I will begin from Christ's Birth.

The Sanctification of his Humane Nature is a Natural due to him, it is true, but since the Divine Person assuming it was before that Assumption free whether he would assume it,or no; and in assuming Mans Nature though most Holy, he abased himself, and in this yielded Obedience to his Father, Phil. 2. 7, 8. and he so assumed it, that after the Assumption that Holy Thing born is called the Son of God, Luke 1. 35. Hence it will obtain the account of Merit, since it was not in all respects due from the Divine Person. This Holy thing indeed is called the Son of God, as the Blood of Christ is called the Son of God, as the Blood of Christ is called the Blood of Christ is called the Blood of God; but yet this Son of God did not want that Holyness of the Humane Nature, being himself full of the Essential Holyness of God, and therefore it was not in all respects due from him, It was for us Christ was Holy, John 17. 19. For them (saies he) I sanctifie my self.

But this will be more clearly evident concerning Christs Obedience to the Moral Law. For,

1. The greatest part of it was not at all due for himself as Man, at least not due in that manner as he performed it. For he might have been Man, and yet have lived alwaies in Heaven, and then he would have been free (as now glorified he is) from many Duties to be performed both to God, and Man in this Life, which yet He whilst he lived amongst Men, performed for us.

2. When as that Holy one is called the Son of God, shall he not have the Prerogative of a Son, and not of a Servant only? And when he is called the Lord of the Sabbath, why not also of the rest of the Law?

3. What though we grant him to have been subject as a Creature, yet the Obedience is of the whole Person, and he is called the Lord our Righteousness. What therefore as a work would be entirely due from the Humane Nature, shall be called the Merit of the Mediator God-Man.

4. What though he now made under the Law, and become a Servant is held bound to the Servitude of the Law, as other Men are kept under the Punishment of Death? Yet since the Person assuming was before at his own dispose, and it was only to make satisfaction for us, that he took upon him that Condition of a Servant; this Service, though due, will be meritorious. For all Motions have their Specification and Denomination from the beginning and end of them. And as the Danger is the greater in that Condition, wherein having now made himself a Servant, he is bound to performe this Service for himself, so much greater will be the Merit, that for our sakes he expos'd himself to that Danger.

And this is yet more evident as to Christs Obedience unto the Ceremonial Law; for though he was indeed by Nation a Jew, and a Son of Abraham, yet unless he had been a Sinner, he was not bound to it, as only the Sinners of the Jews were subject to it. And though those Rites of the Law at that time were the manner of Divine Worship, yet they were not to be observ'd but by Sinners. Since therefore this whole Obedience was perform'd for our sakes, and he was born for us, and made under the Law for us, the whole of it may be imputed to us.

I will

I will alſo add this, that ſince there was no need that theſe things ſhould be done on the ſole account of being qualifying Conditions of our High Prieſt, or as conferring Merit on his Paſſive Obedience, ſince the alone Dignity of his Perſon brought enough of both theſe, Heb. 9. 14. therefore all this Obedience is perform'd on our Account, and ought to be imputed to us, ſince otherwiſe it would be to no purpoſe. But this will be more clearly demonſtrated in the following Concluſion, which is this. Chap. 19.

7. Concluſ. All theſe ſingle parts of the Righteouſneſs of Chriſt, though they are of an infinite Merit intenſively, yet extenſively they are not ſo, but in their imputation unto us for Righteouſneſs they are to be limited to that kind of Righteouſneſs only to which they belong.

To explain the meaning of the Concluſion, and to Illuſtrate it by a Parity of Reaſon. Let us conſider, That as all the Merits of the whole Righteouſneſs of Chriſt performed in Mans Nature are not extended to the Angels, Heb. 2. 6, 7. though as to Mankind they would ſuffice to Save, and Juſtifie innumerable Millions, and therefore they are ſaid to be, though not intenſively, yet extenſively infinite ; ſo there is the ſame reaſon in all the ſeveral parts of the ſame Righteouſneſs compar'd one with another ; ſo that though the Merit of the Paſſive Obedience avails to Cancel all our Debts of Suffering or Puniſhment which are within its Sphere ; nay, and is ſufficient to expiate the guilt of the Sins of the whole World ; yet it cannot ſtand in the room of the Active Righteouſneſs required by the Law, becauſe it is out of its Sphere, and Kind. And ſo in like manner neither can the Active Righteouſneſs of Chriſt, avail to diſcharge the due parts of the Paſſive, and therefore though each of them is intenſively Infinite, yet not extenſively.

So then whereas there is a double Debt of Puniſhment and Obedience required in the Law from us Sinners, the Paſſive Righteouſneſs though in it ſelf of Infinite Merit will not ſuffice for both of them ; and therefore ſince an intire ſatisfaction of the Law is exacted from us, the whole Righteouſneſs of Chriſt Active, and Paſſive ought to be imputed. And God will require Obedience as a ſatisfaction to the Law, not only redundant in a ſingular kind of Merit, but as accompliſhed in its own particular way, and kind. And for this he would have all fulneſs, which denotes perfection of degrees, and all fulneſs as denoting a perfection of Parts to dwell in Chriſt, in order to our Reconciliation, Col. 1. 19, 20. that we might be compleat in him, Col. 2. 10. As it is thus in other parts of our Salvation, ſo in Juſtification alſo ; ſince Chriſt is all in all, and is made all things to us Wiſdom, Righteouſneſs, Sanctification, and Redemption, 1 Cor. 1. 30. where ſince by Wiſdom may accommodately be underſtood Inherent Righteouſneſs, in which Senſe it is often taken by a Synecdoche, and by its redundancy there it ought ſo to be underſtood, Chriſt is made all the other things to us by the imputation of his Righteouſneſs, Sanctification by the Merit of the Sanctification of his Nature, Righteouſneſs by the Merit of his Active Obedience, and Redemption ; by his Paſſive. And in the ſame order, though inverted, he doth in the like manner enumerate the parts of Juſtification in his Epiſtle to the Romans, as Remiſſion of Sins by Chriſts Death, chap. 4. And in the beginning of chap. 5. He ſays, That Chriſt is made Redemption ; and then in the end of that Chapter he ſaies, That he conſtitutes us Righteous by his Active Righteouſneſs, which to be meant there is certain, both in that he calls it Obedience, and not only ſo, but Righteouſneſs, and alſo that he calls the Effect proportionate to in Juſtification of Life. And it is alſo more clearly manifeſt from ver. 17. where comparing it with the alone diſobedience of Adam, he ſays, If by one offence death reigned by one, much more ſhall life reign by one, in them, who receive that abundance of grace, and of the gift of righteouſneſs. The Compariſon is ſo made, that the gift of Righteouſneſs is ſaid to be abundant, not in Merit only, but in Quantity and Number ; for the Multitude of the Acts of Righteouſneſs ſeem to be oppoſed to the one Diſobedience of Adam, therefore the alone Paſſive Righteouſneſs is not underſtood, therefore his Active is alſo imputed to us, and in respect of that too he is made Righteousness to us. But when at last in chap. 7. he had complained of the inherent remainders of Sin, which he calls the Law of the Members of the Flesh, and of Death: He comforts himself at the First and Second Verses of Chapter 8. in the Justification obtain'd for him by the Sanctification of Christs Humane Nature, which therefore in opposition to the other Law of Death, he calls a Law of the Spirit, and of Life; that is, a Spiritual and inward Law and Principle of Life, which he also affirms to be inherent in Christ, and this (saith he) hath freed me from the Law of Sin, and Death, and ver. 3. he affirms Christ sent in the likeness of Flesh obnoxious to Sin, and yet free from it to have condemned in his Flesh Sin which was in ours. Which parts of Justification, when the Apostle had perfectly enumerated, he adds this as a Conclusion, in ver. 4. That the righteousness of the law might be fulfilled in us, i. e. That that absolute, complete, and universal Conformity, and Satisfaction to the Law in suffering the punishment and Death, or Obedience of Life, and Holyness of Nature required of Sinners, being found in Christ, and communicated unto us by imputation is said to be fulfilled in us, as if we had accomplished it. The whole Righteousness therefore of Christ, as it ought to be imputed, so de facto it is imputed unto us.

Let me to conclude all add an eighth and last Proposition, with which I would not farther lengthen out the Discourse, if it were not necessary to clear up the Truth asserted.

8. Conclus. Though these parts may be considered divisively as composing the Merit of our imputed Righteousness, yet in the imputation it self they coalesce into one entire, and undivided Righteousness, nor is one part to be considered separate from the other. The Conclusion is thus to be understood, that though in the execution or performance of this Righteousness the parts of Christs Obedience were accomplished one distinct from another, and successively, and at length compleated by various Acts, his Passive Obedience after the Active, and the Active after the Sanctification of his Nature. And though secondly an afflicted Conscience meditating on its whole Misery, and considering by piecemeal the several parts both of the Sin, and of the Punishment, can therefore in that very Righteousness of Christ apprehended by Faith, and therefore imputed run over all the several parts of it as a proportionate remedy, and applicable to every one of his Distempers: Yet such a Division is not to be thought of in the Imputation, as though that was successive, or that one part of Christs Righteousness was applyed to us after another. And the reason is this, The Law since it is an Hand-writing is not to be cancell'd, till it be satisfied to the last farthing. Therefore no part of the Debt can be said to be paid, unless it be all consider'd as paid, and the Bond cancell'd. Therefore the Active Righteousness of Christ, cannot be said to be imputed, unless also at the same time his Passive Righteousness be supposed to be imputed, and on the contrary, not his Passive without the Active. For though the Merit of one part (suppose it the Passive Righteousness) doth not depend on the other, viz. the Active, yet the Imputation of the Merit of each part depends upon the other. Hence the Apostle, 2 Cor. 5. 21, saies of Christ is made Sin, and hath taken away the Guilt and Punishment of it, that we might be made the Righteousness of God in him. Not as if that Passive Righteousness was that, by which we appear just before God, but this Active Righteousness would not be imputed, but upon supposition of the other. Hence therefore it comes to pass, that the whole work of Justification, is attributed to one part of this Righteousness, and of Right may be so, as it is often attributed to the Death of Christ, which is often inculcated by the Assertors of Justification by Christs Passive Righteousness alone. Thus we are said to be reconciled by Christs Death, and the like; and thus also the Sanctification of Christs Nature is said to condemn Sin in the Flesh. Which Expressions are not to be taken in such a Sense, as if the whole Merit of imputed Righteousness might be found in Christs Death, (and so likewise likewise as to the other) but because the Imputation of his other Righteousness depends upon this, as this also on the other. But it is attributed most often, and chiefly to Christs Death, for several reasons; the principal of which is this. Because it was the last part pay'd which cancelled the Laws whole Hand-writing, and was as it were the compleating of all the rest. Chap. 19.

But yet of this we are to be advised, that though the whole force of the Imputation flows from each part, and in the Imputation an one, entire, and undivided Righteousness is to be considered as resulting from all the parts together, yet this doth not hinder but that one part of your Justification may be more attributed to one part of the Righteousness than to another, (as Remission of Sins to the Death of Christ, and Justification of Life to his Active Obedience:) For the like is found in Sanctification, though the whole Sanctifying Vertue, and Energy flow together from his Death and Resurrection, yet Mortification is rather ascribed to the Vertue, and Power of Christs Death, as quickning, or vivification to his Resurrection. Because Mortification hath a greater similitude with his Death, as the Effect useth to have with its cause. So likewise Remission of Sins is rather attributed to Christs Death, Justification of Life to his Active Obedience, because of the greater Congruity, and correspondent proportion. As a whole Christ is made Mediator, and that he might be a fit one, it was requisite, that he should partake of the Natures of the Persons between whom he was constituted Mediator, and yet both of them should coalesce into one Person, but without confounding them together: So that the whole Mediatorial Work should proceed from both Natures, should reside in both, and should be ascribed to both, both of them concurring to every Work of the Mediator, and the whole Christ is Mediator. In like manner it is as to the Work of this Mediation, and so the Matter is, that both the Active and Passive Obedience in our one entire Justification bears some resemblance to the two Natures of Christ in one Person. For since we owed both of them to the Law, he perform'd them both; and yet in the performance, they were not divided one from the other (that I may allude to that of David concerning Saul, and Jonathan) but were joyned with a most strait and indissoluble Bond. For Christ in his Life had suffering Actions, and he sustained in his Death Active Passions, as Bernard speaks: But in the Imputation, and Application of them to us, they coalesce with almost an Hypostatical Union into one entire Righteousness, so that our whole Righteousness proceeds from both, and resides in both, and it may be attributed to both, that the whole Righteousness is imputed to us.

CHAP. XX.

That the perfect Holineſs of Chriſts Nature is Imputed to a Believer to juſtifie him againſt the Condemnation of Original Sin.

THE Right Context of Scripture is half the Interpretation, and therefore I will ſhew the Coherence of this with the foregoing Chapter.

[Now] Theſe words refer to the former Chapter, and it is as if he had thus ſpoke, It therefore follows from what I have ſaid: What had he ſaid? He had made in his own Perſon the lamentable complaint of a poor Regenerate Soul in his conſtant Conflict; Often foyled, and ſomewhat prevailed upon, as in ver. 23. The Law in my Members brings me into Captivity to the Law of Sin. But it is but the Captivity of a Prince; One of a Prince-like Spirit, though put upon drudgery to do what he hates: What I hate, that do I: And for Holy Duties: I would do good ſaies he, but find no ſtrength for it.

He deſcribes here a Regenerate Man at his worſt. It is evident, he ſpeaks of a Godly Man, one in Chriſt, O wretched man that I am, who ſhall deliver me? I thank God through Jeſus Chriſt our Lord (ſaies this Man.) Therefore he is a Man in Chriſt. It is the greateſt Miſery in the World to ſuch a one to be thus beſet with Sin. There is no Croſs like it, and therefore ſaies he, ver. 24, 25. O wretched man that I am, who ſhall deliver me from the body of this death. ver. 25. I thank God, through Jeſus Chriſt our Lord. So then, with the mind I my ſelf ſerve the law of God; but with the fleſh, the law of Sin. He gives Thanks for that deliverance he had in his Eye; that he ſhould be delivered from the Power of Sin at laſt, and that he was freed from the guilt of it at preſent: And in the 25*th verſe* he makes it clear, he intends ſuch a one, (viz. a Godly Man;) ſo then (ſaies he) I my ſelf with the mind do ſerve the Law of God.

Mark then the Scope: There is therefore now, &c. As if he ſhould ſay, If it be the Caſe of a Man in Chriſt, to be as I have ſaid; If he that yet ſerves the Law of Sin in a great meaſure, is yet a Man in Chriſt, becauſe in his mind he ſerves the Law of God; Then plainly there is no Condemnation to ſuch a one; for here is the worſt caſe you can ſuppoſe him in. I will premiſe two or three things.

1. That what is ſaid between verſe 1. and verſe 5. is meant of Juſtification.

2. That there is yet a Conflict between Grace and Corrupt Nature; and yet no Condemnation: It is meant of Non-Condemnation for the Corruption of our Nature. It might have been ſaid, So far as a Regenerate Man is ſinful, ſo far he is lyable to Condemnation: No, ſaith he, There is [no] Condemnation to ſuch a Man; For he is in Chriſt, and ſhall be preſerved in him.

There is no condemnation to them who walk, &c.] 1 They are in Chriſt Jeſus. 2. They walk not after the Fleſh, but after the Spirit: Theſe two reſtrain non-condemnation to ſuch. Their being in Chriſt is the true original ground why there is no condemnation to them. Though their conflict be great, and corruptions ſtrong; yet being in Chriſt, and flying to him for help, there is no condemnation to them; who walk not after the fleſh, but after the Spirit: This is a deſcription who theſe are.

But

Chap. 20.

But does he mean it of ſuch as are led captive by Sin? Is there no condemnation to them? He muſt intend it of ſuch, or he had ſaid nothing. He is led captive; but there is a Spirit of Regeneration in him that works againſt his luſts, even in the midſt of his Captivity. A poor Soul hath ſome weak reſiſtances againſt Sin, even whiles he commits it: There is a thread of the renewed Nature ſtill runs through him; he hath a pulſe ſtill though it be but weak, and Jeſus Chriſt knows it. There is a ſtream of Spirit runs out againſt Sin, and that's his walk: For otherwiſe, when a Man has but weak reſiſtances againſt Sin, and is overcome, he would be out of Chriſt, and be in a ſtate of condemnation.

Obſerv. 1. That our being in Chriſt and united to him, is the fundamental conſtitution of a Chriſtian. The ſtate of a Chriſtian is expreſt ſo. Rom. 16. 7. He was in Chriſt afore me; i. e. He was converted afore me.

Obſerv. 2. That Union with Chriſt is the firſt fundamental thing of Juſtification and Sanctification, and all. Chriſt firſt takes us, and then ſends his Spirit. He apprehends us firſt. It is not my being regenerate that puts me into a right of all thoſe priviledges, but it is Chriſt takes me, and then gives me his Spirit, Faith, Holineſs, &c It is through our Union with Chriſt, and the perfect Holineſs of his Nature, to whom we are united, that we partake of the priviledges of the Covenant of Grace.

For the Law of the Spirit of life in Chriſt Jeſus.] What is this Law of the Spirit of Life? It is known by its oppoſite, Sin and Death, that is, inherent corruption: So then the Law of the Spirit of Life in Chriſt Jeſus, is the Holineſs of his Nature: It is called, The Spirit of life, becauſe it is the ſame that is in Chriſt: It is born of him; and this quickens us

Why called a Law? For two Reaſons: 1. The inherent Holineſs of Chriſts Nature, is called a Law in Pſal. 40. 8. (which is of Chriſt) Thy law is within my heart. His delight to do Gods Will, flowed from the writing of the Law in his Heart. 2. Becauſe being in him it had a right and authority to free us. A Law has power to juſtifie or condemn, and this Law being in Chriſt, has power and authority to free us, by vertue of our Union with him. And if you would know what is the reaſon that there is no condemnation to thoſe in Chriſt, notwithſtanding all the remaining corruptions that are in them. It is becauſe there is ſuch a perfect Holineſs in Chriſt, which being mine by my Union with him, frees me from the Law and Power of Sin and Death.

Hath made me free, &c.] As if he ſhould ſay; It is the caſe of all the Saints: What belongs to me as a Chriſtian, belongs to every one that is ſuch, though never ſo weak and ſmall.

For what the Law could not do.] There was no remedy elſe: Had God made us new Creatures, yet ſo far as corruption goes, ſo far had we been lyable to condemnation. The Law was too weak for that work, to free us from the condemnation of indwelling Sin. I have a corrupt Nature, and I am but fleſh, and therefore can do no good upon it. A Man is dead, and you'l give him Phyſick; but though it be the ſtrongeſt in the World, it works not: Why? The Man is dead; that renders the ſtrongeſt Phyſick perfectly weak: And thus all the helps that are, if given to corrupt Nature, could do nothing, as to the freeing you from the power of Sin: But Chriſt is the only univerſal remedy. Acts 13. 39.

What did God therefore do? He ſent his own Son in the likeneſs of ſinful fleſh; and for ſin condemned ſin in the fleſh. The Holineſs that is in Chriſts Nature, takes away the condemning power of Original Corruption in us. [In the likeneſs of ſinful fleſh;] i. e. With all the frailties that for Sin were brought upon the fleſh of Man. Nay, he came into the World as one that was born in Sin; He took upon him the perſonage of one born in Sin: He was Circumciſed; which ſignified the cutting off of Original Corruption: And his Mother muſt be purified as being defiled by the bearing of a ſinful Child. He bore our likeneſs every way: And the end of this was, to condemn Sin in our Nature. His was but the likeneſs of ſinful fleſh, yet had power to condemn that Sin which is in us.

Condemned ſin in the fleſh.] That is, He put it out of commiſſion. If Sin had its full power and authority, as by Moſes Law it would have, it would condemn us ; but being put out of office it is to be executed. It is condemned by the holineſs of Chriſts Nature ; and being condemned it ſelf, it cannot condemn you. This is in reſpect of corruption yet remaining, than which nothing can be more comfortable to a poor Soul.

What is the ground of this Aſſertion ? There are two Reaſons for it. One is, that whatever Jeſus Chriſt did or ſuffered in this World for us, it hath an efficacy to free us ; it is as good Law as ever was. The Law ſayes, Curſed is every one that continueth not in all things written in the Law, to do them : And it ſpeaks it to all that are under the Law : Gal. 3. 10. How is this Curſe removed ? By as good Law as that it came in by ; ver. 13. Chriſt hath redeemed us from the curſe of the Law, being made a curſe for us : He took Sin upon himſelf, and ſo freed us. Every thing that Jeſus Chriſt did, it was for us. He was Circumciſed ; and this, by a juſt Law, procures for us the Circumciſion of our corrupt Nature : Col. 2. 11. In whom alſo you are circumciſed. You were Circumciſed with him, becauſe you were in him, and ſo this his Circumciſion is yours, and made good upon you. This condemned Sin in your Fleſh. There is never a ſore we have, but Chriſt has a plaiſter for it.

The other Reaſon of it is, The Ordination of the Father. God ſent his own Son ; and he ſent him for that very purpoſe, for Sin. What came Chriſt into the World for ? For Sin ; (not to Sin himſelf) he had not come into the World but for Sin ; namely, to take it away. He took away Actual Sin by his ſuffering ; and Original Sin, by his taking on him the likeneſs of ſinful fleſh, which in him was perfectly ſanctified.

And he was the Son of God. Had God created a Man holy, and only put him into the World in the likeneſs of ſinful fleſh ; that would not have taken away our Sins : But for the Son of God to take on him our Nature, that only could do it : 1 John 1. 7. The blood of Jeſus Chriſt his Son, cleanſeth us from all ſin. The blood of Angels could not have done it, but from the Son of God in our Nature comes this vertue.

That the Righteouſneſs of the Law might be fulfilled in us.] The Law had a Righteouſneſs againſt us ; and whatever the Law ſaith, it ſaith it to them that are under the Law ; and what the Law ſaith, it ſaith it to Sinners. Well, let the Law ſay what it will, Chriſt anſwers it. It ſayes you are a Sinner : Well, but Jeſus Chriſt was made Sin for me. You are under the Curſe : True, but Jeſus Chriſt was made a Curſe for me, that I might be made the Righteouſneſs of God in him : The Law is anſwered here again. There be three parts of Juſtification : Firſt, The taking away of Actual Sin ; this is handled in chap. 3. ver. 24. All have ſinned, &c. His Paſſive Obedience takes away the guilt of Actual Sin. But Secondly, We ought to have an Actual Righteouſneſs reckoned to us ; this is handled in Rom. 5. 18. As by the offence of one, judgment came upon all men to condemnation ; even ſo by the righteouſneſs of one, the free gift came upon all unto juſtification of life. The Active Obedience of Jeſus Chriſt made many Righteous. Juſtification lyes not only in Pardon of Sin, but in the Righteouſneſs of Chriſt imputed to us, and imputed to us as Adams Sin was.

But the Law is not fulfilled yet ; for we have corruption of Nature in us ? The Apoſtle therefore in this, Rom. 8. 4. he brings in the third part of Juſtification, viz. That Chriſt came into the World in our Nature, and fulfilled the Righteouſneſs of the Law, in having that Nature perfectly holy. And now the Righteouſneſs of the Law is fulfilled in all parts of it ; here is a perfect Juſtification, and we deſire no more.

Chap. 21.

CHAP. XXI.

That not only our Legal but our Evangelical Righteousness is excluded from bearing any part in our Justification. Phil. 3. 9. explain'd and prov'd, that the Apostle there renounceth not only his Legal and Pharisaical, but his Evangelical Righteousness.

PHIL. iii. 9.

And be found in him, not having mine own righteousness which is of the Law, but that which is through the faith of Christ; the righteousness which is of God through faith.

THERE are two things to be considered and proved.

I. That by his own Righteousness, the Righteousness which is of the Law, is meant his inherent Righteousness of Sanctification, wrought in him after his Conversion.

II. That by the Righteousness which is by the Faith of Christ, and the Righteousness which is of God upon Faith, is to be understood the Righteousness of Christ which was out of himself (and not his own) imputed by God, and received by him, through Faith.

These are two Righteousnesses so inconsistent one with the other; that if a Man will [have] (as the word is) the one, he cannot be partaker of the other. And accordingly we find in his own case and example, that he perfectly resigns up, yea renounceth the one: That I may be found, not having mine own righteousness, which is of the law, and wholly betakes himself unto the other; But that which is through the faith of Christ; the righteousness of God which is upon faith: And both the renunciation of his own, and his eager contention after this other, do respect his Righteousness of Justification; or serve to set out the true Righteousness thereof, both negatively and affirmatively, wherein he would be found afore God, so as to be sure to be justified. This is a matter of infinite moment for every Christian rightly to understand, and to exercise his Faith about in like manner as our Apostle here doth, and that daily, both by way of renouncing what is a Mans own Righteousness, and by way of dearest acceptation and embracement of the other; which is done by Faith.

The terms of opposition stand thus.

1. Not mine own Righteousness; but, The Righteousness which is of God.
2. Not the Righteousness which is of the Law; but, The Righteousness which is by the faith of Christ: Law and Faith standing in terms of utter incompatibility, as in respect to this Righteousness.

Let the Reader take this along with him, That whatever this his own righteousness, &c. renounced, will prove to be; as also the opposite Righteousness ouſneſs which he betakes himſelf to, and which he calls, The Righteouſneſs of God through faith; and the faith of Chriſt; (whatever that alſo in the arguing may prove to be) that he yet ſpeaks of both as in reſpect to Juſtification, or his being accounted Righteous before God at the latter day.

There are none of any opinion, that I know of, that deny a Righteouſneſs for Juſtification here to be meant; only the quarrel is, about what it is ſhould be meant by that Righteouſneſs he calls the righteouſneſs of the faith of Chriſt, and the righteouſneſs of God, as which he would have for his Juſtification; and oppoſitely, what his own Righteouſneſs; and which is of the Law, ſhould be that he renounceth: But all agree, that both are ſpoken in relation to his Juſtification, both what Righteouſneſs he would at no hand have to be juſtified by; and alſo what he would be juſtified by.

And if you view the Controverſie about Juſtification, in Pauls other Epiſtles, you will find it ſtated under the ſame terms that here it is. See Rom. 3. ver. 20. Therefore by the deeds of the law ſhall no fleſh be juſtified in his ſight; for by the law is the knowledge of ſin. Ver. 21. But now the righteouſneſs of God without the law is manifeſted, being witneſſed by the law and the prophets. Ver. 22. Even the righteouſneſs of God which is by faith of Jeſus Chriſt, unto all and upon all them that believe: Which place exactly correſponds with this; and in both, that Righteouſneſs which is in oppoſition to that of the Law, is made our Righteouſneſs whereby we are juſtified. So as I need not trouble my ſelf any further, that this in the 9th verſe is ſpoken in reſpect to juſtification.

1. But the Queſtion is concerning his Negative; what he ſhould mean by the Righteouſneſs of the Law, which he would not have to be the matter of his Juſtification; whether he means that old Phariſaical Righteouſneſs which he had afore-hand mentioned: ver. 6. Touching the righteouſneſs which is in the law, blameleſs; or whether the inherent righteouſneſs he had acquired ſince his Converſion, namely, that of true Holineſs, and his acts of Faith in Chriſt, and Repentance for Sin, ſhould be that Righteouſneſs which he here renounceth as to his Juſtification, though otherwiſe never ſo excellent and deſirable, and uſeful, to other glorious ends and purpoſes.

2. Then again the Queſtion will be as touching the Affirmative; What that Righteouſneſs of God, and of Faith, ſhould be meant whereby he would be juſtified. The Queſtion is, whether the Righteouſneſs of the New Creature in us, as it contains all the actings and principles of Faith, Repentance, and New Obedience, thence flowing as complex together, and wrought by the Grace of Chriſt in us, be not the Righteouſneſs here intended; or whether it be not the Righteouſneſs of Chriſt alone, which was extra or out of Paul himſelf, but as imputed by God, and received only by Faith, and imputed to him upon Faith, was the matter of his juſtification in the Affirmative part; when he ſayes, But that (Righteouſneſs namely) which is through the faith of Chriſt, the righteouſneſs which is of God upon faith.

In ſpeaking to theſe two, I ſhall not ravel into the whole Doctrine of Juſtification; but keep ſtrictly unto what the Text leads me to in this 9th Verſe.

1. I begin with the Expoſition of the Negative Clauſe; Not having mine own righteouſneſs which is of the law. Herein are two things.

[1.] Some evidences that his own Righteouſneſs in himſelf, after his Converſion, and not only or chiefly that old Righteouſneſs under Phariſaiſm, is meant in this his renunciation.

[2.] That this interpretation comporteth well with the phraſes here uſed, to ſtile that after Converſion, both

(1.) His own Righteouſneſs; and
(2.) Which is of the Law.

And

Chap. 21.

And the neceſſity of ſpeaking to theſe things, lyes in that appearance which is on the adverſe ſide; That Sanctification and Obedience after Converſion, are not our own, becauſe wrought by Chriſt (ſay they) and the Grace of God. Nor is it to be ſtiled (ſay they) a Righteouſneſs of the Law, becauſe it is new Evangelical Goſpel Obedience, and wrought by the Faith of Chriſt, and is termed Gods Righteouſneſs, becauſe he is the Author of it anew.

I ſhall firſt give ſome General Arguments, that his Old Phariſaical Righteouſneſs afore Converſion, is not meant: But,

1. For a Firſt Evidence, I obſerve how he had diſpatched his renunciation of his Old Phariſaical Righteouſneſs, over and over afore; and that expreſly and particularly, and apart; enumerated ver. 5, 6. and he utters that part in the time paſt, as that which he had done when converted, at his firſt acquaintance with Chriſt; and how he did it for Chriſt, that is, for his firſt obtaining of him: And for his ſake then, which he expreſſeth ver. 7. What things were gain to me (that is, in his opinion to obtain Life by) thoſe I accounted loſs for Chriſt; he ſpeaks in the time paſt. But this here I ſay, he ſpeaks in the preſent time now long after his ſaid Converſion, and ſo in a ſeparate manner from that foregone: And now he ſpeaks after this manner, And doubtleſs, I count all things but loſs. And in this ſpeech are included not only (if at all) thoſe things paſt, but all things whatever he had, that were his own of any kind, but eſpecially what was his own Righteouſneſs inherent in him after his Converſion, which yet was his own in a true ſenſe, all which as to the point of juſtification he profeſſeth to undervalue in compariſon of Chriſt, and that Righteouſneſs which he had by the Faith of Chriſt, as even he had deſpiſed his Old Righteouſneſs before Converſion. For the evidence of this let us conſider, that ſo it was, that at that preſent time wherein he ſpake this there had been a new ſtock of inherent Righteouſneſs gained and acquired by him, which Chriſt had wrought in him upon and after his Converſion, and therefore it was in a true and proper ſenſe his own Righteouſneſs (as I ſhall anon ſhew) in diſtinction from that without himſelf, which is through the Faith of Chriſt. All which new wrought righteouſneſs ſucceeded in the room of that old righteouſneſs of Phariſaiſm, and which was now to him the beſt thing which he had, or could be ſuppoſed to have, which might properly be called his own, and wherein (if in any thing) he might have cauſe to glory anew. So then there is in this 8th Verſe, a ſecond or ſuperadded renunciation of new things acquired after Converſion, and increaſed in him unto that preſent time he wrote this, and it is expreſſed in this 8th Verſe, with a new comprehenſive addition of all things he had to that now, or preſent time he wrote this in, wrapt together with thoſe things that in time paſt were, or had been gain; ver. 7. And that he involves all both old and new, is plain both from the forepart of that, ver. 8. Yea doubtleſs, and I count all things but loſs. Of the old he had ſpoken ver. 7. This all things therefore here, extends it ſelf further than to thoſe things which he had renounced in the Verſe before, even to all things elſe whatever beſide thoſe. And then he again redoubleth his ſpeech out of the vehemency of his Spirit in this point, I have ſuffered the loſs of all things: As if he had ſaid, I then broke, as we uſe to ſay) once for all, and for altogether. I ſuffered a ſhipwrack of all paſt, preſent, and to come, either which then I had in lading of old ſtock, yea and for time to come, of all future expectations from what righteouſneſs ſhould be again laden in me. Remember that he ſpeaks it eſpecially in relation to Juſtification, ſo that he reckoned all the ſtock of righteouſneſs which he had to trade with, as not in the leaſt valuable to come in payment of that ſtrict and compleat righteouſneſs required by the Law: The ſight of which did then come upon him (as in Rom. 7. 9, 10. in his own Perſon, and of his own Converſion he ſpeaks) and diſcovered to him, that an univerſal perfect righteouſneſs was it which was ordained for Life: Gal. 3. 10. I thereupon (ſayes he) ſuffered the loſs of all paſt, or to come, as to the obtaining of Eternal Life by any righteouſneſs of my own for ever. His timing it; I have counted all things loſs, and I do at preſent count them but loſs;

Book V.

loſs ; hath this plain meaning, that thoſe all things he had then, and theſe all things he hath now, as well as then, he doth alike as to his Juſtification, count dung. He had once for all at his Converſion renounced his old righteouſneſs, to the end to win Chriſt then, whom he thereupon did actually win. He came not then to him with any righteouſneſs of his own to be juſtified thereby. And thus in the ſame way and manner he came to him ſtill, and ſtill he repeats the ſame language, I do count them all dung, that I may win Chriſt ; in the ſame way of treaty as at the firſt, and ſtill he ſpeaks of Juſtification. As thus therefore he at Converſion had long before caſhiered his old Phariſaical blameleſneſs as for Juſtification, ſo he did at preſent in the like manner alſo, undervalue and count dung all that was of his own righteouſneſs, ſince to the end he might win Chriſt, and together with him, that righteouſneſs which was Chriſts properly, inſtead of any of his own of what kind ſoever, or had ever been wrought, whether by Grace after, or without Grace before. He came not to Chriſt with a new righteouſneſs to be juſtified thereby now after his Converſion, which he had not at firſt. And 'tis one and the ſame Chriſt alſo whom he would win, perfectly, entirely, and wholly the ſame in both, and for ever. There is not a new Juſtification by Chriſt after, that was not from the firſt, but from firſt to laſt he is one and the ſame Chriſt, as he is ſaid to be yeſterday, and to day, and for ever.

If any therefore ſhould Query, whether under theſe his preſent new things (as I may call them) he ſhould involve his own righteouſneſs acquired at and by, and ſince his Converſion unto Chriſt ; I would reply, That his all things, what was before, and is at preſent (as thus ſet in oppoſition unto Chriſt, and what was Chriſts, as here they are) muſt ſurely be included in this particular of his own new righteouſneſs ; for it is plain, he means all things beſides Chriſt, and what is purely Chriſts, whom he would win ; for which he thus accounteth all loſs ; and otherwiſe he would have excepted it : But he is ſo far from excepting it, that in the 9th Verſe he begins to ſpecifie that of all other as intended : And ſo deſcends from that general of all things, to make ſpecial and particular inſtances of that new righteouſneſs of his own ; and therein to ſhew, That as he had accounted all things in general but loſs to win Chriſt, and to have an intereſt in his Perſon, as in ver. 8. ſo that he accounts particularly all his own righteouſneſs but dung, that he might have Chriſts righteouſneſs, the righteouſneſs which is through the Faith of Chriſt, the righteouſneſs of God by Faith ; then which coherence of 7th, 8th and 9th Verſes, nothing can be alledged more conſonant of one thing with and to another.

And I would demand of the oppoſites hereto, in what reſpect it can be underſtood, that he ſhould account all (even what was his new acquired righteouſneſs) to be but dung ; but in reſpect unto Chriſts righteouſneſs, which was out of himſelf ? For in all other reſpects, as namely, that it was the Image of Chriſt, purchaſed by Chriſt, and wrought by Chriſt, ſo he ſet an high value upon it ; and therefore it could be for no other reſpect, he would trample on it as dung, but as in compariſon to that righteouſneſs which was Chriſts, and derived by Faith. Neither needed he to have thrown that away (as he doth) to win Chriſts Perſon ; for the having it, was not only conſiſtent with Chriſt, but flowed from being found in him.

2. Let us attentively mark the poſture, or his placing of thoſe following words about this his own Righteouſneſs, and his being found in Chriſt. He ſays not firſt in order, That not having mine own righteouſneſs, I may be found in Chriſt, and ſo thereby have that righteouſneſs which is by the Faith of Chriſt ; which in all reaſon ſhould have been the ranging of the words, if he had intended in this place, that old righteouſneſs which he had had out of Chriſt ; for look as in the former Verſe he had firſt ſaid, I have ſuffered the loſs of all things that I may win Chriſt ; ſo here, if his old righteouſneſs had been meant, he would have firſt ſaid, That not having mine own righteouſneſs, I may be found in Chriſt : For it is abſolutely neceſſary unto our having Chriſt at firſt Converſion ; to renounce and throw away in the firſt place, whatever is our own, that we may obtain him ; this, in the order and courſe courſe of things, is abſolutely neceſſary to be done) as a Mans hand that is full of dirt, muſt firſt empty it ſelf by throwing that away, ere it can receive and take into it ſelf a new handful that is offered to it ; and therefore in that order it would have been here expreſt ; whereas he placeth it in a different poſture ; and in the firſt place ſaith, That I may be found in Chriſt ; and then, not having mine own righteouſneſs, but that which is of the faith of Chriſt, &c. What doth this broadly inſinuate other than this, That upon his being found in Chriſt (which above all, he in the firſt place here deſires) that that Righteouſneſs of his own which he hath had, or deſires to have wrought and continued upon his being found in him, might not be that Righteouſneſs which he would be juſtified by ; (for a Righteouſneſs to be juſtified by, is his ſcope) neither that what thereof he hath hitherto had, or ſhall ever have from him upon his being found in him, as being a Righteouſneſs of his own : The having which Righteouſneſs is not oppoſite to his being found in Chriſt ; for he firſt ſuppoſeth his being in Chriſt, and ſuppoſeth it to have been wrought through his being in Chriſt, and to accompany and go along with his ſo being ; (whereas his old Phariſaical was perfectly oppoſite to his being in Chriſt, and had been firſt abſolutely renounced by him) but this new Righteouſneſs flowing from Chriſt in him, though it were not oppoſite to his being in Chriſt, yet it being (as to the point of Juſtification) oppoſite to that other Righteouſneſs which is Chriſts own Righteouſneſs, wherein Juſtification doth alone conſiſt ; he therefore renounceth this of his own after he is found in Chriſt, as to ſuch a purpoſe ; and had good reaſon ſo to do, becauſe God had provided a much better, infinitely better righteouſneſs of his own as the Donour, and of Chriſt himſelf as the Worker, to be imputed to him and received by Faith. Chap. 21.

And this conſidered, the plain ſcope of the Apoſtle in this Verſe is, That whereas there was a twofold righteouſneſs, and both flowing from union with Chriſt and a Mans being one with him, or being found in him.

1. One being a righteouſneſs of Sanctification, which is from Chriſt as the Author of it, which yet he calls his own, becauſe wrought in himſelf as the ſubject of it, though by Chriſt as the Author.

2. Another, which is the righteouſneſs of Juſtification, which is the righteouſneſs even of Chriſt himſelf, and Gods righteouſneſs, as he calls it, imputed to him upon believing, and received by Faith.

And he is to have one of theſe for his Juſtification, to plead afore the Judgment-ſeat of God : In this choice I would not have that of mine own I have had from him efficiently (ſayes he) ſince I was found in him ; but I would be found in him to have that righteouſneſs of his own, which is conveyed by a Faith going out of my ſelf unto him for it. For if I betake my ſelf to mine own new righteouſneſs, though I have it from him, yet becauſe it is mine, it comes under the power and juriſdiction of the Law, and will be judged of by the tenour of it, and ſo I muſt abide by a ſentence according to the Law, in caſe I ſeek to be juſtified by it ; and thereby, if I plead it, I ſhall be caſt.

Add unto this (not to make a new Argument of it) that he having firſt ſaid, And be found in Chriſt, it had been utterly prepoſterous to have added after it, not having mine old Phariſaical Righteouſneſs : For his not having or renouncing that old righteouſneſs, muſt neceſſarily be ſuppoſed firſt done, ere he could be found in Chriſt. This were as abſurd as for a Wife new married to a ſecond Husband, her former Husband being dead, for her to ſay, I would be found married to my ſecond Husband, and not found married to my former Husband, when as he is ſuppoſed firſt dead ; and ſo that Marriage and Obligation utterly diſſolved, ere ſhe could be married to the new. To what purpoſe ſhould ſhe ſay, ſhe would be found married to her new Husband, and not to her old, when as he is dead, or ſhe could not ſeek to be found in the other ? This is the Apoſtles own compariſon, Rom. 7. ſpeaking of the very caſe afore us ; namely, how the Law being firſt dead, and we unto it, then it is we became married to Chriſt. I will for more plain evidence ſake ſet down the words, from ver. 1. to ver. 5. Know ye not brethren (for I ſpeak to them that know the law) how that the law hath dominion over a man as long as he liveth? For the woman that hath an husband, is bound by the law to her husband, ſo long as he liveth: But if the husband be dead, ſhe is looſed from the law of her husband. So then, if while her husband liveth, ſhe is married to another man, ſhe ſhall be called an adultereſs; but if her husband be dead, ſhe is free from that law; ſo that ſhe is no adultereſs though ſhe be married to another man. Wherefore, my brethren, ye alſo are become dead to the law by the body of Chriſt, that ye ſhould be married to another, even to him who is raiſed from the dead, that we ſhould bring forth fruit unto God.

3. A Third Evidence is from the mind, meaning, and drift of his Spirit, or the pulſe thereof, as it beats in uttering thoſe words, Not having mine own Righteouſneſs. We muſt conſider that he is not here upon a ſet delivering Doctrinal Aſſentions (though they are to be inferred thence) but upon a declaration of what was now, and had been ſince his Converſion, the continual exerciſe of his Spirit towards Chriſt, as to the point of his living on him for Juſtification through Faith in this Verſe, as in reſpect unto living on him for Sanctification, and other things in the other following Verſes. This to be his general ſcope is apparent by the particulars he purſues, and the manner of his declaring it, namely, in his own example, which he preſſeth on them after, ver. 15. and 17. Let us therefore, as many as be perfect, be thus minded: and if in any thing ye be otherwiſe minded God ſhall reveal even this unto you. Brethren, be followers together of me, and mark them which walk ſo as ye have us for an example. Now this being a daily exerciſe of his faith in living upon Chriſt for a Righteouſneſs to be Juſtified by, he doth expreſs his vehement Solicitude, and moſt earneſt heedfulneſs and warrineſs, that his Spirit ſhould be carried right, and be ſure, that he pitcht upon what was the true Righteouſneſs that God had appointed to juſtifie Men by; as being a matter of infinite moment, as his Diſcourſes in his Epiſtles to the Romans and Galatians, do ſhew, it being ſaid therein, That it is the Glory of the Goſpel to reveal that Righteouſneſs, &c. His inſerting ſo careful a renunciation Negative, [Not having] as entering a Caution about it over and above, ſhews this. And indeed to be guided unto the right truth in this point, is a matter of wonderful difficulty, and Spiritual nicety (if I may in that word expreſs it; for the thing in it ſelf is truly ſuch) Souls being apt to ſtumble at this ſtumbling ſtone, as Rom. 10. 3. And hence it is, we find him here in the practice of his Soul concerning this thing, to have been moſt wary, as to the management of his Soul about it. He had been deceived once in this point, and thought that Righteouſneſs to have been unto Life and Juſtification, which proved to be to Condemnatiou and Death, as Rom. 7. and he would not be now deceived a ſecond time. Whilſt therefore he ſayes, 1. Negatively, Not having mine own Righteouſneſs; he utters at once a great and real danger if he ſhould pitch upon what is not his true Righteouſneſs for Juſtification, and withal, a moſt perfect jealouſie and fear he had of this Righteouſneſs, leſt he ſhould be left unto it after all, as his only Righteouſneſs: But eſpecially, leſt his own Spirit ſhould in the daily exerciſes of it, be tempted unto that righteouſneſs he intends ſo, as to mind and regard it as that which looked like unto that righteouſneſs, which he deſires, now he is found in Chriſt, to be juſtified by; he ſpeaks as a Man that avoided a Serpent. Now let us but conſider, whether ſuch an exerciſe, and frame, and apprehenſion of Spirit as this, doth or might at all ſuit with the ſuppoſition of his old Phariſaical righteouſneſs, to be the object of this exerciſe of thoughts and jealouſies, &c. Or at leaſt, whether of the two, this other of his new acquired righteouſneſs of Holineſs, ſince he was found in Chriſt, doth not find more complyance and agreeableneſs to this exerciſe of his ſpecified, and ſo to be intended far rather as the ſubject thereof.

1. For

1. For us to imagine that he meant to expreſs any apprehenſion he had leſt he might be found in his own Phariſaical righteouſneſs at the latter day, and ſo in reſpect of the danger of the thing it ſelf to befal him ; this were irrational : For from whence ſhould that ariſe ? Not from any ſuſpicion he ſhould ere he dyed return unto it again, either to truſt in it for his righteouſneſs ; or that he ſhould act according to the Principles thereof again, this were to ſuppoſe he thought he might one day be tempted from Chriſt whom his Soul ſo dearly purſued after, and betake himſelf to his old courſe, and turn Phariſee again, according unto thoſe Principles he had then walk'd in ; Nor was it that he falling from Chriſt, and from what righteouſneſs he now had, ſhould have no other left for him at the latter day, but that old righteouſneſs to ſtand upon afore God at that day, for he was ſufficiently convinced that that was no righteouſneſs. It cannot then be the apprehenſion of that fate to befal him, that made him ſo ſollicitous. This is as to what may be ſuppoſed in reality. Chap. 21.

2. Nor was it a fear and jealouſie he had leſt his own Heart ſhould betray him unto a recourſe unto it for his Juſtification ; as once when he was without Chriſt he had, and lived on it. But the righteouſneſs he here ſpeaks of, was a righteouſneſs concerning which he expreſſeth a jealouſie of, leſt by having it in his eye in his daily exerciſe of Faith for Juſtification, he might derogate from that other righteouſneſs he had in his aim.

The words import an avoidance of being found to have it, ſo much as in our thoughts, to any ſuch purpoſe ; not ſo much as to caſt an eye, or look at any time upon it, as any way a righteouſneſs to be regarded, as for his Juſtification. He would not be found having it in his eye, nor the leaſt glance towards it, for any ſuch purpoſe. Much more not having any ſuch relyance in the leaſt degree upon it, not for the whole World. And he ſpeaks it not only for the preſent, but for the future all along, during the whole courſe of his following Life, and not in relation only to his being found in it at the day of Judgment. For the whole current of his ſpeech whereby he utters both this and what follows, ſhews what was the exerciſe of his Spirit, the vehement contention of his Soul which he daily acted touching his Juſtification, he therein ſpeaking it of himſelf as a practical example unto others, as was ſaid ver. 10. Alſo he utters his care, that if poſſible, God might never take him tardy in this manner in his own Righteouſneſs, not for a moment in his Life.

Now, if his not having mine own righteouſneſs, hath this reſpect in it, then for us to think and imagine, that this care and ſolicitude, and daily practice of his ſhould be ever uſed, and taken up about his old Phariſaical righteouſneſs, fearing leſt his heart ſhould ever be intangled with that any more ; this would be yet far more abſurd. What ? that Paul who had been ſo long and ſo highly acquainted with Chriſt, ſhould be afraid of his own Spirit, leſt it ſhould in the exerciſe of it be found looking any more unto that old, caſt, unrighteous (wholly unrighteous) righteouſneſs ; or to have the leaſt regard thereto ; much leſs to have a thought of any expectancy of a righteouſneſs of it, or from it, who can imagine it ? Nay, I may ſay, it were an high folly to conceive that this old righteouſneſs could have the face, or front, or appearance, to tempt his Heart in the leaſt thereunto. Certainly not ; for he had been ſo thorowly and unrecoverably convinced of the utter wickedneſs (inſtead of its being a righteouſneſs) of all thoſe who are in that condition, as he had taken a final and eternal farewel of that, whatever ſhould become of him, or whatever other righteouſneſs he might betake himſelf unto ; and that ſo fully and finally, as that never any ſuch thought ſhould ſo much as look into his Heart again ; much leſs be entertained any more.

There is no ordinary Convert, that hath been thorowly convinced of the unrighteouſneſs of his eſtate in Nature, that ever returns unto a good opinion thereof any more. The Law came, and I dyed, (ſayes our Paul of himſelf, Rom. 7.) and all his thoughts of Life by the Law, did periſh therewith ; as when a Man dyes, it is ſaid, that his thoughts periſh.

Book V.

But oppoſitely, if we take into conſideration that other inherent new-wrought Righteouſneſs of Sanctification within him and us, tho' wrought by Chriſt and by Grace, there is a real and continual likelyhood, leſt that ſhould be ever and anon offering it ſelf to our thoughts to be look'd at for our juſtifying Righteouſneſs, and ſo that interpretation thereof will well bear all this jealouſie and exerciſe of Spirit about it, as to this matter. The root of the old corruption of ſelf-confidence doth ſtill remain, when the old Righteouſneſs that formerly was the matter of that confidence, is wholly cut off, withered and dead; and ever and anon that old root will be ſprouting forth of new branches of confidence from that new Righteouſneſs; and daily temptations and puttings forth there are thereto. That ſpick and ſpan New-Creature, the Image of Adams Holineſs in his Creation, and of Chriſt the Second Adam, is alluring the eyes of the Soul unto it ſelf, to truſt in it; and becauſe it is a true Righteouſneſs before God, and accepted by him, as Acts 10. 35. But in every nation, he that feareth God and worketh righteouſneſs is accepted of him, though not for Juſtification; yet we are apt hereupon to be diverted from Chriſt and his Righteouſneſs for Juſtification, by glances at, yea, porings upon it, as our Righteouſneſs for Juſtification alſo. He that diſcerns not ſuch workings of Spirit in him, knows not his own heart; yea, and there is a prevailing of this in ſome Mens hearts who are Godly, that hath occaſioned the pleading for this new Righteouſneſs, and arguing for Juſtification by it.

There is nothing ſo Natural to us in all eſtates as this, both before we have Grace and after. Before we have Grace we truſt to Moral Righteouſneſs; ſee Rom. 10. 3 For they being ignorant of Gods righteouſneſs, and going about to eſtabliſh their own righteouſneſs, have not ſubmitted themſelves unto the righteouſneſs of God. Men do ſibi fidere, (as the Stoicks Maxime was) truſt to themſelves; and after Grace, upon the ſame Principle we are apt to truſt to our own Holineſs, even becauſe it is our own; upon which ground he here renounceth it. Men are wonderfully prone to value, or at leaſt regard it too much as a Righteouſneſs of their own. It is a ſaying which the Papiſts quarrel at Luther for, yet ſpoken by him for this reſpect now mentioned and now inſiſted on, and fetch'd out of deep experience of the haunts of his own heart, in having recourſe unto what was in himſelf; Cavendum eſt a peccatis, ſed multo magis ab operibus bonis; A Man muſt take heed of his Sins, but much more of his good Works: And the danger of the hearts ſo truſting to them (which our Apoſtle was infinitely ſenſible of) is, that in ſo doing, a Man doth derogate from what God and Chriſt are (as was ſaid) moſt tender of, and moſt jealous in. At ſo great a height do they hold up the value and the eſteem of their own juſtifying Righteouſneſs above all other things, wherein their Glory is concerned.

There was then a juſt reaſon for the Apoſtles entering his proteſtation ſo vehemently againſt this Righteouſneſs, and uttering his fear and jealouſie of his own heart about it; and lopping off continually theſe ſproutings of it, as they did ariſe. And when ever he came to exerciſe Faith about Juſtification, he had reaſon to ſpeak reſolutely, what Righteouſneſs he would have, and what not.

Only let me put in this Caution ere I conclude this: Far be it from us to underſtand his vote and deſire here, not to have a Righteouſneſs of his own of Sanctification, ſimply, or not at all; his deſire is ſufficiently ſhewn to be after that, even to a perfection of it, in ver. 12. ſuch a perfection, as if it had been poſſible, he would have attain'd that which thoſe ſhall have that are riſen from the dead; yea, and to have had his whole portion and alſotment of Holineſs, which was in Chriſts hands to beſtow, preſently beſtowed upon him; ver. 11, 12, 13. And yet whilſt he would thus have it to glorifie God and Chriſt, he would not have it as his Righteouſneſs to ſtand by for his Juſtification afore God; nor would he have his heart regard it to any ſuch purpoſe. But as ſo conſidered, he diveſts himſelf of it, and undervalues it, for that ſuperexcelling Righteouſneſs of Chriſt.

My

My Fourth and last Argument is, That this his old Phariſaical Righteouſneſs was not a Righteouſneſs, nedum Juſtitia, as Chamier and others have urged. I add this to what they urge this way, That after his being ſo enlightned and poſſeſſed againſt his old Righteouſneſs, and ſeeking to be found in Chriſt, he would not, at any hand have ſtyled that as a Righteouſneſs, nor give it the Honour to Name it ſuch, but the perfect contrary, even utter Wickedneſs and Sinfulneſs. Would he call (think we) his perſecuting the Church, though out of Zeal to the Law,) whereof at ver. 6. he had ſpoken) and which in his Phariſaiſme he eſteemed as a part, yea, the eminent Top and Crown of his Legal Righteouſneſs when he did it out of Zeal for the Law; Would he now call this a Righteouſneſs of the Law upon any account whatſoever? The Iſſue and upſhot of which Zeal was to leave upon him, the ſtyle of his having been the chiefeſt of Sinners, 1 Tim. 1. 15. And would he honour this with the Denomination of a Righteouſneſs? 'Tis true indeed, that of that other part, (the beſt part) of his Deportment in Conformity to the outward Letter of the Commands (the oldneſs of the Letter, as elſewhere he ſleights it) He thus ſpeaks in the ſame ver. 6. That touching the Righteouſneſs which is in the Law he was blameleſs, yet he minceth it you ſee. He durſt not now ſay, he was Righteous according unto it, in the leaſt degree, but only blameleſs; that is, he had an outward Converſation as might obtain the Name of blameleſs as afore Men, that were not able to charge him with the breach of it in an outward groſs Act: But this was far from that Righteouſneſs which the Law commands, by the Righteouſneſs of which, he aimed to be Righteous; but himſelf confeſſeth, he was but blameleſs afore Men, at beſt. But now, the Righteouſneſs he had of Sanctification ſince he was Converted, had a true, real, inward Conformity to the Spirit of the Law in the inward Man; and ſo a Righteouſneſs (though imperfect) anſwering to the Spiritual part of the Law, (the newneſs of the Spirit, as Rom. 7. 6.) as well as the outward, He was now a Jew inwardly, and not in the Letter, whoſe praiſe is not of men, but of God; Rom. 2. 29. and ſo had now, and never till now a true Righteouſneſs of the Law inherent to renounce for Chriſt, but now he had: For in this reſpect, he that doth righteouſneſs is righteous; 1 John 3. 7. In that former ſtate, he was in a true ſenſe, without the law, Rom. 7. 9. that is without the true Spiritual Light of the Law; and therefore much more was he then without any true Righteouſneſs of the Laws in the leaſt degree. It was then neither a Righteouſneſs, nor of the Law; and therefore, if we conſider but the thing it ſelf, that which he calls his own Righteouſneſs, muſt be that ſince his Converſion.

Tous Biſhop Downham urgeth it.

But you will ſay, He ſpeaks thus of it, according to the Opinion himſelf had of it whilſt a Phariſee; then he did within himſelf verily think it to be a true Righteouſneſs, and it was eſteemed ſuch by others, and therefore he ſpeaks of it at that rate here, as often in Scripture we find things ſpoken of according to the opinion Men have of a thing; and ſo, that on this account it ſhould be, that he ſtyles the Righteouſneſs of the Carnal Jews, their own Righteouſneſs, Rom. 10. 3.

The Reply is (and it ſtrengthens the Argument) that you muſt conſider the Time and Seaſon wherein he ſpake it, and ſo ſpake it according to his own opinion of himſelf at that Seaſon: 'Tis at the preſent time; Now, many years after his Converſion, he ſaies it, as in ver. 8. he had indigitated: [I do, and I do at preſent] and the ſeaſon was, when the darkneſs was now paſt, 1 John 2. 8. and the true light had now ſhined. And therefore he now ſpeaks of things as they were in reality; the Commandment came, and ſo I having the true light of it, I dyed, ſaith he, Rom. 7. 9. to all that which I eſteemed to be Righteouſneſs, and for Life afore: And I am in ſo deep a Conviction of it, as never after will I call it Righteouſneſs any more. And therefore looking now upon it with the ſame eyes, now when he uttered this, that he did then at his Converſion, he would not deign it the Name of Righteouſneſs, not now at laſt, who at beſt had entitled it but blameleſsneſs,

neſs, even juſt now afore, but would rather affirm no Righteouſneſs to be at all in it.

And though ſpeaking according to the Opinion that others had or might have of themſelves, he terms theirs their own Righteouſneſs, when yet they never had any ; yet here ſpeaking of himſelf, in his own preſent Caſe, and of his Righteouſneſs at a Seaſon when indeed he had both a new Righteouſneſs of his own, truely ſuch, and having had it long, and alſo new Eyes to behold things with, and was able to Judge Righteous Judgment of things as they were ; ſhould he now be thought to ſpeak at ſuch a rate, and call that a Righteouſneſs which he afore never truely had, but in a falſe Opinion of it? What ſhould he now expreſs his old Opinion of it, and mean that, rather than that which is in it ſelf a true Righteouſneſs, and which to be ſure, he had now in truth ; This namely of Sanctification, conformable unto the Law, as it is a Rule of Holyneſs? Who can think thus of the Apoſtle?

When thoſe that were Saints already converted ſpeak of themſelves, and of their Righteouſneſs, renouncing it as to their Juſtification, as the Apoſtle doth here, Iſa. 64. 6. they ſpeak there of it in this manner, But we are all as an unclean thing, and all our righteouſneſſes are as filthy rags: And Dan. 9. 18 We do not preſent our ſupplications afore thee for our righteouſneſſes, but for thy great mercies. Can we think that theſe meant other than the Righteouſneſs of true Sanctification they had (though defiled with Sin! yes certainly, of their new Nature as the beſt thing they had ſince their Regeneration; and ſo is this Speech of our Apoſtle here to be parallel'd and underſtood.

The next Inquiſition is, Whether the new inherent Righteouſneſs of a Believer may be tearmed a Mans own Righteouſneſs?

The ground of the Objection made by thoſe that would have the Old Phariſaical Righteouſneſs only to be ſo underſtood, is this, that they do diſtinguiſh and ſay, That that only is properly a Mans own Righteouſneſs, and of the Law, which is done by the ſtrength of thoſe Principles a Man had in Nature, and the force of that Light and Motives or Provocations of the Law, either that of Nature, or the Moral Law; and ſo may truely and properly be termed our own : But that which is after Converſion, that is not to be call'd ours, becauſe wrought by the help of Grace, and is called Gods Righteouſneſs, in that reſpect. And this Objection may be edged with this, That when the Legal Righteouſneſs of Unregenerate Men is ſpoken of, there indeed it is called a Mans own Righteouſneſs; as of the Jews, Rom. 10. 3. For, they being ignorant of Gods righteouſneſs, and going about to eſtabliſh their own righteouſneſs, have not ſubmitted themſelves unto the Righteouſneſs of God.

The Anſwer or Reply is, That Inherent Righteouſneſs after Converſion is ſtyled frequently in Scripture ours, or our own; and the very Principles and Habits of Graces, though infuſed by God; yet becauſe we are the Subjects in whom they are wrought, and into whom they are infuſed; they are therefore truely ſtyled ours. Nay, nothing is more ours, ſaies Zanchy on the place, inſomuch as it is ſaid, not only that they are wrought in us, but that we our ſelves are the workmanſhip that is new created, when theſe Inherent Graces are wrought, Eph. 2. 10. When Adam was created of God, and all his Graces with him: I hope it may be ſaid, his Vertues were his own. And thus, the Principles or Habits, wherein we are Paſſive are yet ſtyled ours. Then the Actions, Works and Operations which flow from thence, are much more ours; for therein we actively concur with God, and they are our Actions and Works, flowing from the Vital Principles of Habitual Graces and Mans Will, &c. which are in our ſelves, and indeed our ſelves: God gives indeed, that we may will, and gives us to will, but ſtill it is we that will. There is nothing more the gift of God than Faith, Eph. 2. 8. yet that faith given us is reckoned (I trowe) Our Faith: Chriſt terms it their Faith,

Nihil magis noſtrum quàm quod eſt infuſum a Deo Zanch. in verba

Faith, Matth. 9. 2. and thy Faith, ver. 22. and your Faith is ſpoken of in all the World, Rom. 1. 8. Chap. 21.

Thus all other Graces and the Workings of them are called ours: From Me is thy fruit found, Hoſ. 14. 8. From God as the Efficient, and yet thine as the Subject. The Prayers we make, although one exerciſe, we perform, is more the work of the Holy Ghoſt in us, Rom. 8. 26, 27. yet it is ſaid, They are our Prayers, and not the Holy Ghoſts Prayers, or that they are his Prayers.

3. We may conſider, That it is ſo called in oppoſition to that Righteouſneſs that is anothers, which is ours no otherwiſe, then as imputed to us; It is not inherent in us.

Now if you will further ſee the ground the Scripture gives, Why the Righteouſneſs that is thus ours, though by Grace, is excluded from juſtifying of us, it is even becauſe it is ours; Subjectivè, or Subjectively, although wrought by the Grace of God efficiently. And by the way it is ſtrange, that thoſe Men that make good Works to depend more, (or as much at leaſt) on the Will of Man, than on the Grace of God, in Gods co-working with Man, and whilſt they are diſcourſing upon that head, do derogate from that Grace ſo much, that yet they ſhould, when they treat of the point of Juſtification, then magnifie theſe Works by this, That they are the Effects of the Grace of God, and not our own, ſo to prefer them to the dignity of Juſtifying of us, Detracting from the Grace of God in both; whilſt we that aſcribe ſo much to the Grace of God in the working of Grace in us, further than they, even to his working the Will and the Deed, ſhould yet contend that theſe Works of Grace are excluded notwithſtanding from all, or any ingrediency into our Juſtification, becauſe they yet may be truly termed our Works, and our Righteouſneſs, comparatively, unto a more Divine, Glorious Righteouſneſs, which is anothers, which is ſtyled here, The Righteouſneſs of God, as wholly his, abſtracted from any thing that is of his Work that is in us, and in full oppoſition to this other of ours. Rom. 4. 2. For if Abraham was juſtified by works, he hath whereof to glory, but not before God. And the inſtance from his Example is ſuch as is invincible; for he ſpeaks not of Abrahams Works afore his Converſion, when in Chaldea, and an Idolater, and ſo to exclude boaſting therein, but (when in medio pietatis curſu,) when he was in the midſt, and in an high courſe and progreſs of Holyneſs, many years after his Converſion, and to that time that Speech of his being juſtified, (which follows) doth evidently refer, ver. 3. But what ſaith the Scripture? Abraham believed God, and it was counted to him for Righteouſneſs. For if any one in reaſoning will fetch a Maxim or Rule, out of an inſtance, that inſtance or example, muſt extend and be proportioned to that Rule; and that Rule or Maxime alſo muſt ſuit and agree with what the inſtance alleadged, moſt properly concerns, and is extended unto. Now, the Apoſtles Maxime afore had been, Rom. 3. That God is ſo, or in ſuch a manner a Juſtifier, ver. 26. as to exclude boaſting by Works, ver. 27, 28. Where is boaſting then? It is excluded, by what law? Of works? Nay; but by the law of faith. Therefore we conclude, That a man is juſtified by faith, without the deeds of the law. And for the proof of what Works that Maxime reacheth or is extended unto, he brings Abraham his being juſtified Faith without Works, even then when he had done and wrought ſo many Holy works after Converſion: Thus in this ſucceeding Chap. 4. at the beginning. Therefore neceſſarily muſt this Maxime extend to thoſe and ſuch Works of Abraham, as were after Converſion in a ſpecial manner; and from that inſtance of Abraham, it muſt be intended as a general Rule to all Believers, and to exclude all Mens Works, though never ſo Holy, as well as his: Yea, if we examine it, that is the very Ground and Reaſon why thoſe Works are alſo excluded, as well as thoſe afore; and it will prove to be even this in my

The ſincerity of [your] Love ſayes the Apoſtle, 2 Cor. 8. 8. which is called theirs; becauſe though wrought by God, chap. 9. laſt, which he thanks God for, as an unſpeakable gift, yet was wrought and ſubjected in their Wills, as Verſe 10. of the 8. my Text, that they are our own, though wrought by the Grace of God: Then which, nothing is more point blank againſt their Aſſertion and Evaſion: The Ground or Reaſon whereupon, his and all the Saints Works after Converſion, are excluded from any influence into juſtifying us, is, That boaſting be excluded.

And if it be further demanded, wherein ſhould the danger of boaſting lye, if we were juſtified by ſuch good and holy Works after Converſion: This is reduced to no other but the very ſame in my Text, that a Man might ſay, They were his ſubjective, and that they are Acts of his Will, and a Righteouſneſs of a Mans own, although efficiently wrought by God.

The other inſtance for this is Eph. 2. 8, 9, 10. For by grace ye are ſaved through faith, and that not of your ſelves: it is the gift of God: Not of works, leſt any man ſhould boaſt. For we are his workmanſhip created in Chriſt Jeſus unto good works, which God hath before ordained, that we ſhould walk in them. Where, Obſerve,

1. That therefore VVorks are excluded, and Faith only admitted, upon this account, To exclude boaſting, conſonant unto Rom. 3. 27, and 28. Where is boaſting then? It is excluded. By what Law? Of Works? Nay; but by the Law of Faith. Therefore we conclude, That a Man is juſtified by Faith, without the Works of the Law.

2. That yet, theſe that are excluded are ſuch good VVorks, and Holy Principles of Grace, together with their VVorks, as are wrought in Chriſt, and by the Grace of God, (which is full to the point now in hand) for ver. 10. he ſaies, For we are his workmanſhip, created in Chriſt Jeſus unto good works, which God hath before ordained that we ſhould walk in them. Here, both the Principles are ſaid to be of God, we are a new workmanſhip created in Chriſt to good works, and alſo the works themſelves are ſaid to be from God in thoſe words, which God hath prepared, that we ſhould walk in them. He hath prepared them, and prepared us in that he formed and faſhion'd us anew, and hath ordained thoſe VVorks alſo, but ſtill not to give us the right of Salvation by them; but, for that he hath ordained Faith (that wholly aſcribes all to his Grace and to Chriſt) to do that; ſo as 'tis all one with him to ſay (as here he doth) Yee are ſaved by Grace, and ſaved by Faith, but Holyneſs and VVorks, and the New Creature he hath ordained only to be the way to the poſſeſſion of that Salvation, which Grace through Faith doth Intereſt us into; ſo there 'tis ſaid, That we ſhould walk in them. And theſe good VVorks and Holy Principles, are alſo but a part of that Salvation given us.

3. And chiefly, Obſerve, How he gives this as the very reaſon, VVhy their VVorks are excluded; becauſe, although wrought every way, by this Grace, (yet, becauſe, (as is manifeſted) we are the Subject of them. We are his workmanſhip, and that we ſhould walk in them: This [we] ſpoils all as to Juſtification and Salvation; for there would ariſe ſuch a boaſting as God could not bear, if we were ſaved by them: That is, ſo as to obtain right of Salvation thereby.

Yea, (which I moſt of all obſerve, this is the contrary unto what our bold Aſſertors do argue) whereas they ſay, that becauſe they are of Grace, therefore they may juſtifie without prejudice to Grace.

4. The Apoſtle carries that very thing as the reaſon to the contrary, and to exclude all inherent Holyneſs after Converſion, ver. 10. as well as afore, even for this reaſon, becauſe they are the effects of a New Creation, and ſo given upon a ſupernatural Account of meer Grace, and anew beſtowed by Grace, after the great forfeiture of the firſt Creation Holyneſs, and due to Mans Nature then, if God meant to have Created Man at all. VVhich Holyneſs ſo beſtowed, and upon that account did then juſtifie Man, and was ſo ſo appointed to do, as the Phraſe Rom. 4. 4. ſpoken of the Covenant of Works; is; which yet I would rather tranſlate Dueneſs than Debt. But that Priviledge works had by the Law of Creation was utterly forfeited by Sin, and God layd his hand upon the forfeiture and took it, and took Juſtification into his own hands, as that it ſhould never be ſo more. But, if he juſtified a ſecond time, it ſhould be every way by Grace, ſo and in ſuch a manner, as not at all by works of what kind ſoever. VVhich account is given in the inſtance of Abraham in that Rom. 4. and more fully, Rom. 11. 5. and is therefore call'd Gods righteouſneſs ſuper-Creation, ſupernatural righteouſneſs, ſo that this Maxime ariſeth invincibly out of this place, Epheſ. 2. That the borrowed and reſtored Grace of Holyneſs ſince the fall ſhall never juſtifie; but theſe works upon Converſion are ſuch; read ver. 10. For we are his workmanſhip, created in Chriſt Jeſus unto good works, which God hath before ordained that we ſhould walk in them. Chap. 21.

God was infinitely tender of his Glory in point of Juſtification above all other of the parts and pieces of the application of Salvation unto us, and ſo to preſerve the Glory of it to himſelf, and as that it ſhould be his righteouſneſs alone, and his Son Chriſts; for in other reſpects and to other ends, he admits VVorks to have ſome ſhare, notwithſtanding they be ours. Thus when we ſhall come to poſſeſs Heaven and that Degree and Meaſure of Glory allotted us, it will be ſaid, that God rewards us ſecundum opera, according to works, though not propter, or for Works. So far good Works are admitted, and yet the Saints are therein kept from boaſting, becauſe the Fundamental Original Right, and great Charter unto Salvation, is paſt afore, and given upon another Accompt, and in point of Juſtification, and our Right to Heaven, God is ſo tender and Jealous, as he utterly and altogether excludes Works, for giving a Right thereunto in the leaſt: 'Tis the Apoſtles words, Rom. 3. 27. He will have nothing to do with them, when it comes to that Action of his, he hath not, nor will ever have any regard to them therein: Nor ſhould he, and therefore the Apoſtle had no eye to them here: But it is Gods Righteouſneſs; wholly Gods, and no way, or in no reſpect ours, but meerly receiving it; which is here ſet as the oppoſite to Paul's My Righteouſneſs in the Text.

Book V.

CHAP. XXII.

That God Appointed Christ to be the Great Shepherd, to take care of the Elect Souls given to him. The mighty care and diligence which Christ exercises in discharge of this Office.

HEBREWS xiii. 20, 21.

Now the God of Peace that brought again from the dead our Lord Jesus, that great Shepherd of the Sheep, through the blood of the everlasting Covenant,

Make you perfect in every good work to do his Will, working in you that which is well-pleasing in his sight, through Jesus Christ; to whom be Glory for ever and ever. Amen.

THE Reason of the pertinent coherence of one thing with another in a parcel of Scripture is often at first view not obvious, as here why Christ as Shepherd, and then his Resurrection, are expressed under these Phrases of being brought again from the dead, and that by the Blood of the Everlasting Covenant: How these should suit at first view is strange: And yet there is a great Harmony in the joynting every one of these one with another. Therefore for the opening the words, I shall do three things.

1. Shew their Aspect or Reference to what went afore.
2. Shew why he brings in this Title of Shepherd in this Epistle.
3. Shew their Correspondency among themselves and pertinency of each to each; Together with each particular.
4. Shew their Reference to the Prophecies of the Old Testament.

1. As to their Reference to what went afore, we may consider them
1. In their immediate Reference to what went just afore.
2. Remotely to some Principal Matters in this Epistle.

1. As they refer immediately to ver. 17, 18.

1. Where he had made mention of himself a Pastor over Pastors and Churches, an Apostle and other their ordinary Pastors, and from thence suitably upon this next occasion of mentioning Christ, he speaks of him as the Great Shepherd over Apostles and all, and as one that could do that for them which no Apostle or Pastor could do, viz. To perfect them in every good work; None of them were sufficient for one good thought of themselves, 2 Cor. 4. much less for any good work, or for every good work, especially to perfect others whom they were set over in the Lord, which Christ their Shepherd could through their Ministry, and therefore addresseth his Prayer for this to God through him.

2. Himself (who was a great Instrument through Christ of good unto their Souls) was now absent and far off from them. The last foregoing words were that they would pray he might be restored to them the sooner; and here here he chooseth forth such expressions about Christ, &c. as might prompt them with fit matter, or the most effectual Arguments for that request, and an help unto their Faith in that particular: Though this is done obliquely; the matter here more directly serving unto that other Petition that follows. But this Argument lies in this, That that God who had brought back the Great Shepherd by his Blood, &c. That the same God (who only could) would restore him to them out of all Dangers, &c. through the same Blood. Chap. 22.

Observ. 1. Jesus Christ bears and bore the same Offices wherein after he plates his Officers under him in the Church; thereby sanctifying of all Offices and Officers, which is a great Comfort to Church-Officers, and to the People of God and Churches. He hath the Title of Διάκονος, Minister and Deacon of the Circumcision, Rom. 15. 8. and Matth. 20. 28. and Mark 10. 45. Luke 22. 27. Bishop or Elder, 1 Pet. 2. 25. A Shepherd or Pastor, 1 Pet. 5. 1, 4, 5. An Apostle, Heb. 3. 1. Only with this difference he the great Shepherd, he the Chief Bishop, &c.

Observ. 2. The Blood and Resurrection of Christ as of the Great Shepherd, do in their Vertue bring Ministers that have a good Conscience, and their People together again: God restores them when driven away and scattered; fetcheth them out of Prison, from silence, &c. Yea, out of Deaths and Dangers, and brings them and their People together through the Efficacy of these, 2 Cor. 4. 11, 14. There is not a Church-Meeting we have, but it is in the Vertue of Christs Blood and Resurrection.

2. The words are a Prayer in the Conclusion of this Epistle, and the Materials of it do refer to some Principal Matters treated of in this Epistle, whereof the summ is gathered up into a Prayer as the Conclusion.

1. In this Epistle the Apostle affects to set forth Christ under several Titles, which the Old Testament had given him, and which had been taken for granted to be intended of the Messiah by the Jews themselves he wrote to. As,

1. A Captain of Salvation, chap. 2. As the Angel that appeared to Joshua, styles himself, Josh. 5. 14, 15.

2. The Apostle, chap. 3. or him whom God would send as the Prophet like to Moses. chap. 3. 1, 2, and so on.

3. The Great High Priest, chap. 4. and so throughout this Epistle.

4. And accordingly here at last in this Prayer he attributes to him another Title of Shepherd, as famous in the Prophecies as any which includes all of his Offices, as I shall shew.

5. Under whom these Jews were become as Sheep: One Shepherd and one Sheep-fold. And all both Jews and Gentiles who are under him called unto Peace and Unity by the God of Peace.

6. He had treated also of that New Covenant, chap. 7, 8, 9, &c. Whereof Christ was the Founder.

7. Of that Blood of his which had confirmed that Covenant, chap. 9. throughout.

8. Of the Vertue of that one Offering, Potent and Effectual to perfect for ever them that his Blood sanctifies, Heb. 10. even to a Non-Remembrance of Sins for ever, and procuring God to be at peace for ever, I will remember them no more.

9. of Gods raising him up to sit down at Gods right hand, having purged away our Sins, so chap. 1. and chap. 8.

10. He had treated of the Everlastingness of this Salvation and Covenant and Redemption.

11. And as all along and specially towards the Conclusion of the Epistle, having Exhorted to many good Works and Duties thereupon he shuts up all with this Prayer, the Summ of all these, containing a Motive and Perswasive in them with God a most Efficacious one to move him to grant Power to enable them to do all those things which he had exhorted unto, and such as had themselves withal in them the most Operative Vertue perfectly to work the same in us, Namely, his Blood and Resurrection. And, That God (prays he)

he) through these make you perfect in every good work to do his will, working in you that which is well-pleasing in his sight, through Jesus Christ, to whom be Glory for ever and ever, Amen.

Observe a great Ground for Ministers to gather up in their after-Prayers the strength of what hath been said in the Sermon; which the Antients styled a Collect, as in the Common-Prayer appears to this day in making a brief Collect of what had been just afore read out of the Scriptures, and forming them up into a short Prayer.

Why is it the Apostle should insert this Title of Shepherd and Great Shepherd in this Epistle?

Answ. The pertinency of his doing so in writing to the Hebrews doth many wayes appear. The Jews expected the Messiah to be as a Shepherd to them, as David their King, and Moses had been, who were Types of him. Moses and Aaron, Psal. 77. 20. led the People as Sheep. David, Psal. 78. 22. and under the Name of David as a Shepherd God had promised the Messiah to them, Ezek. 34. 23. And I will set up one Shepherd over them, and he shall feed them, even my servant David, he shall feed them, and he shall be their Shepherd: And Christ himself when he came, had represented himself to them under that notion, John 10. throughout that Chapter.

Now those Prophecies giving Him that Title, it was meet the Apostle should somewhere in this Epistle refer unto this being as great, and the Prophecy thereof as eminent as of any other: He in this Epistle citeth, and it is his apparent design throughout the Epistle to refer unto and quote out of the Old Testament what was most eminent in Christ either about his Titles or Offices, onely he chose to do this of his being a Shepherd here last in a breviary by way of prayer.

That he hath such an eye and scope in this is evident by comparing the passages here and those Propheſies together.

I shall but single forth that one Place, Ezek. 34. and compare it with what is spoken here.

1. There, God promiseth to make a Covenant of Peace with his People by Christ as a Shepherd; so ver. 25, And here, you have 1. God in relation to this performance styled The God of Peace. 2. The Covenant also mentioned.

2. There, he promiseth to set up over them this Shepherd, ver. 23. Here, The God of Peace brings back this Shepherd, or as Capellus reads it, brings up ἀναγαγὼν from ἀναγω rursum revocare, For it may be ανα and ανω both, and so to bring back, up, or to set up, as the word in Ezekiel is.

3. There he styles him that [one Shepherd,] ver. 23. which is in the import of it all one, as to say, The great Shepherd; τὸν μέγαν, saies the Apostle here, as pointing to that one only Shepherd; in the Prophet Unicus or the Onely; as of the Church, Cant. 6. 9. My Dove, my Undefiled, is but One, she is the only one of her Mother, she is the choice one of her that bore her: As Christ also saies of himself, I am that good Shepherd, and I alone: For he adds all Shepherds else are but Hirelings, John 10.

4. There, in Ezekiel he is called a Prince, here the Lord.

But the Jews little imagined what manner a shepherd he should be, and in what strange manner set up to be so. They indeed dreamed chiefly and most of them, him only to have been so entitled in relation unto such Deliverances outward as Moses had given them, and a prosperous State, such as David had set up and Solomon taking the Covenant of Peace for that of outward prosperity: They little thought this Shepherd must be consecrated, and made such by his own blood. Hence therefore,

3. The Apostle points them here, unto those other Prophecies of him, which punctually had described him to be such a Shepherd as he here speaks of him, and how that that Covenant of Peace propheſied of by Ezekiel, of him was to be made by his Blood, and that it was a peace for their Souls, and he a Shepherd thereof, and for the doing away of their Sins, and ruling and strengthning them to every good work, wherein principally this his Office of Shepherd was seen.

The

The first of the Prophesies which under this Relation he refers unto, is, that in Isa. 53. 6. All we like sheep have gone astray, we have turned every one to his own way, and the Lord hath laid on him the iniquity of us all. And therefore withal he there propheſies that he that was to be theirs, and our Shepherd was himself to be brought first as a Lamb to the slaughter, &c. ver. 7. And here his being brought again back imports his having been first led away to Death; hence from that of Isay it appears, That he who was their Shepherd, was first to be as a Lamb offered up; and to give his Life for his Sheep, as John 10. 11. himself saies, I am the good Shepherd. The good Shepherd giveth his Life for his Sheep: Even that Lamb of God; John pointed to, and Peter, 1 Epist. chap. 1. 19. But ye are redeemed with the pretious Blood of Christ as of a Lamb without blemish, and without spot; and the Lambs Blood in the Revelations often; of whom, and of which Sacrifice all their Sacrifices were Types. It is highly observable, that the Gate through which he was led to be Crucified was tearmed the Sheep-gate; for the Sheep that were to be sacrificed were kept in Meadows without that Gate, and so were led as he was to be Sacrificed, but they in the Temple; all which Sheep and Sacrifices and Temple were Types of him and his Sacrifice; as in the same Isa. 53. 10. The Apostle had even now said, Christ suffered without the Gate in Mount-Golgotha into which he was led, as the other Sheep were through that Gate to the Slaughter, as it is also expounded and applyed by Philip, Acts 8. 32. He was led as a sheep to the slaughter, and like a lamb dumb before the Shearer, so opened he not his mouth. It is also as evidently by Peter applyed to him; for having in his 1. chap. ver. 22. tearmed him the Lamb without spot, by whose Blood we are redeemed, in the 2. chap. ver. 24, 25. he cites some of those passages out of Isaiah of him, by whose stripes we are healed, and what we were referring us unto the rest, We like sheep had gone astray, and God laid on him the iniquities of us all; which he interprets in ver. 24. Who his own self bare our sins in his own body on the tree, that we being dead to sin, should live unto righteousness, by whose stripes ye were healed; And that this he did for us as our Shepherd that was to lay down his Life; as so as a Sheep be led unto the slaughter for us his Sheep who had gone astray: This ver. 25. of that 2. chap. explains to us; For ye were as Sheep going astray, but are now returned unto the Shepherd and Bishop of your souls: And again look as Isaiah saies, That as a Sheep afore the shearer he opened not his mouth, Isa. 53. 7. So Peter hath it, ver. 22, 23. Who did no sin, neither was guile found in his mouth; who when he was reviled, reviled not again; when he suffered, he threatned not, but committed himself to him that judgeth righteously; thus manifestly expounding and applying that 53. of Isaiah unto him, both as a Lamb in his Death as he was a Shepherd in his Resurrection.

And considered either as Lamb or Shepherd, we find that God being angry with him whilst thus he bore our Sins, insomuch as he is said in his Wrath to have smitten this Shepherd with his Sword, and smitten him unto Death, Zech. 13. 7. Awake, O Sword, against my Shepherd, and against the Man that is my fellow, saith the Lord of Hosts: Smite the Shepherd, and the Sheep shall be scattered: And that is another Propheſie the Apostle here looks in, and refers unto: And thus God was first a God of Wrath against him for our sakes, God having laid upon him the Iniquities of us all, and remained such against him until Justice had satisfied it self thereby, The chastisement of our Peace lay upon him, or Chastisement for our Peace, Isa. 53. 5. and dye he did for these Sheep.

3. Because he was led thus as a Sheep unto Death, by which his Dying is expressed by the Prophet, therefore most pertinently of all other Expressions he singles forth this, That he was brought back again from the dead here, so setting forth his Resurrection, and his being set up a Shepherd over us: He was slain without the Gate, and his Dead Body was laid without the Gate, buried in a Tomb there without the Gate, but God brought him back again from the Dead, and he came into Jerusalem among his Disciples, and elsewhere, and then was also carryed ἀνω up to Heaven, as the word also signifies.

And

Book V.

And that this Phraſe here of being brought back from the dead, thereby expreſſing his Reſurrection ſhould yet couch under it, and implyedly point unto that manner of his dying, of being led unto ſlaughter may elegantly be exemplifyed by the like parallel in the like oppoſite way, and ordine inverſo, in that of our Converſion to Chriſt (in which we are conformed to his Death and Reſurrection.) Now this our Converſion to Chriſt Peter tearmeth, A returning to the Shepherd of our Souls: From whom was it that Peter fetcht this Expreſſion? Even out of that contrary Phraſe which I ſay had uſed to expreſs our State afore Converſion, and much as we like Sheep had gone aſtray, and turned every one to his own way: This is Iſaiahs Expreſſion only, but the Apoſtle on the contrary, and in alluſion to this as fitly ſets out our Repentance, But are now returned to the Shepherd of our ſouls: ver. 25. which had imported our having turned away from him, and ſo Converſion is a returning to him. And,

4. Becauſe by his Death he made our Peace, Iſa. 53. 5. The chaſtiſement of our Peace was upon him; and by his Blood made that peace for us, as Col. 1. 20. Hence God that was wroth with him then, when he was led to Death, and himſelf ſmote him, (which Phraſe is uſed in Iſa. 53. 4. as well as by Zachary, and interpreted to be Gods bruiſing him himſelf, ver. 10.) is now upon a new Style (when he brings him back) enſtyled The God of Peace, and that both towards him and us, Eph. 2. 14. He is our Peace by dying, That he might reconcile both unto God in one Body by the Croſs, having ſlain the Enmity thereby, ver. 16. God's Juſtice being ſatisfied, his Anger aſſwaged, and now he raiſeth up Chriſt as a God of Peace, and thereupon both juſtifieth us and him; and in token he was at Peace, he let our Surety thus out of Priſon: 'Tis in the ſame 53. of Iſa. 8. He was taken from Priſon and from Judgment; the Suit was ended. I quote ſtill ſuch places, wherein his dying as a Lamb, &c. are mentioned, and for us as Sheep. And,

5. Becauſe this was done by a Covenant betwixt God and him; therefore here that Covenant is alſo mentioned, as it is alſo in the Propheſie wherein firſt his being ſet up as a Shepherd is ſpoken of, Ezek. 34. 23, 24, 25. it is ſaid to be by and with a Covenant of peace, ver. 25.

6. Yea and in Ezek. 37. having at ver. 24. promiſed to give them this one Shepherd; he adds ver. 26. I will make a Covenant of peace, and it ſhall be an everlaſting Covenant; even as in expreſs words here it is ſtyled, The Everlaſting Covenant, when he ſpeaks of him as of our Shepherd; and this theſe other Propheſies alluded unto alſo.

7. Here it is ſaid, The blood of the Everlaſting Covenant; even as that by which Chriſt himſelf was raiſed up, &c. For by his Blood, and the Merit of it, it was that himſelf was raiſed up after that our peace had been fully made up by him, John 10. 16, 17 Other ſheep I have which are not of this fold; them alſo I muſt bring, and they ſhall hear my voice, and there ſhall be one fold and one Shepherd. ver. 17. Therefore doth my Father love me, becauſe I lay down my life that I might take it again. Yea, his Mediatory Glory he did purchaſe over all anew, and ſo his Reſurrection by his Death; though not his Perſonal. Rom. 14. 9. To this end Chriſt both died and roſe and revived that he might be Lord both of the Dead and Living. Phil. 2. 8, 9. And being found in faſhion as a man, he humbled himſelf, and became obedient unto death, the death of the Croſs. ver. 9. Wherefore God alſo hath highly exalted him, and given him a Name which is above every Name: All which was by Covenant between God and him; as in that 53. Iſa. Becauſe he made his Soul an offering for Sin, God promiſeth to raiſe him up, and he ſhould ſee the travel of his ſoul, &c. And,

8. In uſing this Phraſe, By the Blood, &c. The Apoſtle refers us to another paſſage in the Propheſie of the ſame Zachary 9. 11. And God makes Chriſt this promiſe, By the Blood of thy Covenant: (He ſpeaks to Chriſt) I have ſent forth thy Priſoners out of the pitt. Zachary ſpeaks much of this Shepherd, and thoſe falſe Shepherds that ſhould then be when he ſhould come amongſt them, in ſeveral places of the ſame Prophet; and in this 9. Chap. he ſpeaks of the Flock of his People ver. 16. and the meaning of that Speech, that by and for the merit of his Blood it is that he gives forth all deliverances to his People from all evils, as from the Grave and Hell, and by merit of the Blood of the ſame Covenant which they were delivered by, it was that Chriſt himſelf was; and whereby God brought Chriſt back again from the Grave and Hell; and becauſe it was not done ſimply by meer Contract and Covenant, but alſo by Merit; therefore 'tis not ſaid only here that by his Covenant he was brought back, but by the Blood of his Covenant he was brought back. Chap. 22.

And ſtill you ſee (and it is to be obſerved) that all theſe Propheſies of him were uttered when either he is propheſied of: As, 1. A Lamb ſlain: Or, 2. As a Shepherd for his Sheep: Or, 3. As a Shepherd ſet over his Sheep; all which doth the Apoſtle contract and gather together into one ſum in theſe few words.

9. Becauſe God as the God of peace ſanctifies us throughout; 1 Theſſ. 5. 23. And the very God of peace ſanctifie you wholly, &c. and ſanctifies us by Covenant through Chriſt his Blood, and the vertue thereof, as alſo through his being raiſed from the dead. Hence in the force and influence of all theſe he here prays; ver. 21. Make you perfect in every good work to do his will, working in you that which is well pleaſing in his ſight, through Jeſus Chriſt, &c. Becauſe Chriſt had by his Blood, and once offering of himſelf, perfected for ever them that are ſanctified, as Heb 10. it is ſaid.

10. And Laſtly, That Chriſt was propoſed to be ſuch a Shepherd as ſhould perfect his Sheep in Holineſs, and good Works, and that Gods Covenant was with him is as expreſs in that Ezek. 37. 24. And David my ſervant ſhall be King over them; and they all ſhall have one ſhepherd, they ſhall alſo walk in my judgments, &c.

Thus you have ſeen that the words are a contract or ſumme both of this Epiſtle and the Propheſies; and having been thus opened in their Correſpondencies one with another, as alſo with the Propheſies; I ſingle out but one Obſervation.

Obſerv. Chriſt is a Shepherd, a great Shepherd; that great Shepherd mentioned by the Prophets. All thoſe Patriarchs that were Shepherds were Types of him: Abel (whoſe Blood in crying is made a Type of his, Chap. 12. 24.) was a Shepherd, and a Type of him: And as in Abel, Blood and Shepherd met, ſo in Chriſt here, a great Shepherd and his Blood are joyned. Moſes a Shepherd and a Type of Chriſt; A Prophet like to him; who with Aaron, led the people as ſheep, Pſal. 77. 20. David a Shepherd, who as a King, guided the people by the skilfulneſs of his hands, Pſal. 78. 72. and therefore their Shepherd is named by his name, Ezek. 34. 23. A teſtimony we have recorded of the Devils themſelves (as in the Scripture, That he was the Son of God, The Holy One of God; ſo in Heathen Story) that he was that Great Shepherd. Plutarch endeavouring to give a Reaſon why their Oracles ceaſed, ſayes, "That one Thamus a Shipmaſter, who Sailing, was warned by a voice "that when he came right over againſt Palodes, (in his Voyage to Italy) "he ſhould cry aloud, Magnus Pan mortuus eſt; which having done, there "was heard by all the Mariners, a lamentable groaning and yelling of Spirits. And indeed it was ſo that the Croſs of Chriſt (who was Crucified in the dayes of Tiberius) was the cauſe of the Oracles ſilence and defect, which from that time never gave anſwer to any. The great Shepherd is dead, Pan the god of Shepherds.

I. This Title of Shepherd implyes both his Natures.

1. His Godhead: A Shepherd is of a ſuperiour kind to the Sheep, they being Beaſts, and the Shepherd Man: Ezekiel in chap. 34. 31. interpreting that his Parable of the Shepherd and Sheep; And ye my flock of my paſture are men, and I am your God, ſaith the Lord.

2. His Manhood: Zach. 13. 7. My ſhepherd, and the man that is my fellow: ſayes God in Ezek. 34. 24. he their Shepherd is ſaid to be one among them, or in medio eorum; that is (as that phraſe elſewhere) he is of their Nature: As

Book V.

As he is Man, he is called the Lamb, and this Lamb is ſhepherd alſo, as thoſe words import, Rev. 7. 17. The Lamb ſhall feed them.

II. This Title implyes all Chriſts Offices.

1. Of King. Kings were called Shepherds, Ποιμένες λαῶν, &c. thus Ezek. 34. 24. where, as Chriſt is called their Shepherd, ſo their Prince, as he, who guides and leads his Sheep, Pſal. 23. 2. John 10. 27. as David and Moſes did the People; and judgeth betweeen ſheep and ſheep; Ezek. 34. 20, 21. he will judge thoſe that puſh them; and at the latter day 'tis ſaid, The Son of Man, The King ſitting on his throne of Glory ſhall as a ſhepherd ſeparate the ſheep from the goats, Mat. 25. 31, 32. and in that reſpect in the next Verſes is ſtiled, The King, ver. 34, 40.

2. Of Prieſt. John 10. 11. I am that good ſhepherd that give my life for the ſheep.

3. Of Prophet: Paſtor a Paſcendo; He feeds them; John 10. Pſal. 23. 2, 5. and in Ezek. 34. 23. it is ingeminated, He ſhall feed them, he ſhall feed them; that is, eminently and immediately, as doubling the ſpeech doth indigitate; (as Ezek. 21. 27. it doth). Thus much what this Title of Shepherd in the general doth import.

III. Chriſt is called, that great Shepherd.

1. In reſpect of other under Shepherds; ſo 1 Pet. 5. 4. And when the chief ſhepherd ſhall appear, ye ſhall receive a crown, &c. And here the Apoſtle having made mention of other inferiour Shepherds, ver. 2. 3. in this Verſe he calls him the chief Shepherd; yea Kings are ſtiled Shepherds; but Chriſt is the Shepherd even of thoſe Shepherds, as being the King of Kings.

2. He is a Shepherd of Souls: The Souls of Men are his flock; 1 Pet. 2. ult. One Soul is more worth than all the World, which is the rate this Shepherd himſelf that went to the price of them, valued them at.

3. In reſpect of the extent of his Flock; He is Shepherd over all, both Jewes and Gentiles: John 10. 16. There ſhall be one fold, and one ſhepherd: Chriſt having in the former part of that Verſe ſpoken of other Sheep which were not of that Jewiſh fold; he had another great Flock among the Gentiles: He therefore adds, And them alſo I muſt bring, and there ſhall be one fold, &c. Paul was the Apoſtle but of the Uncircumciſion, and Peter of the Circumciſion, Gal. 2. 7. and both the one and the other but for their Age; but Chriſt is the Shepherd of all, yea and both in the Old Teſtament and the New: In the Old, Eccleſ. 12. 11. he was then called that one Shepherd, from whom the Maſters of Aſſemblies, the Miniſters, Rulers and Elders of the Synagogues had all their words given them, and their aſſiſtance to ſpeak them: Of the New I need not inſtance.

4. In reſpect of propriety: The Sheep that Chriſt feeds are his own; John 10. 14. It is not ſo with other Shepherds that are Miniſters under him; they are but as Hirelings in reſpect of any propriety of feeding ſheep, ſayes Chriſt to Peter: They are my Sheep, ſayes he, not yours; and they are his becauſe he bought them: The Flock of God, which he purchaſed with his own blood; Acts 20. 28. He bought us, and is therefore called there in the Text both Shepherd and Lord, having bought them by laying down his Life for them. John 10. 11.

5. In reſpect of his Abilities.

[1.] In a particular Knowledge of all the Perſons who are his Sheep; tho' they be of that vaſt extent and variety, yet he knows every ſheep by name. John 10.

[2.] In Skill; To heal and apply him to all their ſickneſſes, weakneſſes, wants; Ezek. 34. 16. I will ſeek that which was loſt, and bring again that which was driven away; and will bind up that which was broken, and will ſtrengthen that which was ſick; I will feed them with judgment: [With Judgment] that is, with convenient Food and Phyſick for every one as their condition of Sickneſs or Strength requires.

[3.] In

Chap. 22.

[3.] In reſpect of Power.

(1.) To make them his ſheep, by a new Creation : He firſt bought them, then makes them his Sheep ; We are his ſheep, and he made us, Pſal. 100. 3. that is, he made us to be his Sheep, and not we our ſelves, as ſome do read the words.

2. To ſtrengthen them, with ſtrength in the inward Man ; which no other Shepherd can do for his Sheep : He is able to make them perfect in every good work, as in the Text.

(3.) He protects them all againſt all them that that puſh them, and would drive them out of their paſture, or otherwiſe any way injure them, and judgeth likewiſe between cattle and cattle. Ezek. 34. 20, 21, 22. Thus ſaith the Lord God unto them, Behold I even I will judge between the fat cattle and between the lean cattle, becauſe ye have thruſt with ſide and with ſhoulder, and puſht all the diſeaſed with your horns, till ye have ſcattered them abroad : Therefore will I ſave my flock, and they ſhall no more be a prey, and I will judge between cattle and cattle.

(4.) He hath all power effectually to keep them, and to bring them invincibly to Salvation : John 10. 27, 28. My ſheep hear my voice, and I know them, and they follow me : And I give unto them eternal life, and they ſhall never periſh, neither ſhall any man pluck them out of my hand

The Uſe is of Comfort to all that are Chriſts Sheep : In the Application of which there will ſtill more of the greatneſs of our Shepherd be further ſet out though in a Conſolatory way ; which I rather choſe to do than in a meer Doctrinal.

1. In General ; If Chriſt be our Shepherd, and ſuch a Shepherd : What can we then lack ? It is the Comfort that David draws from it ; Pſal. 23. 1. I ſend you as ſheep among wolves, ſaith Chriſt, Matth. 10. 15. 'twas ſpoken when he ſent them out to the Cities of Judah, and when they returned he asks them, Did you lack any thing ? Luke 22. 35. and how came this to paſs, but becauſe he was the great Shepherd, who went with them all the while ? And though you now in this Age are as Sheep in the midſt of Wolves, yet you ſee he ſpreads your Tables, gives your Ordinances in the midſt of your Enemies : And what do you lack ?

But more particularly conſider his Promiſes as a Shepherd.

1. To give you Paſture : John 10. 9. They ſhall find paſture ; ſayes he, I will ſee to that ; yea Pſal. 23. 2. Green paſtures, the paths of righteouſneſs.

2. Freſh Springs alſo, as well as green Paſtures : So it follows there, that is freſh Comforts ſpringing from the Fountain of Comforts. Thy Heart is dry and barren to day ; the next Prayer thou makeſt or Sermon thou heareſt, thou findeſt a new Spring ; as they in their travel to Sion, Pſal. 84. They dig up fountains ſtill, ever and anon when they are athirſt : And this Spring is by Chriſt himſelf interpreted to be his Spirit, which he gives to them that believe. John 4. 14. Even rivers ſpringing up to eternal life, and ſo never ceaſing until you come to Heaven.

3. Particularly, Thoſe green Paſtures are Ordinances. As,

(1.) A good Fold ; as Ezek. 34. 15. that is, a good Church, which is the ſeat of Ordinances, a good Church and holy Saints to be in and with : Thus Cant. 1. 7, 8. Tell me (O thou whom my ſoul loveth) where thou feedeſt, where thou makeſt thy flock to reſt at noon, for why ſhould I be as one that turneth aſide by the flocks of thy companions ? And again, I will bring them into the fold, as Chriſts ſpeech evidently implyes, John 10. 16. and 'tis he that gives thee an heart to joyn with ſuch where thou mayſt be moſt edified : As in that Cant. 1. 8. you ſee how in anſwer to her deſire he directs and guides them whither to go : ver. 8. If thou know not, (O thou faireſt among women) go thy way forth by the footſteps of the flock, and feed thy kids beſide the ſhepherds tents.

(2.) Over that he ſets and finds out Paſtors and Elders for thee, both according to his own heart, yea and according to thine ; that is, who do and ſhall ſuit the ſtate and condition of thy Soul the beſt of any other in the

Book V.

World Jer. 3. 14, 15. I will take you one of a City, and two of a family, and I will bring you to Zion: And I will give you Pastors according to my heart, which shall feed you with knowledge and understanding. 'Tis a Promise made to Gospel times, agreeing with Matth. 18. as the phrase of taking two or three of a City and Tribe shews. He will either bring thee to the best means, or make those means thou hast the best to thee.

(3.) He provides and prepares all the good Sermons thou hearest, and puts those Words and Prayers too into his Ministers Hearts and Mouths. These are all from him, as from that one shepherd: Eccl. 12. 11. The words of the wise are as goads, and as nails fastened by the masters of assemblies, which are given from one shepherd. Yea in their providing of them, Christ as the great Shepherd, that knows the state of every one of his Flock, brings to their mind this goad to prick forward such an ones Heart; that nail to fasten on such an ones Spirit (as there) according as any one hath need. 'Tis he that feeds them with judgment, Ezek. 34. And when he hath given fit words for them to speak (the pertinency of which to every ones Heart, they are not aware of) he then gives assistance in the delivery, and drives in that promise or command home to the nails head; make that Goad of Rebuke or Exhortation to pierce a thick and brawny Heart, and makes it tender.

(4.) He farther feeds them with the strangest, yea strongest, sweetest, and most Soul-heartning food that ever was, even with his own Flesh and Blood; My flesh is meat indeed, and my blood is drink indeed; and so some have understood the coherence of these words here in the Text, that he is a Shepherd ἐν τῷ αἵματι [in his Blood] as feeding them therewith, and giving it to save them, and so refer those words not to his being brought back again, but to his being a Shepherd in his blood: This for the first ground of Comfort; his Promises as he is a Shepherd, and we the Sheep of his Pasture, as we are called.

A Second Ground; That Christ is a Shepherd who is careful, as the opposition of Christ and Hirelings shews; John 10. 13. That office exacts care, the Sheep take none, the Shepherd all; and that which obligeth Christ to this care is his propriety in his Sheep. Other Shepherds are only hirelings and servants, and though faithful, yet only but as servants; but Christ cares for them as being their owner: They are his own Sheep; as therefore the Apostle reasoneth Heb. 3. 5, 6 Moses was faithful in his house as a servant, but Christ as a Son over his own house; which house we are.

This his care appears.

1. In seeking them out both at first Conversion, and after when gone astray, as many ways they do, and are apt to do: Thus Ezek. 34. 11. I even I will (both) search my sheep, and seek them out: The word implyes a search even through the whole Wilderness, every hedge, every bush, every corner. Christ leaves the ninety nine (as in the Parable) to seek the poor one that is astray, and seeks all the Wilderness over, Luke 15. and in the Mountains, Matth. 18. 12, 13. yea, and looks at it as his Duty so to do. John 10. 16. Them also I must bring in, sayes Christ there: It is my Fathers Command; as Laban required his tale of Jacob, so will God of Christ.

2. When he hath found them, he makes sure work with them to keep them: Luke 15. 5. They are not only in his hands, but he layes them on his shoulders, and holds the fore-feet with one hand, and the hinder-feet with the other, and yet they will be struggling, but that he hath long hands that still reacheth them, and holds them, and pulls them in again.

3. His Care is seen in his inspection into the Flock, and visiting his Sheep, abiding in medio earum, in the midst of them or among them; Ezek. 34. 11. I even I will both search my sheep and seek them out: The one of the two words there used implyes the searching of them out, and the other inspection. The Septuagint translates it ἐπισκέψομαι, to visit or oversee: Hence the Apostle 1 Pet. 2. last, doth joyn both, calling Christ the Shepherd and Bishop, or overseer of our souls, ἐπίσκοπον. He knows all their wants, and looks to all their their wandrings ; and as Jacob watched whole nights with the Sheep, ſo Chriſt does neither ſleep nor ſlumber, but keepeth Iſrael. Chap. 22.

A Third Ground is, That Chriſt is a Shepherd who is pitiful ; Mat. 9. 36. When he ſaw the multitudes he was moved with compaſſion on them, becauſe they fainted and were ſcattered abroad, as ſheep having no ſhepherd.

1. To young Converts : Iſa. 40. 11. He gathers the lambs with his arm, and carries them in his boſom.

2. To thoſe that are with young, he gently leads them ; (as in the place laſt quoted) that is, the grown Chriſtians, or any that are in pains of travel not to overdrive them, as Jacob did not his Flock, Gen. 33. 13. and in Ezek. 34. there are more inſtances of his pity : As,

3. To thoſe that ſtray after their having been brought to the Fold ; he ſeeks them out again : ver. 12. I will deliver them out of the places where they ſhall be ſcattered in the cloudy and dark day. Temptation is as a cloudy day ; it is a walking in darkneſs, as Iſa. 50. 10. No beaſt ſo apt to wander as Sheep are : Chriſt ſeeks them again.

4. The weak he ſtrengthens, who have feeble knees, and faint hands ; ſo ver. 16. and alſo,

5. The ſick and broken he heals. Sheep are apt to break their Legs, and fall into Ditches, (heavy temptations) and of all Creatures are moſt ſubject to Diſeaſes ; but Chriſt binds up their Wounds, and heals all ; it being the greateſt work of a Shepherd to look to ſuch things.

6. He ſhews his Pity and Care in providing reſt and lying down for them ; Pſal. 23. 2. And in Cant. 1. 7. Thou makeſt thy flocks to reſt at noon, in the heat of the day, whether in caſe of diſtreſſes, preſſures, hard drivings, or perſecution, by giving them comfortable intermiſſion, and ſometimes for a long while quietly and ſafely to enjoy his Ordinances. As Ezek. 34. 25. And I will make with them a covenant of peace, and will cauſe the evil beaſts to ceaſe out of the land ; and they ſhall dwell ſafely in the wilderneſs, and ſleep in the woods.

Uſe 2. The Second Uſe is of Exhortation, to Men to turn to him : We are all as Sheep going aſtray ; Oh now return unto the Shepherd and Biſhop of your Souls ; 1 Pet. 2. 25. elſe God will ſay, as Zach. 11. 9. I will not feed you, that that dyeth, let it dye, &c. which is as much as to ſay, Let thy Soul dye in a ditch and there lye, I will not regard it.

OF CHRIST THE MEDIATOR.

BOOK VI.

Of Chriſt our High Prieſt, as entred into the Holy of Holies in the Heavens. How we are to Treat, and Converſe with God, and Chriſt Jeſus under the Notion of his being our High Prieſt, and being entred into the Holy of Holies. And of our having liberty to enter thither to him, and to Converſe with him there through Faith in Prayer.

HEB. iv. 14, 15, 16.

Seeing then that we have a great high prieſt, that is paſſed into the heavens, Jeſus the Son of God, let us hold faſt our profeſſion.

For we have not an high prieſt which cannot be touched with the feeling of our infirmities; but was in all points tempted like as we are, yet without ſin.

Let us therefore come boldly unto the throne of grace, that we may obtain mercy, and find grace to help in time of need.

CHAP. I.

The words of the Text Explained, That Chriſt is our Great High Prieſt, wherein the Greatneſs and Excellency of his Prieſthood conſiſts.

THE Apoſtle had ſet forth Chriſt as a Judge, to whom we muſt give an Account, ver. 12, 13. and here, he ſets him forth, as a moſt Gracious and Merciful High Prieſt. The former he did, to perſwade the Hebrews to get true Faith, and to beware of a Temporary Faith: The latter he does, to encourage them to continue in the true Faith. And it comes very ſeaſonably in after the former: For whereas he had told them, that Chriſt knew and obſerved every Thought, and that his Word was was κεπικὸς, critical in obſerving and finding out the leaſt by-end; not a thought could eſcape Chriſts all-piercing-Eye: They that were ſincere-hearted, being conſcious of ſo many Imperfections and Infirmities in all they do, might think with themſelves; If he with whom we have to do, be ſo ſevere, as ver. 12, 13. deſcribe him to be: How ſhall we have any thing at all to do with him? How ſhall we hold in with him? Wherefore the Apoſtle in an inſtanſt quite alters and changes the Scene, and preſents Chriſt in a new Habit, and puts on him his High Prieſts Robes. As before he had preſented him ſitting in his Judgment Seat, with his Sword (the Enſign of his Juſtice) in his hand, able to divide between the marrow and the joints: So now he tenders him to them with the heart of a High Prieſt, moſt tenderly affected towards them, in all their infirmities; and as ſitting upon a Throne of Grace and Mercy-Seat, to which with boldneſs they might draw near.

From which Coherence, Obſerve, That,

Obſerv. Jeſus Chriſt can, and will, ſhew himſelf, the moſt Exact and Severe Judge; and likewiſe, the moſt Tender and Merciful High-Prieſt. He is called (you know) both a Lyon and a Lamb: Yea, you have both in one and the ſame Chap. and the one in the next verſe immediately following the other (even as here alſo the like) Revel. 5. 5, 6. A Lyon is of all Creatures the moſt fierce and furious, yet generous in his Wrath; and a Lamb is of all the meekeſt: And he is ſet forth under both; not in reſpect of thoſe two ſeveral Eſtates of his when on Earth, and now in Heaven: As if a Lamb in reſpect of his Carriage here, and Sufferings here below: But a Lyon now poſſeſſed of his Power and Glory in Heaven. No, but a Lamb as now riſen again, and as taking the Book out of Gods Hand, and ſo to be Gods Commiſſioner to Govern and Judge the World. For that is the Scope of that Chapter: He therefore as he is now in Heaven ſhews himſelf a Lamb as well as a Lyon: And a Lyon, and a Lamb are Creatures of all others the moſt contrary: Yet Chriſt hath the heart of a Lyon, and the heart of a Lamb too, becauſe he is, and was appointed to be the perfect Image of God, Heb. 1. 3. and the Executioner of all Gods Decrees, both of Juſtice and Mercy, on the Elect and Reprobate. Through his Humane Nature the God-head is to expreſs his extreameſt Severity, and likewiſe the tendereſt Bowels of Mercy; and therefore Chriſts heart was fitted, and tempered unto both, according to the exacteſt mixture and proportion that might be. God himſelf ſaid of the Angel, who went with the Iſraelites, (which was Chriſt; and in an alluſion unto which Type, this repreſentation of him here, ver. 12, 13. doth come in) My Name is in him; that is, my Attributes, as of Mercy, ſo he went with them to lead them into Canaan; ſo of Juſtice, therefore provoke him not; for he will not ſpare you, and yet of Mercy alſo, for elſe he would not have gone with them.

USE. 1. This ſhows us the Excellencies of Jeſus Chriſt. Who hath all perfections in him, to the height; and mixtures of contraries in their full perfections. Such a Man we love, as hath a Spirit of all compoſitions: when higheſt meekneſs, and greateſt courage and ſtoutneſs are met in one; how amiable doth it make one? Even ſuch an one is Chriſt; read his deſcription in Pſalm 45.

USE. 2. We ſhould therefore look at them both, in Chriſt, and carry the Repreſentation of them both at once in our eyes: Men either look upon him as all Mercy and ſo preſume, or as all ſeverity, and ſo tremble to come at him: The Devil then makes a falſe Chriſt of him in either. The Lamb can be angry; you read of the Wrath of the Lamb: And ſo the Lion can be Lamb-like, and gracious. Poor Souls in deſertion look at Chriſt onely as armed with his Sword, and ſo tremble to come at him: As that Child in Homer did, when his Father in compleat Armour took him up in his Arms. When Chriſt looks ſternly on thee, yet he may have a Fathers heart to thee, under that viſour of terrour.

USE 3.

Chap. 1.

USE 3. VVe ſhould have a mixture of Affections, namely of Fear and Love, anſwerable to this mixture in Chriſt; ſo Pſal. 2. 11, 12. Serve the Lord with fear, and rejoyce with trembling; Kiſs the Son leſt he be angry: And yet again, though his wrath be a little kindled, yet rejoyce, and come boldly to him as a Saviour. And let us ſerve him without fear alſo, for he is a merciful High Prieſt. So in the 45. Pſalm: He is ſet forth as a loving Husband greatly delighting in the Beauty of his Queen, who ſits at his Right Hand, and is familiar with him: And yet ſhe is taught to know her diſtance. He is thy God, worſhip thou him.

USE 4. It ſhould be an Encouragement to poor Souls, who are Sinners, and tremble at every threatning; and are afraid when they hear or ſee Chriſt angry, when he rends and tears VVicked Sinners in pieces, when they ſee Judgments on the Earth. You do well indeed to tremble, as Children, when they ſee the Servants beaten: But conſider withal, that he is a gracious God to you, when his anger is never ſo much againſt others. Like a loving Husband that is General of an Army, Though he hath been in the Field killing and ſlaughtering Men that are his Enemies; yet when he comes into his Tent, he is as loving to his Spouſe as ever, and with the ſame Arms embraceth her, with which he ruin'd them in fury. Such is Chriſt, He can be, and is as loving and familiar with his own; and will uſe them as kindly, as if he were not angry at all. And yet Men can hardly ſo command their Paſſions, but that they will run out one way; and when they are angry with others, they are moroſe, not placid even to their Wife or Friend. But it is not ſo with Chriſt; he can act both parts to the height, and loves to do it: He can turn his fierce look on others, to the moſt gracious ſmiles on thee, and that in the twinkling of an Eye. Think but how that at the latter Day, his anger will be at the higheſt; and yet how loving will he be to his own? 'Twill be the ſtrangeſt ſight that ever was; when in the ſame Countenance, the greateſt fury, and the moſt ſweet ſmiles of Grace, ſhall lodge, and appear together; as then they will. Therefore in Iſa. 27. 4. When God was in his Armour, and in Battel array, againſt his Enemies, (as it is in that ver.) yet then to his Vineyard, to his own, he ſaies, Fury is not in me: No, I am not angry with you (ſaies God,) though indeed againſt Briars and Thorns I am, and will burn them together. When he is moſt angry, fear not to go forth to meet him; but rather go rejoycingly out to him; for he will uſe thee lovingly, if thou humbleſt thy ſelf before him, Iſa. 64. 5. Thus much I have ſaid as an Introduction to the words of the Text, and from the coherence of them.

The words divide themſelves into theſe three parts;
1. Two eminent Duties exhorted unto.
2. Three eſpecial Diſcouragements from thoſe Duties.
3. A ground of Encouragement unto thoſe Duties, (notwithſtanding theſe Diſcouragements) fetcht from Chriſts High-Prieſthood in Heaven.

1. The Duties exhorted unto are two.

1. To hold faſt our Profeſſion: Whereby is meant, That cleaving to Chriſt by Faith and Obedience, whereby we do profeſs him to be our Saviour, and do put our confidence in him: Heb. 3. 1. He is ſtyled the High-Prieſt of our Profeſſion: That is, whom we profeſs to be our High-Prieſt, by cleaving to the Doctrine and Religion, which he is High-Prieſt over. All Profeſſions have ſome eminent Founder or Chief of them: Of whom the Profeſſors have their denomination. The Jews Religion had Moſes and Aaron, to whom therefore they are ſaid to cleave, and the Romiſh Religion and Profeſſion hath the Pope for its Chief: He is the High-Prieſt of it, Pontifex Maximus; and therefore they of that Profeſſion are called Pontificii and Papiſts from him. In like manner the true Chriſtian Profeſſion, hath Chriſt for the High Prieſt of it, and therefore we are called Chriſtians. Now, then to cleave conſtantly to Chriſt by Faith and Obedience, in all things, things, whereby he is magnified and confeſſed to be our High-Prieſt, both in Heart and Life; this is to hold faſt our Profeſſion. And becauſe this is chiefly done by true faith, which as a hand, takes hold of Chriſt and holds forth in life the profeſſion of him; therefore he bids them hold the Profeſſion [κρατῶμεν, let us hold &c.] And becauſe that Faith hath great Oppoſitions and Diſcouragements, that might pull them from it, or it from them; therefore he bids them hold faſt, or, ſtrongly; for ſo the word ſignifies.

2. The Second Duty exhorted to, is to come, viz. By Faith; for by it we are ſaid to come to God, and to Chriſt, 1 Pet. 2. 4. to draw near, Heb. 10. 22. I take it therefore eſpecially to mean coming to God in Prayer: As in Pſal. 65. 2. O thou that heareſt prayer, unto thee ſhall all fleſh come. And that is meant here: For the word tranſlated [boldly] is μετὰ παῤῥησίας; liberty of Speech and Spirit. Come boldly and ſpeak out your needs and complaints: And therefore alſo the help that is given, is called βοήθεια, that is, help upon crying; and this is correſpondent to the ground of Encouragement given from Chriſts High Prieſthood, which is an Office of Prayer and Interceſſion. And therefore the Apoſtle encourageth againſt all our Exigencies; both Miſeries from without, and guilts of Sins within; including both theſe in that one word [infirmities,] as things wherein Chriſt our High-Prieſt will pitie us: For theſe are all either expreſſed, or evidently implyed in the words. The two firſt are expreſſed under that one word [infirmities,] ver. 15. whereby, both Perſecutions and Afflictions from without, and Sins are meant, That under Infirmities, Miſeries, and Perſecutions, and all outward evils are meant, appears from 2 Cor. 12. 5. and chap. 11. 30. His outward Diſtreſſes the Apoſtle calls his Infirmities: And theſe he means here; for he comforts them againſt theſe, by this, that Chriſt in all theſe was tempted. Therefore notwithſtanding them, hold faſt your Profeſſion, you have an High Prieſt to pity you in them.

Yet more eſpecially by Infirmities he means Sins, which indeed are the greateſt preſſures, and which we therefore need moſt comfort againſt, and that the pity of Chriſt be ſhewn therein: And they are the greateſt diſcouragers of us in our coming with boldneſs to the Throne of Grace for help againſt thoſe outward Evils, and therefore they muſt be intended here: And accordingly we find the word on purpoſe uſed but three Verſes off in this very Diſcourſe continued about this High Prieſt-hood in the Type of Chriſt. In chap. 5. 2. The Apoſtle ſhews the Qualifications of an High Prieſt then under the Law, and he recites them to ſhew that the ſame Vertues as towards us are found in our High Prieſt but without Sin. He was the High-Prieſt under the Law (ſaies he) one that could have compaſſion on the Ignorant, and them that are out of the way, i. e. upon Sinners, (for by Ignorances, and ſtrayings from God Sins are meant) in that himſelf (ſaies he ſpeaking of the High Prieſt) was cloathed with Infirmities, that is, with Sins, which might move him out of a ſenſe of the like Sins in himſelf to offer the Sacrifices of every Sinner which ſhould come to him. And again, you have the ſame Expreſſion uſed again of the High-Prieſt, chap. 7. 28. For the Lord maketh Men High-Prieſts which have infirmities, i.e. Sins, ſuch as the People had which is ſpoken in direct oppoſition unto Chriſt his being Holy, undefiled, and ſeparate from Sinners, ver. 26. But though as concerning Chriſt his having any Infirmities on his part, the Apoſtle had exempted him, and put in an Exception before the words of my Text, ſaying, That he was tempted in all things, yet without Sin; yet as to the pitying part. viz. to have compaſſion on us, under ſuch Infirmities his Scope is to the full to ſhew that he is, and muſt be an High Prieſt that can have compaſſion more abundantly than thoſe narrow-hearted Prieſts could have, though they were compaſſionate upon other grounds then he. They, for that themſelves were cloathed, and ſurrounded with the ſame Infirmities of Sin that the People were, therefore pityed them: But he though without Sin, yet hath that innate Compaſſion, and an heart ſo made up of Mercy, that he is much more able to compassionate such even in their Sins, which are their greatest Infirmities. So then under the Word Infirmities Sins are intended, and in his alledging the parallel of the High Priest in respect of compassion towards Sinners which are out of the way; his Scope and Intention must necessarily be to shew, that Christ is thus also. His Allegation had been to no purpose at all, if not unto this, and so it refers to, and explains what is said in my Text, That he is touched with the feeling of our sinful infirmities; and they therefore are here mainly intended. And further to that end he shews, that though he kept himself from being tempted with Evil and Sin, yet he came as near as might be, being tempted by Satan unto Sin, and vexed (as the Word in some Copies signifies) with all sorts of Sins, yet still without Sin. He came I say, as near therein as might be, that he might be able to pity us experimentally. Even herein again, because the Apostle means Infirmities of Sins, as well as of Miseries, and outward temptations; therefore the Comfort and Remedy which they are directed to seek, and encouraged to find at the Throne of Grace, is in relation unto Sins. He mentions both Grace and Mercy, that you may obtain (saies he) Grace, and Mercy; Grace to help against the Power of Sin, Mercy to take away the Guilt of Sin. And our own pressures of all other are those of Sin, and Corruptions; and above all things our Hearts (who are true Christians) are carryed forth to obtain Grace, and Mercy for, and about them. So as however that Grace to help against all other Infirmities is meant, and we may find in Christ both Grace to supply Wants, and Mercy to give deliverance, yet there being two things in sin corruption, and Guilt, therefore to be sure we need Grace and Mercy to serve against these two more eminently then against all Evils else. And these are the Evils which the Saints hearts do most implore Grace and Mercy against, and therefore these are above all intended by the Apostle here. Chap. 1.

Observ. 1. Jesus Christ is a great High-Priest. Concerning which in general. Whatever Title Christ hath, this of greatness is added to it. A Prophet, he is of a truth and that Propket (said they) John 7.40. yea, that great Prophet, (say they) Luke 7. 16. John was a Prophet, yea more hant a Prophet saies Christ of him; Matth. 11.9. But then, I am not worthy to untie the latchet of his shoe; saies John of Christ. A Shepherd he is, but with this addition, that great shepherd, Heb. 13. 20. A King he is; but Psal. 47. 2. the great King. It is a Psalm of Christs Ascension, ver. 3. The King of Kings, Lord of Lords. A Priest he is here, an High Priest; yet that is not title high enough, but he is a great High Priest.

As King of Kings, so Priest of Priests. That in all things he might have preheminence, Col. 1. 18. When the Person is great, all his Titles are such Princes who are eminently excellent, have by their Subjects the title of Great affixed; as Charlemain, Alexander the Great, Henry le Grand, &c. and shall not Christ be exalted, yea greatly exalted? Psal. 47. 9.

USE 1. Men who have great Friends, how do they bear themselves upon them? And have great hopes, great thoughts, and great looks? So Rabshaketh bore himself upon Senacherib; and what big words doth he speak? 2 Kings 28. 19. thus saith the great King, and shall not we, who are Christs Servants, bear our selves as much upon our great Lord and Master? As Paul often calls him.

USE 2. Let us serve him as becomes his greatness; not with the halt or lame; shouldst thou send such to thy Prince, would he accept such Services? I am a great King, saies God, Malac. 1. 14.

USE 3. Let us become little, that Christ may be great; and appear such. As his alone is goodness, so his alone is greatness: 1 Chron. 29. 11. Let us become Cyphers to set his greatness out: Let us be content to decrease, that he may increase (as John did) and (like the Moon) the nearer we come to this Sun, the more we ſhould, yea we ſhall wane; it is our Glory ſo to do. This in general.

Now to ſhew more particularly, how Chriſt is a great High-Prieſt. This is ſpoken of him,

1. Comparatively to Aaron, who was an High-Prieſt, but Chriſt a Great High-Prieſt; whoſe Prieſthood the Apoſtle compares with his, throughout this Epiſtle. I will not now ſhew all the particulars, wherein Chriſts doth exceed; only in this, I inſtance, that Aarons Prieſt-hood was but a Shadow; not ſo much as a Picture, compared with his: So he concludes that Diſcourſe, chap. 10. 1. As a King at Arms, who goes before a true King, ſuch was Aaron to him: And therefore but a low, and a mean, a little High Prieſt to this Great High Prieſt.

1. In the Levitical Law, there was a plurality of Prieſts, which argued imperfection: But they truely were many, ſaies the Apoſtle, Heb. 7. 23. and all could not perfect the work; which plurality of theirs is implyed, ver. 11. of the 10. chap. [every High-Prieſt] but Chriſt was but one, ver. 12. They were but as ſo many Candles, that ſucceſſively were burnt out; and gave but a dim Light. But he as the Sun, which is the meaning of that, Coloſs. 2. 17. where the Apoſtle ſpeaking of all the fore-running Types which were The ſhadows of things to come, ſaies, But the Body is Chriſt; who (as his Scope there was to ſhew) hath diſanulled all thoſe Shadows by his coming into the World; and therefore can be no other Body but of the Sun it ſelf in that compariſon intended: For otherwiſe the Shadows do begin to exiſt, but when the Body comes; but where the Sun caſts its beams, ſhadows flie away: Now as the Sun is called the great Light, Gen. 1. 16. becauſe it alone doth that, which all the Stars and Candles cannot. So Chriſt alone diſcharging this Office, is called the Great High Prieſt.

2. They daily miniſtred, and offered oftentimes; and the ſame Sacrifices, but Chriſt he did it but once, and that for ever: So Heb. 10. 11, 12.

3. Theſe many Prieſts, with their many Sacrifices often offered, could not take ſins away; but Chriſt by one offering took away all Sins, and perfected us ſo for ever, that our ſins are remembred no more, ver. 14, 17. But I will no longer inſiſt on this Compariſon: For it is not worthy of it; it being a thing very uncomely to compare the Body and the Shadow together. Therefore I come,

2. To ſhew how he is a great High-Prieſt in himſelf, abſolutely conſidered.

1. In his Perſon: Higher than the Heavens: Heb. 7. 26. that is, then the Angels, and ſo all Creatures; for not of Place, but of Perſonal Dignity is the Highneſs there meant. And as Hell is put for Devils. The gates of Hell ſhall not prevail, &c. So there, Heaven for Angels, and ſuch an high Prieſt became us as it is there: And in this Senſe, he is ſaid to be aſcended to Heaven, when he was not yet aſcended, in place; but onely by the Union hypoſtatical, Jo. 3. 13. This his perſonal worth and greatneſs is mentioned in the Text, as that which is the foundation of the greatneſs of his Office: Jeſus the Son of God. Other Offices make the Perſon great, and his dignity the more; but here the Perſon dignifies the Office, and makes it great. For from hence proceeds all the worth of the Sacrifice he offered; and of the Interceſſion of this Prieſt. The worth of his Sacrifice being attributed to his being God, [the Blood of God] and the prevalency of his Interceſſion to his being the Son. Other Officers (if Great) muſt have a great deal of outward State, and Pomp; (as Kings have) and Ceremonies of Reverence are invented, to make them ſeem great: And as themſelves are Humane Ordinances and Creations, ſo they have Humane Inventions for State and Pomp, becauſe they want Perſonal Greatneſs to bear up reſpect. And ſuch a Prieſt was Aaron, and his Fellows. Which (I take it) is the meaning of that Heb. 7. 16. He was made a Preiſt, not after the Law of a carnal command, which is ſpoken in oppoſition to the Prieſts of the Old Law, who were indeed made thus; and it was all their making. The Prieſts of old were of themſelves no more fit to be Prieſts than than others of the Jews; it was meerly a Law, which made them such, no peculiar Personal worth in the Men: As the Law makes a Child as true and as great a King, as a Man grown; and accordingly they had carnal Rites, which the Law also prescribed; in the observance of which their Priestly power and dignity did lye, and thereby was supported, and so were Priests after the Law of a carnal commandment; (so the Law Ceremonial is called, and thereby distinguisht from the Law Moral, which is called Spiritual; Rom. 7. 12, 13, 14.) For the Persons being weak, as other Men; they had Rites, such as were glorious Garments, a glorious Temple, &c. to make their Office great, which yet were but fleshly, that is, weak; (as Eph. 6. 12. Flesh is taken, not with flesh, but with powers, &c.) and which wrought in the fleshly part of Men, an estimation of greatness. But this Priest is made after the power of an endless. By Power, he does not simply mean that Authority given Christ by his Fathers institution; for so those Levites also were ordained; Heb. 5. 4. No man takes this honour to himself, but he that is called of God [as was Aaron]: But he understands thereby that Personal power, and those eminent abilities which were in his Person inherent, and which moved God to pitch on him; whereby he was not a King or Priest drest up, or set out with Ceremonies, and Carnal Rites of Reverence, but indued with Power inherent, whereby he was able to shew himself a Priest indeed. And as he was declared to be the Son of God with power, Rom. 1. 4. so also to be a Priest with power: He had the power of a Priest in his Person; which consisted chiefly in this, that he had the power of an indissoluble life, (as the word is) that whereas it was requisite that he should dye, to undergo Gods wrath, which would have sunk the Souls of Men and Angels, he could out-live it, and all the powers of Death could not hold him; as Acts 2. 24. I lay down my life, and I take it up again (sayes Christ) and so can survive to perform the rest that belongs to that Office. And hence the word of the Oath pitcht on him, as one of himself consecrated and carved out for it, and none else; so ver. 28. The law maketh men high-priests which [have infirmities], but the word of the oath since the law, maketh [the Son] who [is perfected] (as the word is) for evermore.

Secondly, It appears how great a Priest he was, by the great trust which was reposed in him. We judge and esteem of the greatness of Offices by the great trust that is reposed in them. This made Josephs Office great, and himself the greatest Man in Egypt. So with us the High Treasurers place is great, because of the trust; and so the Lord Keepers, &c. Now of Christ it is said, Heb. 7. 22. He became a surety of a better covenant: It was an infinite trust which God committed to him. All those great and precious promises must be made yea and Amen in him: All Gods Oaths and Covenants must otherwise have been disanulled and cancelled, yea Heaven must have been dissolved, and all the Souls saved under the Old Testament sent down again, if Christ had not been a faithful High Priest. 2. All the Glory of Gods Justice, all our Souls which God so loved, all our Sins which he desired so to be pardoned, all Gods plots hung upon him, all his affairs were committed to him: (I mention all these, because they all concerned Gods Glory as well as our Salvation; and therefore are called things appertaining to God, though for Men; that is, for Mans good: and he was faithful in them all; Heb. 2. 17.) He trusted Christ as Pharaoh did Joseph; and was not this a great High Priest then? All the good things that God meant to bestow, the purchase of them was committed to this High Priest. All Gods holy things he was minister of: Heb. 8. 2. and 9. 11. All which argues the excellency of his Ministry: Heb. 8. 6. He hath obtained a more excellent ministry, by how much he is the Mediator of a better covenant, which was established upon better promises, and of greater trust, which he was to make good.

Thirdly, The great Solemnity that was at his Installment, argues his Greatness: It was by an Oath: Heb. 7. 20, 21. Not so the Levitical Offices. Those Offices which were small, and of no great account or trust, but put in and put out at pleaſure, were wont to be beſtowed without an Oath; but great ones with an Oath. And this very Reaſon is indeed given why Chriſt was made with an Oath; ver. 22. Inſomuch as he was a ſurety of a better teſtament: that is, betruſted with the rich Promiſes of a greater Covenant. Yea further, (which may be matter of wonderment unto us, as differing from all other Inveſtitures) not he himſelf ſo much doth take the Oath, as his Father that made him, which was a tranſcendent and unheard of Honour.

At the firſt erection of this Office, and placing this great Officer, God himſelf took an Oath; whereas the uſual way is, that the Party that enters upon the Office takes the Oath; but here, God himſelf ſwears. Heb. 7. 21. This Prieſt was made with an oath, ſayes the Apoſtle; and by whom was this Oath taken? Not by him who was made the Prieſt, but by God himſelf (that made him) when he made him: He was made with an oath by him who ſaid to him (mark it, by whom it was taken) the Lord ſware, and will not repent, thou art a Prieſt for ever after the order of Melchizedeck. This Oath indeed was firſt taken from everlaſting, when God firſt called him to his Office, but was then ſolemnly renewed, and again rehearſed over, when Chriſt firſt entred upon this Prieſthood in Heaven, being now ſet at Gods Right hand, as appears by comparing Heb. 5. 5, and 6. verſes, and Pſalm 2. 6, 7, and 8. verſes. with Pſalm 110. ver. 1, 4. where when God had ſet Chriſt down at his Right hand, as Pſalm 2. 6. and Pſalm 110. 1. then he rehearſes this Oath; as ver. 4. of that Pſalm; yea, renewes it; as Heb. 5. (quoting both theſe Pſalms to this one and the ſame purpoſe) doth ſhew. All this was to aſſure us how much Gods heart was ingaged in this buſineſs of his Prieſthood, which it ſhould be exerciſed about, namely the pardoning of Sinners. Chriſts Office in Heaven is the Pardon-Office: He is a Prieſt over it, to ſue a Pardon out for Sinners: And the reaſon why God thus ſware, rather than Chriſt, was becauſe the Buſineſs to be effected by this Office, being the Pardon of our Sins, which was dependant upon Gods Will, and to be procured at his hands through Chriſts Mediation and Interceſſion: Now therefore to aſſure both us, and Chriſt himſelf likewiſe, when he took on him this Office, that his Interceſſion ſhould never be in vain at any time, for any Souls that come to God by him, or that he ſues for, God the Father takes this Oath. Becauſe Chriſts Office in Interceeding being to ſue for Pardon, and it being the Fathers part to grant it; in this caſe the Oath is rather taken by the Father, to aſſure both us and Chriſt for ever of his Covenant to hear Chriſt, and grant what by vertue of his Office he requires; and that is, the Pardon of our Sins, which is the work of the Office, that is, the thing that the Oath intends, and not ſimply the confirmation of his Office to him; but the effect of his Office, that it ſhould procure Pardon, as is evident by Chap. 8. throughout. An Oath to a Covenant or Promiſe argues the greateſt ſeriouſneſs that may be. Even he who doth betruſt him, is ſo ſatisfied in him, as he takes an Oath for him; he exacts it not of him; he would not ſhew ſo much diffidence in a Perſon ſo great and faithful, and able for the place; but he ſwears for him; That he ſhould be a Prieſt, and he would not repent, yea, he foreſaw that in Chriſt, that he could never have cauſe to repent that he ſaved Men by him. God ſwears, as glad to engage him in it.

Fourthly, He is a great High Prieſt in reſpect of the continuance of his Office: for what was it God ſware to! [Thou art a Prieſt for ever] (ſayes the Apoſtle, gloſſing upon this Oath, Heb. 7. 23.) They truly were many Prieſts (that is, in ſucceſſion one after another, though there was but one Prieſt at once) becauſe they were not ſuffered to continue by reaſon of Death. They were but as ſo many Candles (as was ſaid) that burnt out, and others were ſet up in their rooms; yea, and ſome were depoſed afore Death; they were not ſuffered to continue, though they continued to live: So Abiathar. But this man (ſayes he, ver. 24.) becauſe he continueth ever, hath an unchangeable high prieſthood, for that cannot paſs to any other, but is for ever in himſelf; and he can never lay it down, as he cannot lay down his Perſon, or his being being the Son of God. For that is the reaſon given, that ſeeing he himſelf continueth ever, his Prieſthood likewiſe ſhall continue ever. Now Offices that are of great truſt, and withal are perpetual and for ones life, and cannot be taken away, are ever accounted great. 'Tis this that makes the Office of a King ſo great, becauſe he is not ſubject to a depoſition: Therefore he muſt needs be a great High Prieſt who hath a Prieſthood that cannot paſs from him; yea, if he ſhould lay it down, there is none in Heaven or Earth worthy to take it up. Princes conſider well whom they put into Places, out of which they cannot again remove them, and that hold not upon a quam diu ſe bene geſſerunt. Now ſuch is this Office wherewith Chriſt is inveſted. But God knew him ſo well afore-hand, that himſelf durſt ſwear for him, and that he would never repent of his placing him in it.

Fifthly, Chriſt is great in his Love to us to become a Prieſt for us. John 15. 13. Greater love than this hath no man, that a man lay down his life, &c. By undertaking of which he became a Prieſt; and ſo it may be ſaid as in the Acts, With a great ſumme purchaſed he this office. Great was his Love, thus to become a Prieſt for us, that he that was equal to God his Father, and as great as he, that he ſhould deſcend from his greatneſs, and become leſſer: To be a Prieſt for us, (and the leſſer his Perſon became, the greater his Prieſthood): For now his Father (as Chriſt is a Prieſt) is greater than he. John 14. 28. Yea, Chriſt became lower than the Angels, Heb. 2. 7. and yet lower, even than Men: A worm, no man, &c And by how much lower his Perſon became; by ſo much is his Prieſthood made higher. And ſo at once the greatneſs of his Perſon made him alone fit to be this High Prieſt (as was ſaid); and yet withal, the lowering of all this greatneſs, even to nothing, made his Prieſthood to be ſo high and great: So that it hath both an height and a depth in it to make it great; and ſo his Love is ſaid to have (Eph. 3. 18, 19.) ſuch a height and depth in it, as it paſſeth knowledge.

Sixthly, He is a great High Prieſt in the Sacrifice which he offered; which Heb. 9. 23. is called a better Sacrifice than thoſe of the Law; ſo much as Heavenly things are better than the ſhadows of them; as it is there, and Chap. 10. 1. For he offered up himſelf; Heb. 9. 14, 26. And what a Sacrifice was that? God himſelf hath not ſuch another Son to offer, he has no more ſuch Sacrifices. Had he ſacrificed millions of Worlds of innocent Men, and holy Angels, even Hecatombs, they had been but as mites to the riches of Heaven and Earth, in compariſon to Jeſus Chriſt. 1 Cor. 6. ult. We are ſaid to be bought with a price: magno pretio; ſo ſome read it. For what a Sacrifice muſt that needs be, wherein all the Riches, Glory, and Excellencies of God-Man were emptied, and (as Sacrifices of old were to be) conſumed and burnt to aſhes, to nothing. And all he offered was his own by ſuch a title of Perſonal propriety (as Second Perſon), as it was not God the Fathers (though his alſo as Gods Creature): ſo as he borrowed nothing, but was himſelf Prieſt, Sacrifice, Altar, Temple, and all.

Seventhly, He was a great High-Prieſt in reſpect of the Temple and Tabernacle that was made for him to officiate in. You gueſs at Aarons and his Succeſſors greatneſs by the Glory of the Tabernacle firſt, and then of the Temple, and therein of the Holy of Holies, the Wonder of the World. But the Heavens were made for this Man to be a Prieſt in; and 'tis the higheſt end next Gods Glory, that they were made for. He is an Heavenly Man, yea, the Lord from Heaven, as he is called 1 Cor. 15. 48. A Prieſt higher than the Heavens; and therefore he muſt have a place ſuitable to perform the great part of his Office in. And therefore as it is ſaid, that it became us, or, it was neceſſary for us being Sinners (if ſaved) to have a Prieſt, who for the excellency of his Perſon ſhould be higher than the Heavens: So likewiſe it became the excellency of his Perſon and High Prieſthood, that he ſhould have a place to adminiſter in, above the heavens. And that is alſo noted noted in the Text, as a circumstance that makes him a great High-Priest, that he is entred into the heavens, and officiates at the throne of grace (ver. 16.) the highest place in Heaven, as the Mercy-seat was in the Holy of Holies. Yea, he purchased this place by his Blood, and laid down a Price for it; and therefore is said to enter into the heavens by his blood; Heb. 9. 12, 24. Yea, he had a Temple and a Tabernacle yet more excellent than the Heavens, a building made of better stuff. You will wonder what that should be; his own Body and Humane Nature, which was the true Temple, as he sayes, John 2. 19. Destroy this temple. It was Gods Tabernacle, Rev. 13. 6. the Holy of Holies, Dan. 9. 24. in which the fulness of the Godhead dwells bodily; which in the local place of the Heavens it doth not, nor is Personally united to them; and that is it which makes this his Manhood more high than the Heavens. and to be called a greater and more perfect Tabernacle, not made with hands; that is to say, not of this building. The Apostle speaks it of Christs own Body; for of the Heavens he speaks besides in the next Verse; By his own blood he entred into the Holy of Holies; (ver. 12.) namely, the Heavens, then which this of his Body is the greater and more excellent Tabernacle: ver. 11.

USE. Let us hold fast our Profession against oppositions of Men. The Apostle speaks to them in suffering times, and we may say it in difficult times. And it is to be held fast: there is danger of being pulled from it by the Adversaries. Men who have great Masters, bear themselves upon them; and are bold to wear their Livery. The three Children saw God in his greatness, and contemned Nebuchadnezzar; and so did Moses as to Pharaoh, whose wrath he regarded not. Let us still view how great an High Priest we have, and give back in nothing. Paul loves to have this often in his mouth; Jesus Christ my Lord, so Phil. 3. and elsewhere: As Courtiers use to cry, The King my Master. Now why should not we be as bold as they? For he is able, and will bear us out against all that do oppose us. We are not careful (said the three Children) to answer thee (O King) in this matter: They saw God to be great, and able to bear them out: So we seeing our High Priest to be so great, let us hold fast to him; and he will hold us fast, and none shall pluck us out of his hands, John 10. 28. He is a great High-Priest entred into the Heavens; who will also if we hold fast to him, bring us thither. Men cleave to great Persons in great distresses, when they can give them any great hopes. Can the Son of Jesse give you vineyards and olive-yards! said Saul, when he feared the Peoples departing from him. But have any of your great Masters Places in Heaven to bestow, have they Mansions and Offices there to dispose of! (may our High Priest say) but Christ hath; He is passed into the Heavens.

CHAP. II.

The Words of the Text explained. What is meant by the Holiest. How we enter in thither.

HEB. x. 19, 20, 21, 22.

Having therefore Brethren, boldness to enter into the Holiest, by the Blood of Jesus.
By a new and living way; which he hath consecrated for us through the vail; that is to say, his flesh:
And having a High Priest over the house of God:
Let us draw near with a true heart, in full assurance of faith, having our hearts sprinkled from an evil conscience, and our bodies washed with pure water.

MY Subject from out of these Words is, How in Prayer, especially secret Prayer, to converse with Christ our great High Priest; entered into the Heavens; and we to follow him thither by Faith, and treat him there when we pray, as being entered into the Holiest with him.

The Art and Skill of this high Converse with him in the Heavens; is the Apostle Pauls: who of all the Apostles (if not alone) hath most insisted on this particular: And in this Epistle he unfolds the mystery of Christs High Priesthood, as it was veiled under the Type and Shadow of the Levitical High Priesthood of Aaron, and his Successors: And writing to the Hebrews, now turned Christians, he speaks both the Doctrines and Duties of the Gospel, in the Old Testament Characters; and conciphers them: But in a special manner he had explained the mystical signification of that eminentest part of Aarons Priesthood, in his officiating on that most solemn day of Atonements, when he went into the Holy of Holies; (which was the summe and complement of the High Priests service) to be Christ entering into the heavens, as an High Priest for us: (of which you may read largely, though intermingled with other things; from Chap. 4. ver. 16. and Chapters 5, 6, 7, 8, 9. and so on in this 10th Chapter, unto these words:) And in these words (my Text) he comes to the Duties, or practical part that belongeth to us thereupon as inferred from thence: which likewise he utters in the language of the Types, of that dayes Rites and Solemnities.

And of all those Gospel Duties he begins first with this very thing which I have singled forth for my Subject; viz. How to converse with God and Christ now he is in Heaven, in allusions unto the Type thereof, and there to transact our concernments with him: (which being the first of all the other exhortations made, shews it was a principal one; and most genuinely inferred from the foresaid Type;) And to that end he first informs us in ver. 19. of our Right and Priviledge, that are Saints under the New Testament: viz. To enter into the holiest; and to go to him our High Priest thither; and the foundation of that Priviledge to be his Blood; ver. 19. And withal Secondly, pointing us the way which our High Priest hath paved, and consecrated for us; to come thither to him; ver. 20. himself having first entered as an High Priest for us; ver. 21. And then Thirdly, In ver. 22. He sets forth the Duty and Qualifications of those that will so come; and which they

that enter must seek for, or bring with them ; and these drawn and inferred either from the type of the Peoples part, performed on that day ; or by the High Priest acted for them ; or on their behalf.

There are three or four things or Phrases in the Text ; which I account it requisite to explain ; to make way for the founding of this my subject on the words ; ere I proceed upon it.

First, That by the holiest, here is meant the highest Heavens, into which Christ is entered, and where Christ is resident, and whither we are bidden to come and enter ; and whereof the Holiest in the Temple was the type : This is so much known to the most of intelligent Readers, as it needed not to be insisted on, but for the more unknowing their sake. And they may understand from our Apostle that the Tabernacle of Moses, and afterwards the Temple of Solomon, consisted of two Courts or Rooms ; see 1 Kings 16. 17, 19. one before the other : which the Apostle exactly describes, to the end that all might understand this very thing I am upon. Chap. 9. 2, 3. For there was a tabernacle made ; the first wherein was the candlestick, and the table, and the shew-bread, which is called the sanctuary or the holy : And after the second vail, the tabernacle ; which is called the holiest of all : And the Priests he sayes, namely, The holy, went into the first every day to Sacrifice, ver. 6. But into the second (which was the holiest) went the high-priest once a year, &c. ver. 7. which second he again calls, The holiest of all, in ver. 8. And at ver. 9. he tells us, that this first Tabernacle (so he calls the whole, consisting of these two Apartments) was a figure for that time then present : The figure of what ? The Apostle plainly unriddles and explains it ; ver. 24. Christ is not entered into the holy places made with hands, (that is, into those Earthly Tabernacles which the Priests entered into every day ; and the High Priest once a year entered into ;) which are the figures of the true ; but into heaven it self ; now to appear in the presence of God for us : So then we are sure that the Heavens are the holy places : And the Heavens Christ is now in, is the holiest ; and figured out by that holiest of all : I will not at all detain you with the Question, whether there be not in the Heavens a first Court, which Christ past through ; of which the Court of Priests was the figure ; into that Heaven of Heavens, of which the holiest of all, which then the High Priest entered into, was the figure : The Apostle in that last place cited, doth in the plural mention both, in saying, The holy places : and that they were figures of the true : (And 'tis certain the true here, are the Heavens :) And yet again when he interprets what those places did signifie ; he sayes, Heaven it self, in the singular : It is enough to my present purpose, that the highest Heavens is here meant by the holiest ; those which Christ entered into, and where now he is, and into which we are here invited to come to him ; and into which our hope is said to be (in like allusion) to enter, as an Anchor ; into that within the veil ; whether the fore-runner is for us entered : Chap. 6. 19, 20. And that within the veil, is plainly an allusion to the holy of holies : So the Apostle would have us to mind and observe, from his foresaid description ; chap. 9. 2. After the second veil was the Tabernacle, which is called the Holiest of all.

The Second thing to be explained, is ; what is meant by entring : Our entring (for it is spoken of us, and our entring ;) into the holiest ; that is, into Heaven.

1. We all know that our going to enjoy and possess Heaven, after this Life and World are ended, is termed an entring into it : Matth 25. 23. Enter into thy masters joy : And Acts 14. 22. And Christs entring into his Glory, and into the Heavens, (as in this Epistle) is said to be when he ascended.

But here this our entring must be understood of what is to be, and what we are to do in this Life : We being invited upon the declaration of our right to enter in, ver. 19. to come to, as the word is ; ver. 22. or draw near : And 'tis as an act to be done by us in this Life : An entry and coming with liberty of speech ; as the word translated [liberty and boldness] in ver. 19. also signifies.

And

And withal to come to and draw near, doth import an act of ours; and that to be with ſuch and ſuch diſpoſitions, as at that preſent are to accompany that act of drawing near, and to be exerciſed therein; all which diſpoſitions are concomitants of this Life. Moreover, it is as an entry whilſt we are in via, in the way; viatores, wayfaring men; (as the Prophet Iſaiah, chap. 35. terms us;) ſo ver. 20. We are to enter by a new and living way; conſecrated for us; and that is in this Life: In the other World we are at our Journeys end.

Yet 2. There is an entring into the Kingdom of Heaven, in this Life; which is, when we are firſt called and converted, and born again, which indeed is done but once for all, whereof Baptiſm is the Seal; of which thoſe places are to be underſtood; John 3. 5. Except a man be born of water, and of the Spirit, he cannot [enter] into the kingdom of God; which phraſe is alſo uſed Matth. 19. 23, 24. and Mark 10. 23, 25. That a rich man ſhall hardly enter into the kingdom of God: that is, is hardly converted; and is ſpoken upon occaſion of the rich young Mans refuſal to come unto Chriſt: But this initial entrance is not meant here; for he ſuppoſeth them he ſpeaks to, to have been as to this reſpect entred already; and therefore calls them Brethren, ver. 19. and ſuppoſeth them to have a right already to enter: Seeing therefore we have bo!dneſs or right to enter, (as many interpret it) ſo upon that right invites them to draw near; whereas the new Birth is that which gives that right firſt; as John 1. 12, 13. and therefore is not meant here: And again, that entrance into the Kingdom of Heaven by Effectual Calling at firſt, is as an entrance into a State, or ſuch as into a City, to be at firſt admitted a free Deniſon of it; (The ſtate of Grace; as Rom. 5. 1.) but is an admiſſion into a condition or priviledge, namely, that the Kingdom of Heaven ſhould belong to us: 'Tis to be Cælo donatus, made a Citizen of Heaven; Phil. 3. But this here is an entrance as into an houſe, ver. 21. where ſome one dwells whom we would ſpeak withal; and liberty of ſpeech is that which this entrance ſerves unto: And this is into the holieſt (you ſee) as into a place in alluſion to the High Prieſts going into the Tabernacle, as an holy place; and ſuch was Chriſts entrance into Heaven, as into the holy place, as was ſaid chap. 9. 24. and this of ours is into Heaven, as his was.

3. It reſts then this be an entrance into Heaven in this Life, by our performing ſuch acts of drawing near, and coming to God, and our High Prieſt there, as are to be continued and encreaſed after our firſt Converſion, and performed between it and our entring into the actual fruition of the Glory of Heaven: And that there are ſuch actings of Soul, in the exerciſe of which we do truly and really enter into Heaven, and are ſo called, the Scriptures are not wanting as to the uſing this phraſe in that ſenſe: The Apoſtle 2 Pet. 1. 11. having exhorted unto an exact diligence in all good Works after calling, and unto adding all ſorts of Graces, as occaſions call for the exerciſe of them, and to abound therein; from ver. 5. to 10. he then propoſeth four or five Spiritual advantages that will accrue thereby, proceeding by a gradation in them, ver. 10. And the laſt and higheſt of them is in ver. 11. For ſo an entrance ſhall be miniſtred unto you abundantly, into the everlaſting kingdom of our Lord and Saviour Jeſus Chriſt. This is narrowed by moſt Interpreters unto an abundant free entrance into Heaven, and reception of our Spirits by Chriſt at our death; according as we have abounded in good Works, to be filled at our Death with Joy and Comfort anſwerable: As alſo at the latter day, when Chriſt ſhall ſay, Come ye bleſſed; for ye ſaw me hungry, &c. And it is certain that the word enter is uſed of our taking that full poſſeſſion of enjoyment after Death of the Kingdom of Heaven, as Acts 14. 22. and frequently elſewhere; yet I find Calvin to take in unto this, the promiſe of all thoſe rich ſupplies and aſſiſtances, which God vouchſafes all along during this Life, whereby to bring us to Heaven. And ſome Proteſtant Interpreters ſince, take it to include aſſurance in this Life, and a promiſe that Eternal Life, and the happineſs thereof, ſhall open it ſelf to you more and more, or be ſet open wider unto your Spirits, ſo as to enjoy the larger ſenſe thereof in your Souls, that you may more amply and freely pierce into the inwards of Dutch Annotators. Amplior introitus, i. e. felicitas & vita æterna amplius pandet, & explicabit ſe vobis, ut copioſius, & liberius penetrare poſſetis in regni hujus partes interiores; & frui vitæ illius ſenſu, in ampliori menſura: Dixon in verba.

Book VI. Heaven, and enjoy the ſenſe of that Life in a larger meaſure. I have in the Margent cited theſe that I may not appear alone in giving this ſenſe; though I take the words to extend to both; viz. unto our entrance by way of full fruition in the other World; the comfort whereof at Death God often gives to thoſe that have abounded in Holineſs: That their Souls are in Heaven whilſt in their Bodies; and in the Suburbs of Heaven: And they crowd not in, but have the great broad Gates ſet wide open to them; yet withal alſo that in the mean time holy walking procureth, miniſtreth or affordeth in the very doing, the priviledge of a more abundant entrance into Heaven every day more and more, all along this Life; by Chriſts manifeſting himſelf to them; as John 14. upon keeping his Commandments: And in the coherence of the words in Peter with the foregoing, the promiſe hereof comes in laſt, as an increaſe or ſurpluſage of the former priviledges; (all which are in this Life): One mentioned ver. 10. was, that we ſhould thereby make our calling and election ſure. And this of abundant entrance, is not the ſame with that: Not a repetition (of the ſame matter, of aſſurance namely;) but an addition of a diſtinct and further benefit: A further, and indeed the higheſt degree attainable in this Life: The top of his Climax, or higheſt aſcenſion of ſuch attainments. As if he had ſaid, you ſhall not only make your calling and election ſure, but you ſhall enter more and more into Heaven, and live in Heaven afore-hand whilſt you live, and take an ample poſſeſſion of it in the firſt fruits thereof, which yet is called but an entring, (though often ſtill renewed) becauſe it is at higheſt in this Life but an imperfect attainment: And in compariſon of the latter full entrance which is upon Death, but as an entrance, a firſt entrance, and firſt fruits and earneſt, and yet ſaid to be an entrance: And thus Heb. 4. We who have believed do enter into reſt; and therefore going on from faith to faith, as Rom. 1. we enter further into reſt, as Faith increaſeth; every renewed act being a renewed entrance; and thus we are entring all our Life long; and this Jacob, that ſo extraordinary Saint and Patriarch, had enjoyed long afore Death: He ſayes, This is the houſe of God, and this is no other than the gates of heaven; which in that viſion (wherein he ſaw Chriſt and the Angels) he had been taken up into; Gen. 28. 17. yea and every Soul that walks very holily, and abounds in it, though he enter not into the joyes of Heaven, ſuch as are unſpeakable and full of glory; yet he may truly be ſaid to go further up into Heaven, in his ſo walking; and to obtain larger roomth and place there then other Men though holy: He enters further up into the Country every day; into the heart of it as we uſe to ſay, (though it be true that every true Chriſtian is paſt from Death to Eternal Life, from Hell into Heaven) and when poſſeſſion or fruition ſhall come, ſuch a Man will find a more rich and ample proviſion to have been made for him there againſt he comes.

4. But if in the laſt place, more ſtrict enquiry be made, what actings, exerciſes of Faith and Holineſs, the Apoſtle doth here, in this my Hebrews Text, more eſpecially intend, and calleth an entring into heaven, and a coming to, and drawing near? I Anſwer:

(1.) In General: All Goſpel-worſhip and Ordinances, which therefore by way of Inference from this here in ver. 19. he in the 23th exhorteth not to forſake: And we muſt conſider that his Exhortation begun in the 19th Verſe, is an Inference from his Diſcourſe afore of the Jewiſh Worſhip; and particularly of that on that ſolemn day of Atonement, when the High Prieſt went into the Holieſt, which was the higheſt Worſhip that the Jewes had preſcribed them; and was a day of pure Worſhip: They were to do no work thereon: Yea and was ſtiled a Sabbath of Sabbatiſm, the Queen of Sabbaths, and above all other Sabbaths whatſoever: And you may obſerve how in the beginning of this Chapter, wherein he goes on to interpret and unfold the myſteries of this dayes ſolemnity, he ſtiles them that come to it, The worſhippers; the comers thereunto, ver. 1. 2. and from which (namely that his Diſcourſe, Doctrinally treated by him in three Chapters afore) it is he deduceth his Exhortation here: So then Goſpel-Worſhip and Ordinances may in general be underſtood to be an entrance into Heaven, and the diſpoſitions required in ver. 22. to be the inward qualifications requiſite unto all ſuch Worſhip. Chap. 2.

But (2.) In a more ſpecial and eminent manner, I conceive, he underſtands Prayer, and eſpecially Private Prayer : And I am ſo far from being alone in it, that I find my ſelf compaſſed about with a cloud of Interpreters; who, almoſt, generally carry it unto Prayer : I could fill a Leaf with their Names and Sayings to this purpoſe upon ſome or other of theſe : And that Parallel-like Exhortation, (which many of them do alledge for this) Heb. 4. 14. Seeing we have a great high prieſt, that is paſt into the heavens, Jeſus the Son of God : And ver. 16. Let us come boldly to the throne of grace. The Exhortation there let us come, is a coming by Faith in Prayer, imploring for help in time of need and diſtreſs ; ſo the Pſalmiſt uſeth the word to come to God. Pſal. 65 2. To thee ſhall all fleſh [come] : How? For thou art a God hearing Prayer : 'Tis a coming then by Prayer. And the word here in my Text, Let us draw near, προσερχώμεθα, is in the Original the very ſame that is there in Chap. 4. 16. And in the next Chapter to this where my Text is, (the 11th) He that cometh to God is one that diligently ſeeks him, and that is by Prayer : But if it were as it is tranſlated, draw near ; it likewiſe importeth Prayer : James 4. Draw near to God, and he will draw near to you ; be afflicted and mourn, &c. Again, in that Parallel, Chap. 4. 16. it is a coming to God to obtain mercy, and find grace to help : And all that ſpeaks Prayer. For theſe are the aim of a Soul that invocates God by Prayer, to obtain his Mercy for Pardon ; and Grace for ſupplies of all their Spiritual wants, and other needs. And alſo the word βοήθεια there uſed, is a crying out for help, in caſe of extremity : Likewiſe the word there tranſlated [boldly], μετὰ παῤῥησίας, with boldneſs ; is properly liberty of ſpeech : And what is that? but to come and ſpeak freely to God our needs ; and boldly to uſe all ſorts of pleas with him, which Grace and Mercy in him do afford, to obtain relief and ſuccours ; to pour out our hearts afore him ; and is not the very word alſo, that the Apoſtle chooſeth here in my Text to form his exhortation in, the very ſame? We having boldneſs, let us come, or draw near ; that is, having liberty granted to ſpeak, and ſpeak out our minds ; our whole hearts ; let us come and do it. Every word in that Heb. 4. ſpeaks Prayer ; and with that exhortation there, doth this here correſpond and agree. The alluſion alſo here of entring, refers unto the Jews, their coming to worſhip ; which is ſtiled an entring into Gods courts. Pſal. 100. And their coming with Praiſe and Thanksgiving, (which is a part of Prayer, 2 Tim. 1. 1.) in the 4th Verſe of that Pſalm, Enter into his gates with thanksgiving, and into his courts with praiſe ; be thankful unto him, and bleſs his name. But further, the ſpecial alluſion of this whole Paragraph, my Text, being ſpecially made to the worſhip and practices of that day, wherein the High Prieſt entered into the Holieſt, (which phraſe of entring into it) is ſo often repeated in this Epiſtle ; this brings it yet nearer home unto Prayer as meant ; and ſhews that it is a coming to God and Chriſt by Prayer : For both on the High Prieſts part that day, as he went in by Blood into the holieſt, ſo by Incenſe to make a Cloud ; and by theſe two alone he went into the holieſt : Lev. 16. 12, 13. And he ſhall take a cenſer full of burning coals of fire from off the altar before the Lord, and his hands full of ſweet incenſe beaten ſmall, and bring it within the vail : And he ſhall put the incenſe upon the fire before the Lord, that the cloud of the incenſe may cover the mercy-ſeat that is upon the teſtimony, that he dye not. This all of us that come into the holieſt, are to imitate : Now not only Incenſe betokens Prayer, (as in the Pſalms which was required on the High Prieſts part, but on the Peoples part alſo : It was required of them, that whilſt Incenſe was offering, they ſhould pray without. Luke 1. 9, 10. According to the cuſtom of the Prieſts office, his lot was to burn incenſe when he went into the temple of the Lord : And the whole multitude of the people were praying without at the time of incenſe : And if on the times of the ordinary dayes of Worſhip, much more on this day ; the day of atonements which was appointed alſo for the People for Prayer, for they were to faſt and afflict their Souls for Sin, Lev. 16. 27, 28. which Book VI. they then confeſt, even of their whole Lives; and was therefore joyned with Prayer as that Duty did require for Atonement.

So as every thing falls in, That Prayer bears the main of the Apoſtles intendment and Exhortation: And thoſe Qualifications, ver. 22. of a true heart, &c. do come in but as Concomitants, to make the Prayer acceptable.

CHAP. III.

That it is the Priviledge of Believers under the New Teſtament to enter into the Higheſt Heavens by Faith, and with the Apprehenſion of Faith. An Invitation to them ſo to do. The Diſpoſitions which are required to make them meet for ſuch an Heavenly Converſe.

THESE things premiſed, I reduce the words to theſe Four Heads.

I. That all that are Believers already, under the New Teſtament; Their Priviledge is, That when they worſhip, eſpecially in Prayer; that they ſhould by Faith, and with the apprehenſion of Faith; enter boldly into the very higheſt Heavens; and placing themſelves there, to ſeek Communion and Converſe with God, thorough Chriſt. And with Chriſt himſelf as our High Prieſt; themſelves conſidered as they are in Heaven; and we by Faith preſent there, together with God and Chriſt: In brief, when we pray, we ſhould in an immediate manner ſet our ſelves to enjoy Communion with God, and Chriſt; as they are in Heaven.

II. A free and open Invitation here made with an Exhortation thereunto; which Invitement you have amply preſſed, and enforced with the Higheſt Encouragements to perſwade confidence in ſo doing: Namely, Thus to approach God, and Chriſt in the Higheſt Heavens: Theſe two Heads you have in the 19, 20, 21. verſes, Having therefore Brethren boldneſs to enter into the Holyeſt, by the Blood of Jeſus: By a new and living way which he hath conſecrated for us, by the vail of his fleſh: And having an High Prieſt over the Houſe of God, let us draw near, &c.

III. The inward Diſpoſitions, or Qualifications which are required to make them meet for ſuch an Heavenly Converſe; And which are to make their Prayers prevalent, to have power with God; to obtain what we pray for:

1. With which therefore we ſhould enter, and approach: Or,

2. Which we ſhould put forth, and exerciſe in the time of performance of that Duty of Praying: And as much as in us lies to endeavour not to come off without them: Or,

3. At leaſt which we in our Prayers ſhould chiefly ſeek for at Gods Hands; and implore his Grace and Mercy to help our Infirmities therein; theſe above all things elſe that we pray for; without doing which we ſhall much fall ſhort in our obtaining thoſe other things, prayed for by us; And theſe you have in ver. 22. Let us draw nigh with a true heart, in full aſſurance of Faith; having having our hearts ſprinkled from an evil conſcience, and our bodies waſhed with pure water. Chap. 3.

I have propoſed this Third Head under theſe three ſeveral branches; That it may take in and comprehend all ſorts of Believers; All of them either having or performing either the one, or the other of theſe three. For if we ſhould underſtand, and limit the ſcope of theſe Qualifications, to be all and every of them abſolutely neceſſary conditions, that is ſuch, as without each of which, unleſs every Believer brings with him before he prayes, he is not, nor ſhall be accepted, nor his Prayer regarded; we muſt exclude many of the Righteous: For 'tis certain that many do want full Aſſurance of Faith; which ſpeaks an higher degree of Faith, and eſpecially an aſſurance, that their Perſons are accepted: Many alſo fall ſhort of having their Conſciences ſo fully ſprinkled from an evil Conſcience; as to their own ſenſe, (as that Phraſe would import, even to the ſenſe of their Conſciences, of which hereafter;) that their own hearts ſhould not condemn them; in the guiltineſs of many Sins that God is pleaſed to let lye bound, even upon them that are Saints, for as long as his pleaſure is, thereby to humble them. And to confirm this, if we take the ſcope of the Apoſtle, I look upon the words to be an Invitation, with an Exhortation: And the ſcope of that Exhortation to be, what Diſpoſitions thoſe that would pray as in Heaven, when they pray; and that would pray after ſuch an Heavenly rate, ſhould labour to attain; and either bring ſuch with them when they come; or at leaſt are to ſeek after to obtain them in praying, and by Prayer: And ſo theſe things to be propoſed here, as principal matters to be prayed for: And ſo they ſerve as Rules of Direction to praying, as well as for Qualifications requiſite thereunto: I find but two Interpreters that have toucht upon any ſuch ſcope; and they are in Flaccius Illyricus, upon the words; of which afterwards: The other is worthy Mr. Dixon, who hath well obſerved on that word, [in full aſſurance of Faith;] that Gods meaning is, that he likes it better to come with a full aſſurance of Faith, though he deſpiſeth not the weakeſt; nor quencheth Faith in the Smoak, not yet riſen unto Victory in the Flame. To which I add, it being an Exhortation, Exhortations are uſually made in the ſtrain of higheſt attainments, not the loweſt, and weakeſt: The Apoſtles did exhort to many things, weak Chriſtians might be long in attaining: For the Copy, or Samples you ſet afore Learners, uſe to be with the perfecteſt; when yet they write, or work, very much ſhort of them: And ſo here the meaning is that God indeed would have you come in full aſſurance; and this he propoſeth as that which you may obtain; and exhorteth unto it as what he moſt deſires, and would have in you: Alſo conſider that yet the weakeſt Believer hath a Faith ſo far as to cauſe him to performe the main thing exhorted to; and that is, to come to God, and Chriſt; and alſo with a true heart in Prayer: Again, it is certain, that thoſe whoever they be, that have theſe diſpoſitions; he or they obtained them by Prayer: And therefore they cannot be all abſolute Conditions aforehand, in all caſes e're we come to pray: For themſelves are obtain'd (I ſay) by Prayer firſt; and much ſeeking of God too: And how many poor Souls do bitterly complain of the want of theſe?

IV. And each, and the whole of theſe; both Duty, Invitation, Priviledges, &c. are inferred from, and repreſented under the Analogie, and ſimilitude, of that ſpecial ſolemn worſhip, and the Rites thereof obſerved, and performed by the High-Prieſt, and the People upon the Great and Memorable Day of Atonement; once again Celebrated with extraordinary Sacrifices, on purpoſe appointed for that Day; beſides the Ordinary for every Day; the High-Prieſt carrying the Blood of thoſe extraordinary ones, to make Atonement into the Holy of Holies, which he entred into but once a year. All which was accompanied with Confeſſion of Sins and Prayer, the People alſo univerſally coming up to that Aſſembly; and were preſent at that Solemn Worſhip; keeping that day with afflicting their Souls for the Sins of their whole Lives paſt; which therefore muſt needs be joyned with Prayer on their part for the pardon of them, as Lev. 16. 12, 17. where 'tis ſaid the High Prieſt carryed Incenſe within the Vail, with which, if you compare, pare the Practice of the People, what it used to be whilst Incense was offered; As in Luke 1. 9, 10. According to the custom of the Priests Office, His (namely Zacharies) lot was to burn incense when he went into the Temple of the Lord: And the whole multitude of the People were praying without at the time of Incense; It appears that the People prayed that Day, Incense on that day being offered in the Holy of Holies, by the High Priest for an Atonement in the same, Lev. 16. 29, 30. which Day was called the Day of Atonements; and in like respect styled the Fast, Acts 27. 9.

From the Types of which the Apostle deducts his Exhortation here, in these four verses, and speaks to the Hebrews in the Language thereof; carrying us up from that Holyest, to Heaven; unto God, and Jesus our High Priest there: And he presseth the substantials of our inward Worshippings, in ver. 22. from the performances of that day especially in Prayer: For, as this Days Solemnities were the Top of the Jewish Worship; and spent in Fasting, Prayers, and Confessions of Sins by the People; so is Prayer, these Duties and Qualifications of our Persons in Prayer; the height of our Christian Religion.

For the first: That it is our Priviledge, and the Gospel-Dispensation calls for it; that when we pray, we should set our selves to enter in by Faith immediately into Heaven; and Converse with them as they be in Heaven; and we together with them.

Instead of more literal Proofs, this Text being Evidence sufficient, requiring us thus to do; I shall give Reasons and Demonstrations of it.

I. A Reason in General: The Gospel (the Doctrines of it, being totally Heavenly, and the Blessings of it Heavenly, Ephes. 1. 4.) hath exalted, raised up, and enhaunced all things thereof to an Heavenly State; in their several proportions, and kinds: Like the Elixar, It hath turned all the Legal Alchymie, or Carnal Earthly Ordinances; (as Heb. 9. 1. they are there called,) into Cœlestial: As in the same Heb. 9. 23, they are styled, even all the things, represented by those Types: The Gospel it self was styled with difference from the Old Covenant, The Kingdom of Heaven; and that by Christ himself, when he began to preach it: The very preaching of it is tearmed an Exaltation of those that heard it, unto Heaven: Matth. 11. 22. And a speaking from Heaven, Heb. 12. 25. And that is spoken in comparison to Moses giving the Law; whom he there oppositely tearms, him that spake on earth: Yea, and this speaking from Heaven is attributed to the Sermons of the Apostles, and ordinary Ministers unto the Hebrews and other Christians, to the end of the World. And if their Sermons, which are Ordinances by the Ministry of another, speaking to us; are a speaking of Christs from Heaven; What then are our Prayers, especially Private Prayers? For they are purely mediate effluxes of the Soul to God himself, without the intervention of any outward medium, but what is in, and from a Mans own Soul, Elevated and Assisted by the Holy Ghost, as Rom. 8. this may certainly be entituled, Praying in Heaven.

Our Conversation, (If such as becomes the Gospel;) is to be in Heaven, Phil. 3. 20. But Prayer is here made comparatively unto that ordinary Conversation, An entring into Heaven in so eminent a manner; as if that we walkt out of Heaven when in our Callings, &c. and entred anew sometimes; but now and then; and that when we pray, and come to worship: Likewise where Christians State is to sit together in Heavenlies, with Christ: Ephes. 2. 5, 6. Even when we were dead in sins, hath quickned us together with Christ: And hath raised us up together, and made us sit together in heavenly places in Christ Jesus: If you be quickned, and have the least of Spiritual Life begun in you, then hath Christ placed thee in Heaven; and our actings in Prayer should be in its degree, (and this exercise doth excel all other,) answerable to our State; and therefore should be a praying as Persons in Heaven: Certainly if any part of Worship, this in the Nature of it above all other, calls for it.

This Reason is but a General from the Heavenlinesse of the Gospel.

CHAP. IV.

The Priviledge of Believers under the New Testament Illustrated, and proved by the difference between them, and Believers under the Old Testament, who had not this Freedom of entring into the Holiest.

THERE is a further special Account to be given of this Priviledge from a difference between the manner of the Dispensation under the Law, and now under the Gospel; as in respect unto this very particular of Prayer; together with an explication wherein this difference lyes of us, from the old Jew; who yet directed their Prayers unto God that was in Heaven, and implored him to hear in Heaven, when they prayed, as in 1 Kings 8. you often have it, and elsewhere abundantly.

That there was, and is, (notwithstanding this now said of them,) a difference of Priviledge between them and us in this respect; 'tis plain, that this Exhortation in the Text, to come boldly into the Holiest is spoken oppositely to what was theirs specially, when compared with other passages of this Epistle concerning them: The Text also styling this our manner of coming into the Heavens, to be a new way initiated, or new begun (as the word consecrated, in ver. 20. doth also signifie,) by the Flesh of Jesus rent, as ver. 20. And by his Blood, ver. 19. newly shed; (as the words in the Original do import:) of which further after.

Concerning which difference,

I. I will not hold you in the Bryars of a Dispute about the meaning of that difficult place of our Apostle, chap. 9. 8. affirming that to the People of the Old Testament, The way (that is, for us;) into the Holyest of all was not yet made manifest; while as the first Tabernacle was yet standing: That is, whilst the Jewish Worship was yet in force; which was until Christ the true High Priest was ascended up into his Holyest, the Heavens: The plainest meaning to me is, that the Mystery of this was kept hid, in a great measure; that Christ might have the greater Honour in the discovery of it upon, and after his Ascension: And also to shew, That by vertue of his Blood it is that any do now, or ever did enter therein: But still so, as whatever de facto was then, that the Godly entred into Heaven at Death; yet the way to be thorough Christs entring: This was not then manifest: (I take hold of, and keep, to, the proper import of the word:) He saies not, that none had in reality, or indeed not entred; for Enoch and Elias had; but that it was not manifest: Nor yet was it, that it were altogether unknown to them, that they should one day come; thither; for the Patriarchs knew it, and expected it; Heb. 11. 10, 14, 16. All which still was but with a glimmering, obscure Light; as a dark shadow: I take therefore the Apostles meaning in the same sense that the same Apostle speaks it; of the whole Mystery of the Gospel it self; Eph. 3. 5. Which in other Ages was not made known to the Sons of men, as it is now revealed unto his Holy Apostles, and Prophets by the Spirit: Even so this particular of it was not manifest; that is, in that clear manner that it is now, upon Christs Ascension: The very Apostles (in the name of whom seems to Philip speaks it;) John 14.5. say, Lord, we know not whither thou goest, and how can we know the way?

My

Book VI.

My Inference from this is, that if the way of entrance at laſt into that Holy of Holies, was not then ſo manifeſt to them; then much leſs was this way of Worſhipping and Praying, by an Immediate entrance of themſelves (through Chriſt) into Heaven it ſelf, when ever they prayed: And as preſent with their High-Prieſt himſelf, to preſent themſelves by Faith unto God thorough him, and ſo offer up their Prayers to him; but ſtood as aloof, as Men on Earth, whilſt they prayed unto God as dwelling in Heaven: But this the Apoſtle in my Text hath taught us; And this way I may ſafely ſay of it, was not manifeſt then, as it is now. But,

II. Beſides the obſcurity of the knowledge of this way of Praying; they were preoccupated from ſuch an addreſs immediate, into Heaven it ſelf; (ſuch as we have;) in that God appointed another place of his Reſidence, viz. his Temple on Earth; and therein ſpecially the Holy of Holies; calling upon them to look unto, and make their Addreſſes to him, as dwelling alſo there: Whereas now he hath appointed Heaven it ſelf immediately for us in Prayer to come into, when we come unto him; where alſo our High-Prieſt is preſent: Their Caſe ſtood thus: They knew indeed that Gods dwelling place was Heaven; and that when they prayed, God heard in Heaven his dwelling-place; and therefore when they prayed, they ſpread forth their hands towards Heaven, as Solomon in his Prayer did: But yet withal, they were firſt called upon to do Homage to God, as ſitting on his Throne on Earth; as ſitting between the Cherubims on the Mercy-Seat, which covered the Ark in the Holy of Holies: So Hezekiah directs his Prayer, 2 Kings 19. 15. O God that ſitteſt between the Cherubims; and others in the Pſalms the like: And thereupon alſo, when they prayed, (though in private Prayer;) They were bidden to look towards the Holy Place and Temple; as Pſal. 28. 2. Hear the voice of my ſupplications when I cry unto thee; when I lift up my hands to thy Holy Oracle: This Oracle was the moſt Holy Place, where the Ark, the Mercy-Seat, and the Cherubims were: As you find 1 Kings 8. 6. and chap. 6. 5. And in this manner Solomon in the Dedication of his Temple, directs his own Prayer made by himſelf; and unto this courſe directed the People alſo; in that 1 Kings, chap. 8. He prayes unto God that dwelt in heaven to hear in heaven; and yet draws down their eyes towards that Houſe on Earth; as dwelling there; ver. 27, 28, 29, 30. But will God indeed dwell on earth? Behold the heaven, and the heaven of heavens cannot contain thee; how much leſs this houſe that I have builded; yet have thou reſpect unto the prayer of thy ſervant, and to his ſupplication, O Lord, my God! To hearken unto the cry, and to the prayer which thy ſervant prayeth before thee to day; that thine eyes may be open towards this houſe night and day; even towards the place of which thou haſt ſaid, My Name ſhall be there; that thou mayeſt hearken unto the prayer which thy ſervant ſhall make towards this place: And hearken thou to the ſupplication of thy ſervant, and of thy people Iſrael, when they ſhall pray towards this place; and hear thou in heaven thy dwelling-place, and when thou heareſt, forgive: So as they took God up, as dwelling in both places; but firſt lookt to his Dwelling-Houſe, or himſelf, as dwelling on Earth; And from thence their Faith was to climb up to him, as dwelling in that other, the moſt Holy Houſe in Heaven, whereof this on Earth was the Type; and thereby was to their weakneſs an help unto their Faith in Prayer, to have God ſo near them, (as the Phraſe is,) as on Earth; that God ſhould come down to Earth, and there had a viſible dwelling-houſe amongſt them; as Exod. 25. 8. And let them make me a Sanctuary that I may dwell among them; which he had not again on all the Earth.

And hence ariſeth a manifeſt difference betwixt their Condition, and ours; that though they prayed unto God that was in Heaven, and to hear in Heaven: yet,

1. Themſelves lookt upon themſelves as ſtanding afar off, at a diſtance from Heaven, whilſt they were a praying: And entred not themſelves by Faith into Heaven, as we are here called upon to do: I may therefore again ſay, This way of prayer in the holieſt was not then manifeſt, as 'tis now: And,

2. Though

Chap. 4.

2. Though they desired God would hear in Heaven, yet the Cry of their Prayer, and the Eye of their Faith were directed first unto, and towards his Holy of Holies on Earth; from whence, as by a rebound, (as I may so speak,) it should as by an eccho ascend up into the Ears of the Lord of Hosts in Heaven: Even as a Man directing his Speech, going immediately to such, or such an hollow place, or Cavern; the sound thereof comes back at second hand by reflection, to one that is further off; and their intercourse with God in Heaven was like as if one should send a Letter, or a Petition to a great Person; who hath two Dwelling Houses, one in a City, the other in some Village very far off from that City; and the Man is appointed to send his Petition, or Letter directly to the Country-House, but directed to him withal in his standing House in his City: So as indeed the Holiest Saint of them looked unto God in both; and did Homage to him as dwelling in both; and were not to neglect either: Whereas we take a direct course to Heaven when we pray, and divert not the least cast of an Eye to any thing on Earth, wherein God should be: We look not to the right hand, nor the left; not to one place more than another: Let prayers be made every where, 1 Tim. 2. 8. spoken in opposition to the Jews looking to their Temple.

And one Reason of this was, That God dealing then with them, as Children under Age; Gal. 4. 1. and instructing them by Figures of the Time; (as Heb. 9. 24. where he speaks of, and applies that Maxime to this very thing we are upon;) he therefore would have a figurative House to dwell in; (not such as in common he is said to dwell in all the Earth, but) separated from the rest of the Earth; which house was consecrated by himself; and wherein his Glory and Shadowy Presence did often shine and appear from forth the Oracle, the Holy of Holies, and filled that Temple: And thither their Faith and Prayers were to approach him first; and take up by the way, as we say, in their addresses to Heaven: God condescended herein to the weakness of them, whom he trained up as Children: And it was a way of Worship fit for Children, and suited to their Capacity; and yet sanctified unto them, because thus appointed by God.

You may perhaps in part understand, an Old Testament Jewish heart; and that of one that was truely penitent, by the Spirit of that poor Publican; whose Character and Frame of Spirit Christ hath lively set forth to us; Luke 18. And therein view the distance which they keep: He was a Sinner truly humbled, and an expectant of Mercy: It is said, He went up to pray in the Temple, ver. 10. (so then it therein falls pat with the Subject afore me: Now, observe what confirms the foregone differences (as on their part) I have given. 1. He stood afar off; so ver. 13. There is the distance I spake of. 2. He would not so much as lift up his eyes to Heaven: But, 3. Applyed himself, and his Prayer unto God, as sitting on his Mercy-Seat in the Holiest: In those words, But smote upon his breast, and said, [God be mertiful] unto me a sinner: It is that word, [God be merciful to me;] I take hold of for this: In the Original, the word ἱλάσθητι, that is there used, is a Verb answering to the Noun ἱλαστήριον, the Mercy-Seat: And unto ἱλασμός, a propitiation for Sin, As 1 John 2. 2. And so it is, as if he had said, According to that Mercy, Thou O God that sittest between the Cherubims, over and upon thy Mercy-Seat, (which is called ἱλαστηριον by the Septuagint, and owned by the Apostle, Heb. 9. 5.) declaring thereby that thou art, and wilt be propitious, and merciful unto poor Sinners; according unto that Mercy thereby set forth; Be merciful to me a poor Sinner, that am at this distance from that thy Holy place thou dwellest in: Yet I do look unto that thy Mercy-Seat, and to thee who sittest thereon; and have my eye, and hopes fixed wholly thereupon for Pardon: And though I dare not look up to Heaven it self where thou dwellest; yet my Soul looks toward this Mercy-Seat, whereon thou sittest on Earth: You may, I say, understand hereby the Level of a Jewish Faith: And that word ἱλάσθητι, as spoken by him, shews, that they understood, though darkly, what that Mercy-Seat did signifie: That God, that sat thereupon was merciful, and favourable to Expiate and make Atonement for Sins; and then to cover, and pardon them : As the Hebrew word importeth : (of which more afterwards ;) unto which the word ιλάσκεσθαι , and ιλάσκεω answereth ; signifying both to make Atonement or Reconciliation by Christ : So Heb. 2. 17. and also to be merciful, and forgive , upon such a Reconciliation made : As by Daniel, Dan. 9. 14. and Deut. 21. 8. Be merciful O Lord, &c. Now of this Man, Christ saies, he went away justified : He being humbled, and having this Faith : I but observe here how yet he stood afar off, Two Courts off from the Holy of Holies, where this Mercy-Seat was : Yea, in the remotest place out of that outermost Court, did this Man stand ; for it is comparatively spoken unto that nearer approach, which the Pharisee forsooth made ; he going up unto the highest part of that outward Court ; thither he crowds up himself with Confidence, even next to the Door of the Priests Court : (But into that Priests Court, none was to enter , but a Levite :) Well, but here in this Heb. 10. we see the Faith we are exhorted unto : Christ being come, an High Priest of good things to come ; not as then, but in a shadow revealed, we are bidden to enter with boldness : Yea, to draw near, when we are entred with full assurance of Faith , and Confidence even into the Holy of Holies ; the Heaven where Christ is sitting at the Throne of the Majesty on high : Under the Law the Holyest Saint of that People was not to enter into the first Earthly Mundane Tabernacle , into which the Priests came : Yea, some have said, they were not so much as to see into it ; (but that I am not fully resolved of : for they brought their Sacrifice to the Door of that first Tabernacle ; and one would think, should see it sacrificed too for them :) but enter they did not, that's certain : And to that end there was a Veil, called the first Veil, placed at the entrance of the first Tabernacle of the Priests , to shut out the People ; as well as there was a second Veil placed afore the Holy of Holies ; as the Apostle plainly insinuates, Heb. 9. 2. I will not dispute whether it was to hinder the Peoples sight of what was done in the Priests Court ; as well as the second Veil hindred the Priests sight of what was in the Holy of Holies ; but to be sure, it forbad entrance to the People, if not wholly debarred their sight.

This practical instance I have, as by the way, and in the middle of my Discourse, inserted ; to shew the difference mentioned of a Jewish Faith , and Prayer ; And as giving light to the rest of my Discourse on this Argument.

I proceed to confirm the former Notion further.

II. As in this manner they directed their Prayers unto God in his Temple, on their parts ; so answerably on Gods part he both promises

I. That his Eyes shall be open, and his Ears attent unto the Prayer that was made in that place : For now (saith he) I have chosen, and sanctified this house, that my Name may be there for ever : And mine Eyes, and my Heart shall be there perpetually : And in 1 Kings 6. 3. it is added by God , My Heart shall be there perpetually.

II. It is de facto said, and spoken of God ; that his hearing of their Prayers was out of his Holy Temple, as well as out of Heaven : And to send forth help, and Blessings, and Deliverances of his People upon their Prayers ; yea, and to work all his works of wonder, which he executes over the whole Earth, from out of his Temple, his dwelling-place on Earth.

Fateor quidem Cœlum alibi sæpe vocari Sanctum Dei Palatium ; sed hìc non dubito quin respexit ad Arcam : Quæ jam in monte Zion locata erat. Calvin in verba.

But especially in the deliverances of his people : Psalm 3. 4. I cryed unto the Lord with my voice, and he heard me out of his holy hill : 'Twas uttered by David when he fled from Absalom, as the title to the Psalm is ; (he having before placed the Tabernacle and Ark on Zion, the City of David, 2 Sam. 6. 12, 17. which he calls in that Psal. 3. The holy mount) and that speech of his here hath an aspect and reference unto those passages in the story of his flight ; 1 Sam. 15. The High Priest did offer to carry the Ark with him into the field ; ver. 24. no, sayes David, let it stand in its proper place, in the Tabernacle appointed for it, ver. 25. and thought he, my Prayer shall be towards it as 'tis placed in that ordained seat which God hath appointed :

And

Chap. 4.

And his Prayers having been heard, though at that diſtance from the Ark it ſelf, he glorifies God that had heard him at that diſtance out of his holy hill: (Thus Calvin gloſſeth on the words). Davids Faith glorying and triumphing in this, that whilſt Abſolom who came and poſſeſſed the City of Jeruſalem, and ſo had the outward preſence of the Temple and Ark with him; (and let him take that to himſelf;) but David in the mean while, though removed from it, bent his Prayers thither, and thoſe Prayers prevailed, and were heard therein (ſayes he) whilſt his wretched Son was rejected, who had the local being of the Ark cloſe by him and with him, for he was poſſeſſed of Jeruſalem: (Let theſe things be compared with the Story). In like manner, Pſalm 20. he brings in the people praying for their King; their petition ver. 2. is, Send thee help from the ſanctuary, and ſtrengthen thee out of Sion. And lo, as he hears the Prayer in his Sanctuary, ſo the performance of it is likewiſe ſaid to come from God, as dwelling in the Sanctuary; from thence it was he gave forth his commands for the execution; and yet ſo, as Heaven thereby was ſignified too: And therefore upon this experiment, David (who was the King they had prayed for) ſtrengthens his Faith for the future: Ver. 6. Now know I that the Lord ſaveth his anointed, he will hear him from his holy heaven, with the ſaving ſtrength of his right hand.

Hoc eſt, auxilietur tibi e Monte Sion: Ubi Arcam fœderis locari jubens, domicilium ſibi illic delegit. Calvinus in verba.

Many other like paſſages you may find ſcattered up and down in the Pſalms, and elſewhere; that what God doth at the Prayer of his people, he is ſaid to do it in his Temple: That is, that from out of his Temple, the ſentence to come forth, to render recompence to his enemies, is ſaid to be a voice out of his Temple. Iſa. 66. 6. A voice from the temple, a voice of the Lord, that rendereth recompence to his enemies. For God ſat as a Judge in his holy Temple, and ruled thence the whole earth, Hab. 2. 20. And Pſal. 99. 2. The Lord is great in Sion; and he is high above all people: And terrible out of his holy places; Pſal. 68. 35. The great deliverances of his people when threatned to be beſieged by Zenacharib and his Hoſt, in Hezekiahs times: Pſal. 76. 2, 3. In Salem is his tabernacle, and his dwelling place in Sion: There brake he the arrows of the bow, the ſhield, and the ſword, and the battle: Selah. Obſerve how it is ſaid, [There] he brake; namely in his Temple; his habitation there: For unto that his Temple doth the coherence in the Verſe afore carry it, for that was laſt in mention, and with the greateſt emphaſis above the former; either Jeruſalem, or the Land of Judah; ver. 1. And there he brake the ſpear, &c. that is, fruſtrated and made void all their Weapons prepared for the Battle, though not one ſtroke were ſtruck: So he is ſaid to break the arm of the King of Egypt, Ezek. 30. that is, to weaken his Power: But that which puts the greateſt notoriety upon this, as to our purpoſe in hand, is that in the ſtory we read, how that Zenacharibs overthrow was from Hezekiahs Prayer in the Temple; for upon Zenacharibs Letter, and Hezekiahs hearſay of the Blaſphemy, he took himſelf thither, went inſtantly into the Temple, and began his Prayer thus; O thou God of Iſrael, that dwelleſt between the cherubims. He invocates him under that ſtile of his dwelling in the Holies, and ſo hearing Prayers there: Thus you have it recorded both in Iſaiah and in 2 Kings 29. 15. And how ſuitably in anſwer hereunto is it ſaid here in the Pſalm, that God gave forth ſentence preſently out of his Tabernacle; yea and that ſo ſuddenly too, as that the very execution is ſaid

Unto Zenacharibs Invaſion doth Calvin refer it; for which he gives his Reaſon. And Piſcator in the very Title doth the ſame. And Ainſworth on the laſt Verſe aptly applies it to the Chieftains of Zenacharibs Army; which is a moſt apt accommodation of the concluſion of the ſtory, with a concluding Admonition given to Kings and Princes: Ver. 12. He ſhall cut off the ſpirit of Princes; he is terrible to the Kings of the earth. The word tranſlated Princes, is Anteceſſors, Leaders (ſee Junius Tranſlation) next to Kings, (which follows) God doth cut off their ſpirits; gather or take away their ſpirits; their Lives in a moment at once; and with as much eaſe and liberty at pleaſure, as a Gardiner prunes the Leaves and Branches of Vines: Or as he would gather the bunches of the Grapes when fully ripe; and makes no matter on't to do it. How fitly this doth correſpond with the event in that ſtory, you may ſee but by reading theſe few words, which are the concluſion of that ſtory too, in 2 Chron. 32. 21. And the Lord ſent an Angel which cut off all the mighty men of valour; and the [Leaders] and Captains in the Camp of the King of Aſſyria. And for thoſe other words in the Pſalm; He is terrible to the Kings of the earth; take thoſe other words in the ſame Verſe in the Story: So he returned with ſhame of face to his own Land. What a dread and confuſion muſt it needs ſtrike the Heart of that haughty Prince with: But that was not all; read but the Verſe; And when he was come into the houſe of his God, they that came out of his own bowels, ſlew him there with the ſword.

Book VI. to be done there; that is, from thence: And yet again in the 8th Verſe of the Pſalm, it is ſaid to be a ſentence from Heaven too: Thou didſt cauſe judgment (ſo called becauſe it was the ſentence of God as a Judge) to be heard from Heaven. Thus Hezekiah prayed, and thus God heard; and both as in the Temple.

CHAP. V.

That there is a fair and open Invitation to enter into Heaven when we Pray. And in ſuch a manner to Pray, as thoſe that are thither entered.

As Rev. 11. 12. 'tis ſpoken of the Witneſſes.

IT being the condition of many New Teſtament Saints, (ſo much of Moſes vail remaineth on their hearts) that they dare not approach ſo near as to believe themſelves in Heaven, or to be called up to Heaven, when they are to pray: They hope indeed in the end to enter in thither when they dye, (and 'tis true they ſhall) but ſtand at preſent afar of: Our Apoſtle therefore vehemently exhorteth them in theſe words, to draw near: ver. 22. And to enforce this his Exhortation, tells them they have a liberty, yea a right to enter. And then he follows to back that with other moſt potent Arguments to perſwade them hereunto.

Concerning this his ſcope in the General, Obſerve.

1. That this Invitation with that Exhortation, ver. 22. is of ſuch Perſons as are actually Believers already: For 'tis of ſuch that at preſent have a right to enter, and cauſe of boldneſs. 2. That they are ſuppoſed to have a true Heart, and a ſaving Faith wrought in them; and thereupon are exhorted to draw near, yet nearer, with a full aſſurance of Faith, which is a further degree of Faith, in believing their right and intereſt, and of the acceptation of their Perſons and Prayers when they come: And ſuch a Faith of Aſſurance alwayes preſuppoſeth a firſt Act of Faith of Recumbency to be already begun; 'tis that begins their intereſt; which Faith of Recumbency the Apoſtle Paul ſaith, was the foundation Faith of himſelf, and Peter, and the other Apoſtles and Chriſtian Jewes: Gal. 2. 16. We believed on Jeſus Chriſt that we might be juſtified. Likewiſe 3. Thoſe he thus invites and exhorts, he termeth Brethren: Seeing therefore [Brethren] we have a liberty, &c. Let us draw near or come to.

There is another Invitation to come to Chriſt, which is on purpoſe directed to ſuch as are but as yet under a work of preparation unto their coming to Chriſt; namely of thoſe that are weary and heavy laden: Matth. 11. 28, 29. Come unto me all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you reſt. Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me, for I am meek and lowly in heart, and ye ſhall find reſt unto your Souls. And that indeed is that coming to Chriſt, by Souls that are now a converting. And ſo the Exhortation there is for them to put forth that firſt Act of Faith, which they never had done before, that they may be ſaved: But this here is an Invitation with an Exhortation to thoſe that have come to Chriſt for Salvation already, that they would enter into Heaven in Prayer: And it is certainly a miſtake in thoſe Interpreters, that do extend the direct ſcope of this here unto Men who as yet have not believed, to come in at firſt to believe. I ſay this is not the direct ſcope of our Apoſtle; though I acknowledge (to the honour of this portion of Scripture) that many of the Grounds, Perſwaſives and Inſtructions here given

Believers

Chap. 5.

Believers to come into Heaven, by Prayer to Christ, may powerfully be made use of as pertinent invitements, perswasives and directions to those whom we preach to; and by themselves to perswade them, being humbled and heavy Laden for their first coming to Christ: As namely, 1. That they are immediately and directly to come to Christ, as the way to God the Father: (As my Text also teacheth, and as Christ is here represented). And 2. To come unto him as an High Priest, to sprinkle their Consciences with his Blood, as ver. 20. 22. Likewise 3. To come to him as an High Priest that is over the House of God: And so as to him that hath the power and commission of admission of Souls into that house at first; the Houshold of God his Father, to own and receive them: (And this is most proper unto the first Act of Faith). And 4. To come to God the Father with Christs Blood: To be justified by him freely by his Grace, through the Redemption that is in Jesus Christ, whom God hath set forth to be a propitiation through faith in his Blood. And thus to be sprinkled from an evil Conscience; that is, from the guilt of all their Sins: which chap. 9. he terms a purging by his Blood their Consciences from dead works, (which word dead works is proper unto the Sins and state of a Person that hath been unregenerate; their works are wholly dead works.) And 5. To come both to God the Father and the Son, to give them true and sincere hearts unto God and his interest. Also 6. To have their Bodies put Synechdochically for the whole Man: Washt; that is, sanctified by pure Water; and their outward Conversation made holy and pure by the power of the Holy Ghost, working as clear Water.

See Calvin on those words.

And as all these are undeniably the main substantials of saving Conversion; and which humbled Sinners, invited to come to Christ, do seek for at Christs hands, and God the Fathers, so they are all found in the Text: And it is also as certain, that after we have believed and been converted, that these are the great things which in Prayer we drive at, and treat with God and Christ for, even ever after, till we come to Heaven: And so the words of the Text may serve for both: And the most of these you will find in Davids renewed Faith and Repentance, in Psalm 51. And indeed it falls out that all the same Essentials that are wrought in, or that are to be sought by Converts at the first for their Salvation; the very same the most growing Christians are to continue to exercise in their renewals of Faith and Repentance in Prayer; as David there did: And like as that Invitation, Matth. 11. Come to me all ye that are heavy laden, &c. (directed to beginners) yet serves many a poor Souls turn, that hath been long and truly turned to Christ; when in temptations, that doubt Sins afresh come in upon them; and the Spirit of God makes use thereof for their relief: So on the contrary, this invitation, &c. in my Text, though setly intended for Believers already, as incouragements to Prayer; may with an easie alteration be used and turned into perswasives unto those that have not yet believed, to perswade them to come in.

There is this seeming appearance for the other Interpretation, that in ver. 19. it is called an entrance; which in usual speech notes a first beginning to enter. But for Answer; 1. Every new Prayer is as a new Entrance into the Holiest, in comparison to thy ordinary walking in thy Calling. Every time we pray, we are to enter into Heaven. 2. That act of drawing near, or approaching, ver. 22. supposeth one first, as ver. 19. entered into the Holiest; and notes a going on further, to approach to God there.

2. It is an universal Invitation of all such. He exhorts them therefore under the title of Brethren; and speaks it as including himself and all other Christians: Seeing we have, Brethren, all of us the like liberty, let us draw near, even whoever is a brother with us. As if he had said, in this matter both of Priviledge and of Duty, we are all alike; the case is all one with me who am an Apostle, and all my fellow Apostles, with all Christians: The weakest in Faith and Hope may crowd into Heaven together with the strongest; you may all come into the Holiest, and get up into it, as high as you can get.

Yea 3. This Exhortation and Invitation is specially directed unto the weaker sort of Christians, (if to any more than others) that stand fartheſt off; that is, that are under the greatest discouragements in their own Spirits to come; and are most backward, and stand aloof in and through the sense of their their own unworthineſs, or weakneſs of Faith and Holineſs : Unto you it is I more eſpecially ſpeak of all others. As if he had more familiarly ſaid, Come you and draw nearer, you that ſtand afar off; the outmoſt of all the company. Come to, why keep you at ſuch a diſtance ; your right to draw near is as much as ours that are neareſt. Like to that proclamation of Peace, Iſa. 57. 19. To them that are afar off, and them that are near.

Theſe Generals being forelaid to clear the Apoſtles ſcope; all which I might have reſerved to Applications at laſt, but perhaps do ſtand as advantageouſly at this entrance ; not only to ſhew his drift, (neceſſary at the firſt) but chiefly that all ſorts may know how to make uſe of, and apply the encouragements that now are to follow, unto themſelves. For that which I purpoſe to inſiſt on are the Perſwaſives, with which this Invitation is ſtrengthned. And as the thing invited to, is the greateſt ; namely, A communion with God in the Heavens, by faith in praying, thorough Chriſt, as if we were with him there ; (the ſummary of this Scripture) ; ſo the invitements, or things inviting, or propoſed to us to perſwade us to the exerciſe of this, are the moſt alluring and forcible ; and all framed after the image, and ſimilitude, or alluſion unto the coming to God in his own houſe, by the Jewiſh Worſhippers, or comers unto, (as they are ſtiled ver. 1. and 2. of this Chapter) : And when they came to pray in the Temple, eſpecially on that day of Atonements; who are thereby ſaid to appear before God ; to approach and draw near, (although with that local diſtance from the Holieſt) : As alſo after the ſimilitude of the High Prieſt his entring into the Holieſt ; both as High Prieſt, and in the behalf of the People : For remember to carry along with you how I have propoſed theſe as my pattern, to draw the particulars of what in this Subject I ſhall handle ; and ſhall keep to it all along.

CHAP. VI.

An enumeration of the particular Invitements unto Communion with God and Chriſt, by thus in praying, entring into Heaven through Faith.

I. THE Invitement is to come to Gods Houſe ; which you have in terminis propoſed, ver. 21. even to his ſtanding Houſe of his Continuing, and Everlaſting Abode : The uſual and common Style that Invitations run in, is, Will you come to my Houſe ; and ſee me there : And if you read but what the Holy Men of old, (that were kept at that diſtance ;) ſpeak of what entertainment they found, when they came to Gods Houſe ; (as Moſes Tabernacle and Temple were called ;) the Type of our Heaven, and what they expreſs of it in their Old Teſtament Language, you muſt needs expect far higher from God, when you ſhall in Prayer come to Heaven to him : They ſpeak of the Fatneſs of Gods Houſe ; Pſal. 36. 8. They ſhall be abundantly ſatisfied with the fatneſs of thy houſe ; and thou ſhalt make them drink of the river of thy pleaſures , noting a fulneſs of all that is good. Of goodneſs : Pſal. 65. 4. Come to a great Mans Houſe, and what a plenty do you find it furniſhed with ; when you come but as a Stranger, at times, and not as an Indweller : Yet their Holy of Holies was but the ſhadow of good ; of goods, in the Plural ; ſo in the Original, Heb. 10. 1. That is, both of what is ſubſtantially and truly good, and only good ; as alſo alſo plenty of all ſort of good things. And notice, that he preciſely ſpeaks this, in that Heb. 10. of their Holy of Holies, as the ſhadow into which their High Prieſt there (he ſayes) went). Thou comeſt to pray, that's thy buſineſs; and lo when thou ſetteſt thy foot but in, thou mayeſt behold a new World of Heavenly good things, which this Earth affordeth not. All that thy Soul needs for it ſelf, to be ſure are to be had there, and from thence, by Faith and Prayer in this Life. Thy Soul hath a choice ſet afore it; and my Text tells thee, thou mayeſt be bold to pray for whatever is truly good; the Commodities of that place which God hath given thee but an heart to will and deſire, and to pray for. And what good is there, or can be, which Gods Houſe will not afford? Chap. 6.

But II. Who is it in that Houſe we are invited to come to, and ſpeak withal there? God, who is the Maſter and Owner of that Houſe; the Supream Lord of it. The houſe of God, ſaith he, which Chriſt is over; ver. 21. and ſet over by God his Father to be the Governour of it, whereof the Father is the Original Owner, which Chriſt therefore calls his Fathers Houſe; John 14. And which although it be Chriſts own Houſe alſo; yet but as the Sons, Heb. 3. ſo as God is thereby ſet forth to us, as he to whom we are invited to come, and by whom we are invited to come.

The good Welcome to any Houſe, and the Entertainment, depends on him that is the Supream in it: And therefore it is God (and that as here propounded) whom we are ultimately to come to. It is God we ultimately come to, and in Prayer do and muſt apply our ſelves unto: For this Houſe is called the Holieſt; ver. 19. ſo called, becauſe the Holineſs of God dwells there: In the high and holy place, created by him on purpoſe to diſplay his Glory in; which that and other Scriptures term his Throne, as Chriſt alſo enſtileth Heaven: And there his Face is to be ſeen. His Preſence. Even Chriſt here is ſaid but the way, ver. 20. but God is our Journeys end. Where there is a Way, there muſt be a Journeys end. Though we are come to Chriſt firſt by Faith, yet it is, that he may bring us to God, 1 Pet. 3. 19. and that we may have acceſs through Chriſts own going to Heaven, who was to appear in the preſence of God Heb. 9.

Now what Entertainment you may have coming to God in his Houſe, take in Old Teſtament language alſo: They ſhall be abundantly ſatisfied with the fatneſs of thy houſe; and thou ſhalt cauſe them to drink of the rivers of thy pleaſures; out of the ſame himſelf drinks of; even of the pleaſures God himſelf hath. His own bleſſedneſs is thy utmoſt happineſs. There can be no higher entertainment, than to be at the Kings table, and to eat of what himſelf eats, and to drink of what himſelf drinks, [of thy pleaſures] ſaith he. As alſo Chriſt; Enter into thy Maſters joy. And ſipping hereof thou mayeſt have in this Life, (if thou ſeekeſt it in Prayer as for thy Soul) find the firſt Fruits. For David ſpake this of what himſelf, and many Old Teſtament Saints, had in their Prayers to God, and other Worſhippings of him at their Temple, or towards it, in this Life found: Pſal. 65. 2. compared with ver. 4. O thou that heareſt prayer, unto thee ſhall all fleſh come. Bleſſed is the man whom thou chooſeſt, and cauſeſt to approach unto thee, that he may dwell in thy courts. We ſhall be ſatisfied with the goodneſs of thy houſe, even of thy holy temple.

But III. The liberty (as our Tranſlators in the Margent) and freedom that is proclaimed to us to come, being added to theſe, makes the invitement fair, and far more encouraging. The former are the real inducements, but this addition makes the encouragement as to us: And that's the third Branch. For if the plenty the Houſe affords, were never ſo much; the entertainment never ſo great; yet if all this be not accompanied with a freedom for us declared, that we may come and be welcome; we ſhould be afraid, and ſtill keep at a diſtance.

Now for the clearing and demonſtration of this, I muſt a while inſiſt upon the interpretation of the word, ἔχοντες [παῤῥησίαν], which is tranſlated [boldneſs]:

Book VI.

[boldneſs]: Having boldneſs: As that which is purpoſely ſet to declare this liberty to us.

The Original word hath a large comprehenſion in it, of ſuch ſenſes and imports, as do abundantly fall in to make good this third Branch, I am now a ſpeaking to; and doth render this Invitation yet more fair.

Junius, who firſt call theſe Verſes into the form of an Invitation, expreſſeth it thus: 1. Domus eſt aperta: The Houſe ſtands open, 'tis but our coming. 2. Jus ingrediendi datum: A right for us to enter, given us ver. 19. 3. Via comparata: The way caſt up, made plain, conſecrated for us, ver. 20.

I ſhall here give a Premonition concerning the tranſlation of the word παῤῥησία, here rendered boldneſs.

I acknowledge that in that Parallel place to this, Heb. 4. 16. Let us come with boldneſs; (where it is the ſame word παῤῥησία) it doth ſignifie a bold confidence in us to come, &c. But there it is a ſimple Exhortation, and the whole of the Exhortation: But here it is made the ground of the Exhortation that follows. Let us therefore come, &c. that is the Exhortation: And ſeeing we have the boldneſs, &c. that is, the Ground premiſed or forelaid, to draw on the thing exhorted to. Again, there it is joined with μετὰ, [with] boldneſs, as an act of Confidence within our ſelves, which we are bidden to come with: But here it is, ἔχοντες παῤῥησίαν, which is tranſlated, We having this boldneſs: As having an act of Boldneſs and Confidence, already begotten in our ſelves, which as it ſtands in this place ſeems not ſo proper unto that following Exhortation, ver. 22. And my Reaſon is, becauſe in that Exhortation, Boldneſs or Confidence, (as 'tis a Grace in us wrought) is one main thing exhorted to in that clauſe; namely, [with full aſſurance of Faith], that is, with full Confidence and Perſwaſion; which is that which cauſeth Boldneſs as the effect of it: And thus it would be as if he had ſaid; ſeeing therefore we have the boldneſs, &c. Let us come to, or draw near with full aſſurance of Faith; which in ſenſe and ſubſtance are all one and the ſame thing. Yea and it were to make this boldneſs (ſuppoſed) which is the effect of aſſurance of Faith (as was ſaid) to be the Ground or Perſwaſive, and ſo the cauſe of this aſſurance of Faith, and of our coming with this aſſurance.

But yet unto this Objection it may be Anſwered, That ſome good beginning of Boldneſs and Confidence being wrought already in us, encourageth us to enter; and that then Chriſt gives more Aſſurance and Confidence. For as Faith begun goes to Chriſt for more increaſe of it ſelf, Lord increaſe our Faith, ſo doth Confidence, for more Confidence. Like unto that Exhortation, Pſal. 37. 14. Be ſtrong, or of good courage (which are all one) and he ſhall ſtrengthen thy heart.

It is far more congruous to interpret it thus; Seeing we have ſuch cauſe of Confidence; or ſuch ground of Boldneſs; which by a Metonimy is ſo called Boldneſs: Let us draw near with full aſſurance. And indeed our beſt Interpreters do underſtand, and carry all the particulars that follow after, or that come between in this 19, 20, and 21, Verſes; yea and this word it ſelf unto this: To beget aſſurance of Faith, which we may draw near with: They turn all thoſe leſſer ſtreams into that one channel, that they might all fall into this iſſue of creating Aſſurance and Boldneſs in us, which each doth Naturally tend unto.

That therefore which comes to be my preſent work, is to explain the particulars that follow, in this their tendency; viz. As they are grounds of encouragement unto us, to come and enter into Heaven, when we pray; as that which all and each particular tends unto, as the true center of them. As for Example, Take that one that Chriſt being our High Prieſt is entered into Heaven for us, and there reſident to entertain us, &c. this affords us juſt ground of Confidence and Boldneſs, to enter thither to him with full aſſurance of Faith, that we ſhall be received, and accepted, and our Prayers.

And in order to this iſſue, unto which all thoſe other particulars in their ſeveral tendencies drive, I begin with this very firſt word it ſelf: Seeing we have the liberty, &c. and I will give you the unfolding the word παῤῥησίαν, tranſlated tranſlated Boldneſs; as it ſerves to manifeſt this third branch; the Freedom and Liberty we have to enter into Heaven, &c. Chap. 6.

Our Tranſlators have in the Margent varied it, [Liberty:] This I chooſe rather to follow, and inſiſt upon.

The Greek word is an extenſive word, and comprehends many things in the ſignifications of it; whereof what ſhall ſerve to the preſent purpoſe, I ſhall particularize: It comprehends all ſorts of what you uſe to term Freedom and Liberty.

I. A freedom from fear, or ſhame in coming, that may ariſe from the ſenſe of unworthyneſs: Many that are invited to a great Mans houſe, may be baſhful to come, and incident to ſhame: But we Sinners who have been made ſenſible of our vileneſs, as all Believers have been; (I am aſhamed, and bluſh to lift up my face to thee, O God, &c. Ezr. 9. 6.) And likewiſe Fear, which ariſeth from guilt, which guilt condemning us in our ſelves, works fears: Now the word here uſed, imports the Removal, Firſt of ſhame; 1 John 2. 28. Abide in him, that when he ſhall appear, we may have confidence, and not be aſhamed before him at his coming: The word tranſlated confidence there, is the ſame that here: Alſo of Fear which ariſeth from Guiltineſs condemning: 1 John 3. 21. If our heart condemn us not, then have we confidence towards God: The ſame word, it imports a being freed from Fear: Malefactors found guilty, had their Faces covered for the ſhame of their guilt; and ſo hurried to Execution: As Hamans face was covered, no more to appear before the King: In the Goſpel when Chriſt asked him, How cam'ſt hither without a Wedding Garment? He was ſpeechleſs: Whereas παῤῥησια, is an appearing without ſhame, or cauſe of ſhame; with open face to behold the glory of the Lord; their Sins being forgiven, there will never be any Cauſe for it: And ſo as if he had ſaid, we have good ground to appear before God; and look him in the face with free and open Countenances, not as guilty Perſons: For if we believe our Sins are forgiven us; Likewiſe upon the ſame ground we may appear, and enter without Fear.

The word alſo doth import a freedom from any cauſe of danger, that might be ſuppoſed upon a Mans doing this or that: And therefore in the Negative one is ſaid not to have παῤῥησιαν, to walk openly, and abroad; when his Perſon may be ſuppoſed to be in danger if he does: John 11. The Jews conſulting to deſtroy Chriſt, ver. 53. At the 54. ver. 'tis ſaid, οὐκέτι παῤῥησία, That Jeſus walked no more with freedom: 'Tis Tranſlated openly, but 'tis the Negative; the ſame word that is uſed here: He forbore to appear in publick; withdrew himſelf as apprehending danger: And the very Acceptation of the word fearleſsneſs from danger, is exceeding uſeful to be taken in, here in this place; for it plainly ſerves to expreſs a difference between us under the New Teſtament, and the Jew under the Old: And the Apoſtle carries it much in his Eye, and Scope, and offers to ſet out thoſe differences thereby, to exalt and magnifie the Goſpel.

Now 'tis evident that God carried things ſo, under his Old Teſtament Diſpenſations, as to keep them under a fear of being cut off from their People, and ſo of Death; if in their approaches to the Publick Worſhip they omitted, or neglected ſuch and ſuch Obſervations preſcribed them: Take for inſtance the caſe of the High-Prieſt, in his goings into the Holy of Holies; (for 'tis pertinent to the purpoſe in hand; for the alluſion here is made thereunto:) How ſolemnly was he forewarned to take heed, how to performe the outward Rites preſcribed, in his officiating on that day; with this threatning, That he dye not: You have it twice inſerted and rehearſed in Lev. 16. (The Ritual for that day:) 'Tis at the beginning of the Preſcripts, ver. 2. And in the middle, ver. 13. It was a matter of danger for him to enter in thither; and muſt needs cauſe fear to him that entred, leaſt he ſhould thorough Omiſſion have miſcarryed, or thorough Caſual Uncleanneſs: But we are here invited to enter into the Holieſt, upon the aſſurance of the contrary: That we have a παῤῥησιαν, no cauſe of fear written over the Door of our entrance: Therefore let us draw near, but with a True Heart, and full Assurance of Faith, and there is no danger at all. Likewise,

2. The Inferiour Priests and Levites, in their Officiatings and Transactions about the Utensils of this the Holyest, about the Ark namely, and the rest in Numb. 4. when the Tabernacle was to be taken in pieces, and removed by the Levites; when Aaron and his Sons, (who are only appointed to do it,) had taken down the Vail afore the Holy of Holies, and had covered the Ark therewith, ver. 5. and ver. 8. And in like manner all the Sanctuary, and the Vessels in it had been covered by them with other coverings appointed for them; what saies ver. 15. And when Aaron and his Sons have made an end of covering the Sanctuary, and all the Vessels of the Sanctuary, as the Camp is to set forward; after that the Sons of Kohath shall come to bear it: But they shall not touch any Holy thing, least they dye: These things are the burden of the Sons of Kohath; in the Tabernacle of the Congregation: And also ver. 20. The Kohathites that were to be imployed about those Holy things, ver. 18. yet at ver. 19, 20. it is said, But thus do unto them, that they may live and not die; when they approach unto the most holy things: Aaron and his Sons shall go in, and appoint them every one to his service, and to his burden: But they shall not go in to see when the Holy things are covered, least they dye: They were neither to see those Holy things with their Eyes, nor touch them with their hands: Oh but Brethren, the case is altered with us under the New Testament: Read 1 John 1. 1. where the Apostle proposing Christ unto us Believers of the New Testament, whom he decyphers to be Him that was from the beginning, and the word of Life; him, saies he, whom our eyes have seen, and whom our hands have handled; that which was from the beginning, which we have heard; which we have seen with our eyes, which we have looked upon, and our hands have handled, of the word of life: Such familiar Converse had the Apostles with him, when he was come, whom the Vessels of the Sanctuary, the Ark, &c. shadowed: And whom the Apostle doth in these words there expose unto all the Spiritual Senses of all Believers; (for the Acts of New Testament Faith on Christ, are said to have the exercisings of these three Senses there mentioned; Hearing, Seeing, Handling: And of the other two also in the Scriptures.)

And this very comparing as to this very respect of fear and danger, between the State of the Old Testament and the New; our Apostle doth institute and at large spreads forth in chap 12. towards the close of this Epistle, from ver. 18. to ver. 25. and instanceth on the one part how it was with the Jews Spirits at the giving of the Law, when God brought the Shadow of Heaven down so upon the Mount, Exod. 24. 10. They, Moses, Aaron, and the seventy went up the Mountain, and they saw the God of Israel; and under his feet the body of heaven, &c. And utters it in the same word wherein the Exhortation in my Text speaks in: Let us come to; and there 'tis ye are [not come unto] Mount Sinai, (as they were;) which might not be touched, insomuch as if a beast (that was not capable of the Command) touched the Mountain, he was to dye: And so terrible was the sight, that Moses (their Mediator, to approach to God for them;) said, I exceedingly fear and quake: Thus 'twas on the Jews part, in their coming to: But oppositely he sets out our coming to, with all that is Amiable, Delectable, and Alluring, ver. 22. But ye are come unto Mount Sion, the Heavenly Jerusalem, &c. whither to come there is no danger, but all that may make blessed: The danger is only in refusing, as ver. 25. In that other their coming, there was presented on all hands a danger; yea, of those who by warrant from God were called up into the Mount; and saw the God of Israel, As in the same Exod. 24. 11. is repeated; and that they did eat and drink before him: It is in that verse recorded as a wonderful thing; That God laid not his hand upon them, He did them no hurt: 'Tis noted as a strange extraordinary thing, that they should come down again, without being destroyed: They were in danger; yea, but we are invited: Let us come to; seeing we have a security, a freedom from fear and danger: A παῤῥησία, to enter:

ter: So the Text, there was never no Man got any hurt by entring into Heaven to pray: Theſe are the firſt ſtep and the loweſt of the import of this word: And I begin with this the loweſt, becauſe I mean to make a Climax, or an Aſcent of the ſignifications of it. Chap. 6.

II. 'Tis a Liberty to enter; and that importeth all free leave to come; Licentiam intrandi, Licence to enter, if you have but a Will: According as we uſe to ſay, You may come if you will: There is no extrinſecal barr, or hindrance from without: No unwillingneſs or want of freeneſs in the hearts of God and Chriſt, the Inviters; but all heartineſs and readineſs to entertain thoſe that will: And they may take as freely when come, at they may come freely without needing any new Invitation: Whoſoever will (come) let him take of the waters of life freely.

And ſo you may take in the freeneſs that is in the heart of him that inviteth you; though not upon the ſignification of the word here; yet upon the merit of the thing it ſelf: I confeſs the word παῤῥησία in my Text imports not directly this freeneſs, as in the heart of the Inviter; but yet ſuppoſeth it: for whence is it that you have the freedom to come, but becauſe he that biddeth you come, hath that freeneſs in his heart. And thus much the word that is annexed in that paſſage of the Revelation, doth fully make up; freely, δωρεὰν, is the word; which notes an offer of the Inviter, out of pure liberality, and munificence, to proceed from a largeneſs of heart: A free heart in the Doner: And in God out of pure Grace: And thus theſe two are yoked together, both Grace, and Freeneſs; Rom. 3. 25. Freely by his Grace; and Rom. 5. 15. You may therefore come, and take; (and by ſeeking you do take) freely, on Gods part; that is, without his, the leaſt thinking much, or grudging at it by God, or ever upbraidure afterwards for it: (as James hath it:) God gives richly, yea, with his whole heart, and upbraids not: Therefore ſo far as your will is within it ſelf really, and in earneſt raiſed up to deſire, ſeek, and ask; and continues in that poſture; ſo far you have freedom, without any check to take: And the waters of Life are all thoſe ſtreams of bleſſedneſs in Grace and Glory; all that Heaven affords: So you have it declared in the beginning of the ſame Chapter, Revel. 22. 1. And he ſhewed me a pure river of water of life, clear as chriſtal, proceeding out of the throne of God, and of the Lamb: That Throne is in the Holieſt.

But who is this that ſaies this? Our Lord Chriſt himſelf, and that from Heaven, ver. 16. I Jeſus, &c. It is I that ſpeak thoſe things that you have now heard, and that follow in ver. 17. And take notice that they are my laſt words that ever I will ſpeak to Men on Earth: And being to ſpeak but this one, I chooſe, and leave it as my laſt farewel unto the Sons of Men: Yea, they are the laſt words I ever intend to have written, by any Apoſtle, or other Pen-man, as Scripture given from me, or by my Inſpiration; ſo ver. 18. If any man ſhall add unto theſe things; &c. So much muſt we ſuppoſe his heart to be deeply engaged in this ſaying, above all other: And that he might be believed in it, he again ſets his Seal to this, and the other ſayings in this Book, as the cloſe of all: He that teſtifieth theſe things, ſaith ſurely, I come quickly; ver. 20. They are Chriſts words alſo, as thoſe ver. 16. and 18. and the Seal of all; not the Angel only I ſend, but I my ſelf teſtifie theſe things: And yet I alone teſtifie them not; the word is συμμαρτυρῶμαι, I witneſs with another Witneſs; not the Angel he ſent; (for as he, the faithful Witneſs needed not the teſtimony of Man; as in John, ſo nor of the moſt Glorious Angels from Heaven;) but I witneſs, and the Spirit with me, ver. 17. yea, and my Father, who himſelf from Heaven witneſſed this of me: This is my Son, hear him, and believe him: And whatſoever I ſpeak (ſaies he elſewhere,) even as the Father ſaid unto me, ſo I ſpeak: John 12. 50. And therefore if ever you believed, or will believe any word of his, believe this: And to be ſure it is of the moſt Concernment to you, of any word that ever he ſpake; and you ſhall never have any ſuch word from him anew, until himſelf comes; and loe it is to invite you, (till himſelf ſhall come to you;) that you would come in the mean while unto him; for whatever you have a Will to have, which himſelf hath; and if this Speech of Chriſts extends to thoſe (as ſure it doth) who do not yet believe on him, to invite even ſuch to come for Life at firſt; as Matth. 11. 28. it is intended; then much more it intends thoſe that have come already, that they would continue to do it, until he comes; for ſuch have a right and boldneſs, ſaies the Text, let us therefore come, &c. But,

3. It may be ſaid, and is by many, though I have free leave to come, and ask freely; and need not be either aſhamed, or afraid; but I cannot ſpeak what I deſire: There is for this a further ſignification of the word παῤῥησία; A Relief which will prompt you in this: It ſignifies in a moſt proper meaning of it, a freedom of ſpeech, which imports two things: 1. Free leave and liberty to the thing it ſelf, to what you will ſpeak; according to Gods mind warranted in his word; 1 John 5. And 2. Not as it is a leave to ſpeak only, but a new endowment of Spirit in you; emboldning you to utter your minds: An enlargement of Heart to expreſs your deſires one way or other acceptably to God: And this muſt needs ſtill hearten you; for the buſineſs you are ſpecially exhorted unto is, to pray; and to ask, as I propoſed it at firſt.

And that it is a moſt proper ſignification of the word, cannot be denied, and is generally agreed among Criticks; And the New Teſtament ſo uſeth it frequently, and it is often put for plainneſs of Speech; when one ſpeaks what is in his Heart; as 'tis there, John 10. 24. If thou be the Chriſt, tell us plainly, ('Tis the ſame word,) The Etymology of the word παῤῥησία is from πᾶν omne, and ῥῆσις dictio, A telling all:

By Nature all Mens Mouths thorough guilt are ſtopt before God, Rom. 3. 19. That every mouth may be ſtopped, and all the world may become guilty before God: And ſo when they come afore God to pray, being condemned in themſelves, Guilt ſtops their mouths, and they are ſpeechleſs: As he, Matth. 22. 12.

But when a Man is by Faith, and Regeneration, become actually a Member of Chriſt; Chriſt gives him a new Mouth as well as a new Heart: A Spirit of Prayer and Supplication: There is a Ceremony, that after the Pope hath made a new Cardinal, and put him into that Dignity with Eſto Cardinalis, he hath a further Solemnity, (which they tearm the opening a Cardinals mouth,) which is to give him leave to ſpeak, and vote in their Conclave, with the reſt of them: This he doth in a vain ſhew, having no power to give more Ability of Speech then he had before, but permiſſion only; but to be ſure, Chriſt hath Power, and doth exerciſe it to them, whom he makes Fellows with him, and Members of him: Open thou my lips, &c. Pſal. 51. And it is a wonderful work to ſee how Chriſt gives to poor weak Souls, ignorant and dead-hearted afore Converſion; how he gives, I ſay, a Glorious Liberty and Freedom this way, to ask what concerns their own Salvation: When Paul's three days of lying in of the New Birth were not yet out; Behold he prays; ſaith Chriſt from Heaven of him, Acts 9. 11. And whereas they know not what to ask, Chriſt ſends his Spirit into ſuch Souls, to help their Infirmities, Rom. 8. And what we are not able to cloath with words anſwerable to our deſires, or to expreſs what we deſire: He draws out inward groans, and ſighs unutterable: And God knows the meaning of the Spirit: That is, of the New Creature, which he hath wrought within us; as if they had expreſt them in words: He knows what it would have, when it yet cannot utter; ſo that very Soul hath a vent one way or other; either by inward words; (and the Groans, Deſires, and Thoughts, and Affections of the mind and inward Man, are in Scripture often termed words;) or elſe by outward Ability of Speech, whence there is nothing in our Hearts but Acts 2. 29. Let me ſpeak freely to you, ſaies Peter; (the ſame word;) And there it is both a taking free leave to do it; and alſo to utter what was in his mind freely about it: Great is my freeneſs of ſpeech to you; ſaies Paul, 2 Cor. 7. 4. His heart was ſo enlarged by love to them, as in the verſe afore; You are in our hearts to dye, and live with you; that he tells them he can ſay any thing unto them, ver. 4. and pour out his very Soul: And pectus dixerunt facit: Here it imports a power of Affection to utter ones heart: And in Acts 4. 27. The Apoſtles and the whole Church prayed, that the Apoſtles might ſpeak the word with all freeneſs, not boldneſs only, (as 'tis tranſlated;) but with all Ability to utter the Truths of it; for it is all ſorts of freedom, as there; They were filled with the Holy Ghoſt, as there; who is ſaid to give utterance to them, chap. 2. 24. Such as were of free Spirits to expreſs themſelves, are called παῤῥησιαζόμενοι: Ariſt. Rhet. lib. 2.

are one way or another made known to God by us: The word παῤῥησία is, as I ſaid, πᾶν ῥῆσις: To tell all: It warrants thee to go, and tell God all: A Soul hath liberty to pour forth his whole heart, Pſal. 62. 8. Pour out your hearts before him: To pour out, implies, 1. A fullneſs of matter, which the heart conceaving within it ſelf, pours forth on the ſuddain, and eaſeth, and disburtheneth it ſelf of it, and empties the Soul of all that is in it: Yea, God enlargeth the heart, and cauſeth good Materials for Prayer to boil up within a Mans Spirit: And by theſe fore-preparings of the heart provoketh the Soul to Prayer, and to pour them all forth: And ſo is fulfilled that of the Pſalmiſt, God prepareth the heart, and hears the Prayer: And thou mayeſt in telling God all, uſe plainneſs of Speech; (as was obſerved the meaning of the word to be;) even as plainly as ever thou art able to utter them; as thou wouldſt do to any thy deareſt Friend: All thy Griefs, Fears, Wants, Pſal. 38. 9. All my deſires are afore thee; yea, all thy Sins, and then mayeſt make Apologies for thy ſelf; (as the word clearing of your ſelves is,) 2 Cor. 7. 11. I mean not Excuſes, but all ſorts of pleas which may move God to pardon thee, which thou findeſt in the word belonging to thy caſe: Thou mayſt take all the words to thy ſelf, Hoſ. 14. 2. that Free Grace hath written, and prompted in this Book, and uſe them as pleas for thy ſelf. Chap. 6.

And what a mighty encouragement then is this third branch, being added to the former?

IV. The word παῤῥησία hath a promiſe from God, that follows it, annexed to it, and entail'd upon it: And that is, That God will grant whatever of Heavenly and Spiritual things you ask: This you have, 1 John 3. 21. Beloved, If our heart condemn us not, then have we confidence towards God: And it follows, ver. 22. Whatſoever we ask, we receive of him, becauſe we keep his commandment, and do thoſe things that are pleaſing in his ſight: The word in the 21. ver. Confidence, is our word here in the Text. And he mentions it there for this end and purpoſe, to encourage: That if with confidence, and boldneſs we uſe and exerciſe the forementioned freedom of ſpeech in praying; (for the word imports boldneſs, and freedom of ſpeech both,) then whatever we ask, we ſhall receive of him, ſooner, or later: If you take it an Univerſal Promiſe, (as 'tis whatſoever,) then underſtand it whatever bleſſings, Spiritual, Heavenly,; as Epheſ. 1. 3. they are ſtyled: We are to make our Prayers as placed in Heaven, (as was ſaid:) And our Prayers ſhould be anſwerable thereto; and the liberty that our deſires take in asking, ſhould run after things Heavenly, as our Affections are called upon to be: Coloſ. 3. 1, 2. If ye then be riſen with Chriſt, ſeek thoſe things which are above, where Chriſt ſitteth on the right hand of God: Set your affections on things above, not on things on the earth: Look what Commodities that Country affords, there you may be free, and as free in asking them, as you have hearts raiſed up to deſire them: Yea, and you have in effect the things you ask given you: If your hearts ſo ask them, and from your Souls ask them: Thoſe are the Commodities of that place, and of its own growth; only take in what follows in the ſame, ver. 22. Becauſe we keep his Commandments, and do thoſe things that are pleaſing in his ſight.

CHAP.

CHAP. VII.

The Exerciſe of Faith in Prayer, which aptly preſent themſelves under the Notion of coming to God, and Chriſt as our High-Prieſt, ſo far as the Type of the High-Prieſt, when he went into the Holy of Holies, doth repreſent.

I Limit my ſelf unto that Converſe with Chriſt, and God thorough him, by Faith exerciſed in Prayer: And therein I intend but only ſuch Exerciſes in Prayer as apty preſent themſelves under the Notion of coming to God, and Chriſt as our High-Prieſt; ſo far as the Type of the High-Prieſt in the times of the Old Teſtament, when he went into the Holy of Holies, doth repreſent, and yet therein I ſhall inſtance in ſome more principal ones that are obvious in that dayes Rites, leaving your own thoughts to ſearch and find out more of the like (that are to be found therein not inſiſted on by me) for your own help and advantage.

1. Acknowledge thine Infinite unworthineſs to enter and to draw near: As being ſo high a Priviledge. You read, Levit. 16. 17. that the very Prieſts in the Old Law that entred dayly into the firſt Tabernacle, Heb. 9. 6. Accompliſhing the ſervice of God; that yet when the High Prieſt went into the Holy of Holies, they were all turned out: And there ſhall be no Man in the Tabernacle of the Congregation, when he goeth in to make an atonement in the Holy Place, until he comes out, and have made an atonement for himſelf and for his Houſhold, and for all the Congregation of Iſrael: As to ſhew, that as it is Chriſt alone that makes our atonement: So withal, our utter unworthineſs to come thither to him.

2. Acknowledge that it is purely by the Blood of Chriſt, thou haſt the right and boldneſs to draw near, ſo my Text, ver. 19. By the Blood of Jeſus. Shall I tell you, Chriſt himſelf having been made Sin for you, and undertaken for Sin, ſhould not himſelf have entred into the Holy of Holies, but by, and thorough his own Blood, firſt ſhed; and therefore it is expreſs in the 12. ver. of the 9. chap. That [by] his own Blood he entred into that Holy Place: He had not come thither elſe. And the reaſon is, that although in his Original, Perſonal Right, it was his Inheritance, and ordained for him; yet having appeared with Sin for us in this World; that is, with the guilt of our Sins taken on him; a Demurrer ſtood to hinder him the Poſſeſſion of it: And compare for this, Heb. 9. 26. and 28. In ver. 26. it is ſaid, He once in the end of the world appeared to put away Sin by the ſacrifice of himſelf: And obſerve how this is plainly called an appearing with Sin; And was his firſt appearance in this World; for in ver. 28, he ſaies, Chriſt was once offered to bear the Sins of many; And unto them that look for him, ſhall he appear [the ſecond time without Sin] unto Salvation: This ſecond appearance without Sin, ſhews his firſt to have been with Sin, which is alſo expreſly ſaid, ver. 26. Bearing (as the word is in that verſe) the Sins of many; which his bearing of them, and then his offering of himſelf for them, was that which did put them away from himſelf, as well as from us; And was the reaſon why, that after he had done this, that he is ſaid to appear the ſecond time without Sin.

Yet let no Man here apprehend, as if I meant that Chriſt offered one Sacrifice for himſelf, and then for the People, as his Type the High-Prieſt is obſerved to have done, with difference from Chriſt our High-Prieſt is by our Apoſtle, chap. 7. 27. Who needeth not dayly, as thoſe High Prieſts, to offer up Sacrifice, first for his own Sins, and then for the Peoples: And the reason is, because the High-Priest was a Sinner himself, by inherency: And therefore they are there called [his own Sins]; and so he needed to atone for himself apart, by one sort of Sacrifice; as in Levit. 16. You read how on that day he did; that so he might be capacitated to offer another for the Peoples: Each of which he did at two successive turns, and vices; as you find by comparing the 6 and 11. verses with ver. 15. But it was infinitely otherwise with our High-Priest; as it follows in that Heb. 7. 27. This he did once when he offered up himself: He made but one work of it, in one entire Sacrifice of himself: And the reason of that was, because they were really, and indeed our Sins alone, which he was to offer for; but made his only by imputation: He barely taking on himself the guilt of them: And 'twas himself was the sole Sacrifice, (as there:) And thereby it came to pass, that in offering up himself for our Sins, he by that one Act of but one Sacrifice, discharged himself of the imputation of them; even as a Surety that is bound for another, by paying the full Summ of the Debt for that other at one single payment; acquits himself of the Debt, and the Principal Debtors too; until which be done, (in case he whom he is bound for be utterly insolvent and unable,) he stands bound for himself, as well as the Debtor. Chap. 6.

But still so, as until he had performed this, and brought his Blood shed for our Sins, and himself came in the vertue of his having been offered up for them, there had been no appearing for him in Heaven, (as not for the High Priest into the Holiest without Blood;) There were no room for Christ himself there, (not according to Gods Ordination and Compact with him) until that were performed: God would have shut Heaven Gates against him without this Offering made: And Christ himself in the 16*th.* of John insinuates as much: The Spirit shall convince the world, (the gentile World that was to be converted) of (my) Righteousness by the Apostles Ministry [of righteousness;] That is, that his Righteousness was the true Righteousness, ordained to justifie Men, when they had first convinced them of Sin: (as in the verse afore he directs them:) And he gives them this invincible Evidence that it was, (as he had formerly taught) the true Righteousness, Because I go to my Father, and you shall see me no more: Was that such a Sign and wonder, (may some say) that he who was the Lord from Heaven, and whose Right, and Due therefore 'twas, to go thither at any time he would, without more ado, could there be the least supposition made, that they might see him sent down again? You must know that he speaks of himself, as having undertaken with his Father, to performe a Righteousness for Sinners here on Earth, to take Sins away, e're he should come to him in Person: Without the exact fulfilling of all which Righteousness first, there had been no coming for him thither, so as to keep his standing there: But they should have seen him again. My Father would not have admitted me, I must have come back again to have compleated what had been wanting, if any thing had been: Take it therefore, saies he, as an Invincible Evidence, that all will be finished according to agreement with my Father, That I go to my Father, and you shall see me no more: And therefore 'tis called, The Blood of the Covenant, by which he (Christ himself) is said to be sanctified, Heb. 10. 29. where setting out the Sin and Punishment of a Desertor of Christ, he saies, Of how much sorer punishment shall he be thought worthy, who hath trodden under foot the Son of God; and hath counted the Blood of the Covenant wherewith he was sanctified, an unholy thing: The word [He] &c. not so fully referring to the Apostate; as if he had been ever truely sanctified by that Blood; as it doth unto Christ's having sanctified himself thereby, in offering up himself a Sacrifice unto God: And that Clause is added to aggravate the Sin of Apostates, in counting that Blood to be but as a common thing, when as Christ himself, whose Blood it is was consecrated thereby, to be the Mediator of the New Testament: In the same sence that chap. 13. of this Epist. ver. 20. Christ himself is said to be brought again from the dead, by the Blood of the Everlasting Covenant: His very Resurrection was from the Merit of his own Blood.

Yea,

Book VI.

Yea, Heaven it ſelf was to be purified with his Blood; for though we Sinners never had been there to defile it, yet becauſe Sinners were to come thither, it was to be purified: And ſo in the Type, Lev. 16. 16. when the High-Prieſt was entred into the Holy of Holies, he was to make an atonement for that Holy Place, becauſe of the uncleanneſs of the Children of Iſrael: And 'twas not for their Ceremonial Uncleanneſs only, but becauſe of their tranſgreſſions in all their Sins: Brethren, this is ſtrange, that the place called the Moſt Holy, whereinto the People never entred, no, not by one Room off, (for they went not into the firſt Tabernacle that was afore it,) that their ordinary Sins ſhould reach, and defile that Holy Place, ſo as that an Atonement, or Expiation for Sin muſt be made for the place: How was it then defiled? Perſons only, not Places, or Things, are capable of having Sins imputed to them, whither they be their own Sins, or anothers: For Perſons only are capable of the guilt of Sin: Yet 1. By a Relation that Places may, or do bear unto Perſons, they are defiled: Titus 1. 15. And it was Ceremonially ſeen, in the defilement of the Lepers Houſe, and Walls: And ſo although the People during that Diſpenſation, were not to come thither, yet the High Prieſt came in their ſtead, into the moſt Holy Place, on purpoſe to make an Atonement for all their Sins, as being the place appointed, and ordained by God, to have an Atonement made therein for their Sins: And in relation unto the making that Atonement for them as Sinners, the very place wherein it was to be done, was it ſelf firſt to be Sanctified, and Atoned, which the High Prieſt was to do with the Blood he brought thither with him diſtinctly and apart for the place; and then to make the Atonement for them: Their Sins were of ſo great a guilt, as the very Holineſs of the place forbad any Atonement to be made in it for the Sinners, until it ſelf were purified with the ſame Blood.

Now this Type was to be fulfilled, and it is certain, that the Holy of Holies that was then, was the Type; or (as the 24. ver. of Heb. 9. ſtyles it) the Demonſtration, or Scheme, or Pattern of the Higheſt Heavens; unto which place in the end, (though it was not manifeſt as then to the Old Jew,) yet they and we, even all the Saints of both Teſtaments, were ordained unto, are at laſt to come: Thence and therefore it came to be neceſſary, that the Holy Place of the Heavens was to be purified by Chriſts Blood, as Aarons moſt Holy Place was inſtituted to be purged by the Blood of thoſe his Sacrifices; ſo as it was not only, or ſo much to fulfil the Type; (which yet they being given out afore as Types, was neceſſary; for though they be but Shadows, yet they are Prophetick, and muſt have an anſwerable performance in the Truth, and Subſtance ſignified thereby:) But the Original Reaſon, and for which the Type it ſelf was appointed, was, That the Holy of Holies in the Heavens was it ſelf fore-ordained, to be the place for us Sinners to come unto; and did bear in Gods fore-decrees the Relation of being their Eternal Houſe they are to dwell in for ever: And God's Holineſs and purity is ſuch, (having made that place the Seat of his Preſence-Glory, and placed his Throne there;) as to ſhew how deeply he reſenteth Sin, he would have the place of his Childrens Reſidence (having once been Sinners,) it being ſo near to him, and afore his Face, firſt purified as well as the Sinners themſelves: Not that it was defiled in it ſelf, for the Preſence of God makes it moſt Holy, but even that was it made it to be too Holy for Sinners: And therefore in relation to its becoming their actual Abode there, it was now to be atoned for their ſakes: And upon both theſe Reaſons, eſpecially the latter, it was, That this which was the Truth, and Subſtance of the Type, was not ſo much to be conformed to the Type, as the Type was framed and formed by this fore-Ordination of Gods, which was the Original Proto-Type of all: And upon this it is, that the Apoſtle pronounceth in the 23. ver. of the ſaid Heb. 9. It was neceſſary that the patterns of things in the Heavens, ſhould be purified with theſe, but the Heavenly things themſelves with better Sacrifices than theſe.

But

Chap. 7.

But beſides theſe general Grounds of Analogy of the Type and Antitype; the words of the next Verſe do expreſly determine, that the Heavens, conſidered as the place, were purified by Chriſts Perſon and Blood: For it follows. ver. 24. For Chriſt is not entred into the holy places made with hands, which are the figures of the true, [but into Heaven it ſelf,] now to appear in the preſence of God for us: They are thoſe places in the Heavens (Heavenly places as they are elſewhere rendered) anſwerable to thoſe on Earth that were to be purified: And he here ſpeaks of them as of the place or places; as the word [entring into] imports: Even as when in Eph. 2. we are ſaid to [ſit in] Heavenlies; it is aptly and neceſſarily to be underſtood, to ſit in Heavenly places; for ſo the word ſitting doth require. Thus likewiſe here, the word entring into Heavenlies, argues thoſe Heavenlies ſpoken of, to be the places of Heavens; whereof the Tabernacle, or Tabernacles of Moſes, which were called alſo the Tabernacle, in the ſingular: Of theſe, as the place or places, the Apoſtle ſayes ver. 21. Moreover he ſprinkled with blood, both the Tabernacle, and all the veſſels of the Miniſtry. So that not only the Veſſels, the Furniture, the Supellex, the Utenſils in the Tabernacles, (and accordingly the Saints that are to be brought in thither; that is, into Heaven) but the place it ſelf that contained them was purified alſo by Chriſts Blood, that it might receive Sinners, and be their Domicilium, their Habitation for ever: And of all theſe, both Tabernacle and Veſſels, he ſayes that they were Figures and Patterns of the true, in the Heavens, in their ſeveral kinds of Analogy. The Tabernacle it ſelf, the Utenſils of the things in that place; and all to be purified with better Blood than theſe; and eſpecially the place of the Holy of Holies in the Heavens: For in ver. 24. it is peculiarly ſpecified and ſaid of it; For Chriſt is not entred into the holy places made with hands, which are the figures of the true; but into Heaven it ſelf, now to appear in the preſence of God for us. And in that place the Mercy-ſeat we read, was ſprinkled with Blood; and the Pavements of the place, that were afore the Mercy-ſeat, were ſprinkled ſeven times. Levit. 16. 14. And he ſhall take of the blood of the bullock, and ſprinkle it with his finger upon the Mercy-ſeat Eaſtward: And before the Mercy-ſeat ſhall he ſprinkle of the blood with his finger, ſeven times.

I caſt this in further, to ſhew the neceſſity of Chriſts Blood for our entring into the Holy of Holies in Heaven; either now by Faith, or hereafter by poſſeſſion and enjoyment, that even the Mercy-ſeat it ſelf, the Throne of Grace, that is, of God himſelf, whereon God, merciful, gracious, long-ſuffering, pardoning iniquity, tranſgreſſion and ſin, ſitteth: That that alſo was ſprinkled with Blood, Levit. 16. 14.

But you will ſay, Did Gods Mercy-ſeat need ſprinkling with Blood, or a being purified?

No ſurely, not in it ſelf. The Mercies of God are pure and holy Mercies, Acts 13. 34. τὰ ὅσια, the holy things, they are called (ſee the Marginal Note): But yet if Sinners ſhall come to have Mercies from God, his Mercies muſt be mingled with Chriſts Blood to purchaſe them, that God may be juſt in having received the Atonement, and the juſtifier of him that believeth in Jeſus: So as ſtill in reſpect of us that are Sinners, the Mercy-ſeat muſt have Blood, that we may be juſtified, even as the Heavens were to be purified with Blood, becauſe Sinners were to enter there.

The Concluſion of this is, That if the Heavens were to be purified with Chriſts Blood becauſe of us Sinners who were to come thither; yea, if Chriſt himſelf having undertaken for Sins could not have entred thereinto, unleſs he had brought the vertue, efficacy, Spirits of his own Blood with him, and that in and by the Merit thereof, it was that he entered thereinto; and that his very Humane Nature was through the imputation of our Sins to him, when he Tabernacled among us, John 1. was to have an Atonement made for it by his Blood, and by the rending it in two, in the ſeparation of Soul from his Body, that ſo he (as repreſenting us) and we as one Myſtical Perſon with him, might enter into Heaven, and elſe not; then when ever thou comeſt to pray more ſolemnly, (whereby thou entereſt and approacheſt unto that Holies in the Heavens) acknowledge how it is by and through his Blood, that thou a wretched Sinner, not by meer imputation ſuch only, but in reality of guilt; and that thou ſhouldſt be in Hell whilſt thou art admitted into Heaven it ſelf whilſt thou prayeſt, Oh this Blood, this precious Blood, let it be precious to you, and let him be precious that ſhed it: And becauſe he was ſo precious in his Perſon though debaſed, therefore it was that his Blood is ſo precious, as you may collect by comparing 1 Pet. 1. 19. with ver. 6. of chap. 2. His Perſon made the Blood precious; for it was the Blood of him that was made higher than the Heavens; Heb. 7. 25. yea, of God. Acts 20.

CHAP. VIII.

Another Exerciſe of Faith in Praying, is to confeſs all our Sins unto God over Jeſus Chriſt, as Typified by the Live-Goat, the Scape-Goat.

Confeſs all thy ſins unto God, over Jeſus Chriſt as the live-goat, the ſcape-goat. What the ſignification of this is, I hope I ſhall make you underſtand. There was that day, and on that day only, when the High Prieſt was to go into the Holy of Holies; before he went in, in order to his going in, there were two Goat-kids preſented afore the Lord: Look into Lev. 16. 3. Thus ſhall Aaron come into the holy place. And at ver. 5. He ſhall take of the congregation of the children of Iſrael two kids of the goats for a ſin-offering. And then at ver. 7. the High Prieſt ſhall take the two goats, and preſent them before the Lord, at the door of the tabernacle of the congregation. And then at ver. 8. He caſts lots upon the two goats; and the one lot is ſaid to be for the Lord; becauſe that Goat, that lot for the Lord fell upon, was to dye, and to be ſacrificed to the Lord for ſin. And again, ver. 9. 'tis ſaid of that Goat, that it was the goat the Lords lot fell upon; for 'twas ſet apart, and appropriated to him as a Sacrifice, and ſo the Lords in a ſpecial manner, in compariſon to that other; namely, by way of Sacrifice: As it follows in that ver. 9. Aaron ſhall offer him for a ſin-offering: And afterwards he was burnt without the camp, ver. 27. And the other lot is ſaid to be for the Scape-Goat; that is, for its eſcaping, being ſacrificed as the other was. And it follows ver. 10. But the goat on which the lot fell, to be the ſcape goat, ſhall be preſented alive before the Lord, to make an atonement with him, and to let him go for a ſcape-goat into the wilderneſs: And they both are called a ſin-offering, ver. 5. that is, both were ordained to take Sins away: And this latter Goat that ſtayed and lived, is ſaid ver. 10. To make an atonement with God, as well as the dying Goat did, but each in their ſeveral wayes; the one by bearing our Sins, and the puniſhment of them by Death; the other by eſcaping, and by his Life carrying them away. You read not that he was carried away into the Wilderneſs to be there deſtroyed; nor was he in that which belonged to its part, made at all a Sacrifice: But look, as the dying Goat was made an Atonement for Sin, in his way, by Sacrifice in dying; ſo the other let go alive, made an Atonement in its way, namely, by carrying away the Sins confeſt over him into the Wilderneſs, by means of his Life: And that was tranſacted by confeſſing their Sins over the head of that Live-Goat, after that the other Goat had been offered as a Sacrifice for them, that their Sins being ſo confeſſed and ſacrificed for, he might carry them them away: Ver. 9, 20. And after he hath made an end of reconciling, (namely the Sacrifice) he ſhall bring the live-goat; ver. 21, 22. And Aaron ſhall lay both his hands upon the head of the live-goat, and confeſs over him all the iniquities of the children of Iſrael, and all their tranſgreſſions, in all their ſins; putting them upon the head of the Goat; and ſhall ſend him away by the hand of a fit man into the wilderneſs: And the Goat ſhall bear upon him all their iniquities, unto a land not inhabited, and he ſhall let go the Goat in the wilderneſs. Brethren, will you have the myſtery of this? Our dear Lord and Saviour Jeſus Chriſt, he is both theſe Goats in the Types, but as conſidered under two different Notions; viz. Chriſt dying for Sin in the firſt, and Chriſt riſen, and alive, and carrying Sins away into the Wilderneſs. But you will ask, why two ſuch utterly differing Types; might not one have ſerved? Brethren, the caſe ſtood thus; no one Type could repreſent theſe two grand Myſteries of Chriſt at once: And therefore Gods inſtitution was, to repreſent one piece of him by one Type, and another piece of him by another: Now the ſame individual Goat that was killed, was not to be raiſed again; being a brute Creature, (that is proper only unto Men): Hence he takes one Goat that ſhould dye, to repreſent Chriſt in dying; and as ſuch, bearing our Sins and Puniſhments: And he takes another Goat that lives, to repreſent him alive again. You find the like parallel to this in the caſe of cleanſing the Leper: Lev. 14. There were two Birds, ver. 4. one to be killed, ver. 5. and another called the living Bird, that flew away, ver. 6, 7. Then ſhall the Prieſt command to take for him that is to be cleanſed, two birds alive, and clean; and cedar-wood, and ſcarlet, and hyſſop. And the Prieſt ſhall command that one of the birds ſhall be killed in an earthen veſſel, over running water: As for the living bird, he ſhall take it, and the cedar-wood, and the ſcarlet, and the hyſſop, and ſhall dip them and the living bird, in the blood of the bird that was killed over the running water. And he ſhall ſprinkle upon him that is to be cleanſed from the leproſie, ſeven times, and ſhall pronounce him clean, and ſhall let the living bird looſe into the open field. You read in Revelations 1. 18. how our Lord ſpeaks of himſelf, ſaying, I am he that liveth and was dead; and behold I am alive for evermore. You read in Romans 5. 10. what ſingular differing purpoſes theſe two eſpecially ſerve for; that as we are reconciled to God by the death of his Son, as a Sacrifice, ſo we are ſaved by his life. There is his Death, to pay the Price or Ranſom for our Reconciliation; and there is the actual application or communication of Eternal Salvation unto us; and that is ſaid to be by his Life. You have the like both again, in Rom. 4. 25. He was delivered for our offences; there is the dying Goat; and he roſe again (and liveth) for our juſtification; there you have the living Goat.

Chap. 8.

Sin is done away two wayes by Jeſus Chriſt: Either Meritoriouſly, by the Sacrifice of himſelf, in dying, as a price paid; which the Scripture every where ſpeaketh of; Heb. 9. 26. Once in the end of the world he appeared, to put ſin away; by offering himſelf, and bearing their ſins; as ver. 28. Secondly, There is a taking away of Sin by the actual application to us of what his Death merited for us; and ſo Chriſt takes Sins away when we believe, and come to him for Pardon. The word John Baptiſt hath in John 1. comprehends both: Behold the Lamb of God, that takes away the ſins of the world; the word is αἴρων; it ſignifieth both: 1. To bear the guilt of them; and then John ſaw him bearing, and loaded with all our Sins upon him; which did bring him to the tree, and cauſed him to dye: He was made ſin for us, who knew no ſin. And 2. It ſignifieth to take away Sins, by a removal of them from off our perſons: To which the Latin word tollo, anſwers; but the Greek word αἴρω intendeth both. Firſt, take the dying Goat; and that is Chriſt, bearing the ſins of many; as 1 Pet. 2. 24. when he was Crucified; who his own ſelf bare our ſins in his own body upon the tree. And thus to lay our Sins upon him to this end, that was Gods Act; and his own, in taking our Sins upon him; not ours. We were not then; neither did the Saints that were then alive, underſtand or think of it: But that was Gods, and tranſacted between God and Chriſt. God was in Chriſt, reconciling the world to himſelf; who made him ſin for us, and a curſe, that knew no ſin: And God, ſayes the Prophet, laid on him the iniquity of us all, when his Soul was made an offering for ſin : And therefore alſo the dying Goat is called the Lords lot. The Prieſt did but barely caſt the lot, but 'twas God that diſpoſed it to that Goat ; he would have him dye. Nor do you read that the Prieſt that was a-doing, did confeſs our Sins over the Goat that was to dye ; 'twas a ſingle, ſole Act of Gods : And ſo he bore them, in his being ſacrificed and offered up.

Book VI.

But come we, Secondly, to the living Goat, Jeſus Chriſt. And he, after he hath made an Atonement by his Death, is yet to take our Sins away by an actual Juſtification of us. And in reſpect both to his ſacrifice and offering up, as alſo for the application of it to us by Faith to juſtifie us, at and upon our believing, he is called a Propitiation for us. 1. In reſpect to that made at his Death ; in 1 John 2. 2. Who is the propitiation for the ſins of the world. This muſt be underſtood of him in dying ; for there were many in the World, and yet to come into the World, he was made a Propitiation for, who as yet believed not. But 2. Rom. 3. 25. Whom God hath ſet forth to be a propitiation, through faith in his blood. Obſerve here how he is ſaid to be fore-ordained to be a propitiation through Faith on that his Blood, which was afore made a Propitiation on the Croſs : For then it is his Atonement comes to be actually a Propitiation to us, when we through Faith come in to God and plead it, and not till then, and that in a true and real ſenſe. This his being a Propitiation in that place, muſt therefore be underſtood in the application of him to us. And we may diſtinguiſh of them thus ; the one is Chriſt, a Propitiation for us ; the other, the ſame Chriſt, a propitiation to us ; even in the ſame differing ſenſes and reſpects, that the live Goat, and the dying Goat are, in the foreſaid Lev. 16. 5. both called, a Sin-offering, and for Atonement. And now when this Atonement is to be applyed unto us at our Converſion, and ever after ; then it is indeed that the actings on our part come to be done, towards the Pardon of our Sins : As to believe on and plead his Death and Blood ; and alſo what the Type inſtructs ; viz. to come to him as he is now alive, and lives for evermore ; for him to take our Sins to himſelf and take them away from us ; to lay hold on him with both hands, as it is in Lev. 16. 21. and confeſs our Sins over him ; and until then we remain in our Sins, for all that he was offered as a dying Goat for us. And this is the thing that I have aimed at, and made way for, in telling you this long Story out of the Old, and the Myſtery out of the New Teſtament. The Prieſt we ſee did confeſs over this live Goat ; and therein the High Prieſt performed the Peoples part ; for it was done in a way of Confeſſion, and that Act in no ſenſe muſt be aſcribed to God, in his laying our iniquities upon Chriſt. He confeſt not them for us. So then we, when we would be ſaved and forgiven, muſt perform that part, and come and confeſs our Sins over Chriſt, the live Goat. God the Father hath done his part in ſacrificing his Son ; and Chriſt the dying Goat, hath done his part in purchaſing our Pardon ; but he as the living Goat muſt do another ; and that is, both to cauſe us to come to himſelf, and lay both our hands upon him, and confeſs it was Gods part to lay our Sins upon him, but it remains to be our part to lay our Sins upon him, by confeſſing them over him, and afore him to his Father, now he is alive for the pardon of them. Look into the Type, in Lev. 16. 21, 22. it is moſt expreſs : Aaron at the 20th Verſe, (mark well) when he had made an end of Reconciliation ; (that is, when he had done his work, belonging unto that of the Goat to dye, killed him and then ſprinkled the Blood) Aaron ſhall lay both his hands upon the head of the live goat, and confeſs over him all the iniquities of the children of Iſrael, and all their tranſgreſſions, in all their ſins, and ſend them away into the wilderneſs : And he ſhall bear them away unto a land not inhabited, and he ſhall let him go alive into the wilderneſs. The myſtery of this I take to be, that after the Reconciliation made for us by Chriſt in his Death, which was done without our knowledge ; he then roſe again, and is alive to juſtifie us : But then we muſt come to him, acknowledge as the Prieſts did, and confeſs them in their names, all the Sins of all all the People of Israel, of what kind soever: And then this live Goat carries them away into the Wilderness. Chap. 8.

If you demand the Mystery there of the Answer; it is a like expression to that in Micah 7. 10. That he will cast our iniquities into the depth of the Sea. What is thrown thither, never rises more: As that Roll into Euphrates, to signifie Babylon should never rise again. Heaven is not indeed a Wilderness, to which place our live Goat is ascended; but it is in the utter taking away of Sins, and hiding them for ever, so as never to be found or remembered, which is here aimed at: And so Christ takes Sins away, and carries them into that oblivion and forgetfulness, as none can find them; never to be remembred more, as the Scripture speaks.

The issue which I drive at is, as to exhort you hereupon when you come more solemnly to converse with Jesus Christ in the Holy of Holies, or with God through him; not only at your first Conversion and Faith on him, but when you come setly to pray; especially on great occasions to lay hold on Jesus Christ with both hands; (as it is in this Type) that is, with all your might: And then to confess all your Sins particularly over him, as the High Priest did over the head of the live Goat; who by his Resurrection and Ascension into Heaven, is escaped from Death and Wrath for Sins; and in confessing them, transfer them from off your selves, and implore him to take them upon himself; discharge your selves of them, by desiring him to take them; (who knows what to do with them) not now to suffer for them; he hath done that once perfectly for ever; but to carry them away into an utter forgetfulness, and to be thy Advocate to God, to remember them no more; seeking of God not to impute thy Sins to thee, but to him that was made Sin, that thou mayest be made the Righteousness of God in him: And so to make an exchange with Christ; he to take thy Sins, and to bestow his Righteousness upon thee, instead thereof.

And Secondly, To make use of this Notion to help them over one difficulty, which those, whose Judgments are that Christ dyed not for all Men intentionally, may, or perhaps do sometimes meet with, in their coming to Christ. They must not, nor ought to come to him now to dye for them; that is past and over, and were vain and blasphemous: Nor yet can they assuredly say and believe that Christ dyed for them, and bore their Sins in particular. And although that declaration Paul makes, brought home to the heart; That Christ came into the world to save sinners, he speaks indefinitely, Sinners, and all sorts of Sinners, even the greatest, for he saved me, sayes he there: Though this be a sufficient ground to draw a Sinner that sees himself lost utterly, and sees Christ with a Spiritual eye, as John 5. to come to him; yet if this course in the way of believing that I have now urged, be well weighed and made use of, it may conduce to ease the heart much more, as to any such stick and demur in his coming to Christ: For though I cannot plead that whilst he was a dying, he had my Sins for my particular, laid upon him by God; yet now he is alive again, I may, as now I have been instructed, come in my own person to him, and lay my hands upon him, to be the live Goat for me; and confess all these my particular Sins to him and over him; and also unto God and before God; having his Christ by him present in the view of my Faith. And that I may lay all my Sins upon him with this end and aim; joyned with the most vehement imploremem of him, that he will freely take the guilt of them off from me, and carry them into a Land of non-remembrance, as into a Land not inhabited, and therefore never to be found: And to mediate with his Father, to pass an Act of Oblivion upon them, and remember them no more. And I may be sure and certain, that I am warranted thus to confess and lay my Sins upon him, to the end that he should carry them away: And that this is an Act, as now to be performed by me and him: And I may now come to him to do it for me in my particular: And my Faith needs not proceed here upon an indefinite ground, that should any way admit of a scruple, whether I am the person that he intends or no; for I am, and every humbled Sinner, is now abſolutely and definitely required to do all this for his own Salvation, and for his own particular. And this admits no doubtfulneſs at all; nor requireth a certain reſolution firſt to be had by us, that God laid upon Chriſt at his Death, his iniquities: And it is a great relief and help to the exerciſe of our Faith; and an infinitely gracious diſpenſation of God to ordain ſuch a Type, as after was left for us to perform this part, in a way of our coming to Chriſt, after this manner; to become a Propitiation and Atonement for us in particular, through Faith in his Blood. That God I ſay hath left us ſo certain a way and courſe for us to put in practice; and in the practice and exerciſe of it, confeſſing our Sins with mourning and brokenneſs of heart, that therein we ſhall certainly find Chriſt, and God through Chriſt, take away our Sins thereupon: And this, this performance upon the day of Atonement, teacheth us to do.

Exerciſe Faith for the forgiveneſs of all thy Sins. This that dayes practice doth for our comfort in a ſpecial manner inſtruct us unto; for it was that which thoſe dayes Sacrifices were ordained for; that whereas they had particular Sacrifices appointed for particular Sins, as occaſionally they were committed, for which they were to bring a Treſpaſs-offering to the Prieſt; and he by offering his Sacrifice for him, made an Atonement; and the promiſe was, it ſhould be forgiven him; of all which you read in Leviticus, the 4th, 5th and 6th Chapters: Yet notwithſtanding theſe, as alſo that there were daily Sacrifices, twice a day (of the intendment of which afterwards) the expiation on this day was ſingularly appointed for a general Pardon of all Sins at once, paſt unto the end of that year; for that outward, Typical, Legal Atonement, ſignified no further; there being, as the Apoſtle ſayes, a new remembrance of Sins every year; ſo as they were forgiven by the year, as we ſay, and yet univerſally. All which I ſhall demonſtrate in the cloſe of this Head.

But I find it neceſſary for me to ſpeak firſt of the intent and ſcope of thoſe particular Atonements for ſpecial Sins, becauſe that will give ſome light towards the clearing that univerſal Atonement of this day: And alſo the knowledge thereof will conduce to the Comfort of Believers, and to the direction of the Faith of Believers, in caſe of occaſional ſinnings.

CHAP. IX.

Of occaſional Sacrifices for particular Sins. Their intendment then, unto us now.

NOW as touching thoſe particular Sacrifices for occaſional Sins, we find how that there were ſome ſpecial Sins that were excepted, and left out from having Atonement made for them by thoſe kind of Sacrifices: As namely, Murther, Adultery and Blaſphemy. And this hath occaſioned a great ſtumbling to ſome Men, leaſt their being Types of Goſpel proceedings in pardoning, the Sacrifice of Chriſts Blood ſhould not extend to ſuch Sins as theſe; but the ſame exception ſhould now continue. Now to ſolve this, and to clear up the matter of our univerſal Pardon, which is now the thing I drive at: The firſt enquiry muſt be into the ground of difference then made; what that ſhould be, that there ſhould be no occaſional Sacrifice for thoſe Sins, was appointed: Some have founded the difference to lye in this, That Murther and Adultery, &c being Sins apparently againſt Conſcience and ſpecial Light, and therewith committed with conſent of of Will, deliberately; and upon that ground no Atonement: And that thoſe other Sins, for which expiation was made by Sacrifice, were only Sins of Ignorance: And that that was the reaſon why thoſe of Murther, &c. were excluded from Atonement. Chap. 9.

This ſome have deemed, becauſe that at the entrance of thoſe Commands and Preſcriptions for ſuch particular Sacrifices; in Leviticus, chap. 4. God ſeems to limit them, for which ſuch Atonements were to be made, unto Sins of Ignorance, as the general Rule about them is in ver. 2. Speak unto the children of Iſrael, ſaying, If a ſoul ſhall ſin through ignorance againſt any of the commandments of the Lord; (concerning things which ought not to be done) and ſhall do againſt any of them: But yet that that was not the ground of that difference, it is manifeſt; in that in chap. 6. there is the ſame proviſion of expiation made for Sins againſt Conſcience, and deliberately and willingly committed. As in caſe of a Mans having had Goods of another Mans, or ſome other matter committed to his truſt: Or of a Man that had violently ſtole, or taken any thing from another; and the Perſon intruſted having ſo defrauded his Neighbour, did beſides utterly deny any ſuch thing to have been committed to him; and ſo added a Lye to his Theft, which alone was againſt Knowledge: Yea, and yet more wickedly had ſuperadded Oaths to thoſe Lyes and Denyals; forſwearing himſelf. Here were Sins ſufficiently againſt manifeſt Light of Conſcience; and an whole cluſter of ſuch; and as high againſt (ſimple) Knowledge as high could be, and as deliberate as deliberate can be.

Yet notwithſtanding, upon reſtitution, ver. 5. he ſhall bring his Treſpaſs-offering unto the Lord, and unto the Prieſt: And the Prieſt ſhall make an Atonement for him before the Lord, and it ſhall be forgiven him; for any thing of all that he hath done in treſpaſſing therein; ver. 6, 7. Nor is it limited to circumſtances of times, as if he had but once or twice done thus.

It is an errour of the higheſt cruelty unto Souls, as well as of derogation to Gods Grace, and Chriſts Satisfaction, which the Socinians have taken up; That for groſs heinous Sins againſt Light, committed after believing, there is no forgiveneſs to be expected from the Covenant of Grace: But if any, it muſt be by an extraordinary way of Mercy, and not by vertue of the ordinary Covenant of Grace. But what it ſhould be which hath induced them unto ſo deſperate a condemnation of many poor Souls, that were penitents after ſuch Sins committed; this I have much wondered at: Whether it were to make their Profeſſion of Religion highlyer admired; or perhaps rather, that they in their other Doctrines, levelling Chriſts moſt extenſive meritorious Sacrifice, with the Sacrifices of the Old Law; in their affirming that Chriſts Sacrifice doth take Sins away, but in the ſame way and manner that the Sacrifices in the Old did; (though they acknowledge Chriſts Sacrifice to be the more excellent) that therefore they ſhould meaſure the extent of Chriſt his taking our Sins, by the ſcant ſtandard of the particular occaſional Sacrifices, inſtanced in the Law, in their taking away of Sins: And from thence to judge, that as the Sacrifices of the Old Teſtament ſerved not to ſignifie the taking ſuch great Sins away, that therefore Chriſts alſo ſhould teſtifie and declare (for no higher end do they make of it) no more of Gods favour toward Sinners, then to pardon ſuch Sins as thoſe particular Sacrifices did extend unto the pardon of: For they would make Chriſts Sacrifice, though they would ſeem to cry it up for excelling above thoſe of the Law, yet to be but Metaphorical and Figurative, even as thoſe were; that is, meerly ſerving to ſignifie and ſhew that God was pacified, and in favour and grace with us; but not at all by way of Merit and Satisfaction from the merits of Chriſts Sacrifice, no more than through thoſe of old.

But you ſee that even according to this their own meaſure taken from them, (which is moſt wicked) that particular Sins againſt Conſcience, and thoſe of an heinous Nature, were forgiven, upon the Atonement made by thoſe particular Sacrifices; neither was there any exception againſt their Atonement, though reiterated, or again and again committed.

But

Book VI.

But blessed be God, we have not so learned, either his Grace, or our Christ: Nor do we esteem that infinite satisfaction of his, once offered up for all the Sins of the whole World, at so low a rate; as if it had no further efficacy than what is Figurative, (as those of the Old Testament were of;) or of no larger extent of dominion over Sins, for the expiation of them, then what those several particular occasional Sacrifices did reach unto; which were so limited unto those Sins, because, although the expiation of such Sins against Knowledge forementioned, made Atoneable by such occasional Sacrifices, did signifie to them that were Believers, that such Sins as they were, committed against the Moral Law, were made pardonable through Christs satisfaction to come, as well as Sins committed of mere Ignorance: For Christs Sacrifice was fore-signified in all the Sacrifices, and so in these: And so may confirm our Faith, that for such Sins in a special manner Christs Sacrifice was ordained, so to relieve the Hearts and Souls of such as have become guilty of such Sins; that if any Man so sin grosly, Christ is a Propitiation, an High Priest, a ready Advocate at hand upon such an urgent occasion, to plead his Sacrifice for their Pardon; as in 1 John 2. 1, 2, 3. and 1 Cor. 5. 1, 2, 3. and the latter end of the 5th Verse; yet there was a further larger intention of Gods appointing these occasional Sacrifices to the People of that Nation, and as they were Members of that: A Nation and Typical Church: That as every Sin deserved Corporal Death, as well as Eternal; and these especially God was pleased to remit, and pardon them unto them upon Sacrifice; after which externally performed, they still stood and remained members of that Nation, and not to be cut off from that Land for them; yea, and might still have the priviledge of that outward Communion in their holy things, Temple-Worship, &c.: For we must know that God was to be considered a Soveraign Judge unto that People in a double respect. 1. As he is the Judge of all men; (as his stile is Heb. 12.) or Judge of all the world (as Gen. 18.) Or 2. As he took upon him to be the King of that Nation in particular, and Soveraign Governour of that Country; in such a manner as he owned no other People in the World: And thereupon set up their Judges, and chose David, and his Seed after him immediately as his Lieutenants: And thereupon gave them Judicial Laws for the government of that Nation. And in this latter respect he appointed an Atonement by occasional Sacrifices for such Sins as deserved Eternal Death from him, as he is Judge of all the World; which yet as Judge of that Nation, he was pleased to appoint and receive an Atonement for: And so these Sacrifices in that respect and absolutions thereupon, are to be referred unto his Judicial Law; from which priviledge he yet exempted the sins fore-specified, Adultery, &c. which he as the supream Law-giver of that Kingdom, had peremptorily designed for a being cut off from that People. And this was the ground of difference of such Sacrifices, acceptable for other sins, when not for those.

Yet notwithstanding this political end and use of such Sacrifices for such sins, that they might continue free Denisons of that Church and Kingdom; this did not hinder, or prevent and exclude the faithful amongst them from having an eye unto that other use and end mentioned, a Spiritual forgiveness of those particular sins, as an Atonement for their Souls, when ever they had occasion to offer such Sacrifices upon their sinnings: Yea, they were therein called thereunto; for Sacrifices were not meer Civil Acts, as Presents made unto a Civil Prince; but Religious, as unto God that was offended: Yea, they were called sin-offerings, in common with all other, that were Sacrifices for their Souls; and the Blood of them was sprinkled seven times afore the Lord, before the Veil of the Sanctuary, and on the Altar of Incense, with all such Rites performed about the Blood that were used in the daily Sacrifices; as you read Lev. 4. from ver. 4. to the end: And of all Sacrifices with Blood (whatever they were) God indifferently and alike sayes, Lev. 17. 11. that the Life was in the Blood: For the life of the flesh is in the Blood, and I have given it to you upon the Altar, to make an atonement for your Souls; for it is the blood that maketh an atonement for the Soul. And therefore the

the one as well as the other, ſerved for the expiation of their Souls, if any of them did ſo ſin. Moreover the circumſtances of thoſe particular ſins were forgiven as well as the outward fact: And therefore theſe Sacrifices were expiations, if they had true Faith for their Souls. Accordingly you find in the forecited Lev. 6. 7. in the caſe of forſwearing a Mans ſelf, &c. the Atonement, his Sacrifice runs in theſe terms; It ſhall be forgiven him, for any thing he hath done, in treſpaſſing therein. Wherein God ſuppoſing that many aggravating circumſtances might accompany ſuch ſins, beſide the outward fact, let them have been what they may prove to be; they ſhall be [even any thing therein] forgiven him: This a burthened Conſcience amongſt them would take heed of; for Circumſtances lye heavier on the Soul than the Act. Chap. 9.

And ſurely if David could ſpy out a Soul-forgiveneſs for ſuch ſins as were exempted from particular expiation by Sacrifice; namely, his Murther and Adultery, for which there was no particular Sacrifice allowed to atone him from bodily death: And therefore ſayes to God, Thou deſireſt not Sacrifice, (namely for theſe ſins) elſe would I give it; Pſal. 51. 16. yet notwithſtanding he cryed out for a Soul-forgiveneſs of them: ver. 7. Purge me with hyſſop, and I ſhall be clean; waſh me, and I ſhall be whiter than ſnow. And again, ver. 16. Deliver me from blood-guiltineſs O God, thou God of my ſalvation; and my tongue ſhall ſing aloud of thy righteouſneſs. He expreſſeth how he had in his eye a further Righteouſneſs; (even that which the Apoſtle calls, The righteouſneſs of God through faith) then ſurely from hence I argue, that if David had committed any of thoſe other particular ſins, for which a particular Sacrifice was appointed; his Faith in offering that his Sacrifice would have lookt for Soul-forgiveneſs of that ſin: And in like manner, other believing Jews, in their particular offerings for thoſe ſins, had or might have had an eye unto the like foregiveneſs alſo.

And the Uſe and Comfort from the inſtances of theſe particular Atonements under the Old, may be very great to us under the New Teſtament, to relieve our Faith in caſe of relapſing into preſumptuous ſins, againſt Conſcience; and thoſe the moſt heinous, reiterated, and deliberately committed: And that notwithſtanding ſuch we are not excluded, but may have acceſs to God through our High Prieſt for the forgiveneſs of them, in the faith and invitation of his Sacrifice; which certainly being the truth and ſubſtance of all Sacrifices whatſoever, muſt be ſuppoſed to have been the ultimate end and ſcope of all, and aim in them all; and to have an infinitely greater efficacy to do away any, or all particular ſins, in the Moral guilt of them, then thoſe meer ſhadows had; to expiate, either individual guilts of Corporal death, or to be ſo much as ſignificant alſo of the forgiveneſs of their Souls, as in the ſhadow.

Yea, and I further ſuppoſe, that this was one ſpecial aim and intent, why God did appoint ſuch occaſional Sacrifices for occurring ſpecial ſins: To teach and inſtruct us (as it did the Saints in thoſe times) to turn unto our only Prieſt and Mediatour Chriſt Jeſus, and unto God through him, in a more ſet and ſolemn manner, for a ſpecial Atonement of ſuch occaſional ſins, (which the Apoſtle terms, being overtaken in a fault, Gal. 5. 1.) as they do or may fall out, over and beſides our dayly begging forgiveneſs for ſins of ordinary infirmity and incurſion.

And I have made the larger excurſion about theſe particular Sacrifices for particular ſins, becauſe I take it, the Apoſtle John doth, under the language of alluſion unto the Atonements made by them Sacrifices of old, direct us unto the like practice, to have an alike recourſe unto Chriſt our High Prieſt and Propitiation for occaſional ſins: In his Firſt Epiſtle, chap. 2. ver. 1, 2. My little children, theſe things write I unto you, that ye ſin not: And if any man ſin, we have an advocate with the Father, Jeſus Chriſt the righteous: And he is the propitiation for our ſins, and not for ours only, but alſo for the ſins of the whole world. For the obtaining the ſpecial and more direct aim and meaning of which words, we may look back and conſider, how he had in the foregoing Chapter, firſt ſpoken of the forgiveneſs of ſuch dayly unavoidable

ſinnings, as accompany Believers in their ſtricteſt walkings; chap. 1. ver. 7. But if we walk in the light, as he is in the light, we have fellowſhip one with another; and the blood of Jeſus Chriſt his Son, cleanſeth us from all ſin. And how that for theſe there is a Pardon of courſe, (as we uſe to ſpeak) though yet upon our confeſſions thereof: And we may by comparing them together, obſerve, how in this chap. 2. he proceeds to a ſpecial caſe of Believers ſinnings; and that is the caſe of ſinning more groſly: My little Children, theſe things I write to you, that ye ſin not, (that is, willingly and deliberately, againſt that light, which he had ſaid chap. 1. 7. that the Saints walking in, have fellowſhip with God, who is light) and if any man ſin; that is, who ſo ſins againſt his own light, and contrary to the light of that fellowſhip with God, he is called to injoy and walk in: This is the caſe. Now in the words afore, chap. 1. 8. he had Apoſtolically declared againſt a ſtate of Perfection; the Saints having no ſin at all, the experience of himſelf [if we] and all other Believers, utterly confutes that dotage. If we ſay that we have no ſin, we deceive our ſelves, and the truth is not in us And thereupon exhorts us ver. 9. If we confeſs our ſins, he is faithful and juſt to forgive us our ſins, and to cleanſe us from all unrighteouſneſs: Meaning ordinary infirmities, that fall out in thoſe that walk moſt exactly. It had been utterly incongruous that after this, he ſhould come in with an [If,] If any man ſin, &c. unleſs he had intended ſuch kind of ſinnings as were not included in thoſe ordinary ſinnings, that accompany all ſorts of Believers; 'tis therefore a ſpecial exception of ſins committed againſt light, and with deliberate indulgency of our Wills: And alſo that firſt of thoſe paſſages, Theſe things I write that you ſin not; after thoſe his foregone ſo poſitive aſſertions againſt the Perfectioniſts of that Age, is not that you never have no ſin in you, for that had been in vain, and contradictory to what God had declared to be a truth, during this Life: But in that coherence it hath this ſcope, that you never ſin againſt your light; and that is attainable in this Life; which his Fellow Apoſtle Peter thus utters it, That you never fall; that is, willingly, againſt the knowledge and dictates of your Spirits: And that Apoſtle in that place ſhews it to be attainable.

Thus much concerning peculiar Sacrifices for ſpecial Sins, and the uſe our Faith is to make of them; which was the firſt Branch.

CHAP.

Chap. 10.

CHAP. X.

Of the General Atonement made for all Sins once a Year, when the High Priest went into the Holy of Holies.

I Come to the Second Branch, which was the main thing propoſed, and intended under this Head, at the beginning of it, viz. That there was a General Atonement, when the High Prieſt went into the Holieſt, for all Sins, once a year, which we are to make Improvement of; to ſeek the Pardon of all, and any Sin whatever throughout our whole Lives from and thorough our High Prieſt, who is now reſident and officiating in the Holyeſt.

The Jews then had indeed, beſides thoſe Occaſional Expiations, and this General Atonement once a year; Continual Sacrifices, (as the Old tearms them;) offered up dayly, (as the new;) twice a day, Morning and Evening Sacrifices, in the firſt Tabernacle, which were offered up alſo by the High Prieſt, Heb. 7. 27. as well as the Ordinary Prieſts, Heb. 10. 11. And theſe alſo all were Types of Chriſt, and of his One alone ſufficient Sacrifice; (for he and his One Sacrifice were the Subſtance of them all; Heb. 8. 3, 4, 5. Heb. 10. 1. Heb. 9. 11.) And they were offered up for their own Sins, and the Sins of the People, Heb. 7. 27. Who needeth not dayly as thoſe High Prieſts, to offer up Sacrifice, firſt for his own ſins, and then for the peoples; for this he did once, when he offered up himſelf. And not occaſionally only.

But over, and beſides both theſe ſorts of Atonements, God did inſtitute this Solemn Expiation once a year, upon a Solemne Day; which is therefore by way of ſingularity called the Day of Atonement; and appointed not for this or that particular Sin only, as the occaſional were; but for all Sins whatſoever: And likewiſe that Days Atonement excelled thoſe other dayly Sacrifices: 1 In the ſtile it bore in that the day was ἐνιαυσιὸς, called, The Day of Atonement, thorough out Moſes: It carried the Day from all other Days, in that reſpect: Moreover the killing and offering of that Goat that day, was in like manner ſingularly ſtyled, The Sin-Offering of Atonements, Numb. 29. 11. whilſt yet the ordinary dayly Sacrifices that were Atonements alſo, are made mention of; ſo that as the Day, ſo the Sacrifice proper to the Day is above all other the Sacrifice of Atonement; as if none had been ſuch, but only it; which ſhews the eminency of this Atonement. And,

2. All the particular Solemnities, Rites, and Sacrifices performed that Day, declare as much; for they had all thoſe ordinary Sacrifices that were offered up every day; offered up twice on that day alſo, as duely as on any other day; Numb. 29. 7, 8, 9, 10, 11. Lev. 16. 24. And there were moreover two extraordinary ſpecial Sacrifices of a Bullock and a Goat; that were proper to that day, killed in the outward Sanctuary: And then their Blood was carried into the Holy of Holies: And no other Blood of Sacrifices, not any of them was ſo employed, or made uſe of to that purpoſe; no, not the Blood of thoſe dayly Sacrifices, although offered up on that day, as was ſaid, whereon the High-Prieſt did go into the Holy of Holies, was not carried in by him: But of thoſe only; namely, of the Bullock and the Goat, peculiar to that Day: Moreover it was the Bodies of thoſe two which were burnt without the Camp on that day, and not the other Beaſts ſacrificed on that day; as in Heb. 13. 11. the Apoſtle expreſly limits them: The Bodies of the Beaſt (ſaies he) whoſe Blood is brought into the Sanctuary by the High Prieſt for Sin, are burnt without the Camp. All which Remarks do

Book VI. denote the ſuper excellency of that dayes performances: The Lines, and Shadows thereof being drawn nearer to the Life, in ſetting forth

I. Chriſts Crucifixion, as a Sacrifice in the Firſt Tabernacle, which eminent Note the Apoſtle puts upon it, ver. 12. Wherefore Jeſus alſo, that he might ſanctifie the People with his own Blood, ſuffered without the Gate: As alſo of Chriſts making Atonement in Heaven, whither he is gone to appear in the Preſence of God for us; and pleading that his Blood; and from thence applying it to our Souls by ſprinkling of it upon our Hearts and Conſciences; ſo as all the ſubſtantial parts of his Mediation were moſt conſpicuouſly held forth in that one dayes Miniſtry.

II. All this was to ſignifie as the Iſſue and Tendency of all the extent of that Atonement, to be Univerſal as to all Sins, and the ſignification thereof, to have been the ſpecial deſign of that day, with difference from both occaſional and daily Sacrifices; and is indeed ſo expreſly notified and inculcated, as makes it ſeem an appropriate end of it; for I find not to my Obſervation, that of any other of theſe dayly Sacrifices, it is in expreſs words ſaid with a Note of Univerſality for all Sins, as of this dayes Sacrifice it is. This Honour had this dayes work alone to be the open and publick teſtification of this Priviledge which we have by Chriſts Sacrifice; that it is for all Sin, it being utterly impoſſible that the Blood of Bulls and Goats ſhould take away Sins; as Heb. 10. Here was, I ſay, a Condemning Remembrance of all Sins paſt which came up before God, and in their Conſciences every year, and therefore God applyed a Catholicon, or Univerſal outward Plaiſter every year, and yet that did but outwardly skin over the Sore every year in a Carnal Jews Heart, but not healed perfectly, and throughly, but ſo that it would break forth again. Yea, the very renewing of theſe Sacrifices every year was a real teſtification that even theſe yearly Sacrifices took not Sins away; for why elſe ſhould they be renewed again and again, if the Guilt of them did not remain, which are the Apoſtles arguings, Heb. 10. 1, 2, 3, 4. yet the intention was to publiſh an Univerſal Pardon for Sins paſt at every years end, when the Atonement was made, ſuch as that Law could give, but withal in the Shadow and Type of it minding them of a perfectly extenſive Atonement which was to come, which ſhould take away all Sins at once. By one thing God would take away all Sins of the comers to Worſhip. Now by the ſame Reaſon that Sacrifices every year ſerv'd to take away Sins paſt for that year, and therefore are called the Sacrifice once a year, by the ſame Reaſon the Sins of the Nation in a like manner coming up in remembrance before God every day, the dayly Sacrifices ſerved but to ſignifie the Atonement of them for that day, and reached no farther; and becauſe a remembrance of them was renewed every day, therefore it was that the Sacrifices were renewed every day. But in this days Sacrifice there was a remembrance every year, yet not of that years ſinnings only, but of all Sins paſt whatever to the time of the years then ending, ſo as there was an Atonement then made for all Sins paſt whatever.

And if it be ſaid that Murther and Blaſphemy were excepted, I further anſwer, no. They were not left out from the intent of the ſignificancy of that days Atonement, which was to point them unto Chriſts Atonement, which ſhould be made by him once for all, for all manner of Sins. The Intent of his Sacrifice not being at all to exempt Men from bodily Death, which by the Judicial Laws of Supream Governours is due to any Crimes. It was not the deſign of this days Atonement neither to Expiate any Crime under that conſideration, but it was ſignificant of an Atonement for the Sins of their Souls by a more perfect Sacrifice of Chriſts to come. There was left this Remark of Imperfection on it, that it was reiterated every year, thereby to drive them to eye, and expect the moſt perfect Sacrifice ſignifyed by theſe, which ſhould perfect for ever them that are ſanctified, (as in that 10*th. chap.* of the Hebrews, he concludes that his Diſcourſe of this Type) and be but once for for all offered up. If therefore any Sins were under the Type excepted for any reſpect, yet that one Sacrifice to come was before-hand ordained to take away all at once; as Acts 13. 38, 39. Paul told his Countrey-men, Be it known unto you therefore Men, and Brethren, that through this Man is preached unto you the forgiveneſs of Sins, and by him all that believe are juſtified from all things, from which you could not be juſtified by the Law of Moſes, neither Moral, nor Ceremonial, nor Judicial. And he ſpoke it to ſignifie this, as far as that preſent Diſpenſation would bear, that there was an Univerſal Atonement for all Sins put into the Great Charter of that dayes pardon. It is not any where in expreſs words ſaid, or uttered of any of them that they were for the forgiveneſs of all Sins, but this Honour had this days Work, and Iſſue alone to be the open, and publick teſtification of this Priviledge, (which is the point I drive at for your Comfort and Direction.) Chap. 16.

I am loath to make a Diſpute of it, whether the Dayly Sacrifices were reipſa inſtituted to hold out an Univerſal forgiveneſs of all Sins. I rather reſt in this as a Rule that the Legal Ordinances, and Sacrifices as they were imperfect Shadows in themſelves, ſo wherein their Imperfection in their ſignification ſhould lye, is much to be judged of by what we find ſaid, or declared of them when they are ſpoken of as to their proper intent, and extent, and therefore I think it ſafeſt to ſay, that the difference between the Sacrifices of this day, and thoſe dayly may be, that the Dayly Sacrifices eminently pointed at a continual forgiveneſs of Sins as they were every day committed, they were for the Errors of that day, as the Name imports. But theſe Sacrifices, and the Expiation by them once a year was ordained for all Sins paſt of their whole Lives, eſpecially that had been committed that year. They were forgiven by Wholeſale, by the Great and Lump on that day. Though even in theſe Sacrifices this mark of imperfection was left upon them, that there was a legal condemning remembrance of Sins paſt.

Now that this Univerſality of Pardon of all Sins was the great deſign of this one dayes Atonements is in moſt expreſs Words, and not in Figures, avowedly declared, and ſo often repeated, as all Men muſt acknowledge that to have been the eminent Scope thereof: For, 1. It is commanded that all the People ſhould afflict their Souls, for all their Sins, Lev. 16. 29. I ſay for all their Sins: For ſo the very next words warrant me, which are the Reaſon annexed to that Command, ver. 30. For on that day ſhall the Prieſt make an Atonement for you, to cleanſe you, that ye may be clean from all your ſins before the Lord. And 2. When the two extraordinary Sacrifices were killed, and their Blood taken to be carried into the Holy of Holies; this is the declared intent of both, Lev. 16. 15, 16. Then ſhall he kill the Goat of the Sin-Offering, that is for the People; and bring his Blood within the Vail, and do with that Blood, as he did with the Blood of the Bullock, and ſprinkle it upon the Mercy-Seat, and before the Mercy-Seat: And he ſhall make an Atonement for the Holy Place, becauſe of the Uncleanneſs of the Children of Iſrael, and becauſe of their tranſgreſſions in all their Sins: And ſo ſhall he do for the Tabernacle of the Congregation, that remaineth among them, in the midſt of their uncleanneſs: Again 3. When that extraordinary Atonement, by thoſe Sacrifices was perfected; and that the High-Prieſt came forth from out of the Holy of Holies; then Aaron took the live Goat, ver. 20, 21, 22. And when he hath made an end of reconciling the Holy Place, and the Tabernacle of the Congregation, and the Altar; he ſhall bring the live Goat; And Aaron ſhall lay both his hands upon the head of the live Goat, and confeſs over him all the Iniquities of the Children of Iſrael, and all their tranſgreſſions in all their Sins, putting them upon the head of the Goat, and ſhall ſend him away by the hand of a fit Man into the Wilderneſs: And the Goat ſhall bear upon him all their Iniquities unto a Land not inhabited: And he ſhall let go the Goat into the Wilderneſs: Here are ſtill you ſee, both all, and all ſorts of Sins in three ſeveral words expreſſed; to the end, that all Sins whatever might be ſure to be comprehended: Again, you have that [All] inculcated in the laſt verſe, as the ſpecial deſign of that day, ver. 34. And this ſhall be an Everlaſting Statute unto you, to make an Atonement for the Children of Israel, for all their Sins once a year, and he did as the Lord commanded Moses.

The Occasional Sacrifices served but for the Expiation of particular emergent sinnings, and each served but for one Turn, for that one Sin, and no more: And if they fell into the like again, a new Sacrifice was to be offered for that Second, and so a Third: And yet in them the believing few might spye out another manner of Sacrifice, shadowed out for their Souls: Again, in the dayly Sacrifices they might discerne the same Sacrifice Typified, for dayly sins committed every day; whilst yet the Ritual Sacrifice it self, reacht but to that days sins: And still there was a remembrance of all these Sins every year, Heb. 10. 1. For the Law could never with those Sacrifices which they offered year by year continually, make the comers thereunto perfect: And ver. 2, 3. For then would not they have ceased to be offered, because that the Worshippers once purged, should have had no more Conscience of Sins? But in those Sacrifices there is a remembrance again made of Sins every year: And this shewed the Imperfection of that Ritual Sacrifice; yet still so as in the Type and Shadow it Adumbrated an Uniuersal Pardon, thorough a perfect Sacrifice once offered to come, ver. 12. But this Man after he had offered one Sacrifice for Sins, for ever sat down on the right hand of God: In which there would be no more remembrance of Sins, ver. 17.

And although neither this dayes Atonement, nor no other of these forementioned Legal Sacrifices, served not to acquit them from those Sins excepted; as Murther, Adultery, or Blasphemy; so far as God, as King of that Nation, in his Judicial Law (as was observed) required Bodily Death for them: That Dayes Expiation freed them not from that extream Punishment, whether they had been committed afore that Solemn Day; or whether they had been discovered after that Dayes Expiation had past upon them; They could not have pleaded that Dayes Atonement to free them of Death; no, They dyed without Mercy, As the Apostle tells us.

But still all these did in their several significancies, set forth that one perfect and All-sufficient Sacrifice, which was the Substance and Center of them all: And as these on that Great Day, performed, excelled all the other in the significancies of it; (They being offered on purpose, on that Day the High-Priest went into the Holy of Holies: Thereby firstly notifying this our High-Priests alone Sacrifice, immediately afore his entrance into Heaven:) So especially, and most eminently they were designed to shadow forth the extent of that of Christ his Sacrifice, as reaching to the Pardon of all sins, holding out an Universal Pardon of all sorts of sins, of what kind soever, (but only that against the Holy Ghost, which in the 10*th. Chapter* the Apostle alone excepteth:) This was the proper intendment of that Dayes Atonement: And if in those occasional Sacrifices for grosser particular Sins, the Believers then might understand thereby, that there was a Sacrifice for the forgiveness of their Souls represented thereby, as well as a present freedom from the punishment of Gods either immediately cutting them off from their People, or by the Hand of the Magistrate, according to any Judicial Law, threatning Bodily Death; Then for the like Reason, the Sacrifices and Atonements of that Day; being so expresly, and lowdly proclaimed, to be for all their Sins whatever; they must be understood to have intended an alike Universal Atonement of Sins, unto all that come unto this Great High-Priest, confessing their Sins, afflicting their Souls for them, and seeking to be sprinkled with his Blood, and their Bodies washt with Water, as it hath been Explained.

And therefore let it be observed that the High-Priest alone performed the whole of that dayes Service, which was to be done in either Tabernacles, whether of extraordinary, or ordinary Sacrifice; to shew that there was one, and but one Great High-Priest that was to come; who should by one offering perfect for ever those that were sanctified, Heb. 10. 14. In whose Sacrifice all the Sacrifices concurred and met, as Lines in a Center; whether it were those of the High-Priest once a year, which he had instanced in in this Heb. 10. from ver. 1. to ver. 11. or of every Priest dayly ministring, in ver. 11.

These

Chap. 10.

These all are swallowed up as shadows into this great Body and Substance of them.

But especially this Dayes Atonement instituted to signifie this General Atonement; is for this cause so largely insisted on, and above all other explained, and exposed to our Notice by our Apostle in the 9 and 10. Chapters; as also chap. 13. 11, and 12. verses. And those Atonements made by the Ordinary Priests but in one passage of chap. 10. ver. 11. Although their Dayly Sacrifices also, imported the dayly taking away of all Sins for every day.

Seek then to Christ to cause his Face to shine upon thee, and his Fathers thorough him: This I mention upon two grounds, proper to our High Priests being in the Holy of Holies; from the Type in Lev. 16. You read how the High Priest took Incense, with Coals of Fire, from off the Altar of Gold; and then going into the Holy of Holies with the Censer of Gold with those Coals, and casting the Incense thereon, he caused a Cloud of Smoak to ascend: And thereupon God manifested himself in a Glory shining on the Cloud: For this compare ver. 2. with the 12, 13, I will appear in the Cloud, (so God promiseth, ver. 2.) which how it was fulfilled: The 12, and 13. verses tell us, He shall take a censer full of burning Coals of fire from off the Altar before the Lord; and his hands full of sweet Incense, beaten small; and bring it within the Vail: And he shall put the Incense upon the fire before the Lord, that the cloud of the Incense may cover the Mercy-Seat that is upon the testimony, that he die not: The cloud of Incense, or the smoak thereof, Typified Prayer; as in the Psalms: And answerably, and in allusion unto this, the Penner of the 80. Psalm doth in the Name of, and for the People, frame his Prayer thus, ver. 1. Give ear thou that dwellest between the Cherubims, (in which was the Holy of Holies;) Shine forth so, ver. 1. Then in ver. 3. Cause thy face to shine, and we shall be saved; which he repeats twice after in that Psalm: His Faith that penned that Psalm for them, had in his eye that promise of Gods appearing in the Cloud: As in Lev. 16. Witness the Compellation he gives of God, Thou that dwellest between the Cherubims: He understood full well, that although himself, nor the People, on whose behalf he made this Prayer, did follow God into the Holy of Holies Personally themselves, but the High Priest only; and that yet that appearance of Gods in the Cloud from the Mercy-Seat unto the High-Priest, when he went into the Holiest, did signifie that unto those that lookt by Faith unto that Mercy-Seat, and Invocated God with Fervent Prayer for Grace to help them in their Occasional or constant Need; that God would shine forth, and appear unto them, in answer unto their Prayer graciously, some way, or other; especially when it is the Face of God himself which they seek; and that their hearts are carryed out in Prayer to seek the shine thereof.

We must know that the Phrase of seeking Gods Face is more largely used; for seeking his Face, that is his favour in any particular request we would obtain at his hands: And it is a wonted speech in Scripture used to that purpose: But it is taken more strictly for seeking the shine of his Favour it self, to be manifested to a Mans Soul: 'Tis the Character of Saints in the Psalms, That seek thy face: And when their hearts are pitcht upon that request above all things else; Oh then, he that dwelleth between the Cherubims will shine forth, according to their desire, and his promise: As he often did unto particular Persons, amongst them that came to the Temple to worship; God shone forth upon their Souls, whilst they were praying there, which caused David to utter his request in this manner; in Psal. 63. 2, 3. To see thy power and thy glory, so as I have seen thee in the Sanctuary; because thy loving-kindness is better than life, my lips shall praise thee: Observe how he saies, [so] as I have seen thee in thy Sanctuary: Calling to remembrance Gods gracious Treatings with him in former times, when he used to come there to worship.

There are Two things contained in that Petition, shine forth; which do thou, when thou converseſt with God and Christ in this Sanctuary, seek for at their hands.

I. That

Book VI.

I. That he would cauſe the Light of his Countenance, in his Electing Love to ſhine upon thy Soul: That is, to give thee the aſſurance, with a taſt of his loving-kindneſs, or ſpecial Love borne towards thee; in which he at that preſent doth graciouſly accept thee in his beloved; and from Everlaſting had pitcht, and fixed to manifeſt towards thee in his Son: This is Davids meaning there; for one ſight which he deſires to behold him with in his Temple, is that of his loving-kindneſs, which he therefore ſpecifies in the following verſe, Thy loving-kindneſs is better than life: ver. 3. And this is one, and a chief part of what my Text intendeth, by drawing near with a full aſſurance of Faith: That is, with aſſurance of our being accepted of him: The ſhine of which David deſired to have, from out of his Temple, whilſt his Faith looked to the Holy of Holies, unto which my Text invites us to come in Heaven.

The 2*d*. Is to manifeſt himſelf to a Mans Souls: To ſee his Glory and his Power, as he had ſeen it in his Sanctuary, ver. 2. That is, to have a view of his Perſonal Excellencies, and Glories: And thus I interpret it: For the wonders of Power and Glory, which God ſhewed by outward works done for his People, were works in the Execution of them acted out of Doors (as we ſay:) They were Tranſacted abroad, and in the World: The ſights therefore which in the Temple he ſought to ſee, were thoſe of his Perſonal Greatneſs, Power, and Glory within himſelf, which were the Cauſe and Workers of thoſe wondrous Effects from out of his Holy Temple, as thoſe abroad in the World are ſaid to be.

And if you apply this to the ſeeking the Face of Chriſt, the Direction then is, that thou wouldeſt ſeek a view of him, not ſimply in his High-Prieſthood-Glory, (which is his Office;) and ſo what therein thou needeſt to have from him, to make uſe of him for, as thou art a Sinner, but a view of the Glory of his Perſon, abſtractly from his Office; when therefore Pſal. 80. 1. he ſaies, Thou that dwelleſt between the Cherubims ſhine forth; and ver. 3. cauſe thy face to ſhine. The higheſt and furtheſt intendment of thoſe Petitions is, That he would ſhine in his Perſonal Excellencies. For indeed the Face of God, and Chriſt, are put for the Perſon of each: 1. Of God; Thou ſhalt have no other Gods before my face, to behold the glory of God in the face of Jeſus Chriſt: That is, my ſelf. 2 Of Chriſt, 2 Cor. 4. 4. And his Face imports as the lifting up the Light of his Countenance in his Love and Favour; ſo the Excellency and Glory of his Perſon, as in 2 Cor. 4. 4. The glory of God ſhines in the face of Jeſus Chriſt. The word, εικων is in the Perſon of Chriſt: And that which follows, ſhews it is his Perſonal Excellency mainly intended, who is the image (ſaies he) of God; which both in Col. 1. and Heb. 1. are primarily ſpoken of him in reſpect to his Perſonal Glory: Now in that 80. Pſal. where 'twas we founded this head, Oh thou that dwelleſt, &c. ſhine forth, as ver. 1. So he begins: But then in the 3. ver. it follows, cauſe thy face to ſhine; which face of his is elſewhere ſtyled his Beauty; which denotes the Excellency, and Glory of his Perſon; and is alſo ſtill ſpoken of him, as ſhining in, and from his Temple; and as therein and from thence he was to be viewed, Pſal. 27. 4. To behold the beauty of the Lord, and enquire in his holy Temple: And that Beauty is eminently tearmed his Holyneſs; Pſal. 110. 3. And as his favour, Grace, and Love, is the Light of his Countenance ſhining towards us; ſo his Holyneſs is the Perſonal Glory in himſelf; as that Viſion in Iſaiah, chap. 6. 1. Given of Chriſt when on his Throne; that Throne is that Seat in the Holy of Holies; whereon (now he is aſcended into Heaven) he ſits at the Right Hand of God with his Angels about him, worſhipping of him, as there: And the Place, or Scene of that Throne, is in the Viſion made the Holy of Holies in the Temple; for 'tis ſaid that his Glory (that is, the Train and Gleam that came from it;) filled the Temple, that is, the reſt of the Temple from the Throne: Now that Glory is that of his Perſon; for Chriſt himſelf refers this of Iſaiah unto himſelf, John 12. 41. Now that Glory there in Iſaiah is ſaid ſpecially to be his Holyneſs; as appears by the Angels celebrating him, and that his Glory with crying out, Holy, Holy, Holy; therein adorning adorning him for that; as wherein his Glory ſpecially conſiſted; which when Iſaias ſaw you read how he was affected with it. Chap. 10.

Alſo Heaven is the Holy of Holies, and it is the Perſonal Glory there of him, doth there appear; (who is the moſt Holy, and the Meſſiah, and the anointed one, Dan. 9.) which our Saviour deſireth we might behold, John 17. 24. And therefore a forehand ſight and glimpſe by Faith of this his Perſonal Glory; (and ſo far as Faith is capable of it) is of all ſorts of Actings or Receptions rather by Faith the moſt deſirable and delighting, and fills the Soul with Glory; whom having not ſeen, (that is as we ſhall doe;) yet ſo far ſeeing as Faith will capacitate us, and may carry us, this works Joy unſpeakable and full of glory: And ſuch ſights the Primitive Chriſtians were much inured to, 1 Pet. 1. 8. verſe.

It falls out ſometimes, that when thou thy ſelf comeſt to him, and afore him, that himſelf doth cauſe ſome Rayes of that more mean and little Beauty that is in thy Soul alſo (which is the Reflection of his ſhining on thee) to break forth afore him, whilſt thou art in his Preſence: And he to pleaſe himſelf in thee, draws out thy love to him, and cauſeth thee to tell him, (he thereupon enlarging thy Soul that way whilſt thou art a doing it,) how well thou loveſt him; and to relate to him how Holy thou wouldeſt be; (which Will in us to be ſo, is our greateſt Holineſs in this Life;) and herewith do both God and Chriſt, wonderfully delight themſelves, as in Pſal. 45. it is ſaid both of the Father, (for his Speech it is,) and of Chriſt the Son: He is thy Lord, and worſhip thou him; ſo ſhall the King, that is Chriſt, greatly delight in thy beauty: And Epheſ. 5. Chriſt doth preſent the Church to himſelf; How, and why to himſelf? You have heard how he preſents us to God, but here 'tis ſaid he doth it to himſelf, as his Spouſe: For of that he had ſpoken afore: He takes a view of a Soul that comes to him, and is taken with her himſelf firſt, and pleaſeth himſelf firſt in her; and then covereth her all over with his Righteouſneſs; and then gives, or takes a kiſs of her himſelf, and ſo preſents her to his Father. Now therefore when thou comeſt afore him, obtain (if poſſible) e're thou comeſt off, or out from him, a view of his Perſon, and of his Holineſs, and Beauty; and beg hard, be inſtant for it. And to that end I counſel thee, Let thine Eye be faſtned on him in what he is in himſelf: See what thou canſt ſpie out to be in him, or from him, over and beſides thy Redemption by his Prieſthood, that ſhould make thy Heart more to cleave to him, and more to love him, and delight in him. And when but the firſt Glimpſes, and thereupon Motion of ſuch Affections do riſe and enkindle; follow them, and blow up thoſe ſparks to a Flame, let thy Heart dwell upon ſuch interviews. Likewiſe every Holy ſtrain, or diſpoſition of Spirit which he draws forth out of thy heart of pure love to him, whilſt thou art in his preſence, they are ſo many Gleames and Lines of Beauty in thee, with which his Heart is delighted, whether they be brokenneſs of heart, and relenting pangs of ſorrow for Sin, or ſubmiſſion to his Will with all chearfulneſs, becauſe it is his Will, putting thy Mouth in the Duſt, in thy deepeſt Tryals and Temptations: Or that thou canſt with all that is within thee, fall a bleſſing him for what he is in his own Bleſſedneſs and Glory, though thou ſhouldſt not be partaker of it in him, and with him, rejoycing that Chriſt, he is with the Father at his Right hand in Glory, whatever becomes of thee, which Chriſt told his Diſciples, that if they loved him, they would have done; becauſe I go to the Father: Theſe are each ſo many Caſts of a Gracious Beauty in thy Soul, with which in thy Converſes with him, he is raviſht: Theſe interviews, and intercourſes of love of the Soul to Chriſt, and of Chriſt to the Soul you may read of Cant. 7. chap. throughout; both on Chriſts part, from ver. 1. to the 10. And on the Churches part, from ver. 10. to the end.

But

Book VI. But to wind up this Head, and to bring it back again to the Language and ſignification of the Type it ſelf, which we begun in, and made the riſe of this head.

There were two things in that Holy of Holies, principally ordained to repreſent our Lord Jeſus Chriſt: 1. The Ark, whoſe Reſidence was continually therein: 2. The Perſon of the High Prieſt, who came in but once a year: And then whilſt he was in it, did but Perſonate our Lord to come to Heaven: The Ark it ſelf alone I take (and ſubmit it) Typed forth his very Perſon, ſimply conſidered: A Cheſt it was, made of plain Boards of Shittim-wood, covered both within and without with pure Gold: The wood ſignified his Humanity; the Gold his Divine Nature, as joyned both in one: The fulneſs of the Godhead dwelling in him Bodily, and incloſing or incompaſſing his Humane Nature, with the fullneſs of it ſelf: Exod. 25. 11. And this Ark is termed the Glory, and Beauty of God, Pſal. 68. 71. As alſo of all Iſrael, 1 Sam. 4. 21. And it was under that Style declared of his Perſon, by Old Men, when but eight dayes old, Luke 2. 32. The Glory of thy People Iſrael; crowned alſo it was with a Crown of Gold; denoting all Excellency and Right of the Dominion; having the Teſtimony, or Covenant of the Law in it, as Chriſt had the Law in his heart, Pſal. 40.

The Second Repreſentative was the High-Prieſt, who came in but to performe the works of a Prieſt, who was the Type of Chriſts Office of Prieſthood, which is but additional to the Glory of his Perſon: By theſe two we are taught to view, and that diſtinctly 1. His Perſon, and the Glories thereof ſimply conſidered; and that of his Office in performing the work thereof; as a Mediator for us, and as an Atoner for our Sins: And as the Ark was the moſt eminent, and firſt beſpoke to be made, Exod. 25. 10. ſo is and was the Perſon of Chriſt firſt ordained, and is to be eſteemed accordingly in, and for his Perſon, the moſt pretious above all other; being the moſt Holy, Dan. 9. And certainly his Perſon is far more Excellent than any, or all his Offices for us, and accordingly to be ſought for by us: And the Priviledge hereof Chriſt hath promiſed to ſome ſpecial Favourites of his: John 14. 21. He that hath my Commandments, and keepeth them, he it is that loveth me; and he that loveth me, ſhall be loved of my Father; and I will love him, and will manifeſt my ſelf to him: Mark how he ſaies, I will manifeſt my ſelf: Having ſaid, I will manifeſt my Love in thoſe words, I will love him; as diſtinct from, and ſhort of this: Now to love us as in his own heart, his Love is ſeated in common to all Believers, whereas this is uttered as a ſpecial favour to them that keep his Commands, in a ſpecial and intenſe manner; and therefore is meant of the manifeſtation of that his Love: And then the next words, I will manifeſt my ſelf to him; is a further additional, beyond that Diſcovery of his Love, or his Fathers; and ſo of his Perſon which is uſually called himſelf: And it was a Priviledge not vouchſafed the Apoſtles, until himſelf was aſcended; and poured out his Spirit on them: And then their Union with his Perſon, as his with his Fathers, was manifeſted to them, as in ~~the verſe~~ afore, ver. 20. At that day ye ſhall know that I am in my Father, and you in me, and I in you: Which is expounded by this Speech of his in ver. 21. Sure I am (that ſo I may ſtill expreſs it by the Type, which hath led me unto this,) that the perfection of that Glorious State which the Saints on Earth ſhall attain unto, is Typified forth under the Shadow of the Holy of Holies in a comparative unto the foregoing States of the Church leſs perfect, deſcribed by the Model of the outward Court; and then the Court of the Prieſts, (whereof Rev. 11. chap. 1, 2. verſes, and the laſt verſe gives us the Scheme:) But after theſe Two Courts are paſſed in ver. 1, 2. it is ſaid ver. 19. That the Temple of God was opened in Heaven, and there was ſeen in his Temple, (The Seat of which was that part of the Temple called the Holy of Holies;) The Ark of the Teſtament: Oh how will Men then more continually rejoyce in the Contemplation of his Perſon, and above all, love him, value him, for what he is in himſelf, and for himſelf; whereas now now it is a rare Priviledge vouchsafed to some, and yet attainable: But will not in the height of it be communicated, until these more imperfect and dead-hearted Churches, the Court of Priests which foregoes it, be purged, and more refined; and that by the laying dead the Two Witnesses, which are both the Churches themselves, the Golden Candlesticks, and the Persons of the most eminent Professors, both of Ministers and People: After which, though we with the rest of the New Testament Saints are said all to enter into the Holyest, when we worship, as in the Text; yet God hath provided last for them of those times, after their Resurrection and Ascension into Heaven, that is, a more conspicuous Glory of entercourse with Christ; such as is an enjoyment of his Person, as the Ark in the Holy of Holies; in comparison unto what is now but as in the Court of Priests: And yet let every one now seek it, by growing up unto perfect Holyness, and keeping his Commandments; for unto such that promise is in all times made, and is to be attained by some that seek it, as a fore-running Glimpse, and pledge of the like, as then more common Glory of the Saints in those Times. Chap. 18.
